of vs, not onely in puniſhing of euill doers, but alſo in the admoniſhments and warninges that wee giue. For if we be too ſharpe, it is an ouerſhooting of our ſelues which proceedeth of our ſinfulneſſe, by reaſon whereof, although the correction which we miniſter be out of Gods word, yet is it already ſteined, and God alloweth it not. Sometimes wee think our ſelues to bee excuſed, if wee tell a man the truth. Yea, but wee would not tell it him, if our oueruehement affection draue vs not to it. For nowadaies vices are ſoſtred among men, and euery man is content to beare with his neighbour in his euill doeing: but if there happen any variance or quarell, then out flieth that which was cõcealed before. Therefore in rebuking men, it is not enough for vs that wee can alleage that we haue told them the truth: vnleſſe we can alſo therewithall proteſt, that we were not led with deſire of reuenge or otherwiſe. Let vs marke then, that if it be but in warninges by word of mouth, we muſt not be paſſionate nor deſirous of reuenge, but ſimply do it of zeale to Godward. Now then it is much more reaſon that when a iudge holdeth the ſword in his hand, and is to proceede further to the executing of luſtice with rigour, hee ſhould then lay aſide all euill affections. That is the cauſe why God hath expreſly ſhewed his people the end of the law which he had giuen them, to the intent they ſhoulde bee the better taught to walke in the pure religion, and not follow the ſuperſtitions which they ſhould puniſh in the Heathen. That is the thing which we haue to note in effect.

Now Moſes addeth immediatly, If thou ſay in thine heart, Alas theſe Nations are mor in nũber than I, & how is it poſſible that I ſhould diſcomfite them? Remember what thy God did in the land of Egypt, how he handled Pharao & al his people, & what proofe of his power he gaue thee there. For euen ſo will hee doe to all the Nations whom thou art afraid of. Heere Moſes intendeth to harten the people, to the intent they ſhould not bee daunted with fearefulneſſe. For the thing that doeth commonly hinder men in doing their duetie, is a certaine fearfulneſſe which they conceiue. O (ſay they) this is hard to be done: and againe, if I doe it, I ſhall ſtirre vp many mens diſpleaſure againſt mee, and ſuch a harme may come to me by it. Thus in ſtead of walking as God commaundeth vs, we bowe with euery blaſt, and in the end turn quite away. Wee be but ouer bould and hardie in following our owne paſſions, and wee be ſo blinded with them, that although there bee daunger in them, yet wee think not vppon it: and although it come to our mind, yet doe our affections ſo ouermaiſter vs, that we ceaſſe not to goe on ſtill. We ſee that if a man be in a rage, although death be before his eyes, yet hee goeth through with it like a mad man, or like a beaſt that is caried away with furiouſneſſe. After that maner doe we deale. And that is the cauſe why I ſayd that we be but too bold in executing our owne wicked and exceſſiue moode. But if God commaund vs any thing: we make ſuch nyſeneſſe at it, as is pitifull to ſee. And then come all theſe doubtes in our head: How is it poſſible that I ſhould holde out, if I ſhould followe my vocation faithfully? For beholde, there is ſuch a blocke in my way, I ſhall haue ſuch a man mine enemie, ſuch a thing may befall mee, ſuch a man will bee againſt me. All theſe forecaſtes (ſay I) will come to our mind. And therefore let vs marke, that God doth not without cauſe ſay thus to his people heere, doe theſe thinges, not reſpecting thine owne power, and abilitie, but reſpecting and knowing my ſtrength: for that is inuincible. If thou haue mee on thy ſide, feare not but I will make thee ouercome all thine incomberaunces, and all the euill incounters that thou canſt meete with. Thus ye ſee in effect what wee haue to mark vppon this text.

Howbeit foraſmuch as the vice that is ſpoken of heere, is common among vs, and all of vs are (as yee would ſay) attainted with it: wee haue ſo much the more neede to bee earneſt in putting this leſſon in vre. We ſee that if men be againſt vs, by and by we ouerſhoote our ſelues, and we cannot ſerue God. And how ſo? If I ſhould doe al that God commaundeth me, all the world would hate mee: I ſhalbe pointed at with mens fingers, I ſhal haue as many enemies as I haue neighbours about me. Heereuppon wee ſhrink in our hornes by and by, and we beare our ſelues in hand that wee bee excuſed before God. And this happeneth in maner continually. Yea verily, and foraſmch as the world is frowarde, we haue good cauſe to be afraid when we intend to liue in ſuch vprightneſſe and ſoundneſſe as God commaundeth. Sith we ſee it is ſo, let vs returne to that which is ſaid heere: namely that to obey GOD, wee muſt not paſſe what wee our ſelues are, nor what our owne credite and power is: but we muſt arme our ſelues with this promiſe. It is God that commaundeth me to doe it, and hee ſeeth well ynough what daungers and diſtreſſes are in it, he will ſtand by me and reach me his mighty hand. It behoueth me to reſt vppon that, and to conceiue a ſtedfaſt truſt, to ouercome all thinges that may turne me away from the doing of my duety. That is the thing which we haue to remember vppon this leſſon of Moſes. And in deede how ſhould we doe without that? For wee ſee howe vices haue their full ſcope nowadaies, and he that intendeth to ſerue God purely, may wel ſay he is as a ſheepe among wolues. But what for that? Wee haue a good Shepheard, who hath promiſed to defende vs. Let vs put our truſt in him, and in the meane ſeaſon walke on in the way that he hath ſhewed vs. Elſe, I beſeech ye what would become of the poore Chriſtians that are deteined among the enemies of ỹ fayth? If they ſhould paſſe for the daungers wherein they bee, how durſt they open their mouthes to honour GOD? Should they not needes either giue themſelues ouer to all euill, or elſe at leaſtwiſe be faine to ſtrike ſayle? Yes ſurely. But when they conſider thus, Our God is the keeper of our ſoules, and ſeeing wee bee vnder his protection, let vs wait till hee reache vs his hande at our neede: then at the conceiuing of ſuch thoughtes, they take newe courage & are inabled to ſerue God, or at leaſtwiſe the ſaide fearefulneſſe ouermaiſtreth them not. True it is that wee cannot but bee afraide, and feele our fleſh continually ſhrinking away, when wee bee diſpoſed to walke according to Gods ordinance, and wee ſhall conceiue many crooſſebytings: but yet muſt wee not foſter ſuch vice to foade our ſelues in it. I ſay we muſt come to that which Moſes telleth vs here: Thy God wil worke for thee.

Aboue all other, they that are in authoritie muſt arme themſelues with this promiſe, or elſe there wilbe neither conſtancie nor ſtoutneſſe in them. For wee ſee what threatninges, and ſpitings are wrought euery where. Inſomuch that when euen the greateſt kinges and princes are minded to doe right: there needeth but ſome Courtier to inuegle them, and hee ſhall ſo alter their minde as (doe what they can) they muſt needes yeeld to all naughtineſſe. No doubt but that euen the greateſt princes, (although they themſelues intend no ſuch thing) doe become ſtarke naught for other mens pleaſures, ſo as they be oftentimes inforced to ſay, I would faine doe the thing that I knowe to be good, but I dare not for diſpleaſing of ſuch as are about mee, becauſe they may ſtirre mee vp great troubles and vnquietneſſe, and therefore I muſt bee faine to yeeld to them. Againe there are a great number of people that wil ſet themſelues againſt me, if I ſhould doe my dewty. Lo in what taking a prince ſhall diuers times bee. Inſomuch that if hee perceiue ſome officers of his to haue committed outrages, pillinges, pollinges, and extortions, O [ſaieth he] I ſhall loſe all my ſeruantes heartes if I bee too rigorous: therefore muſt I let ſuch thinges ſlippe, and though my people bee oppreſſed by it, yet muſt not I make any countenance ỹ I ſee it. Ye ſee then that the greateſt princes are the cauſe of all miſchiefe by their inclining to the woorſer part, when they thinke they cannot maintaine their ſtate, but by fauoring wicked perſons, and by laying the brydle in their necke. And how then ſhall they doe which haue not the like authoritie? Surely euery little blaſt of winde, and euery leafe that falleth from a tree, muſt needes aſtoniſh them out of hand, ſo as for feare they ſhal alleage thus and thus: Alas, I ſhal get ſuch a mans diſpleaſure, ſuch an inconuenience may befall mee for it: therefore I muſt doe ſuch a thing or ſuch a thing to ſaue my ſelfe: I ſee my life would be in daunger, and I am but one man alone, I ſhould bee made a pray for others. Yee ſee then howe theſe forecaſtes are a cauſe of the ouerthrow of all right & Iuſtice, ſo as men keepe not one continual train, nor hold themſelues at one good ſtay, but that as ſoone as they haue done any one good deede that is worthy of prayſe, by and by they vndoe it againe and marre all. Therefore it ſtandeth vs ſo much the more in hande to beare this doctrine well printed in our mindes, ỹ if we intend to ſerue God, wee muſt not haue an eye to our owne power, but truſt to him that ſetteth vs a worke. For he wil not ſuffer vs to be diſappointed, ſo we doe him the honour to call vpon him, and to flie to him for refuge, not miſtruſting but that his power is able enoughe to maintaine vs. Yea and although we haue none enemies to the worldward, yet muſt that be our foundation, that wee may keepe the right way all our life long. For let euery of vs looke into himſelfe, and hee ſhall ſee that wee haue a common enimie of Sathan, and wee ſee what wiles he hath to ſurpriſe vs: and what ſtrength haue wee to withſtande him? Againe the holy ſcripture telleth vs that wee muſt forſake our ſelues, mortifie all our affections and hold them in priſon, and renounce all worldly thinges, if wee will come vnto God, & moreouer our life muſt ſhew ỹ fruits thereof. Now we know our frailtie, we ſee infinite temptations to inuegle vs, we knowe that the diuell is the prince that raineth in the aire aboue vs: and alas what can wee doe? This might at the firſt make vs abaſhed. But what? Wee muſt not heere haue an eye to our owne freewill as theſe blind wretches doe, which preſume vppon their owne ſtrength, and reſt vpon their own abilities: but wee muſt ſay, O Lorde, performe thou the thinges which thou commaundeſt vs, and then commaund vs what thou wilt. Let vs goe and put our ſelues after that faſhion into the hand of our God, and ſuffer him to rule vs by his holy ſpirite: and then wee neede not doubt but wee ſhal haue the vpperhand of al euils that incounter vs, and that although wee be troubled neuerſomuch, yet in the end hee will giue vs a happie iſſewe, ſo as wee ſhall feele that our truſting in him hath not beene in vaine. To be ſhort, we ſee how profitable this doctrine is for vs. For it were impoſſible for vs to ouercome the leaſt aſſault that wee could be put vnto, vnleſſe God reached out his hand to ſuccour vs at our neede. Therefore let vs call vppon him, and that not for once and away, but foraſmuch as it is right hard for vs to hold out to the end, and to haue a continuall ſtedfaſtneſſe, let vs pray God that when he hath once ſet vs in the good trade, he continue the ſame, and ſuffer not vs to turne head again within two or three dayes after, but that when wee haue walked rightly for a certaine time, we may goe foreward more and more, and ſhewe that we haue walked vnder his guidance, and not beene fooliſh hardie to raunge abroad at aduenture, but that wee haue put our truſt in him, and imbraced his promiſes, whereby he telleth vs that he will neuer faile ſuch as are his, but that like as they ſubmit themſelues to him, ſo he alſo will vtter his power towardes them, to maintain them and defende them againſt all the temptations of Sathan, and againſt all the wronges of the world.

Eph. 2. 2. and 6. 12.

Nowe let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs ſo to feele them as wee may learne to miſlike of them, and giue our ſelues more and more to ſerue him: and that ſeeth we bee ſo ſore tempted with our owne wicked luſtes, and ſo aſſailed by them euery minute of an houre, as we bee not able to ouermaiſter them: wee may take the armor which he giueth vs from heauen, that is to wit, the grace of his holie

holie ſpirite, wherewith to repulſe all Sathans aſſaults, that by that meanes our God may bee glorified in vs, and his Kingdome aduaunced more and more, ſo as his righteouſneſſe, goodneſſe, and wiſedome may ſhine foorth euerywhere, and ſpecially be ſo printed in our hearts, as wee alſo may beare the badges of them in all our members. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs, but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth, &c.

On Tewſday the xiij. of Auguſt. 1555.

The Lvj. Sermon which is the ſixth vpon the ſeuenth Chapter.

19 That is to wit &c.

20 And alſo the Lord thy God will ſend Waſpes among them, vntill he haue deſtroyed the remnant of them, and thoſe that ſhall haue hidden themſelues from thy preſence.

21 Thou ſhalt not be afraid before them. For the Lord thy God is in the mids of thee, a great and terrible God.

22 And the Lord thy God will caſt downe thoſe nations before thee, by little and little. Thou maiſt not rid them away out of hand, for feare leaſt the beaſtes of the feelde doe multiply againſt thee.

24 And he will giue thee their kinges into thy handes, and thou ſhalt wype out their name from vnder heauen. And none of them all ſhalbe able to ſtand before thee, vntill thou haue rooted them out.

WE ſawe yeſterday what courage wee ought to haue to doe our duety, and wherupon we ought to grounde our ſelues: namely vppon the promiſe which God maketh vs, that we ſhalbe maintained by his hand and power. For if we haue an eye to our own power & ability, we ſhal haue no cauſe to conceiue anie truſt: but if wee bee acquainted with Gods power, and haue his promiſe that he will ayde vs: then haue we no cauſe to bee afrayde. Then if wee ſee anie daungers that may make vs afrayde, or aſtoniſh vs: let vs learne to haue recourſe to this leſſon, that when ſoeuer God commandeth vs to do any thing, he wil not faile vs at our neede, but rather wee ſhall feele his preſence in ſuch wiſe as we ought to do him the honour to reſt vppon him. And to the ende this doctrine might be the better knowne, Moſes hath therwithall ſet down the experience therof which God had giuen the people of Iſrael at their going out of Egypt. Thou haſt ſeene the ſignes and wonders which God wrought: and he wil doe as much in this behalfe. It ought to ſuffiſe vs ỳ God bindeth himſelfe to vs by his promiſe. Howbeit foraſmuch as he perceiueth our infirmitie: he giueth vs this help more, of making vs to haue experience of ỳ things that we knew before. Nowe if this auaile vs not: we be not onely vnfaithfull, but alſo vnthankful. For when god doth vs good, it is not for an houre or twaine: but hee wil haue it to ſtande vs in ſteede all our life long, and to conclude boldly, that as he hath begun well, ſo will hee alſo continue. Then let vs beware that we be not guiltie of ſo great vnthankfulneſſe, as to haue thruſt Gods benefites vnderfoot, which ought to be ſo well knowen vnto vs. And that is to the end we may goe through with our courſe without ſtoppe. And becauſe wee be as weake as is poſſible, or rather laſie and vnprofitable, when we ſhoulde do any good: let vs take corage as it is giuen vs here euen by hauing recourſe vnto God, praying him to holde out his hand continually to helpe vs: and therewithall let vs doe whatſoeuer he commaundeth vs, and whatſoeuer wee knowe to bee our duetie, not doubting but the end of it wilbe good. Although the diuel practiſe to turne al vpſidedowne, and although men ſtreine themſelues and make neuer ſo greate aſſaultes to further the ſame: yet will God get the vpper hande. And if hee ſuccour vs, let vs not doubt but wee ſhall ouercome all the aſſaultes which wee ſhall bee driuen to indure.

And furthermore Moſes addeth, that God wil ſende Waſpes to deſtroy the reſt of thoſe Nations, and thoſe that hid themſelues out of the way. As if he ſhould ſay, that although the children of Iſrael were not able to deſtroy their enemies: yet woulde God prouide for it as one that hath all meanes in his hande. Thou ſhalt not neede (ſaith hee) to haue the ſworde alwayes in thine hande: for God hath other men of warre, hee will arme the Waſpes againſt them. Nowe ſurely this may ſeeme ſtraunge at the firſt ſight. For ſeeing that God intendeth to ſhewe his power againſt the enemies of his people: why doeth he not rather dart his thunder at thē from heauen? Why

Why maketh hee not the earth to open and to ſwallowe them vp? Why worketh hee not after ſome other faſhion than by ſending of Hornets? Nay, heereby hee ment to ſhewe, firſt that hee hath all creatures in his hande, and can ſerue his turne with them as he liſteth. And it is a greate aduauntage for vs to knowe, that if God bee on our ſide, there is not any thing, no not euen ſo much as a flie, but it ſhall make with vs and againſt our enemies. Likewiſe on the contrarie parte, if wee haue prouoked Gods wrath and hee bee minded to make vs feele his vengeance: although the whole worlde had linked themſelues together to helpe vs: yet notwithſtanding, all thinges (yea euen to the verie flies) ſhall be armed to execute his wrath againſt vs. This therefore is a thing that ought to make vs afraide when wee liue not as wee ought to doe: and contrariwiſe which ought to giue vs ſingular hope and comfort, ſo wee bee vnder the protection of our God. Marke it then for a ſpeciall point, that whereas God auoweth that hee will ſende Waſpes: his meaning is to ſhewe that hee hath incomprehenſible meanes in his hande, and that hee will cauſe all thinges to imploy themſelues in his ſeruice, to deſtroye his enemies and to helpe his people. But yet hee ſheweth his mightie power much better thereby, than if he vſed myracles: I meane in puniſhing the pride of ſuch as truſt in their owne ſtrength, and ſwell like Toades, and beare themſelues in hande that nothing can hurt them. The deſpiſers of God do make themſelues beleeue, that they can exempt themſelues from all inconueniences, either by their pollicie, or by their power and cunning. Heereuppon (for wee knowe that men are readie to burſt for pride, vntill Gods ſpirite reigne in them:) God, to humble them and to make them meeke, ſubdueth them and ouermaſtereth them as they deſerue.

Rom. 8. 28. 29.

True it is that God coulde confounde them at the firſt blowe, and make them to feele ſuch a heauenly force, as were able to dant the whole worlde: but hee will not deale ſo with them. Howe then? Hee vndermines them by ſuch meanes as they neuer thought of: and that is to ſcorne their fonde ouerweening the more, which made them worſe than mad, and wherewith they had beene beſotted before. And that is the cauſe why hee ſent flies and other vermin vppon Egypt, rather than raiſed his Angels to deſtroye the Egyptians. It is true that God wrought al manner of wayes to make them feele his power. Hee ſent darkeneſſe, hee turned the waters in to bloude, and in the ende an Angel came and ſlewe all the firſt borne of their houſes. This was well done. But yet Gods meaning was to pull downe the pride of Egypt, by ſending vermine to conſume them. Lo what men of warre God chooſeth to wage battell for him, when hee liſteth to laugh mens lofrineſſe to ſcorne, and to ſpite them that they may bee aſhamed of it. For by meanes thereof they come to knowe themſelues, whereas erſt they forgate themſelues, and bare themſelues in hande that their owne power was wonderfull. And indeede when wee reade that Herod was ſo conſumed of wormes: it ought to put vs in minde, that God ſent him a puniſhment fitte for him, becauſe hee had ſuffered men to call him a God. Hee was not contented with the degree of a mortall man: but hee woulde needs imagine that hee coulde transforme himſelfe. Therefore it was meete that hee ſhoulde bee abaced beneath all men, and that the filthines of his bodie ſhoulde make him droppe in peeces, ſo as hee ſhoulde ſeeke to murther himſelfe with his owne hand. Nowe then Gods handling of him after that faſhion, is to humble him the better. And when wee reade this preſent text, let vs looke that wee liue in the feare of our God: and then wee may bee ſure of his helpe, ſo as wee may liue not onely among Waſpes and Hornets and other ſuch vermine, but alſo euen among Dragons and wilde beaſts, according as it is ſaide in the foureſcore and eleuenth Pſalme, that when wee bee in Gods keeping, hee will mainetaine our life in ſuch ſort, as the thinges whereof wee be moſt afraid, ſhall not bee able to annoy vs. But on the contrarie part, if wee become his enemies and deſpiſe his maieſtie: hee needeth not to make any great adoe in arming of himſelfe to confound vs. For flies wil be able ynough to execute his vengeance. Thus ye ſee what we haue to gather vppon this place.

Nowe againe Moſes confirmeth the doctrine which wee haue hearde: namely that the children of Iſrael ſhoulde not bee afraide of their enemies. For God is among you (ſaieth hee) yea euen the ſtronge and terrible God. Firſt hee ſetteth downe heere, that they ſhoulde not bee afraide of their enemies: and afterwarde hee addeth the reaſon, For God (ſaith hee) is among you. And thirdly hee ſheweth what manner a God the ſame is, to the intent that the people ſhoulde not doubt but hee is mightie ynough, and by comparing him to his creatures, reſolue themſelues that it ought to ſuffiſe them, if they had him on their ſide. This is the ſumme of the thinges that are ſaide heere. Now it ſeemeth at the firſt ſight that heere is ſome contrarietie. For hee had ſaide afore, God will deſtroy all the enemies whom thou feareſt: and heere hee forbiddeth them to bee afraide. Howe hang theſe two together? Whereas hee ſpeaketh of feare, wee haue to note that when any daunger is apparant and threateneth vs, wee feele the griefe thereof, and wee muſt needes be afraide of it, and it cannot be otherwiſe.

Nowe then in ſaying that God will deſtroye all thoſe whom his people were afraide of, Moſes meaneth that although the enemies bee dreadfull of themſelues, yet ſhall not God bee hindered to deſtroy them. And againe, we haue to note alſo, that God hath alwayes borne with the fainthartedneſſe of thoſe that are his. Indeede it was a fault in the people of Iſrael, that they were afraide of their enemes, for ſeeing they knewe themſelues to bee in the tuition of their their God, they ſhoulde haue defiled all things that might haue abaſhed them. Yet notwithſtanding, God beareth ſtill with that default. And although the people was vnworthy to bee ſuccoured, becauſe of the fearefulneſſe that proceeded of the ſaide infirmitie: yet did not God ceaſe to holde them ſtill by the hande. Neuertheleſſe if God beare with vs, his meaning is not to feede our vice, or to foade vs in it, when wee haue not ſuch ſtoutneſſe and conſtancie as is requiſite. It is true that God ceaſeth not to haue mercie vpon vs for all that: but howſoeuer the worlde goe, yet is that fearefulneſſe alwayes worthie to be condemned. For let vs ſee from what ſpring it iſſueth. If we had a perfite truſt in our God: it woulde put away all feare, and wee might defie all that euer is againſt vs, accordingly as Saint Paul ſaieth, if God bee on our ſide, who ſhalbe againſt vs? And Dauid ſaieth, If a Million of men of warre had beſeeged mee, yet woulde I not bee afraide. Though I were in the darkneſſe of death, yet if I may ſee God my ſheepeherd, and he ſhew me his ſheepehooke, I will reſt my ſelfe vppon that and bee in quiet.

Rom 8. 29.
Pſal. 27. 3.

Therefore let vs marke well, that our Lorde ſheweth himſelfe pitifull, when it pleaſeth him to ſuccour vs in ſuch infirmitie. For hee needed to doe no more but ſay in one worde, prepare your ſelues to receiue my grace, and by and by thereuppon wee ought to imbrace his promiſes and to reſt vppon them, and to take all our contentation in them. But wee doe not ſo: and yet notwithſtanding hee ceaſeth not to beare with vs therein. Neuertheleſſe, although hee vſe ſuch gentleneſſe and patience towardes vs: yet doth it not followe that therefore there is no fault in our fearefulneſſe, neither ought we to conclude that wee may fall a ſleepe in it: but rather we muſt quicken vp our ſelues to ſay: how nowe wretched creature? Thou diſtruſteſt thy God. Thou haſt beene as greatly afflicted as might bee, and hee hath ſuccoured thee. What meaneſt thou by reiecting his goodneſſe after that manner? Thinkeſt thou that his benefites haue alwayes beene loſt towards thee, that thou diſſeateſt them through thine owne leawdneſſe, in that thou doeſt not acknowledge them? For if wee acknowledged not Gods benefits as they deſerue, ſurely we ſhould be confirmed by the as I haue ſaid alreadie. Then is it not without cauſe ỹ God addeth here, that his people ſhould not be afraide of their enemies. True it is that he had ſaide, Thou ſhalt bee afraide of them: but there hee ſpake of the infirmitie that he knewe to bee in his people, which was faultie: for he condemneth it as it deſerued. And there vppon hee addeth, Thou ſhalt not bee afraide of them. As if hee ſhoulde ſay, true it is in deede your nature will alwayes bee fearefull: but yet yee muſt not bee afraide, yee muſt withſtande ſuch fearefulneſſe. And when yee ſee the multitude of your enemies, it cannot bee but that yee muſt bee ſomewhat moued: but yet yee muſt haue the buckler of faith to repulſe all ſuch feare, and ye muſt thinke that ſeeing I haue promiſed to ſuccour you: I will not faile you.

True it is that doe what wee can, wee ſhall neuer be ſo well hartened, but that there will be ſome miſdouting as wee haue heretofore ſeene. For wee ought to holde our ſelues vnto Gods promiſes, and to aſſure our ſelues of his ſuccour. Surely if we ſeeme neuer ſo ſtout, and there bee but one ſparke of feare in vs, wee muſt vnderſtande that the ſame is euil. Yet notwithſtanding, ſo wee bee not ouerwhelmed with feare, nor quaile not, but take courage, and after toſſing too and fro, doe holde ſtill our owne, and enter into the battell: our Lorde is contented with vs.

Nowe then, what is to bee done? When wee perceiue any daunger, it cannot bee but wee muſt haue ſome feeling of it: for otherwiſe we ſhould be as blockes, and not to bee afraide of any thing, is no vertue. A drunkarde will runne vppon the ſwordes point, hee will leape out at a windowe, hee wil be afraide of no thing: and why is that? Becauſe he is out of his right wittes. Likewiſe a madde man will throwe him ſelfe into the fire or kill himſelfe. Therefore we ſee that it is no vertue to bee without feeling of griefe. Neuertheleſſe when wee feele the daungers, wee muſt reſort to the remedie that God giueth vs.

True it is that our life hangeth as by a threed, and that there needeth not any thing to deſtroy vs. But yet howe weake ſoeuer we be, our Lord hath promiſed to holde vs ſhrowded vnder his wings: and therefore let vs runne vnto him. And ſeeing hee hath a care of our life, let vs truſt thereto, and call vppon him as oft as wee ſee any daunger like to inſue. And foraſmuch as he hath promiſed neuer to ſhrinke away from vs: let vs approch boldly vnto him, and put our truſt in him, and then ſhall wee bee fenced wel ynough. For the name of God is an inuincible fortreſſe, the righteous will flee thereto for refuge, and hee ſhall neuer periſh. To the intent therefore that wee may haue a ſtedfaſt aſſurance in the middes of daunger, let vs learne to haue recourſe immediatly to our God, by receiuing the promiſes which hee giueth vs: and they wilbe a ſure and ſteadie leaning ſtock to reſt vppon: and by that meanes alſo God ſhalbe glorified in vs.

Pſal. 20. 2. 8 and 33. 21.

True it is that wee may feele ſome ſuch conceit as ſhall abaſh vs: but yet that feare of ours which wee doe ſo conceiue, ſhalbe but as an exerciſe of our faith, and the ouercomming thereof ſhalbe the more commendable. Howbeit if wee finde any difficultie, ſo as we cannot reſolue our ſelues at the firſt: then let vs aſſure our ſelues there is yet ſtill ſome infirmitie in vs, and wee yeelde not God his due honour, foraſmuch as we bee ſlowe to beleeue his promiſes, and ſticke not to them with a cheerefull courage. And therefore let vs blame our ſelues in that behalfe, yea and euen be ſorie for it. Notwithſtanding, we muſt not quail though there be infirmitie in vs: for God wil bring al to paſſe by his own power as ſhalbe declared yet more plainly hereafter. Thus ye ſee what we haue to remẽber vpõ this text, where Moſes ſaith ỹ we muſt not in any wiſe

Now let vs come to the reason which hee addeth: Thy God (saith he) is in the mids of thee. This is the same promise that was giuen at the beginning: for we must always cal to mind what hath bin treated of heretofore, namely that God telleth vs not of our own strength, when he willeth vs to be well fenced with constancie, but calleth vs back to himself. The end then which we must alwayes begin at, is that we must not thinke our selues to haue any power, nor be besotted ẏ any vaine opinion as we see men commonly be in esteeming and flattering themselues, insomuch ẏ although they be lesse thã nothing, yet they always imagin this and ẏ of themselues. And yet notwithstãding, that imagination is nothing else than an ouerweening. Also to incorage vs withal, god vseth none other mean but only to say, haue an eye to me. If it were in our owne selues to trust in him: surely god would not reproch vs any whit at al: for he is not loth ẏ there should be any vertue in vs. But when as hee saith, Haue an eye to me: it is a token ẏ we be destitute of all goodnes, and that if we serch & sift our abilitie throughly what it is, we cannot but be abashed at it. True it is that mẽ may welynough flatter themselues for a time: but yet in the end they shal find them selues deceiued in their own opinion, And as we see here & haue seene heretofore, our lord sheweth vs ẏ we shal neuer find firme ground to stand vpon, vntill we be come vnto him. And that is ẏ cause why it is said, Thy God is in the mids of thee. Surely it is an excellent promise, that God wilbe in the mids of vs. And for ẏ same cause also doth hee call vs his temple: which thing was figured in old time by the Sãctuarie. For it was Gods wil to haue it seated in the middes of al the people, and hee kept his residence in such wise in it, as men might perceiue his power to bee there. Not that hee was inclosed in that Arke or in the Tabernacle: but it was his will that the people shold haue a visible warrant, that they might not dout at all of him. For such is our rawnesse, that alwayes to our seeming God turneth his backe to vs, and thinketh not vpon vs, or else that hee is too farre of from vs to succour vs with his hand. Therefore it was Gods will that his Sanctuarie should be in the mids of his people, as a warrant of his presence and power. True it is that as now we haue not that, but wee haue other helpes as conuenient for vs. And first of all, the thinges that were figured by those outwarde shadowes, were truly, substantially, and throughly fulfilled in all pointes, by the comming of our Lord Iesus Christ. For seeing that the fulnesse of the Godheade dwelleth in him, wee must not doubt any more but that we haue God with vs. And for the same cause is hee called Emanuel, that is to say God with vs. Nowe then if this promise were made to the people of olde time, much more ought we to assure our selues of it at this day, in the person of our Lorde Iesus Christ. And the cause also why hee tooke our flesh and nature vppon him, was to the ende it shoulde be a holy and indissoluble bonde of the vnion wherein it behoueth vs to put the whole trust of our saluation. And herewithall, we haue his promises, and the seales of them in his Sacraments: so ẏ when we bethinke vs of our baptisme, thereby the son of God doth witnesse vnto vs, that we were once clothed with him as saieth saint Paul. And when wee receiue the supper, he sheweth vs that he is our foode, and that the breade which wee eate, doth not nourish vs better, than we be nourished by his substance, in somuch that we liue in him and by him. Againe wee heare how he saith, that wheresoeuer two or three be gathered together in his name, he wilbe in the middes of them. Seing it is so: let vs not thinke that this was saide alonely to the children of Israel: but let vs vnderstande that the vse thereof belongeth vnto vs also at this day. According whereunto we see howe the Church is called Gods restingplace, as is saide thereof in the Psalme, and in the eighth Chapiter of Esay, where it is saide that God will dwell in the middes of his holy Citie.

Let vs applie all these texts to our vse, and let vs not doubt but God is with vs nowadayes, yea and that he will not onely dwel among vs [generally] as in his temple: but also abide in euery one of vs seuerally. And that not onely to make vs feele his power, and to vnderstande that wee haue our life and mouing in him, as S. Paul saith in the Actes: but also to make vs perceiue that presence of his, which he hath promised to all ẏ faithfull. Now then he dwelleth in vs, when wee feele that he yeeldeth vs record of his adoption by his holy spirit, so as we can call vppon him as our father. And therin doth our lord Iesus Christ shew that we be members of his bodie, and that he is so knit vnto vs, as he keepeth not any thing seuerall to himselfe, ne withholdeth any thing from vs, but communicateth all his graces vnto vs. Now then let vs mark, ẏ no man can cal himself a beleeuer, vnles he be throughly perswaded ẏ God is with him. And al of vs in general ought to imbrace this promise, that God is in the mids of vs: specially when wee haue the preaching of his worde, and the order of calling vpon him in common, stablished among vs. If wee haue that once: let vs not think that euer we shalbe disappointed of the thing that is conteined here: that is to wit that God will dwell among vs, so as wee shal neuer neede to make long iourneys to seeke him, but we shall finde him still ready at hand to succour vs. Mark that for one point. Neuertheles it is true that this presẽce is not perceiued by our mother wit: for it wil seeme oftentimes that God is very far of from vs, or that he hath forgotẽ vs and cast vs vp: but it is his wil to try our faith & patience by that meane. Howsoeuer the case stand, if we worship him, & haue a care to cal vpon him & to resort vnto him to rest vpõ his goodnesse: it is a signe that he is neere at hand to vs. Then if wee haue a desirousnesse to resort vnto him, and doe learne to mourne in our aduersities, beseeching him to haue pitie vpon vs: it is a token that he hath not giuen vs ouer, but that he holdeth vs vp with his mightie hand, so as we doe rest vpon his power. Yee see then howe God euen in hiding of himselfe away, ceaseth not to shewe himselfe neere at hand vnto vs, and that he dwelleth continually in vs. And nowe wee see wherevppon wee ought to ground our selues to conceiue assured truit: that is to wit vppon this, that we haue God on our side. And that is a good token that we haue not any thing in our selues, but that it behoueth vs to be vtterly destitute of all trust and hope, vntill our Lord haue shewed himselfe vnto vs to helpe vs.

Nowe although this promise ought to suffise vs: yet notwithstanding, Moses addeth one point more, which is not superfluous: namely that God is mightie and terrible. Truely it should seeme at the first blush, that this is not spoken to any purpose. For the case concerneth the strengthening of the faithfull, so as they shoulde plucke vp a good heart, and not doubt but they shal discomfite all their foes: now then hereupon to call him a terrible God, should rather serue to scare them out of their wits. For although God meane not to put them in feare: yet doth his onely maiesty so amase vs, as we would faine hide vs from his presence if it were possible. Inasmuch then as he termeth himselfe terrible, it should seeme that insteede of giuing vs matter of comfort, he intended to driue vs away from him. But wee must marke that Gods terming of himself mightie and terrible, is to the ende to put vs out of doubt that hee is strong and mightie ynough to discomfite all our enemies. For we must alwayes come backe to this point, that his shewing of himselfe fauourable, mercifull and patient to-Psal.103.8. wardes vs, is altogether of his owne proper nature: for we know he is our God & sauiour. Forasmuch then as God is called our God: he wil haue vs to shewe our selues to be his people: that is to say, that his receiuing of vs is with condition, to gouerne vs with his goodnesse, as a sheepeherd that is carefull for his flocke, so as his esteeming of vs as his children, is because he hath adopted vs of his own freegoodnes, and is willing to shew himselfe alwayes fatherlike towards vs, by bearing with vs in our infirmities. So then, whereas he is termed here a terrible and mightie God, it is not in respect of his owne people: but in respect of the vnbeleeuers and infidels. And that is the cause of the often repeting of this worde, The euerlasting, thy God. Moses speaketh of it here a fower or fiue times within a little space. Wherfore saith he so oft, Thy God? To the intent that the people should resort to their couenant. In deede it were not Lawfull to preace vnto him, vnlesse he called vs: but seeing that hee of his own good wil hath couenated with vs to receiue vs to mercie, and hath tolde vs that he will take vs for his flocke & keep vs vnder his protection: we ought not to be afraide any more. Then let vs learne that wee cannot put any trust in God, vntill we knowe that he is willing to admit vs to him, and that he hath already chosē vs to be his housholde, and to bee vnder his gouernement. When we haue once this promise that he will be our God: then may we well trust in him. For we haue taken holde of his courtesie, and that is to the intent we should knowe, that he will vse the same towards vs euen to the end. Howbeit when we once knowe the goodnes that God vttereth vnto vs: we must also on the contrarie part consider his power against al our enemies. For why? we see we neede not any thing to scarre vs or to make vs afraide. In deed if we heare of the promises of Gods goodnes, we feele some sweetenes in them: but yet if the diuell stirre vp any trouble against vs, by and by we bee dismayed. As long as it is preached vnto vs that our life is in Gods hand, and that we be safe when wee be vnder his protection: all is wel, we receiue that doctrine, and to our owne seeming, it hath taken good rooting in our hearts: But as soone as the leafe is turned, or any daunger shew it self, where are wee then? But had we bin wel setled & confirmed in the thing that we heard: we should bee safe ynough, and we would keepe on stil forward: but wee neuer thinke more vpon that, neither is there any meanes at all to comfort vs. Thus is it a signe that if there happen neuer so little daunger, we doubt of Gods power, & we doe him not ỹ honor to say, he hath promised it, therfore will he perform it, for he is able. And for ỹ same cause S. Paul speaking of Abrahams faith, saith that he Rom.4.18. beleeued euen against hope, knowing that hee which had made the promise, was also able to performe it. It seemeth to haue bin a smal matter to say that Abraham beleeued that God was mightie. For who denyeth that? And therefore Abrahams faith is not so greatly to be commended in that respect: for there is no man but hee confesseth it. Yea, yea: but yet for al that, as smal a thing as it seemeth to bee, it is a very rare and difficult thing: and that doth experience shewe. For (as I saide) if we meete with any crabbed incumberance, we thinke there is no God in heauen to succour vs any more: and al that euer can be alledged vnto vs, wilbe so colde, as wee shall find no reliefe in it. Therefore it is not without cause that Moses here magnifieth Gods mightie power, and saith that hee is terrible; to the ende that the people might therby assure themselues and say, very well, it is true that we be nothing in comparison of our enemies, but what for that? What maner a one is God? Seeing he saith that he wilbe our captain, & that we shalbe vnder his protection: what can all the men in the world, or all creatures doe? Is there any thing that can withstande the power of God? Againe, what is his maiestie? If he list to shew it: they that nowadayes are ouerfotted in their owne pride, shall out of hand be put to vtter confusion. For if God make the mountaines and Rocks to melt, and Psal.97.5. the earth to wash away at his presence: what shal become of mē with their frailtie? Thus ye see to what purpose and ende we ought to applie this saying, That God is mighte and terrible. It serueth not to dismay vs: for we know ỹ whensoeuer we resort vnto him, we be alwayes receiued to mercie, his throne is not dreadfull to the beleeuers, but it is the throne of grace and goodnes. Wherfore if we see that our enemies make vs afraid, & that (to our seeming) they be as Wolues to swallow vs vp, & we as sheep in comparison of them: very wel, let vs resort to our God. And what maner a one is he? O, wee must not onely conceiue this word de God: but wee must also attribute him his qualities therewithall, namely that hee is mightie and terrible: and then let vs not be afraide. For all the rage that our enemies do cast and some out, is but a smoke, & God will make it to fade all away, assoone as it pleaseth him to shewe his maiestie: and we be sure hee will doe it, because he hath promised it. Therefore let vs so benefite our selues by this promise, that whensoeuer we be astonished, or in any doubt or griefe of minde, wee alwaies haue recourse thither and say, Our God is mightie. And why? Wherein will he vtter his mightines? Alas, it is true that he might wel vtter it in confounding & destroying vs: but he is patient, gentle, & meeke, and hee wil not haue vs to feele his force to our Matt. 23. 37. harme: but rather he wil haue vs to feele his passing fatherly goodnes. All his desire is to gather vs vnder his wings as a henne that broodeth her litle chickins. And it is a singular comfort vnto vs, when we know ỹ he wil be so louing & fauourable towards vs, and yet neuertheless will bee knowen to be mightie and terrible in the ouerthrowing of our enemies, and in ouercomming all thinges that are against vs. Therefore let vs put our trust therein. But yet therewithall let vs beware that wee abuse not his promises. For if wee will haue him to shewe himselfe vnto vs: we must bee a quiet people to himwarde and abide vnder the couert of his wings, and not play the wilde beastes in running away from him. For the hypocrites will brag well ynough that they haue God on their side: but yet for al that, they shrink away from him, and let him alone. Now then let vs learne to goe in such wise to our God, as we may trust in him and repose our selues vpon him. And in so dooing, let vs beare in minde what he commandeth, and examine our faultes according to his worde: and then shall we finde by experience, that he meant not to beguile vs, when he told vs ỹ he would be in the mids of vs mightie and terrible to discomfit al our enemies.

Now by the way Moses addeth an exception, saying: that God will not destroy all the enemies of his people out of hande. And why? Leaſt the beasts of the field (saith he) should set themselues against thee: But thou shalt weede them out by litle and litle. Thou shalt dispatch euen their kinges: and to bee short, thou shalt not leaue any thing at all of those nations. Here Moses giueth the people a very necessary warning, in telling them after what manner they shoulde proceede. For otherwise they might haue taken some euill conceite at their comming into the lande of Chanaan: and if they had not rooted out their enemies immediatly all at once: they might haue imagined with themselues, what is become of Gods promises? It shoulde seeme that hee hath mocked vs. Therefore doeth Moses holde them in awe, saying: It is true that your God wil discomfit all your enemies, but yet shall not that be done so soone as you woulde wishe, howbeit assure your selues there is good reason that hee shoulde so deale with you, and therefore put no distrust in your God. For hee seeth that the lande woulde bee replenished with wilde beastes, and they would bee so many enemies to make warre vpon you. God then doeth this to your benefite, in that hee will not haue the whole land to bee vtterly ridde of all enemies. For if your enemies should be all destroied immediately vpon your comming into the lande: you coulde not replenish it againe vpon the sudden, to defende your selues from the wilde beastes. Nowe we haue to note here, first that God intended to correct the peoples ouergreat hast, by shewing them that they should hold themselues in peace and quiet, vntill God had put them in ful possession of the whole lande. For it is the proper nature of faith to tary Gods leisure, as the Apostle affirmeth in the Epistle to the Hebrewes, Hebr. 10. 35. 38. alledging this text of Abacuc, that if God delay Abac. 2. 3. 4. the performance of his promises, wee must tary his leisure, and not bee ouerhastie: for they shall come to passe time ynough, that is to say, they shall bee perfourmed in their due season. Then let vs marke that faith cannot bee in vs without patience, that is to witte, without tarying of Gods leysure, till it please him to execute the thing that hee hath spoken and saide, and without assigning or setting of any terme as men commonly doe, who are so bolde as to take vpon them to make God subiect to their will. Let vs beware of such ouerstatelinesse, and let vs rather learne to bridle our selues, til God dispose of things accordingly as hee gaue sentence of them afore by his owne mouth. And that accordeth with this saying of the Prophet Esay: Our power shalbe in silence and rest. Then must Esa. 30. 15. we be stil and quiet, if we intend to do God ỹ honor to trust in him, and to shew ỹ we doe it vnfeynedly. And here our Lorde had a regarde to bridle his people. For asmuch (saith he) as mẽs affections are ouerhastie & headie: let it not grieue you though your enemies bee not destroied all out of hand. Let that serue for the first poynt.

And herewithal let vs marke also, that here God ment to shew the reason why he differreth and delayeth the performaunce of the thinges that he determineth, and bringeth them not to passe out of hand. Truely he is not bound to doe it. Should God giue vs an account of his doings? If he worke not after our liking, is hee bounde to tell vs why? Ought not wee rather to stoope to him, and to say, Yea Lord, we bee ignoraunt, yea and euen starke blinde, and it belongeth to thee onely to be wise? Forasmuch as there is nothing but follie and vanitie in vs: rule thou vs according to thy prouidence. It were meete that we should deale after that fashion: but we see howe God yeeldeth to our rawnesse. For inasmuch as wee bee tikliſh, and cannot finde in our heartes to bee contented with his pleasure, and to rest wholly vpon it: here he sheweth vs a reason for it. So then let vs mark wel ỹ inestimable goodnes of our God, in abasing himself so far, as to shewe vs the reason why he doth things, according as Moses telleth ỹ people of Israel here. For he hath an eie to your benefite, least ỹ wild beasts should deuour you: for they would multiply, & there be not folke ynow of you to manure ỹ whole lande, but there would be diuers places which should ly vninvninhabited. Knowe ye therefore that whereas your God deſtroyeth not all your enemies out of hand, it is for your benefite, and it were not expedient for you that it ſhould be otherwiſe. And ſo in effect Moſes telleth the people heere, that Gods delaying to giue them full victorie, was to their benefit and welfare. Therefore let vs mark well, that if God make not ſuch haſt as we would haue him, he hath an eye to our welfare, ſo as he procureth the thing that is beſt for vs, though we perceiue it not at the firſt. True it is that wee weene our ſelues to bee wiſe and well aduiſed: and thereuppon wee take vpon vs to iudge that God is ouer ſlowe, and wee woulde fayne thruſt him foreward ſtraite wayes by the ſhoulders to cauſe him to make more haſte. But (as I ſaid) that is bicauſe wee knowe not what is good for vs, but wee imagine that we bee beguiled euery turning of a hand. God therefore muſt bee wiſe for vs, and ſee more clearely than wee doe, and diſpoſe thinges, not after our liking (for that were ynough to marre all:) but after as hee himſelfe knowes to bee good. And in the meane while we muſt ſhut our eyes, and doe nothing but glorifie him in his prouidence. And if wee perceyue not at the firſt why he worketh after that faſhion: well, let vs tarie patiently till he ſhew vs why he made delay and woulde not ſatiſfie our deſires. This doctrine cannot bee fully declared as nowe, but yet muſt wee make an abridgement of it to conclude withall. Likewiſe now adayes wee may happen to languiſh all our life long. Now if we ſhould haſten God to deliuer vs: what a thing were it? We would faine be in a paradiſe here aforehand: and that were the next way to rocke vs aſleepe in the world. God therefore is fayne to wake vs by keeping vs occupyed with ſtore of troubles and vexations: and that makes vs to long continually for the heauenly lyfe. Wee forget this geere at the firſt: but GOD maketh vs to perceyue howe frayle wee bee, by wayting with all patience and humilitie, to bee gouerned by him as he thinketh good. Finally he ſheweth how greatly it is for our benefite to be beaten with his roddes. And therefore doeth hee make vs to paſſe through many troubles, and to bee greatly vexed and tormented. And if there were none other enemies to withſtand vs than ſuch as are ſpoken of here: wel, wee might hap to doe wel ynough with them, for they be men. But wee bee dayly aſſaulted by the diuel and by ſinne: and wee would faine ouercome them at the firſt puſh, and obtaine victorie againſt Satan, and againſt all the temptations of the world. But what a thing were that? Our pride would be intollerable, wee would thinke our ſelues to bee Gods, wee would not paſſe to call any more vpon God, nor to ſigh and mourne for our own weakeneſſe, wee ſhoulde not tell what it were to miſlike of our ſelues, nor to vnderſtand that there is none which hath all power in him but onely God. So then although God haue aſſured vs that we ſhall haue the vpper hand of all our enemies: yet ſhall not ỹ be performed at ỹ firſt brunt. And why? Bicauſe it were not good for vs. True it is that wild beaſtes would not come and deuour vs: but wee haue pride and vaineglorie, and wee bee ſotted with ſelfweening. And that deuliſh ouerluſtineſſe would carie vs away, ſo as wee ſhould fall aſleepe in our vanities and delights, and that would bee worſe to vs than all the wilde beaſtes in the worlde. And therefore let vs aſſure our ſelues, that Gods leiſurely working, as it were by degrees and by lyne and by leuell: is to our benefite. For coulde he be letted to accompliſh all his worke in one minute of an houre? No: but he liſteth not to doe it ſo ſoone. And therefore let vs learne to keepe the ſpirituall reſt or Sabboth as it is ſpoken of in the fifth Chapter, that is to ſay, to impriſon our wit, reaſon and will, and all that euer wee haue beſides, and to hold them in ſuch awe, as none but onely God may haue the rule of vs, and diſpoſe of all things at his will. And moreouer, let vs go on when he leadeth vs the way. For that is no breaking of the Sabboth. To occupie our ſelues euerie man in the charge that God calleth him vnto, and to doe our duties faithfully euery man in his vocation, according to the meaſure of grace that GOD hath giuen him, are the workes of God, and we muſt vnderſtand that it is God which woorketh them in vs. But yet for all that wee muſt not bee too haſtie, as who ſhoulde ſay that God were at our commaundement, or that wee would haue him doe what wee liſt and when wee liſt: but all our wiſedome muſt bee to ſubmit our ſelues to his will. The thing then which wee haue to remeber vpon this text that we may fare the better by it: is that we muſt learne to bee obedient to our God all the time of this our mortall and tranſitorie life, not doubting but that at length he will vanquiſh Satan and all that is againſt vs, and turne euen thoſe things to our benefite and ſaluation, which we thinke as now to be hurtful and harmfull to vs.

1 Pet. 5. 8.

Nowe let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God, with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs feele them better than wee haue doone, ſo as wee may bee drawen to a right repentaunce, and learne more and more to diſtruſt our ſelues and to ſettle our truſt in him: and that when wee haue imbraced his promiſes, wee may fare the better by them by applying our ſelues to his ſeruice, ſo as wee may not be vnprofitable in the world, but that as ſoone as his ſpirit dwelleth in vs, it may forthwith auaile vs, and ſhewe by effect that he hath not adopted vs in vaine in our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, ſo as wee may grow in the ſame knowledge more and more till he haue throughly accompliſhed it in vs, and that wee haue the full meaſure of it, wherof we haue but a very ſmall portion as now. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace not onely to vs but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth, &c.

On VVedneſday the xiiij. of Auguſt. 1555.

22.23.24 And the Lord &c.

25 Thou ſhalt burne the images of their Gods with fire. And neither couet ne take thou to thee the golde or ſiluer that is vpon them, for feare leaſt it turne to thy decay. For ſuch things are abhomination to the Lord thy God.

26 Therefore thou ſhalt not bring anie abhomination into thine houſe, leaſt thou thy ſelfe become accurſed as well as it. But thou ſhalt abhorre it and loath it vtterly: for it is a curſed thing.

YEſterday I began to ſhew that we muſt be conſtant vnto the end in truſting vnto God, & in holding of our ſelues to his promiſes, though the thing that he ſpeaketh be not performed out of hande, nor his determination put in execution by and by: for he hath alwayes good reaſon to make delay thereof. True it is that wee perceiue it not, and that is becauſe our eyeſight extendeth not farre. We ſee euen among men, that ſuch as haue liued long time, and haue had moſt experience of thinges, haue moſt ſtay of themſelues, and are not ſo haſtie to doe and attempt things, as younger folkes are, which caſt no perils but runne all on head. A yong man hauing a whot braine, wil needs diſpatch al things out of hand in one day. But he that hath ſome ſtay of himſelfe by reaſon of much experience, will looke about him how to diſpoſe his matters, and to doe his things in good order. Now there is no compariſon betweene God and men. It is not to be ſaide that he is an olde expert artificer (as men terme it): for all thinges are euer preſent vnto him, and euer haue bin ſince the creation of the worlde: and againe, his will is the rule of all wiſedome and right. Sith it is ſo, let vs forbeare to be ouerhaſtie, and if it pleaſe him to let vs linger for a time, let vs beare it patiently. Moreouer wee haue to note the thing that was declared yeſterday in a word or twaine: that is to wit, that if GOD deliuer vs not from all troubles and vexations out of hande: it is thorough our fault. For as ſoone as one miſchiefe is paſt, we procure another to come in the neck of it. This is not to be wited vpon God, nor vpon the ſtate of the life wherein wee bee. But we our ſelues are ſo fruitfull in bringing forth of euill, that although God purge vs of neuer ſo much, yet will the ſeede of it ſpring vp newe againe, and yeelde manifolde increaſe by and by after. That (ſay I) proceedeth of our ſinfulneſſe. And therefore let vs marke well, that if God ſet vs not in quiet at the firſt daſhe, but ſuffer vs to haue enemies to grieue vs and vexe vs: it is becauſe it is not for our benefite nor for our ſaluation, that hee ſhould maintaine vs in too great eaſe. And for proofe thereof (as I ſaide) wee could well finde in our heartes to amend the euil in other folkes, but we thinke not vpon it in our ſelues: and yet is that ỹ end which we ought to begin at. If we wil be good iudges to condéne other mens faultes: we muſt firſt looke to our owne: & we muſt not only bethinke vs of thoſe which are knowen to vs: but wee muſt alſo paſſe yet further, to craue pardon of God for the faults that are better knowen to him than to our ſelues. And beſides that, let vs bee well aduiſed, that we proceede ſoberly in that behalfe. For it may come to paſſe, that he which ſhal haue ſhewed ſome good zeale in chaſtiſing the fault of his neighbour, ſhall not onely fall into the like fault himſelfe: but alſo doe much worſe. Seeing then that we be ſo inclined vnto euill, let vs vnderſtand that it is good for vs that God ſhoulde exerciſe vs after the maner that Moſes ſpeakes of here. For the wilde beaſts neede not to come to worke vs diſpleaſure, or to pick out our eyes: wee haue anoyances and deceits ynowe in our ſelues. Why then is it that our Lord ſuffereth vs to be ſo ſore vexed & troubled outwardly by mẽ: but becauſe we haue as it were an hoſt within vs, ranged in aray againſt God and his lawe? Therefore is hee faine to ſtoppe vs and to keepe vs occupyed by other men: and that is to our benefite. Pſal.19.13

Furthermore, God is faine to leaue vs ſtill in our infirmities, becauſe that if he ſhould giue vs the full perfection, there is none of vs all but he would aduaunce himſelfe too much and be too proud. It is certain that we haue victorie alreadie againſt Satan, as it was purchaſed for vs in ỹ perſon of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: but yet muſt we bee faine to endure many encounters, and many rough aſſaultes, yea and to bee brought to ſo great perplexities, as we ſhal not wote which way to turne vs, but wee ſhall haue ouer much adoe to withſtand our owne vices, and the great number of imperfections that are in vs. And why is that? Euen to humble vs. In deede we haue a promiſe that God will vanquiſhe Satan, and thruſt him downe as it were vnder our feete, as S. Paul ſpeaketh of it in the ſixteenth of the Romanes: But yet ſhall not that be done at the firſt day: to the intente wee may haue cauſe to praiſe God, in that wee ſee our ſelues ſo fraile, and yet hee giueth vs ſtrength to holde on our way ſtill continually. Yee ſee then that wee muſt keepe ſtil our way in walking through this worlde: for it is a iourney as the Scripture termeth Col.2.15. Heb.2.14. Rom.16.20 2.Cor.5.6.

termeth it. Nowe then, let vs fully determine with our ſelues to ſuffer it patiently, if God delay to giue vs full victorie of our enemies, yea euen of our ghoſtly enemies, aſſuring our ſelues that he doeth it not without iuſt cauſe. But yet muſt wee bee fully perſwaded of another point alſo, namely that although we linger a long time, and things be out of order as in reſpect of the world, and God inlighten vs not, but let vs alone in great diſtreſſe: yet he wil giue vs the vpper hand in the ende. Wee muſt be fully reſolued of that: for without ſuch certaintie wee could not haue any courage one minute of an houre, but wee ſhould quaile out of hand, and it would ſeeme to vs that the diuell ſhould ouerwhelme vs. And ſpecially when wee were to fight againſt our own luſtes, howe might wee get the vpper hand of them? And if wee finde our ſelues ſo combered to day: what ſhall wee finde to morrowe? The miſchiefe will increaſe continually: and the great nomber of our owne experiences do ſhew vs that wee neede none other thing to ouerthrowe vs. Then coulde wee not holde out, vnleſſe wee were fully and throughly out of doubt that the promiſe of God ſhould bee wholly accõpliſhed vnto vs, and ỹ in the end our enemies ſhal not be able to ſtand before our faces. Therfore let vs fight boldly againſt Sathan, and againſte all the luſtes of our owne fleſhe: and we ſhall ouercome them, ſo wee haue Ieſus Chriſt for our Captaine. For we muſt be hopeleſſe as in reſpect of our ſelues, and not imagin that our owne ſtrength can ſuffice: but wee muſt learne Pſal.50.15. to call vppon him that is able to helpe vs at our neede. That is the thing which wee haue to beare in mind yea and euen in reſpecte of this preſent life. Let vs not doubt but that although we be faine to paſſe through many miſeries, yet notwithſtanding all ſhall turne to our benefite and welfare in the end. Let vs beare this ſaying well in mind, ſo as wee may fare the better by it, yea euen in ſuch ſorte as wee yeeld not to murmur againſt God, though hée graunt not our deſires at the firſt. And in ſo doing we ſhall haue inuincible conſtancie to keepe on our way ſtill, though it ſeeme neuer ſo hard vnto vs. And although we ſee neuer ſo many perils: yet ſhall we haue ſuch conſtancie, as to hold on ſtill till wee 2.Theſſ.3.3 bee come to our wayes end. For why? Gods promiſing of vs to giue vs full victorie, is not to diſappoint vs: he is faithfull in his ſayings. Neuertheleſſe, if it pleaſe him to make as though he regarded not thinges, wee muſt not take vpon vs to ſet him any terme, but let him diſpoſe matters according to his owne infinite wiſedome.

Yea and Moſes ſayeth that euen Kings ſhall be delinered into the people of Iſrael; handes. As if hee ſhould ſay, that there is not any power or ſtrẽgth ſo great that ought to diſmay vs. And this ſaying is not added without cauſe. For euery thing of nothing will daſle our eyes, and make vs to forget the mightineſſe of Gods promiſes. For if we perceiue any greatneſſe in men and that our enemies are of abilitie to trouble vs: wee beare our ſelues on hand that all is mard, and by and by we be halfe ſtraught at it. True it is that our preſumpruouſneſſe blindeth vs ouermuch, ſo as we perceiue not the daungers when we bee once minded to followe our owne fooliſh raſhneſſe. But when wee ſhould obey God, and doe our dewty: the whisking of a flie ouerthwart our faces will turne vs away by and by. For this cauſe doth Moſes ſay expreſly, that wee muſt not bee diſmayed for any greatneſſe of the world. In ſo much that although our enimies ſhine as the Sunne, although they perke vp neuer ſo high, although they ſeeme to haue neuer ſo many meanes wherewith to ouerwhelme vs at the firſt brunt: yet muſt wee not bee diſcouraged for all that. And why? Let vs conſider what Gods hand is, and then will all thinges vaniſh away which we feare as in reſpect of the world, ſo as we ſhall ſee that it is but vanitie. For who is he that can Rom.9.19. withſtand him that made all thinges and vpholdeth all thinges ſtill by his power? Can not our Lord as well bring all thinges to naught, as hee made the world of nothing? Yes: and whenſoeuer he liſteth to doe it, it is enough for him to Pſal.104.28 29. ſpeake the woord, that is to ſay to vtter his will. Now then, ſeeing that the creatures haue not any ſtate or being furtherfoorth than God voutſafeth to maintaine them, can they ſtop the bringing to paſſe of his good purpoſe? No: and therefore let vs learne to yeeld God ſo much honour, as to make none account of all worldly greatneſſe, ſtrength, and power, in compariſon of him, and to knowe that hee can caſt them all downe when hee thinketh good. Loe what wee haue to marke. And thereby we may ſee what a happineſſe it is to be able to reſt vpon God. For whẽ men ſtay vpon their own ſtrength, although they vaunt themſelues, flatter themſelues, and beſot themſelues neuer ſo much in their owne preſumption: yet is it a wonder to ſee how they be toppled downe in the turning of a hand: and God alſo laugheth their pride to ſcorne. But when we haue the ground of Gods promiſes to reſt vppon, which aſſure vs that wee can neuer quaile: then may we be bould to defie the world and all the creatures therein. And although we bee nothing of our ſelues: yet ſhall wee haue enough whereof to glory, and wee may well tryumph aforehand, foraſmuch God is on our ſide. Rom.8.28. But what? Wee ſee that men are ſo wedded to themſelues, as they cannot by any meanes be rid of this diueliſh ouerweening wherewith they be as it were bewitched, but that they will euer bee drawing of ſomewhat to themſelues, inſomuch that it is vnpoſſible to plucke them backe vnto God, and to make them to ground and ſettle themſelues vppon him. But yet is not this doctrine written in vaine. And therefore let vs vnderſtand thereby, that if our Lorde doe ſend vs vexations, and wee linger in a number of torments in this world: it is to exerciſe vs withall. And why? To the ende that euery of vs ſhoulde examine himſelfe to amend his faultes, and not ſticke ſo much at other mens faultes [as to forget our own,] but to thinke vpon our ſelues firſt, and conſider that wee haue neede to bee handled roughly, ſo as wee ſhall no ſooner haue eſcaped one trouble, but wee ſhall by and by meete with another, vnleſſe wee turne againe to him that is able to defend vs. Therefore wee muſt ſhape our ſelues to it all our lyfe long, and behaue our ſelues after ſuch a ſorte, as wee haue our eyes continually faſtened vppon our God, aſſuring our ſelues that his executing of his iudgementes in our ſight, is to the ende to holde vs in awe, and to make vs beware that wee intangle not our ſelues in our leawd luſtes to abyde in them: for they bee tootoo daungerous enemyes. Let vs beware wee reſemble not thoſe whome wee ſee that GOD coulde not abyde, and let vs conclude thereuppon, that the ſame matter concerneth vs, that is to wit, that wee muſt profite our ſelues by ſuch inſtruction. Thus ye ſee in effect what wee haue to marke vppon this text of Moſes.

Now he addeth immediatly, That the Iſraelites muſt burne all the Images of their Gods in the fire, and not ſo much as eaues the golde and ſiluer of them: for feare (ſayeth hee) leaſt thou beeſt ſnared by it, or that it turne to thy decay. For the Hebrewe woorde that Moſes vſeth heere, ſignifyeth ſometymes to bee ſnared, and ſometimes to ſtumble by meeting with ſome wicked iob or ſtoppe. And he vſed a word deriued of the ſame Verbe heretofore when he ſaid, Keepe thy ſelfe from their idoles, for that will bee thy decay, or that will marre all: the which two ſayings come both to one ende. And therefore yee ſee wee muſt not ſtande vppon termes, it is ynough for vs that wee knowe the true meaning of them. Heere GOD warneth his people, that if they caſt any fanſie or liking to the idoles of the heathen, or to the things that ſerued their ſuperſtitions: it will turne to their ouerthrowe like a nette or ſhare, ſo as they ſhall bee caught and ſnarled in it, and to bee ſhorte, it will bee as a pit for them to fall headlong into. That is the effect of the matter which is tolde vs here. And nowe againe he addeth a ſeconde threate, Euerie whit of it (ſaieth he) is accurſed or interdyted (as men commonly terme it,) or forbidden. Therefore beware: for thy GOD miſliketh it, and hee cannot away with the thinges that haue beene ſo defiled with the ſeruiſe of Idols. Take heede therefore that thou leaue not any whit of it: beware that thou defyle not thy houſe with it. For if any of it come within thy doores, the vengeaunce and wrath of GOD will immediately come in with it. That is the pith of the thinges which wee haue to marke heere. The matter in queſtion, is that the people ſhoulde not commit idolatrie: but GOD addeth a further commaundement of greater rigour: which is, that they ſhoulde burne all that euer had ſerued about the idols, though there were no ſuperſtituon in them. As howe? If the people ſhoulde haue taken to them ſelues the Golde, Siluer, Precious ſtones, or other Iewelles that were about the idoles: it had beene as a filthineſſe that is lothſome in Gods ſight. And if they ſhoulde haue alledged, wee doo it not for any deuotions ſake, for wee knowe it was a heynous matter to haue abuſed Gods creatures after that faſhiō: but wee take them to our owne vſe, yea and euen to ſerue GOD withall: [that allegation woulde not haue gone for payment:] For God on the contrarie part will haue them to bee all burned. And ſo wee ſee howe greatly he is diſpleaſed with idolatrie, in that folke are ſo ſtraitly forbidden heere to apply any of all the thinges to their owne vſe, which ſhall haue bin defyled aforetimes with ſuperſtition. And thereuppon muſt wee alſo note, that the pureneſſe of Gods ſeruice is the thing that he is moſt chare of aboue all other thinges. Will wee then direct our lyfe after ſuch a ſorte as God may allowe of it? Let vs looke that wee honour him, yea and that wee honour him after ſuch manner, as wee ſeeke not to haue ſome faire ſhew of vertue onely to the worldward: but to follow ſimply whatſoeuer God ordeineth. For we may ſeeme to bee as Angels of Paradiſe, & yet in the meane while God ſhall eſteeme vs as diuels. Though we liue neuer ſo honeſtly & vnblamably among mē: yet doth it not folow ỹ therfore we be diſcharged before God. And why? For although I be not a theef in ſtealing away my neighbours gold and ſiluer: to what purpoſe ſhal that ſerue mee, if I rob God of his honour? Though I be no theefe to mē, yet am I a falſe traitor to God. If I ſpeake no euill of any mortall man, & yet fal to blaſpheming of the liuing God: what a dealing is ỹ? Now then let vs mark, ỹ the faultes which are committed againſt Gods Maieſtie, are much grieuouſer and heynouſer than all the offences & wrongs that can be done againſt our neighbors. And it is a leſſon which we ought to marke well: for wee ſee that men make ſmal account of it now adayes. If any wrong bee doone to a man, the partie muſt bee condemned for it. But if Gods glorie be defaced, and himſelfe ſpyted all the wayes that can bee: what for that? Men do but wring their mouthes aſide at it, with who findes any fault with me for it? and in the meane while God hath no man to take his part, but there are ynow ỹ will take part againſt him. If any blaſphemie, any outrage, any lewdnes, or any wickednes be committed, wherin Gods word is openly troden vnder foote: no mā thinkes vpon that: But for the fauour of mē, we wil not ſticke to maintaine euen the euil: and as for the number of the zealous, it is very ſmall. Hardly ſhall a man finde one among a hundred, ỹ wil put forth himſelfe to maintaine Gods quarell: & yet his doing of it ſhal bee but coldly neither. But ỹ wicked ſhal alwaies finde champions ynow, to fight againſt God & his righteouſneſſe. And yet for al ỹ, we conſider not ỹ in ſo doing we iuſtle againſt God, & that is too hard a match for vs, ſo as we ſhalbe driuen to feele ỹ he is ſo hard a ſtone, ỹ whoſoeuer iuſtleth or ruſheth againſt him, doth but go about to bruſe & breake himſelf in peeces: & finally if it fall, it will quaſh them all to fitters ỹ ſet themſelfe againſt him. Then let vs mark that it is not ynough for vs to haue liued with our neighbors without doing any wrong or harme: for God maketh more account of his honor than he doth of all the things in the world. Therefore the offences that are committed againſt his Maieſtie, are ỹ heynouſeſt of all other.

And

And why? There is not a more precious & deare thing than his seruice. And that doeth he shewe vs here, in that we see he will haue the pureneſſe of his seruice maintained, vndefiled of any superstition. And he can so ill away with idolaters, that he cannot abide ỹ the things which had bin dedicated to idolatrie beforetimes, should bee suffered to remaine in the worlde, but will haue them rid away quite and cleane. And hereupon we may gather what vengeance is prepared for such as haue peruerted and corrupted the true seruice of God, and the pure Religion. Although they alledge neuer so fayre excuses, and pretend to haue doone it vppon good intent as they terme it: yet will not GOD receyue those things for payment. And why? For he will haue obedience aboue all things: & he knoweth which is the true rule of seruing him well and duely: he hath shewed vs it, & therefore we must holde vs to it. Otherwise wee may well protest that our intent is to serue GOD: howbeit our seruice is not doone to him but vnto idols, when we inuent what we our selues thinke good. As for example, whereas the Papistes protest, that their meaning is to serue GOD with their Masse, & with all other their baggage and Ceremonies: it is true that they may well rest thereuppon confusedly: but in the meane while God disclaimeth and disliketh euery whit of it i for it is the diuel whom they serue in deed. And why? For there is not any thing there, which is not manifestly found to be against Gods word and his trueth. Therefore it is not ynough to pretend Gods name: (for we see that the worlde hath not ceassed to abuse that fayre colour at all times:) But wee must holde vs to Gods commaundement: for without that, there is nothing but vtter corruption.

1.Sa.15.22. Deut.32.17. 1.Cor.10.20

And nowe let vs marke well the reason that Moses addeth: that is to wit that it shall bee as a snare to catche the people, or that it shall be their ouerthrowe. Heere we haue to marke, first of all what our frailtie is. For although wee minde not to doe euill at the first dashe: yet will it amaze vs to see howe the deuill will haue intrapped vs out of hande, by his wiles which wee perceiued not. Most commonly, if a man bee tolde of his fault when hee hath doone amisse: hee thinketh not (to his owne seeming) that his doinges are euill. And why? Bycause he perceiueth it not. Surely if we were well aduised, we should espy Sathans guiles a farre of: and it is a point of wisedome which Sainct Paule attributeth to the faithfull. You (sayth hee) doe knowe his wiles, so as yee can beware of them. Yea, but hee speaketh of such as suffer themselues to be gouerned by Gods spirite, which giueth them good discretion and aduisednes: but as for vs, wee shet our eyes wilfully, and beare our selues on hande that it is enough for vs so wee knowe not the euill. But we be not competent Iudges in our owne case. And againe our owne affections blinde vs, and are as towels to keepe vs from seeing three fingers bredth before our noses. Yet notwithstanding we ceasse not to bee hampered in Sathans snares, so as hee holdeth vs as his pray, bycause wee bee not watchfull enough in taking good heede to our selues, accordingly as Moses sheweth vs heere, in telling the people that if they tooke to them the riches of the heathen, and the gold and siluer of their idoles: all would turne to their decay. And this is not saide without cause. For when we meete with the furtherances of idolatrie, for as much as wee bee giuen thereto alreadie by nature: it is a woonder to see howe soone wee bee snarled in it. For the Diuell sheweth vs not his snares at the first, vntill wee bee falne into them. But GOD who foreseeth all thinges, warneth vs of them aforehand, to the ende wee shoulde wake and keepe good watch, and not giue Satan any enteraunce to winne vs to him or to intrappe vs. So then let vs marke generally, that to keepe our selues from all offence against GOD, wee must preuent the occasions of euill. For he that casteth himselfe headlong into any hazard, tempteth GOD. Wee bee not so strong as to bee able to outstande euill, when wee fall to iustling against it. For wee see howe wee bee daunted at euerie shadowe of it: and what will become of vs when wee shall bee put to the pinche? Seeing then that men doo feele such frailtie in themselues: they ought not to seeke occasions. For if a man fling himselfe wilfully into the fyre, doeth hee not make open warre against God? Yes: and euen so doe wee, when we take occasions to doe euill. If a man yeeld to a thing ỹ seemeth not to be any great vice: at the first he perceiueth it not, howbeit he proceedeth from the lesser to the greater, and from euill to woorse, vntill at last he fall into the ditch. Men shall not perceiue at the first, that dauncing is a bait of whoredome, and a tricke of bawdry to marre all. Men perceiue not at the first, that wanton songs serue to impeach & corrupt good maners, as the scripture speaketh of them: and therfore they thinke not of it. Men perceiue not ỹ playing and gaming are daungerous, or rather mischieuous, yea and that they serue to destroy mens houses & to make hauocke of all: ỹ they be as a seede or roote whence all vngodlineſſe groweth to spyte GOD withall: that they breede occasions of strife, debate, quarels, swearing, and all manner of naughtineſſe: that they bee a meane to impouerish such as otherwise might beare an honest porte and countenaunce: and to bee shorte, that they bee meanes to make Christians to become bruite beastes. Men perceiue not all these thinges, neither make they account to keep themselues from them. But yet for all that, the diuell is the founder of them, who increaseth the mischiefe continually, and God also doeth giue him the bridle: bicause wee vouchsafe not to receiue the warning that hee geueth vs, wee bee worthy to perishe and to tumble into the pit to breake our neckes. Now then let vs marke, that to eschew the offences to Godward, that may lead vs to destruction, we must also shun the occasions of them a farre of. Mark that for one point.

2.Cor.2.11.

And aboue all things, for as much as we haue

ſuch a curſed inclination of nature, that idolatrie is as it were rooted in vs, ſo as euery of vs is able to keepe a ſchoole of it, and to bee Doctors of it without any further teaching: therefore doeth it ſtand vs on hande to ſhun all furtherances thereof. Nowe then whereas ſome nowe adayes will needes rowe betweene two ſtreames, and beare folke in hand that men may beare with the time, graunting that men may well cut off the things that are vtterly intollerable and manifeſtly againſt God, but yet [auowching] that the things may well bee borne with, which are eyther indifferent, or not vtterly euil. I ſay that they which ſpeake after that faſhion, doe ſhewe full well that they haue no right meaning in them, nor any deſire that there ſhould be any ſuch reformation as were meete to be had. And yet notwithſtanding, the worlde is full of ſuch diſguiſers, which would faine haue a particoloured faſhion of ſeruing God, & a religion ỹ were neither fiſh nor fleſh (as mẽ ſay,) but half of one ſute & half of another, as is ſaid in ỹ prouerb. But for our part let vs vnderſtand, ỹ in as much as we be giuẽ to idolatrie, it ſtandeth vs on hand to flee the further from it, that wee meete not with any of the thinges that may leade vs to it. For if there bee any thing that may drawe vs that way, by and by wee be ſeduced, yea and we bee infected with it inwardly, like a man that hath a ſecrete diſeaſe within him which he perceiueth not, and yet is neuer the leſſe but rather the more in daunger, bicauſe the miſchiefe is vneſpyed. Euen ſo is it with vs: If wee retayne ſtill the furtheraunces and occaſions of idolatry and ſuperſtition, wee ſhalbe ouertaken vnwares by Sathans ſuttlety which we marked not. Thus ye ſee what wee haue to remember, conſidering the ſnares and trappes that draw vs to deſtruction, as Moſes ſpeaketh of them heere.

Nowe let vs come to the ſecond threat which he addeth. Hee ſayeth, It is an abhomination [or lothſomeneſſe] before God: and therefore that euerie man muſt beware of the bringing in of ſuch abhomination for feare of being accurſed. It ſhould ſeeme heere that Gods rigour was too great, in forbidding the vſe of gold and ſiluer. For are they not Gods good creatures, and ſuch as may bee put to good vſe? And although ſome men haue abuſed the thinges which God did put into their hands: doth it follow that they haue the power to defile his creatures, and to corrupt and marre them? No: For we heare how Sainct Paule ſaith, Tit.1.15. that all thinges are pure and cleane to ſuch as haue cleane conſciences before God: and there is no vncleanneſſe, but that which proceedeth of our ſelues. How is it then that hee forbiddeth folke to couet that gold or ſiluer? Let vs marke that this lawe is a parte of the auncient order whereto God ment to binde the Iewes: and I haue tould you already that the ten verſes haue Matt.5.18. one euerlaſting rule, which God hath giuen to continue to the worldes end. If wee minde to haue a doctrine that ſhall pleaſe and like God, our life muſt be conformable to the law that is contcined in the ten commaundementes: howbeit, this preſent commaundement ſerued but for an order: like as when Chriſten magiſtrates make lawes nowadayes, are they againſt Gods woord? No: but they doe it in way of gouernment and ciuill order, that their people may be held the better in the feare of God and in the right religion. Now then this law whereby God forbad the coueting of golde and ſiluer, ſerued but for a time. For God trained vp that people like little babes. And Sainct Paule alleadgeth the ſame ſimilitude, which may bee as a ſolution to the doubt that might be moued vppon this preſent place. When little children are vnder Tutors and gouernours, they bee held in the ſtraiter awe, and they inioy not their goods and lyberty at their own will, inſomuch that their ſtate ſeemeth to bee a bondage, and yet notwithſtanding they be free, yea and heires too, but they be not of age to haue the guiding and gouerning of themſelues. Euen ſo the people of olde time were in ſtraiter ſubiection vnder the lawe, than we bee nowadayes [vnder the Goſpell,] by reaſon whereof it is lawfull for vs to vſe the thinges which we may put to a good vſe. For otherwiſe the Papiſtes might ſtarue vs. They would fall to making of their coniurings vpon Corne and wine: now if we might not be ſo bolde as to eate of the Corne that were ſo charmed, or to drinke of the wine that weere ſo coniured: if we might not touch any thing which they had defiled with their pelting traſh: wee ſhould be faine to ſtarue for hunger. But they haue not any power ouer the creatures of God, in ſo much that they continue pure of themſelues, ſpyte of all their abhominations. Neuertheleſſe it was Gods will to hold the people of old time in awe, after the maner of yong children as I ſaid afore. But he hath giuen vs greater libertie at this day. And what maner of libertie? Not a licentious libertie to do what wee liſt: for S. Paule addeth that exception, Gal.5.13. that although we haue greater libertie nowe adayes than the Iewes had, yet muſt wee not therefore lay the bridle in our neckes: but wee muſt haue a ſpeciall care to behaue our ſelues honeſtly, and to be conſtant in ſeruing GOD purely. For as I ſaid, wee ſhall alwayes be weake, and may eaſily ſwarue aſide to idolatrie: and therefore wee muſt cut off all occaſions thereof. And yet notwithſtanding, wee may vſe ỹ things that are good of themſelues: yea, ſo wee doe it without giuing any cauſe of offence, and beware that wee wipe away all that may induce vs to euill and to the corrupting of Gods ſeruice. That is the thing which wee haue to remember vpon this place. For it behoueth vs to mark well the reſemblance that is betweene vs and the Iewes, and the diuerſitie that is betweene [the libertie of] the Lawe, and the libertie that God giueth vs now a dayes. But yet muſt wee moderate this libertie in ſuch ſort, as it turne not into looſenes to giue ouer our ſelues to euil, knowing that we bee but too much inclined thereunto, and wee ſhould be yet much more prouoked vnto it, if we would needes haue furtherances and ſeeke occaſions thereof. And in this reſpect was Achan ſtoned to death for ſtealing of the baggage that was about the puppets [of the Chananites.] Ioſua 7.25.

nites]. Surely his intent was not to builde any altar with them: but hee was led to it by his couetousnesse, [which made him beleeue] that if he could filche and conuey them away cleanly, hee should saue so much by it. But all the people were faine to be accursed for it, vntill it was bewrayed. Lottes were cast: and when Iosua had made him to hold vp his hand to put him to his othe, saying, My sonne giue glory vnto God: immediatly vpon his confessing of the crime wherof he was accused, hee was stoned to death, onely for stealing of certeine of the thinges that had bin forbidden. Yet had hee not robbed any person: hee might well haue sayd, who can complayne of me? But hee had done against Gods commaundement. Therefore let vs marke well, that wheras GOD dealeth more freely with vs nowadayes, so as we may vse the thinges ỹ were earst defiled by ỹ vnbeleuers, & which haue bin applyed aforetimes to superstition: we neuertheless must cast away all that euer may drawe vs vnto euill. For if wee should keepe stil images & such other lyke thinges: it were the next way to pull to vs still some euill inconuenience, so as mẽ might conceiue some hope of returning againe to the superstitions of the time past. And therefore let vs beware of all such thinges.

Now whereas it is sayd, Beware thou bring not cursednesse into thy house: herby we be put in minde ỹ in stead of going foreward and of profiting our selues we not onely go backe, but also worke our owne ouerthrow, when we vse vnlawfull meanes & such as displease God. And ỹ is a very notable rule. Trueth it is that the matter which Moses speaketh of here, is idolatrie, & he sayth ỹ whosoeuer they be which take to thẽselues the golde & the siluer ỹ hath serued to that purpose: they shal defile their howses & prouoke Gods wrath, and in stead of gathering treasure to their profit, they shall but rake vp a fire to consume all ỹ they haue in the end. That is Moseses meaning. But we both may and ought to gather a generaller doctrine vppon this matter: namely that whereas it is sayd, that it is a bringing in of cursednesse into our howses: it serueth to shewe vs ỹ when men imagine to benefite themselues by it, they doe but prouoke Gods wrath against themselues & throw themselues headlong into destruction. As how? They that heape vp goods by hooke & by crooke, they that pill & poll, they ỹ eate vp & deuoure, they that filch al ỹ comes in their way, they ỹ vse craft and subtiltie to rake other mens goods vnto them: doe beare thẽselues in hand ỹ they worke wonders, & that they shall builde them houses, and make immortall monuments not onely of wood & stone, but also of euerlasting renowne, so as their children shall haue whereof to triumph after their decease. But yet for all their gathering & heaping vp of goods, what do they? they doe but pile vp a stacke of wood and coale, whereunder lyeth Gods wrath as a fire hidden within it. In deede it shall not kindle at the first day: but in the end the flame will burst out, so as all shall be consumed anon after. Now if wee did marke this well, surely wee would not bring Gods curse into our houses as we doe, and as most men doe. What is to be done then?

First and formost let vs marke, that all such as defile themselues with Churchtheft, cannot scape the punishment which Moses denounceth in this place. I say that all they bee Churchrobbers, which haue taken to them the goods of the Church, of which sort are the priestes, the Monkes, and the rest of the stinking rable of the popish cleargie, who haue deuowred and still doe deuowre all that was dedicated vnto God. Now then, if we also doe the like: shall it not be ỹ next way to bring Gods curse into our howses? Yes surely. Therefore let not vs offend in the same thinges which we haue condemned in the ỹ liued amisse: but let vs keepe our selues from them. And if we intend to prosper: let vs assure our selues there is none other meanes thereof than the blessing of God. But we know that God hath not promised his blessing to any other, thã such as trauell faithfully for their liuing, & earne their bread with rightfull labor: which offer no man wrong, but content themselues with their meane state, so as if they be rich, they couet not more and more, or if they be poore, they be contented with their estate. To such folke hath God promised his blessing. Now if I doe otherwise, so as I beguile my neighbor, so as I deale crookedly, so as I labor to inrich my selfe by violence and robberie: what doe I then? should I looke for the blessing that God hath promised? Wee must not thinke to binde him, when wee fall to spiting of him so wilfully: nor to haue his blessing light vpon vs, when we fall to straying out of the right way, shaking off his yoke & bridle frõ our necke: but we must cõtrarywise looke ỹ he should curse vs, & that his wrath shold light vpõ vs, & not only vpõ our selues, but also vpon our childrẽ. And so wesee what instructiõ we ought to gather vpõ this place. Namely ỹ euery of vs ought to look to himself, & ỹ if we purpose to haue God to keepe vs through his fauor & goodnesse: our howses must not be defiled with robberie & deceit, neither must our hands be imbrued with stealing & filching: but to be short, we must be cleane from all spottes. Yea & we must beware that we keepe ỹ order which our Lord hath commaunded vs: which is, ỹ he which is desirous to bee blessed in his owne person & in his houshold, must looke wel to it ỹ god be serued & honored in his house, that there be no filthinesse lurking any where, ỹ there be no whordom, no swearing, nor no other disorder, ỹ there be not any thing against God, nor any euil bolstered or borne out. If we doe so, then shall wee prosper better than wee doe: and although things fal not out as we would wishe to the worldward: yet will God graunt vs the grace to bee contented with his only blessing, which wil satisfy vs more than if we had all ỹ heapes of golde & siluer that were possible to be imagined. But on ỹ contrary part, if a man haue not a care to keepe his house pure and cleane as a tẽple of God: ỹ thing ỹ Moses speaketh here must needs be performed. ỹ is to wit, Gods curse must come into it, accordingly as it is sayd in ỹ prophet Zacharie, that this same curse possessed al ỹ houses of that time, because iniquitie reigned in thẽ and departed departed not from them. Will wee then haue God to shed out his blessing vppon vs? Let vs be sure that we clense both our selues & our houses from all filthinesse: and then will the curse depart from thence out of hand. But if wee cease not to prouoke Gods wrath by abusing his patience too long: hee will kindle a fire that shall neuer be quenched: and if wee fall still asleepe, hee will wake vs to our cost: and when we think our selues to be escaped, then shall wee be new to begin. And therefore let vs be circumspect to preuent the mischiefe, specially sith wee be warned, yea & warned by our God himself. Wherein hee sheweth vs what a care he hath, both of our worldly welfare, and of our saluation.

Now let vs kneele downe in the presence of our good God w acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to voutsafe to make vs feele the better than wee haue done, so as it may make vs to resort vnto him, & to be sorie for our sinnes, and to condemne them, & that we be not so froward as to spite him, & to harden our selues, but that we may haue a meeke & plyable heart, to receiue al his warninges & corrections in such wise, as we may haue the skill to fare ỹ better by them. And so let vs say, Almighty God heauenly father, &c

On Thursday the fifteenth of August. 1555.

The Lviij Sermon which is the first vppon the eight Chapter.

Keepe al the commaundementes which I haue commaunded you this day to do them: that yee may liue and encrease, and go in and possesse the land by right of inheritance, which the Lord swore to your fathers.

2 And be mindfull of al the way wherethrough the Lord thy GOD hath made thee to walk these fortie yeares in the wildernesse: to the intent to afflict and try thee, that hee might knowe what is in thine hart, and see whether thou wouldest keepe his commaundements or no.

3 Hee afflicted thee, and made thee to endure hunger, and fedde thee with Manna which neither thou, nor thy fathers knew, to make thee to know that man lyueth not onely by bread, but that man lyueth by all that euer commeth out of the mouth of the Lord.

4 Thy rayment hath not worne vpon thee, neyther hath thy foote beene swolne all these fortie yeares.

HEre againe Moses shew eth ỹ people, ỹ God gaue not his law in vain, but that his will is to haue it kept and that is the way for vs also to fare ỹ better by it. True it is, that whensoeuer any man speaketh to vs in Gods name, we must haue our eares open to heare what is tolde vs: for by that Rom.10.17. meane doth faith come. But yet must we bring our handes and feete with vs also, to offer them Rom.12.1. obediently vnto God, & to imploy all the power that hee hath giuen vs in his seruice. Therefore let vs not come hither onely to haue our eares beaten with the thinges that are preached vnto vs: but let vs also apply them to our vse. Instruction must be matched with practise: or else we shall neuer knowe what hath bin shewed vs and taught vs. And so we see what we haue to beare in minde. Moreouer let vs marke, that Moses thinketh it not enough to haue sayd these things at once and away: but he repeteth them againe for a larger confirmation. Looke (sayth he) that thou keepe the commaundements which I inioyne thee: not to the end thou maist knowe them at thy fingers endes, or bee able to vtter them with thy mouth: that is not enough: But thou must put them in execution. And to confirme this matter the better, hee addeth a promise, saying: That thou mayst liue, and increase, and go into the land which the Lord thy God did sweare vnto thy Fathers. This hath beene expounded alreadie heretofore: and there remaineth no more to doe, but onely to renewe the remembrance thereof, according also as we see that ỹ was the intent of Moses, or rather of ỹ holy Ghost. Now thẽ, our Lord alloureth vs to him by promises, of purpose to giue vs ỹ better corage to serue him: & he doth it of his own freegoodnesse, without being bound thereto. For he needed no more but to say the word: he hath authoritie to commaund vs what hee listeth, and it is our part to obey him. Why then doth he ad his promises, but to win vs by louingnesse lyke a father, who though he haue al soueraignte ouer his childe: doeth neuertheless vse gentlenes in promising, to ỹ intẽt his child shold serue him with the cherefuller heart? True it is that the child is bound therto aforehand by nature: but yet when hee seeth his father so vp-right towardes him, as to offer him more than his duetie: it moueth him the more, if he be not too too vnkind & lewdely disposed. Therefore let vs learne that in this case God stoopeth to vs, as if he were a mortall man. Yet is not that any derogation to his maiestie: but rather a recorde of his infinite goodnesse, in that he vseth not his right with rigor, but forbeareth it and applyeth himselfe after that fashion vnto vs, to doe the thinges which hee knoweth to be meete for our rudenesse. And therefore whensoeuer wee heare that God promiseth to prosper vs, if wee honor and serue him: Let vs vnderstand ỹ his so dooing is of free goodnesse, to win vs the better, & because he is loth to vse rigor towardes vs as he might doe. But yet for all this, we must not imagin that he is bound to yeelde vs any recompence or reward for our seruice. For it is not for vs to enter into account in this behalfe, as though wee could win any thing by it: but wee must receiue whatsoeuer hee offereth vs as of his free gift, knowing our selues to bee so much the more bound vnto him.

Moreouer let vs marke what hath bin tolde vs heretofore: namely that the land which Moses promiseth here vnto the people, had bin promised already fourehundred yeeres afore, whē none of them all was yet borne: & therfore God had not an eye to anie of their deseruinges. But now he saith that they should inioy the promise which God had made them of his owne mere goodnesse. And so we haue to gather in effect, that all ỹ euer we receyue at Gods hand, springeth out of none other fountaine than onely his meere mercie, because he is good, because hee hath pitie vpon vs, because he hath not any respect to our worthinesse but onely to himselfe, & because it pleaseth him to be so boūtiful towards vs. Marke ỹ for a speciall poynt. But yet for all ỹ, if we will well inioy his benefites, if we will haue them auaileable to our saluatiō, & if we wil haue the continual possession of them: we on our side must looke to answere to ỹ grace ỹ God sheweth vs. And how shall we answere it? Verily not by shrinking away frō him, nor by refusing ỹ things ỹ he offereth vs to drawe vs to him: but by knowing the right & lawful vse of the benefites which he bestoweth vpō vs, so as we loue him & glorify him for them, & euery of vs spend himselfe in his seruice. Therefore whēsoeuer our Lord shall haue done vs any good: let vs vnderstand ỹ the same cōmeth not for aught on our behalf, but rather ỹ we be so much ỹ more beholdē vnto him. And to ỹ end we may possesse & inioy the same benefites, & ỹ they may profite vs to our soules health: let vs be well aduised therewithall, ỹ wee be ỹ more prouoked thereby to serue God, forasmuch as he sheweth himself so liberal towards vs. That is the thing in effect, which we haue to gather vpon that text.

Now Moses addeth, that she people must bethink them of all the iourney whereby the Lord their God led them. This bethinking of themselues was very needefull. And if we were wise & well aduised, we would bethink vs better than we doe, of ỹ things which our Lorde sheweth vs throughout all our lyfe. For both the aduersities & also the prosperities which he sendeth vs, are instructiōs which we ought to marke well, & this present lyfe is as a schoole wherein we ought to cal to minde that lesson both euening & morning. But what? Although God doe the office of a good schoolemaister, & neuer leaue teaching of vs: yet there is none of vs that taketh heede of it, but ỹ time is lost, we be lyke children that are hardened or become trueandes, so as doe ỹ maister what he can, the childe doth but laugh him to skorne, he giues not his minde at all to learning, but his wittes are wandering abroad, & either he giueth himself to follie & lewdnesse, or else runnes loytering vp & downe the streetes when hee should haue his boke in his hād. At ỹ same point are we: For we haue ỹ boke opē before vs, & as lōg as we bee in this world, God teacheth vs by all maner of meanes to loue him & to feare him, and to put our trust in him and to submit our selues to his good will. If he send vs blessings, it is to this end that wee should learne, to giue our selues wholy ouer vnto him. If he afflict vs, it is to waken vs, that we should liue in his feare. If he send vs any neede, or hold vs in any distresse: it is as a quickening of vs vp to call vpon him, & to flee to him for refuge. If he giue vs any taste of his fauor: it is to the end we should be the better confirmed, not onely that he will helpe vs during this mortall lyfe, but also that hee will bring vs to the kingdome of heauen: and thereof must wee be fully resolued. Thus ye see how God neuer ceaseth to rehearse our lesson to vs: and yet doth none of vs giue heede to it, but we wander away in our owne imaginations, the pleasures of this world doe cary vs away, and euery of vs is so combered with these vanities, that wee haue no leasure at all to thinke vppon our God, or vpon the thinges that he sheweth vs.

Yet notwithstanding, it is not for naught that Moses sayth here, Bethinke thee of the way wherethrough the Lorde thy God hath led thee. True it is that the people of Israell had peculiar instructions, so as a number of thinges befell them in their trauelling through the wilderneſse, which belong not vnto vs in these dayes: but yet was that a figure of mans lyfe. The wilderneſse (say I) wherein the people were by the space of fortie yeeres, was as a mirrour of this earthly wayfaring of ours, wherethrough wee must passe vntill GOD take vs hence into his rest. Lykewise the resting place of the land of Chanaan (accordingly as it is named in the foure-score and fifteenth psalme) was as a warrant of the endlesse lyfe that is prepared for vs, and wherein wee shall no more bee tossed and turmoyled as we be in this world. Now seeing it is so: Let vs note that as the Iewes were exhorted to remember the iourney wherein God had led them through the wilderneſse: so now the chiefe poynt of our duetie is to cōsider that inasmuch as God gouerneth vs, we liue through his fatherly care, so as he guideth all our steppes which we haue to goe or come. And it behoueth vs to bethinke vs well of all the time of our lyfe, & to consider throwly what we haue had experience

tience of in this world. True it is that we thinke oftentimes both vppon the good and vppon the euill which we haue receiued: but that is cleane contrary to the intent of our God. For our thinking vppon our aduersities is not to knowe them to be as rods wherewith God beateth vs for our chastisement. No, it is but to frette and chafe against him, and to gather matter to grudge at, saying, what will become of this? Shall I alwayes be new to begin? It should seeme that God intédeth to confound me presently: for my affliction was great enough afore: and was it meete that hee shoulde increase it yet more? After ỹ maner doe we gather a summe of all the miseries which we haue felt from our childehode to our old age. Howbeit that is but to sharpē our selues against God, whereas we should rather thinke thus: Goe to, my God hath not ceased to chastise me euen from my childhood vpward: and if I had returned vnto him, surely he would haue spared me: but he was faine to dubble his stripes, & to hold on still, because I haue alwayes waxed harder & harder, & rebelled against him: & ought not ỹ to haue suffised me if I had not bin quite paste grace? But yet for all this, I hold on still mine accustomed trade: neuertheleſſe he ceaseth not to waken me vp with afflictions. He is loth that I should welter in mine owne dung, and yet doe I continue still in my stubbornnesse: and what will come of it in the end? After this maner (say I) must we quicken vp our selues, & call to remembraunce the whole time of our lyfe, or else we shall neuer bethinke vs of the aduersities that we haue indured, but with murmuring & grudging against God. In lyke case is it with prosperitie. If God make vs to prosper, & afterward cast some affliction vppon vs: wee be the more greeued at it, insomuch ỹ in stead of saying with Iob, wee haue receiued good at the Lordes hand, & why should we not receiue euill also? (for when he doth vs good, he is not vnwilling to continue it, & his ceasing of it, is not for that he is become nigardly, or vnable to doe vs good any more: but because he knoweth it to be expedient for vs to be so exercised, that he may try our patience: & so ought we to thinke:) But what? we on the contrary part say thus: it comes to my minde that I was well at mine ease, and I had this & that. To be short, wee coulde finde in our heartes to serue Satan, so wee might haue prosperitie, & we seeke to make our selues merry, bearing our selues on hand in ỹ meane while, that it is but lost labor to serue God. Thus wee see how men turne to the cleane contrary, both the prosperitie & the aduersitie ỹ God sendeth them. But when we should learne any thing, our remembraunce is very short: for if God haue afflicted vs for a time, we neuer think of it after. In deede as long as the crosse indureth, wee can skill to sigh & to play the hypocrites, & to pretend that if God would voutsafe to abate his rigor, we will become little Angels: but as soone as he withdraweth his hand from vs, our nature falles by and by to his olde byasse, wee doe but shake our eares a little, & we neuer thinke more vpon his corrections to doe our selues any good by them. If God send vs any prosperitie, we haue forgotten them out of hand. Insomuch that whē we haue once crammed our selues full, in stead of yeelding him thanks, we fal to kicking against him lyke ouerpampered iades, as shall be declared in the two & thirtith chapter: ye see thē that our wittes are very short in remēbring the way wherethrough God hath led vs. As touching goods, they serue vs not to stirre vs vp to loue our God, and to put our trust in him & to call vppon him. As touching aduersitie, it serueth not to humble vs, nor to make vs renounce ỹ world, nor to cause vs to bethinke vs of our sinnes, that wee might be sory for them and craue forgiuenesse: but rather to the cleane contrarie. Now then seeing we be so faultie, wee haue the more neede to marke well this text, & the exhortation that Moses maketh to vs here, that we may remember the way whereby God leadeth vs. So then, let vs dayly haue an eye to ỹ things whereof we shal haue had experience during this transitory lyfe. How hath God dealt with mee euer since I was borne? I haue waded through ten hundred thowsand miseries, & he hath deliuered me from them all: & ought not this to make me thinke him to be my father, and to put my selfe wholy into his protection? Againe, I haue bin cumbred a number of wayes: and God hath alwayes had an eye to me, & brought me home againe to himselfe. How oftentimes haue I tempted him, casting my selfe vp to the spoyle, and running into the snares of Satan? And yet my God would not let me perish. Nowe ought not I to perceiue his goodnesse therein? Ought I not to betake my selfe to his keeping with the surer trust? Moreouer my God hath visited mee with a great sorte of afflictions: and shoulde I stil rebell against him? Shall I not bee tamed for all the stripes that I haue receiued at his roddes? Shall God haue lost his labor in chastising me? After this maner must we bethinke vs, both in our prosperitie and in aduersitie: and that not for once and away, but with such imprinting of it in our hearts, as we may haue it so inregistred there ỹ it may neuer be blotted out. That is the thing which wee haue to remember vppon this text of Moses.

Deut. 32.15.

Iob. 2.10.

Now hee speaketh expresſely of the afflictions which the people had indured in the wildernesse: as if hee shoulde say that these afflictions heere are profitable for men, so they can vse them well, and referre them to their right end. It is not without cause that Moses vttereth this thing here: inasmuch as it seemeth at the first, that we cānot thinke vpon our aduersities without griefe and grudging, so as they should prouoke vs to repine against God, and consequently to shrinke away from him. For we know there is nothing more against our nature, than to bee poore, sicke, diseased, or afflicted with any miserie: they bee thinges which wee hate. And therefore when God smiteth vs, it seemeth to be the next way to withdrawe vs from him. But Moses telleth vs, that if we were so wise and wel disposed as wisely to apply to our vse the afflictions that God sendeth vs: thy shoulde rather teach vs to returne home to him. The Lorde thy God (ſayth he) hath ſcourged thee. And to what end? To knowe what was in thy heart, and whether thou wouldeſt keepe his commandements or no. Here 1.Pet.4.12. Moſes ſheweth, firſt that Gods afflicting of vs is as an examination to trye what we bee, and how wee be minded. In deede, proſperitie alſo is a good triall to bewray what is in mens heartes. For if a man be any thing at eaſe, he ouerſhootes himſelfe, and pleaſures corrupt vs yea and vtterly dull vs. If a man bee riche, whereas hee was taken to haue bin lowly and meeke, hee will bewray his pride and crueltie. If a man bee in authoritie, hee becommeth intollerable. And ſo yee ſee that GOD may try what is in vs and take experience of it, euen by making vs to proſper. But yet is pouertie ſet downe here of ſet purpoſe, becauſe it is the meane whereby God tryeth whether wee bee ſubiect to him or no. And why? For patience (as men ſay) is a ſingular vertue: but how may it bee knowen that wee bee patient, but by aduerſitie? Therefore when God ſendeth vs aduerſities that are hard and troubleſome to vs: then doth hee as it were lay open our hartes. For if wee abide quietly vnder his hand, and ſuffer him to deale with vs according to his good will, ſo as wee prayſe his name though he handle vs roughly: it is a token that wee loue him in deed, and that hypocriſie taketh no place at all in vs. And therefore it is not without cauſe, that Moſes intending to ſhewe how God tryeth vs; and prooueth vs, ſpeaketh heere expreſly of afflictions.

Now wee haue to gather vpon this text, that it is no woonder though God afflict vs diuerſe wayes. And why ſo? For it is expedient for vs to bee ſifted and to haue it knowen what is in vs: There is not a more needefull and profitable thing for vs: and that is done by afflictions. Therefore muſt wee ſubmit our ſelues to them, and vnderſtand that they neuer bee ſuperfluous or more than needeth. Mark that for one point.
1.Pet.2.20. 21, & 4.13. Yea and vnto the ſame end muſt wee apply this ſaying of the Apoſtle, that it is the very meane whereby to try our obedience. For hee vſeth the ſame word, and ſetteth downe Ieſus Chriſt for an example. For although hee be the mirror & patterne of all righteouſneſſe, yet was he faine to paſſe vnder Gods ſcourges. And why? Euen to the end that his obedience might be knowen.
Ephes.1.23. & 5.30. And that which is ſhewed vs in the perſon of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: good reaſon would that the ſame ſhould bee accompliſhed in vs that are his members. Now is there any thing more requiſite, than to knowe whether wee bee obedient to God or no? And that is not knowen but by aduerſitie, when thinges fall out contrary to our deſire, and God handleth vs in ſuch ſort as our fleſhe and nature ſtriue againſt it. When we be in that caſe, if we can hold our ſelues in ſubiection to God, to ſay, in deed Lord this is hard for me to beare, it goeth againſt my ſtomacke, it is cleane contrary to my nature, but yet howſoeuer I fare I renounce mine owne will: I would faine haue health, but ſith it pleaſeth thee to haue me ſicke, thy name be bleſſed for it: I could finde in my heart to be rich, and to haue mine owne eaſe and pleaſure, but thou wilt haue me to be poore & needy. I would be in honor & credit, & thou wilt haue me to liue in reproche and ſhame: and good reaſon it is O Lorde that wee ſhould haue the humilitie to ſubmit our ſelues to whatſoeuer it pleaſeth thee to ſende vs, and not that wee ſhould followe our owne ſwindge: when we be come to ſuch a ſacrifice of renouncing all our affections and all our owne wil: then is our obedience rightly knowen. For what matter is it to ſay amen, when God followeth our deſires, and handleth vs according to the lyking of our owne fleſhe? How is there any vertue in vs? And therefore let vs remember wel this text, where Moſes telleth vs that Gods afflicting of vs, is to try what we be. For we might ſet a faire face vpon thinges, and pretend to loue and honor God: and yet notwithſtanding all ſhould be but counterfetting and leaſing. But when wee bee handled roughly, and God ſheweth himſelfe as our enemie, ſo as wee bee prouoked to rebellion, and would faine ſtriue againſt him if it were Lawefull: and yet notwithſtanding wee continue ſtill as Lambes, ſo as wee bowe downe our neckes vnder his yoke, and forſake all our owne affections to obey him: that (ſay I) is a due tryall of vs. And that is the cauſe why the holy ſcripture lykeneth aduerſitie to a furnace. Lyke
1.Pet.4.12. as golde and ſiluer are tryed by fire: ſo muſt God bee faine to try and examine vs by afflictions.

But here it might bee demaunded, whether God doe not knowe what we be without tryall? Let vs marke that it is not to bee ſurmiſed that God is ignorant of any thing: or that he needeth to try vs after the maner of men: but it is the common ſpeach of the holy ſcripture, to attribute the thinges to God which are peculiar to men. For if it ſhould ſpeake to vs of his maieſtie according to the worthineſſe thereof, we ſhould bee vtterly rauiſhed, and yet knowe neuer the more what were ſayd to vs. God therefore to vtter himſelfe, is faine to deſcend from his owne highneſſe and to transfigure himſelfe, to the end wee may knowe ſo much of him as is for our behoofe. To be ſhort, let vs vnderſtand that God knoweth what is in mēs hearts, though he ſhould let them alone as they bee. For it is ſayd in the pſalme, Shal not hee that made the heart knowe it? Yes: but yet for all that, it behoueth vs to bee brought to the touchſtone. Not that God hath any neede of it on his behalfe: but it is done for our owne ſakes. Now then, whereas it is ſayd in this text, that Gods will was to trye the people of Iſrael: let vs mark ẏ the meaning thereof is, that God intended to ſhewe in deed, and to bewray in trueth what that people was of whom it was his will to haue open record and proofe, to the end they might not vſe any odde ſhiftes to keepe their naughtineſſe from diſcouering. Now then, Gods afflicting of vs is not for that hee hath any neede to ſift vs narrowly: but becauſe wee on our ſide haue neede to be ſo tryed. For wee ſee how men beleeue wonderouſly wel of their own ſtrength. So long as God letteth them alone in reſt, they thinke there is nothing but ſubſtantiall ſtoutneſſe in them. But if God doe but pricke them: by and by the venim commeth out, which was hidden within before. Such as made faire wether before, and were very skilfull in preaching of Gods goodneſſe, and in teaching men how they ought to reſt thereupon, fall to gnaſhing of their teeth when they themſelues are afflicted, and can no more tell what patientneſſe is, or how to glorify God. Therefore is God faine to draw vs forth into the light. For as long as he handleth vs gently, we dwell as it were in couert, and wee lye hidde in darkeneſſe. But as ſoone as aduerſitie commeth, we learne to perceiue what we be. Whereas afore, there ſeemed to be nothing but perfect obedientneſſe in vs: then wee perceiue how our fleſh is ful of ſtubbornneſſe, & we could finde in our heartes to withſtand God. That then is the tryall which Moſes ſpeaketh of.

Therefore to be ſhort, this text muſt be referred to our ſelues, and we muſt take heede to apply it well to our own benefite, and conſider that we be vtterly ignorant, and that the loue of our ſelues doth ſo blinde vs, yea and quite ſtoppe our eyes, that we bee beſotted with fond follie, vntill God haue cleanſed vs of it in deede, and ſhewed vs our own ſhame by open proofe. Again it is a good tryall alſo when God voutſafeth to giue vs power to beare out afflictions patiently. For we haue cauſe to glorify him for his vpholding of vs by his hand: and we muſt alwayes beleeue ỹ wee could not indure any thing, vnleſſe we were ſtrengthened by the holy Ghoſt. Therfore when we haue ouercome any temptation, and paſſed thorowe any aduerſitie meekely: let vs aſſure our ſelues that God ayded vs. And ſo yee ſee it is a good tryall that commeth to vs by afflictions, & that it is the way for vs to gather inſtruction by this text, where it is ſayd that Gods afflicting of his people, was to the end to ſearch what was in their hearts.

And here is expreſſe mention made of the heart. For it is not enough to haue a faire ſhowe to the worldward. Thoſe whom God letteth alone in quiet and pleaſure, may well haue many goodly vertues worthie of commendatiõ: but in the meane while their heart is hidden and wrapped vp within, ſo as it is not knowen what they be vntill God diſcouer them. For proſperitie is as a cloke that hideth much vncleaneſſe. If a man delight in his riches, in his credit, in his quietneſſe, or in his eaſe: men ſee not what hee is but rather doe ſtay vppon the outward appearance, which doth euen dim & dazle their eyes: but in the meane while they looke not vpon that which is within. And like as a faire garment may hide many fowle deformities: ſo doth proſperitie hide a man that he can not be knowen what he is. But if God afflict him, hee layeth him bare by and by, inſomuch that if hee haue any vice in him, then it appeareth both to himſelfe & to others, ſo as we be driuẽ to humble our ſelues, whereas before wee had nothing but vanitie in vs to deceiue our ſelues withall. And whereas wee ſtoode too much in our own conceites: now we ſee there was no cauſe why we ſhould doe ſo. Thus ye ſee what Moſes meant in ſaying ỹ God intended to try what was in his peoples hearts, by afflicting thẽ after ỹ faſhion in the wildernes.

Now hereby we ſee yet better the thing that I haue touched afore: namely that afflictions are more than neceſſarie and profitable for vs. And therefore let vs learne to beare them more patiently than we haue bin wont to doe, ſeeing our Lord hath layd that condition vppon vs, & that they be furtherances of our ſaluation, and there is not any thing woorſe and deadlyer to men, than to be ſo blinded as not to know what is in themſelues. Seeing that man is tranſitorie: wherein can hee glorie but onely in GOD, who is his power and ſtrength? Now then if hee bee ſo proude, as hee not onely deſpiſeth him of whom hee holdeth all thinges, but alſo falleth to puſh with his hornes againſt his maieſtie in deſpite of him: is there any thing more pernicious? No: and yet can not this be amended otherwiſe than by affliction. Ought wee to take ſickneſſe in euill part, ſeeing that God doth thereby make vs to renounce our owne nature, to drawe vs to himſelfe? No: and therefore let vs learne to obey our God: and let vs bethinke vs of this leſſon whenſoeuer we be ſo ſorrowfull in our afflictions: and when wee be tempted to grudge againſt God, let vs thinke thus: yea verily, but yet is this to our benefite. In deede it is hard and troubleſome, but God playeth the phiſition, and purgeth vs of our diſeaſe which elſe would be deadly, and is incurable by any other meanes. That (ſay I) is the thing which we haue to note, that we may fare well by the warning that Moſes giueth vs heere.

Now hee addeth immediately, that God had ſuffered his people to indure hunger and thirſt, and had fed them with Manna which was a foode that they were not acquainted with, nor yet their fathers: and that his ſo dooing was to the ende that they might knowe, that Man liueth not onely by bread, but by euery worde that commeth out of the mouth of God, doth man liue. Here Moſes meant to giue a particular leſſon: which is, that GOD teacheth his people to ſeeke their ſuſtenance in him. And it is a very good leſſon. Truely when we ſay that God giueth vs our dayly or ordinary bread, it ſeemeth at the firſt bluſhe to bee but a childiſhe thing. And ſoothly men teach little children to pray vnto GOD, when they would haue their breakefaſtes. Yea and in very deede there are a ſorte of ouerweening fooles, who neuertheleſſe doe take themſelues to bee very wiſe, and are eſteemed to bee great doctors, which haue held opinion that it is not meete for Chriſtians to pray to GOD for bodily ſuſtenaunce, but that they muſt tende to a higher and more exquiſite perfection. Yea, but in the meane while, is it not a tending to great perfection, when wee can pray GOD to bee our foſterfather, and when wee can knowe his goodneſſe towardes vs? Yes: and for proofe thereof, wherein doth the beleefe or vnbeleefe of men ſhewe it ſelfe moſte? Surely euen in the maintenaunce of this tranſitory lyfe. In deede that is not the chiefe poynt

of our faith. For we muſt looke vp to the euerlaſting inheritance that is promiſed vs. But yet is the thing true which I ſay now: that is to wit, that our beleefe and alſo our vnbeleefe ſhew thẽſelues more in that behalfe, than in any other. For if a man can truſt in God that he will maintaine him in this mortall lyfe: ſurely he will alſo hope for all the reſt. And on the contrary part, when wee wante foode, or haue not helpes at our own wiſhing: by and by we be out of heart and vexed with vnquietneſſe. And ſo our vnbeleefe bewrayes it ſelfe in the ouercareſulneſſe which we haue for this earthly lyfe. Now therefore, let vs marke well that wee haue greatly profited, not onely for one day but alſo for all our life lõg, whẽ we haue once learned throughly to commit our ſelues to Gods prouidence, to be fed by his hand, and to receiue ſuſtenance by his grace. When we be come to that point, then are wee mounted very high, and thereby wee ſhall learne to truſt in him for thẽ heauenly lyfe, and for all thinges belonging thereunto. And ſo is Moſeſes meaning in this text: namely that the people ſhould be throughly perſwaded, that God will nouriſh them, and that they ſhould not truſt either in bread or wine or in any other foode, but conſider that it is Gods peculiar office to maintaine them by his power. Let that ſerue for one poynt.

And Moſes alledgeth the feeding of the people with Manna in the wilderneſſe. The Lorde (ſaith hee) did let thee indure hunger, and ſent thee Manna from heauen as a warrant to aſſure thee that hee will alwayes bee thy father. And although he make the earth to yeeld thee fruite in bringing forth both corne and wine: and although thou haue both fleſhe, & fiſh, & whitemeate to nouriſh thee withall: yet doth not thy God ceaſe to maintaine thee by his power. Therefore thou muſt looke that way, and not haue thy minde tyed to the dead creatures, as though they gaue thee lyfe, or as though thou receiuedſt thy ſtrength of them. Aſſure thy ſelfe it is thy God that nouriſheth & ſuſteineth thee. And truely the Manna cõtinued not alway with the people of Iſraell. But if God worke a thing for a time: wee muſt profit our ſelues by it euer after, although the thing continue not ſtill. If wee ſhould remember the thinges that GOD ſheweth vs, no longer than wee ſee them with our eyes: wee ſhould bee too brutiſh. Therefore when wee haue once ſeene any inſtruction: we muſt beare it in minde all the dayes of our lyfe. In lyke caſe is it concerning the Manna. God fed his people with it by the ſpace of fortie yeeres. Now muſt wee learne thereby to the worldes end, that wee be fed by the ſame power whereby that people was. In deed the meanes are farre other: (for wee nowadayes doe eate of the bread which the earth yeeldeth, and we haue other kindes of foode to ſuſteine vs withall:) but is that any derogation to the heauenly power? Is it not God that breatheth lyfe into vs, ſo as wee bee ſuſteined by him? Yes: and therefore whenſoeuer wee eate bread, let vs learne not to ſtay vpon that, but to cal to minde that GOD nouriſhed his people without bread, without wine, and without any other vittels. And to what end? Hee wrought not that miracle to haue it buryed. Was it but onely to the end that ỹ people of that time ſhould be taught by it that God was their father? No no: but we muſt apply the ſame ſtorie to our inſtruction in theſe dayes too: that is to wit, that although GOD ſend vs bread and wine, yet he ceaſeth not to feede vs ſtill for all that. So then let vs marke well, that the miracles which God hath wrought, neuertheleſſe muſt ſerue for our inſtruction, although wee behold them not preſently at this day. And ſpecially whereas heere is mention made of the Manna: let it be an euerlaſting preſident to vs, to teach vs that God hath a care of his creatures, and that we haue our ſuſtenaunce and preſeruation at his hand: ſo that although hee make the Sunne to ſhine, yet doth the light come from himſelfe: and although hee giue ſtrength to the earth, ſo as wee take ſuſtenaunce and nouriſhment from out of the bowels of it, yet is it hee himſelfe that worketh after that faſhion. And let vs alwayes hold this for a rule, that our lyfe with all the appurtenances thereof dependeth vpon the onely hand of GOD, and that wee muſt haue our whole recourſe vnto him. That is the meaning of Moſes.

Howbeit to the end we may knowe it yet better, wee haue to marke firſt of all, that whereas hee ſayth that man is nouriſhed by euery worde that commeth out of the mouth of God: hee ſpeaketh not but of this preſẽt life. There are which take it to bee ſpoken of the ſpiritual lyfe of our ſoules. In deede it is a good doctrine of it ſelfe, ỹ we liue not only in this life as Oxen and Aſſes, but ỹ we haue alſo a better and excellenter life, inaſmuch as God quickeneth our ſoules by his worde, and knitteth vs to himſelfe ſo as hee vpholdeth vs by the power of his holy ſpirit, which is the fountaine of life. All this is true, and it behoueth vs to acknowledge it ſo to bee, as I ſayd afore. But yet as concerning the vnderſtanding of this text, Moſes goeth no further but to ſhewe vs that we liue by euery word which proceedeth out of the mouth of God, that is to ſay, we liue by the bleſſing which GOD giueth vs. For the doctrine that hee treateth of heere, is not that our ſoules are quickened to ſaluation becauſe wee bee taught by the holy ſcripture: Moſes meant not that thing: but rather hee ſheweth vs that bread hath not any power of it ſelfe, foraſmuch as it is but a dead thing. And can a ſenſeleſſe creature haue power to giue vs mouing? No. Can a dead thing haue power to giue vs life? No ſurely, that can it not. How then can bread and wine which haue no lyfe of themſelues, bee able to giue lyfe vnto men? How can they make vs to liue? It ſeemeth that we gather ſtrength of bread. For whẽ a man is brought low with ouerlong faſting, & pined ẅ hunger: whereas he was as good as half dead before, if he eate meate, by and by he is as it were renewed & ſet vp againe. In deed ỹ bread is ỹ meane to refreſh men, & God ſerueth his owne turn by it: but yet for all that, ſhall wee tye our lyfe to bread and wine? No: but wee muſt conſider that although God haue ſet that order in nature: yet notwithſtanding it ſerueth not to bereaue him of his prayſe, nor to rob him of his right: but rather, his vttering of his power by his creatures, ſerueth to ſhewe that he hath them all in his hand, and can diſpoſe of them after his own good pleaſure. That is the thing which wee haue to remẽber cõcerning theſe wordes, where Moſes ſaith, that man liueth by euery word which proceedeth out of the mouth of God. And in deede wee cannot haue a better expounder of this text, than our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt: for hee applying this text to himſelfe, ſheweth that hee ſhould bee ſuſteined by truſting in God, although hee wanted bread. In deede I can not diſpatch this matter at this preſent: but yet muſt wee beare ſomewhat of it away, to the end that the reſt may be ỹ better ſet forth to morrowe. See then how our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt expounded the wordes of Moſes. He was tẽpted by Satan to turne ſtones into bread. And with what intent? Verily as though he could not haue liued without bread. But hee ſheweth that although he wanted bread, yet hee ſhould not faile to bee ſuſteined by the power of GOD his father. For why? It is not by bread (ſaith hee) that man doth liue: that is to ſay, God is not bound by any neceſſitie to vſe bread, whẽ he will ſuſteine vs. If an earthly father will ſuſteine his children, hee muſt needes haue bread: and if hee haue none, he will weepe and ſay, alas my children, I can not but bee in great griefe of minde, to ſee you in this neceſſitie: if I coulde feede you with mine owne bloud, I would doe it. So then, a father ſhall not alwayes haue wherewith to mainteine his children: but it is not ſo with God, for he is not bound to any neceſſitie. Now then, doth bread faile through the whole world? Is there ſuch drought as the earth can yeelde no ſubſtance? Yet doth not God faile to bee almightie ſtill, and to haue wherewith to maintaine thoſe that are his. Thus yee ſee how Ieſus Chriſt did beate backe the diuels temptation, by telling him that wee muſt not imagine Gods power to be ſhut vp within his creatures, but that we muſt learne to truſt in him, not douting but that he can finde meanes well enough to maintaine vs, yea euen though all things faile vs. If he giue vs bread: let vs eate of it: for wee muſt not tempt him. But if all meane helps faile, let vs betake our ſelues to him that is almightie, and to his onely power, which ſhall alwayes haue his courſe, though there be no meane help at all. Yee ſee then how eMoſeſes meaning is; that euen in reſpect of this tranſitorie lyfe, wee muſt not be ſo beaſtly as to hang our groynes vppon the bread and meate, as though our life lay hidden there. But when we haue wherewith to feede our ſelues, let vs lift our eyes vpward to acknowledge that it is God which hath ſet that order in nature. And againe, if wee haue little: let vs bee contented with it, and pray God to make it effectuall, as though it were Manna frõ heauen, ſo as one morſel may feede vs and make vs as luſtie, as if we had all the abundance of the world. And if we bee driuen to pouertie, let vs proceede yet further, and pray God to ſupply our want, and let vs put this ſentence in practiſe, that man liueth not onely by bread, that is to ſay, he is not ſuſteined alonely by theſe ordinary meanes: but although he were at vtter neceſſitie and wanted all thinges, yet would not God faile to ſuccor him. And therefore let vs reſorte vnto him, and to the ſecrete power whereby we bee ſuſteined, that wee may bee ſo mainteined by the ſame, as we may liue in him, and by him, and al through his onely meere goodneſſe.

Now let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to vouchſafe to pitie vs: & that ſeeing wee be ſo wretched creatures, that although he haue a care to bring vs back againe to him, yet notwithſtanding wee would faine ſtriue againſt him: it may pleaſe him ſo to purge vs from all ſtubborneſſe, as our whole ſeeking may bee to ſubmit our ſelues to his wil: and that hee ſuffer vs not to bee giuen ſtill to our owne wicked affections, and to the luſtes of our fleſh: but rather that hee correct them, yea and that in ſuch ſorte, as we may ſeeke to mount vpward, and to paſſe in ſuch wiſe through this world, as wee may alwayes remember that it is but a wayfaring, to the intent wee may keepe on ſtill to the marke whereunto our Lord calleth vs. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs, but alſo to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Fryday the xvj. of Auguſt. 1555.

The Lix. Sermon which is the ſecond vpon the eight Chapter.

3. 4 He afflicted thee &c.

5 Knowe thou therfore in thyne hart, that the Lord thy God nurtured thee as a man nurtureth hys owne child.

6 Therefore keepe thou the commaundementes of the Lord thy God, by walking in his wayes, and by fearing him.

7 For the Lord thy God bringeth thee into a good land, a land wherein are riuers of water, fountaines and ſpringes which come out of the valleys and hilles.

8 A land

8 A land of wheate, and barely, of Vines, figtrees, and Poungarnets: a lande wherein are Oliuetrees, Oyle, and honnie,

9 A lande wherein thou ſhalt eate bread without ſcarcetie, ſo as thou ſhalt not want any thing in it: a Lande whoſe ſtones are iron, and out of whoſe hils thou ſhalt digge braſſe.

YEſterday wee ſawe firſt of all, how the myracle that GOD wrought in feeding his people with Manna by the ſpace of fortie yeeres togither in the wilderneſſe, ought to ſerue for euer. And therewithall was ſhewed the ende thereof: that is to wit, that the Iewes ought to haue conſidered, that it is not the bread ỹ maintaineth a man, neither Is the power of our lyfe ſhut vp within it: but rather it is God ỹ breatheth liuelineſſe into vs, and which giueth the breade that nature wherby it is able to ſuſtaine vs. And ſo we ſee ỹ the matter here concerneth not the life of our ſoules, but that God ſheweth vs howe this flightfull and tranſitorie life is maintayned by his onely power: ſo that, whether wee haue meate and drinke, or whether we ſuffer hunger, wee muſt alwayes haue recourſe to Gods goodneſſe, aſſuring our ſelues that he is our foſter father, and that our life is in his hand, and that it is his office to preſerue it in good plight. That is the ſumme of the things which wee haue to remember here. And ye haue ſeene alſo howe our Lord Ieſus vſed the ſame text, as was declared in fewe wordes: but yet muſt we lay forth the reſidue of the things a little more at length. Matt. 4.4.

Now then wee haue to marke, that if GOD giue vs abundance, our minds muſt not be wedded to it: for can the bread quicken vs, ſeeing it is a dead thing? Although God vſe it as an inſtrument, it is not to deface his owne commendation, no more than when he giueth vs light by the Sunne. For we knowe that in the creation of the world, light was made before the Sunne was created. And why? To the intent we ſhould not conuey the honour of God vnto creatures. Therefore let vs ſo vſe the light of the Sunne, as wee acknowledge therewithall, that there is but onely one God, to whom the glorie of that benefite ought to bee yeelded. And when wee haue bread to eate, it is not the bread that ſuſtaineth vs, but it is God, who powreth out his goodneſſe continually vpon vs. Although he apply thoſe meanes to our vſe: yet is it he himſelfe that worketh, it is he that is the author of them. And in that reſpect is it that hee ſaith hee will breake the ſtaffe of breade. True it is that hee threatneth to ſhut vp the heauen as if it were iron, and to make the earth to bee of braſſe, ſo that when the earth crieth out to the heauen, the heauen ſhall not heare it. God then when he intendeth to ſend barrenneſſe vppon a land, vſeth ſuch meanes as he thinketh good: by reaſon whereof wee haue not wherewith to ſuſtaine our ſelues: in ſo much that when the grounde hath borne a harueſt good and great ynough, yet wil God wel ynough diminiſh it and make it to moulder away, yea and when the corne is caried to the mill, it ſhall conſume in the grinding: and when it is brought from the mill to the ouen, if it bee meaſured or weied againe, it ſhall not hold full weight and meaſure. Howbeit, we muſt come to this point, that the ſtrength which bread hath, is not of ỹ bread it ſelfe, but of Gods breathing of this woord into it whereof Moſes ſpeaketh here: that is to wit, that when God will haue vs to bee nouriſhed and ſuſteined by the bread, he vttereth his goodneſſe towards vs, by making vs to feele his bleſſing which sheadeth it ſelfe into it after a ſecret faſhion. Albeit that we behold it not with our eyeſight, yet muſt wee be throughly perſwaded of it by faith. Then let vs marke well, that when wee haue whereof to feede, we muſt not be ſo doultiſh as to think that the power is incloſed in the breade or in any other vittles or drinkes: but that therein God vttereth his goodneſſe towardes vs, and sheadeth it into vs, as we ſee the raine come from heauen which moiſteneth ỹ earth and giueth it ſtrength: On the other ſide if wee haue want: let vs vnderſtand that God can ſuſtaine vs by turning bread into Manna, that is to ſay: if all ordinarie meanes fayle vs, God will prouide for vs after another faſhion, as wee ſee hee remedied the neceſſitie of his people, when they were in the wilderneſſe. And for ỹ ſame cauſe did our Lord Ieſus Chriſt anſwere Satan, it is written that man liueth not by bread only, but by euery word that commeth out of the mouth of God. For Sathan tempted him to diſtruſt, vnder colour that in the wilderneſſe God ſent him not the thinges that were expedient to liue withall. He had not any foode there, and yet in the meane while he was pinched, with hunger as a mortall man: for he vouchſafed to become ſubiect to our paſſions or ſufferinges. Now heere vpon, Sathan taketh occaſion to enter vppon him, ſaying: Seeing thou art the ſonne of God, ſhouldeſt thou want any thing? Is it not reaſon that all creatures ſhould ſerue thee? yes: for thou art the heire of the world. Thou haſt no bread: and therefore thou muſt be faine to try the power of God, that theſe ſtones may bee turned into bread, or elſe thou ſeeſt how thy God forſaketh thee, for if he had a care of thee, thou ſhouldeſt perceiue his bleſſing and fauour, ſo as thou ſhouldeſt haue heere wherwith to ſuſteine thee. Now the ſeeing thou wanteſt ſuch helpes, it is a ſigne that God hath no regard of thee. But Ieſus Chriſt aunſwereth hereunto: I ſhalbe ſuſteined well enough though bread faile mee. And why? For the life of man dependeth not vpon theſe meanes. And ſurely God were of very ſmall and weake force, if hee could not helpe a man but by breade: he ſhould be no better than an earthly man. A riche man can doe welinough, if hee haue wherewith: but if he fall into pouerty, he muſt be faine to begge

Ezec. 4. 16. & 5. 16. Deut. 28. 23 Oſe. 2. 21. 22

himſelfe. And ſo ſhould it bee [by your ſaying,] with God. But although there were neuer a whit of bread in the world: yet hath he alwayes his word in his mouth, that is to wit, hee needes no more but to ſay the worde. Like as he created the worlde of nothing, by vttering his will that it pleaſed him to haue it ſo: and all thinges were made and are maintained ſtill at this day in their ſtate, by his onely commaundement: ſo can he maintaine thoſe that are his, as he thinketh good. He needeth no more but to breath foorth his ſecrete power: and all ſhall be as well ſatiſfied, as if they had their fill of meate and drinke. According to this leſſon, if God at any time withdrawe our foode and make vs to feele neceſſitie: let vs learne to waite vpon him, and to reſt vpon his prouidence, praying him to ſupply our want: and wee ſhall finde that this is not written in vaine.

Nowe then wee ſee there is a dubble vſe in this doctrine, and that wee muſt apply it as well to the time of abundance, as to the time of ſcarcitie. When wee haue great ſtore of things, let not that ſtop our eyes to make vs truſt too much to them: aſſuring our ſelues that our eating of the bread can not ſuſtaine vs, except GOD giue it force. For if he once breake the ſtaffe of it: there will bee no more leaning vnto it, it will rather bee but a griefe to vs. For wee muſt alwayes marke this ſimilitude, that as a weake man ſtayeth himſelfe vpon a ſtaffe: ſo GOD ſtrengtheneth our powers agayne by bread and drinke. But if the ſtaffe bee broken: to what purpoſe will it ſerue, but to breake his necke that ſhall truſt vnto it? Then let vs learne to truſt vnto GOD and to leane vnto him in our abundaunce, and to giue him thankes for vouchſafyng to make his creatures to ſerue our turne after that faſhion: and let vs beware that wee conuey not ouer his power and prayſe to any other thing. For that were to make an idoll of the bread. God hath ordayned it to doe vs ſeruice, and hee hath put it in ſubiection to vs: and ſhall wee notwithſtanding goe and worſhippe it? If the bread [of it ſelfe] doe ſuſtayne vs, hath it not the office of God, ſo as GOD muſt ſit ſtill like an idle and dead thing? Let vs beware that wee make not idols of the benefites which God beſtoweth vpon vs: for that were an intollerable vnthankfulneſſe. Thus much concerning abundance. And therefore let not riche men thinke they can forbeare Gods helpe bicauſe they haue their garners well ſtuffed and ſtored: for if God doe but blowe vpon them, all vaniſheth away. When they haue the morſels in their mouthes: they ſhall ſticke faſte in their throtes: and when they haue their bellyes crammed neuer ſo full, yet ſhall they receiue no nouriſhment by it, except God giue it them by his ſecret working. By this meanes ſhal all of vs liue in humilitie, and ſuch as are wel ſtored ſhall not ceaſſe to make this prayer without hypocriſie: Giue vs this day our dayly bread. For otherwiſe, were it not a mocking of God, if a man ſhould thinke himſelfe to be well ynough prouided, bicauſe hee hath great ſtore of corne and wine, or bicauſe he hath money in his purſe and rentes comming in, or bicauſe he perceyueth himſelfe to be throughly furniſhed and ſtored of all things? Howe ſhall he craue his dayly bread at Gods hand, vnleſſe he knowe that the thinges which he hath are nothing, and that GOD muſt bee faine to worke, yea and to continue his ſecrete operation alwayes? If that were not: a man might defye GOD and holde ſcorne of him, as in verie deede he might well ynough forbeare him. But if wee bee fully reſolued of this leſſon in our heartes, that nothing ſuſtayneth vs but onely GOD: it will put vs in minde to praye him, to continue his ſuſtainyng of vs to morrowe as well as he hath fedde vs to day, notwithſtanding that we haue a whole yeeres prouiſion before hand. For wee muſt alwayes conſider, that all that euer we haue without him, is nothing.

Againe, in time of pouertie, it is a great comfort vnto vs that wee may reſorte to our God, and beſeeche him to haue pitie vppon vs, and [bee ſure] that although there were no breade in the worlde, yet he will not fayle to ſuſtaine vs by his power. Seeing then that wee haue this promiſe, it ought to bee an incouragement vnto vs to pray boldly, and to reioyce, and not to torment our ſelues out of meaſure, as they that thinke there is no God at all in heauen, when they ſee not the helpes wherewith they bee acquainted. And why is that? Bicauſe wee tye all Gods power to our eyeſight and outward ſenſes. Therefore let vs beware of ſuch fondneſſe, and let vs put this leſſon in vre. And truely God ſheweth vs the experience thereof euen ſtill at this day. If wee had our eyes open: wee ſhould perceiue that this is not written in vaine. For yee ſee that euen they which are beſt fed receiue no benefite by their meate, whereas in the meane while the children ỹ are neither wel fed nor well clad, are neuertheleſſe both fat & luſtie, & thriue well to ſee to. What eate they? For want of good ſuſtenaunce, they eate thinges that may hurt them: & yet notwithſtanding God maketh them to grow and increaſe, by turning the things into good iuice, which might ingender euill nouriſhment. Wee bee ſure that wee ſee this. So then, let vs marke well that our Lord hath left ſtill in the world ſome remnant of the thing that Moſes witneſſeth heere. And let vs marke moreouer, that the worde which is ſpoken of here, betokeneth ỹ power or operation, like as when the Apoſtle ſayeth in the firſt to the Hebrewes, that Hebr. 1. 3. Chriſt hath the fulneſſe of the whole Godhead in him, & that he beareth vp the whole world w̃ his word: according wherunto alſo it is ſaid in the Pſalme, ỹ the Heauens were created by ỹ word, Pſal. 33. 6. and ỹ the ſame word ſhewed it ſelfe there: ſo as God ſhewed by his ſtabliſhing of ỹ order of nature, ỹ it is he in whō al things haue their being. Ye ſee then how he worketh towards vs, & that he needeth not to trauel with great labour and paines taking: it is inough if he do but ſay ỹ word, ỹ is to ſay if he do but vtter his good pleaſure, for ỹ performance will follow by & by therewithall.

But

But by the way we haue here a reſemblance to gather: That if our bodies be nouriſhed and ſuſtained by Gods woord, that is to wit, by the ſecrete power which he breatheth into bread, wine, and all other vittels: much rather are our ſoules nouriſhed by his doctrine that is dayly preached vnto vs. In deede, that is not the meaning of this text, as is ſhewed afore: but yet for all that, when God hath once raught vs what this temporal lyfe is, and ſhewed vs that it dependeth wholly vppon his power and grace: he will haue the ſame to conucy vs yet higher. For when we know that God ſheweth himſelfe a father to vs in giuing vs meate and drink: we muſt alſo paſſe on to the heauenly heritage. [Wee muſt conſider] that his adopting of vs to be his children, is not to feede vs in this worlde like brute beaſtes: but to drawe vs to the euerlaſting lyfe. And therefore when wee perceyue the operation and power of this ſecret word of God in the nouriſhing of our bodyes: wee muſt mount vp hygher, and conſider that our ſoules are not fed neither with bread nor with wine, but ỹ they haue a priciouſer foode, namely that God giueth them life by nouriſhing them to the ſaluation that is prepared for vs. Therefore when we haue ſought our foode at Gods hand, and giuen him thankes for our meate and drink, ſtaying our ſelues altogether vpō the truſt of his goodneſſe, in hope that hee will alwayes be our foſterfather, yea euen in the time of extreame dearth: let vs aſſure our ſelues that he will neuer faile vs any more, ſpecially in reſpecte of our ſoules, for as much as that is the thing aboue all other, whereby hee intendeth to certifie vs that he taketh vs for his children. Thus yee ſee how we ought to put this text in vre.

Hebr.12.9.

And heerewithall let vs marke that it was meete that the people of Iſraell ſhould acknowledge the benefite that is ſpoken of in the pſalm where it is ſayd that man was fed with Angels foode. For the prophet, to magnifie Gods grace the more in that hee had fed his people with Manna, ſaieth that when they were a hungred, God ſent thē bread from heauen, ſo as mortal & earthly men did eate ỹ bread of Angels. Not that the Angels are fed with Manna: (for they be ſpirits, which haue no neede of meate & drink:) but ỹ the Prophet ment to ſhew that it was an excellent thing, and ỹ whereas ỹ earth yeeldeth foode vnto vs, the heauens were opened vnto them, & mortall men did after a ſorte communicate with the inhabiters of heauen. This ſo great benefite and prerogatiue ought to be acknowledged of ỹ Iewes: but yet the inſtruction that commeth of the thinges that God ſhewed at that time, ought to indure for euer. And therfore although we neuer ſaw the Manna: yet muſt we giue ſuch credit to the things which God did at that time, as to apply the ſame to our owne inſtruction at this day. And that was the cauſe alſo why God willed a Cup to be filled with Manna, and to bee kept in the Tabernacle with the Arke of his Couenant: that although the people [which were to com] ſaw not the wonders that had bin wrought in the wildernes: yet notwithſtāding they might haue a memoriall thereof, to put them alwayes in mind of it, that they might profit them ſelues by it. Then let vs vnderſtand, that although God ſend vs not Manna from heauen nowadays: yet he wil not haue vs to doubt, but that he hath ſuch a care to ſuſteine vs, as we ſhall perceiue he doth not tell vs for nought in this text, that the woord which proceedeth out of his mouth, is the thing whereby wee liue, and whence wee take all our ſuſtenance.

Exod.16.33

Nowe Moſes addeth immediately, That their garmentes were not worne, nor the peoples feete ſwolne in the wilderneſſe by the ſpace of fortie yeeres. And thereuppon he concludeth thus, Knowe thou with thine heart, for ſo is it woord for woord: but the meaning thereof is, Aſſure thy ſelfe in thine heart, that as a man nurtureth his owne child, ſo hath God nurtured thee. Now then like as God did feede that people with heauēly foode, ſo did he cloth them myraculouſly: for otherwiſe their apparell would ſoone haue bin worne out. But God prouided for it, ỹ of al thoſe fortie yeeres togither they were ſhod & clad with the ſame rayment & ſhooes, which they brought with them out of Egypt. And it is a preſident which muſt aſſure vs, ỹ although we be clothed with ỹ wooll of Sheep, & haue linnen to weare: yet notwithſtanding it is God ỹ giueth vs continually wherwith to feed & cloth vs: & ſo long as he liſteth to make ỹ helpes auailable which he giueth vs, he will ſo bleſſe them as one Coate ſhall laſt vs out three coates, yea and a whole dooſen ſhall not do ſo much as one alone when God liſteth to curſe them. Likewiſe when he breatheth his bleſſing & fauor into bread, one ounce of it ſhall do more than a whole pounde otherwiſe: and when hee liſteth to breake the ſtaffe of bread, a pound ſhall not do ſo much ſeruice as halfe an ounce. This is the meaning of Moſes in this text. And therefore let vs marke, that if God liſt to proſper vs, we muſt haue ſuch contentatiō as we be not too eagre and carefull for it as wee commonly be, bearing our ſelues on hande that the earth ſhoulde faile vs, if wee made not the better prouiſion to haue all things aforehand. And what a thing is that? It is true that we ought to thinke vpon our needes. But how? Firſt by calling vpon God, ſaying: Alas Lord, wee bee much poorer and wretchedder creatures than any beaſts in the world: for dogges, aſſes and all other beaſtes are coted with their owne skinnes, and they be ynough for them: but if a man be naked, hee ſtarueth out of hand. So Lord, we be the pooreſt and miſerableſt of all other creatures. All beaſtes can find their foode in the fields: but as for vs, if we be not nouriſhed, we decay by and by. God then doth well vouchſafe that we ſhould haue a care to prouide for our neceſſities. Howbeit, that is to the end we ſhold reſort to him referring our ſelues to his fatherly goodneſſe. Againe, we muſt trauell according to the skill ỹ he giueth vs, we muſt not ſpare our ſelues, we muſt folowe ỹ meanes that he appointeth vs, we muſt not be laſie and ſlothfull: for he wil not haue vs to be ydle, nor to be as blocks. But yet muſt this carefulneſſe be bridled, ỹ it vex vs not too much, & we muſt alwayes plucke vp

a good heart to call vpon God, and commit our ſelues vnto him, aſſuring our ſelues that he will neuer faile vs. That is the care which God willeth vs to haue. Neuertheleſſe wee muſt alſo put the thing in practiſe that is ſpoken here: that is to wit, that God will giue vs ſufficient to ſerue our turne, ſo as if we want cote or ſhooes, he will either prouide vs of them, or elſe make one paire of ſoles to doe vs more ſeruice than a dooſen, when it pleaſeth him. And we may ſee this with our eyes. For they that are warmeſt clad, fayle not for all that to bee as it were halfe dead thorowe colde: and on the other ſide, whereas it ſeemeth that poore folke ſhould ſtarue and bee froſen with yce a hundred times [ere the yeere goe about:] God warmeth them, yea and they bee ſo preſerued, as though he kept them in a ſtooue, or as though ſome Phiſitiō were alwaies at hand with them, miniſtring good remedies to them to ſaue them from the colde. After that maner doeth God worke. And that is the cauſe why that in the time of the Law, God commanded that all newe things ſhould be bleſſed, to the ende that men ſhould thinke vpon him, & conſider thus with themſelues: Go to, I haue a newe garment, and I muſt looke that I thanke him for it which gaue it mee. For ſeeing it pleaſeth my God to clothe mee thus, and to giue me this apparell to vſe it as mine owne: it becommeth me to acknowledge that it is of his goodneſſe and mercie that I am ſo prouided for. Yee ſee then, that the intent why he cauſed all things to bee dedicated vnto him which men ſhould occupie: was that they ſhould acknowledge the giuer of them, and that if he bleſſed not the helps which he had giuen them, all was nothing and noughtwoorth. And as for now adayes, although wee haue not the like Ceremonie: yet muſt we hold ſtill the truth thereof.

Leui. 23.10. 14.19.23. & Num. 15.20

Nowe for a concluſion Moſes addeth, Knowe thou in thy Heart, that as a father nurtureth his owne childe, ſo hath thy God nurtured thee. In deede the hebrew woord that Moſes vſeth in this place, ſignifieth ſometimes to Chaſtiſe: and therefore it might be taken as if he ſayd thus: Know thou that the intent of thy God in all the afflictions which thou haſt indured, hath beene to correct thy faultes: that like as a man intending to reforme his child when he hath doone a miſſe, taketh the rod by and by in his hande: ſo likewiſe thy God hath chaſtiſed thee, not ſuffering thee to become an vnruly and froward child, but holding thee alwaies vnder awe. And this doctrine were very good: but the ſame woord doth by a ſimilitude betoken likewiſe all inſtruction and good gouernment. No doubt but the intent of Moſes in this place, was to make a generall concluſion of the matters that hee had treated of. For hee had ſpoken of Afflictions, and hee had ſpoken likewiſe of Gods benefites, and of his leading of the people, al the time ỹ they were in the wilderneſſe. Now therefore, to all thoſe matters he applieth this finall ſentence, ſaying: know thou that thy God hath nurtured thee after a gentle and louing faſhion, ſo as thou needeſt not to wander farre, or to make long vagaries to know whether thy God hath beene with thee or no: he hath applyed himſelfe to thee as familiarly as may bee. Is not the inſtruction that hee hath giuen thee, ſo familiar as no man can ſhew himſelfe more familiar? That therefore is the meaning of Moſes.

And whereas he ſaieth, Know thou in thy heart: It is to the end that men ſhould bee the diligenter in applying ỹ things to their inſtructiō, which God teacheth them. For it is pitie to ſee howe dull wee bee of our ſelues. Although God vtter himſelfe familiarly vnto vs: yet doe not we ſee him a whit. And what is the cauſe thereof? A man that is dulſighted and hath ſore eyes, diſcerneth not things well though they be layd afore him. Nowe, wee bee not onely dimſighted, but alſo ſtarke blinde in Gods workes. True it is that he muſt bee faine to inlighten vs: but yet muſt wee alſo doe our indeuour, and apply our mindes to iudge well of his workes, when it pleaſeth him to ſhewe them to vs. And ſo it is not a needeleſſe ſpeech of Moſes, to ſay know thou in thy heart. As if he ſhould ſay, euerie man muſt enter into himſelfe, and indeuour earneſtly to know the grace and goodneſſe of God. We muſt not ſlumber in that caſe, but euery of vs muſt do his diligence to the vttermoſt. To bee ſhort, theſe ſayinges, Let men inforce themſelues, and let men ſtreine themſelues, are well woorth the noting. For when God teacheth vs, by and by euery of vs muſt enter into his owne heart.

And now againe, whereas hee ſayth that God taught [or trained] his people, as a man doth his Children: It is to cut off al occaſion of ſtarting holes, that men might not pretend any ignoraunce. For in as much as thinges are declared here according to our rudeneſſe: wee cannot excuſe our ſelues by ſaying that our wit is too dul, and that we be vnable to mount ſo high: for this doctrine is giuen vs familiarly ynough. To the end therefore that no man might take occaſion of excuſe: Moſes ſayth at a woord, what? hath not thy God taught thee after a commō faſhion and as men doe? When a father intendeth to teach his child, will he do more than thy God hath doone to thee? Nowe ſith it is ſo: theſe thinges were not ſpoken for that time onely: but our Lorde woorketh after the ſame maner yet ſtill at this day, ſo as wee may perceiue the thinges that Moſes telleth them heere. In deede Gods woorkes are likened to a bottomleſſe pit, and it is not lawfull for vs to bee ſo inquiſitiue of his doings, as to ſeeke to know all the reaſons of them: for we be not able to conceiue them: and therefore (as we haue ſeene in Iob,) we muſt be contented to ſee the outleetes of his woorkes. And this ſimilitude importeth much, where it is ſaide that wee ſee but the outleets, that is to ſay the outermoſt partes of Gods woorkes. As for to attaine to the middes of them, or to ſearch al that which lyeth hidden within: that is vtterly vnpoſſible. And let vs beware of ruſhing ſo farre, for God would ſurely puniſh our raſhneſſe. But yet muſt wee looke vppon the outleets and liſtes or bondes of Gods woorkes, and take ſuch taſte of them as wee may learne ſo much of them as may bee for our welfare and ſaluation. If wee doe ſo: wee ſhall perceiue that God applyeth himſelfe to our rudeneſſe, and that hee dealeth with vs after the maner of men, that teach litle children, inſtructing vs in ſuch wiſe as wee cannot ſay to him, yea, but I am not as an Angell of heauen to comprehend Gods doings. For (as I ſaid) God vouchſafeth to ſtoope to vs: & to the intent wee ſhould vnderſtand his workes, he becommeth familiar with vs. Of whom is it long then ỹ we profit not by the inſtructions that he giueth vs? For wee cannot ſay but ỹ he manifeſteth himſelfe to vs ſo many ways, ỹ there is no more excuſe for vs if we knowe him not. Verily euen by the order of nature, wee may knowe him generally, as by the ſeaſons of the yeere, by the growing of fruites vpon the earth, and by the ſhining of the Sunne, the Moone, and ỹ ſtarres. Euen by theſe thinges may we ſee that our Lord hath applied himſelfe wholly vnto vs, and to the feebleneſſe of our vnderſtanding, and that he hath (as it were) transfigured himſelfe, by taking vppon him the perſon of a man, to the end that we might know him. Again, when he ſcourgeth vs, doe wee not ſee that hee handleth vs as a father handleth his owne children? If he ſee a man wax ouerluſtie and malapert: after hee hath borne a while with him, he taketh the rod in his hand. For on the one ſide he warneth vs by his word. And afterward if he ſmite vs with his hand, doth hee not vſe the greater kindneſſe towardes vs, to the intent wee ſhoulde receiue his corrections to our benefite? Againe, when he ſendeth vs of his benefites, it is all one as if a father being deſirous to winne his childe by gentleneſſe, ſhoulde ſay vnto him, My Sonne, what wilt thou doe? Who ſhall maintaine thee when thou art gone away from mee? Here thou haſt alwayes whereon to liue: thou ſeeſt howe I take paines for thee: get thee to a ſtraunger, and ſee if hee will deale better with thee. Nowe then like as a father will ſpeake after that manner to his childe: ſo doeth our Lorde ſhewe him ſelfe vnto vs, and hee matcheth his worde with his deeds: that is to ſay, whereas he ſendeth vs proſperitie and quietneſſe, he telleth vs alſo that it is to allure vs to him, that his gentlenes might winne vs to him, and make vs to returne familiarly vnto him, and to depart from our ſinnes. Sith it is ſo: let vs learne that there will be no excuſe for vs, if we take not inſtruction by al the order which God keepeth to teach vs withall in this worlde. For why? Hee behaueth himſelfe like a mortal man towards vs, and worketh not after the manner of his owne incomprehenſible maieſtie, becauſe it woulde confounde vs. Wee be too weake to mount ſo high: and therefore hee ſtoopeth vnto vs. Seeing then that hee dealeth ſo friendly on his behalfe: Let not vs be ſo ſlouthfull, as not to enter into our owne harts, and to conſider thinges accordingly, and to inforce our ſelues to beare Gods benefites well in minde, ſo as we take inſtruction by them as wee ought to do. Thus ye ſee what we haue to mark vpon that place.

Nowe Moſes ſheweth to what end he exhorted the people to deeme well of Gods workes: namely to the end they might keepe al his commaundementes, to walke in his wayes, and to feare him. Keepe the commaundements of the Lorde thy God (ſaith he) that thou maiſt walke in his wayes and feare him. Firſt wee haue to marke here, that Moſes ſendeth the people to the Lawe, as to the perfect and chief doctrine of our whole life. And it is a point well worthie to bee marked. For thereuppon we haue to gather, that when God hath taught vs neuer ſo many wayes, yet ſhall they neuer boote vs, vnleſſe wee haue recourſe vnto his worde. Beholde, the Infidels can well ynough ſearch the ſecrets of nature, they can well not onely alledge reaſons, but alſo ſay, this is done after this faſhion. Yea and they haue deemed God to bee good, righteous, and wiſe, & wee ſee that the heathen Philoſophers knewe Gods workes ſo farre, as they coulde talke of his maieſtie. But what? It was all confuſedly: and in the end they vaniſhed away in their owne imaginations, ſo as they neuer attained to the point whereto they ſhould haue come. Then let vs vnderſtande that all is to no purpoſe, vntill wee haue Gods doctrine for all perfection. True it is that the things which we behold in the worlde, and all the inſtructions which God giueth vs thereby, are good and profitable helpes: but yet for all that, the marke that we muſt ſhoote at is the doctrine [of his worde,] ſo as wee ſet all our wittes vppon that, to the ende wee wander not out of the way. For if a man ſhoote, and haue no marke to ſhoote at: what doth hee elſe but loſe all his ſhotte? Euen ſo is it with vs: we may well ſhoote, that is to ſay, we may take paine to know Gods works: but what ſhall we gaine by it, if we haue not the ſaide marke to ſhoote at? It ſhalbe but loſt labour. And this marke is not to be choſen at our owne diſcretion: but God muſt ſet vs vp our whyte: and that white is the Lawe, the Prophets, and the Goſpel. And ſo ye ſee that that is the cauſe why Moſes hauing ſpoken of ỹ wonders which the people had ſeene, & hauing told them that the ſame ought to ſerue to their inſtruction, and hauing exhorted the faithfull to profite wel in that ſchoole: ſendeth them backe againe to the word. Keepe the commaundementes of the Lord thy God, ſaith hee: and afterward he addeth that thou maiſt walke in his wayes.

Here wee haue to note, that whenſoeuer wee ſwarue from Gods word, wee ſhal but wander, as hath beene ſhewed heretofore: and we may well goe vp and downe, but wee ſhal be neuer the further forwarde. Let men breake their ſhankes as much as they liſt, & yet ſhal they either go back, or elſe find themſelues all in one place ſtill, vnleſſe they know ỹ way which they ought to keepe. For let vs mark wel ỹ our own ways are croked, and ỹ there is nothing but ſtraying and wandering in vaine. And therfore God will haue vs to walk in his ways, which are ſtrait and leuell. In ſaying ſo, Moſes ſetteth down a cõpariſon of things cõtrarie. As if he ſhould ſay, Wretched folk, ye thinke to further your ſelues when ye walk in your own ways, by deuiſing euery man a ſundry way at his owne pleaſure. But what? Yee doe but martyr your your ſelues in vaine: for God will haue men to walke in his wayes, that is to ſay, in the wayes that he ſheweth them, and he will haue them to be followed. Therefore let vs learne to ſubmitte our ſelues to Gods worde, knowing well that our life ſhall neuer be well ordered, except wee obey him. Yea and whereas hee ſaith the wayes of the Lord in the plurall number: wee muſt apply it to that which hath beene ſaide heretofore: that is to wit, that God hath giuen vs ſo full a doctrine, as wee cannot alledge that it is not ynough, or that more may bee added to it. Let vs marke that our Lorde will not fayle vs in any thing. Therfore let vs not be wiſe in our own conceit, but let vs aske counſel of him. And if wee doubt that wee goe aſtray, or if we bee afraide of wandering vp and downe: let vs keepe his way, and wee can not goe amiſſe. For why? God hath not made one way onely: but he hath ſhewed vs all his wayes, that is to ſay, all that euer is requiſite to make a man walke aright, ſo as wee can neuer goe amiſſe, if wee followe the direction that he ſetteth afore vs. Nowe hee addeth hereunto, To the ende that we ſhould feare the Lord. Herein hee ſheweth to what ende God gaue vs his Lawe. Why will he haue men to keepe it? To doe him homage aboue all thinges. For wee knowe that he receiueth neither harme nor benefite by vs. What can wee doe to him? Our ſeruing of him is not to aduauntage him any whit: for hee hath no neede of any thing. Againe what riches haue we to increaſe him withall? Why then hath hee giuen vs his lawe, but to the ende that wee ſhould dedicate our whole life vnto him, and by keeping his commaundementes ſhewe our ſelues willing to bee ſubiect vnto him, and that hee hath all ſouereine dominion ouer vs? That is the thing which is meant by the feare that Moſes ſpeaketh of heere. And let vs note that he meaneth not a ſlauiſh fearefulneſſe, that is to ſay, that men ſhould ſubmitte themſelues to him as inforced: but that wee ſhould ſtand in reuerend awe of him, not onely as of our maſter but alſo as of our father. The feare which GOD requireth, is matched with heartie loue: ſo as wee bee gladde and faine to ſerue him. And why? Becauſe it is good reaſon that we ſhould be his, and that he ſhoulde haue the gouerning of vs, & that we ſhould frame our liues according to his wil. And ſo yee ſee what is the chiefe point in the keeping of the Lawe.

Iob. 35.7 & Pſal. 16.2. & 50.10. & Act. 17.25. & Rom. 8.15 & 2. Tim. 1.7

Furthermore let vs mark, that it is not ynough for men to liue vprightly, ſo as they abſteine from all euill and vice, and deale in ſuch ſort as nothing but vertue can bee founde in them: For a man may well bee chaſt, and abſtaine from all wrong, anoyance, deceit, blaſphemie, and lewd talke: and yet ſhall all this be nothing worth, except he referre all to the ſaid end of offering vp of himſelfe in ſacrifice vnto God. Vertues therefore are not of eſtimation in themſelues, ſo as it may bee ſaide, O this is an excellent fellowe in vertue, he hath done this and that, he hath abſteyned from all euill: but wee muſt goe on further to the vertue of all vertues, the fountaine and welſpring of all holineſſe, rightcouſneſſe, and vpright dealing: namely that wee tende to our God, ſeeking to honour and glorifie him, and to bee wholly his and vnder his gouernement. When wee bee at that point: then is our life well ordered. But wee may make the faireſt ſhewe in the worlde, and yet if wee haue not reſpect to our God, to ſubmit our ſelues to him that his name may bee exalted and magnified, & that he may haue his due right at our hands: all is but leaſing, be it neuer ſo highly eſteemed. Yee ſee then in effect that the thing which wee haue to remember, is ẏ when God hath ſhewed vs his workes, then doth he call vs to his worde, telling vs that that is the thing whereunto wee muſt holde our ſelues without wandering here and there: and thirdly that if wee will haue our life well ordered, wee muſt alwayes haue our eye vpon the thing that he commandeth. And howe is that? Euen to honour him in ſuch ſort, as wee come to him with a free and cleare hart, to ſerue him, & to dedicate our ſelues to him: & alſo liue among our neighbors without working any deceit or wrong to any man, & without ouerſhooting of our ſelues into any outrage. But yet the chief point is ẏ God haue his due, ẏ is to wit, that he gouerne vs, and be glorified by al our life, becauſe it is good reaſon that he ſhould haue vs at his deuotion, and that we ſhoulde bee ſubiect to him, forſomuch as we bee beholden to him for all good things. And we muſt not only do ſo becauſe he is our maker and hath ſoueraine dominion ouer vs: but we muſt alſo loue him becauſe he is our father. And againe, ſeeing he beſtoweth ſo many benefits vpon vs: we ought at leaſtwiſe to yeelde him his due reuerence.

And that is the cauſe why Moſes addeth in the end, God will bring thee into the Land which hee hath promiſed thee, a rich and wealthie Lande, a Land that is full of all good thinges, wherein there is plenie of wheate, barly, wyne, honny, and Oyle, and of all other thinges. And this is ſaide to prouoke the people the more, to the feare that was ſpoken of before. For truely if wee feele nothing but rigour at Gods hande: wee may wel yeeld to him, but it will bee but perforce, it will not bee with a free will, there will bee nothing but hypocriſie in all our life. Indeede wee will not faile to pretend a faire countenãce of ſeruing our God: but our doing of it will bee by conſtreint, like as they which haue done euill may well go on ſtill, howbeit that is but for feare of ſtripes, and in the meane while they haue no liſt nor good will to it. But when wee haue once marked well the good turnes that God doeth vs: then are we the more moued and prouoked to honour him, knowing that wee ought to yeelde him a willing and freehearted reuerence, ſo as our whole ſeeking bee to make an offering of our ſelues vnto him, and to ſacrifice euen our liues to him. To that ende then doeth Moſes alledge the good turnes which God was about to doe vnto his people. And hee not onely ſpeaketh of the former benefites which they ought to haue borne well in minde: but he ſaieth alſo, when thy God ſhall haue brought thee into the Lande: then put forth thy ſelfe to ſerue him with the better courage, accordingly as he goeth through with his benefites towardes thee.

Now let vs kneele down in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to touch vs in ſuch wiſe, as we may be drawen to true repentance: and ỹ forasmuch as we be wretched creatures ỹ haue neede to bee ſuſtained by him euery minute of an houre, we may reſort to his bountifulneſſe, aſſuring our ſelues that although wee had all the abundance of the world, yet could we not bee ſuſtained and nouriſhed by it, except his hand were ſtretched out ouer vs to bleſſe vs: and therefore that wee may depend wholly vpon his bleſſing, & vpon his grace, and drawe out of that fountaine of his which can neuer drie vp: and that when we are once filled therewith, we may learne to thanke him for his gracious goodneſſe, ſo as his feeding of vs here beneath, may not tie vs to this tranſitorie life like brute beaſtes, but rather make vs to know that we muſt alwayes trauel towards the heauenly life, whereunto it may pleaſe him to guide vs, & to bring vs euer neerer and neerer vnto it, vntill he haue brought vs fully thither, for the ſake & by the meanes of his welbeloued ſonne our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs, but alſo to all people and Nations, &c.

On Wedneſday the xxj. of Auguſt. 1555.

The threeſcore Sermon, which is the third vpon the eight Chapter.

10 Thou ſhalt eate and be filled, and bleſſe the Lorde thy God for the good land which he ſhall haue giuen thee.

11 Take heede that thou forget not the Lord thy God, in not keeping his commaundements, Lawes, and Ordinances, which I commaund thee this day:

12 To the ende that when thou ſhalt haue eaten and beene ſatisfied, and haue builded faire houſes and dwelt in them:

13 And that thine Oxen and ſheepe are multiplyed, and thy ſiluer and golde are increaſed, and all that thou haſt is multiplied:

14 Thy heart do not then ſwel, and thou forget the Lord thy God which hath brought thee out of the land of Egypt from the houſe of bondage.

IF God commaund vs to be patient in aduerſitie, wee thinke it a hard thing: and yet is it good reaſon that we ſhould paſſe that way, ſeeing wee haue a paterne and image thereof in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, vnto whome wee muſt bee like faſhioned, if wee will bee Gods children, not onely in ſuffering quietly the afflictions which hee ſendeth vs in this preſent lyfe, but alſo in being readie and obedient to him euen to the death. Yee ſee then that it is a moſt rightful condition: and yet we on our ſide doe finde it comberſome. And why? Bicauſe we be too nyce, and our ſelfe loue doeth ſo carie vs away, that wee can not abyde to ſuffer any thing. Nowe if we bewraye great vnthankefulneſſe and faulte in this: much more doe wee bewraye the ſame when we cannot ſo conceiue of Gods benefites, as to bee thankefull to him for them. Herein (ſay I) wee ſhewe our ſelues to bee too too lewd. For if GOD deale gently with vs and ſhewe himſelfe fatherlike towards vs: muſt it not needs be ỹ we are worſe than brute beaſts, if we vouchſafe not to lift vp our eyes towards heauē, to yeld him ſome acknowledgmēt of his goodnes. Now although this be a deteſtable vice: yet is it cōmō & too cōmon amōg men. And if euery mā looke into himſelf: in maner al ſhal find thēſelues guiltie of it. If there were no further than ỹ outward Ceremonie of thankſgiuing: yet is it apparant that men make none account of it. Doe all men beare in minde to call vppon Gods name when they ſit downe to the table? Or when they haue taken their repaſt, doe they remember to acknowledge that they bee beholden to him for their life, and for all things elſe that are requiſite for their ſuſtenance? Nay rather, they chop downe to the table like Swyne, and ſtart vp like dogges, ſo as there is no tydings nor remembrance of Gods name among them, but to their ſeeming it is a ſpice of moonkiſh hypocriſie or popeholineſſe to thanke God. Loe howe farre the worlde is out of ſquare. Howbeit when we haue praiſed God both at the beginning and at the ending of our repaſt, yet is not that ynough to diſcharge vs. Therefore if we faile in that: we bee double vnhappie. For what will wee doe in the greater things, if wee cannot performe the leſſer? For this manner of calling vpon God is as good as nothing, I meane in compariſon of the knowledge that lyeth hidden vnder it, and which hath a liuely roote, which ſhall bee treated of more largely anon. For if men cannot finde in their hearts to diſcharge their duetie in the leſſer thinges, as in the lifting vp of their handes, and in yeelding ſome praiſe vnto God by ſome outward ſignes: I pray you howe will

will they doe that which is commaunded them here, that is to wit, how will they bleſſe God in all their whole life, which is the harder thing to doe? Therefore let vs marke, that this vnthankfulneſſe of forgetting God, and of yeelding no ſigne of acknowledgement of his benefites, is an ordinarie vice. But although it be ſo: yet ſayle they not to be blameworthie for it: neither let vs thinke to iuſtifie or excuſe our ſelues by wicked cuſtome as a number do, which would faine make a bucklar of it againſt God, bearing themſelues on hand, that foraſmuch as [the ouerſlipping of thankeſgiuing vnto God] is ſo common a thing among men, therefore it is lawfull for them to doe ſo alſo: But that will bee no excuſe for vs, as I ſaide afore. For although there be not a commoner thing than this leaudnes of forgetting God which is daily ſeene amõg men: doth it followe that therefore their fault ſhould not be imputed vnto them? No no: but the more ỹ one of them haue hardened another, and al of thẽ are become brutiſh, & haue cõſpired againſt God: ſo much the more horrible muſt their vengeance be.

And therefore let vs marke firſt of al, that the warning which Moſes giueth vs here, (that is to wit, that when we be full fed we ſhould then thinke vpon God, that is to ſay, yeeld him his due praiſe,) is no more than needeth. For if wee did it of our owne accord: ſo as euery man gaue his minde to it: we ſhould not neede to be put in minde of it by others. But foraſmuch as we bee negligent: the holy Ghoſt is faine to pricke vs forward, and to quicken vs vp as he doeth in this text. And ſith wee ſee that the thing which God requireth of vs is ſo reaſonable, and ſuch as wee ought to haue learned aforehãd by nature: let vs be dubble aſhamed to continue ſtill vnluſtie, and at leaſtwiſe not to be touched with ſuch warning. It ought to ſhame vs aforehand, that God ſhould bee faine to tell vs of the thing which euen litle children ought to knowe. For ſeeing hee is ſo liberall as to feede vs and to nouriſh vs: let vs at the leaſt call him our father, and ſhewe that wee thinke our ſelues beholden to him for that benefite. Ye ſee then how it is to our great ſhame, that God muſt be faine to ſtirre vs vp to ỹ thing, which euen nature ought to haue taught vs. But if we continue weltring ſtil in that brutiſhneſſe: what excuſe will there remaine for vs? [None at all:] and therefore let vs practiſe this leſſon: that when GOD filleth vs, wee at leaſtewiſe yeelde him thankes, and ſhew that wee haue not forgotten the authour of all welfare.

Here a man might demaund, why God ſaith no more, but that men ſhoulde praiſe him and bleſſe him in the time of proſperitie? For that (as I ſaide) is not all that a Chriſtian man hath to doe. Hee muſt proceede yet further: that is to wit, when it pleaſeth God to ſend vs trouble, anguiſh, pouertie, ſickeneſſe, iniurie, reproche, [and ſuch other things]: wee muſt bee obedient to him, and bowe downe our neckes in all caſes, to receiue his yoke & to beare it without gainſaying or ſtriuing. Therein (ſay I) lyeth the perfect true vertue [of obedience]: namely when God ſhall rule vs after his good pleaſure, and we like well of all his doings towards vs, and are euer ready to bowe and to ſtoope vnto his hande, whether it be to liue or to die. And ſo al the ſeruice that we can doe vnto God, is nothing without patience. For one of the chiefe ſacrifices that he requireth, is that wee ſhould quietly endure all the aduerſitie that hee ſendeth vs. And why then maketh he no mention of it here? The reaſon is, firſt becauſe his deſire is to deale gently with vs. And if we on our ſide could ſuffer it: ſurely we ſhould be priuiledged from all the aduerſities that trouble vs. For had a man no leaud luſtes in him, were he not wedded to the world, were hee foreward to ſubmitte himſelfe to Gods will in all thinges, had hee no ſeede of vanitie or pride in him, nor were hee not ſotted in his owne delightes: GOD woulde maintaine him here as in an earthly Paradiſe. For his ſcourging of vs is of neceſſitie, becauſe he ſeeeth that wee haue neede of ſuch medicines. To bee ſhort, if wee were ſound in our ſoules: God would deale with vs as with ſtrong folke, to whõ men miniſter neither medicines, nor pilles, nor purgations, nor any ſuch other things. But foraſmuch as he ſeeth that wee be diſeaſed: he is faine to cut vs our morſels, and to binde vs to ſuch diet as hee knoweth to bee good for vs. Hee is faine to let vs bloud, and to giue vs bitter drinkes, pilles, and ſuch like thinges. Yea and moreouer he is faine nowe and then to ſeare vs, when he perceiueth our diſeaſes to be otherwiſe vncurable. Let vs marke therefore that in this place God hath ſpoken according to his owne nature, becauſe hee is inclyned of himſelfe to deale gently with men, and is deſirous to giue vs our fill of his benefites, and to holde vs as it were in his lappe, as a mother doeth her owne childe. After that maner would GOD deale with vs, if wee coulde beare it.

And that is the cauſe why hee ſaith, When thy God ſhall haue brought thee into the good lande, and there haue filled thee with his benefites: Looke in any wiſe that thou bleſſe his name. Wherefore let vs marke the order which God keepeth in exhorting vs to ſerue him. The firſt point is that foraſmuch as he is deſirous to ſhewe himſelfe a father towardes vs: his ſhewing of himſelfe to be ſuch a one, ſhould mooue vs and make vs the willinger to honour him, & to loue him ſo much the more: and that ſeeing he handleth vs ſo gẽrly, wee alſo ſhoulde acknowledge it and gloriſie him for it al our life long: and that as he is a father towards vs, ſo we ſhould bee as children towardes him. (That ſay I) is the ende that wee muſt begin at. But on the contrarie part, foraſmuch as we be wildeheaded children, of nature froward, vnruly, & leawd: God is faine to ſcourge vs, and to chaſtiſe vs, and tame vs with beating. Sith it is ſo: let vs learne, that if God ſhewe vs an angry looke & frowne vpon vs, or liſt to deale roughly with vs becauſe hee ſeeth vs abuſe his benefites, and that we haue not honored him as wee ought to doe: wee muſt not harden our

heartes against him, nor take occasion to withdrawe our selues from his obedience: neither must wee play these vnthriftes that forsake their fathers houses, and run gadding abrode at randon, as though they liked better of the galowes than of their inheritance. Let vs refraine from misbehauing our selues after ỹ fashion against our God, and let vs learne to submit our selues mieldly vnder his hand, assuring our selues that if he afflict vs he hath good reason to do it. And although we perceiue not ỹ cause why he doth it let vs do him the honour to submit our selues to him, and to shut our owne eyes, that he may dispose of vs according to his own wisedom which is vnknowen to vs. After this manner must wee come from the acknowledgment of Gods benefites, to the subiection which we ought to yeelde vnto him, to humble our selues vnder his mightie hand, whensoeuer he listeth to chastise vs or to tame vs for our stubbornesse, and to clense vs of our vices and wicked lustes, and of the infirmities which he knoweth to be in vs.

And now proceeding with that which I haue touched alreadie: let vs marke that it is not ynough for vs to pray vnto God with our mouths onely: but it must bee as a helpe to conuey vs further, namely to the dedicating of our whole lyfe vnto him, accordingly as Moses sheweth here, adding: Thou shalt not forget the Lord thy God, to despise his Commandements, statutes, & Lawes, which I inioyne thee this day. Hereby he sheweth vs that to yeeld thankes vnto God is a good & holy exercise: but yet it is not all ỹ we haue to doe: our life must be answerable to our tongue, and as we haue protested our selues to bee beholden vnto God, so must we shew it by our deedes. That is ỹ cause why it is expresly said, beware thou forget not thy God by foreslowing to keepe al his commandements and Lawes. Now first of all Moses sheweth here, whence this vnthankfulnes of mẽ springeth, ỹ they acknowledge not ỹ party which hath done them so much good, but forget him vtterly. And may ỹ excuse vs? Nay it rather maketh our fault the heynouser, when we think not vpon God, seeing he setteth his goodnes before our eyes, so as wee may beholde him therein, & we haue as faire presidents of him there as if he were liuely painted before vs in a table, & yet we looke not vpon him. If God withheld himself from vs, so as we found no fauour at his hand, and he suffered vs to linger in all maner of miserie, without giuing vs any succour when wee called vppon him: yet were that no sufficient excuse, that wee shoulde not seeke him. For it is the meane whereby hee quickeneth vs vp to call vpon him the more earnestly. Neuertheless, wee might haue some colour to say, Alas I wote not what to doe, for God seemeth to be gone quite and cleane from me, & it is no maruell though I set not my minde vppon him, for I haue no meane to allure mee thereto. But nowe contrariwise, seeing hee offereth himselfe to vs, and maketh vs to perceyue his goodnesse, so as we might euen feele him by groping though we were blind: must it not needs bee that we be worse than froward, if we thinke not vpon him? Yes, and yet we see this naughtinesse to bee ordinarie among men. For why? When wee bee once full, wee beare our selues on hand that wee haue no more neede of Gods helpe. If necessitie pinch vs, then we come running to him. But if he send vs the worlde at will, wee become as it were drunken in our delights, all our seeking is to wade deeper and deeper, and to bee short, wee neuer come to God but by constraint. Wherein we see that all the prayers which wee make vnto him when hee afflicteth vs, are but fained and vntrue. For then wee will confesse well ynough, that wee be miserable creatures if he pitie vs not. But what? As soone as he hath withdrawen his hand, we neuer think vpon him more. Therefore it is a token that all was but hypocrisie in vs before, & that we were not rightly and syncerely minded. Now then we shall not faile to be ỹ grieuousser condemned, if we forget our God when he draweth neere to vs. For the moe good turnes that he doeth vs, the moe signes and recordes haue we that he is willing to be our father, and to take vs for his children, and that hee sheweth himselfe in such sort vnto vs, as we cannot but know him. If this will not moue vs, our cursednesse is double. And therefore let vs learne that when our God hath made vs wealthie, we must not play the beastly folke, which despise God when they haue the world at wil, as who should say they had ynough of their owne to content themselues withall: but wee must bethinke vs of two things. First (as I saide) that if our Lord be liberall to vs, his comming to vs and his shewing of himself so familiar & friendly towardes vs, is to the end we shoulde know him ỹ better. That is for ỹ first point. And again for the second, let vs vnderstand that if we haue abundance to day, we may bee bereft of it in a minute of an houre, so as ỹ man that thinks himselfe well stored, shall finde himselfe naked, bare, and poore, in lesse than the turning of a hande. Why so? Because God auengeth himselfe of the saide vnthankfulnesse. And it is good reason also that hee shoulde not suffer men to forget him, when hee hath shewed himselfe after that fashion vnto them. Wherefore let vs vnderstande, that when we be in prosperitie wee haue the iuster cause to call vppon God, not onely to shewe that wee bee bounde vnto him for the good that he hath done vs alreadie: but also to shewe that the goods which we possesse were nothing, if he should not continue them and maintaine vs in them. These are the things which wee must beare in minde.

And therefore let vs marke, that the more God powreth out his benefits vpon vs, the more ought we to be quickened vp by them to thinke the better vppon him. But what? Wee bee farre wyde from the hauing of any such discretion with vs: and therefore haue wee so much the more neede to bethinke vs of this lesson that is shewed vs here, considering what hath happened in all ages. As for the vnbeleeuers, they are often enough vpbraided, that when God sends them the world most at will, then do they most kicke against him, and shewe themPsal. 73. 5. 9

ſelues moſt ſtubborne and rebellious. But as touching them ỹ call themſelues beleeuers: euẽ Deut.32.15 in them alſo is the ſame vice blamed by ỹ holy ſcripture. And not without cauſe: for we ſee that euen the children of God haue bin ſubiect to it. What is written of Ezechias? Although he was 2.Kin.20.13 Eſa.39.2.& 2.kin.18.5. a peereleſſe perle and mirror of all holines: yet wee ſee that as ſoone as God gaue him eaſe, he was no more mindfull to thinke vpon him. Yea and at what point was euẽ Dauid himſelf? Seeing then that this miſdealing fell euen vpõ them
1.Sam.11.2. ỹ were as halfe Angels in this world: let vs be the watchfuller, & let euery of vs labour to redreſſe himſelfe both earely & late. And ſeeing there is ſuch ſlowneſſe in vs, let the ſame ſpurre vs forewarde to bethinke vs of Gods grace, ỹ his name may be bleſſed and magnified by vs. Yea & Moſes doeth expreſly make a compariſon here, betweene Gods former guiding of his people, and his leading of them through the wildernes with his afflicting of thẽ there, after he had brought them out of the thraldome of Egypt, to the end ỹ the ſame might prouoke them the more to be thankfull vnto God. For when we haue once felt many miſeries, & God hath deliuered vs from them: if it moue vs not the more to yeeld him his due praiſe, it is the fouler & hainouſer fault. And that is the cauſe why Moſes ſpeaketh of it. But what? We ſee how the people of old time behaued themſelues. After this deliuerãce, God deliuered his people another time from the captiuitie of Babylon, wherein he reached out his arme after ſo noble a faſhion, as the Prophetes could neuer thinke themſelues to haue ſpoken ynough of his power which he ſhewed therein. Neuertheleſſe, they were no ſooner returned
Zac.1.16,17 Agge.1.8,9 home, but euery man was buſie about the building of his owne houſe, & Gods temple was let alone, no man made account of it. It lay open to raine & ſnowe, ſo as the ſacrifices & al the order of the Church lay dead. And what was ỹ cauſe thereof? Euen priuate profit, which poſſeſſed al ſuch as had receiued that benefit at Gods hand. And how fare wee nowe adayes I praye you? For if our Lord giue vs reſt & eaſe, then in ſtead of knowing our ſhepheard like good ſheepe, we play the wild beaſts with him, and fall to kicking at him. And what are we the better by remembring our former miſeries? Without going any further, in what plyght haue they bin, which at this preſent are well at their eaſe and reſt? And yet are they ſo farre off from faring the better by it, that it grieueth them at the heart that any man ſhould tell them of it. They would haue all the things buryed which they haue indured aforetimes, & alſo the benefites which they haue receiued ſince, and in the meane while become brutiſh like ſwine. They could finde in their hearts (ſay I) to aduance thẽſelues againſt God, without being aknowen ỹ they bee beholden to him for any thing: They neuer paſſe for the procuring of Gods honor, neither regard they how much they be bound vnto him. But euery man in the meane ſeaſon followes his owne likings. One burnes in couetouſneſſe, and another in vaine glorie, ſeeking to be aduaunced to authoritie and honour, and to bee taken to be I wote not what. Thus ye ſee at what point they bee, which will needes be taken to bee greateſt and zealouſeſt Chriſtians. Now then ſeeing it is not onely among ỹ Iewes ỹ this foule vnthankfulnes hath reigned, but that wee alſo are ſteyned, yea and vnmeaſurablie attainted with it at this day: Let vs be ſure that ỹ holy Ghoſt warneth vs alſo, & ỹ this doctrine of Moſeſes pointeth at vs too. Nowe therefore let vs followe his ſaying: that is to wit, that our life muſt bee anſwerable to our ſpeech, ſo as wee may ſhewe that wee play not the hypocrites in prayſing God. Indeede the mouth muſt doe his office, and euery man muſt inure himſelfe to praiſe God: and if wee doe it not, our leawdneſſe is apparant euen to little children. For they that ſit downe to the table, and when they haue filled their bellies riſe vp againe without ſhewing any ſigne of feare or reuerence to Godward, deſerue to haue litle children to ſpitte in their faces, or elſe to haue dung caſt vpon them, as they that defie nature. For the very Aſſes and Oxen obſerue a naturall order in their feeding. Such folke doe ſpite GOD through their intemperance and exceſſe, and finally would haue his name aboliſhed, as they ſhewe wellynough. Therefore are they verie monſters, whome men ought euen to abhorre. But yet muſt wee not ſtay there. For heere is a rule giuen vs to pray in ſuch ſort vnto God with our mouth, as our life may beare witneſſe therewithall, that our praying to him is done truely and vnfeynedly. For if when wee haue proteſted with our mouth, that God is our father and ſhewed himſelfe liberall to vs, and that wee liue by his grace, and that he giueth vs all things which he knoweth to bee for our welfare: we after wee haue ſaide ſo, doe giue our ſelues to all naughtineſſe, and take leaue to exempt our ſelues from all ſubiection: wherto ſhal our thankſgiuing ſerue which we haue yeelded with our tongues, but to be as a bond to hold our noſes to ỹ grindeſtone, ſo as wee may haue no ſhift to helpe our ſelues? Then let vs learne to ſing vnto God with ſuch melodie as Moſes ſpeaketh of here: ỹ is to wit, as our whole life agree with our mouth, and as god be honored truly and effectually.

Nowe herewithall let vs marke well howe he addeth, Take good heede, that when thou haſt eaten and drunke thy fill, and builded thee faire houſes, and increaſed thy Caſtell: thy heart doe not ſwell, and thou forget the Lord thy God. Here Moſes bringeth vs to the very welhead of ỹ naughtineſſe that I haue touched already. Men are vnthankeful & forget god though he ſhew him ſelfe friendly vnto thẽ, and their praying to him w̃ their tongues is but feining. And wherof commeth that? Moſes ſaith ỹ it commeth of ỹ loftines of the heart. But let vs mark wel, ỹ in ſo ſaying he tanteth mens ſelfweening, in chalenging ỹ things to thẽſelues which belong alonely vnto God, as he will expreſſe yet better in ỹ end: but all cannot be ſpoken at once. Then if God haue done vs any good, no doubt but it will inforce vs to graunte in wordes that it is ſo indeede: but yet for all that, wee will not fayle to father all thinges either

vppon our owne wisedome, or vppon our good fortune, or vpon one thing or other. And therefore no maruell though we bee so besotted therwithal, that we thinke no more vpon God. For why? Is there any greater or horribler blindnes, than for men to bee so proude as to set vp their bristles and to knowe themselues no more, but contrariwise to imagine themselues to bee that which they be not? Nowe then, when men are caried away with this false opinion of selfestimation: they bee so ouerblinded as they haue neither reason nor wit, insomuch that tell them what a man can, they passe not for it, but continue still in their wiltulnesse. Therefore let vs beware of this Highmindednesse which Moses speaketh of here. And that we may be the warer to keepe our selues from it: let vs assure our selues that euery one of vs haue as it were a roote of it in vs, vntil God haue rid vs of it. In deede there are some to bee seene which are modest, so as if God aduance them to honour or wealth, yee shall not perceiue any pride or chaunge at all in them. If they become great wheras they were little before: ye shall see them holde an euen hande, and continue still gentle. But whereſoeuer wee see that: let vs note that God hath wrought there, or else it were vnpossible. For not without cause are Lowelinesse and meekenes fathered vpon his holy spirit. When the holy scripture speaketh of those vertues, exhorting men to be mielde, & not to grow proud, but rather to liue quietly with their inferiors: it saith that they be singular gifts of ỹ holy ghost. Esa.42.v.2. & Mat.11,18

Againe, we see they be verie rare gifts. For howe do most men behaue themselues when they bee aduaunced? [Mieldly?] Nay contrariwise we see they be intollerable, as who shoulde saye they came out of the cloudes. But let them beware that they tumble not downe: for there is no loftines so high, which God cannot cast downe, if men stande in their owne conceites and forget themselues. Neuertheleſſe, the worlde sees that this is too too common, and there is a double vnthankfulnes in it. For first they consider not that the wealth which they haue, cõmeth from aboue: but their hearts are hardened in that behalfe. And secondly they fall not to consider with themselues afterwarde, that they bee not worthy of it, to the end they might hũble themselues & thank God for it. But contrariwise they be so malicious, as they could find in their harts that all the grace of God in the world were suppressed. Wee see this apparantly in those which cannot abide to offer God the sacrifice of praise that Moses speaks of here: that is to wit, to giue ouer themselues vnto him with all humilitie, & not to challendge any vertue at all to thẽselues.

Now, that we may so do: let vs ad that which hath bin touched: that is to wit, ỹ as God chastised his people in the wildernes, so was he also their guide and leader. So then, let vs marke well, that after he hath rebuked the pride that is in vs, and told vs that if God reach out his hand to aduaunce vs, our heart must not be puffed vp therefore, but we must walk on stil in mieldnesse and awfulnes [towards God,] yea and be gentle louing and courteous towards our neighbours: he bringeth vs backe to consider what we were, when God vouchsafed to aduaunce vs to worship, riches, and such other like thinges. Nowe if we could take hold of this: surely whereas we set vp our bristles, we would all of vs cast downe our eyes continually. True it is that when God hath deliuered vs from our miseries, we must put thẽ quite out of our minde, euen of purpose to bee no more disquieted with the griefe that we haue indured, after that God hath once asswaged it after that fashion: but yet is it not ment that we shoulde neuer thinke vpon it more. For why? It must alwayes bee as a lookingglasse for vs to holde vs in awe, that we play not the loose colts. Then if a man bee rich, and God haue increased him, let him bethinke himselfe from whence comes this to me? Indeede if a man bee rich by inheritance: he is the more bounde vnto God, so as hee ought to acknowledge thus, beholde what a number of goods God hath prouided for me euen before I was borne, so as I haue wherewith to content me, and although I bee not one pennie increased, yet haue I alreadie more than I need. Such acknowledgement ought they to yeld (say I), which are welthy by succession or inheritance. And when a mans goods are of his owne gathering: let him alwayes haue this regard, I was once poore, and howe am I come to the state wherein I see my selfe as now? It is not meete I should cast a scarfe before mine eyes in this case to forget God: but it behoueth mee to acknowledge his liberalitie towardes mee, and that I am beholden to his free mercie for all that euer I haue. After this manner ought hee that is growen rich, to bethinke him of his former pouertie. For it will serue to bridle him, that he shall not be so misaduised as to wax stout against God, or to deale cruelly with his neighbours, by oppressing or reiecting thẽ that seeme to bee his inferiours: but rather practise this warning of S. Pauls, of applying our selues to the meanest sort, that is to say, that although there seeme to bee some cause that we shoulde exalt our selues: yet we must yeelde vnto them and stoope to our God. Let him that is aduanced in degree think thus: Alas am I worthy of it? Hath God brought me to this for my faire eyes sakes? No: but forasmuch as it hath pleased him to exalt me, it becommeth me to acknowledge what I was before. For had not God looked mercifully vppon me, I should not onely haue continued in my former state: but also gone to decay, yea and vtterly come to nought. Nowe if a man bethinke himselfe after this fashion: surely he wil behaue himselfe mieldly, and not bee so lustie as to holde scorne of others. And wee haue the more neede to marke wel this doctrine, forasmuch as wee see that the haultinesse of heart which Moses speakes of here, is not a single or dubble mischiefe, but such a one as draweth a long tayle of manie inconueniences after it. What is this aduauncing of our selues whereas wee shoulde humble our selues? Is it not (as yee woulde say) a defying of God, and a proclayming of open warre against him? Yes: but alas hee is too ſtrong an aduerſarie. It is ſaid ẏ God will caſt downe the eyelids of the proud. Beholde, God proclaymeth warre not for a day or for a yeere, but for euer, againſt all ſuch as exalt themſelues: and yet in the meane while wee ceaſe not to waxe proude continually more and more. And what thinke wee to winne by ſo doing? On the other ſide, if vnthankfulneſſe be ſo intollerable towards men: howe much more heynous will it be towardes God? If a poore man haue his dinner ſent him: hee can well ynough tell that hee had it not before. Some man hath had pittie of him, and ſendes him Corne, breade, or wine. Nowe if hee deuour it and cramme himſelfe full, and in the meane while conſider not who did him that good turne: will not men ſay hee is a hoggiſh vilane? hee is not worthie to haue any good done vnto him. And yet this vnthankfulneſſe toucheth but a mortall man. Beholde, God reacheth vs his hand from heauen, and wheras the earth bringeth foorth fruites for vs: it is the hande of God that beſtoweth thoſe benefites vppon vs. Nowe if wee vouchſafe not to lift vp our eyes vnto him when hee commeth ſo vnto vs, but muſſell with our groynes in the earth, or elſe thinke thoſe thinges to be of our owne getting and deſeruing: I pray you is not ſuch vnthankefulneſſe too too deteſtable? Yes: and yet moreouer it is matched with ſcorneful-neſſe towards our neighbours. For if wee cannot finde in our heartes to diſcharge our duetie towardes God, what will wee doe towardes our neighbours? So then, pride doth euer carie crueltie with it: that is to ſaye, they that foade themſelues ſo in their owne naughtineſſe, are alwayes churliſh towards their neighbours, and their churliſhnes is alwais matched with ſpite & enuie. Inſomuch that if wee bee not perſwaded that God giueth vs all thinges of his owne free goodneſſe, & that it belongeth to him to maine-taine vs in the poſſeſſion of our goods: whenſoeuer wee ſee any man in whom Gods gifts ſhine forth, wee ſhall fall to oppreſſing of him, & wee ſhalbe loth that he ſhould be preferred. And that is yet another ouer outrageous leawdnes. Now therefore ſeeing that this ouerloftines of minde carieth ſo many vyces with it, and maketh vs guiltie ſo many wayes before God, yea & that euen the worlde it ſelfe perceiueth ẏ ſhamefulnes therof, and may wel abhor it: Let vs learn to ſubmit our ſelues to ẏ which Moſes ſaith here, ẏ is to wit, let not our harts be puffed vp when our Lord hath increaſed and multiplied vs.

Hee doeth not ſimply condemne that men ſhoulde growe wealthie: for Gods bleſſing is of ſuch force, that ſuch as are no great wiſhers, do neuertheleſſe attaine to ẏ things which they neuer looked for, and God outgoeth their deſires, ſo that whereas they were contented with their ſlender ſtate, he ſendeth them much more. Wel then, this of it ſelfe is not to be condemned. Not withſtanding, let vs learne to keepe our heartes from ſwelling, and to be alwayes poore in ſpirit. Although we haue riches, yet let vs be readie to forgo them whenſoeuer it ſhal pleaſe God: let vs not bee wedded to them: let vs not delight to feede our ſelues with them vnmeaſurablie: neither let vs make them an occaſion to troubble and to oppreſſe our neighbors. That is the thing which we haue to remember vpon this text.

Wherefore let vs mark that it is no wonder to ſee ſo ſmall continuance of things in this world, & ſo many alterations from day to day. For why? Thoſe to whom God hath ſhewed himſelf moſt liberall, do giue ouer themſelues to all naughtines, & moſt forget him: and therefore is he faine to withdrawe his fauour & goodnes from them, and to ſend them ſcarcetie as they bee worthy. Wee ſee what cauſed Ieroboam to turne away from the true religion. God had reached him his hande, and aduanced him to the kingdome, yea euen whē he neuer thought of it. The Prophet came to him ẅ this meſſage: God wil giue thee eleuen tribes of Iſrael, ſo as there ſhall remaine but one & a halfe in ẏ houſe of Dauid. Now as ſone as he was thus made king beyond his hope: he thought thus with himſelf: Seing I am in poſſeſſion of ẏ kingdome, it ſtandeth me on hand to looke about me how I may maintaine my ſelf in it. And the beſt way is to prouide ẏ the people go no more to the Temple of Ieruſalem to worſhip there. For ẏ would be a meane to turne them away from my obedience, and to make them to fall away from me: which thing they cannot do if they haue temples heere at home, that they may worſhip the God ẏ is within the countrie of mine owne Iuriſdiction. Thus yee ſee how Ieroboam corrupted ẏ whole ſeruice of God, in hope to maintaine his owne kingdom by it. And what was ẏ cauſe thereof? Euen ẏ he remembered no more of whom hee held his royal crowne, and ẏ it came vnto him of Gods meere free goodnes; but blinded himſelf in ſuch ſort, ẏ he thought to maintaine himſelfe euen as it were in deſpite of God. But we ſee it was the cauſe of horrible deſtruction: ſo as ẏ people was vtterly cōſumed, & Gods vengeance neuer departed frō thē. Sith it is ſo, let vs learne ẏ the more our Lorde ſheweth himſelfe to vs, ẏ more muſt we on our ſide liue in ſuch modeſty, as we alwayes do him homage for the good turnes ẏ hee hath done vs, and as ẏ remēberance of ẏ miſeries which we haue felt, & of the ſlender & wretched ſtate wherin we haue bin, may quicken vs vp & prouoke vs the more, to loue our God for ſhewing himſelfe ſo friendly to vs, & to honor him for giuing vs ſuch occaſion thereof by his beſtowing of benefites vppon vs which we neuer looked for. That is the effect of the things which we haue to marke vppon this text. And we ſee nowadayes what need we haue to bethinke our ſelues of the good ẏ God hath done vs. For what a one hath he ſhewed himſelf towardes vs? I meane if it were but euen in reſpect of the goods of this worlde. Let vs not ſpeake of euerie one ſeuerally, but generally of this place where wee bee. Alas, it was in oppreſſion and bondage, and it ſeemed to haue beene a place appointed to vtter ruine, ſo as there was no hope of recouery as in reſpect of ẏ world. And yet hath God not only planted his worde here, but alſo added freedome moreouer, and alſo giuen vs quietneſſe, as wee ſee. All other Countries are troubled, vexed and as good as deliuered vp to the ſpoile: and in the meane while God giueth vs reſpit here. And is not that to the end that wee ſhould haue the more leaſure to ſerue and honour him? Yes: and yet contrariwiſe the worlde ſeeth what lewdneſſe and looſeneſſe raigneth nowe more than euer afore: ſo that the more reſt wee haue, the more doe we ſtriue againſt God, and wee haue no minde to bethinke vs howe bountifull hee hath ſhewed himſelfe towardes vs. Therefore let vs ſee that we liue in feare, and whereas we haue beene in ſome miſerie, and God hath had pitie vppon vs to rid vs of it: let vs vnderſtand that his ſo doing, was bicauſe he was loth that wee ſhould periſh. Hee hath reached out his hand and ouercome our malice, he hath fought with his goodneſſe againſt our naughtineſſe: and ought not that patientneſſe of his, to breake our heartes the more [though they were neuer ſo hard?] Ought wee not to thinke vpon thoſe thinges otherwiſe than we doe? Is not neceſſitie ſtill preſent before vs? Yes. Then let vs marke that Moſes ſpake not alonely to the people of olde time: but that this exhortation belongeth to vs alſo at this day.

And generally let vs vnderſtand further, that euery of vs ought to conſider well with himſelfe, in what caſe and in what plight God found him, when he vouchſafed to chooſe vs and to call vs to his Goſpell. Alas in what taking were wee? We were borne the heires of euerlaſting death, vnder the tyrannie of Satan: and God adopted vs to bee his children. In what wretchednеſſe are wee borne euen in reſpect of the world? And God ſheweth himſelfe a father to vs euen from our mothers wombe, as is ſaide of it in the two and twentith Pſalme. Againe, let euerie of vs bethinke himſelfe howe many perils and daungers he hath paſſed through: and howe GOD hath deliuered vs from them all. Seeing then that wee doe liue in this world, haue wee not good cauſe to minde Gods benefites continually without ceaſſing, yea and to liue meekely therewithall? Yes: for when wee haue caſt vp our account, I pray you what cauſe haue wee to bee proude? I meane euen of thoſe that are of greateſt abilitie, and beare a goodly porte of vertue and wiſedome, and of all things elſe that can bee named. Alas, if all bee well examined, haue wee not good cauſe euerichone of vs to caſt downe our eyes? And ſeeing that GOD doeth vs good euen while wee bee aſleepe, and while wee thinke not vppon it: are wee not dubble bound vnto him? Yes verily. Therefore let vs knowe theſe thinges, and let vs profite our ſelues by the things that Moſes telleth vs heere, ſo as euery of vs in his ſtate and calling, both great and ſmall, may all ſerue God, and for the performing thereof humble our ſelues and not ſtand in our owne conceites, but alwayes haue a care to call vpon him on whom we depend. And let vs knowe alſo, that the way to prayſe God aright, is both to magnifie his name, and alſo to make our life correſpondent thereunto, ſo as we ſhewe by our deedes, that we bee willing to giue ouer our ſelues wholly vnto him.

Now let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs feele them better than wee haue done, that being caſt downe in our ſelues, wee may ſeeke none other meanes than to reſort vnto him, and to pray him to hold vs vp with his hand, and ſpecially to ſtrengthen vs with the power of his holy ſpirite, ſo as wee may fight in his ſeruice, and ouercome al the aſſaultes of Satan, the worlde, and ſinne, euen vntill he haue gathered vs into his kingdome. And ſo let vs all ſay, Almighty God heauenly, &c.

Pſal. 22. 11.

On Munday the xxvj. of Auguſt. 1555.

The Lxj. Sermon, which is the fourth vpon the eight Chapter.

14 Thy heart doe not then ſwell, and thou forget the Lord thy God which brought thee out of the land of Egypt from the houſe of bondage.

15 And led thee through the great and terrible wilderneſſe, full of Serpentes that ſpouted fire, and of Scorpions, and of dryth without water. But hee brought thee water from out of the hard rocke.

16 And fed thee in the wilderneſſe with Manna, which thy fathers knew not: of purpoſe to afflict thee, and to trye thee, that hee might doe thee good afterward.

17 That thou mighteſt not ſay in thy hart, mine own power, and the ſtrength of mine owne hand haue gotten mee theſe goods.

18 But that thou mighteſt remember the Lorde thy God. For it is hee that gaue thee this power to get theſe goods, to the intent to make good the couenant which he had ſworne to thy fathers, as appeareth this day.

19 But if thou forget the Lord thy God, and walke after ſtraunge Gods, and ſerue them, and bow down before them: I proteſt vnto you this day that you ſhall ſurely periſhe.

20 As the Lord deſtroyeth the Nations before you: ſo ſhall you periſhe, becauſe yee haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lord your God.

HEre wee muſt goe foreward ſtill with the matter which Moſes had touched afore, and which I haue partly expounded already: which is that he telleth the people what fauour had bin ſhewed them in Gods deliuering of them from the bondage of Egypt, and in his leading of them through the wilderneſſe, which thinges were not doone but of Gods wonderfull goodneſſe. For when we haue beene in aduerſitie, and God hath deliuered vs from it, and done vs good: his mercie hath the greater beautie, and becommeth the better knowen to vs, if the aduerſitie bee ſet before vs againe, and that wee bee put in minde of it. That then is the meaning of Moſes. To the intent that the people ſhoulde not fall aſleepe in their pleaſures, he ſayeth vnto them, conſider in what plyght and taking yee were, whē God reached you his hand to ſuccour you. Conſider by what means he brought you into this land where he giueth you reſt at this time Bee mindfull of thoſe thinges, and ye ſhall haue cauſe to ſay that ye haue found ſo great mercie, as there is no excuſe for ye if ye forget it. And he ſpeaketh purpoſely of the Manna, not to the ſame ende that he ſpake of it a while ago: but to doe the people to vnderſtand, that they had bin fedde after ſuch a ſtraunge faſhion, as had not bin commonly ſeene. Behold (ſaith he,) ye haue liued this fortie yeeres togither without bread or vittels. God hath fed ye with Manna, which was a thing vnknowen: and he gaue you a new kinde of drinke: for he made freſh water to come out of the drie and hard rocke for you. Thus chaunged he the order of nature, that yee might the better perceiue the preſence of his Maieſtie. True it is (as hath bin declared heretofore) that when the earth bringeth foorth corne, it is through Gods bleſſing of it, & through his breathing of that power into it, howbeit we perceiue it not. For wee deſpiſe the things that are common among vs, and whē we ſpeake of the courſe of nature, wee perſwade our ſelues ỹ God ſhould be excluded, and that he ſhould beare no ſway at all. Now bicauſe we bee ſo dull: it was Gods will to alter the things that are ordinarie among mē, and to appoint his people to bee fed with Manna, and to drink of the water which he had made to come out of the hard rocke. That then ſerued to ſhewe his people his heauenly power the better, that they might be driuen to thinke, wee bee not nouriſhed after the maner of men. Beholde, God vttereth himſelfe in this behalfe, and withdraweth vs from the world, as though wee were going vnto him, or as though the heauens were ſet open vnto vs, that we might the better behold his goodneſſe and power, and perceiue that it is he that hath deliuered vs, and maintaineth vs.

Finally Moſes declareth howe it was Gods will to afflict and try his people, to the ende they ſhould not ſay, It is mine owne power and mine owne ſtrength that hath gotten me this abundance. And here wee haue to note, firſt the order which God keepeth in teaching his people: which is, to begin with afflictions as Moſes expreſſeth here. And ſo muſt it be: or elſe we ſhall neuer bee well taught, except our Lord haue made vs to feele hunger and thirſt, and to indure pouertie and aduerſitie. We knowe what pride is in men by nature: they be wedded to themſelues and ſtand in their own conceits, and vntil God haue ſubdewed them by force, they be beſotted with vaine ſelfeſoothing. Moreouer when they be full fed, they fall to kicking againſt God and acknowledge him not for their mayſter. Therefore to bring vs to lowelineſſe and obedience, God is faine to afflicte vs. Marke that for one point. And God maketh this triall that Moſes ſpeaketh of, not for that he needeth to ſearch vs, as I haue declared heretofore: (for mortall men are faine to make ſome tryall, bycauſe they knowe not what is in folkes hartes: But God hath no neede thereof: all thinges are knowne vnto him:) but he ſpeaketh after the maner of men when he layeth things open, and diſcouereth them whether there be any fayning or hypocriſie in them, or whether their heart bee right, ſo as they walke roundly and ſoundly. Whē God diſcouereth & bewrayeth theſe things he is ſaid to ſearch, examine, and try men. Howbeit his ſo doeing is not for himſelfe, but for vs. For we ſee how men ſtand in their own conceits, bearing themſelues on hande that there is nothing in them but perfect vertue and holyneſſe: but if God nip them a little, by and by the byle burſteth, and out comes the poyſon. Thus yee ſee why it is ſayd that God trieth vs.

And here wee haue to beare in mind, that if God afflict vs oftentimes, wee muſt not think it ſtraunge, conſidering the needefulneſſe thereof. For if hee ſhould let vs alone in our delightes, and handle euery of vs according to our owne liking: what a thing were that? Wee would neuer ſubmit our ſelues vnder his yoke, we ſhould not know what it is to feare him, wee ſhould not skill what it is to humble our ſelues vnder his hand, we ſhould not know what it is to call vpon him, and to ſeeke all our welfare in him. Seeing then that afflictions are ſo beneficial: let vs learn to beare them patiently, and to ſubmit our ſelues to them willingly, though they goe againſt our ſtomacks. Here is expreſſe mention made of humilitie and obedience. For firſt of all, if men continue in their loftineſſe: they cannot bowe to obey God & to ſerue him, but they wil needes haue the brydle layd looſe vpon their necke, & be let alone to follow their own wicked affections and luſtes. Yee ſee then what ſtubbornneſſe is rooted in vs, vntil God correct it by mainforce. And ſo there is no obedience, vnleſſe men bee beaten beatē down with maine ſtrokes, neither is there any lowlines in them, til then. And why? Bicauſe they ſooth themſelues, and take maruelouſly vpon them, bearing themſelues on hande that they want nothing, but that they bee very able men, vntill God haue prooued the contrary vpon them. And that is the thing which Moſes expreſſeth in this text when he ſaith, It was Gods will ſo to afflict thee. And to what end? To the end thou ſhouldeſt not ſay, It is mine owne ſtrength and myne owne power that haue gotten mee this aboundance. Wee ſee that when GOD ſuffereth the order of nature to proceede, he that is riche thinketh not that his wealth commeth from heauē, or that God did ſet any hand to it: but he ſayth that all came to him by inheritaunce, or by ſucceſſion, or that he hath gotten it by his own trauell and policie. Thus doe men euer aduaunce themſelues, vntill our Lord ſhew them that they be nothing, nor nothing can do, and make them to feele it ſpite of their hartes. Therefore were the people of Iſraell fed after a wonderfull faſhion by the ſpace of fortie yeeres together in the wilderneſſe, to the intent that when they were come into the land that had bin promiſed them and did eate meate, they ſhoulde thinke thus: True it is that as nowe God giueth mee meate, but it was not alwayes ſo: the time hath beene that hee fed mee with Manna: therefore muſt I needes conclude that mine own power hath not purchaſed me the things that I poſſeſſe; I cannot ſay that I my ſelfe am ỹ founder of them: I muſt do homage to my God for them, and hold them al of him: I muſt accept them as of his free gifte, that he may let me inioy them ſtill: for I am worthy to bee bereft of them, if I acknowledge not that they come of him. Now albeit that this inſtruction ſerued for the people of olde tyme: yet belonges it alſo vnto vs, to the end that ſuch as poſſeſſe goods may vnderſtande, that they haue none other intereſt in them, than bycauſe God hath bleſſed them, and powred out his fauour & bountie vpon them. True it is that God reſpecteth not the worthines of men in this caſe: for oftentimes he giueth riches to the wicked, to ỹ intent it ſhould turn to their ſorer condemnatiō. Forasmuch as he hath ſhewed himſelfe ſo liberall towards them: they muſt come to accoūt & be puniſhed dubble, if they benefite not themſelues by the fauour that was ſhewed them. Yet notwithſtanding we muſt take this for a general rule, ỹ men attaine not to riches by their owne power, wiſedome, or trauell, but onely by Gods bleſſing, whereof it hath pleaſed him to giue a continuall preſident, which ſerueth not onely for the Iewes but alſo for vs, ſo as it behoueth vs to vnderſtand, that although ſome ſeeme to be inriched by their greate diligence, yet is it Gods bleſſing, which worketh with them after that faſhion: and that wheras otherſome are riche before they be borne, ſo as their auncetors haue purchaſed them great poſſeſſions, yet doe none of theſe things happen to them by chaunce, but Gods prouidence ouerruleth all. We muſt (ſay I) referre all theſe things to that which is told vs in the Pſalme; namely ỹ a man may well riſe earely and go late to bed, drinke water & eate browne bread not half his fill: & yet ſhall he nothing auaile by it, vnleſſe God reache out his hand and goodnes. On ỹ contrarie part, ſometimes he will cauſe goods to light vpō his children as they lie aſleepe. And ỹ ſheweth vs ỹ men beguile themſelues, if they thinke to inrich thēſelues by their owne power: and ỹ they be ſtark mad if they become proud, as though their goods came to thē by their owne meanes. For in ſo doing they blaſpheme God, & rob him of his peculiar honor: & therefore is it good reaſon ỹ they alſo ſhould be bereft of the things ỹ he hath giuen them. As for example, if a Vaſſall ſhoulde ſtep vp againſt his lord to whō he hath promiſed fealtie & homage, & refuſe all the dueties ỹ he is bound vnto: his goods ſhould be ſeaſed, & he be turned out of all ỹ euer he hath, & wel worthy. Now behold here, God dealeth his benefits vnto vs as vnto his Vaſſals, reſeruing ỹ royalties ſtill to himſelf, ſo as he wil be knowne to bee chief Lord of ỹ fee: & it is good reaſon ỹ he ſhould be ſo, ſpecially ſeeing he doth it not for his own benefit but for ours. Now if we be ſo malitious and froward as to defraud him, & to ſet him beſides his right: ſhould he not bereaue vs of the goods ỹ he had giuen vs and make vs poore againe, ỹ he may driue vs of force to ſue vnto him? Yes: & ſo ye ſee whence ỹ chaūges come which we beholde in the worlde, that whereas a houſe is riche and wealthy and neuer like to decay: a man ſhall be at his wits endes to ſee it conſume and ebbe away. I ſpeake not onely of houſes of meane Citizens: but alſo of ỹ houſes of great Lordes, which haue ſo many thouſande poundes of yeerely Rent: it is a wonder to ſee howe they waſte away, firſt to the halfe, then to a third part, & finally to nothing. And how may this come to paſſe? It ſhoulde ſeeme that God makes paſtime, and taketh pleaſure in turning of worldly thinges vpſide downe: howbeit, that is bicauſe of our vnthankfulneſſe. For as much as men hold not the things with good conſcience, which he hath put into their hands: it is meete ỹ they ſhould be diſpatched of them. Therefore it ſtandeth vs ſo much the more on hand, to mark well this doctrine ỹ is contained in theſe words, Thy God afflicted thee, yea euen of purpoſe that thou ſhouldeſt not now ſay, It is mine owne hand that hath gotten me this abundance. That if loue & good will cannot perſwade vs to come to ſo much reaſon, as to glorifie God by acknowledging our ſelues to holde all thinges of him: at leaſtwiſe his ſcourging of vs may make vs to thinke it, and driue vs by ſome meanes to bee mindefull of his grace, ſo as wee may fare the better by the examples that hee hath giuen vs at all times, and not onely haue an eye to the things that wee haue ſeene in our owne life, but alſo to the thinges which are reported to vs in the holy ſcripture, to haue bin done long ago: I ſay let vs call them to remembrance, bicauſe God will haue them to ſerue for our inſtructiō. Now if we be vnthankfull to our God in theſe ſmall things: what wil wee bee in the greater things? [much more vnthankefull,] as the worlde ſeeth. And if wee haue neede to bee tamed by afflictions, leaſt wee ſhould bee puffed vp with pride for our meate and drinke: ſurely we ought much more to be taught by ſuch meanes, in ſpirituall matters. For Gods honour is more greeuouſly impeached in theſe caſes: and yet we ſee that men are moſt inclyned ỹ way. Truly it is too great & vntollerable leaudneſſe already, when mortall men ſurmiſe themſelues to be fed and ſuſteined by their owne power and labour: their yeelding of commendation to their owne policie for their meate and drinke, is already too ſhameful a preſumption. But if they not onely imagin themſelues to be ſuſteined by their own paines taking and trauell, but alſo perſwade themſelues, that they get the kingdome of heauen, and become the children of God, and liue in holineſſe, and all through their owne free will: is not God thereby robbed of the praiſe that is due to him alone? Yes: for he is not onely bereft of his right in theſe flightfull and tranſitorie thinges of the world: but alſo the chiefe part of his honour is taken from him, that is to wit, that he correcteth the naughtineſſe which is in vs, that he quickeneth vs through his goodneſſe, that he calleth vs to ſaluation, and that all the goodneſſe which wee haue, ſhould be acknowledged to come of him. And yet notwithſtanding, wee ſee howe Freewill hath beene magnified, and euen at this day one of the greateſt controuerſies which we haue with the papiſtes, is that they cannot bee made to beleiue, that men are vtterly corrupted and mard, and that they be not onely weake, but alſo vtterly vnable to doe any good. In deede they will well ynough graunt that there is ſome feebleneſſe and faultie infirmitie in men: but yet to their ſeeming there is ſtill ſome power in them, and that if God doe but helpe vs and ſupply our weakeneſſe, it is ynough. But when men ouerſhoote themſelues ſo farre, and will needes chalenge a diuine power to themſelues: Is it not meete that they ſhould bee beaten backe, and that God ſhoulde ſubdue them by force, and make them to ſtoope, yea and beate downe and break aſunder the diuliſh pride that is in them? Yes. And indeede that is the very cauſe why hee handleth vs in this tranſitory life, as he handled his people in the deſert. For the life that wee lead here beneath, is anſwerable to the iorney which the people of Iſraell made thoſe fortie yeeres in the wilderneſſe. We be fed heere with bread and wine: but yet neuertheleſſe we craue our ordinary foode at Gods hand as if he ſent vs Manna from heauen. And verily we bee in this world, as in a wilderneſſe: we ſee what daungers hem vs in on all ſides: God is faine to guide vs, and to make vs perceiue his preſence ſo many wayes, as we may well think that the wildernes was a true figure of our ſtate ſuch as it is at this day. For as yet God letteth vs alone in our infirmities, we feele our ſelues in pitifull plight, we be ſo weake as we neede not any thing to caſt vs downe, the deuill doth drawe vs into his nettes, we be deſtitute of al grace, we ſee what troubles doe ſtop our eyes, and we wote not what to ſay, neither on which ſide to turne vs. And why doth God handle vs ſo? Why be we not here as in an earthly paradiſe? Bycauſe we haue neede to be nurtured after that faſhion: for otherwiſe what woulde become of our pride? Wee woulde not thinke ourſelues beholden to God for any thing: but euery of vs would make an ydoll of himſelfe, and worſhippe himſelfe in his owne conceite. Therefore is our Lord fayne to afflict vs, and to ſhewe vs what wee bee, to the ende to make vs ſtoope, and thereby to teache vs to glorifie him. Thus ye ſee what we haue to marke vppon this text of Moſeſes: where hee ſayth, Thy God afflicted thee in the wilderneſſe.

And ſo let vs know ỹ Gods chaſtiſing of vs all our life long, is not only to ſubdue vs to his will, to the intent wee ſhould bee obedient: but alſo and chiefely to humble vs, that wee might not preſume any thing of our ſelues, but vtterly diſtruſt our owne ſtrength and abilitie, and reſort vnto him: and moreouer that when he giueth vs proſperitie, wee ſhould conſider whence it commeth, for it is not in our owne power to compaſſe it: and finally that wee ſhould not doe as a nomber of hypocrites doe, who wil welynough confeſſe themſelues to bee in rufull caſe, and that they bee wretched creatures: but as ſoone as God hath releeued them and deliuered them from their bondage, they fall to ſtouting againſt him, and thinke no more vpon the miſerie that is paſt. Nowe then it is not ynough for vs to condemne our ſelues when we be pinched by Gods hand, and to ſay, In deede it is true that if God ſuccoured mee not I ſhould bee deſtitute of all that might doe mee good: but alſo when God ſhall haue giuen vs all that we can wiſh, and wee feele his bleſſing abundantly, euen then muſt we bee warer than euer wee were that wee forget him not, and we muſt not compare the time preſent, with the time that wee haue ouerpaſt, as thus: what had become of mee, if God had not reached mee his hand? I had beene vndone a hundred thouſand times. And hath not his maner of ſuccouring me beene wonderfull? Should I now chalenge any thing to my ſelfe? Thus ye ſee how that euen in the time of our abundance, that is to ſay, euen when God giueth vs our harts deſire, wee muſt alwayes bee mindefull of our former aduerſitie, and that in ſuch ſorte, as the honour may redound alonely vnto God, as meete is it ſhould. That is the thing which we haue to beare away in effect vpon thoſe wordes of Moſes.

Nowe hee addeth, Thou ſhalt remember the Lorde thy God, that it is hee which hath giuen thee the abilitie to get all the goods which thou haſt. Here Moſes intended to preuent all that euer men can aledge on their owne behalfe. For they bee but too much giuen continually to ſeek ſome colour and ſhew that their welth cõmeth of themſelues. When men take paines for their liuing, they haue an eye to their owne policie, whether they be of ſufficient abilitie & skill or no: that is ỹ thing which they looke at. It ſeemeth then, that when a man hath traueled for his liuing, he had at leaſtwiſe a good and forewarde wit, hee was vigilant, hee tooke good opportunities, hee ſhunned the things that might doe him diſpleaſure, ſure: and therfore men ſhould doe him wrong to ſay he did nothing to it, and that it was the free gift of God: for experience is againſt it. But Moſes anſwereth to all this, ſaying that although men take neuer ſo much paynes, and ſtreine themſelues, and haue neuer ſo good forecaſt to ſhift for themſelues, and bee neuer ſo well aduiſed and diſcreete: yet muſt not God be bereft of his honor. For why? who is it that giueth men Iames 1.17. diſcretion, aptneſſe of body, ſtrength to indure paynes, furtherances, and helpes? Is it not God that putteth all thinges into their handes? And yet is not this all. For God muſt alſo bleſſe all the benefites that he giueth vs: or elſe though a man be neuer ſo highly aduaunced, God needeth no

2.Cor.3.7. more but to giue him a tickle with his litle finger, or to blowe vppon him, and by and by all is quite ſwept away: all is but as an herbe that is greene
Pſal.37.2. in the morning, which withereth and dryeth away as ſoone as the ſunne ſhineth vpon it, as is ſayd in the Pſalme, Then let vs marke wel, that Moſes added not this ſaying wꝫout cauſe, namely ỹ we muſt thinke our ſelues beholden to God for all thinges, and acknowledge that it is hee which giueth vs the power to get goods. And vnder the word Power his intent is to comprehend all that euer we can attribute to our ſelues, whether it be of naturall abilitie and handſomneſſe to doe thinges, or of helpes and meanes ỹ wee haue to further vs withall. For vnleſſe God gouerne & guide vs with his hand: ſurely all ỹ we can doe is to no purpoſe, but all ſhall goe cleane contrary to our intent. And in deed we ſee how ỹ ableſt men that are, do deceiue thẽſelues, & men need not teach them any deceites (as they ſay) in reſpect of ỹ world. God laugheth at their fondneſſe in making their diſcourſes, & at their reckoning wꝫout their hoſte, & in the end ouerthroweth all. And ſo, by ỹ word Power or Strẽgth, Moſes meant not onely ỹ health & diſpoſition of body to trauel, & the wit & diſcretion of minde which wee ought to haue: but alſo the hauing of thinges in our handes, and Gods bleſſing of thẽ, that he make our labor come to good paſſe, ſo as it fall out to our benefite. If we beare this leſſon well in minde, it wil doe vs good al our lyfe long, ſo as proſperitie ſhall not blinde vs, neither ſhall we fall aſleepe to forget our God: but wee ſhall vnderſtand ỹ when he giueth vs wealth, we muſt thinke our ſelues beholden to him for it, and by what meanes ſoeuer it came to vs, ỹ glory thereof muſt not therefore redownd vnto vs, but bee
Deut.32.8. reſerued vnto him, as to the partie that beſtoweth his benefites vppon vs, diſtributing them as hee himſelfe thinketh good, and giuing to euery man ſuch portion of them as hee liſteth, not
Eph.4.7. for any deſert of ours, but to make vs feele his goodneſſe. Be wee once throughly perſwaded of this, we will thereby take warning not to abuſe our abundance, as they doe which ouerſhoote themſelues into al vnrulyneſſe, which mount vp into pride, and which are giuen to pomp and vanitie to make a ſhowe of themſelues. I ſay we ſhal be reſtrained from all theſe vices. For it not for any deſert of ours that God giueth vs riches. Wherfore is it then? To draw vs to him, that we might haue him to be our Sauiour, & finde him beneficiall & kinde towardes vs. Therefore wee muſt vſe his benefites ſoberly and meaſurably: & beſides that, we muſt not be giuen to luſtineſſe & brauery in vanting our ſelues to ỹ worldward. Finally we muſt not think to haue a ſtate of perpetuitie in our goods, as though they might not be taken from vs: but we muſt alwayes put them into Gods hand, ſo as if he giue vs abundance to day, we in yeelding him thankes for the ſame, ſhould be ready to beare pouertie with patience to morrowe. By that meanes ye ſee ỹ neither riches nor any other like thing ſhal dazle our eyes to make vs ſtand too much in our owne conceit, and to glorie in our ſelues. For wee will alwayes thinke thus: what am I, but ỹ it pleaſeth my God to giue mee more goods than hee doth to my neighbors? He may take thẽ away againe whenſoeuer it pleaſeth him. Then muſt I not imagin that I haue deſerued aught: but I am the more bound to my God, in that he hath voutſafed to make me thus to feele his fauor. And I muſt not be proude of it: for that were a kicking againſt my maiſter that feedeth me. Therefore muſt I abate the fatneſſe which would prouoke mee to pride, and in the ende make mee to forgette God. Phil.4.12.

Againe, when wee be thus humbled as touching the tranſitorie thinges of this world: let vs repaire to the principall point, which is, that when our Lord ſhall haue ſtrengthened vs with his holy ſpirite, ſo as wee ſhall haue fought manfully againſt all the temptations of the world, and haue ſerued him in ſuch wiſe as it may bee ſayd of vs, that we haue giuẽ good example vnto others: yet we be not caryed away with foliſh vainegloryz but conſider thus wꝫ our ſelues, It is my God that hath giuen me this power. Why am not I as bad as the woorſt naughtipacke in ỹ world? why am I not caryed away with blinde & beaſtly luſtes to giue my ſelfe to all leawdneſſe, but becauſe my God preſerueth mee? I haue had incounters that were hard to beare: & how happeneth it ỹ I haue gotten the vpper hand of them? It is my God that gaue it me. They therfore to whom God giueth the power of his holy Ghoſt, muſt acknowledge themſelues ſo much ỹ more bound vnto him, and that they haue not ỹ power by natural inheritance, but by Gods gift, to ỹ end ỹ he onely ſhould be glorifyed wꝫ all humilitie, & ỹ we ſhould not play ỹ lying hypocrits, as they doe which confeſſe wꝫ their mouthes ỹ it is God which hath graunted them ỹ grace, & yet ceaſe not to perſwade them ſelues ỹ it commeth of their owne freewill. But let vs vtterly emptie & quite rid our ſelues of ſuch ouerweening: & let vs confeſſe truely ỹ we know our ſelues to haue all thinges of God. And if this be to be acknowledged in bread & wine: what ought to be done concerning the heauẽly life, & in ỹ thinges ỹ belong peculiarly to god, & are aboue ỹ reach of mã? It ſhould ſeeme ỹ men are able euen of nature to get thẽſelues meate & drinke: but whẽ it cõmeth to ỹ making of them ſelues Gods childrẽ, & cõpanions of the Angels & that they ſhould leade a holy life: in ỹ caſe they haue nothing of their owne.

owne. And therefore when wee thinke vppon the corruption wherein wee bee by the ſin of Adam, and conſider that God hath cleanſed vs frō it: let vs aſſure our ſelues it is Gods free gift, as wel as is his continual maintaining of vs, and his ſtrengthening of vs at our neede.

Rom.3.26. & 5.15.& Eph.2.8.9.

After that Moſes hath ſpoken ſo: he addeth, That if the people turne away from GOD and ſerue ſtraunge Gods: God will bee angry with them, and they ſhall periſh as the people did whom hee was about to caſt downe before them. You ſhall periſh after the ſame maner ſayth hee. Moſeſes adding of this threat, is to waken them vp the better, which cannot thinke vppon God when they bee too full fed with the good that he hath done them. And it happeneth well neere continually to all men, that if God warne them gently, and deale friendly with them, and let them ſit at reſt as it were in his lap: then it is no ſpeaking to them: for they giue him the deafe eare, and abuſe his fauour by tempting his patience, and the more that hee ſpareth them, the leſſe doe they ſeeme to regard his loue and fauour. Therefore doth it behooue men to be wakened and quickened vp with threateninges. It is true, that God indeuoreth as much as is poſſible to win vs by gentleneſſe and not by conſtreint. But when he ſeeth vs ſo hardharted, that if hee ſpeake gently vnto vs, we make but a mocke of his doctrine, and voutſafe not to thinke vppon it: then doth hee adde threatenings. After the ſame maner dealeth Moſes both here & in many other places, and it is the common order of ſpeach of the holy Ghoſt throughout al ỹ holy ſcripture. Then let vs marke well, that God for his parte is loth to ſpeake otherwiſe than gently vnto vs, and would faine ſo waken vs as we ſhould come to him willingly. But our naughtineſſe and lewdneſſe bewrayeth it ſelfe, in that in ſtead of comming to him, we retire from him. Seeing he allureth vs gently, ſpeaking to vs as a father, or rather as a mother to her little children: muſt it not needes be that we be too froward, when we turne our backes vpon him, and deſpiſe him for ſhewing himſelfe ſo louing to vs? Yes: & yet is it an ordinary vice among vs. And therefore let vs not thinke it ſtraunge, though we heare thereatninges oftentimes in ỹ holy ſcripture, and that God ſetteth his wrath before vs: & that we be ſo rebuked when we come at Sermons. For why? Let euery man looke into himſelfe: and if God ſhould alwayes ſet his promiſes afore vs & ſay, come my children, come: let vs ſee if that would ſuffice. Nay contrary wiſe we ſee how euery man abuſeth ſuch goodneſſe. And therefore whenſoeuer there is any ſharpeneſſe or vehemencie in the doctrine that is ſet forth vnto vs in ỹ name of God: let vs vnderſtand that our naughtineſſe requireth it, and that without it we ſhould continue ſtill in our filthineſſe & rotte in our owne doung, ſo as there would be no meanes to pluck vs out of it, becauſe euery man delightes in his owne deſtruction. And if we were not afraid of Gods iudgement, neuer would any of vs all play the iudge towardes himſelfe, but we would think our ſelues to be ſcaped out of Gods hand, and euery of vs would winke at his owne faultes. For although God cite vs to his iudgement ſeate, & indite vs there to make vs aſhamed: yet ceaſe we not to ſleepe ſtill in our ſinnes. And what would we then doe if we were not threatned? So then it is not without cauſe, that the holy Ghoſt hauing vſed gentleneſſe, falleth to roughneſſe. For it is meete that men ſhoulde bee ſo dealt withall, and that God ſhould not onely wring them by ỹ eares, but alſo ſtryke them hard, to the intent to bowe them, ỹ they may yeeld themſelues teachable and be diſpoſed to come vnto him, which thing they would neuer doe with their good will.

And now Moſes ſayth expreſly, If yee forget the Lord your God, and goe after ſtraunge Gods: Whereby he doth vs to vnderſtand, ỹ inaſmuch as the Iſraelites had bin trayned in the ſound doctrine, and in the right religion: they coulde not turne away to ſuperſtition and idolatrie, but through vnthankefulneſſe in forgetting God. For why? If God haue once taught vs his truth, and manifeſted himſelfe to vs: it ought to ſuffice vs, becauſe it is ſo greate a light as we cannot go amiſſe, but of wilfulneſſe. If a man that walketh at noonedayes doe run againſt a ſtone or tumble into a ditch, can hee ſay I ſee it not? Hee ſeeth playnely, and beſides that, hee hath the Sunne to guide him: and how can hee then excuſe himſelfe? Euen ſo is it with vs: When God hath inlightned vs by giuing vs his worde, wee can no more walke in darkeneſſe, inſomuch that if wee ruſh againſt any thing, it is through our owne wilfulneſſe: and if wee fall into the ditch, wee our ſelues are too blame for it. That is the thing which Moſes meant in ſaying, If yee goe after ſtrange Gods, yee forget the Lord your God. The poore Paynims that were in thoſe dayes, had more to excuſe themſelues withall than the Iewes had, becauſe God ſhewed not himſelfe vnto them. But foraſmuch as the people of Iſraell had receiued Gods lawe, ſo as hee had ſet them in the way of ſaluation: they could not ſay We knowe him not, according to the ſolemne proteſtation which wee ſhall ſee that Moſes maketh in the two and thirtith Chapter. I cal heauē and earth to witneſſe this day (ſayth hee), that I haue ſet you in the way of ſaluation, ſo as yee cannot henceforth alledge that yee haue not heard any thing, or that if yee had bin taught, yee would haue done your indeuour to liue according to Gods will. I haue ſhewed it you ſufficiently, therefore followe it.

Deut.32.1.

Now muſt wee benefite our ſelues by this doctrine, and apply it to our vſe nowadayes. For the Papiſtes, Turkes, and Paynims liue in ignorance, and no maruell at all. True it is that yet for all that they ſhal not faile to be condemned before God. But yet' are wee much more blameworthie than they, if wee ſticke not to our God. And why? For hee hath ſent vs the pure doctrine of his Goſpell, hee hath voutſafed to giue vs the vnderſtanding of his trueth, ſo as wee may now diſcerne betweene good and euill. Now if wee turne againe to our olde ſuperſtitions, can wee ſay wee were deceiued through ignorance? No: but God will alwayes holde vs at this bay, that we haue forſaken him lyke backſlyders, and broken our faith lyke periured and diſloyall kaytifes. Yee ſee then that the thing which wee haue to marke vppon this place, is that when God hath manifeſted himſelfe to vs by his worde, ſo as wee knowe the way of ſaluation: it behoueth vs to be the more circumſpect, and to hold our ſelues the faſter to the pureneſſe of his doctrine. For if wee ſwarue from it, it is becauſe wee haue forgotten our God, that is to ſay, wee haue wilfully turned our backe vppon him, and forſaken him after our knowing of him. In deede this is layd to the charge of all men in generall, I meane euen of the ignoranteſt: for

Rom. 1. 20. & Deut. 4. 7. 32. Hebr. 1. 1. God manifeſteth himſelfe to all men, euen by heauen and earth though he doe no more. But heere the caſe concerneth Gods word, which is the familiar maner of ſhewing himſelfe to vs. And had we this leſſon wel printed in our hearts ſo as wee could bethinke vs to benefite our ſelues by the thinges that are ſhewed vs nowadayes in the Goſpell: wee would neuer forget our God, to ſtep aſide after ſuperſtitions.

Notwithſtanding, let vs marke by the way, that if other ſinnes bee intollerable before God: hee abhorreth idolatrie and the corruption of his ſeruice aboue all other crimes. In deede if a man that knoweth the Goſpel doe giue himſelfe to deceite and extorſion, or be ful of pride, crueltie, and malice, or caſt himſelf into whoredome and other filthineſſe and infection: God will ſurely puniſh him: for it is too great a prouoking of him, when wee defile our ſelues ſo, after he hath ſanctifyed vs. But if wee decline to idolatrie: that is not a priuate offence, ſpringing onely of infirmitie that caryeth vs away: but it is an vtter renouncing of God, it is a giuing of him ouer, as though wee intended to haue no more to doe with him. And wee muſt marke moreouer, that although an vpright, honeſt, chaſte and ſober conuerſation be a parte of Gods ſeruice: yet the chiefe ſeruing of him, is to
Mat. 22. 37. 38. put our truſt in him, to honor him, to call vpon him, and to profeſſe him to bee our onely God. But when wee fall to making of idols, and ſet them vp in his place: is it not a robbing of him of his Godhead? Can wee make any more open warre againſt him? Is it not all one as if we would plucke him downe from heauen, and put him from the gouernment of the world? Yes. Seeing then that the corrupting of Gods ſeruice bringeth ſo horrible confuſion: let vs not thinke it ſtrange that Moſes ſhould tel the Iſraelites here, that if they gaue themſelues lewdly to idolatrie, God would conſume them: Yea and that not by gentle and fauorable meanes as in way of chaſtiſement: but by rooting of them out quite and cleane, as the people ſhould be rooted out which had dwelt before them in the land that hee had promiſed them. The thing was not yet don but yet Moſes ſpeaketh of it as of a thing that was moſt certeine to them. And ſurely Gods promiſe ought to beare great ſway with vs, when hee behighteth vs any good: and ſo ought his threatnings to bee taken to bee as ſure, when he cannot draw vs to him by gentleneſſe. And that is the cauſe why Moſes ſayth, I proteſt vnto you this day. Now by this ſaying we bee warned that God taketh as it were a ſolemn recogniſance of vs, when he ſendeth vs his word: and that the faithfull preaching thereof is as an open proclamation to ſummon vs and to cite vs. Lyke as when a man refuſeth to doe his duetie, then to the intent he may anſwere to the Lawe, hee is cited, and his aduerſary commenceth ſute againſt him: euen ſo doth God deale with vs. For (as I ſayd afore) hee deſireth no more but that we ſhould come to him by gentleneſſe and friendly dealing. But yet if wee bee ſlowe and negligent, ſo as hee cannot allure vs to him: thē doth he enter his ſute and make proteſtation againſt vs after this maner: wel then, I haue done what I could to win you, and yet notwithſtanding yee haue bin ſtubborne ſtill towardes me, and therefore I proteſt againſt you. He ſendeth his miniſters as his proctors, yea and hee ſendeth them with ſolemne commiſſion, as if ſome Notary were by to make a publike inſtrument, [as if hee ſhould ſay,] I proteſt againſt you that it was not long of mee that yee were not rid out of the deſtruction wherein yee are: if ye periſh, the fault is in your ſelues. Wherefore let vs mark this well, to the end that when wee come to a Sermon, or reade the holy ſcriptures, if we finde any ſowreneſſe or vehemencie that greeueth vs: wee doe not therefore forbeare to receiue the thinges that are told vs in Gods name, aſſuring our ſelues it is the greateſt benefite that can befall vs, to ſuffer our ſelues to bee ſo rebuked by Gods word, foraſmuch as it bringeth vs to him by repentance. And therefore let vs ſee that we bee not bereft of ſuch a benefite by our owne lewdneſſe.

Now let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs feele them better than we haue done, ſo as we may be brought to true repentance, to mortify all our wicked luſtes, that wee may be wholy ſubiect vnto him, deſiring nothing but to pleaſe him in al reſpects, and to lead our liues according to his holy commaundementes: and that although we be weake, yet wee may not ceaſe to goe foreward ſtill towardes our wayes end through his power, aſſuring our ſelues that hee will haue his hand continually ſtretched out ouer vs to ſtrengthen vs, vntill hee haue giuen vs full victorie ouer all aſſaultes, and finally taken vs vp into the glorie which hee hath promiſed vs in the kingdome of heauen. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth, &c.

On Tewſday the xxvij. of Auguſt. 1555.

The Lxij. Sermon, which is the firſt vpon the ninth Chapter.

HEarken O Iſrael, This day ſhalt thou goe ouer Iordan, to enter poſſeſſion vpon Nations greater and mightier than thy ſelfe, and vpon Cities that are houge and walled vp to heauen,

2 A people greate and tall, euen the children of the Enakims whome thou haſt knowen, and of whom thou haſt heard ſay, who is hee that can ſtand againſt the children of Enacke?

3 Knowe thou therefore this day, that the Lord thy God goeth before thee as a burning fire: he will deſtroy them and ſubdue them before thy face, he will driue them out and rid them away, as the Lord hath ſaid to thee.

4 And when the Lord thy God ſhall haue caſt them out before thy face: ſay not thou in thy heart, The Lord hath brought mee into this lande to poſſeſſe it, for my righteouſneſſe ſake: for the Lorde hath driuen out theſe Nations before thy face for their wickedneſſe.

5 It is not through thine owne righteouſneſſe or for the rightneſſe of thy heart, that thou art come to the poſſeſſion of their Land. But for the wickedneſſe of thoſe nations, hath the Lord thy God driuen them out before thy face: and to performe the word which the Lord thy God ſware to thy fathers Abraham, Iſaak, and Iacob.

6 Knowe thou therefore that it is not for thine owne righteouſneſſe that the Lorde thy God hath giuen thee this good land to poſſeſſe: for thou art a ſtifnecked people.

WE haue two extreme vices in vs. The one is that if God promiſe vs any thing, and we find it hard: we bee vtterly diſmayed, & to our ſeeming there is no way for God to performe the thing that he hath ſpoken: wherein we deface his power, and yeelde him not his due honor. For as ſoone as God hath ſayd the worde: although the thing ſeeme vtterly vnpoſſible: yet ought wee to conclude, that hee will finde meanes wel ynough to bring it to paſſe. And why? For his power is infinite and ought not to bee meaſured after our imagination. Therefore wee muſt glorify the Lorde, ſaying: Alas my God: in deed I am at my wits end in this caſe: but I leaue ỹ matter in thy hand, thou canſt worke after ſuch a faſhion as I cannot now comprehend. But in ſtead of honoring the Lord after that maner, wee bee full of douting and vnbeleefe, and fal to skanning whether God wil be as good as his worde or no. And if any let come in our way, wee thinke wee be diſappointed of our hope.

Pſal. 33.9.

Rom. 9.19. Iſa. 40.18.

Alſo there is another extremitie on the contrarie part: which is, ỹ when God hath brought thinges to paſſe, and matters are diſpatched, we father the doing of them vppon our ſelues, as though God were no body, and forgetting the perplexitie wherein wee were before, we beſotte our ſelues with fond ouerweening, to ſet out our owne prayſe. Thus is God robbed of his honor two wayes: and it is our maner of dealing in all caſes.

For as I ſayd, if wee thinke the thing to bee hard: wee perſwade our ſelues that it ſhall neuer come to paſſe: And when it is done, wee deface his working, and indeuour to take the prayſe of it to our ſelues, and we be ſo vnthankfull to him, that wee would haue him plucked out of his ſeate. For this cauſe Moſes maketh ſuch an exhortation here, as wherein hee reproueth both partes. For on the one ſide hee ſayth, Hearken, yee bee now at the point to enter into the lande that was promiſed you. Nowe I am ſure you will bee afraid: for ye muſt fight againſt great and ſtrong Nations, which doe farre ſurmount you euery way. It may bee therefore that yee will be diſmayed and out of hart, and thereupon turne head, ſo as ye ſhall be diſappointed of the heritage that God hath promiſed you. But plucke you vp a good courage in him, and aſſure your ſelues that it is through his power that you muſt conquere ỹ land of Chanaan, your God will be your guide:

and ye muſt vnderſtande that he is a deuouring fire, to conſume all your enimies. Therefore be not afraide for any thing that ye ſhal ſee, but aſſure your ſelues that the power of God paſſeth all capacitie of man. Now then, if you finde your ſelues abaſhed: ſtay, and let God goe through with his worke, and he will ſhewe that he can (without help of man) conſume all thoſe againſt whome he hath armed himſelfe in his wrath. Be mindfull therefore of the power of your God, & truſt thereunto, and be bolde to reſt vpon it. That is the firſt point which Moſes toucheth here, and it ſerueth to correct the ſaid diſtruſt withall, namely, that men looke no further but whether a thing be eaſie or no, & therupon conclude ſo fondly, that they make not ſuch account of God as they ought to do. Beware (ſaith Moſes) that yee imbace not the power of your God, through any imagination of vnbeeliefe.

And afterwarde he commeth to the ſeconde part, and telleth them that when God ſhall haue giuen them the vpper hande of their enimies, they muſt not boaſt themſelues of it, as though it proceeded of their owne worthineſſe, deſert, abilitie, power, or skill. And why? For God (ſaith he) will driue out thoſe nations becauſe of their wickedneſſe. And to confirme this withall, I haue tolde you alreadie heretofore, that determinate ſentence was concluded & giuen againſt thoſe nations, foure hundred yeares afore, and that God had taryed patiently for them, to ſee if there were any amendment and conuerſion. But when they continued hardharted ſtill, and that the miſchief increaſed more and more: was it not reaſon ỹ God ſhould execute his iudgement? Yes verily. So then the Iewes are warned that they ſhoulde not be puffed vp with any vaine ſelfeweening, as though they had beene worthie to bee placed in the land of Chanaan: but rather conſider that God executed his vengeance vpon thoſe nations for their euil life, & therefore that they which ſhoulde ſucceede them, ought to humble themſelues the more. And moreouer, that if they compared themſelues with their enimies, there was no cauſe why they ſhould thinke themſelues to haue the better caſe, or that they ought to be preferred before them: I ſay, there was no cauſe why they ſhould haue any ſuch conceit. For Moſes telleth them, that the couenant which God had made with their fathers, was concluded long afore any of them were borne: whereupon it followeth, that God had no reſpect to their deſertes. I haue tolde you moreouer that the ſame couenant was freebeſtowed: for it was not grounded vppon any ſeruice of men, but Gods intent therein was to ſet foorth his owne goodneſſe and mercie. Ye ſee then that the Iſraelites are bereft of al power and glorie, and that all worldly loftineſſe is here beaten downe, ſo as onely God muſt bee knowen to be good and righteous, and men are bounde to him in all caſes, inſomuch that they muſt keepe their mouthes ſhut, and not boaſt of their owne power or vertue, as though they were folke of good abilitie. That in effect is the thing that is treated of in the text which I haue rehearſed.

Gen. 15. 16.

And theſe two vices which Moſes rebuketh, reigned not onely at ſome one time: but they reigne ſtill at this day, and we haue them rooted in our nature. Therefore let vs marke well that this doctrine is directed to vs at this day, and that it behoueth vs to benefite our ſelues by it. So then, as touching the firſt point, let vs call to minde the leſſon that is ſhewed vs by the example of our father Abraham, when it is ſaide, that he beleeued beyond hope, giuing glorie to him that had made the promiſe, in beleeuing him to be able to bring the ſame to paſſe. Lo here a generall rule for all the faithfull: which is, that if they purpoſe to leane vnto Gods promiſes, they muſt not deeme of them after their owne witte and imagination: (for what a thing were that?) but they muſt aſſure themſelues that God hath meanes in his hande, which are vnknowen to them, and which they conceiue not, and that it is enough for them to haue his word, which is the infallible trueth. This reacheth verie farre: but it ſhall ſuffice for this preſent, to gather a ſhort ſumme of it. For when God calleth vs to him, if wee conſider but what wee our ſelues are: ſurely wee ſhalbee vtterly diſmayed. As for example, when God promiſed iſſue vnto Abraham, he was a man alreadie decayed and ſore broken, as well with age as with trauell that he had endured. His wife alſo was paſt the age of childbearing, and moreouer ſhe had beene barren all the time of her life: it might ſeeme then that God had mocked him in promiſing him iſſue. But what? hee had not an eye to his owne bodie which was forworne and broken with age, (as ſayeth Sainct Paul:) neither had hee an eye whether his wife were able to conceiue or no: but ſeeing that God had ſpoken the worde, hee reſted thereupon, aſſuring himſelfe that foraſmuch as God is faithfull, he ſhoulde not be diſappointed in truſting vnto him. And after the ſame maner muſt wee deale, ſeeing wee haue ſo faire a looking glaſſe. For (as I ſaide) if wee haue an eye to our owne frailtie: in reſpect of our bodies wee be but carions and rottenneſſe: and yet doth God promiſe vs the glorie of his euerlaſting kingdome. Doth the thing ſeeme poſſible to vs? yet then we faile of our duetie euery minute of an houre: and yet doth God promiſe vs ſuch ſtrength as ſhall get the vpper hande of the whole worlde. Let Satan do the worſt he can, and let al the powers of hell imbattell themſelues againſt vs: and yet ſhall wee neuer be ouercome. Where nowe ſhall wee finde this ſtrength? So then it may ſeeme that GOD dalyeth with vs, when hee promiſeth vs the things which we cannot conceiue, ne reache vnto by our owne vnderſtanding. But what? Wee muſt mount vp higher, and wee muſt ſubmit our ſelues to him with ſuch humilitie and ſubiection, as to acknowledge that he is able to performe his promiſe towardes vs in all things whatſoeuer he hath ſpoken. And how? We knowe not that: that paſſeth our capacitie: but let vs haue our eye vppon God. For

Rom. 4. 18. 20. 21.

the chiefe honour that he requireth at our hãds,
1.Sa.15.22. and the verie ſacrifice that hee requireth, is that wee ſhoulde acknowledge his worde to bee the verie vndouted trueth, notwithſtanding that our wit and imagination tell vs the cleane contra-
Abac.2.1. rie. And that is the cauſe why the Prophet Abacucke ſayeth that hee will goe vp into his tower to keepe watche. When the caſe concerneth faith, wee muſt not ſtay here beneath vpon the earth, neither muſt wee looke but before our noſes as they ſaye: but we muſt learne to goe vp into our tower, that is to ſaye, to diſcharge our ſelues of all worldly incumbrances, and to conſider, that if wee haue not pitched Hebr.6.19. our anker in heauen as the Apoſtle ſayeth, wee ſhalbee toſſed with ſuch ſtormes and whirlewindes, as will ſwallowe vs vp. Looke mee vpon them that ſayle on the ſea. If they ſpye a ſtorme, they caſt Anker, for that is their truſt. Though there come neuer ſo great waues, and although their veſſell bee weatherbeaten and driuen to and fro, yet doeth their Anker preſerue them. And hee vſeth this ſimilitude, to ſhewe vs that our ankerholde muſt reache vp into heauen, and that wee muſt conclude boldly, that Gods ſaying of the worde is ynough. For hee is not variable as mortall men are. Againe, hee is not lauiſh in promiſing fondly, without knowing whether hee bee able to perfourme or no. But if hee ſpeake a thing and perfourme it not out of hande: let vs aſſure our ſelues that his meaning is to humble vs thereby, though we conceiue not his dealings. And therefore let vs remember at one worde, that wee muſt take God for our guyde and leader all our life long. If wee be weake, let vs leane vnto his ſtrength. If wee haue ſtrong and mightie enemies: let vs hope that beeing vnder the keeping and protection of our God, wee ſhalbee preſerued from all daunger, and our enemies ſhall not be able to do any thing againſt vs.

And nowe let vs applie this doctrine to our owne vſe two manner of wayes. For wee be aſſailed on all ſides in this worlde, both in body & in ſoule. Wee ſee what the Church of God is nowadayes: wee be but a ſmall handful of folke, and our enemies are a huge multitude: they ſeeme able ynough to eat vs vp at one bit: wee be like ſheepe without any ſtrength, and they bee like rauening wolues full of crueltie, they haue all the might and power of the worlde on their ſide. Thus yee ſee in what plight and taking the faithfull are at this day. Neuertheleſſe ſith wee heare that our Lorde broodeth vs vnder his winges, and wilbe the preſeruer of our life, aſſuring vs ỹ he wilbe both a wal a rampire and a dytche vnto vs: let vs truſt thereunto, and not doubt but hee will preſerue vs. Although the worlde practiſe what it can againſt vs, yet ſhall wee bee alwayes ſafe, ſo wee flee for refuge to our God, and grounde our ſelues vppon the Pſal.116.15. promiſe that hee hath made vs, which is, that both our life and our death are precious in his ſight. And that is the cauſe why Moſes vſeth this preface: Hearken O Iſrael. It is not a needeleſſe ſpeache: but foraſmuch as wee be tempted to vnbeleefe, and cannot holde our ſelues to God and ſticke to his promiſes, becauſe the combrances of this worlde haue gotten the vpper hand of vs alreadie: therefore doth God exhort vs to harken to his worde, and hee wakeneth vs vp, to the ende wee ſhoulde not lye ſtill aſleepe, but vnderſtande, that hee is able to ouercome all the daungers wherwith wee be beſotted and aſſayled in this worlde. Now then, as concerning our worldly enemies, which practiſe the deſtruction of our bodyes: let vs not dout but God is able to withſtande them. Againe, there is the diuel, there are infinite temptations, and wee haue warre euery man within him ſelf, ſo as ſinne dwelleth in vs which Rom.7.5. is the worſt and deadlieſt enemie that we haue. But yet let vs not doubt but wee ſhall wellynough wade out, ſeeing it is ſayde that God will be our leader. For although our ſtrength be weake or rather none at all: yet will God reach vs his hande, ſo as wee ſhalbee vnuanquiſhable. And when it ſeemeth that wee ſhoulde bee vtterly ouerthrowen: wee ſhalbee helde vp by the power of our God. Therfore let vs put our truſt in him: let vs reſt vppon his promiſe: and let vs not be afrayde that wee ſhalbee deceiued. On the contrarie parte wee cannot truſt to our ſelues (bee it neuer ſo little): but God will laugh ſuch ouerweening to ſkorne: inſomuch that if wee put our truſt in creatures, wee muſt Pſal.62.10. needes bee deceiued and beguyled. But if the caſe concerne the yeelding of glory vnto God: let vs not bee afrayde, that our boldneſſe ſhall turne vs to ſhame, as the Scripture ſaieth in a number of places.

And Moſes plainly ſayeth here, that God will be their leader, yea, and euen as a conſuming fire to deſtroy all thinges that ſhalbee againſt them. This is not added without cauſe. For when wee be diſpoſed to further our owne fearefulneſſe, wee exalt the power of our enemies aboue meaſure, and of little dwarfes wee make Gyants. And what will wee doe then, when our enemies be tall and ſtrong in deede? Wee wilbe much more aſtoniſhed at them. But yet doeth Moſes tell vs here, that wee muſt not feede ſuch doutes and diſtruſtes. And for the ſame cauſe hee vſeth this ſimilitude, that Gods fighting for vs ſhall not bee after the common faſhion: but that hee wilbee as a fire to deuoure all. Albeit then that wee haue neither ſworde, ſpeare, gunne, nor other artillerie: yet let it ſuffiſe vs to knowe, that God hath meanes ynough to helpe vs withall, which wee knowe not of. And becauſe this cannot bee ſo wel expreſſed as were requiſite: hee ſayeth that if wee ſee a fire, wee knowe it is able to burne vp a foreſt, a citie, or a whole countrie: and therefore wee ought not to dout, but that God is ſtrong ynough for our enemies, ſeeing hee is a conſuming fire. So likewiſe, when Dauid intendeth to comfort himſelfe in the middeſt of his greateſt troubles, ſo as hee ſeemeth to be hemmed in on all ſydes, and readie to be ſwallowed vp into the gulfes of hel, we heare how he oftentimes ſayeth that God is a conſuming fire, & aſſureth himſelfe Pſal.83.15.

that all they which ſet themſelues after that faſhion againſt him, ſhalbe conſumed thereof, and they that conſpire his death ſhalbe deuowred of that fire which conſumeth all things. After this maner muſt we put this ſaying of Moſes in practiſe. And from hence hath Dauid drawen his ſaide doctrine, as from the fountaine that ſerued all the other Prophets to gather right comfort of, wherewith to reſiſt and ouercome all the troubles that coulde befall them: and the ſame alſo is the cauſe why Moſes declareth that God is a conſuming fire to diſpatche all the enimies of his people. Alſo Dauid fleeth therunto for refuge, whenſoeuer hee ſeeth great armies imbattled againſt him, ſo as he is as a man paſt hope [of victorie,] and is as good as baniſhed out of his owne countrie, yea and moreouer there are ſo manie that practiſe his deſtruction, that he is vexed out of all meaſure. Yee ſee then that he is as a wretched man in vtter extremitie, and as a ſilie creature paſt hope of recouerie: and yet for all that, hee ceaſſeth not to make his boaſt, that hee will neuer bee afrayd as long as hee hath God on his ſide. And after the ſame manner doeth Sainct Paul conclude: If God bee on our ſide, who ſhalbe againſt vs? Not that wee ſhall not haue ſtore of enimies: but that they ſhall not bee able to preuayle againſt vs. They ſhall make their triumphes aforehande, but the victorie ſhall goe with vs, if wee haue God for our defence. Nowe wee ſee the reaſon of this ſimilitude. In the fourth Chapter of this booke Moſes vſed the like ſaying, but it was to another purpoſe. For there his meaning was to ſtirre vp the people to feare and warineſſe. And in deede wee haue neede to knowe that God is a conſuming fire two wayes. The one is the ſame that wee haue ſeene in the fourth chapiter, which is alſo alleaged by the Apoſtle in the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes, who expoundeth this text faithfully, ſaying: My friendes, it is a dreadfull thing to fall into the handes of the liuing God: let vs beware howe wee dally with ſuch a Lorde, and let vs receiue his worde with all reuerence, or elſe wee ſhall finde therein that God is a fire to conſume vs. In deed when God commeth to vs and calleth vs vnto him, hee allureth vs graciouſly, and hee ſheweth vs all manner of gentleneſſe and fatherly louing kindneſſe. But yet howſoeuer he deale, his meaning is not that men ſhould abuſe his goodneſſe, as we ſee theſe ſcorners do. of whō there is euer too great ſtore. We ſee a nūber of ſcorners in theſe days which skoffe at Gods worde, bearing themſelues on hande, that he which reigneth in heauen, hath no authoritie ouer them. They ouerſhoote themſelues with deſperate malapertneſſe, and bewray themſelues to haue no more religion than dogs, & yet they perſwade themſelues that they may mocke with God after that faſhion in al matters, & yet notwithſtanding that they ſhall skape vnpunished. Now foraſmuch as men are ſo thankleſſe, & do ſet vp their helliſh briſtles againſt god to deſpiſe his goodnes, it is ſaide, that they ſhall feele him to be a conſuming fire. Although hee ſhewe himſelfe a father, & auowe vs to be as his children, ſo as he will hold vs & nouriſh vs in his lappe, of purpoſe that we ſhould behaue our ſelues mildly towardes him, & yeld him his due honor and loue: yet if we abuſe his gracious fauour, ſo as we yeeld him no reuerence nor ſubiection: then in ſteed of feeling his fatherly louing kindneſſe, wee ſhall finde him a conſuming fire to deuour vs. Thus yee ſee howe wee muſt firſt of all take holde of that which Moſes ſayeth here, to the intent wee may liue in awe, feare, and humilitie, and alwayes holde our ſelues vnder the yoke and obedience of him that hath adopted vs, and be true children towardes him as he is a father towardes vs.

Rom.8.29.

Hebr.12.29

Howbeit let vs marke herewithall, that he is a conſuming fire to deuour our enemies. When wee ſee our enemies threaten vs, and that they become proude and ſtately againſt vs, ſo as it may ſeeme that they ſhoulde deſtroy vs with their onely lookes: let vs take holde of Gods power to comfort vs in all our afflictions, and let vs conſider that it is ynough for vs that God is a conſuming fire. Thus ye ſee howe we muſt apply this doctrine to double vſe: firſt, that it may bee as a brydle to holde vs in awe and ſubiection vnder our God: and ſecondly that it may bee as a bulwarke to outſtande all temptations. When wee bee ſtriken in feare, becauſe wee heare that our enemies doe practiſe all that euer they can againſt vs: and that it is in their hande to ouerthrowe vs and deſtroy vs: yet let vs come ſtill backe to this point and ſay, Well then, and what ſhall our God doe? Thinke wee that he ſitteth ydle in heauen? In deede it may well bee that for a time hee will ſuffer vs to bee vexed, and to haue our neckes vnder the ſworde, and to bee as ſilly ſheepe led to the ſlaughter: but yet for all that, our life is precious in his ſight, becauſe hee hath choſen vs to bee his heritage. And although hee ſuffer vs to bee troubled for a time: yet in the ende hee will make vs to perceiue that hee was alwayes at hande with vs, ſo as wee ſhall haue continuall cauſe to glorifie him, ſpecially when wee ſhall ſee that hee ſhall haue ouerthrowen all thoſe which now haue their whole ſwindge againſt vs, in compariſon of whom wee be nothing at all. Thus much concerning the ſaying wherein God is called a conſuming fire.

Now Moſes commeth to the ſeconde matter which wee haue touched, which ought to be wel marked: namely, that when God hath helped & ſuccoured vs, and done more for vs than wee looked for, or than our witte could conceiue: we muſt yeeld him his deſerued glorie, ſo as wee be not ſotted with pride and ouerweening, to challengde that to our ſelues which belongeth alonly vnto God: let vs beware of ſuch vnthankfulneſſe. Againe, let vs not imagine that God ſerueth his turne by vs, in reſpect of any worthineſſe of ours: but let vs vnderſtand that his chooſing of vs is onely in reſpect of his owne good will. Wee ſhall not finde any deſeruing at all in our ſelues in this behalfe: but it is of his onely free mercie, which hee will haue vs to magnifie aboue all things.

True it is, that Moſes ſpeaketh here of the lande of Chanaan. But if men cannot deſerue any thing in this worlde in reſpect of tranſitorie things: howe ſhall they deſerue euerlaſting life? If I cannot winne a little peece of grounde: how ſhall I winne a whole realme? So then, let vs marke that of the things that are ſayd here, wee muſt gather a generall doctrine, which is, that if the children of Iſrael were put in poſſeſſion of the lande that had beene promiſed them, not for their owne righteouſneſſe ſake, but through Gods free goodneſſe: it is much more reaſon that when we ſpeake of the heauenly life, and of the inheritance of the heauenly glorie, wee ſhoulde not dreame vppon any power of our owne, but acknowledge that God hath vttered his righteouſneſſe and ſhewed his goodneſſe in his vouchſafing to chooſe vs. And let vs marke well the argumentes and reaſons which Moſes alleageth here, to pull downe all pride withall, that men might not take occaſion to vaunt themſelues. God (ſayeth hee) hath driuen out theſe people before you. That is one point. So then, wil wee bee rid of all vaineglorie? Let vs beholde our ſelues aduiſedly in thoſe whome God puniſheth, and againſt whome he vſeth his extreme rigour. Are wee any better than they? In deede a number of vs can well flatter our ſelues: but yet wee recken without our hoſte, wee come all of Adams corrupt raſe, wee be all forlorne and damned by nature. What is to be done then? Surely if wee conſider well what wee bee: it will ſuffice to beate downe all our preſumption. It is ſaide in the prouerbe, that hee which knoweth himſelfe beſt, ſettes leaſt by himſelfe: but it is ill put in vre. And wee muſt not ſaye, hee ſetteth little by himſelfe: but wee muſt paſſe yet farther: namely, that hee which knoweth himſelfe well, may ſet nothing at all by himſelfe, but rather vtterly abaſe himſelfe, and bee vtterly aſhamed of himſelfe. And here yee ſee what the true knowledge of a mans ſelfe is. Humilitie or lowlineſſe is not a counterfaiting to doe little before God, or to vſe ſome niſe ceremonies: but a through examining and ſifting of a mans ſelfe, ſo as hee acknowledge that there is neither wiſedome, power, righteouſneſſe, nor aught elſe in him, whereof hee may boaſt: but rather conſider on the contrarie parte, that wee bee full of vanitie, leaſing, and vnfaithfulneſſe, that wee bee vnruly and rebellious againſt God, that wee bee fraught full of wicked luſtes, that there is a ſea of all naughtineſſe in vs, and that the faireſt ſhewe of vertue which wee haue, is but filth and dung before God. Lo howe the Scripture ſpeaketh of vs: lo howe it blazeth our armes. Nowe therefore, when men haue well conſidered themſelues: they muſt make this compariſon. Alas, I ſee Gods wrath lye vppon ſuch a man or ſuch a woman, yea and vppon ſuch great and excellent nations. Wee ſee a great number nowadayes which are farre off from the light of life, whereas in the meane while the Goſpell is preached vnto vs, and the way into Gods kingdome is ſet open vnto vs. And yet for all this, are wee better worthie of it than they? Wherein? Let vs looke a little vppon our owne deſeruinges, and let vs alledge all that is poſſible to bee deuiſed. Why then doeth God preferre vs before them? Becauſe it pleaſeth him ſo to doe. So then, looke howe many wretched caſtawayes wee ſee ſtraying away from God, and looke how many ſilly ſoules wee ſee puniſhed at Gods hande: let them all bee as lookingglaſſes for vs to behold our ſelues in, and to make vs conclude, that if God lifted to ſhewe himſelfe a iudge in handling vs after our deſertes, wee ſhoulde bee no more ſpared than they bee, and that our ſtanding is through his free goodneſſe, in aſmuch as hee beareth with vs, and vouchſafeth to ſhewe himſelfe fauourable. Lo what light wee ought to take at Gods mercie towardes vs, when wee ſee his vengeance vppon the vnbeleeuers and rebelles, accordingly alſo as Saint Paul telleth vs in the Epiſtle to the Romanes, that we ſhoulde be vtterly damned with the wicked, if God ſpared vs not of his owne free goodneſſe. And that is ſaide vnto vs to the intent wee ſhoulde not take any fonde conceit in our ſelues, that might puffe vs vp and make vs drunken. For if wee giue not God the glorie, acknowledging his goodneſſe to be the thing that wee reſt vppon: ſurely hee muſt needes make vs feele to our coſt, that wee bee not worthie to finde ſuch mercie and fauour at his hande. Thus yee ſee why Moſes tolde the Iewes, that the Chananites & their neighbours ſhoulde bee deſtroyed at Gods hande for their ſinnes ſake. Well then, the Iewes might haue replyed at the firſt bluſh, If God puniſh them becauſe of their ſinnes: his putting of vs in their place, is a token that hee findeth vs to bee better and righteouſer than them. It is not ſo. For Moſes declareth, that Gods chooſing of the Iewes (as ſhalbee ſhewed more fully hereafter) was not for that they were worthier: for they were much more incorrigible than thoſe nations: and yet did God chooſe them. Now then, let vs learne to profite our ſelues by all the chaſticementes which wee ſee, and which God ſheweth vs in this worlde. And foraſmuch as the blowes light not vppon our ſelues, let vs not forbeare to come to his ſchoole and to humble our ſelues vnto him. For wee haue deſerued to bee touched as roughly by God, as they haue done which are damned. But what? As I ſaide afore, he beareth with vs. That is the firſt argument.

Pſal.62.10. & Luk.16.15 & Ro.8.6,7.

Rom.2.2.& 4.9.29.

The ſeconde is this: When the Lord ſhall haue driuen out the people before thee. Here Moſes cutteth off all the fonde bragges wherewith men deceiue themſelues. As howe? If wee had not played the tall fellowes in fighting manfully againſt our enemies, what had become of vs? We had ſtrong enemies, they were mightie and puiſſant, they had huge fortreſſes and munitions, they were tall of ſtature like Gyants, and wee were but dwarfes in compariſon of them: and therefore it ſtoode vs on bande to plucke vp a ſtout courage. Moſes wypeth away all this, ſaying: Ye ſilly ſoules, it is your God that fought for you, it was not your ſelues. So then, let vs learne learne, that although God vſe our ſeruice, and wee ſeeme to do ſomewhat: yet the work is not ours, it is alwayes his that worketh it by vs, and which breatheth his ſecrete power into vs. Wee haue nothing of our owne, whereof wee may boaſt, but God muſt alwayes be acknowledged to bee the author of his owne. This is the ſeconde reaſon which Moſes alleageth here, to teach the people that they ſhould not be proud, nor beleeue marueilouſly of their owne power, ſo as they ſhoulde ſay, I haue done this or that, I haue brought this or that to paſſe. No (ſayeth he) thy God is he that driueth out nations, and rooteth them out.

Nowe if this were ſaide of temporall enemies: what is to be ſayde of Satan, and of the enemies of our ſoules? Are wee able to ouercome them? Will the bringing of our owne free will, our merites, and our good workes bee able to ouercome the diuel, the worlde, death it ſelfe, and hell? No, but the blinde wretches are well apayd that they may bee deceiued in bearing themſelues in hande that they can do much, & that they be verie able folke. Yet notwithſtanding, they bee diſgraced heere by the holye Ghoſt, and it is tolde vs that nothing wee be, ne nothing can do of our ſelues: but that all ỹ good which wee do commeth of God, and it is he that doeth it in vs. Phil.2.13. For if a man cannot ſtirre one finger towardes the ſauing of this tranſitorie liſe: can he ſaue his ſoule vnto the kingdome of heauen? If a man cannot doe any thing againſt his aduerſarie which is a mortall and fraile creature as well as himſelfe: howe ſhal he ouercome the worlde, and all the diuels in hell? So then, let vs learne to deceiue our ſelues no more with theſe fonde imaginations, in thinking our ſelues to haue free will to doe this and that: but let vs knowe that if God reache vs his hand, then ſhall wee be able to ſtand through him & not through our ſelues. Saint Paul glorieth ſufficiently: but howe is that? I can doe all thinges (ſayeth hee) Phil.4.13. through Ieſus Chriſt which ſtrengtheneth mee. He ſayeth he can doe all thinges: and by that meane he defyeth the diuell, (which maner of boldneſſe wee ſee he vſeth chiefely in the Epiſtle to the Philippians:) but yet he reſerueth nothing to himſelfe. He ſayeth that he is ſtrengthened by Ieſus Chriſt. Then if wee be ſtrengthened from aboue: wee ſhall get the vpper hande: But yet (as I ſayd) wee muſt alwayes acknowledge how it is God that ſtrengtheneth vs, and that it is in him and by him that wee ſtande out and get the victorie.

The thirde reaſon that Moſes alleageth is this: that God in ſetting his people in poſſeſſion of the promiſed lande, had an eye to the promiſe which he had made and ſworne to Abraham, Iſaac, & Iacob. Hereby the Iewes are put in minde, that God choſe them not as more worthie, more noble, & more excellent than other men, as hath beene ſhewed alreadie: but becauſe hee had made promiſe to their forefathers. But nowe let vs ſee what cauſe moued and led God to giue this lande to Abraham and to his ſeede. If he had had an eye to mans worthineſſe: Abraham deſerued much more than any other, to haue beene ſet in poſſeſſion of that lande. And yet contrariwiſe, his dwelling there was but as a ſtranger, he was driuen out of it, and hee was ſo farre off from hauing of it at his commaundement, that he was Heb.11.9. kept euen from water, not onely when he would haue borowed it at other mennes pittes, but alſo when he had digged pittes by his owne labour: both hee and his ſucceſſours were driuen from Gen.21.25. them. Lo how the holy Patriarches were toſſed too and fro, and how men mocked them & did them many outrages & wrongs, and of all that while they had not one foote of grounde more than a burying place. In ſo much that at length, Iacob was driuen to pay for the grounde where Gen.32.18. & 33.19. & he lodged and pitched his tents: and finally con- 46.1. ſtrayned to goe into the lande of Egypt, by reaſon of dearth which draue him out of the lande of Chanaan. Now ſeeing that the holie fathers were not putte in poſſeſſion of it during their liues: ſhall wee ſay that their poſteritie were worthier than they? No: it followeth then that Gods couenãt was merely of free gift, and that he had no reſpect to any deſertes of mẽ. And why? Becauſe he loued that people. Wee muſt not aske whether he founde any vertue in them or no: but it muſt ſuffice vs that hee liſted to magnifie his mercie. As if he ſhould ſay, I ſeek no cauſe in men to doe them good. But I find it in my ſelfe. For of men that are worthie to bee vtterly reiected, I chooſe out ſome and take them to bee my children, to the intent they ſhoulde giue mee all the prayſe thereof. That is the thing which Moſes had an eye vnto, in alleaging the couenant which God had made with their fathers. Nowe wee knowe (as I ſaid afore) that this couenant was made before theſe people were borne. They could not ſay that God regarded what they were, as ſome phantaſticall perſons do, which ſay that God foreſawe what men woulde be. If he doe but foreſee: ſurely he ſhall finde vs all diuels, that is to ſay vnhappie and curſed creatures, full of all wickedneſſe, and ſuch as haue nothing but vtter abhomination in vs. Thoſe are the thinges that God ſhall finde in vs, if he doe but foreſee. Nay, if he wil haue vs good: he him ſelfe muſt frame vs thereto: for wee bee his workemanſhip as ſayeth Saint Eph.2.10. Paul in the ſeconde to the Epheſians. And the ſame is alſo expreſſed plainly in the foureſcore and fifteenth Pſalme, where it is ſayde Pſal.95.6. that it is he that made vs. And Dauid in that place ſpeaketh not of Gods firſt creating of vs, when wee were ſet into the worlde as his creatures: but hee meaneth it of his reforming of vs by his grace. Nowe then, if God did but foreſee things: then ſawe he nothing in vs but vtter rebellion and wickedneſſe. To bee ſhort wee bee damnable in all reſpects, and heires of endleſſe death. And therefore if hee choſe vs before wee had done either good or euill: it was to magnifie his owne grace, as Saint Paul declareth in the nyenth to the Romanes. Rom.9.11. And ſo yee may ſee what Moſes telleth vs here.

But nowe muſt wee come backe againe to the ſayde compariſon that I touched afore: which is, that if God woulde haue the ſaide couenant which hee made concerning the lande of Chanaan and the temporal ſucceſſion, to bee knowen to be of his free goodneſſe: it is much more reaſon, that when he calleth vs to be heires of his kingdome, and ſheweth him ſelfe to bee our God and Sauiour, his goodneſſe ſhoulde haue the higheſt degree, and all reſpectes of deſeruing be layde awaye, ſo as men ſhoulde not imagine themſelues to haue I wote not what power of their owne to preuent Gods goodneſſe. Then let vs marke well, that Gods calling of vs, and his vouchſafing to inlighten vs in the beliefe of his Goſpell: is becauſe he had choſen vs, not onely from our mothers wombes, but alſo before the worlde was created, yea, and becauſe it pleaſed him to haue vs and to take vs for his owne, euen before all eternitie. And ſo wee haue no cauſe to alleage any thing at all in our owne behalfe, but rather to bee aſhamed of our ſelues, that God may onely bee exalted, and haue all praiſe giuen vnto him. Furthermore let vs conſider well, that wee knowe not why God hath preferred vs before others: for it is only he that putteth a difference betwixt vs, as ſayth Saint Paul to the Corinthians. Who is he (ſaith Paul) that maketh thee to excell? And in deede God ſheweth vs matter ynough why hee ſhoulde altogether caſt vs downe, in ſo much that when the faithfull haue throughly examined what is in themſelues: they ſee nothing there but vtter wretchednesſe, and thoſe are they that knowe them ſelues beſt. What is the cauſe that a number become ſo proude? It is for that they keepe aloofe from God, and are ſo full of hypocriſie that they take vice to bee vertue, and (which woorſe is) doe ſooth themſelues in their vices, filth, and wretchednesſe. But the faithfull beeing well wakened, doe conſider what Gods iuſtice is. After they haue well examined themſelues, they haue an eye to their faultes, and without flattering of themſelues, they take Gods worde to them to diſcouer all the naughtineſſe in them, whereby they knowe howe to condemne themſelues in good earneſt, & they hinder not themſelues through any hypocriſie. Therefore when God commeth to the faithfull, they acknowledge their owne miſdeedes and hate them in their hearts. And when God hath reſourmed them, ſo as they feele that hee hath wrought in them by his holye Ghoſte: they father all vppon his free goodneſſe, knowing well that there is no thing in them woorthie to bee made account of.

1.Cor.4.7.

And let vs marke herewithall, that ſith our Lorde vouchſafed to keepe the couenaunt which hee ſware to the holy Patriarches: wee neede not to dout but that hee will keepe and performe the promiſe at this day, whereby he hath willingly bounde himſelfe vnto vs. The worde Sweare is ſet downe, becauſe God conſidering mennes frailtie, thinkes it not ynough to make them a ſingle promiſe, as I haue tolde you heretofore: but alſo hath vouchſafed to ſweare, that they might haue the better warrant to reſt vppon him and vppon his ſayinges. In deede God ought to bee heard and obeyed, though hee giue but his bare worde: but yet he condeſcendeth to our infirmitie, and ſo hath hee vouchſafed to doe euen from the beginning, ſo as hee hath not thought it ynough to giue vs his bare worde, but hee hath alſo warranted it with a ſolemne othe. Wherefore, if in theſe dayes there riſe any dout concerning our ſaluation, yea, or but euen concerning this tranſitorie life: if wee dout what ſhall become of vs: let vs haue an eye to his promiſes, aſſuring our ſelues that they bee warranted to the vttermoſt, to the intent wee ſhoulde haue no cauſe to caſt any dout of them at all. Beholde our God ſweareth, and yet wee charge him with vnfaithfulneſſe: yea, and wee accuſe him, not onely of vntrueth, but alſo of trecherie, yea, and euen of periurie: and what a diueliſh blaſphemie is that? So then, let vs learne to ſticke to the promiſes that are ſo well warranted vnto vs, vnleſſe wee will bee blamed for blaſpheming God after that faſhion.

And let vs marke moreouer, that if he haue kept the promiſe which hee made to Abraham, who was but a poore mortall man, and confirmed the ſame to Iſaac and Iacob, who were but weake creatures though they had receiued neuer ſo excellent giftes of grace: wee may much better truſt that hee will not fayle vs in the couenant which hee hath made with vs, by the hande of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt the king of glorie and head of Angels, which is the fountayne of all righteouſneſſe and holineſſe. Hebr.8.6.

So then, wee ſee howe this doctrine belongeth vnto vs, at leaſtwiſe, if wee ſtop not our eares, and forſake not the thinges that are offered vs through the great bountifulneſſe of our God, as wee ſee the moſte parte of the worlde doeth nowadayes, ſeeking altogither to blinde their owne eyes, that they might not knowe any whit at all of the thinges that are tolde them concerning Gods promiſes. Let a man call them to the Goſpell, let him ſhewe them the way of ſaluation, and they wote not what it meaneth, they take no taſte of it. And why? Becauſe ſome of them bee traytours and hypocrites, ſome be open deſpiſers of Gods maieſtie, and otherſome bee ſo forepoſſeſſed of their owne wicked affections, as they will not giue any eare vnto God, nor ſuffer him to haue any entrance in vnto them. But as for vs, let vs looke that wee ſubmit our ſelues willingly to his ſayings, and receiue his worde with awe and reuerence, and bee readie to fight vnder the Enſigne of our Captaine Ieſus Chriſt, in reſiſting all the temptations of this worlde ſtoutly, and in ridding awaye of all our wicked luſtes.

And in ſo dooing, let vs not dout but that as GOD adopted vs before wee were borne, and choſe vs of his owne mercie, and hath called vs to his Goſpel, and receiueth vs preſently into his protection: ſo in the ende hee will bring vs to his euerlaſting inheritaunce, to

enioye the endeleſſe glorie which hee hath promiſed vs.

Nowe lette vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good GOD with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to vouchſafe ſo to cleanſe vs of them, as wee may bee ledde to true repentaunce, and learne to miſlike more of our ſelues than we haue done, that wee may hate the ſinnes whereby we prouoke him to diſpleaſure, and hee ſo arme vs with his ſtrength as wee quayle not: and againe that foraſmuch as this life is a continuall battell, we may not be ſlothfull nor fall aſleepe, but euerie man indeuor to make the ſtrength of the holy Ghoſt auayleable vnto him, ſo as it may make vs to get the vpper hande of all our ghoſtly enemies, euen vntill GOD haue taken vs hence into his reſt. That it may pleaſe him to grant this grace not only to vs but alſo to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Wedneſday the xxviii of Auguſt. 1555.

The Lxiij. Sermon which is the ſeconde vpon the ninth Chapter.

6 Knowe ye therefore &c.

7 Remember and forget not that thou diddeſt anger the Lord thy God in the wilderneſſe. Euen from the day that yee came out of the land of Egypt, vnto the time that you came vnto this place, you haue rebelled againſt the Lord.

WE haue ſeene already yeſterday, howe Moſes warned the people that they ſhoulde not boaſt of themſelues when they were come into the Lande of promiſe: and howe hee tolde them that they had not obtained that benefite for their owne deſertes, but through Gods meere grace and goodneſſe. Wee haue ſeene the three reaſons that he alleaged for the ſame. Howebeit for as much as it is harde to bring men to humilitie, ſo as they may knowe themſelues as they be in deede, and bee vtterly aſhamed of themſelues, not attributing any thing to their owne power, but depending altogether vpon Gods free mercie: Moſes addeth a plaine demonſtration and ſayeth: If ye alleadge your owne worthineſſe and deſertes: Ye be a ſtiffenecked people, euen ſuch a one as can not bowe vnder the yoke and obedience of your GOD. Whereby it appeareth that you bee not worthie to bee choſen of your GOD, or to haue ſuch an heritage allotted you, or to bee preferred before other nations, foraſmuch as ye haue not beene any better than they. And he rehearſed the thinges that were yet freſh in remembrance and the rebellions which they had committed in the wilderneſſe, concluding thereupon that they were the leſſe to bee excuſed, becauſe they had forgotten the miracles which GOD had wrought in deliuering them from the bondage of Egypt: for that made their ſinne the haynouſer. Remember therefore (ſayeth hee) howe yee prouoked God to wrath, whyle yee were in the wilderneſſe. And he addeth that the people did it not for once onely: but that they went on ſtill from euill to worſe, and neuer ceaſed their hardening of themſelues in their wilfulneſſe: and therefore they deſerued full well to be vtterly cutte off. And ſo wee muſt needes conclude, that GOD vſed exceeding greate mercie, in that he reſerued that people to himſelfe, and brought them into their promiſed heritage, and that he gaue them the inioying and poſſeſſion thereof of his owne meere goodneſſe. That is the effect of the thing that is conteined here.

Nowe wee haue to note firſt of all, that men will neuer come to confeſſe their faultes and to humble themſelues, vntill they bee conuicted, to their faces: I ſay till they be conuicted, as an offender that is arrained at the baire. For as wee ſee that offenders doe ſhameleſſely denie the faultes that they haue committed, as farre as they can: euen ſo doe all men deale when they be cited before GOD: they doe alwayes ſhrinke backe, and vſe fonde excuſes, rather than openly ſtande to the deniall of it. The knitting vp of the matter is, that they neuer ſerue him but by conſtraynte. That is the cauſe why GOD diſcouereth our leaudeneſſe to make vs aſhamed of it. For if hee ſhoulde not vſe vs after that ſorte, he ſhoulde neuer compaſſe vs to make vs to ſtoope. For firſt wee be combered with pride, and ſecondely wee be blinded with hypocriſie. And therefore foraſmuch as men are ſo high minded, that they can not finde in their hearres to bee acknowen of their owne wretchedneſſe: and therewithall ſo beſotted, that they flatter themſelues in their owne ſinnes: it is requiſite that GOD ſhoulde bring them to it after ſuch manner as wee ſee heere, ſo as he ſhoulde arraigne them and lay their faultes afore them. For men doe not onely endeuour to iuſtifie themſelues, but alſo proceede ſo farre, as euen to accuſe God. And that is the cauſe why he ſayeth by his prophete Eſaie, Well then, let vs goe to lawe together, and let there be ſome vmper betwixt vs, to ſee who ſhall haue the better hande. True it is that God can not be ſubiect to any iudge or vmper, for his maieſtie can not beare it. But hee laugheth mens curſed ſtatelineſſe to ſcorne, in ỳ they repyne ſo againſt him, and would bring him downe (as it were to the barre) againſte them, to wee te who had the better caſe. God therefore in reſpect of ſuch preſumptuouſneſſe, ſayeth, I am contented to haue the matter debated and diſcuſſed, I will alleage my reaſons and you ſhall alleadge yours, and men ſhall diſcerne who hath the right and who hath the wrong. Nowe, hee ſpeaketh not after the ſame faſhion heere: but he telleth the people in one worde, that if they pretende any righteouſneſſe of their owne, he can well diſproue them. And for certainetie thereof, knowe yee (ſayeth Moſes) that yee bee a ſtiffenecked people.

Eſa. 43.26.

We ſee that this doctrine is more than needefull nowe adayes. For if euer men were puffed vppe with pride: if euer they were ſetled in hypocriſie: wee ſee it is nowe in theſe dayes. GOD is mocked with open mouth, and yet the wickeddeſt ſorte will needes be highlieſt exalted, and that no man ſhoulde bee ſo bolde as to open his lippes againſt them. So muche the more therefore hath this doctrine neede to bee ſet foorth, that all loftineſſe may bee beaten downe, and no man preſume anie more to exalt him ſelfe: to that poynt muſt wee come.

Wee ſee that euen among the Papiſts, they that holde this opinion moſt, namely that men are iuſtified by their workes, are leaudeſt loſelles in all their conuerſation. Looke me vpon theſe hypocrites, and vppon all the doctors of poperie: when they intende to maintaine their owne merites, and that men are not iuſtified by fayth: they crie out with full throte and open mouth, What? Ought not Chriſtians to be a holy people ſanctified vnto God? And ought not the holie Ghoſte to gouerne vs? Ought we not to leade an Angelicall life? And yet for all this, yee ſhall ſee them to be whoremongers, drunkardes, periurers, traytours, full of vnfaithfulneſſe, guyle, and extortion, ſo as there ſhall not be one ſparke of feare towardes GOD, or of honeſtie towardes man in them. And yet notwithſtanding, they pretende to bee the earneſteſt defenders of merites, and the deuouteſt perſons that can be: inſomuch that to heare them, yee would thinke there were nothing but holineſſe in them, when as in the meane whyle their life is moſt deteſtable, and ſhamefull, as all the worlde may playnely ſee. But yet doe men deceiue themſelues after that faſhion. And for that cauſe hath Moſes ſette downe this text, not onely for his owne time, but alſo as a rule for vs to practiſe to the worldes ende.

Therefore when wee bee tempted with ouerweening, ſo as our fleſhe prouoketh vs to preſume I worte not howe to magnifie ourſelues: lette vs remember what is ſayde heere, [and let vs thinke thus with our ſelues:] Howe nowe? Conſider what thou arte, and howe thou haſt liued. If thou ſhouldeſt come to account before GOD, couldeſt thou go through with it? Conſidereſt thou not that thou arte one of the miſerableſt kaytifes in the worlde? And when thou goeſt about to aduaunce thyſelfe: is it not a robbing of GOD of his righteouſneſſe, that he might not be knowen to bee as he is in deede? Yes: For Gods righteouſneſſe can not otherwiſe ſhine foorth, vnleſſe we be vtterly confounded, ſo as we be condemned and hee onely iuſtified, and that wee acknowledge the ſame willingly. Hee then that will haue anie righteouſneſſe of his owne, doeth certainely defie GOD, and make warre againſt him. And therefore muſt wee haue an eye to this warning: How nowe? What is thy life? 'Art thou able to make aunſwere when thou ſhalt be cited to the iudgement ſeate of thy maker? And therewithall lette vs conſider howe it is ſayde, that for euerie poynte which wee bee able to alleadge for our ſelues, GOD is able to alleadge a thouſande againſt vs, ſo as we muſt needes be confounded. Thus yee ſee howe men ſhoulde be ledde to the conſidering of their liues, when they bee puffed vppe with any pryde, and bee deſirous to iuſtifie themſelues, that is to ſay, to chalendge anie deſerte or worthineſſe before GOD. And to make the Iewes vtterly condemned, Moſes telleth them expreſly that they were a ſtiffenecked people. This ſimilitude is taken of beaſtes that ſhoulde beare the yoke. For if they bee ſturdie and will not bowe their neckes to beare the yooke: they can doe a manne no ſeruice, they be vnprofitable: nay rather they do much harme in ſtriking with their hornes, they breake all thinges aſunder, and in ſteede of going forewarde, they drawe backe. In this reſpecte Moſes declareth in one worde, that ſtiffenecked folke can by no meanes bee taken for righteous.

And for the better vnderſtanding hereof, lette vs marke howe it is ſayde, that obedience is better than all the ſacrifices in the worlde. Then lette vs beare in minde, that if men will needes chalendge righteouſneſſe to themſelues, they muſt examine well whether they bowe downe their neckes to ſubmit themſelues wholely vnto God. For if they haue not that: all the reſt is nothing. They may well vaunt themſelues before men: but yet all their vertues are no better than dunge, vntill they bee come ſo farre as to beare Gods yoke, that is to ſay, to behaue themſelues according to his will, and t offer their life vnto him that hee may haue the ouer ruling of them, as hee lyſteth, ſo as they bee contented to obey him ſimplye and without exception. Thus yee ſee that our trewe righteouſneſſe is obe-

dience: yea and ſuch an obedience, as ſeeketh not to pleaſe mortall men, but the liuing God. And it is a point which we ought to marke well: for hereby the doctrine that I declared afore, is the better confirmed. Men doe alwayes ſurmiſe ſome meriting or deſeruing in themſelues at their owne pleaſure. When they will bee taken for holy and righteous, they haue their priuate deuotions, but in the meane while they make none account of beeing diſobedient to GOD. Contrariwiſe it is tolde vs heere, that God requireth nothing more than obedience. For all that euer we can bring him of our owne, is nothing: but he tryeth whether we loue him and honour him or no, by telling vs his will, and by laying as it were a bridle or a yooke vpon our neckes, as if he ſhoulde ſay: Bee plyable vnder mee, come not perking vp with your heades againſt mee, ſette not vppe your creſtes, ne playe not the wylde coltes: but diſpoſe your ſelues to order your liues according to my Lawes & commandements. That is the thing whereto GOD hath an eye. Not that he reapeth anie commoditie by vs, neither that wee can doe him anie harme: but becauſe it is a true proofe that wee bee willing to honour him, when wee ſuffer him to gouerne vs, and runne not euerie man vpon his owne heade, but leaue to him his dewe ſouerainetie and dominion, ſaying: Lorde we be thy poore cattell, directe thou vs according to thine owne will. For we haue neither witte nor reaſon in vs, our luſtes are vtterly frowarde. Nowe therefore reigne thou ouer vs O Lorde, and let thy lawe bee as a yooke and a bridle to vs. And it is the ſame thing alſo which hee meaneth by the ſentence that I alleadged out of the firſt of Samuel, namely that obedience is better than al the Sacrifices in the worlde. Alſo the ſame thing is confirmed by Ieremie, ſaying: When thy fathers cam out of Egypt, did I require ſacrifices or ſuch other thinges at their handes? In deede God commaunded ſacrifices: but yet the chiefe thing that hee required, was that they ſhoulde obey his voyce. The thing that God aimed at, the thing wherein all our righteouſneſſe conſiſteth, is to herken to his ſpeeche, that his authoritie may weye with vs, ſo as wee fall not to replying to bee wiſe of our ſelues, nor to doe what wee thinke good: but that hee onely may haue the maiſtrie, and wee no more but open our eares and be heedeful to receiue his doctrin, yea and to receiue it in ſuch wiſe as it may be as a yoke or bridle as I ſayde afore, and ouer rule vs without any gaineſaying. And heereby it appeareth, that if men bee not milde in ſubmitting themſelues wholely to Gods will: farewell all their honeſtie, their life is but leaude. For why? Whereas is nothing but diſobedience, there is not any righteouſnes, becauſe the foundation of all righteouſneſſe and of all good behauiour, is to bee reformed according to the good will of GOD. We muſt not bring our owne meeteyeard nor our owne meaſure in this behalfe: but onely GOD himſelfe muſt ſpeake and be the iudge to diſcerne betwene good and bad: for it is hee to whome it belongeth to acquit or condemne. And hee alloweth or diſalloweth what he himſelfe thinkes good: and there remayneth nothing for vs but to ſay Amen, by allowing whatſoeuer hee thinketh good, and by condemning whatſoeuer he miſliketh.

And Moſes thinkes it not enough to haue ſayde in one worde, Thou art a ſtiffenecked people: but he addeth therewithall, Remember and forgette not that thou diddeſt anger the Lorde thy God in the wilderneſſe, and howe many times ye haue diſobeyed him, from the day that hee brought yee out of the lande of Egypt, euen vnto this preſent time of his bringing of you vnto this place. Nowe whereas he ſayeth, Remember and forgette not: it ſerueth to quicken them vppe the better, becauſe men doe ſtill couer their miſſedeedes, and as ſoone as they finde neuer ſo little a ſhadowe, or peece of colour to ouerlay their offences withall: they doe but wring their mouthes awrye, and by and by they thinke themſelues verie righteous. Wee ſee howe it happened to our father Adam: it was no long time ere hee went to ſeeke figge leaues to couer himſelfe withal. But as ſoone as he hadde offended, and GOD rebuked him, and that hee felt his owne rebellion and diſobedience: what did hee? Whereas he ſhoulde haue come vnto GOD, and confeſſed his fault, that hee might haue obteined mercie and forgiueneſſe: he runnes among the leaues and beares himſelfe in hande that hee was wel couered, and that GOD ſhoulde ſee him no more, ſo he had ſome litle ſhadowe to hide himſelfe withall. We put the ſame ſtill in vre dayly: wee haue no ſooner committed anie faulte, but by and by we fall to ſhifting, and wee beate our braynes and wittes to finde out ſome lurkinghoole that GOD might not eſpye vs. To bee ſhorte, there is none of vs but hee makes a denne of theeues of his owne heart, vntill our Lorde doe touch him to the quicke, to bring vs to the ſimplicitie of acknowledgeing our faults. Nowe if we be ſo much inclined to diſguiſe ourſelues [out of hande,] by ſeeking ſhiftes and couertes to withſtande Gods vengeance: what will we doe in length of time? Will wee not vtterly forgoe the remembraunce of our ſinnes altogether? Yes: and that is the cauſe why Moſes ſayde, Remember thy ſelfe and forgette not. It hadde beene ynough for him to haue ſayde, Remember thy ſelfe. But foraſmuch as men doe what they can to rocke themſelues aſleepe, and ſeeke meanes to ſooth themſelues: Moſes doeth as it were twitch them by the eare heere, ſaying: Goe to ſirs, it is not for you to fall a ſleepe in this matter: although your nature be inclined thereto, yet muſt you not burie your ſinnes, but yee muſt beare them ſtill in minde, and ſette them before your eyes, and then ſhall yee haue cauſe ynough to humble yourſelues. Thus are we warned here, to bethinke vs oftentimes of the faultes that wee haue committed, and to beware that wee ſeeke not vaine colours, ne thinke not that wee haue ſpedde well, when wee haue founde ſome trifling ſhifte to iuſtifie our ſelues with all: but to learne to caſt our

ſelues vtterly downe, and to miſlike of ourſelues, and to bee as men condemned, ſo as there remayne none other ſhift for vs, than to flee for refuge to the infinite mercie of our GOD. That is the greateſt benefite that wee can deuiſe to worke to our ſelues, all our life long. But howe ſhall wee be brought to it? By the knowingof our faultes. Now then, in ſteede of ſhunning it as a matter of greefe, and whereas weebe loth to thinke vpon the offences that haue prouoked Gods wrath: let euerie of vs bethinke himſelfe of them early and late, and let vs enter into the examination of our ſelues, to ſay, Alas, howe haue I liued in this worlde? Againe, lette vs not thinke vppon other folkes faultes, to make a buckler of them as wee bee wont to doe: but let vs call all our owne life to minde, nowe one ſinne, and nowe an other, and let vs caſt foorth our ſighes and ſobbes before GOD as witneſſes that wee be not willing to beſot our ſelues, nor to burie our ſelues in our owne dunge by weltring in it: but rather that wee woulde faine attaine to his righteouſneſſe, as whoſe indeuour is to hate and abhorre our ſinnes, and to magnifie Gods grace towardes vs. Which thing can not bee doone, vnleſſe our ſinnes miſlike vs, and wee thinke thus with our ſelues: Wellthen, needes muſt GOD haue vſed greate goodneſſe towardes mee, ſeeing he hath called me at ſuch time as I was forlorne. Againe, ſince his calling of mee, howe oft haue I deſerued to bee ſhaken off, and to be quite cutte off from his Church? And yet for all that, hee beareth with mee vnto this houre, and continueth his goodneſſe towardes mee ſtill. Thus ye ſee howe wee muſt bethinke vs of our ſinnes, to the ende that Gods goodneſſe may be knowen, and that wee may not onelie taſte of it, but alſo be fully ſatisfied with it.

And furthermore, according to Saint Paules exhortation, which is, that euery man ſhoulde quicken and ſpurre vppe himſelfe, when he ſeeeth his fleſhe willing to drawe him to forgetfulneſſe: Let vs not thinke it ſtraunge, though it be ſome greefe to vs at the firſt to thinke vppon our ſinnes. For why? wee be inclined to the ſayde hypocriſie: but yet muſt we fight againſt it, and beware that wee feede it not. And ſo lette vs practiſe the thing that Moſes telleth vs here: which is, not to forget. As howe? not that we can alwayes minde it, as reaſon woulde wee ſhoulde: but that the deceiuer foade vs not in our owne vaine flatteries, ſo that although hee ſtoppe our eyes for a time, yet God doe take away the towell, and make vs to ſee our owne diſhoneſtie in open light, ſo as wee be aſhamed of it. And therefore, when wee bethinke vs of our ſinnes and offences, let vs looke into our
1.Cor.11.31 ſelues, and quicke our ſelues vp: for we muſt play the iudges towards our ſelues, if we will obtaine
Iosua 7.19. mercie before GOD. Yea and if we will yeelde him the dewe prayſe of his grace: wee muſt come to the acknowledgement of our ſinnes. And that muſt not be done for once onely, but euerie of vs muſt giue himſelfe to examination both euening and morning, and vpon the knowledge of one faulte, wee muſt goe to the ſifting out of an other. Trewe it is that in this caſe there is no meaſure, neither can we be too circumſpect. But yet muſt men miſlike of themſelues ſo farre, as to learne to glorifie GOD accordingly: that is to ſay, to reſerue no prayſe, at all to themſelues, no not one graines waight, but to yeelde all goodneſſe vnto him alone, and to acknowledge that there is nothing but euill in themſelues. Thus yee ſee whereunto the knowledge of our ſinnes ought to leade vs. And we muſt neuer ceaſe, vntil we be come thither: and when we be come thither, we muſt continue in it ſtill. For at euerie turne we ſhall ſtumble into this blindneſſe againe, ſo as wee ſhall be prouder than we were afore, according as wee ſee that ſuch as haue liued in humilitie, doe in the ende become greateſt truſters to their owne witte, when they haue once forgotten themſelues. So then lette vs alwayes beare this leſſon in minde vnto our liues ende, for humilitie is ſo perfecte a vertue, as wee ſhall neuer finde it ſo ſubſtantially in vs as we woulde wiſhe. And therefore muſt we continue in the ſayde endeuour, vntill wee be quite ridde of all the preſumptuouſneſſe of our fleſhe. For pryde is the ſinne that will bee laſt corrected, and it is the roote of all other offences. Thus yee ſee what wee haue to remember vpon this text where Moſes ſayth, Remember thy ſelfe, and forgette not the faultes which thou haſt committed.

Nowe he addeth, Howe thou diddeſt anger thy God in the wilderneſſe. I haue tolde yee breefly alreadie, that the people were ſo muche the leſſe to be excuſed, for that they hauing knowen the wonders which GOD had wrought at their comming out of Ægypt, ceaſſed not to bee ſo malitious and frowarde, as to ſpitte out their poyſon againſt GOD. If they hadde done it afore, truely yet they hadde beene worthie of blame: but yet had their ſinne beene more tollerable. But nowe hadde God vttered his mightie arme in deliuering thoſe wretches out of the cruell bondage wherein they were: and yet notwithſtanding, euen after Gods working in that wiſe, and after they had ſeene the apparaunt ſignes of his maieſtie, they ceaſe not to ſtriue againſt him ſtill: and muſt it not needes be that the deuill poſſeſſeth them, and that they bee as good as bewitched with their owne malice? So then it is not without cauſe that Moſes noteth here the place of the wilderneſſe, to the ende that the people might bee the more humbled, and feele the greateneſſe and hougeneſſe of the offences which they had committed, foraſmuch as they were al at one poynt as if GOD had not vttered himſelfe vnto them at all. For it may fall out that ſillie ſoules which neuer taſted of Gods trueth nor of his workes, ſhall ouerſhoote themſelues and be caried away. But ſeeing that GOD came ſo neere vnto the Iewes and tolde them, I am your Sauiour, I take you into my protection, I will make you to feele my power as though I came downe from heauen in mine owne perſon, and dwelt visibly among you: I say when God speaketh after that fashion, and bindeth himselfe by his deedes, and yet for all that there is nothing in them but rebellion: must it not needes bee a desperate frowardenesse? Yes verily. And it is as a warning to make vs look to our selues. For seeing that GOD sheweth himselfe familiarly to vs for our welfare: hee bindeth vs so much the more vnto him, as hath beene declared heretofore. Therefore lette vs looke that we prouoke him not when hee hath made vs to feele his goodnesse: but let vs bee the more obedient vnto him, knowing that his intent in vouchsafing to succour vs, is that wee shoulde be moued thereby to honour him and serue him the better. And on the other side we shall be the more blameworthie, when GOD shall haue visited vs by his grace. As for example when he giueth vs his worde, he sheweth thereby that he hath a care of our saluation: so that if we benefite not our selues thereby in seruing him, surely wee deserue the greeuouser vengeance

And Moses alleageth not heere the sinnes of one day: but hee telleth the people that they wente on still from euill to worse, euen since their comming out of Egypt, knowe ye (sayeth he) that ye haue euer beene disobedient to your God, euen vnto this day. There had passed at that time the space of fourtie yeares, and that was a tiall long ynough, as is sayde in the Pſal.95.10. fourescore and fifteenth Psalme. For there GOD sheweth his inestimable patientnesse, which he vsed in bearing with the wilfull and intollerable malitiousnesse of that people, by the space of fourtie yeares together. But Moses reckeneth not the yeares heere: for that was a thing well ynough knowen to those whome he spake vnto. It was ynough for him to say, reckon you howe long it is agoe since your GOD brought you out of the bondage of Egypt: hee hath ledde you through the wildernesse, hee hath shewed himselfe alwayes present with you: & yet haue you not knowen him of al the while. Had yee missed but once onely, yet hadde ye well deserued to be chastised. But what? Seeing yee haue had so many warninges, so manie threatninges, so manie rebukes, and so many punishmentes, yea and so manie benefites also at Gods hande: and yet notwithstanding yee holde on still, and growe worse and worse in steede of amending: must it not needes bee sayde that ye be vtterly past recouerie? Yes: for our Lorde hath not lefte anie thing vndoone, that might bring yee backe into the right way: and yet for all that, yee haue continued stubbourne still, and withstoode him to the vttermost. Nowe therefore lette vs marke well this text where our Lorde vpbrayeth men, not with some one faulte, but with a continuall stubbornesse against him, in holding on still in their wilfulnesse, insomuch that though hee correct them both by deedes and wordes, yet are they still imbrewed with their sinnes, and delight and welter themselues in them. For wee see what is in vs. Trueth it is that wee woulde at the first sight condemne the thinges that are reported here of the Iewes: but we must also apply all those thinges to our instruction, according as it is sayde that that people must serue vs as a lookingglasse to beholde our selues in. Therefore lette vs beare in minde the thinges that Moses noteth heere. For whereas hee sayeth, euer since the day: hee comprehendeth all their rebellions that are rehearsed as well in the booke of Exodus, as in the booke of Num- Exod.14.11 bers. There it is shewed, that as soone as the people were passed the wildernesse, by and by they fell to murmuring. Howe nowe, sayde they? was there not roome ynough to burie vs in Egypt? So that whereas they shoulde haue sayde, Alas Lorde, in deede thou haste beene singularly gratious vnto vs in deliuering vs from so painefull and miserable a life as wee were in: for we were taken but as wretched beastes, we were vtterly oppressed vnder the crueltie of the wicked and of thine enemies: and soothly Lorde this goodnesse of thine deserueth well to bee magnified: but yet thou bestowest thy selfe vppon vs after an other fashion: for in the wilderneſſe, we were destitute of all foode, so as wee shoulde haue beene fayne to dye for hunger, if thou haddest not pitied vs: and not onely so, but thou hast helde on still in succourlng vs as we resorted to thee: therefore lette it please thee to beare with our weakenesse, and to feede vs as if wee were fillie birdes: for it is thou that feedest the Rauens and other foules, Pſal.104.27 and wee be creatures formed after thine owne & 147.9. image: nay moreouer we be the people whome thou hast chosen: nowe therefore seeing thou haste vouchsafed to adopt vs for thy children, shewe vs at leastwise as much fauour as thou doest to other nations that are not so neere thee as wee are: whereas the people shoulde haue come with all lowelinesse to acknowledge the former good turnes that GOD had doone them, and thereby haue assured themselues with certainetie of fayth, that he woulde holde on still for the time to come: in steede of doing so, they sayde: Was there not roome enough in Egypt to burie vs in? They did quite Exod.14.11 & 16.3. and cleane forgette the fauour which they had receiued at Gods hande. And againe, when they were in necessitie, they came not to him with intreataunce, but with murmuring, rayling and accusing. Likewise when Manna had beene giuen them from heauen, and they had Exod.17.2. eaten of it: yet they demaunded drinke after Numb.20.5. an other fashion. They aske their almes with the sworde in their fist. Like as the theefe that woulde cutte the throte of a traueiler: so these leaude loselles fel to spyting of GOD the seconde time, saying: Yea in deede wee haue Manna to feed on, but we must haue drinke too. Yea and when GOD had giuen them drinke, and made a streame to gushe out of the rocke: y would not suffice them neither. For the Manna was too vnsauorie a food for them, they would needs haue varietie. They had stil Mána & Manna, & they were glutted with it: & yet notwithstanding it was a good & sauorly nourishment. Numb.11.4

Beſides this, they were not driuen to till the grounde, they were not faine to trouble themſelues much with the earning of their liuing: for God gaue them both meate and drinke: and yet notwithſtanding they cryed out vpon him ſtill, Giue, giue: Their luſts were ſo inordinate, that they prouoked Gods vengeance againſt themſelues, by murmuring againſt him for wante of fleſhe. Loe heare a marueilous thankeleſneſſe. Well then, they had fleſh: but that was to choke them euen with their delitate morſelles, inſomuch that while the meate was yet in their throtes, Gods wrath was ſo kindled vpon them, that they payed very deere for their ſhotte, becauſe they were not contented with the ineſtimable good that God had done them. For the Manna was a heauenly foode, yea and a Pſal.78.25. foode of Angelles as it is ſayde in the Pſalme. But although they felt Gods puniſhmentes, and both ſawe and felt the vengeance that ouerwhelmed them: yet notwithſtāding they ceaſed not to prouoke him to angernewe againe, after other faſhions, ſomtimes by committing whordome, ſometimes by banding againſt Moſes and Aaron, ſometime by murmuring, and ſometime by rayling. To be ſhort, there was neither ende nor meaſure of their doinges. And therefore not without cauſe doeth Moſes ſay vnto them heere, Bethinke yee of the greas number of faultes which yee haue committed euer ſince the day that yee came out of the lande of Egypt, euen vnto this preſent time that God hath brought you into this Lande.

Whereas he ſayeth, God hath brought you: it ſerueth to quicken them vppe the better. As if hee ſhoulde ſay, Who hath beene your leader? Leaude folke as ye be, your GOD hath well mainteyned, guided, and ledde you: hee hath vphelde you and helped you in all your neceſſities: and yet will you needes come and ſette vp your briſtles thus againſt him? Nowe ſith wee heare this of the Iewes: lette it not make vs to blame them: but lette it make vs behoulde our ſelues in their perſons, and conſider howe neere this example toucheth vs, that euerie of vs may looke into himſelfe, and all of vs acknowledge generally that wee bee no better than they. And for proofe thereof, we be not in a wilderneſſe, neither is there a time of fortie yeares ſette a forehande vnto vs: but lette euerie of vs take his whole life, euen from the time that GOD did put vs into this worlde, vnto our buryingday. Howe liue wee? God for his part powreth out ſo many benefites vpon vs, as wee haue good cauſe to ſerue and honour him, yea though there were no more than that which he hath done alreadie. But ſeeing hee continueth in doing vs good ſtill: is it not ynough to ſoften our heartes, though they were of yron or ſteele? Yes verily: and yet wee ceaſe not to ſpite him by going on ſtill from euil to worſe. Nowe then like as Moſes vpbrayded the Iewes with their continuaunce in euill dooing: ſo lette euerie of vs conſider, that our prouoking of our GOD hath not beene for once onelie: but that whereas wee ſhould haue beene drawen vnto him, wee haue ſhrunke away from him and rebelled againſt him. And whereas wee ſhoulde haue offered our ſelues readily to beare his yooke: wee haue beene ſo ſtubborne as hee coulde not wealde vs: and one naughtineſſe hath ſo drawen on an other, that our ſinnes are come to a horrible confuſed heape. Thus then muſt we compare our ſelues with thoſe to whome Moſes ſpeaketh here.

Here it might be demaunded, howe Moſes can ſay that they which liued at that time, had rebelled againſt GOD euer ſince the time that they came out of Ægypt. For at that time the moſt parte of them were babes, or at leaſtwiſe not of full yeares of diſcretion. For we haue ſeene expreſſely in the firſt Chapter, Deut.1.35. that GOD was minded to haue deſtroyed all that companie, euen young children and all. For they that were come to mans eſtate, had made themſelues vnworthie to enioye the inheritaunce that was promiſed them, and they were baniſhed and ſhutte out from it. Howe then doeth Moſes vpbrayde them that they had not ceaſed to prouoke Gods wrath continually? For they might haue replyed: Howe ſo? Though our fathers miſſebehaued themſelues, ſo as they were vnthankefull, diſobedient, rebellious, and full of murmuring and wicked luſtes: ſhoulde thoſe thinges bee layde vppon vs? No: for wee coulde not doe withall. But let vs marke that heere the whole bodie of the people is ſo blamed, that the children are rightly condemned in the perſons of their fathers. For it was ſtill one bodie: and whereas the fathers behaued themſelues naughtily and wickedly: the children amended not, but continued in the ſame euill, as is to bee ſeene. And therefore foraſmuch as the children linked in with their fathers: it is meete that they ſhould be knit vp as it were all in one bundle, and that GOD ſhould condemne them all in generall. And after the ſame manner are they ſpoken of in the foureſcore & ninth, and alſo in the threeſcore and eighteenth Pſalmes. For there our Pſal.89.31. Lorde ſayth, Remember your ſelues howe yee 32.33.&28 were diſobedient to me in the wilderneſſe. And 9.10.11. afterwarde the prophete rehearſeth their faulte againe, howe oftentimes they had misbehaued themſelues: and thereupon concludeth, ỹ they had alwaies perſiſted in euill, euen frō their firſt entering into the lande of Chanaan. Inſomuch that if the fathers liued naughtily in the wilderneſſe, their children followed the ſame trade, yea and became much worſe. For when they were once in poſſeſſion of the heritage which was Gods reſting place: they ſhould haue giuen themſelues to the ſeruing and honoring of him to the vttermoſt of their power. But all their indeuour was to defile the lande which God had hallowed to himſelfe, by filling it full of ſuperſtition and ydolatrie. God gaue them the inheritaunce freely, as if he ſhould haue ſayde, I aske no more of you but that ye ſerue me, acknowledging that I haue beene a good louing father to you, and that I haue alwayes mainteyned and kept you. But in ſteede of doing homage to God

God for theſe things, the people fel to ſetting vp of idols, borowing all the corruptions of the heathen, and bringing in falſe and counterfet Religions. Ye ſee then that they deſerued well to be eſtraunged and quite cut of from God: Alſo wee ſee that the propheres did continually vpbraide the children of Iſraell with their vnthankfulnes, yea euen generally, according alſo as euery man was giltie thereof. And S. Steuen hath declared
Ac.7.51. my ſayd reaſon yet better. For he ſayth, ye haue euer reſiſted the holy Ghoſt, like as your fathers did afore you. If the Iewes of that time had quietly ſubmitted themſelues to the Goſpell, and receaued Ieſus Chriſt as their ſauiour, ſo as they had honored and imbraced him with fayth and repentance: S. Steuen would not haue gone about to rip vp the ſhame of their forefathers. For that was hidden. But for as much as they turned all thinges vpſide downe, and beleeued not the Goſpell, but forſooke the grace of God, and trampled it vnder their feete, aduauncing themſelues with diueliſh pride and furie, to abolish the name of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, and to deface the goodneſſe that GOD had ſhewed them: it was requiſite that the ſinnes of their fathers ſhould be put into their accoũt, and that God ſhould ſet himſelfe againſt them, to condemne the malicious wilfulneſſe of that people, and the faultes that had beene committed by the ſpace of two or three thouſand yeeres afore. And therefore let vs learne, that although God pardon the offences of our fathers that haue doone amiſſe: yet ſhall they not fayle to remayne ſtill of record in his regiſters, if we hold on and continue like vnto them. Will we then haue the ſinnes of our forefathers buried, and ỹ God ſhould forget thẽ and not call vs to account for them? Let vs looke that we be the carefuller to keepe our ſelues from being like to them. And ſo ye ſee how it is expedient for vs to thinke vpon the ſinnes that haue bin cõmitted before we were borne. Let vs conſider thus: Alas I was yet vnborne at that time: but howe ſhall I do, if my forefathers haue done amiſſe, and that I for my part bee put in among them? For it is ſaide that God gathereth together the ſins of the fathers vnto the third & fourth generation, to let them fall vpon their children. Then doe we deſerue to be deſtroyed and to periſh, if God liſted to vſe rigour towardes vs. For the ſaide threat of the law is rightful, and might iuſtly be executed vpon our heads: and if he ſpare vs, it is of his owne mere goodneſſe. For to what purpoſe ſhould we put ouer the fault to our fathers, of prouoking Gods wrath both againſt themſelues and vs: when we our ſelues continue in their wickednes? Ought not the vengeance to be dubble, when we on our part haue cleaued to their ſinnes as well as they? Thus ye ſee what we haue to remember vppon this place, where Moſes doeth not onely blame them that liued in his time for the things then preſently committed: but alſo moreouer charge them with all the tranſgreſſions that their fathers had committed, from their comming out of Egypt, vnto that day. Nowe then the thing that we haue to marke heere in effect, is that men doe not onely marre themſelues by bearing themſelues on hande that they bee righteous, for want of conſidering their ſinnes throughly: but alſo that they puffe vp themſelues with pride, ſo as they will needes make God beleeue that blacke is white. And therfore let it prouoke vs to condemn our ſelues willingly according to this doctrine of Moſes. So then, let vs acknowledge our ſinnes truly and vnfeynedly, ỹ we may ſo miſlike of thẽ, as there may not one drop of fond preſumptuouſneſſe remain in vs, but that we may be vtterly caſt downe, and acknoweledge that there is nothing but vtter wretchednesſe in vs, and that we be beholden to God for all goodneſſe, ſo as we haue it of his free gift, and not as in recompence of any reward for any merit or deſert of ours, but onely of his own free mercy which he hath vſed towardes vs. So farre then muſt we come of neceſſitie. And for performance hereof, let vs euening & morning inforce and indeuour our ſelues to call to minde the faults that we haue committed. And that we may enter into this triall and examination of our ſelues: let vs bethinke vs both of our owne ſinnes and of the ſinnes of our forefathers, and let vs aſſure our ſelues that if God woulde play the Iudge with vs, wee ſhoulde not onely bee vtterly rooted out, for our owne faultes which are yet freſhe in our remembrance, but alſo all the euill that hath beene committed before we were borne, might iuſtly be called backe againe vpon our heades, ſeeing wee be wrapped in the ſame offences that our auncetors were. Therefore let vs thinke well vpon theſe things: that wee may magnifie the goodneſſe of our God in bearing with vs. And to the intent wee play not the hypocrites: let vs marke well how it is ſayde, that it is ynough to haue prouoked GOD alreadie. For when they haue fought againſt God and his worde, and haue behaued themſelues lewdly all the time of their lyfe: yet at their death they make no conſcience to ſay, I thought I did as wel in fighting againſt God, as if I had fought againſt the Pope and the Maſſe. [What a thing is it] to vſe ſuch ſpeech? Is it not apparant that ſuch folke are vtterly paſt recouerie, as haue their conſciences ſo dulled, and that the diuell carieth them away, ſo as they can no more be ſorie for their ſinnes, (which, as ſayeth S. Paule, is the full meaſure of all confuſion:) when ſuch graceleſſe creatures will needes iuſtifie themſelues after that ſort with ſo vaine couertures? Let vs marke well then, that wee muſt not alleage, I thought ſo: but it is ynough that we haue prouoked our God. And if moreouer our owne conſcience accuſe vs thereof: what will become of vs? Will God in the meane while become as a dead idoll which ſeeth not our offences at all? A man thinketh his owne wayes to bee good, ſayeth Salomon: but our Lorde holdeth the balance in his hand and weyeth our woorkes. And Saint Iohn telleth vs, that if wee feele any heartbyting in our conſcience: the ſame iudgeth vs alreadie: and what will become of vs then, when wee come before God? Doeth not he ſee clearer than our owne conſciences?

Yes: and therefore let vs marke wel that we ſhal win nothing by flattering of our ſelues: but God muſt be faine to woorke ſo in vs, as we may bee ouermaiſtred and vtterly caſt downe to ſay, Alas if GOD ſhould not ſpare vs wee were vndoone. And moreouer let vs knowe, that our true righteouſneſſe, (I meane not to glory of it, but to ſeeke it to our benefite): is to beare Gods yoke, ſo as wee liue not after our owne luſtes and lykinges, but that if it pleaſe GOD to exerciſe vs with afflictions, wee ſhewe by all maner of patience, that wee haue a necke plyable vnder him. Finally for as much as his lawe ought to ſerue vs for a brydle: let vs ſuffer our ſelues to bee ruled and gouerned by his hand, ſo as we be not giuen to our owne fooliſhe deuotions, ne come replying to him with this and that, but be contented to let our GOD try our obedience, ſeeing hee hath giuen vs his lawe. Then let vs ſee that our life bee framed according to his will, which is the onely rule of well dooing: and let vs ſubmit our ſelues wholy thereunto, as we ſee we be warned heereby Moſes.

Nowe let vs kneele downe before the maieſtie of our good GOD with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to vouchſafe to touche vs with them to the quicke, and to take from vs all blynde foldinges of hypocriſie, that nothing may keepe vs from being aſhamed and caſt downe in our ſelues, vntill wee bee rayſed agayne by fayth and hope of his goodneſſe and mercie: praying him alſo that when hee hath once made vs to feele our diſeaſes, it may pleaſe him to fill vs with the grace of his holy ſpirite, ſo as wee may liue according to his good will. And ſo let vs all ſay, Almighty God heauenly father, &c.

On Thurſday the xxix. of Auguſt. 1555.

The Lxiiij Sermon which is the third vppon the ninth Chapter.

8 Alſo ye prouoked the Lord to anger in Horeb: for the which, the Lord was wroth with you to deſtroy you.

9 When I went vp into the Mount to fetch the two tables of ſtone, euen the tables of the Couenant which the Lord had made with you, and had taryed in the Mount fortie dayes and fortie nightes, without eating of bread or drinking of water:

10 Then the Lord gaue mee the two tables of ſtone, written with the finger of God, wherein were contentes according to all the woordes which the Lorde had ſpoken to you on the Mountaine, from the middes of the fire, in the day of your aſſembling togither.

11 And it came to paſſe that in the ende of fortie dayes and fortie nightes, the Lord gaue mee the two tables of ſtone, euen the tables of the Couenant.

12 Then ſaid the Lord vnto mee, vp and get thee downe quickly from hence: for thy people whome thou broughteſt out of Egypt haue marred all. They bee ſuddainly turned aſide from the way that I commaunded them, and haue made them a molten image.

WE ſawe yeſterday howe Moſes did caſt the people in the teeth with their malicious ſtubbornneſſe, in that they had not ceaſſed from dooing of euill, euen ſince GOD had deliuered them from the thraldome of Egypt. And ſurely it was an ill acknowledging of ſuch a benefite, to ſpyte him ſo wilfully, which had beene their Redeemer and Father. But nowe he alleageth a greater faulte of theirs, and farre more outrageous: that the rememberaunce thereof myght leade them yet further, namely to bethinke themſelues of all their former offences, and to confeſſe that they had beene a fro-

a frowarde and in maner desperate people in all respectes. And hee putteth them in minde, that euen while Gods lawe was a giuing to them in Mount Horeb or Sinay, they prouoked Gods vengeaunce by making of a molten image: This is not set downe without cause. For if euer God shewed himselfe to holde men in his obedience: it was then. For the lawe was not giuen after an ordinarie maner: but Gods maiestie appeared so visiblie in the doing thereof, that the people was sore abashed at it. Beholde, the Mountayne was full of fire, lightninges, and smoke: the ayre was heard to rore: the Trumpets sounded: and to be short, there were such a number of tokens of Gods presence, that the people was constrained to say, Let not the Lord speake vnto vs, for then are we but dead. After this, Moses was on the Mount as one separated from the companie of men, and as an Angel of God, exempted from mortall state, so as hee needed neither meate nor drink, which was such a myracle as ought well to haue rauished ỹ people to the seruing of God. And yet for all this, they reiected all that had bin taught them, and not tarying so much as the end of one yeere, but euen before fortie dayes were expired, they said they wist not what was become of Moses, terming him scornfully the fellow that had brought them out of Egypt. What can wee tell what is become of this fellowe, sayde they? And therefore let vs haue some God to goe before vs. Yet had they beene taught familiarly ynough: For God shewed himselfe to them both euening and morning, he led them a nightes by a signe of fire, and a days he stretched out a cloud ouer them: and yet woulde they needes haue a God that shold be present with thē. And what maner of God? forsooth a pupper. Beholde, God had shewed the people his wonderfull power, he had made them to feele it, they knewe themselues to bee safe ynough vnder his protection, and yet all this was nothing with them: they will needes haue a calfe, a dead thing, a corruptible thing, to make it their God. Was it not a hellishe furiousnesse when they became so brutishe? Seeing they had so lately euen with in freshe remembraunce hearde the lawe vttered vnto them, and that Moses was but gone aside: it was as if God had separated them all from this earthly life in the person of that one man. Hee ment to communicate himselfe familiarly vnto them, as it were by taking them vp into heauen: and in the meane while they become so vnthankefull and rebellious, that when hee manifested himselfe to them, they stopped their eyes and would not see, but defaced his maiestie and infinite power. Whereby? Euen by a dead thing which was an ydoll. Surely such contempt, such vnthankfulnesse, such beastlynesse should haue made the Iewes ashamed. And that is the cause why Moses speaketh expresly of that horrible crime which they had committed, in that they would needes haue an ydoll to go before them, that is to say, some visible signe whereby it might be said that God was among them. Thus see wee now the meaning of this text.

Exod. 32. 1.

But wee must marke diligently all the circumstances which are set downe here. Remember (sayeth he) howe ye prouoked Gods wrath in Mount Horeb. That mountaine ought to haue bin sanctified, bicause God had chosen it, to giue his Lawe there, in respect whereof it is a place that is innobled to the worlds end. For sith it pleased God to vtter his will there, which is the rule of al righteousnesse, and there to make his couenant with the children of Abraham: ought not that place to haue beene acknowledged as holy? Not vppon any superstition: but by putting the people the better in minde to honour their God as ofte as they speake of Mount Sinay. It is a mountaine in the wildernes, which aforetimes bare no renowne: & now it became as an earthly Paradise, so as God shewed his Maiestie there. Seeing that God had saide vnto Moses, The place where thou standest is holy, put off thy shoes: so as he required a speciall reuerence bicause he was minded to shewe himselfe there: and ought not the selfe same reason to preuaile in respect of Mount Sinay? But so farre off were the people from being allured to honour God a hundred or a thousande yeeres after, by acknowledging the singular benefite which hee had bestowed vpon them there: that they started away from him and fell to spyting of him, euen while the lawe was a giuing, & whyle Moses was yet vpon the Mount. So then Moses ment here to make their sinne more heauie by shewing them that it was like as if a mā should come and as it were dispitefully rushe into a Church, where folke were assembled togither to pray vnto God and to heare his word and to receiue his sacraments: and there commit some villanie or leaudnesse that might breede offence. And were not such a sinne so much the heinouser? Yes: and so was it with them. Therefore when we reade it, the very haire ought to stand vp vppon our heades. Neuertheless we must vnderstand, that this is set downe as a lookingglasse for vs, to see that we should be no better than they if wee were not withheld by the holy Ghost. Let vs consider what men are. These were a people whome God had chosen from among all others: he had giuen them his doctrine: he had shewed them his lawe: and yet for all that, they giue ouer themselues to so cursed a thing. Although then that God come vnto vs, yet is it certayne that we may start way, if hee hold vs not backe, not onely by his teaching of vs, but also by the power of his holy spirite. Now the law had bin published to this people, so as they sinned not through ignoraunce, neither could they say, We wote not how to serue God, we are to bee borne withall though wee deuise wayes on our owne head: for beholde, GOD had vttered his will plainely vnto them, and therefore they shoulde haue stayed thereuppon, and obeyed it simply without adding any thing vnto it. But notwithstanding all this teaching, they cast away his whole doctrine, and ceasse not to ouershoote themselues, as much as if they had neuer knowen any thing. Seeing it is so: let vs learne that men may well preach vnto vs: but when we haue had our eares neuer ſo much beaté with Gods truth, yet ſhall we not faile to turn the clean contrarie way, except he print the things in our heartes, which men ſhall haue vttered vnto vs with their mouthes: I ſay, imprinted them in our hearts, & made vs to vnderſtand ẏ that is the thing which wee muſt ſticke vnto. That is the thing which we haue to remember vppon that text.

And whereas Moſes rehearſeth howe hee was vppon the Mount by the ſpace of fortie dayes and fortie nightes together without eating or drinking: let vs note that that was doone for the better authoriſing of the lawe, that it might be receiued with the greater reuerence, and that men might knowe it was not a worldely thing. And hereby we ſee that the communicating of Gods word vnto vs is a matter of great importance, ſo as we neede not to doubt but it commeth of him, and that we ought to ſubmit our ſelues vnto it. If we haue not that: there will bee no religion among vs. Indeede wee may well ynough ſurmiſe our ſelues to haue it: but the cheefe groundworke of religion, that is to ſay of faith and of the ſeruice of God, is to be ſure of our doctrine. For if wee go but by weening: as ẏ paynims, Turks, & al Idolaters doe: and as the Papiſts doe in dreaming vppon their good intentes: it is but a toye, it is but a building in the aire and vpon imagination. Therefore let vs marke well, that the firſt enterance to ſerue God, and to be allowed of him, is to bee throughly ſure of our rule, ſo as we ſay not I thought this had beene good, it ſeemed ſo to me, it was tolde me ſo: but that wee haue Gods woord for our guide, and then let vs go on hardly, wee cannot go amiſſe as long as we followe that way: for our leader will neuer deceaue vs, wee ſhall not be beguiled in obeying him. That then is the thing which wee haue to beare in minde, for as much as we ſee that God hath ſo auowed and authoriſed his woord, as he ſheweth plainly that men ought no more to call it in queſtion or to doubt of it. But although we ſee that this is verye needefull for vs: yet doe wee ſee that the worlde makes none account of it. Whereof comes it that the Papiſtes are ſo wilfull at this day: but bycauſe they ſhut their eyes at the thinges that I haue nowe touched? For if a man examine throughly all that euer they haue, ſurely hee ſhall fynde that they can alledge none other reaſon than their owne imagination. They can not maintaine the thinges which they terme Gods ſeruice and the articles of their faith, otherwiſe thā by their owne reaſon, onely bicauſe other men haue ſaide it, and they beleeue it without further inquirie. Therfore are they alwayes in a mamering, without any ſtay or ſtedines: And yet ye ſee they be ſo wilfull, ẏ they raile againſt God & his word, & worke it all the ſpite they can, & if a mā go about to ſhew them their faults & ouerſights, they be ſo ſtubborne as he can nothing preuaile with them. Wherefore let vs be ẏ circumſpecter in marking the things ẏ are ſet heere before our eyes: which is, ẏ we knowe not what Religion or Chriſtianitie is, or whether our faith be ſubſtāti all or no: vnleſſe we be ſure ẏ we haue the rule of Gods ſeruice from God himſelf, & that our religion is grounded vpon the ſame. Marke that for one point.

But wo worth vs if we deſpiſe the law and make no account of it, ſeeing it hath bin publiſhed with ſuch warrantiſe as Moſes reporteth in this text. Behold, the law is auowed by God himſelfe: and what ſurer warrant ſhoulde men require than ẏ? Could God deuiſe to warrant his law more than he hath done? no: and yet notwithſtanding, after the hearing of ẏ doctrine & contents therof, we do but nod our heads at it, or rather we be not moued nor touched at al ẇ it: nay we ſee there is nothing but coldneſſe in vs, & a great number of vs do euen ſpite it and gnaſh our teeth at it. Now then if wee rebell againſt God after hee hath ſo warranted the truth of his lawe: what excuſe ſhall wee haue? Is it not a fighting againſt the maieſtie of GOD? Yes verily. And therefore all the deſpiſers of GOD, may well pretende what excuſe they liſt: but yet are they conuicted of open warre making againſt GOD, and againſt his eternall maieſtie, and againſt his diuine and heauenly power. Why ſo? For God in publiſhing his law, came as neere men as he could, and as neere as they could away with. In deede God ſhewed not himſelfe as hee is: for wee bee not of capacitie to receiue ſuch knowledge of him: but it is certaine that he ſhewed himſelfe according to the ſmall abilitie and ſlenderneſſe of men, ſpecially at the publiſhing of his lawe. And I meane not onely the Lawe, but alſo the prophets, which were added as an appurtenance thereunto, bicauſe they be the expounders thereof. Againe what prooſe is there of the Goſpell? God did not only ſhake the earth at that tyme: but alſo (as ſaith the prophet Aggeus, and as is alleaged by the Apoſtle in the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes) hee did ſhake both heauen and earth, ſo as there was a greater maieſty vttered at the preaching of the Goſpell, than at the publiſhing of the lawe. Nowe then, ſith it is ſo (ſayth the Apoſtle) ẏ the Lawe which bringeth nothing but terror vnto men, was ſo magnified: what ought the Goſpell to bee? For the law was but a ſhadow & figure of the things which we haue nowe ſhewed vs perfectly in the Goſpell. In the Goſpell God ſheweth himſelfe face to face, to ẏ intent ẏ we ſhould be transformed to his glory. Sith it is ſo, what a curſe pul we vpon our heads, in ẏ we do not hearké vnto God with all reuerence, & ſhew that it is he whom we worſhip, & to whom we be willing to dedicate al our ſenſes, all our affections, & all our thoughts? If we be not brought ſo lowe as to heare and receiue the doctrine of the lawe and the Goſpell with all humilitie and reuerence: we fight openly againſt the whole power and glory of God.

And herewithall we haue to marke alſo, after what maner it is that God warranteth his lawe, to the intent it may bee of authoritie among men, and that they may ſubmit themſelues to it. It is by fathering of it vppon himſelfe: and that is one point more, well worth the marking. For God ſheweth vs thereby, ẏ he will not haue vs to leane vnto men, but to looke ſingly vnto him, that that wee may haue a true and assured faith. So long then as our mindes runne vppon creatures: wee shall alwayes bee in a mamering. Albeit that wee may conceiue some wilfull opinion in our head: yet shall it vanish quite away at length, vntill wee bee come to this poynt, that wee bee sure it is GOD that hath taught vs it, and that it is hee of whome wee holde all that wee haue. When wee bee so assured: then haue wee a right faith: but wee see howe the world forgetteth that. For is there any question of the hearing of GOD in the Popedome? Nay verily, they woorke all the abhominations that are against Gods woorde, and their dooyng thereof is matched with foule shamelesse-nesse, as it were euen in vtter despyte of God. For they will needes haue the Gospell set aside, and that men should bee the sticklers in that behalfe, to intermingle whatsoeuer they themselues thinke good. Wee see then that this hath beene ill put in vre. And therefore let vs for our part remember, that when God meant to magnifie his Lawe, he saide not, Here is a wise man that shall tell you good things: but he tooke vp Moses to him, and he gaue tokens from heauen as if he should haue protested thus: It is I my self, I will haue ye to take all things that shal be vttered by Moses, as things that come from me. For I am not hidden in this case. Although I speake to you by the mouth of a mortal man: yet ye see he hath all of mee, and he hath not deuised any thing of himselfe or of his owne braine. And to what ende was Moses so exempted from the state of all other men? It is not possible ỹ a man which is accustomed to eate & drink, should fast by the space of fortie dayes and fortie nights together. Then must it needes bee concluded, that God intended to shew in effect, how he himselfe was the author of the Law, and the giuer thereof by Moses. And although Moses was so excellent a person: yet was hee but a seruant, he was not the maister of the house, neyther did he challendge any thing to himselfe, but deliuered the thinges faithfully from hand to hande, which he had receiued.

Nowe seeing that GOD reserued to himselfe the gouerning of his Church, and the giuing of the rule whereunto he woulde haue all men to holde themselues, so as euen Moses should not passe the boundes thereof: what shal other men doe nowe adayes? Wee shall see at length that God neuer raised vp a greater Prophet, no nor the like among his people. There was neuer any [that matched him or went beyond him,] but onely Iesus Christ the head of all Prophets. And good reason it is ỹ he should bee aboue Moses, which hath the soueraintie of all, considering that he is aboue the Angels, and euen the euerlasting GOD manifested in the flesh, and our Mediatour, exalted to the right hand of God his father, to sit as his Lieuetenant, of purpose that all knees shoulde bow before him. So then, wee see how shameleſse the Pope and all his rable haue beene, in vsurping such libertie to forge articles of fayth, to make lawes for mens soules, and to bring the Churche in such bondage, as to burie all pure doctrine, that their owne dreames and dotages which they had deuised contrarie to Gods woorde, myght bee followed. And therefore let vs beare well in minde, that when wee studye to honour men, wee robbe God of his honour: and when wee adde any thing at all to his woorde, wee become backslyders. That is a poynt which wee must bee fully resolued of, or else wee shall haue no certaintie in our Religion and fayth. In deede the Papistes haue some showe of humilitie, in that they say, and why shoulde not men obserue the commaundementes of our holy mother the Church? For although it bee more than needeth, yet notwithstanding, will not GOD accept it? There is nothing more commendable than humilitie: but yet for all their humbling of themselues before men, they rush with their hornes against God. But if they ment to doe GOD his due honour: they shoulde not giue men the thing, which belongeth alonely vnto him. For if they fall to mingling of the leauen and corruption of their own imaginations, with the puerneſse of Gods woord: it is more than if they medled heauen and earth together. For it is easie to discerne Gods creatures one from another: and although there bee neuer so much oddes betwixt them, yet is there more agreement betweene them, than there is betweene mennes inuentions and Gods woorde. And therefore when they fall to mingling of their owne fansies with it, and take leaue to make Lawes at their owne pleasure: all is out of fashion, all is out of order, there is not any more purenesse. Now then, whereas the Papistes alleage their humblenesse in obseruing the commaundementes of their Church, or rather hellish synagogue: it is but a diuelish ouerweening, where through they aduaunce themselues openly against GOD, in commending their own follie and beastlineſse as highly, as though their owne inuentions were farre greater and exquisiter perfection, than the wisedome of God. Thus yee see what we haue to remember concerning this point, where Moses reporteth ỹ he neither ate bread nor dranke water, of all the while that he was vpon the mount.

Wee see heere to what end he forbare meate and drink. It was not to set vp some fast, neither indeede was there any euer ordeined, he did it not to make a rule of it: but rather it was Gods intent to woorke such a miracle as might not be drawen to a common example, of purpose to authorise his Lawe, as hath beene sayde afore. And herein it appeareth what a fondnesse it was to make the lenton fast, and to binde men to fast fortie dayes after the example of Iesus Christe, vnder colour that hee had forborne meate and drinke so long together. Surely the fasting of our Lorde Iesus Christ, was to shewe that the Gospell ought not to bee lesse esteemed than the Lawe: and wee see that the lyke befell to Helias, who was betweene them both. Wherefore did Moses and Helias appeare at the transfiguring of Ieſus Chriſt vppon the Mount, but to ſhew the agreement that was betweene the Lawe and the Goſpell? And wee ſee hereby, that Helias was as it were betweene both, that is to ſay, betweene Moſes and Chriſt. For hee reſtored the Lawe and the pure Religion that had beene corrupted afore. And ſo ye ſee that Moſes and Helias agree in ſuch ſorte with Ieſus Chriſt, that they not onely come to humble themſelues to him, but alſo declare that he onely is the ende and perfection of the Lawe, and that hee is the partie to whome all muſt bee referred. Againe, when our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt faſted, that is to ſay, when he abſtained from meate and drinke by the ſpace of fortie dayes together: he did it not yerely, but onely once in all his lyfe, at ſuch tyme as hee was to enter vppon the execution of his office, which was committed vnto him by GOD his father: yea and hee did it by way of myracle. Nowe then is it not a turning of all thinges topſiteruie, when men will drawe it to an ordinarie, and make a common rule of it? Is it not an open mocking of Ieſus Chriſt? Is it not a defacing of Gods myracle, as though they woulde ſpitte at his power? Yes ſurely. Wee ſee then what a blindneſſe it was. And although this ſuperſtition be very auncient, in ſo much ỹ Satan had brought in ỹ diueliſh errour, euen before there was any Pope: yet ought wee to miſlike it and abhorre it. For it is not a ſimple abuſe, it is not a fond deuotion, ſuch as men are woont to haue: but it is a blaſphemie againſt Ieſus Chriſte, it is a policie of Satan to deface the honour of the Goſpell, and to make vs forget the thing ỹ the holy ghoſt amed at, which is that we might know how the lawe & the Goſpel are no earthly doctrines, nor of mans inuention, but altogether heauenly and of God, to the end that we ſhould ſtoope vnto them.

Yet for all this, it is not meant that faſting is not good and holy. For though wee make no Lentfaſt, yet are there other faſtes which are commaunded vs in the holy Scripture: that is to wit, firſt of all ſtayedneſſe and ſobrietie all our life long, ſo as wee glut not our ſelues one day to forbeare another for it, but vſe the benefites meaſurably which God hath beſtowed vppon vs: that they which haue abundance abuſe it not in ſuperfluitie. And our faſting muſt bee to reſtraine and brydle our ſelues willingly aſwell from meate and drinke, as from all other thinges wherein wee may commit exceſſe or diſorder, ſo as wee forbeare them willingly, as I ſayde afore. As for theſe that haue not vertie wherewith to finde themſelues, let them be contented with their pouertie, and take it patiently with thankeſgiuing vnto God. Againe if our Lorde afflict vs, or ỹ we bee in any diſtreſſe: let vs reſort to faſting, of purpoſe to diſpoſe our ſelues to prayer and ſupplication, and to lifte vppe our heartes the better vnto GOD, humbling our ſelues and acknowledging our faults vnto him. Let our faſtings be as ſpurres to driue vs to god, to preſent ourſelues before him as wretched offenders, to craue mercie and forgiuenes at his hand. Theſe are the faſtings which ỹ holy ſcripture alloweth, notwithſtanding the ſaid ſuperſtition inuéted by ỹ diuell to deface Gods word, & the diuine power ỹ was ſhewed in Moſes, but more fully in our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. For he faſted not as compelled by others: but of his owne free will, to ſhewe that although he was like vs in all things ſauing only ſinne: yet could he well haue beene exempted from faſting, as in deede hee was not a hungred nor a thirſt of all the whyle he faſted. And why? For hee had laide aſide the ſtate that he tooke vppon him. Although hee was vnder the ſhape of a ſeruaunt: yet notwithſtanding, that ſeruauntſhip bare no ſway in him by the ſpace of thoſe fortie dayes. Now let vs proceede further. Phil. 2.7.

Moſes addeth that at the ſame tyme hee receiued two tables, euen two tables of ſtone, the two tables that were written with the finger of GOD, the tables of the couenant which God had made with vs ſayth hee. This ſerued to make the Iewes the more aſhamed, of their exceeding great vnfaithfulneſſe towardes GOD. For if I and another were to make a bargayne, and in the meane tyme while the partie were cauſing the couenaunte and conueyaunce to bee ingroſed, I on the other ſide ſhould practiſe ſome deuiſe to betray him while hee truſted mee: what a villanie were that? Shoulde I not bee a double falſe catiſe? Yes: for if a man conclude a bargayne, and afterward breake it or teare the writinges in peeces, hee ſhalbe puniſhed. But if the one partie goe through with good and faithfull meaning, and the other partie marre all with crafte and treacherie, vnder pretence of quietneſſe and friendly dealing: what is to bee ſayd of that? Euen after the ſame maner deale the Iewes. For God taketh Moſes aſide. And to what purpoſe, but to woorke the welfare of his people, and to aſſure them that their religion was a true warrant of their ſaluation, and that they walked not at all aduenture as all other nations of the earth did? Thereuppon he maketh an autenticall inſtrument of the lawe that he had giuen them, that the remembraunce thereof might continue for euer, and not bee ſuch a doctrine as ſhould bee forgotten. Now while God was thus working the welfare of his people: they recompenſed him ſo euill, that they fell to vtter defying of him, and would needes haue a newe God. Wee ſee then howe Moſes ment to inhaunce their euill dealing, that they might bee the more aſhamed, by knowing the horribleneſſe of the crime which they had committed. And the ſame belongeth to vs alſo at this day. For we ſee that God ceaſſeth not to renewe the remembraunce of his couenaunt. True it is that hee publiſhed his lawe once for all, and likewiſe his Goſpell. But yet for all that, wee haue both his lawe and his Goſpell in wryting alſo, and moreouer it is dayly preached vnto vs. Now then, if wee prouoke Gods wrath and anger, by falſifying our faith which we gaue and promiſed in baptiſme: doeth it not make vs the more vnexcuſable? Yes ſurely.

And

And therefore to holde our ſelues the better in awe & feare of God: let vs vnderſtand that gods ordeyning of the miniſters of his worde, and his gracious dealing with vs in cauſing the ſame to be preached and expounded vnto vs afterward, is to put vs in minde of his couenant, that wee ſhoulde put it in practiſe: [and therefore] let vs pray him that nothing may turne vs from it. Let vs vnderſtande that: and then ſhall we haue the more conſtancie and ſtedfaſtneſſe to obey him. Thus ye ſee what we haue to remember vppon that text.

Furthermore, let vs marke that God thought it not ynough to proclaime his Lawe, but he did alſo put it in writing. And why? becauſe men are ſhorte witted in bearing away the trueth. Therefore is our Lorde faine to prouide for it, & to warne vs to looke well to all thinges, becauſe we be ſo feeble. Had the Iewes done their duetie, Gods ſpeaking to them had beene ynough: for he had giuen his lawe in ſo ſmall roome, as euerie man might count it vpon his fingers ends. Theſe are the ten commaundementes, in theſe hath God comprehended his whole wil, which is the rule of good life. All this doctrine (ſay I) is comprehended in ten verſes. Ye ſee then that the people had beene taught familiarly ynough. Now if they that heard Gods voyce vpon the mount had done their duetie: they ſhould haue taught their children, ſo as the doctrine might haue beene kept in mind from the father to the childe. For God had taught them familiarly ynough, as I ſaide afore. Inſomuch that he had willed them to make their ornaments of ſ ſentences of the lawe, ſo as in ſteed of bracelets and other pretie toyes, which fooles do weare to make themſelues gay: all the deckings of his people ſhoulde be to haue the ſentences of the lawe written & ingraued about them, that which way ſoeuer they turned their eyes, they might ſtill haue ſome marke to put them in minde of Gods lawe. Howbeit, to the ende they ſhoulde haue a more certaine remembrance therof: like as men haue bin wont to ingraue their leages in ſome tables of braſſe or ſtone: ſo God took ſtone to write and ingraue his lawe in. It was not his pleaſure to vſe paper or parchment: but to haue his law written in ſtone, [and that was done] not by handicraft, (for hee borowed no workemanſhip of man in that behalfe,) but with his owne finger. Not that God hath anie handes: but that the holy ſcripture ſpeaketh ſo by a reſemblance as if it were ſaide, the lawe was not written or ingrauen by mans hand: but God approoued and ratified it by way of myracle. Now then ſith it is ſo: let vs learne that God hath prouided well for the aſſuring of our faith, to the intente we ſhould not be put to any great paine or hardneſſe to knowe what wee ought to follow. True it is that the worlde will runne into al lewdenes, as we ſee it doeth, and the examples thereof are too rife. It is pitie to ſee howe oft the Iewes ſwarued aſide vnto idolatrie: it ſemed that gods name ſhould haue beene aboliſhed among thē: all was out of order: they had ſo groſſe ſuperſtitions, as a man coulde not diſcerne betweene them and the heathen: they had ſo imbaced theſelues, as there remained not any more certaintie among them. But yet for al that ſuch as were diſpoſed to ſerue God helde alwayes this point ſtill, that they ſticked to the certaine doctrine. And why? For Gods will was ſet downe in writing. When ſuperſtitions were to bee corrected: the meane to doe it was not harde. For why? The lawe was written. That is the thing which wee muſt ſticke vnto if wee will obey our God: and if wee forſake that doctrine, God will alſo forſake vs. VVe ſee then that God hath prouided ſufficiently for the ſuretie of his people, that their faith might not be doutfull, but firme and conſtant. As for vs nowe adayes, wee haue more than the fathers had in the time of the lawe. For wee haue both the lawe and the prophetes, and alſo the goſpell. What is to bee done then? They that alleadge in theſe dayes, I wote not which way to turne mee, I ſee diſputinges, debates, and contrarietie of opinions, & therefore I will let all alone in ſuſpence: [muſt conſider alſo with themſelues,] Yea? hath God loſt his labour in ſetting downe his lawe in writing, and in adding the expoſition thereof by his prophetes, to the ende that wee might the better knowe that the goſpel is the true and full laccompliſhment thereof? Shall wee accuſe God as though hee had left vs at randome, ſo as wee ſhoulde not knowe what wee haue to doe, when he hath giuen vs his infallible trueth, and tolde vs that we can neuer be deceiued in obeying the things that proceede out of his mouth? So then let vs vnderſtande, that whereas the worlde goes aſtray, and is ill inſtructed: the onely cauſe therof is mens own vnthankfulnes. For why? there is inough prouided to make vs walk in the broade daylight, ſo as wee may defile the ſuperſtitions of the faithles, and not ſuffer things to hang any longer in ſuſpence, if we haue God reigning ouer vs. Whereby wee ſee that Gods ſpeaking was not for one day onely: but of purpoſe that the ſame ſhoulde continue ſtill euen to the worldes ende. Therefore let vs go on boldly, ſeeing we haue the doctrine of the holy ſcripture: and let vs aſſure our ſelues that that is the thing which wee muſt holde vs to, ſo as we muſt not any more ſay, whither ſhoulde we go? That is the way, let vs walke therein, as Moſes proteſteth hereafter. Trueth it is that in thoſe two tables are not conteyned all the things that are written in Exodus, Leuiticus, and the booke which we doe nowe expounde: thoſe tables are but an abridgement of them, and they conteyne but ten verſes. Neuertheleſſe, our Lord meant to ſhewe by thoſe two tables, that all the things which Moſes left in writing, were of him.

Deut. 6. 8.

Deut. 13. 5. & Eſa. 30. 21.

So then, here are two thinges: That is to wit, that Gods will was there ſhoulde bee ſcripture, like as when couenants are ſet downe in writing, or leages are ingrauen in tables of braſſe, & euen ſo was it his will that there ſhoulde be a perpetuall memoriall of his lawe, that men might take no occaſion to turne away from it. And he made thoſe two tables, not to ſhewe any cunning of man therin: but to ingraue his law in thē without mans hande, that it might bee knowen that the ſame came of him. As touching Gods writting twice in the two ſtones: we wil treate thereof hereafter: For it is meete that things ſhoulde be ſet downe in order, and therefore I will not medle with them nowe.

Nowe remayneth howe Moſes addeth, that after the tearme of fortie dayes, God ſaide vnto him, Vp and get thee downe apace: for this people haue ſoone marred themſelues, by forgetting mee, and the fauour that I haue ſhewed them. Here Moſes goeth on ſtill with his matter, ſhewing the people that their reuolting and ſtarting away ſo ſoone from G O D was too too ſhamefull and deteſtable. True it is that although they had helde out foure hundred yea or a thouſande yeares, yet had they not beene to be excuſed. But now when as they fell to making of an idol, and did ſet vp a Puppet within fortie dayes ſpace, euen whyle God was about the furtherance of their benefite and welfare, (as I ſaide afore) when Moſes was taken vp as it were into the companie of Angels, by reaſon whereof they ſhoulde rather haue thought thus, Goe too, in the perſon of that one man wee bee after a ſorte ſeparated from the reſt of mankinde, and God ſanctifieth vs to himſelfe, and therewithall bringeth vs into his kingdome, to the intent wee ſhould not haue any earthlineſſe in our religion: What a lewde dealing was that? For this cauſe Moſes ſaith, that God commanded him to get him downe in haſt, becauſe the people were marred out of hande, ſo as they were falne to making of a newe God, euen while the lawe was a writing, and whyle God was confirming of his couenaunt with them. And it is plainely ſaide that they were marred: Beholde (ſaith God) they haue marred. For the worde which hee vſeth, betokeneth no more, but they haue marred, without other addition. And indeed it was a right marring of them, that is to ſay of the Iewes, who became lewde backeſliders and periured kaytifes, vtterly turning away from the trueth and rule of God, and finally from all order both heauenly and earthly. For wherein conſiſteth our pureneſſe, but in obeying GOD? 2.Cor.11.2. According to this ſimilitude of Saint Paules, that like as a woman is a lawfull and faithfull wife as long as ſhee keepeth herſelfe chaſt to her husbande: ſo all the chaſtitie which God requireth of vs, is that wee ſhoulde sticke alonely to his worde. Then if wee fall to making of idols: it is a vilanous marring of our ſelues, wee become like common harlotes that giue ouer their bodies to all commers, leauing their owne husbandes, and yeelding themſelues to euerie whoremaiſter and ruffian. Euen ſo is it with vs. And after the ſame maner was this people marred out of hande. Yea and wee marre the maieſtie of God alſo, as much as in vs lieth, when wee followe our owne fooliſhe inuentions. True it is that wee cannot touch his maieſtie to doe it any harme: but yet are wee guiltie thereof (as ſayth Saint Paul,) becauſe we turne the trueth into a lie, and make all thinges falſe: and moreouer turne the order of nature vpſide downe, by forſaking Gods pure doctrine, ſo as wee bereaue him of his ſoueraigne right that hee can not reigne ouer vs, when wee fall to ſetting vp of idols and deade thinges in his roome, and doe the thinges which we our ſelues haue inuented. So then it is not for nought that our Lord ſaith not in plaine wordes, This people haue made them an Idoll: but hee ſaith, This people haue marred, that is to ſay, they haue turned all vpſide downe. Rom.1.25.

Wherefore let vs marke well, that whenſoeuer we ſteppe aſide from the pureneſſe of Gods worde, wee make a ſhamefull marring, we practiſe our owne deſtruction; wee leaue nothing whole and ſounde, and to bee ſhort, we bee guiltie of mingling heauen and earth together, and of the vtter defacing of Gods maieſtie. So much the more therefore doeth it ſtande vs on hande to ſubmitte our ſelues to Gods pure worde, and to ſee that wee inuent nothing of our owne heads, nor bring vp anie new religion: but hold our ſelues to the thinges which our Lorde hath tolde vs, foraſmuch as hee alloweth not anie thing but that. Afterwards hee addeth the reſidue, which I cannot expound as nowe: but it ſhall ſuffice (as I haue ſaide alreadie) that wee haue this bonde of our God, that wee ſtray not ſo farre as to reiect his trueth: but that wee abide in obedience to his worde, as hee hath giuen it vs in writing, and as it is his will to haue it dayly preached vnto vs. 1.Sam.15. 22.

Nowe let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs feele them better than we haue doone, that we may be drawen to ſuch repentance, as our whole deſire may be to be quite rid of our fleſhly affections and luſts, to giue our ſelues vnto him, and to holde vs ſo vnder his awe, as wee may bring nothing of our owne deuiſing, but that when our owne conſcience findeth fault with vs, wee may ſo much the more yeelde our ſelues guiltie, and not turne away from his obedience: and that foraſmuch as wee can not fullie ſatisfie and performe his Lawe in this worlde, it may pleaſe him of his infinite goodneſſe to beare with vs, vntill hee haue throughly corrected the euill which hee knoweth to bee yet ſtill remayning in vs. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace not onely to vs, but alſo to all people & nations of the earth, &c.

On

On Friday the xxx. of Auguſt. 1555.

The Lxv. Sermon, which is the fourth vpon the ninth Chapter.

13 Wherefore the Lord ſpake vnto mee, ſaying: I haue ſeene this people, and beholde, it is a ſtiffenecked people.

14 Let mee alone, I will deſtroy them, and put out the name of them from vnder heauen, and I will make thee to growe into a mightier and greater Nation than they bee.

I Began to ſhewe you yeſterday, howe foule and curſed the faulte was which Moſes vpbraideth the people withal in this place: and that the cauſe why hee did ſet it before the, was to the end they ſhould be ỹ better humbled therby. And here he addeth a recorde of the greatneſſe of that fault, in that it prouoked Gods wrath ſo ſore, that hee would haue deſtroyed and rooted out that people, and put out the remembrance of them for euer. Nowe if God doe meaſure his anger, and can skill to puniſhe mens offences according to the greatneſſe of them: it muſt needes bee concluded that this offence was verie horrible, ſeeing that God hauing deliuered his people, and hauing wrought ſo many miracles for them, woulde neuertheleſſe ſo wipe them out as they ſhoulde neuer bee ſpoken of more. That then was the meaning of Moſes: verily as if hee ſhoulde ſaye, yee wretched foolke, conſider what yee bee and what yee haue beene. For whereas yee were redeemed by the hande of GOD, you by reuolting from him after yee hadde receiued ſuch fauour, deſerued to haue beene ſo rooted out, as no remembraunce of you might haue remayned in the worlde, and ſentence thereof was giuen alſo. Hadde not I intreated for you, GOD hadde determined to haue deſtroyed you. Nowe goe make your bragges, imagine I wote not what of your ſelues, impute your obteyning of this lande to your owne righteouſneſſe, to your owne power, or to ſome other thing elſe. Nay contrariwiſe, yee ſee what yee haue done: yee haue (to the vttermoſt of your power) vndoone the deliueraunce of your ſelues whiche GOD hadde wrought, yee haue forſaken the ſaluation that was promiſed you, and the inheritaunce that was prepared for you: and to be ſhort it was meet that God ſhould haue powred out his horrible vengeaunce vppon you. Therefore learne to magnifie his mercie, conſidering that yee haue prouoked him ſo ſore. Thus yee ſee in effect whereto this ſaying of Moſes is to be referred.

But by the way wee muſt marke the words that hee vſeth. I haue ſeene this people (ſaith he) and it is a ſtiffenecked people. Heere GOD ſheweth that he hath iuſt cauſe to make cleane riddance of this people, foraſmuchas they were paſt amendement. True it is that GOD might well thunder downe vppon all menne, without ſhewing them why or wherefore, and all mouthes ought to bee ſhutte. For wee winne nothing by replying againſt him, and in murmuring at his chaſtiſementes. For hee ſhall euer bee founde to bee righteous as is ſayde in the one and fiftith Pſalme, and whoſoeuer blaſphemeth him ſhall bee put to ſhame. Yet notwithſtanding, heere God ſheweth why hee had determined to puniſhe the Iewes ſo roughly, to the intent that Moſes ſhoulde bee the better contented. I haue ſeene (ſayth hee) that this people is a ſtiffenecked people. Heereby hee doeth vs to vnderſtande, that when wee once fall to malicious wilfulneſſe, it is all one as if wee were rotten in our ſinnes, and that there is none other remedie, but that GOD muſt put to his hande to deſtroy vs vtterly. Pſal. 51. 6.

In deede the leaſt faulte that wee committe doeth well deſerue that GOD ſhoulde vſe extreeme rigour: but yet doeth hee moderate himſelfe, according to this ſaying of the holy Scripture, that hee is ſlowe to wrath and longſuffering. GOD then ſpareth vs, and vſeth not rigour againſt vs at the firſte daſhe. But when hee ſeeth vs ſo harde hearted that hee canne not winne vs by patience, and that wee bee ſo ſtubborne as hee can not amende vs, nor make vs ſtoope vnder his hande: then is hee fayne to worke after another faſhion, and to ſtriue no lõger with thẽ, according to this ſaying in the Pſal. 103. 8.

Gen.6.3. in the ſixth Chapter of Geneſis, Why ſhould my ſpirit ſtriue any longer with men? For I ſee there is nothing but corruption in them: and therefore I will no more goe to law with them: I muſt be faine to condemne them and to execute my iudgement vppon them: for it is to no purpoſe to indite them any more, they be too much conuicted alreadie. Sith it is ſo, let vs be well ware, that although wee bee fraile, yet at leaſtwiſe we bee not wilfull in perſiſting in our ſinnes, to delight in them, and to feede them: but let vs returne againe vnto God out of hande, beeing ſorie that we haue offended him. And if he threaten vs, or ſhewe vs any ſigne of his wrath: let vs by and by ſtoope and not ſuffer anie ſtubbornes to take place in vs. For if we deale ſtubbornly & wilfully with him, we ſhal be driuen to abide the condemnation that is ſette downe here, ſpyte of our teethe: [namely] I haue ſeene this people, it is a ſtiffenecked people, and therefore I muſt needes roote them out. Marke this for one poynt, that here men are warned to examine themſelues, and vppon acknowledgement of their faults, to humble them ſelues before God, and to lay downe all pride and ſturdineſſe, ſo as God may not finde them ſtiffenecked, but pliable. 1.Pet.5.6. And that is it which Saint Peter meaneth where hee ſaieth, Humble your ſelues vnder the mightie hande of your God, that yee bee not handled roughly in the day of your viſitation. In ſpeaking of the mightie hande of GOD, hee ſheweth vs that if wee fight againſt it, wee ſhall finde it too harde for vs. True it is that at the firſte men thinke they winne much by chafing vppon the bit, and by ſtanding ſtubbornely againſt God: but in the ende they ſhall finde that Saint Peter did not without cauſe tearme his hand a mightie hand, to confounde all ſuch as ſet themſelues againſt it. Then is there none other ſhift, but to ſtoope vnder it, and to receiue the ſtrokes obediently, when it ſtriketh vs, aſſuring vs that it ſtriketh vs iuſtly. And if it touch vs not, let vs not tarie till God ſhewe himſelfe our enemie, but rather let vs preuent his wrath: Thus ye ſee what we haue to remember vpon this text.

Alſo there is one other poynt. I haue ſeene this people (ſaith God,) and it is a ſtiffenecked people. Hereby hee meaneth that hee knewe well enough by experience, that the leawdeneſſe of that people was vtterly vnrecouerable. True it is that God needeth not to make long inquiſition after the manner of men: for all thinges are preſent vnto him, and length of time can tel him no more than hee knoweth alreadie: But the ſcripture vſeth ſuch ſpeech, to doe vs to vnderſtand that God goeth not to worke at aduenture as men commonly doe, who fall to puniſhing oftentimes before they knowe the trueth or haue inquired of it. God then ſheweth here, that hee neuer lifteth vp his hande to chaſtice vs, but vpon good deliberation, knowing what is in vs, and hauing well conſidered whether there bee any meane to reclaime vs or no. Seeing hee taketh ſo great paine, needes muſt wee come to our laſt condemnation, if we bee wilful ſtubborne. Thus yee ſee what Moſes meant by theſe wordes, See and Beholde. And it is all one as if God woulde prooue his ſaying by ſuch experience thereof as were throughly knowen, and ſhewe as it were with his finger, that that people was not to bee delte withall, and that the verie creatures might well iudge of their naughtineſſe, that it was vtterly vnexcuſable. In deede wee doe not alwayes perceyue that God hath made inquiſition of our ſinnes: but yet ſhall wee finde it ſo in the end. And for the ſame cauſe, when hee minded to deſtroye Sodome and Gomorre, he ſaid expreſſely, that hee came downe to weete howe thinges went: Gen.18.20. and that although the crie came vp to his eares into heauen, and that their ſinne was ſo great, that euen the verie heauens roong of it: yet vouchſafed hee to examine their doinges neerlier: not that hee needed ſo to doe, as in reſpect of himſelfe: but to ſhewe vs that his iuſtice was rightfull and blameleſſe. As oft therefore as God puniſheth vs, let vs learne to knowe that wee haue lyen too long aſleepe, and that he in the meane while watched, and that wee muſte nowe pay ỹ arrearages becauſe we amended not in due time. And if GOD ſeeme ouerhaſtie in puniſhing vs: let vs conſider that wee tooke not the time when it was offered vs, and when hee gaue vs ſpace of repentance to turne vnto him, but rather were blinded withour owne hypocriſie, and that is the cauſe why God layeth his hand ſo roughly vpon vs.

Nowe let vs come to that which Moſes addeth. Hee ſaith that God beeing in minde to deſtroy the people, ſaide vnto him: Let mee alone that I may deſtroy this people, & that their name may bee put out from vnder heauen, ſo as it may neuer be ſpoken of more. It ſhoulde ſeeme that God was letted here by Moſes, when hee ſaith: Let mee alone. Nowe it were vnbeſeeming his power that hee coulde not execute the thing that hee had determined with himſelfe, but that a man ſhoulde withſtande him and reſtraine his libertie in doeing the thing that hee had purpoſed. Howe may this bee vnderſtoode? True it is that Moſes was not of authoritie to reſtraine Gods iudgement: but here wee ſee the infinite goodneſſe of him, who though he owe not any thing to men, vouchſafeth notwithſtanding to doe it for their ſakes. And let vs marke eſpeciallie, that God doeth ſo binde himſelfe to our prayers and ſupplications, that they bee as it were reſtraintes of his wrath: ſo that whereas diuerſe times hee woulde deſtroye all. hee is as it were chaunged, if wee come and humble our ſelues before him. Not that hee altereth his purpoſe: wee muſt not ſurmiſe any repentaunce in God, that hee ſhoulde turne backe agayne and bee better aduiſed, or bethinke himſelfe better what hee had to doe, as wee doe, who bee ſubiect to diuerſe paſſions, and alſo to alteration: there is no ſuch thing in God, there is no altering of the thing which hee hath once determined. But this is taken after the manner of men, inſomuch that to make vs vnderſtande what is for our profite, God is faine to bowe downe from his his high maieſtie wherevnto wee bee not able to attaine, and to vſe ſimilitudes meete for our rawneſſe and infirmitie. Therefore hee ſayeth that when we pray, it is all one as if wee did caſt a barre in his way, to ſtoppe his wrath that it ſhoulde not vtterly conſume vs. And why? Becauſe that hee of his owne accorde hath wilingly and without conſtraint made couenaunt with vs, that whenſoeuer wee pray vnto him, hee will performe all our requeſtes, ſo as wee ſhall not bee diſappointed in calling vppon him, but ſhall alwayes perceiue that hee was willing to graunt our will and deſire, according as it is ſaid in the hundred and fiue and fortith pſalme, Pſal.145.19 The Lorde performeth the willes of them that feare him. Surely it is a worde that ought to pearce our heartes, when it is ſaide that GOD doeth the will of men. Nowe who is hee? and what are wee? Wee be wretched creatures, ſuch as ought to bee aſhamed to ſhewe themſelues before GOD. And as for to bring either will or deſire of our owne thither: it ought to diſmay vs, and to make vs ſay, Alas Lorde, doe what pleaſeth thee, for it is not meete for vs to put foorth anie deſire or affection of ours: for what are wee but wretched creatures? But ſurelie Gods will is that wee ſhoulde craue of him ſo it bee obediently, for according to Saint 1.Ioh.3.22. & 5.14. Iohns ſaying in his Canonicall Epiſtle, we muſt not pray to him at aladuenture, nor alleadge our owne fancies to reſtrayne GOD to our deſires, wee muſte not vſe ſuch boldeneſſe: but when we haue ſubmitted our heartes obedientlie to our God: then if wee pray to him for anything that is to our welfare, hee liketh well of it, and hee will pleaſure vs in graunting it, as though there were ſuch a couenaunt and league betweene him and vs, as might not bee broken. Seeing that God ſtoopeth ſo lowe as to graunt vs our requeſtes: what woulde wee more? But he doeth it, and that doeth he well ſhewe in this text. Let mee alone ſayth hee to Moſes. Hee ſeemeth here to ſpeake as it were to ſome companion or fellow of his. And why doeth hee not deſtroy Moſes too, as hee might well doe if hee liſted. Is Moſes then able to ſtay him, or to abridge him of his libertie? No: but as I ſaide afore, GOD doth ſo binde himſelfe, that the prayers which are made vnto him, doe ſtay the execution of his vengeaunce. And that is the cauſe why that in the rehearſing of this ſtorie in the Pſalme, it is Pſal.106.23 ſayde there expreſſelie, that if Moſes had not ſet himſelfe in the breache, all hadde beene mard. There the Prophete vſeth a ſimilitude: like as when a Towne is battered with the Cannon, there is ſuch a breach made as the enemies may enter, to ſacke the towne and to put al to the ſworde. Euen ſo is it in this caſe: when Gods wrath was once kindled againſt his people, hee had battered them by & by with his ſaid threate, and had made a breach vppon them ſo as there remayned no more but to enter. But beholde, Moſes ſetteth himſelfe in the breach, that is to ſay he ſtandeth vp againſt God and maketh interceſſiō to him for the people, ſo as he ſtoppeth the breach againe, and ſtayeth Gods wrath frō going anie further. And this is not reported for Moſes onely: But our Lorde declareth thereby what ſtrength our prayers & ſupplicatiōs haue, when they be well ordered, ſo as wee come to him with ſuch zeale as becommeth vs, and with ſuch faith and humilitie as hee requireth. And we muſt remember what Saint Iames ſaith of Iames 5.17. Helias: namelie that he made it to raine, and alſo did ſhut vp the heauens and cauſed drought, alonely by his prayers. Loe here an incredible thing, ỹ when the Prophet openeth his mouth to pray vnto God, he hath power to ſhut vp the heauens, and to bring a generall famine euerywhere, to puniſhe the Idolatrous king & al thoſe that tooke part with him in his wickedneſſe: and that afterwarde when he came to God againe, & deſired raine, he opened the heauens againe and all the ſtreames thereof, ſo as the earth was then plentifully watered. Neuertheleſſe the intent of S. Iames is not, that our knowing hereof ſhould be to magnifie the power of Helias, or to ſay that hee had that graunted vnto him as a ſpeciall priuiledge, but to giue vs a rule whereby to perceiue howe auailable the prayer of a righteous man is, and ſo to incourage vs to pray vnto God. For ſeeing that the Prophet Helias could both ſhut the heauens and open them againe by his prayers: let vs not doubte but that wee ſhall be hearde, when wee call vppon the name of God: And that when the bottomleſſe gulfes are opened, we ſhall ſhutte them againe: inſomuch that euen when the wicked ſhall ſeme to haue the worlde at will, then wil GOD roote them out at our requeſt. Therefore let vs pray boldely, vppon truſt of the promiſes that God hath giuen vs, and our prayers ſhall bee of ſuch force, that they ſhall euen chaunge the order of nature if neede bee. As for example we ſee that at the ſaying of Ioſua, the ſunne ſtayed, and ſtood ſtill a day and a night together, without any night betwixte the one day and the other. Ioſua.10.12. 13.

Sith wee ſee theſe thinges: let vs not ſay: That was but for once, or ſuch a holy man or Sainct had ſuch power: but let vs vnderſtande that it was our Lordes intent to ſhewe vs that although heauen and earth were mingled together, and all thinges as confuſed as might bee: yet if we reſort to him, putting our whole truſte in him, hee can well remedie the thinges that ſeeme to vs to be furtheſt out of order, and then ſhall we ſee the fruit which our prayers yeeld vs. Thus ye ſee what we haue to marke vppon this text where GOD willeth Moſes to let him alone.

Yet notwithſtanding wee muſt marke herewithall that it is a thing to bee wiſhed, to haue ſuch foolke among vs as maye make interceſſion and ſupplications to GOD: For wee ſee what coldneſſe is in moſt of vs. Sometimes in a whole nation and in euery great multitude of people, ye ſhall not find twentie or ten perſōs that haue a right zeale to pray vnto God and are diſpoſed thereto as is requiſite. And how ſhoulde we do if they ſtoode not in the breach?

Sute-

Surely wee ſhoulde be left bare, accordingly al-Exod. 32.25 ſo as the ſame ſimilitude is alleadged in Exodus, that the people had made themſelues bare of his protection, by making the golden calfe. For they had no more any God to maintaine them.
And euen ſo would it befall vs alſo that we ſhold make our ſelues bare euery day, by putting our ſelues out of the protection of our God: were it not that ſome do ſet themſelues in the breach.
And therefore let vs learne that oftentimes God ſpareth vs, becauſe there are ſome y make interceſſion for vs, euen whome wee knowe not of. And let vs thinke vppon it the more, for aſmuch as euerie of vs feeleth himſelfe colde in praying, and that wee goe not to it with ſuch corage and earneſtneſſe as God commaundeth.
[Let euery of vs bethinke our ſelues thus:] Alas, if I were alone, and all the worlde were like mee: what woulde become of it? We might periſhe for wee are not worthie that GOD ſhoulde regarde vs. But wee muſt vnderſtande, that it is not our Lordes will that wee ſhoulde periſhe, when hee ordeyneth men to come before him after that maner. And therefore howſoeuer wee fare, after wee haue rebuked our ſelues, let vs proceede to this zeale of praying both for our ſelues and for other men, and let vs not doubt but God will haue pitie vppon vs, yea and euen forgiue our neighbours alſo at our requeſt. Trueth it is that in this caſe wee muſt not bring any ouerweening with vs, to auaunce our ſelues as though we coulde further the ſaluation of other men: but we muſt take it as God ſheweth it. Beholde I am not worthie that God ſhould heare me my ſelfe: and yet notwithſtanding hee vouchſafeth to heare mee, not onely for my ſelfe, or for three or foure moe: but alſo for a whole nation. Let euerie of vs doe this, and let vs conſider howe mercifull our God is to vs, ſeeing hee not onely vouchſafeth to re-garde vs our ſelues, vs wretched ſinners, vs that haue turned our backes vpon him, vs that haue not ceaſed to prouoke his wrath againſt vs: but alſo vouchſafeth for our ſakes, to accepte our prayers and ſupplications not onely for our pri-uate friendes, but alſo for his whole Church.
For it behoueth vs to pray generally for all the faithful, yea and for them whō we know not, yea and moreouer euen for the vnbeleeuers if there 1. Tim. 2. 1. bee anie meane to conuert them. Seeing that God heareth vs after that faſhion, euen for the furtheſt ſtraungers in the worlde, for thoſe that are vnknowen to vs, yea and euen for ſuch as are not yet of his houſe, nor of his flocke, but are as ſtray ſheepe: is it not a meane to make vs to truſt in him, and to pray vnto him with ſuch certeintie, as wee come not to him like waue-Iam. 1.6. ring reedes, (as ſaith Saint Iames) but with aſ-ſuredneſſe that hee wil heare vs, and that our prayers ſhall not bee vnauailable, becauſe wee reſort vnto him and haue recourſe vnto him vpon truſt of his promiſe?

And hereby wee ſee howe greatly the wretched worlde hath beene abuſed by making in-terceſſion to Saincts. When men read that Moſes was hearde, and likewiſe Helias: they concluded thereupon, O then muſt we reſort to the Heeſainctes and ſheeſaincts, and they muſt be our aduocates and Patrons to God. Yea but the meaning of the holy ſcripture is cleane contrarie, as I haue declared alreadie, according to the ſaying of Saint Iames. For when God ſayth ſo: it is not to make vs to runne vnto Moſes: but it is to the ende that by his example we ſhoulde not doubt to pray alſo: for the promiſes belong to vs as well as to him. Like as Moſes truſted not in his owne goodneſſe, ne preaſed before God as more worthie than the reſt of the people: but only as knowing that God called & allured him thereunto: ſo alſo let vs nowe grounde our ſelues vppon the promiſes whereby God incourageth vs to come vnto him, yea and to come without doubting that hee will reach vs his hande, euen without regarding whether there bee any worthineſſe in vs or no.
For wee ſhall finde none in vs: but it is enough for vs that our Lorde biddeth vs come, and our obeying of him liketh him better than all the vertues that wee coulde bring with vs, if there were any in vs. Therefore it is too groſſe an ouerſight, that whereas God incourageth vs to come vnto him with prayer and ſupplication after the example of the holy Prophetes: wee thereupon ſhoulde contrariwiſe make them our Patrons and Aduocates to ſhift our ſelues from repayring vnto him. Againe on the otherſide, although Moſes prayed for the people while he was in this worlde: Doeth it followe that the ſame charge is committed to him nowe ſtill in heauen? Doeth the ſcripture tell vs that Moſes maketh interceſſion for vs ſtill? So then, it is as it were a dragging of the holy ſcripture by the haire of the heade, (as men ſaye,) and a racking of it to falſehoode, when the thinges that are ſpoken of men aliue, are wreſted to them dead. Therefore let vs holde vs contented with this common doctrine, that is to wit that euerie of vs muſt take heart to pray vnto God, becauſe his promiſes are made to all men without exception. For our petitions are not grounded vpon our owne worthineſſe: but vppon Gods goodneſſe, in that he ſheweth him ſelfe ſo free hearted as to reach out his hande to receyue vs. Heerewithall let vs pray one for another, and let vs not doubt but wee ſhall bee hearde. And although wee bee colde, and ſlouthfull: yet let vs vnderſtande that GOD heareth his Church, ſo that although we come not to him ſo freely, and with ſo earneſt and wel diſpoſed minde as we ſhould doe: yet doth he pitie vs, becauſe hee not onely hath an eye to our ſeuerall requeſtes: but alſo accepteth the generall prayers that are made by the whole Church, in our behalfe and fauour: and therefore let vs occupie our ſelues therein as long as wee liue. As for thoſe whome God hath taken out of this worlde, for aſmuch as the ho-lie ſcripture telleth vs not anie thing of them:
let not vs fall to thruſting in of our owne imaginations and dotages in that behalfe: for ey-ther wee muſte pray in faith, or elſe wee ſhall neuer bee hearde. And what is meant by

faith? That wee ſhoulde bee taught by Gods worde. Saint Paul ſettes it downe for an vnchaungeable order, that wee canne not call vppon God, vnleſſe wee knowe his trueth, and that the Goſpell haue beene preached vnto vs, as is ſaide in the tenth to the Romanes. Rom.10.14. 17. And let vs aſſure our ſelues, that as manie as ſteppe aſide from this rule, are as ſtray beaſtes, and their prayers ſhall neuer boote them, for they doe but vnhallow the name of GOD, becauſe they haue not the warrantes of his promiſes in their heartes.

Now let vs paſſe further: It is ſaid, I will make of thee a mightier and greater people than this. Here GOD ſheweth Moſes, that there is no cauſe why hee ſhoulde bee afraide, that the good will which hee hadde ſhewed towardes that people ſhoulde bee loſt, or that hee was raiſed vppe in vaine to be a worker of their redemption, and of the welfare that was promiſed them. I will make of thee another people, ſaith he. But Moſes is not contented with that: for hee maketh interceſſion ſtill vnto GOD. And this is not added without cauſe: but rather to make vs to knowe that Moſes regarded not himſelfe, but that forgetting himſelfe hee ſought the welfare of thoſe that were cõmitted to his charge. That is the thing in effecte which wee haue to beare in minde vppon this place.

Neuertheleſſe it might bee demaunded heere, whether it were enough for GOD to raiſe vppe a newe people or no, ſeeing the promiſe was made to Abraham and his offpring. Howe then? Coulde hee deſtroye this people, without vnſaying his owne worde, and without calling back of his owne promiſe? No, but hereby we be done to vnderſtand, that we muſt not bee ouerinquiſitiue of Gods iudgementes, but deale ſoberly, and modeſtlie with them. For if wee enter into too deepe ranſaking of them, wee ſhall finde them ſuch a bottomleſſe pitte, as wee ſhall neuer gette out of them. Therefore let it ſuffice vs that if GOD had liſted to haue diſpatched that people, hee coulde haue founde meanes to haue performed his promiſe, ſo as it ſhoulde not haue beene in vaine. For (as it is ſaide) had hee not beene able to haue Mat.3.9. rayſed vppe children to Abraham euen out of ſtones? Then muſt not wee binde GOD to our meanes, nor to the common order of nature, ſeeing hee is to vs incomprehenſible: but wee muſt conſider that hee is able to worke after ſuch a ſorte, as will vtterly abaſhe vs, and wee ſhall not knowe which way hee went to worke.

Thus ye ſee that the thing which wee haue to marke in this text, is that when Gods iudgementes paſſe our capacitie, we muſt not fall to ranſaking of them by peecemeale out of meaſure: for (as ſaith Salomon in the fiue and Prou.25.2. twentith Chapter of the Prouerbes) it is his glorie to keepe thinges hidden, ſo that although he ſhewe vs not why hee doeth this or that, yet is not his glorie thereby diminiſhed, but rather increaſed. For it ſheweth men their own weakeneſſe, to the ende they ſhoulde learne to liue in lowlineſſe, and not thinke too well of their owne wiſedome. Marke that for a ſpeciall point.

But here are yet other thinges which deſerue to be looked vnto more neerely. And firſt of all, whereas it is ſaide that Moſes ceaſed not to make interceſſion: that may ſeeme ſtrange. For I haue tolde you alreadie that our prayers are faultie, if they be not directed by faith: & faith importeth that wee bee ſure of Gods will, according to Saint Iohns exhortation, where hee 1.Iohn 3.22 & 5.14. ſaith that if wee intende to pray aright, we muſt followe Gods ordinaunce, and not our owne likinges. Sith it is ſo: howe durſt Moſes in this text ſue vnto God contrarie to his expreſſe forbidding, ſo as although GOD ſay, Let mee alone, I will not heare thee ſpeake of it anie more, this people muſt needes periſhe: yet doth Moſes make intreatance ſtill? Wherein he may peraduenture ſeeme vnportunate, yea and that hee is minded euen to ſpite him, or at leaſt wiſe to ſhewe ſome kinde of diſobedience? Nay we muſt note, that Moſes neuer ſhewed himſelfe more obedient than in this, foraſmuch as ỹ truſt of the promiſe that God had made could not be wreſted from him by ſo forcible a temptation, needes muſt it bee that hee was throughly ſetled in faith, when God ſpeaketh to him after ſuch a ſorte, and telleth him, I am determined to deſtroy this people: and yet Moſes maketh interceſſion ſtil, as though he woulde let him of his purpoſe. And why? Is it for that hee diſcrediteth God, or for that hee beleeueth not his threatning as the vnbeleeuers doe, who commonly make but a mocke of it when God ſpeaketh to them of his wrath? No: Moſes dealeth not ſo: but this is his leaningſtocke: behold, God hath made his couenaunt with Abraham, and that couenaunt muſt needes bee vnchaungeable. For it dependeth not vppon the deſertes of men, but is grounded vppon Gods owne free goodneſſe. Moſes knewe this: and therefore when hee hearde GOD ſpeake of the deſtroying of that people: he fell as it were to ſetting of himſelfe againſt it, vppon aſſurance of the promiſe that had beene made. True it is that he ſaith nothing of it: but yet was it a thing throughly knowen to the people, that at the ende of foure hundreth yeares, they ſhoulde be put in poſſeſſion of the inheritaunce which God had promiſed them. Moſes then helde himſelfe to Gods couenaunt, which was vnchaun- 2.Tim.2.13 geable and to ſtande in force for euer. Though men bee neuer ſo wicked: yet will God of his goodneſſe ſurmount all their ſinnes, ſo as his worde muſt needes come to effect. But nowe had GOD raunſomed his people, and the tearme was fully come wherein they ſhoulde inioye his promiſe: therefore was it of neceſſitie that all theſe thinges ſhoulde bee doone, and Moſes doeth God the honour, to keepe him to that which hee had ſayde. Nowe that hee is aſſaulted with greeuous temptation, euen as though it were cannon ſhot, hee perſiſteth neuertheleſſe in the ſame faith, and it is not a faith that flickereth as a ſhaddowe, but a faith conceyued of the worde and couenaunt of God, a faith that ſhoulde ſtande faſt ſetled and vnmouable. We ſee howe that Moſes neuer obeyed GOD better, than when hee withſtoode the threatening which God made. But yet doeth not this reſolue the whole queſtion. For a man might replie: Howe ſo? Beholde, God ſpeaketh continually: why then doeth Moſes beleeue one of his ſayinges more than other? Againe there is an other doubte. Seeing that God is vnuariable and hath but one ſingle will: why ſpeaketh he otherwiſe than hee had determined in himſelfe? For in ſo doing hee ſhoulde deale double, which thing wee knowe can in no wiſe agree with his nature. As touching the firſt queſtion, let vs marke that foraſmuch as Moſes was gouerned by the holy Ghoſt, and was fullie perſwaded that it behooued him to ſticke to the promiſe which was made to Abraham, and therefore gaue credite to the ſame: hee conſidered alſo therewithall, that Gods threatening was iuſt, and that he might iuſtly execute it: for elſe his praying had beene but a mockerie. Hee ſawe the daunger that hung ouer the people, and was readie to fall vppon them. But foraſmuch as he thought there was a remedy, though GOD had ſaide, Let me alone: hee falleth to intreataunce againe. And that ſerueth to ſhew the heynouſneſſe of the offence, and of the fault that had beene committed. For ſuch an enormitie as that was, deſerued well ỹ vtter deſtruction of the people. Moſes then is ſo gouerned by the holy Ghoſte, that although his will ſeeme contrarie to Gods will: yet neuertheleſſe hee knoweth what wee ought to followe. But it ſeemeth that Abraham did the cleane

Gen. 22. 2. contrarie. For God had promiſed him to bleſſe Iſaac, and to raiſe vp a people of his ſeed, whom he woulde take to himſelfe. And yet notwithſtanding he commaundeth Abraham to ſlea Iſaac with his owne handes. Nowe it ſeemeth that after the example which is ſet vs downe here, he ſhoulde rather haue ſaide, Lorde thou haſt promiſed mee that my ſonne Iſaac ſhall beget a ſeede whereby ſaluation ſhall be ſent vnto the worlde: therefore he muſt needes liue. But Abraham is gouerned by the holy Ghoſte, and knoweth that hee ought to obey GOD ſimplie without gayneſaying: for hee coulde well haue ſtirred vp ſeede from out of the aſhes of Iſaac when he had beene deade. So then let vs marke that when ſuch temptations as theſe doe incounter the faithfull, ſo as God ſeemeth to bee contrarie to himſelfe: he fayleth not to gouerne them by his holy ſpirite, and to giue them ſuch wiſedome and diſcretion, as they holde themſelues alwayes to the thing that is good and belonging to their duetie, and neuer doubt at al of Gods worde. And therefore let vs beſeech God to teach vs his will, and let vs doe our indeuour in ſeeking his worde: and ſurely hee will neuer ſuffer vs to goe aſtray, nor to doe amiſſe, but foraſmuchas he knoweth vs to be vnskilfull and eaſie to be led away to and fro, he will hold vs backe by his holie ſpirit, and giue vs diſcretion to diſcerne what hee commaundeth. For like as he fayled neither Moſes, nor Abraham, no more alſo will he faile vs.

As touching the ſeconde queſtion, where it was demaunded howe it may be that GOD ſhoulde ſay one thing and meane an other: (for that is contrarie to his narure, in ſomuch as hee nameth himſelfe the trueth, and therefore muſt needes ſhewe himſelfe to bee ſo indeede:) we muſt marke that in ſaying ſo, hee ſpeaketh not peremptorilie, but with condition, though the condition be not expreſſed. Therefore we muſt haue an eye to the ende whereunto theſe wordes are referred: and then ſhall wee finde that there is no contrarietie in them. God had ſaide to Abraham, thy ſeede ſhall bee helde in bondage: but about afoure hundred yeres hence I will performe the promiſe that I haue made thee.

Needes nowe muſte this free promiſe of God be performed: for it dependeth not vppon men: it is not ſaide, conditionally that thine ofſpring behaue themſelues well: but Gods intent is to bee vnchaungeable in his determination. And therefore whereas he ſaith here to Moſes, Let me alone, I will make cleane riddaunce of this people: it is as if he ſhoulde ſay, This people hath deſerued to be vtterly deſtroyed: for ſeeing they be paſt amendement, what ſhall I doe more? I haue tried them a number of wayes, I haue experience of them, I haue borne gentlie with them, I haue chaſtiſed them, and yet will they not bee reclaimed, neither by faire meanes nor by foule. Seeing then that they be paſt recouerie, they muſt needs be vtterly rooted out and periſh. Yea, but yet is there this, Let mee alone. His vſing of that ſpeech includeth a condition: as if he ſhoulde ſay, Here am I readie to doe the office of a iudge: what remaineth nowe to doe, but to thunder downe vppon this people, and to make cleane diſpatche of them? Onely make thou no interceſſion for them.

Nowe wee ſee yet better the thing which I touched afore: that is to wit, that God was ſo farre off from cutting off of Moſes, or from ſhutting him out that he ſhoulde not pray: that hee did rather ſharpen him thereunto. As if hee ſhoulde ſay: But for thee this people ſhoulde be deſtroyed. For if I ſhoulde handle them according to their deſertes: I ſhoulde confounde them. And foraſmuch as they be ſo wilfull that they be paſt amendement. It is time nowe or neuer to execute my ſentence. It is too much: I will make no moe wordes: But I will graunt thus much at thy requeſt, that if thou make interceſſion to me, I will be reſtrayned by it. Now then wee ſee theſe two queſtions well reſolued: and the profite that redounderth of this texte. Namely firſte that the force of our prayers is ſhewed vs here, when we pray vnto God faithfullie.

And ſecondly we ſee that daungers ought to prouoke vs the more. The more that Gods wrath is vttered vnto vs, the more ought we to be moued to pray vnto God: becauſe it is as if he draue vs thereto by force. And wee muſt not pray alonly for our ſelues, nor haue a care of our ſaluation onely, nor onely feare the daungers that hang ouer our heades: but wee muſt alſo take care for our neighbors, and when we heare Gods threateninges, they muſt waken vs, and make vs to come before him, ſaying, Alas Lord, heere is a ſorte of wretched creatures which muſt needes periſh, if thou be ſo diſpoſed. Therfore let vs bee prouoked to feare, the more for Gods ſhewing of his wrath vnto vs, and for the hearing of his threates: For hee vttereth his iudgementes vnto vs to the ende that we ſhould preuent them. For when GOD giueth ſentence vppon our ſinnes, it is alwayes with this condition, that hee doeth it not with out giuing of vs ſome reſpit to remedie the miſcheefe, ſo wee ſeeke the remiedie by ſuch meanes as he commaundeth in his worde. And ſo yee ſee what we haue to remember vppon the example of Moſes.

To bee ſhorte, wee ſee that it is not lawfull for men to put forth themſelues to make prayer and ſupplication: except they haue the promiſe and be ſure that it is Gods good will that they ſhoulde doe ſo. But GOD will giue them ſuch a zeale, as the temptations which ſhall croſſe them ſhall not ſtay them from going on forwarde, though it ſeeme to themſelues that GOD is not minded to heare them, but rather to put them backe and to ſhake them quite off. Therefore let vs not ceaſe to reſorte vnto him as it were importunately. For the im-
Luke.11. 2. portuneneſſe whereof our Lorde Ieſus Chriſte ſpeaketh, in reporting the ſimilitude concerning a widow ẏ had to do with a wicked iudge: made ẏ iudge aſhamed though he were a naughtie and froward man. But ſurely when wee come to GOD, we neede not to bee importunate: for Ieſus Chriſt telleth vs, that if wee finde mercie in men that are lewde and illminded towardes vs: we ſhall much more obtayne fauour at Gods hande, who tarieth not till we come vnto him, but calleth and allureth vs to him. Seeing then that he is ſo friendlie, let vs not be afraide that we ſhall not obteyne our requeſtes. But yet for all that, let vs not giue ouer with once praying vnto him as it were for faſhions ſake: but let vs holde out to the ende, yea and euen be importunate vppon him. Although he ſeeme vnwilling to heare vs, and let vs alone in our diſtreſſes, yea and that to our ſeeming our miſerie doeth ſtill increaſe: yet notwithſtanding let not vs fayle to holde on ſtill, reſting vppon his promiſe which he hath giuen vs, which is certayne and vnfallible: that is to wit, that hee will neuer faile thoſe which come vnto him and call vpon him in trueth.

Nowe let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good GOD with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs feele them better than wee haue done heretofore, and that foraſmuch as wee knowe what neede wee haue to pray, (inſomuch that euerie minute of an houre wee runne in daunger of endleſſe death and are like to periſhe both bodie and ſoule:) it may pleaſe him to inflame vs ſo by his holie ſpirite, as we may call vppon him vnfaynedlie, and be more carefull to doe it and to exerciſe our ſelues in it at all times, as prouoked thereto by the great neede which wee haue thereof, conſidering the miſeries where through wee ſhoulde periſhe, if wee were not ſuccoured by him and by his grace: and that in the meane whyle it may pleaſe him to beare with vs in our infirmities, and not ſuffer vs to be rent off from ẏ bodie of his Church, but make vs to perceiue by experience, that the prayers which are made through the whole worlde are auailable to his choſen, and ẏ their prayers alſo do auaile vs, ſo as the ſame may ſtabliſhe vs continuallie more & more, in the holie vnion which he hath made with vs in the name of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace not onely to vs but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth, reducing all poore ignoraunt people, into the right way of ſaluation, out of the bondage of errour and darkeneſſe: and that for this purpoſe it woulde pleaſe him, to rayſe vp true and faithfull miniſters of his worde, which may not ſeeke their owne profite and ambition, but the glorifying of his holy name, and the ſaluation of his poore flocke. On the other ſide, &c.

On Saturday the xxxi. of Auguſt. 1555.

The Lxvj Sermon which is the fifth vppon the ninth Chapter.

15 Then turned I mee, and went downe the Hill, and the hill burned with fire, and I had the two tables of the Couenant in my two hands.

16 Then looked I, and behold yee had ſinned againſt the Lord your God: and had made a molten Calfe, and were turned out of hand from the way which the Lord your God had commaunded you.

17 Then tooke I the two tables and caſt them out of my two handes, and brake them before your eies:

18 And I fell downe flat before the Lorde fortie dayes and fortie nightes as afore, without eating breade or drinking water, for all your ſinnes which you had committed in dooing euill in the ſight of the Lord, by prouoking him to wrath.

19 For I was afrayde of the anger and wrath wherewith the Lord was diſpleaſed againſt you to deſtroy you. And the Lorde hearde mee that time alſo.

20 Likewiſe the Lord was ſore angrie with Aaron to deſtroy him: but I prayed alſo for Aaron the ſame time.

21 Then tooke I your ſinne which you had made, that is to wit the Calfe, and burnt it with fire, and ſtomped it and grounde it throughlie euen vntill it was ſmall as duſt, and caſt the duſt thereof in the brooke that came downe from the hill.

HEre Moſes declareth the great good zeale that hee had, at ſuche time as he ſawe God ſo ſore offended with the Iewes for making the golden calfe, and for their forſaking of their Redeemer to giue theſelues ouer to a deade thing, rather than to him of whoſe power they had had experience ſo manie wayes. Nowe he ſaith that hee had the two tables in his hande, and that when hee ſawe the people ſo falne away to Idolatrie, hee brake them in peeces. Heere it might bee asked, whether Moſes were not caried with ouerhaſtie moode. For we haue ſeene that thoſe two tables were written with Gods owne hande, ſo as there was not anie workemanſhippe of man in them, but that the ingrauing of the tenne commaundementes in them, was of Gods owne doing. Nowe then, that Moſes threwe downe Gods handie worke after that faſhion, notwithſtanding that the people had ſinned: it ſeemeth not to proceede of any modeſtie, but rather of too vnaduiſed zeale and oueruiolent headineſſe. We muſt not preſume to iudge of ſuch odde things: for wee ſee that God gouerneth his ſeruauntes by his holie ſpirit, and we knowe that ſometimes hee ſtirreth vp his faithfull ones to doe his pleaſure by extraordinarie meanes. And although wee may not make a certain rule of it: yet is not the deed it ſelfe to bee blamed. Wee ſee what happened vnto Phinees. For although he was not ordeined to be a iudge, but onely to bee a prieſt: yet did he execute Iuſtice vpon the adulterer, & the adultreſſe which had defiled the Sanctuarie. God allowed his doing, and there is recorde of it in the holie ſcripture, and yet notwithſtanding it was a peculiar deede whichwee may not follow, without a ſpecial mouing of the holy Ghoſt. As much is to be ſaide of the thing which wee reade of in this texte, where Moſes brake the two tables, which thing hee did not through haſtie moode, but as ledde thereto by a zeale to Godwarde, and GOD ſhewed himſelfe therein, of purpoſe to doe the people to vnderſtande, how heynous their tranſgeſſion was. It is ſaide that Moſes was ſent of God to bring downe his couenaunt, and to bee as in his ſteede, whom hee ſerued. And therefore his deede was as it were a declaring to the people, that his couenant was broken and torne in peeces. Beholde (ſaith God) It is true I haue choſen you, I haue couenaunted with you, I haue ſhewed my ſelfe to be your God, and the couenantes were ingrauen in two ſtones, that they might remaine in perpetuall remembraunce. But now haue you broken your faith to me, and therefore muſt I for my part forſake you, and diſanull the couenant that was made betwixt vs. Thus we ſee that Moſes did not anie thing at aladuenture, nor was driuen by fleſhly affection: but that God ſheweth the people by him, that he gaue them ouer and tooke them not for his, but vtterly diſclaimed them. For the verie bonde of the vnion, was the obedience of the people in ſubmitting themſelues vnto his lawe, and their acknowledging of him to be their god, and their worſhipping of him, notwithſtanding that there were infirmities in them. But they make them a calfe of golde, and vtterly forſake the religion that was appointed them. And foraſmuch as they did ſo: it was good reaſon that God ſhould ſhake them off, and make as it were an vtter diuorce between himſelfe & them for euer. Marke that for one point.

But nowe by the way, this ſeemeth to diſagree with that which Moſes addeth: that is to wit, that he ſhoulde breake the two tables with his owne handes, as it were of purpoſe to ſeparate God and the people aſunder: & yet notwithſtanding make inter ceſſion for them, yea & ỹ after ſuch a ſort (as it is ſaid in Exodus) as he was not cõtented to intreate God only w praier & ſupplications: but alſo was inflamed with ſuch zeale, as

as hee beſought God (if it were poſſible) to take him out of this life, yea and euen to wipe him out of the booke of life, ſo as hee might bee accurſed, conditionallie that the people might eſcape. Here are two thinges which ſeeme verie diſagreeable at the firſt ſight: namely, that hee ſhoulde bee ſo angrie, and that hee ſhoulde on Gods behalfe breake and diſanul the couenant, as who ſhoulde ſay he meant to baniſh the people from the kingdome of heauen, and from all hope of ſaluation, yea and euen from the inheritaunce that was promiſed them: and that yet notwithſtanding, he ſhould go and offer him ſelfe to GOD, to bee puniſhed for the peoples ſakes, and to beare their curſe both in his bodie and in his ſoule. But herein we ſee, that Gods ſeruauntes may well haue a burning zeale to execute their charge: and yet for all that, not ceaſe to haue pitie & compaſſion on ſuch as periſhe, and whome they be inforced to hate, and againſt whome they bee driuen to bee ſharpe and rough. And Moſeſes zeale ſhewed it ſelfe, not onely in breaking both the Tables, but alſo in his doing of the execution that we reade of in Exodus. For he did not onely rebuke the people ſharpely: but alſo commaunded the Leuites to halowe their handes. And howe? By killing all that euer they mette with. Dedicate your ſelues this day vnto the Lorde ſayth hee. So was that tribe choſen to doe that execution. And although they were ordeyned to the ſeruice of the ſanctuarie: yet is it tolde them that they muſt conſecrate their handes vnto GOD. And after what manner? By ſleaing their brethren, ſo as they ſpared not any man for kinreds ſake. Indeede yee bee all of Abrahams houſe (ſaith he): but yet muſt you execute vengeaunce this day, for the offence that hath beene commmitted againſt GOD, in making the calfe. Loe here another token, that Moſes was ſo out of patience with the people, as he had no kindenеſſe in him, ne meant to forgiue the tranſgreſſion that had beene cõmitted againſt GOD: and yet for all this, he is contented to yeelde his owne perſon to aunſwere for them, not onely by ſuſteyning ſome bodilie puniſhment: but alſo by beeing euen damned for them, if it were poſſible. But wee muſt alwayes come backe to that which I haue touched alreadie: that is to wit, that Gods ſeruauntes haue alwayes ſuch a care of the welfare of them that are cõmitted to their charge: that they had leauer to periſh themſelues, than to ſee thoſe goe to deſtruction, of whoſe ſaluation there was ſome hope. And yet notwithſtanding they ceaſe not for all that, to be ſharpe and rough when God commaundeth them to doe their duetie, not vppon crueltie, that they haue not compaſſion ſtill vppon the wretched ſinners: but becauſe it is not in their owne libertie and choyce to ſhewe mercie, but they muſt haue reſpecte to their office, and vnto Gods will, that they followe the ſame. Both theſe thinges are ſhewed vs here in Moſes: and we ſee that all the Prophetes haue vſed the like manner of dealing. It may well ſeeme that they haue no regarde to ſpare the people. For they threaten Gods wrathe, they curſe, they condemne, and to bee ſhorte, they ſeeme to bring nothing with them but thunder clappes: and yet notwithſtanding wee ſee they were led with ſuch pitie and carefulneſſe, that they beſought God to ſhewe fauour to ſuch as were vnworthie of it. Who will giue teares vnto mine eyes, ſaith the Prophete Ieremie? I could well finde in mine hearte to melt into water, to bewaile the ſinnes of my countrieſolke. And yet in the meane ſeaſon howe ſpeaketh hee? Vſeth he mild tearmes to rebuke the people with gentleneſſe? Nay, hee cryeth out againſt them as though hee had forgotten all naturall affection. So then we ſee ỳ theſe two things agree verie well: that is to wit, that thoſe whome GOD chooſeth to ſet foorth his worde, may well regarde the welfare and benefite of the wretched ſinners that are committed to their charge, and bee euen ſorie and exceedingly greeued at the heart to ſee them goe to deſtruction: and yet for all that, not forbeare to ſhewe ſignes of rigour, ſo farre foorth as their office requireth, and as they needes muſt for the ſeruing of God.

Exod. 32. 27 29. Ier. 9. 1.

Furthermore as touching the requeſt of Moſes: it is a ſtraunge caſe that hee ſhoulde deſire to be wiped out of the booke that God had written: for he knewe well it was vnpoſſible. He was not ſo ignoraunt but that hee knewe Gods determination to bee vnchaungeable, and that his chooſing of thoſe that are his can not by anie meanes be altered. And therefore this requeſt ſeemeth to be vnordinate, yea and vtterly diſagreeing to faith. But we muſt marke that in this zeale Moſes reſpected not preciſely what was poſſible to bee doone: but onely meant to pray God that he being but one man might periſhe rather than the whole people ſhoulde periſhe, ſo as hee himſelfe might aunſwere for all the euill that had beene doone if it were poſſible. And beſides that, wee haue to marke here, that Moſes matched Gods glorie with the welfare of the people to whome the promiſes were giuen. For he perſwadeth himſelfe that it was not poſſible that that people ſhoulde bee vtterly rooted out, but that Gods trueth muſt bee aboliſhed therewithall, becauſe God had bound himſelfe to the offſpring of Abraham: and therefore that if that people had beene cut off, God ſhoulde haue ſeemed to be variable. He coulde well haue found out ſome meane incomprehenſible to man: but Moſes coulde iudge no further than he was able to conceiue. Now then forаſmuch as he was at his wittes ende in this caſe, and God was to be found faithfull and ſoothfaſt by performing of his couenant: therefore doth he forget himſelfe, and is caried away rather to offer himſelfe as it were in a ſacrifice of curſing, than that Gods name ſhould be blaſphemed, or that it might be ſaid that hee had not kept promiſe, or that he had changed his purpoſe. Hereby we ſee that Moſes might pray faithfully: and yet notwithſtanding not looke ſimplie & alonely to the right of the caſe. How might ỳ be done? He was moued thereto by a paſſion, howe beeit not by a cholerike and fleshlie passion, but by such a zealous passion to Godward, as caried him aboue all state of man. Neuerthelater (as I haue saide afore), these things must not bee drawen to a generall rule, (for we haue not the spirite of Moses): but yet must we goe so farre with him, as we had leauer that the whole world shoulde goe to destruction, than Gods glorie shouldbe defaced, or ỹ he should not be worshipped, or that the honour of his iustice, wisedome, goodnesse, and power shoulde not bee reserued vnto him. To be short, we ought to prefer Gods glorie, not onely before all bodilie goods, but also euen before the saluation of our soules. And although that that bee harde for vs to doe: yet must wee inforce our selues vnto it. We see how Saint Paul did the like for the Iewes, and he was lead by the same reason which led Moses. I could finde in my heart (saith he) to bee accursed for my kinsefolkes sake. It was not humane pitie that mooued him thereunto: but his eye was alwayes vppon the promise that had beene made to the ofspring of Abraham, in respect whereof it behoued God to keepe still some remnant of that peoples seede, or else the infidels and vnbeleeuers would haue reported him to haue bin a lyer, and they would haue skorned the law & al the promises. Wherefore to the ende that Gods name shoulde not come to such reproch: Saint Paul offereth himself to be accursed, if need be, and yet was hee well assured, that God woulde neuer suffer him to scape out of the hande of his Leader, who had taken him into his keeping. But it is not for vs to enter into such disputatiõs. For as I saide, Moses is contented to be rauished with such zeale, as hee had leauer that both himselfe and all the worlde beside shoulde perishe, than to see Gods name skorned, or that the vnbeleeuers should haue their mouthes opened to blaspheme him. That is the thing which wee haue to marke vppon the prayer of Moses.

Rom.9.3.

But yet therewithall let vs come backe againe to that which is rehearsed here, concerning his breaking of the two tables. Herein we see that how pitifull soeuer Gods seruantes are towardes the wretched creatures which perish, yet must they not vse anie such mercie as may nourishe the euill, but be careful to doe the thing that God cõmaundeth them, without swaruing one way or other. Sometimes men are so moued with foolishe pitie, that they offende God: and vpon opinion to doe good to those whome they beare with, they increase the euil still in them, and are a cause of their greater decay. To be short, men stand so much in their owne conceits, that they wil needes exceede and go beyond God in mercie. And this is seene in all cases. Howbeit, if a man examine their affections narrowly: he shall find that their so doing procedeth not of louing kindnes: for one while they be sharpe & rough, and there is nothing with them but destroying: and anon after in ỹ turning of a hand, ye shal see them in another moode, so as they wil needs be verie pitiful. But after what maner? In going beyond their dutie, without regard what God hath ordeined: and (which worse is) they will needs be alwais shewing of mercy where there is no repentance, whereby they cast wood into the fire, to make gods wrath burn ỹ whotter against thẽ. And therefore when they whome God hath put in office do see offences committed: they must not in any wise leaue them vnpunished. For why? If they suffer the mischeefe to settle & to fester: it will grow worse and worse till it become vncurable. For ye see howe diseases become vncurable, when the parties be not purged in due time and place. We must remember how the Apostle saith, ỹ we must beware we suffer not euill weeds to grow, but we must pluck them vp betimes, for if we doe not, they will so euergrow vs as we shall not be able to destroy them when we would, but they will stoppe our eyes, and so keepe downe ỹ good seede, as it can neuer thriue. After that manner will God punish our negligence, when we be not diligent in doing our duetie to rid away euill from among vs. Thus ye see what we haue to marke. But let vs also applie this lesson to our instruction.

Hebr.12.15.

Let such as haue the charge of teaching, loke neerely to themselues and thinke well vppon it, and beare in minde what God commandeth thẽ that they may discharge themselues thereof: or else they may well make couerings, but God will ask them an account of ỹ things that he had inioyned them. Againe on the otherside, when we heare our vices and sinnes sharpely rebuked by Gods worde, and rough threateninges against vs, so as it may seeme that our teachers intend to deliuer vs into Gods hande to bee punished by him according to our desertes: let vs not thinke it straunge, as a number do, who would haue vs but onely to grease and annoynt their scabs, in steed of handling them as they should be, & cannot abide to be rebuked roughlie. But what? They would be flattered to the end they might perishe without feeling of it. Contrariwise we see ỹ to be taught aright, we must be rebuked and threatened, yea and that with such sharpenesse and vehemencie, as wee may bee driuen to bethinke vs of our offences, and to humble our selues before God as becommeth vs. That is the thing which wee haue to remember in that wee see that Moses was so chafed at the peoples transgression, that hee brake the two Tables immediately, and afterwarde drewe out the swoorde, to punishe such as had so violated Gods seruice, and incouraged his tribe to doe the like. Let vs not thinke but that Moses was wounded to the quicke with greefe and compassion, when hee was faine to doe execution with his owne hands. For wee knowe he was a meeke and kinde hearted man, and inclined to good and holie pitie aboue all others. But yet doth it behooue him to discharge his duetie, or else hee had beene vnfaithfull towards God.

Moreouer whereas he saith, I looked, & behold you had offended your God, by making your selues a calfe of mettall, and yee were turned out of the way which he had appointed you: this looking of his was because God had certified him thereof: but yet bebehoued it him to beare witneſſe of their deede [with his owne eyes]. And whereas Ioſua ſayde it ſeemed to bee ſome battell: Moſes anſwered that it was not ſo, for as much as ſome of them made not ſignes of mirth, and otherſome ſignes of feare and ſorrowe: but all the whole multitude was merrie and ioyfull: and therefore (quoth hee) there muſt needes bee ſome other matter in it. At his comming downe hee ſawe them dauncing as it were vppon fond deuotion, according to the maner of Idolaters, who think themſelues to ſerue their Gods very well by ſuch fooliſh and wanton toyes. And ſo ỹ Iſraelites tooke this dancing of theirs to be a peece of Gods ſeruice: wherfore Moſes executed the puniſhment afore mentioned. But as touching this text, the onely thing that we haue to marke, is the thing which we ſpake of euen now, and which we haue ſpoken of afore: namely that hee vpbraydeth the Iewes with their ſuddeine ſtarting aſide from the way which GOD had ſhewed them. For the welſpring of the miſcheefe was, that they held not themſelues to the rule that is conteyned in the Lawe. Wee ſee then that the cauſe of all ruine and deſtruction, is our ficklenеſſe in turning away from Gods woorde. For as ſoone as wee paſſe thoſe boundes and ſwarue neuer ſo little aſide: by and by wee runne aſtray into vtter deſtruction. And therefore it ſtandeth vs ſo much the more on hande to holde our ſelues warily in obedience to our GOD, ſpecially when hee hath beene ſo gracious vnto vs, as to ſet vs in the righte way. For hee vouchſafeth not ſo to guide all men. Trueth it is that all men, yea euen thoſe which neuer hearde one woorde of teaching, haue inough to make them vnexcuſable. But as for vs, wee ought to make ſingular accounte of this priuiledge, that GOD calleth vs to him, that hee taketh vs into his gouernment, and that hee ſheweth vs the way of ſaluation. Sith wee haue that, wee cannot goe aſtray, ſo wee hearken to the doctrine that is ſet foorth to vs in Gods name. But if wee deſpiſe ſuch a benefite: then are we worthy of too too much blame. And therefore let vs learne to ſubmit our ſelues ſimply to Gods word, or elſe wee ſhall open the gate to all wickedneſſe, accordingly as it is ſayd that men marre all and turne all vpſide downe, when they ſtart aſide from the ſaid way. Then is there but one way to walke well and rightly in: which is to obey our GOD, and not to giue any credite to our owne wit and imagination, nor to giue heade to our owne inuentions: but to abide as it were faſt linked to the thinges that GOD commaundeth and appoynteth vs. Thoſe are the thinges which wee muſt ſticke by: and if wee doe not, wee bee vnhappie and forlorne creatures. For we ſhall go on from euill to euil, and there will bee no ende nor meaſure of our diſorderednes, as we ſee it be fell to this people, who hauing once let go Gods woorde, fell into ſo groſſe and beaſtly ſuperſtition, as to woorſhip a Calfe of their owne making: and they became ſo madde that they

Exod. 32. 17. 18.

Rom. 1. 20.

Deut. 9. 12.

Exod. 32. 2.

ſpared not any thing ſo fouly to defile themſelues in offending GOD after that faſhion. For when Aaron willed them to bring him al their ornaments and Iewels: it was to the ende to haue made them loth to haue had an Idoll of that price. But there was neither man nor woman which brought not their ornamentes and all the coſtly Iewelles which they had. Thoſe graceleſſe wretches were ſo caryed away, and the diuell poſſeſſed them with ſuch furie, that they paſſed not to ſpoile themſelues of all their ſubſtance, nor cared what coſt they were at, ſo they might haue an ydoll. And by this example are wee warned to raine our ſelues ſhort and not to let our ſelues looſe, leaſt we happen to ſtart neuer ſo little aſide from Gods pure doctrine, & from the Religion which he ſheweth vs in his woord.

There is yet another thing to bee noted in ỹ breaking of theſe Tables: which is, that GOD intended to ſhewe by way of a figure, that his once writing of his Lawe was not ynough for vs, but that it behoued vs to haue it double ingroſed. Trueth it is that Moſeſes rehearſing of it in this text, is to another end: but yet is there no inconuenience in this alſo. Likewyſe when Moſes tooke a veyle or ſcarfe to put before his face, bycauſe the people coulde not abyde the glorie and great brightneſſe that ſhone therein, it was to magnifye the Lawe, according as Saint Paule declareth: and the verie ſtorie it ſelfe ſheweth ſufficiently, that it behoued Moſes to be knowen thereby to bee as an Angell, and not to bee taken any more to be within the common ſtate of a mortall man, in ſomuch that his countenaunce ſhone as bright as the ſunne, which the people could not abide, & that was to put them in minde of their owne weakeneſſe and frayltie. That was the cheefe cauſe why Moſes wore a veile to hide his face withall. But yet herewithall Saint Paule ſticketh not to ſay, that God ſhewed euen then aforehand by way of figure, that there ſhould befall ſuch a dimneſſe and blindneſſe vppon the Iewes, that whenſoeuer they red the Lawe or heard it preached, they ſhould haue as it were a veile before their eyes, ſo as they ſhould not ſee a whitte. And Saint Paule ſayth that this thing was accompliſhed euen in his time among the Iewes. For they red Moſes continually in their Synagogues: and yet they continued as ſtarke beaſtes as the heathen, ſo as they became brutiſh through their owne fooliſh fancies, and could not perceiue Gods trueth at all. For Saint Paule telleth them, that all the Lawe is nothing without Ieſus Chriſt: it is but as a dead thing, bycauſe Ieſus Chriſt is as the ſoule and perfection thereof. So then, as touching the breaking of the Tables: it was the foreſayd cauſe that moued Moſes to doe it: that is to wit, to ſhewe the people that God diſclaimed them, as if hee had ſayd, your God giueth you ouer, and hath diuorced himſelfe from you. For in as much as your wickedneſſe hath ſeparated you from him: it is good reaſon that hee alſo ſhould ſtand diſcharged of his promiſe, and be no more bound to ſo malicious & froward a people as you be, who haue vſed ſuch vnfaithfulnes towards him. That then is the firſt reaſon.

But there is alſo another cauſe: which is, that wee haue as it were a figure or image, that Gods once writing of his Lawe is not ynough for vs: but that wee haue neede of a ſecond wryting of it, to the intent it may auaile vs, and the doctrine thereof benefite vs by ſhewing it ſelfe to bee liuely and of effectuall force and power. And that is the thing which the Prophetes Ier. 31.32, 33. meane in ſaying, that GOD will make a new Couenaunt with his faythfull ones, not as hee did with their fathers in Egypt, but by writing his Lawe in their heartes, and by ingrauing it in their bowels. And therefore let vs marke well that GOD meant to doe vs to vnderſtand, that his wryting of his Lawe in the two tables of ſtone, was by and by voyd and of none effect. And why? By cauſe that, if God doe but write his Lawe, or cauſe it to bee preached to vs onely by woorde of mouth: there will neuer bee any holde or tacke in it: and hee ſheweth that the blame thereof is in our ſelues, by cauſe wee bee not ſtedfaſt in keeping the promiſe that wee haue made vnto GOD, but become variable, and ſtarte aſide out of hand. God for his part, doth well performe whatſoeuer hee promiſeth vs: but wee breake off all acquaintance and vnion with him, ſo as we be cut off and baniſhed from him, and wee bereaue our ſelues of all the promiſes that he offered vs: and therefore after he hath once written his law, he muſt be faine to turne againe and write it the ſecond tyme. As how? For figures doe not alwaies repreſent the full truth, but there is oftentimes ſome difference. Then let vs marke that the figure varieth from the truth which God ſheweth vs and maketh vs to perceiue. For hee writeth not his Law the ſecond time in ſtones: but rather whereas our hartes were hard before, he chaungeth them and maketh them ſoft: and in ſtead of Ezec. 11.19. & 36.26. ſtony heartes (as ſayeth Ezechiell,) he giueth vs hearts of fleſh: that is to ſay, hee ſofteneth our heartes and maketh them pliable, to the intent wee ſhoulde receaue his Lawe, and haue it ingrauen in vs, and be able to doe and to follow whatſoeuer he commaundeth vs. Therefore let vs beare this figure well in mynde, for as much as it is for our benefite. In deede as concerning the firſt reaſon, it behoooueth vs to bethinke our ſelues well when GOD hath called vs. For if we corrupt his ſeruice, or alter religion at our owne pleaſure: although there be no Moſes to breake the tables of ſtone: yet hath God ſhewed once for all, that he is alyenated from vs, and that hee will haue vs to bee as ſtraungers to his houſe. Trueth it is that his election is without repentaunce: yet notwithExod 33.19. ſtanding (as it is ſayd in Exodus,) hee will ſaue whom hee liſteth. Howbeit, if wee ſticke not purely to his woorde: it is all one as if wee fell out with him, and playd the fugitiue and vnruly children: and hee will not ſuffer vs to deſpiſe his couenaunt after that maner, without auenging of himſelfe of ſuch vnthankfulneſſe. And hee hath ſhewed vs at that tyme in the perſon of Moſes, that hee giueth ouer and forſaketh all thoſe, which turne away from the trueth and holde not themſelues to it, ſo that for his part hee will haue no more to doe with them, nor any more acquaintance with them. Wherfore let vs beware that this horrible ſentence bee not caſt vppon vs, and whenſoeuer our Lorde ſhall haue called vs, let it ſerue to hold vs in awe and feare. But yet let vs know alſo, that it is not ynough for vs to haue our eares beaten with Gods commaundementes, and to haue them ſet before vs, and to be incouraged to keepe them: for God muſt bee fayne to worke within our hartes, or elſe all the teaching in the world wil ſtand vs in no ſtead: it wil be but a ſound ringing in the ayre, whereof no profite will redownd. Nowe then, come wee to heare Gods woorde? In deede wee ought to make account of the fauour that hee ſheweth vs in cauſing it to bee preached vnto vs: but yet let vs aſſure our ſelues that that would but turne to our greater condemnation, if he ingraued it not in our heartes. What is to bee done then? We muſt diſcharge our ſelues of all ſelftruſt, aſſuring our ſelues that wee ſhall be but cuill ſchollers, vntill GOD haue taught vs by his holy ſpirite. Notwithſtanding that hee ſhall haue vſed men as his inſtrumentes, to bring vs to the knowledge of his trueth: yet muſt hee himſelf bore our eares, that we may hearken to him, Pſal. 40.7. and hee muſt touch our hearts and ſoften them, that we may receiue ỹ doctrine which is vttered vnto vs. Wherefore let vs learne to miſlike our ſelues, by acknowledging our owne ſinne and wretchedneſſe: and therewithall let vs pray him to woorke in ſuch ſort, as the things which we ſhall haue heard and vnderſtoode, bee not a witneſſe againſt vs of our rebelliouſneſſe, and that wee haue beene foolke paſt amendment. And ſo, as ofte as wee come to any ſermon, or read the holy Scripture: let vs pray God to touche vs inwardly, and to make the doctrine auaylable which wee ſhall haue heard, ſo as it may not bee ſpoken to the ſtones, but to ſuch as haue beene foretaught by his holy ſpirite. Thus ye ſee what wee haue to marke vppon that place.

Now for the attainement of this ſecond writing, wee muſt not goe to Moſes, but to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. For it is he that hath brought vs the holy Ghoſt, and the renewment whereby our heartes are refourmed to the obeying of GOD, and whereby they bee circumciſed that they may be dedicated to his ſeruice. Then if Moſes be compared to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, hee is but a miniſter of the letter. And why? By cauſe hee coulde goe no further than he had commiſſion, which was, to ſet foorth Gods doctrine. But it belonged to Ieſus Chriſt to giue light to that which Moſes had vttered, and to giue ſtrength thereunto. And how was that? By his holy ſpirit. True it is that Saint Paule termeth himſelfe a miniſter of the ſpirite. Howbeit, that is not to deface his Maiſter: it is not to drawe to himſelfe the thing that belongeth Ioh. 16.17. Rom. 8.9. Col. 2.11. 2. Cor. 3.7.8 2. Cor. 3.6

geth to the ſonne of GOD: but it is to ſhewe that our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt vttereth his grace now adayes by the preaching of his Goſpell. As howe? Let vs marke firſt of all, that the renewing of vs and the writing of Gods Lawe in our heartes, thereby to faſhion vs according to the righteouſnes contayned in ỹ ſame: is reſerued alonely to the ſonne of God, and that it is he which giueth vs the will to followe God his Father and to obey him. For he hath the ſpirit Eſa.11.2. of the feare of God, hee hath the ſpirite of all righteouſneſſe, hee hath the ſpirite of trueth, as is ſayde in the eleuenth Chapter of the Prophet Eſay. So then let vs marke, that wee muſt reſort to our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt when wee bee put in minde of our duetie. When it is tolde vs what GOD requireth of vs, wee muſt thinke thus: Alas Lorde Ieſus, it is true in deede that heere wee haue knowledge of the thing that is good and ryghtfull: but what? Wee haue another Lawe cleane contrarie to Rom.7.23. it in our ſelues: which is, that wee doe but chafe and tret at GOD when wee bee taught: and when his Lawe is alleaged vnto vs, wee doo the cleane contrarie to that which is contayned there: and therefore thou muſt bee fayne to chaunge vs, and to make vs new creatures: for to that ende is the ſpirite giuen vs, which thou communicateſt vnto vs, by bearing vs recorde that wee bee members of thy body. And againe, hath Ieſus Chriſt once Phil.2.13. giuen vs this will? Hee giueth vs alſo abilitie to perfourme the ſame deſire, and ſtrengtheneth vs ſo againſt all temptations, as wee ſhall neuer bee ouercome by them. Yee ſee then that wee muſt hye vs to our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, aſſuring our ſelues that that prerogatiue and honour belongeth to none but onely him. Yet notwithſtanding this ſaying of 2.Cor.3.6. S. Paules is true alſo, that all ſuch as preach the Goſpell are ſpirituall miniſters, [that is to ſay] they ſet not foorth a dead letter and vnprofitable doctrine, but withall they bring Gods ſpirit. And howe is that? Is it by their owne breathing? No: For our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt did well Iohn 20.22. ſhewe by his breathing vppon his diſciples, that the holy Ghoſt proceedeth from none but himſelfe alone. But Saint Paules meaning is, that Ieſus Chriſt worketh continually, to the ende wee ſhoulde beleeue in him. True it is that we ſhall not ſee him heere perſonally preſent: how then ſhall wee bee ſure, that hee wryteth Gods Lawe in our heartes? Let vs not alleage any of Rom.10.4. Col.2.17. thoſe thinges. For ſeeing that Ieſus Chriſt is the ende and perfection of the lawe, yea and the very life of it (as I ſayde afore:) let vs not thinke but that hee printeth Gods Lawe in our heartes by the preaching of the Goſpell. So then let vs not doubt but GOD will performe that grace in vs. And although the partie that preacheth vnto vs bee but a mortall man, and the wordes which hee vttereth vnto vs with his mouth, doe vaniſh anon after away in the ayre: yet let not vs doubt but Ieſus Chriſt will Rom.10.13. for all that doe his dewtie, as Sainte Paule
2.Cor.3.3. declareth in the ſame place. And in deede, the faithfull haue experience thereof. For wee ſhoulde neuer haue ſo much as any thought Eph.4.7.
at all of comming vnto GOD, or of dooing any good: vnleſſe wee were fully reſolued of this grounde, namely that it behoueth vs to bee throughly ſetled and conſtant: all the which proceedeth of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. Therefore whenſoeuer wee feele that GOD draweth vs vnto him, let vs vnderſtande that hee ſheweth vs howe wee bee members of the body of his ſonne, byeauſe wee haue the holy Ghoſt, by whome wee bee altered and reformed, and by whome alſo Rom.8.9.
his Lawe is written newe againe in our heartes. 1.Cor.6.15. 19.
Thus yee ſee what wee haue to beare in minde.

Moreouer, let vs marke that whereas Moſes telleth the people that God heard him for that time: it is to the ende they ſhoulde not abuſe Gods goodneſſe, but vnderſtand their offence to haue beene ſo horrible, that if they did ſo any more and tempted GOD agayne afterwarde: they ſhoulde finde no mercye. The intent then of Moſes in this place, was to holde the people in awe. Truely wee ought to bee fully perſwaded of this, that if GOD finde vs repentaunt for our ſinnes, hee will euer bee ready to forgiue all that wee haue committed. Let vs but onely make towardes him, and hee will reache vs his hande. Yet is it not ment that we ſhould take leaue to doe euill vnder colour that GOD is ſo merciſull to wretched ſinners, that as ſoone as they returne vnto him, hee preuenteth them and is ready to receaue them and imbrace them aforehand. This (ſay I) muſt not make vs the more inclined to doe euill: but wee muſt vnderſtand that when God hath forgiuen vs once, we muſt no more fall backe againe. For then do we tempt him and abuſe his patience, which is the next way to ſhitte vs out of the gate of ſaluation, and to diſappoint our ſelues vtterly of all the mercy which hee was minded to haue vſed towardes vs. True it is that although we ſhall haue offended twentie or thirtie times, yet doth God tell vs that he will haue pittie vpon vs. But I ſpeake as nowe of thoſe that take libertie to offend, and ſay, ſeeing I haue found God ſo gentle and pittifull, I ſhall ſurely bee receiued of him at all tymes. Surely when men ſtande ſo vppon Gods mercie, and vnder pretence thereof, doe eyther become negligent, or elſe giue ouer themſelues to all naughtineſſe: it is all one as if they renounced all the promiſes of their ſaluation. Therefore let vs marke well the ſaying that is ſet downe heere. God (ſayth Moſes) heard mee. And howe? for that tyme: to the ende that the people ſhoulde thinke thus with themſelues, Alas, it is a wonder that euer we obteined pardon, and it muſt needes aſtoniſh vs ſtill, that God woulde rid vs out of ſuch danger as wee were fallen into, conſidering howe deadly and ouer deadly the fall was. Now then ſeeing that God hath ſhewed himſelf ſo friendly towardes vs: let vs beware that wee prouoke not his wrath any more. For if wee fall backe agayne,

wee cannot tell what may befall vs. After that maner muſt wretched ſinners, (when they bee tempted to doe amiſſe,) brydle and reſtraine themſelues by ſetting Gods promiſes before their eyes, howbeit in ſuch ſorte as they become not the boulder to doe euill, but as they may haue recourſe to Gods mercy when they haue doone amiſſe, and liue in the greater awe euer after. Thus ye ſee whereof wee be put in mind in this text.

Nowe let vs fall downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgment of our faultes, praying him to make vs ſo to feele them, as wee may learne to ſigh and grone for them all our life time, and finde mercie at his hand when we ſeeke it with faith: and to reſourme vs in ſuch wiſe, as we may not peruert his woorde and the pureneſſe of his ſeruice: but that ſeeing hee hath ſhewed vs the way of ſaluation, it may pleaſe him to grant vs the grace to perſeuere therein all the tyme of our life, ſo as wee forſaking all our wicked luſtes and affections, may walke on in his obedience: and moreouer to beare with vs in all our infirmities, vntill hee haue ridde vs quite and cleane of them all, and clothed vs againe with his owne righteouſneſſe, that wee may bee partakers of his glory, which he hath promiſed vs for our Lord Ieſus Chriſtes ſake. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs but alſo to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Wednesday the iiij. of September. 1555.

The Lxvii. Sermon, which is the ſixth vpon the ninth Chapter.

20 Likewiſe the Lorde was ſore angry with Aaron, to haue deſtroyed him: but at the ſame tyme I prayed alſo for Aaron.

21 Then tooke I the ſinne which you had made, that is to wit the Calfe and burnt it in the fire, and brake it and brayed it throughly, vntill it was as ſmall as duſt: and I caſt the duſt thereof in the brooke that came downe from the hill.

22 Alſo yee prouoked him to wrath in Thaberah, and in Maſa, and in Cibrothhathauah.

23 When the Lorde ſent you from Cades barne, ſaying, go vp and poſſeſſe the Lande which I haue giuen you: Then rebelled you againſt the commaundement of the Lorde your GOD, and beleeued him not, neither obeyed you his voyce.

24 Yee haue beene diſobedient to the Lorde, euer ſince the tyme that I haue knowne you.

AFter that Moſes had ſpoken of the faulte which the people had committed in making the golden Calfe to worſhip it: now hee ſheweth that Aaron was to bee blamed for that cryme, for as much as hee being then the gouernour of the people, had not indeuored to withſtand them with ſuch ſtoutneſſe as he ought to haue doone. For ſuch as bee magiſtrates ſhall haue a harder account to make, than ſuch as are priuate perſons. Nowe then, Aaron ought to haue taught the people, and to haue withſtoode their euill dealinges euen to the death. True it is that when Aaron ſawe that the people would needes haue an Idoll to worſhip, hee told them ỹ it was wickednesſe ſo to doe: and when he could by no meanes wey with them, he deuiſed another ſhift, and laboured to driue them from their deſire, by requiring their Iewelles and ornaments and the things which they did ſet moſt ſtore by. For hee thought that by that meanes, that fancie would bee put out of their head. Yee ſee then that Aaron conſented not to their euil, but would faine haue letted it, howbeit, that was not with ſuch ſtouteneſſe as hee ought to haue doone. For hee ſhoulde rather haue hazarded his life, than to haue conſented to Idolatrie, whereby GODS honour and true ſeruice was corrupted, by conueying of it ouer ſo leaudly to a puppit that was but a dead and ſenſleſſe thing. Ought not Aaron to haue beene ſo zealous, as rather to haue hazarded his owne perſon for it? ſpecially ſeeing that GOD had put him in ſo honorable a charge? For hee was the highe prieſt. And although he was not yet conſecrated into his office: yet knewe hee well ynough whereunto he was ordeined. And therefore there was no excuſe at all for him.

Nowe vppon this text wee haue to gather, that thoſe to whome GOD hath giuen charge to gouerne his people, are not diſcharged by

not consenting vnto euill, or by not beeing the authors thereof: but they must withstand it to the vttermost, and bee of such inuincible stoutnesse, as not to swarue aside for any importunatenesse. Although they see great trubbles and hurlyburlies, yet must not their courages be abated therfore, but they must stil stand in the mayntenaunce of that which is good. And although they see themselues in daunger, so as there is none other remedie but onely by praying GOD to take them into his protection: yet must they not swarue a side from theire office to eschewe the daunger. And therfore had not Aaron escaped vnpunished at Gods hande, if his brother Moses had not intreated for him. Let not vs thinke nowadayes that God hath altered his mind: but let vs mark, that as many as haue not withstoode euill to the vttermoste, shalbe wrapped all in one condemnation with the offenders, and Gods vengeance must consume them all together. For hee that letteth euill slip, or preuenteth it not if he can, doth giue libertie to doe euill. It is a saying euen of the heathen, who to rebuke the negligence and coldnesse of magistrates and officers of Iustice, haue alledged this prouerbe, That if hee which ought to hinder euill doe wink at it, it is all one as if hee proclamed leaue and liberty to doe euill by the sounde of a trumpet, and hee shall beare the blame of it before God. And in deede that prouerbe was commonly vsed, to do vs to vnderstand that God will not hold them excused, which haue beene so colde in executing their office. Now if the worlde condemne them: what will become of them, when they come before the heauenly Iudge? So then, Magistrates are heere warned of their duety, namely that when they see any euill, they must withstand it. Although they bee not armed with worldly force: yet must they rather forgoe their liues, than yeelde in such sorte as the mischiefe may get the maysterie and the vpper hande through their cowardlynesse. Let Lordes of estate looke well to themselues: for although men acquite them: yet shall they not bee quitte before GOD if they playe the blinkardes, and let naughtinesse slippe when they see God offended. If they see the right peruerted, and doe not manfully withstand it: they must yeelde account for it. And moreouer, God will bring them to shame before the world, that they may feele the condemnation aforehand, which is prepared for them before him: and therefore let euery man looke neerely to himselfe.

And let vs marke generally, that as many as withdrawe not themselues from the companie of the wicked, are taken as accessaries before God, though they confederate not themselues with them, if they make no countenance to withstand them when they see them go about any euill. Wee heare howe S. Paule sayeth to all the faithfull both great and small, Haue no fellowship with wicked workes, but rebuke them. Then doeth it stande vs on hande to beware that wee bee not partakers in euill, and to protest openly that wee like not of it. But yet is not that ynough: for wee must shewe our selues to bee enemyes of the wicked, and take parte against them. And they that doe not so, are too cowardly: and that dissimulation of theirs shalbe esteemed as treason before God. But what? Men see howe the world goeth. For nowadayes there can no friendship bee mainteyned, except men bolster their neighboures in their euill dooinges. Folke doe mocke GOD openly to his face, and yet are they readie to bee at open defyaunce, if men reache them not their handes to take parte with them in all offences agaynst GOD. But yet shall not this rule bee chaunged for all that: wee may well inharden our selues in our wicked customes: but yet will not GOD fayle to iudge vs, yea euen according to this rule. And therefore let vs not thinke that he should transforme himselfe, when wee take inordinate leaue to doe euill. And when wee bee come into possession, and haue taken couert vnder pretence that others did so as well as wee: let vs not thinke that wee shall scape for all that, but let vs forbeare that wee bee not wrapped in the vengeaunce which God pronounceth against sinners, for want of withstanding them to the vttermost of our power. All men without exception ought to doe so, as I sayde afore: but yet they that are in authoritie ought to take good heede that they shewe the way vnto others.

Eph. 5. 11.

After that Moses hath spoken of this offence: hee addeth yet other examples, to shewe that the people coulde not boast of any righteousnesse of their owne, nor alleage that GOD had chosen them for their vertues sakes, or for any worthinesse or deserte that was in them. Therefore hee sayeth, Remember what yee did in Thaberah, that is to say, in the Burning. It was a place so named, bicause that there, GOD sent downe fyre from heauen to consume a part of the Campe. And afterwarde in Masa, which signifieth temptation, and was another place, so named bycause the people tempted GOD there. And againe in Meriba, that is to say Stryfe or Contention. Remember also what yee did at Ciberoth Thaauh, that is to say, at the graues of lust. For GOD sent as it were a plague vpon all the people, so as a great multitude of them dyed for their wicked lust in that they longed for flesh, and woulde not bee contented with the Manna. This foode is too lothsome (quoth they,) wee can not away with it, it goeth against our stomackes, for wee see nothing else but alwayes Manna Manna, wee will haue some fleshmeate. Ye see then ỹ the wicked lust of ỹ people was ỹ cause of their ruine & destruction. Finally Moses rehearseth here ỹ thing that he had said afore, concerning the rebellion which the people committed when they should haue entred into ỹ land. For they distrusted gods promise, & would needs send spies to learne how things went. They trusted more to their own policie & eyesight, than to Gods worde. By reason whereof Gods wrath was so kindled against thẽ, that that he gaue flatte ſentence that none of them ſhoulde enter into the promiſed heritage, ſaue onely Ioſua, and Caleb the ſonne of Iephuneh, bicauſe thoſe two had behaued thẽſelues faithfully. But as for the people, they ſhould be led about by the ſpace of fortie yeeres, vntill their carkeſſes were rooted in the wilderneſſe, according to the threat which God had vttered with his owne mouth. That is the content of this part of the text.

Now let vs marke firſt of all, that to make the Iewes vnderſtand the meaning of Moſes, or rather of the holy ghoſt: it behoued them to bee warned to ſet their former faultes before their eyes, that they might not bee ſo fond as to preſume any thing at all vppon their owne worthyneſſe, or vppon their owne power: but to abaſe themſelues vtterly, acknowledging that GOD found not any thing in them why hee ſhoulde choſe them, but that all came of his owne free goodneſſe. Now if Moſes were faine to vſe ſuch exhortation to the Iewes: let vs vnderſtand that we alſo haue as much neede of it nowadayes as they. The end therefore which we muſt begin at, is this: that wee muſt caſt downe ourſelues, and not be lifted vp with any preſumption, nor vaunt our ſelues through any fooliſh ouerweening: but acknowledge our ſelues to be voyd of all deſeruing, and that there is not any grace or righteouſneſſe in vs, for the which we might obtaine loue at Gods hand. And therefore muſt he needes preuent vs with his free goodneſſe. Marke that for a ſpeciall poynt. But howe may men abaſe themſelues after that faſhion? Wee will neuer doe it of our owne accord. In deede if euery of vs looke well vppon himſelfe, it muſt needes bee that wee bee as it were bewitched, if wee bee not induced to miſlike of our ſelues, and to be aſhamed and vtterly at our wits end. For what is man? Let him ſearch throughly what is in him, both in bodie and in ſoule: and ſurely wee ſhall finde euen from the moſt to the leaſt of vs, that there is nothing in vs but vtter ſhame and confuſion, as I ſayd afore. Neuertheles, euery of vs abuſeth himſelfe through this follie, ſo as we beare our ſelues on hand that our vices are vertues. And although our life be as leaude as may be, and our ſinnes moſt outrageous and horrible: Yet to our owne ſeeming there is nothing in vs but perfect righteouſneſſe and ſoundeneſſe. Yee ſee then that men beguile themſelues. And therefore it is requiſite that we ſhoulde bee held ſhorte, and haue our faultes layde afore vs, not onely ſome one or two faultes, but alſo all the faultes of our whole life: ſo as we may know that we haue offended our GOD ſo grieuouſly, that it behoueth vs to bee ouerwhelmed with ſhame and reproche: and that if wee ſhoulde goe about to lift vp our heades, it were meete that wee ſhould bee thruſt backe, and that GOD ſhould knock vs harde vpon the pates with a cudgell, to ſhew vs that our pride is diuelliſhe againſt him. Then let vs marke that Moſes ſpake not onely to the Iewes: but that the ſame leſſon is toulde vnto vs at this day: in ſo much that if wee will yeeld glory vnto GOD, we muſt be bereft of all prayſe, and not preſume any whit at all of our owne vertues, but aſſure our ſelues that there is not aught in vs but vtter vanitie.

Furthermore for as much as wee come not to ſuch myldeneſſe of our one accorde: let vs haue an eye to our ſinnes, and not tary till God open his bookes of account as he will doe at the laſt day, for then it wil be too late for vs to yeeld our ſelues giltie. But let vs bethinke vs of our ſinnes now while he ſummoneth vs by his word, and whyle hee warneth vs aforehande. Let euery of vs ſubmit himſelfe as a wretched offender before his Iudge, and let vs acknowledge our ſelues to bee iuſtly accuſed, yea euen of infinite faults, before God. And when we haue bethought vs of one offence, let the ſame miniſter occaſion to vs to bethinke vs of another. And to bee ſhort, let vs both generally and particularly practiſe this leſſon of conſidering what wee bee, yea euen without flattering of our ſelues, that all the good which wee receyue at Gods hand may bee fathered vpon him, and the honour which he reſerueth to himſelfe remaine whole and vnminiſhed vnto him. Let vs not couet to inriche our ſelues with the thinges which wee haue borrowed of him: let vs not ſeeke to attyre and decke our ſelues with his feathers: but let vs acknowledge that it is of his owne free goodneſſe that hee vouchſafeth to ſhew himſelf ſo liberal, though he be not bound thereto. And for our partes, ſeeing we cannot bring any deſert vnto him, but we be guiltie in all caſes and all reſpectes: he of his ineſtimable mercy muſt be faine to beare with vs, or elſe wee would be deadly enimies to him ſtil, & he ſhould be driuen to thunder down vpon vs. Thus yee ſee what wee haue to marke generally vpon this text.

But nowe let vs come to the ſtories which Moſes toucheth heere. Hee ſpeaketh firſt of Thaberah, which betokeneth Burning, as I ſayde afore. For there the people were chaſtiſed with burning, bycauſe they murmured at their trauelling through the wilderneſſe. O (quoth they,) ſhall wee neuer come to an ende? Wee doo but runne vp and downe heere, wee bee fayne to remooue our tentes from place to place, wee bee driuen to carie our ſtuffe vppon our ſhoulders, and why bee wee not rather in ſome place of reſt, diſcharged of ſuch trauell? But alas, thoſe wretches conſidered not that GODS diſpleaſure was to bee accompliſhed, according to his othe, which was that none of them ſhould enter into the promiſed lande. They ſhoulde haue thought, Alas, wee deſerue to bee drowned in the bottome of hell, and GOD is contented to ſend vs a temporall correction. Although he bee not minded to bring vs into his earthly reſting place: yet notwithſtanding hee giueth vs reſpit to bethinke vs of our ſinnes, and to ſue to him for pardon. For albeit that he make vs to feele ſome rigour, and it behoueth vs to beare the markes of his diſpleaſure all our life long by being depriued of the inheinheritance which he had promiſed vs: yet notwithſtanding we ought therewithall to acknowledge his goodneſſe, in that he will not haue vs to periſhe euerlaſtingly as we wel deſerue. But they conſidered none of all this, neither conſidered they that they were in as happy plight as they could wiſh. They had the Manna downe from heauen, they tooke no paine to make prouiſion for themſelues, they needed no more but to gather it vp & to take euery man his meaſure of it, they were all fed, yea and that with a good & ſauorly foode. Yet conſidered they none of all this, but grudged at their ouerlong iourney. And what cauſe had they ſo to doe? Firſt they were priuiledged from the curſe that was layd vppon all mankinde. We be ſet in this world to leade a painefull lyfe: & man was ordeyned to labor euen before he had ſinned: for it is vnkindly that we ſhould be idle & vnprofitable. Moreouer the trauell that God inioyneth vs now, ſerueth not onely to keepe vs occupyed, but alſo to lode vs, ſo as we may be inforced to ſhrink vnder our burthē, & to grone for our ſins ſake. Now thē this people had good cauſe to ſubmit themſelues quietly, when God led them ſo through the wilderneſſe. And therefore it is no maruell though fyre came from heauen to burne vp part of their tents, and though Gods wrath appeared after that faſhion to make thē abaſhed. Yet notwithſtanding, ſo little did this amend them, that they fell to murmuring by and by again, becauſe they had none other foode but Manna. God had warned thē enough that they ſhoulde no more prouoke him, & they ſhould at leaſtwiſe haue learned it by experience, ſeeing they felt the blowes. But they hardened themſelues againe againſt God: and although he had made them to feele his hand ſo roughly: yet ſay they, what ſhall become of vs? our ſoule withereth, and wee pine away to the death. For here is nothing for vs but Manna, we would faine haue ſome fleſhmeate. Well: They haue their deſire: but that is to their coſte. For while the meate was yet in their mouthes, Gods wrath fell vppon them, ſo as they were driuen at length to know ỹ they ought to haue bin contented with ſo good and happie a ſtate as God had giuē them. In remembrance whereof the ſame place was named the Graues of Luſte. Alſo there was another murmuring for water, inſomuch that whereas they ſhould haue craued water of God, they fell to ſtorming againſt Moſes, & would haue ſtoned him. For theſe cauſes it was Gods will that the markes of their diſobedience ſhould be printed vpon them that they might remēber their naughtineſſe as long as they liued vppon the earth, & therefore hee named thoſe two places, the one Maſſa, and the other Meriba. As if he ſhould ſay, yee haue ſtriued with me, and are entered into contention againſt me, as though yee would bid me battell. Ye haue tempted me becauſe ye knowe not yet my power, which hath ſhewed it ſelfe ſo many wayes vnto you. Thus much concerning the ſtories which Moſes rehearſeth here. In deede they deſerue to bee layd forth more at length. Howbeit foraſmuch as we haue here but a rehearſall of them as it were at a glaunce: we muſt deale ſo as we may profite by them, and take ſo much of them as may ſerue for our inſtruction.

Numb. 11. 6. 33.

Exo. 17. 4. 7.

Now then, ſeeing that God was ſo ſore greeued with the murmuring of that people, in that they abode not the trauell patiently which hee had layde vppon them: let vs note that there will be neuer the more excuſe for vs nowadayes if we bow not downe our ſhoulders to beare the burthen meekely, without ſtriuing againſt God. Firſt there is this earthly wayfaring, whereunto God hath made vs ſubiect in this worlde. Although God gaue many men reſt, ſo as they neuer goe frō home nor (as ye woulde ſay) out of their neſts: yet are we miſaduiſed if we paſſe not through this world as birdes vpon a bough, & be not as ſtraungers in it. For elſe God diſclaymeth vs & giueth vs ouer. Sith it is ſo: they that ſettle themſelues in this world as though they ſhould neuer goe out of it, doe baniſh themſelues from Gods kingdome: and ſhewe ỹ the kingdome of heauen belongeth not vnto them. And let them not beguile thēſelues by proteſting that their intent is not ſo: for God hath auowed it to bee ſo, and the Apoſtle ſayth expreſly, ỹ foraſmuch as ỹ fathers were as poore ſtraungers here beneath: therefore did God alſo voutſafe to call them his children. Now then as for them that are aſhamed to be called ſtraungers in this world: they muſt goe ſeeke their inheritance with the diuell: for they haue neither part nor portiō with God. And now muſt we apply ỹ thinges to our benefit which it pleaſeth God to ſend vs. Wee ſee what miſeries doe cōmonly hem vs in, inſomuch that euen ỹ tendereſt ſort & ſuch as ſeeme to haue ỹ world at will, are moſt feeble & weake, and are troubled ẅ a nūber of griefes & vexations. Howbeit let euery man looke vpon himſelfe, and according as God dealeth with vs, ſo let vs patiētly receiue ỹ afflictions ỹ he ſendeth vs. If our ſtate be hard and comberſom, let vs not thinke ỹ if we murmure at it, our murmuring ſhall vaniſh away into the aire, but ỹ we muſt come to a reckoning for it before God. For if God ſend not down fyre from heauen after the ſame maner ỹ he did viſibly puniſhe the Iewes for their murmuring: it is ſo much the woorſe for vs. For if he winke at it, & puniſh vs not out of hand: his vengeance muſt needes be ỹ ſorer & more terrible. And therefore let vs learne to liue vnder obedieēce to our God. Although wee be not handled as we would be in this earthly and flightful lyfe, but are faine to be trotting vp and downe: ſo as when wee woulde liue in reſt, God driueth vs from place to place, and when we would faine be diſcharged of care, then are we moſt vexed: let vs receiue all that euer God ſendeth vs, and let vs make our reckoning to paſſe through this worlde, after the ſame maner that this people were conueied through the wildernes. And let vs learne to practiſe this ſaying of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, that we muſt beare our croſſe after him. Lyke as when a man goeth into the countrie, hee takes vp his truſſe vpon his necke, and caryeth ſuch thinges with him as he ſhall haue neede of: ſo muſt we bee loden with ſuch fardell as God liſteth to lay vppon vs. And let vs not looke one at another: for God intendeth not to handle vs all alike. Let ſuch as haue moſt vexation of al, vnderſtand that God doth it not without cauſe. And let ſuch as haue leſſe, thanke God for his bearing with their frailtie. But yet for all that, howſoeuer we fare, let vs beware that wee ſtand not in contention with God, by grudging that hee letteth vs not alone in ſuch quietneſſe as our fleſhe woulde wiſhe and deſire: for we wote not what is for our owne profite. Marke that for a ſpeciall point.

Hebr. 11. 16.

But on the contrarie part, we ſee how men are giuen, not onely to their eaſe and commoditie: but alſo to ſuperfluitie and wantonneſſe, ſo as it ſhould ſeeme that they wil needes be merie & driue away all care, whether God will or no. Whereas by the aduerſities which God ſendeth vs, he putteth vs in minde of our ſinnes, and laboreth to withdraw vs from this world, as though he ſpurred vs forward to make the more haſt vnto him: we not only cãnot abide it, but alſo ſeeke meanes to ruſh forth into all inordinate pleaſure, euen with open rebellion againſt him. If God ſpare vs: thẽ are we the more vnruly, wheras we ſhould call our ſelues home vnto goodnes, and liue in the greater awe. And therefore let vs be aduiſed to benefite our ſelues by the example that is contained here.

As concerning the Temptation or Striſe: let vs vnderſtand that if neceſſitie pinch vs, ſo as we be driuen to any ſtreite and know not where to become: we muſt reſorte to our God with all lowlineſſe, beſeeching him to prouide a remedie for our neede: but yet in the meane while wee muſt be contented with his good will. If it pleaſe him to haue vs to languiſhe: let vs hold downe our neckes, and let vs not haue the ſtifnecked-neſſe which Moſes cõdemned heretofore in the people of old time. Alſo let vs vnderſtand that it is Gods owne working, when he voutſafeth to vphold vs in ſuch ſort as wee doe not vtterly quaile. For although wee doe hardly drag our limbes after vs, & we ſeeme euen to be at the laſt caſt: yet doe we ſtill feele ſome taſte of the goodneſſe of our God. Howſoeuer the world go with vs, let vs learne that wee muſt not tempt him, that is to ſay, wee muſt not giue our ſelues the bridle to aske this or that, but referre our ſelues wholy to his good will, and be ſo gouerned by him, as we may alwayes yeelde him his due obedience, and not raunge after our owne luſtes lyke wilde beaſtes, as though wee would puſh at him with our hornes, but that if wee wiſhe the thing which ſeemeth expedient for vs, we doe it alwayes with this condition that God ſhall haue the maiſterie of vs, and ouerrule all our paſſions and deſires. If our minde moue vs to wiſhe or to ſay, I would faine haue this or that: Let vs looke that God haue the ouerruling of vs, and that we ſubmit our ſelues ſo vnto him, as al our thoughts affections and lykinges be framed vnto his will, though it ſeeme neuer ſo hard vnto vs. Thus ye ſee what wee haue to note concerning the temptation that Moſes ſpeaketh of here, and concerning the ſtrife at ſuch time as the people were in a chafe and murmured againſt GOD.

And let vs knowe moreouer that wee bee no competent Iudges in owne caſe, leaſt wee ſeeke fond excuſes as wee be wont to doe. We will not be acknowen that we accuſe God, though it bee ſo in deede: We will ſay wee intend not to aduance our ſelues againſt him to defy him: but yet is it ſo in deede. Yea and whereas the people were driuen to name the places of Meriba & Maſa: they did it not of their owne good will, but it was Gods will that thoſe names ſhould remaine as preſidentes of their rebelliouſneſſe. Therefore let vs learne, that if wee bee not wholy obedient vnto God, ſo as we doe not any thing but by his good wil and leaue: our tempting of him is a prouoking of his wrath, as though we made a kinde of defiance to him. Afterwarde followed the offence which the people committed in requiring fleſh to eat. They held not thẽſelues contented with Manna, but they would needes haue ſuch vittels as they themſelues lyked: and they were not contented ſimply with fleſh neither, but they would needes haue ſauce, yea and daintie ſauce to it. For they longed for the Garlike and Onyons and other lyke thinges which they had had in Egypt, and they would needes haue GOD to feede them with the ſame geere in the wilderneſſe. But it was a diueliſh longing, which made them to refuſe the ſuſtenãce that God had giuen thẽ. Beſides, what more? They had Manna daily from heauen, to feed vpõ as much as they would: ſo as they might wel perceiue that God maintayned them by his power, but that ſeemed vnſauery to them. And why? Becauſe it came of God. They would needes haue whatſoeuer they themſelues lyked, as it were in ſpite of him: inſomuch that they fretted and chafed at his bringing of them out of Egypt, as who ſhoulde ſay they held skorne of the deliueraunce which hee had wrought for them. Sith wee ſee this, let vs looke to our ſelues, and let vs knowe that this fault is ſet forth vnto vs, to make vs beware that wee bee not guiltie of the lyke. Exod. 14.11. Num. 14.2.4.

For wee muſt vnderſtand that GOD maketh vs Iudges of the people of old time, to the ende that euery of vs ſhoulde condemne our ſelues in our owne caſes. For why? If wee bee Iudges of ſuche as haue done amiſſe: thinke wee that GOD ſeeth not much clearelyer than wee? Now he is ſo gratious as to put ouer his office vnto vs, to the ende that euery of vs ſhoulde haue an eye to himſelfe, and hauing pleaded guiltie, bee caſt downe and humbled before him. Therefore let vs marke that the rehearſall of this ſtorie, ought to leade vs to the condemning of our owne wicked affections, and make vs to conſider what our luſtes are, wherethrough wee ceaſe not to prouoke the wrath of our God. And let vs marke firſt of all, that looke how many luſtes are in our flesh? so many armed folkes haue we, which aduaunce themselues against God. And Rom.8.7. for the same cause doth Saint Paul say, that all the imaginations, conceites, and affections of our nature, serue to prouoke vs to fight against the righteousnesse of our God. And therefore whensoeuer we chance to lust after any thing, let not our flesshe ouermaister vs. And why? For all our senses are so corrupted: that although (to our seeming) the end of our wishes be good: yet notwithstanding, some excesse will euer be mingled with them, and God shall haue somewhat in them wherein to finde fault. And how faire and beautifull soeuer our desires are to the outward showe, there is alwayes some vice in them: and what shall wee then say of the sinfull lustes, which wee be driuen to condemne euen by our owne naturall iudgement? When a man desireth to haue wherewith to find his household, and trauelleth to get it: truely that desire is good of it selfe. But yet the same is matched with impatience, or with vnstayednesse, or with ouergreat care, or with vnbeliefe: and to be short God shall alwayes finde somewhat amisse in our desires, which of their owne nature are not euil. Howbeit, if a man rush out into pilling, and polling, and scratching, to beguile and deceiue his neighbor: is it not much worse than to haue a desire that might seeme good of it selfe? Though a man purpose to liue neuer so quietly with his wife, yet shall it alwayes be mingled with some worldly affections, so as our corruptiō wil needes bewray it selfe still, euen in the best thinges: and what will become of vs then, if wee giue our selues the bridle to whoredome? As much is to be sayd of all other thinges. And therefore let vs beare in minde, that although our desires appeare not to bee euill: yet are they euer matched with some vice & vnrighteousnesse before God. But [besides this,] wee haue also our fleshly lusts which make vs to shake off Gods yoke, so as wee cast our selues at aladuenture, some into blasphemie, some into gluttonie, some into vnrulinesse, some into wantonnesse, some into lecherie, some into extortion, some into crueltie, some into robberie, and othersome into al maner of wickednesse. Now then, deserue not our lustes that God should rise vp to destroy vs for them, when wee be come to that poynt? Yes: for if the people of Israell had graues of lusse: what shall become of vs? And therefore let vs learne that when we read these stories, God giueth vs warning to enter into ỹ examination of our faults, that vppon the knowing of them, wee shoulde craue forgiuenesse of them, and fall to such repentance, as may wholy tame vs and make vs flee vnto him, and not be giuen any more to our vices. But that is vnpossible for vs to doe, vntill wee haue so ouermastered our selues, as to mislyke our owne affections with full purpose to renounce them. Vntill a man bee subdued after that fashion, it is vnpossible for him to yeeld obedience vnto God, how faire apparance of vertue soeuer he haue. But what? So farre off are wee from minding these thinges, that by all lykelyhoode wee doe nothing else but blindfolde our eyes, that wee might not see our sinnes to seeke conuenient remedie for them. See here how the Iewes were condemned for requiring of water, and yet were they ready to dy for thirst. Yea, but the cause why they were not to bee excused, was for that they required it with murmuring. Whereas they should haue sayd, Lord thou knowest what is expedient for vs better thā wee our selues doe; and therefore wee referre our selues to thee, prouide thou for vs: in steade of vsing such humilitie, they fall to repining and storming. Now wee must not doe so: but wee must patiently tary Gods leasure, when hee giueth vs not thinges so soone as wee aske them; for hee can well skill to prouide for all our needes. In deed if it pleased him, hee could well content vs and giue vs all our wishes: but his will is not to maintaine vs here in such abundance, as wee might take occasion to holde skorne of the good that hee doth vs, and to despise it by treading it vnder our feete. Hee will haue vs to be meeke and lowly, that wee may learne to resorte vnto him. When a man is in poore estate, he beareth himselfe on hand that if God would giue him wherewith to maintaine himselfe plenteously, he would be wholy giuen to be thankefull towardes him for his pitying of him. But let him once come to wealth, and let God deale bountifully with him: and what will he doe? He wil lift vp himselfe against God, and forget him in such sorte, as if hee were not the same man that he was before. And this vice is tootod common: insomuch that the more our Lord increaseth his benefites towardes vs, the more doe we seeme wilfull in despising him, and his so doing sharpneth our vnthankfulnesse and malice. And therefore let vs consider, that the thinges which are tolde vs concerning ỹ Iewes, belong vnto vs, forasmuch as we haue the lyke or greater vices in vs, than were in them: & we must vnderstand that Gods intent is to teach vs by them.

And specially whereas mention is made of their wilfull stubbornnesse at Cades Barne, where Numb.14.
they refused to goe foreward to enter into the inheritance that was promised them: let vs vnderstand that we be no lesse worthie of blame at this day before God, for that he cannot hold vs in, to make vs goe through with our course. To what purpose hath GOD called vs into his Church? It is (as I sayd afore) to the end that in passing through this world, wee shoulde not be wedded to it, but vse it altogether as a wayfaring, and as a straunge countrie, trauelling still through it towardes heauen. For beholde, our Lord cryeth to vs both early and late, that wee should goe on still to come vnto him. But we on the contrary part, voutsafe not to remoue one foote to goe to him: but in stead of setting forward we retire back, or else sit snugging still in our owne slothfulnesse. We see it is so. Now then, forasmuch as our Lord findeth vs so lazie and stubborne, that in stead of plucking vp a chearefull courage to goe foreward, and to hold on our course vntill wee bee come to the ende of it, wee resist him and are loth to passe any further: Let vs vnderſtand ỹ this ſtory is told vs, to caſt vs vtterly down in our ſelues, ſo as we ſhould not ſeeke any worthineſſe in our owne perſons, (as in deede there is none in vs:) But yelde God the whole prayſe of his benefites, knowing that he is not bound at all on his ſide, but that hee doth all thinges of his own meere free goodnes and infinite mercie: and therefore that wee on our ſide ought to ſigh, beſeeching him to correct vs and reforme vs according to his will. And for the better perceiuing hereof, I pray you after what ſort goe we forward when God calleth vs? Wee partly limp, and partely make many a falſe ſtep. Let euery man examine himſelfe, and ſee how foreward hee hath bin ſince the time that God hath reached him his hand. True it is that euen before wee knew the Goſpell, wee were already without excuſe of our rebelling againſt our God: but now ſeeing hee hath inlightened vs by his word, and ſhewed vs the way of ſaluation, and ſetteth his will before vs, ſaying, come, and reacheth vs his hand to guide vs: if of all this while wee haue not vouſafed to come vnto him, how ſhall wee excuſe our ſelues? Let euery of vs conſider how hee diſchargeth himſelfe: and afterward let vs haue an eye to the common ſtate. Wee can well ſpeake of Goſpellyke reformation, and it is a maruell to heare how wee will talke: but yet for all that, our filthineſſe is ſo ſtinking, as is lothſome to beholde: and GOD needeth not to goe vp into his iudgement ſeate to giue ſentence of it, for the very infidels and ignoraunt ſorte can bee our Iudges. And of a trueth they may bee a great ſhame to vs, ſeeing our lyfe is ſo leawde and wicked, that euen the ſilie blinde ſorte of Papiſtes may laugh vs to ſkorne. And ſurely if vtter confuſion ſhoulde fall vppon our heades: wee haue well deſerued it. For by our meanes Gods name is blaſphemed: and yet notwithſtanding wee regarde it not. Howbeit, the more that wee beſotte our ſelues after that faſhion in our vaine ſelfeflatterie: the more will GOD make vs feele in the end, that hee will not ſuffer his chaſtiſements to bee loſt.

Rom. 1. 20.

To bee ſhorte, let vs remember how Moſes ſayth heere, Euer ſince the time that I haue knowen you, you haue alwayes bin rebellious againſt God. And this Rebelliouſneſſe whereof he ſpeaketh is expreſſed lykewiſe in this ſaying that they reſiſted the mouth of God diſtruſting him and in counſeyling his will. Now then, if we wil know what it is to be rebellious: let vs firſt of all looke what God hath ſpoken. For the thing wherein hee intendeth to trye vs, is whether wee be willing to ſubmit our ſelues ſimply in all reſpectes to his worde, after hee hath beene ſo gratious vnto vs as to teach vs. What elſe is the holy ſcripture, but an vttering or declaring of Gods will? And therefore all that euer is conteined there, is as though GOD opened his holy mouth, to tell vs what he requireth at our hand. Then if our lyfe bee not fully correſpondent to Gods worde, whereof wee make profeſſion: beholde, God complayneth of vs, and accuſeth vs of rebelling againſt his mouth. And there are two partes of this rebelliouſneſſe. The one is when we diſtruſt Gods promiſes, and the other is when wee diſobey his commandement: & thoſe two be the ſumme of all that is to bee learned in Gods word. When wee haue toſſed and turned ouer the leaues of all the holy ſcripture neuer ſo much, there are but theſe two pointes contained in it: that is to wit, ỹ for as much as God being deſirous to bee our father and Sauiour, openeth vs the infinite treaſures of his mercie, calling vs to him, and ſetting his free goodneſſe and free loue before vs: wee ſhould beleeue his promiſes and reſt wholly vppon them, ſaying, Lorde ſeeing thou art ſo freehearted as to offer thy ſelfe thus vnto vs: behold, wee caſt all our care vpon thee, and hope for all welfare through thy bountifulneſſe. The firſt thing then which we haue to doe, is to ſettle our ſelues vppon Gods promiſes, when he offereth them vnto vs. Secondly there is the obedience which God requireth, as if he ſhoulde ſay vnto vs: Go to, I will haue ye to liue in ſuch wiſe, as ye obey me and yeeld me ſuch ſeruice, as your cõming to me be of your own accord. And here Moſes ſaith ỹ the people were alwayes rebellious againſt Gods mouth, foraſmuch as they obeyed not his commandements, nor truſted to his promiſes. Nowe let vs looke into our ſelues: where is the faith ỹ we boaſt of? In deede we cã wel vnough ſay ỹ we beleeue the Goſpel: but if gods promiſes touched vs effectually, there wold be another maner of ſtedfaſtneſſe in vs, and wee would not bow with euery winde like wauering reedes, as we do. Our vnbeliefe bewrayes it ſelfe & we be too much conuicted of it: inſomuch ỹ we cannot truſt God euen in worldly things. And if we cannot truſt to him for ſmall things, howe is it poſſible that we ſhould truſt to him, for the euerlaſting life? We haue dayly experience of his ſuccour and helpe: & yet do we doubt thereof ſtill. And how ſhall we then truſt in him who the caſe concerneth inuiſible things, as the lyfe which is hidden from vs till God diſcouer it vnto vs? Againe, doeth not this rebelliouſneſſe of ours in reſiſting him, ſhew it ſelf in al our whole life? In deede wee will make ſignes of willingneſſe to ſerue God: but yet is all but counterfetting. For let vs ſee if any of vs doo liue ſo faithfully and vprightly as wee ought to doo? Where is the louing kindneſſe and charitie that ought to bee among the faithfull, and among Gods children? Nay, we bee rather like Cattes and dogges. And when the caſe requireth that wee ſhould agree togither in well dooing, the worlde ſees howe wee goe to woorke. It may ſeeme that wee haue conſpyred to goe the cleane contrarie way to that which God willeth and ordaineth. And this is not to be greatly wondered at. For if in things that are ſmall and light, we ſhewe our ſelues to haue no great Chriſtianitie in vs: we wil ſhew no leſſe lewdneſſe, when wee come to the thinges that are greater and more excellent. I cal them ſmal things in compariſon of the feare of God and the loue of his worde, which men may ſay they

ſee not in vs. For as concerning thoſe ſmall thinges, if we intend to make any countenance of deuotion to Godward: we can well abide that men ſhould condemne both extortion, deceit, cruelty, periurie, and ſuch other vices. When we come to Sermons, we can welinough pretend ỹ there is ſome agreement among vs, and ſpecially when we receiue the Lords ſupper: & yet notwithſtanding cuẽ in that behalf there appeareth ſuch contempt of God, as we ought to be aſhamed of it. For I know that vpon the laſt Lordes day while we were miniſtring of the cõmunion, and while we ſhould haue aſſembled altogither, to make a general proteſtatiõ of our faith, and to offer vp our praiers vnto God: about two hũdred people were occupied in gaming. In their going by before the Sermon began, a man would haue thought they had bin prepared to the Communion: but their mindes are ſo vppon their playing, that they ſpend euery Sabboth day in ſuch vnthriftineſſe. And it is meete that this ſhould bee tolde them openly, ſeeing it is apparant, & that euen little children perceiue the ſhamefulneſſe of it. Now then, let vs marke in feawe wordes, that Moſes ſpake not for his owne time onely, but for vs alſo in theſe dayes, who bee warned in the perſon of the Iewes to be aſhamed of our ſelues, and therewithall to ſeeke ỹ meanes that our God may receaue vs to pitie and mercie: which is, that after we haue acknowledged how guiltie wee bee before God: euerie of vs may learne, not onely to condemne our ſelues, but alſo to bow downe our neckes to craue forgiueneſſe of our former faultes at Gods hand, to the ende that being acquit by him, wee may alſo be guided and gouerned by his holy ſpirit: & that whereas wee haue bin ſtubborne againſt him heretofore, ſo as he could by no meanes weeld vs, wee may learne to yeeld our ſelues ſo obediently to him, that in ſtead of being as woode beaſtes, we may become meeke and mylde vnto him as ſheepe and lambes, and giue eare vnto his voyce, giuing it ſuch ſuperioritie ouer vs, as we may vtterly forſake all things that may hinder our honoring and ſeruing of him.

Now let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs feele them better than wee haue done, ſo as wee may yeelde our ſelues to him with true repentance, & continue therein not for one day onely, but all our life long: and ỹ therewithal it may pleaſe him to beare with vs in all our infirmities, euen vntill he haue rid vs quite and cleane of them. And ſo let vs all ſay, Almightie GOD heauenly Father, &c.

On Munday the ix. of September. 1555.

The Lxvnj. Sermon which is the ſeuenth vpon the ninth Chapter.

25 Then humbled I my ſelfe before the Lord fortie dayes and fortie nightes, for I humbled my ſelfe becauſe the Lord had ſaid that he would deſtroy you.

26 And I prayed to the Lord & ſaid: Lord God, deſtroy not thy people and thine heritage, which thou haſt gotten by thy mightie power, and whom thou haſt brought out of Egypt by ſtrong hand.

27 Bethinke thee of thy ſeruants Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob. Haue not an eye to the ſtubbornneſſe of this people, nor to their misbeleefe, nor to their ſinne:

28 Leaſt the inhabiters of the land from whence thou haſt brought vs, do ſay: bycauſe the Lorde could not bring them into the land wherof he had ſpoken to them, or becauſe he hated them: therefore hath he brought them forth to kill them in the wilderneſſe.

29 Moreouer, they be thy people, and thine heritage, whom thou haſt brought out with thy great power, and with thine arme ſtretched out.

MOſes goeth foreward here with the matter that he had begunne afore: which was, to make the people vnderſtand howe great the faulte was which they had committed. For wheras he boaſteth of Gods hearing of him, he doeth not to the intent the people ſhould thinke themſelues ſo much the more beholden to him therefore: that is not the thing which he looketh at: but that the people ſhould thenceforth liue in awe and humilitie, and beare in minde the faulte that they had committed, and conſider howe they had well deſerued to haue beene vtterly rooted out if God had not ſhewed them mercie. And he ſayth that after he had lyen vpon the ground fortie dayes and fortie nightes, he was heard: and this is to the end that by ſuch circumſtance, the people may the better learne, that if GOD had not hearkened to that vehement and earneſt prayer of his, they had beene vtterly vndone. It is an extraordinarie thing, that a man ſhould continue ſighing and weeping before God, fortie dayes and fortie nightes together: and no doubt but this power was giuen to Moſes by miracle, lyke as was his faſting of fortie dayes and fortie nightes before. And to what purpoſe? To the end that the Lawe might bee the better authorized thereby. For it might well ſeeme that the couenant which God had made with the people, was quite broken and vtterly diſanulled: and therefore it was expedient that Moſes ſhould once againe be ſeparated from the company of men fortie dayes and fortie nightes, that by that meanes, new authoritie might be purchaſed. But yet for all that, we muſt marke well, that whereas Moſes forbare meate and drinke fortie dayes and fortie nights together, it was not done by humaine power, neither was it (to ſpeake properly) a faſt of ſobrietie: (for hee was exempted from hunger and thirſt:) but it was done to the end that the Lawe ſhould be receiued with the greater reuerence, foraſmuch as it came not of men, but Moſes came downe from the mountaine as if an Angel had come downe from heauen. And his praying was for the ſinnes of the people, that God would not looke vppon the idolatrie that had bin committed, but hold on ſtill in his owne purpoſe. For although Moſes had broken the tables, and that he had done it through the impulſion of Gods ſpirit: yet notwithſtãding, (as hath bin ſaid already,) he ceaſed not to haue compaſſion vppon the people which was worthie to haue bin rooted out. That is the effect of the matter which wee muſt looke vnto here.

And thereby we be put in minde, that if God forgiue vs any fall or offence, wee muſt not ſo forget it, but we muſt bethinke our ſelues to liue in the greater awe, and conſider all our lyfe long how greatly we be bound vnto God for vttering ſo great goodneſſe vnto vs. There are a number to bee ſeene, which doe but wring their mouthes when they woulde haue their faultes forgiuen them, and they neuer paſſe to thinke any more vppon them, to yeelde God his deſerued prayſe. Contrariwiſe it is ſhewed vs here by the example of the Iewes, that although God bee mercifull to vs, and liſt not to call our faultes to account: yet muſt not wee therefore thruſt them vnder foote, but rather cal them to minde euery day, that it may firſt of all prouoke vs to repentance, aſſuring our ſelues that wee may fall eftſoone, if God preſerue vs not: and ſecondly [make vs to conſider] that we ſtand not but through his free mercie: and finally incourage vs to magnify his name for drawing vs out of ỹ dungeon whereinto we were fallen. Seeing then that we be ſo much bound vnto him, let vs bee the willinger to ſerue and honor him. Thus yee ſee in effect what wee haue to remember vppon this place.

Beſides this, let vs marke well by the example of Moſes, that it is not enough to pray vnto God in two or three wordes and as it were in poſte: but that wee muſt continue in praying without being weary. And that is a poynt right neceſſarie to bee marked. For whereas there are many faults in vs, this is one of the greateſt, that we cannot ſettle our ſelues vnto prayer, but wee bee fleeting, ſo as our mouthes are no ſooner opened, but our wittes are by and by wandering elſewhere. And beſides that, if we haue prayed vnto God once, wee thinke it enough and too much. Contrariwiſe we ſee that Moſes was fortie dayes together, in continuall mourning for the offence of the people. Therfore in our praying vnto God, let vs learne to haue the perſeueraunce whereunto our Lorde Ieſus exhorteth vs, ſaying that we muſt be importunate, and that it is not enough for vs to haue vttered our griefe vnto GOD lightly and once for all: but that we muſt reſorte to him ſtil, vntill he haue heard our requeſtes. Now then, here is a ſecond leſſon which we haue to gather vppon this place: which is, that in praying vnto God, we muſt haue a ſetledneſſe of holding out to the end. Luk. 18. 1. 5.

Alſo this praying of Moſeſes, ſheweth vs what their duetie is, which haue the charge of other folke: namely, to pray to God to pitie ſuch as ſhall haue offended. For it is not enough for ſuch as haue publique charge to diſcharge their duetie to the worldeward: but they muſt alſo turne vnto God. Wee ſee how the Apoſtles ſay that they muſt not onely preach the Goſpell, but alſo giue themſelues to prayer and ſupplication. Now, this belongeth to all the faithfull. For to pray vnto God is the chiefe duetie of our faith. And foraſmuch as the Apoſtles had the chiefe charge of the Church: it behoued this calling vpon God, to belong chiefly vnto them. And that is the cauſe why Saint Paul ſayth, that hee humbleth himſelfe for the Corinthians: as who ſhould ſay hee ought to beare the chaſtiſement of their ſins in his owne perſon. For inaſmuch as God had ſet him ouer that Church, it behooued him to beare the chiefe burden vppon his ſhoulders. Therefore ſuch as haue the charge of preaching Gods word and of teaching in the Church, muſt not onely imploy themſelues that way, but alſo to prayer. And chiefly when they ſee things go amiſſe, and diſorders among the people: then ought they moſt ſpecially to reſorte vnto GOD, that he may prouide a remedie for it. This is the thing that is ſhewed vs by the example of Moſes, in that it is ſayd that hee taryed not till the people reſorted to God for mercie, but ſhewed them the way, as he whom God had appointed to beare the burthen of the people, and to procure their welfare. Act. 6. 4.

2. Cor. 2. 6.

Now let vs come to the forme of the prayer that Moſes maketh. Lord God (ſaith he) deſtroy not the people of thine heritage whō thou haſt redeemed by thy mightie power & ſtrong hand, out of the land of Egypt. Beshinke thy selfe of thy seruauntes Abrahám, Isaac, and Iacob: and haue not an eye to the stubbornnesse of this people, nor to their wickednesse, nor to their offence. Here we see what it is that Moses alledgeth vnto God: namely, his gracious fauour wherethrough he had chosen the ofspring of Abraham. And so we see here a good rule for vs to keepe in praying vnto God: which is, that if we intende to obtain our requests at his hand, we must not presume vppon any thing that is in our selues, but rather alledge his own goodnesse which hee hath made vs to feele. As if wee should say, Lord, go forward with thy work, thou hast begunne to call vs to thee, wee bee as much beholden to thy goodnesse as is possible: therefore holde thou on stil, finish the thing that thou hast begun, and let not thy worke stay vnperfected, as it is saide in the hundreth and eight and thirtith Psalme. And it is such a doctrine as wee may gather, vppon all the prayers that are conteined in the holy scripture.

Nowe wheras Moses saith thy people, and thine inheritance: he meaneth not that the people had purchased that dignitie themselues. It was a great honour that any one people of all mankinde shoulde be called Gods inheritance. Deserued they to bee in that estimation? Moses addeth immediatly, that there was nothing but stubbornnesse, wickednesse, and sinne in them. It followeth then that all is to be referred to the free adoption, wherethrough God had chosen that people, as if hee shoulde say, I will haue the house of Abraham to reigne ouer it, there will I dwell, that shalbe my Church, there wil I rest. God in so saying, had not respect whether the people were worthy of it or no: and it appeared by the effect, that they were a spitefull people: but whatsoeuer they were, God had made the said promise, which was not grounded vppon any deserts of man. The thing then that Moses setteth vs downe here, is this: Lorde haue mercy vpon thy people, and vpon thine heritage. And so, when wee resort to God to craue forgiuenesse of our sinnes, let vs learne to make none other enterance to finde fauour and to be hearde, than by alledging the benefites that we haue erst receiued at his hande. That (say I) is the gate that we must enter at in praying vnto God. Albeit we haue offended him and be neuer so wretched sinners: yet notwithstanding inasmuch as hee hath chosen vs for his flocke, and vouchsafed to vtter himselfe to vs, and to giue vs assurance that hee is our father and sauiour: wee may presse familiarly vnto him, hauing so sure a pledge of his goodnesse. But yet let vs beware of presumption, that wee seeke not any thing in our selues wherewith to binde God vnto vs, for we bee vtterly voide of any such thing: but let vs be contéted to offer vnto him ỹ things which we hold of him: and in doing him homage for his benefites, let vs take corage to call vpon him, assuring our selues that he will continue thé still, & that as he hath shewed himself liberall towards vs heretofore, so he wil giue vs assurance ỹ he wil not faile vs hereafter. This in effect is the thing which we haue to remember in this saying of Moses, where he calleth the Iewes Gods people and heritage.

Now he addeth, that God had brought them out of the land of Egypt by his mighty power and with a strong hand, euē to make it knowen that they were his inheritance, by a vysible token, and by the apparant effect of it. True it is that the people shold haue grounded themselues vpon the promise: and Moses hath followed the same order here. For he saith not first, Lorde ỹ hast brought vs out of Egypt, and afterward vpheld vs by thy power when thou madest vs to passe through ỹ wildernesse: but he saith expresly, we be thy people and thine inheritance. And wherupon rested he? Vpon the promise, because God had spoken the word, saying, I will bee the Sauiour of thy lynage. But yet therewithall hee letteth not to alledge the saide deliuerance also, to proue that God counted that people for his heritage. For when God deliuered the Iewes out of Egypt, & reached them his hand to bring them out: wher of came it? It was as a sealing of the couenant that had beene made by worde of mouth. God (say I) did shewe as then, that the former promising vnto Abraham, that he would be the God of his linage, was not in vaine. And for the same cause doth Moses set down both twaine of them here. He beginneth with the promise, and afterward addeth what insued thereof: that is to wit the deliuerance, which was a sure warrant that he ment not to beguile his seruaunt Abraham, when he tolde him as I haue tolde you before. Wherfore let vs briefly beare in mind that if we intend to haue accesse vnto god to rest vpon his goodnes, we must beginne at his worde: and afterward we must also acknowledge the benefites that wee haue felt at his hande. And if we haue founde that hee hath not beguiled vs by his promises, it is as a former warrant whereby hee intendeth to confirme and assure vs the better. Loe heere a goodly matching, namely that wee yeelde such honour vnto Gods worde, as to trust assuredly thereunto: and therewithall, that we be not thankelesse for the goodnesse which he hath shewed vs indeede, but make the same to serue vs as a president to ratifie our faith, to the ende that his worde haue the greater shewe and power in vs, and wee bee the more prouoked to call vppon him, not doubting at all but that wee shall finde him the same that hee hath shewed himselfe to be, euen to the ende. Thus yee see howe it behoueth vs to put the order in vre which Moses keepeth here, first in setting down Gods promise whereby he had adopted ỹ people of Israel, & afterward in adding ỹ he had deliuered them out of the lande of Egypt, thereby ratifying the thing that he had spoken to his seruaunt Abraham.

Gen. 17.7.

Now he addeth that God should not haue an eye to the peoples stubbornnesse, wickednesse, or offence. This is not added without cause. For when we come to pray God to performe his promise, and to bring the grace of his adoption to his ende: in the meane whyle our owne consciences vpbraid vs, so as wee see well that wee be guilty before him: it is ynough to forecloſe ỹ way to our prayers. For when wee offende God, wee breake his couenant as much as in vs lyes, and we ſtop him from performing of his promiſe. To be ſhort, we deſerue to be giuen ouer of the Lord, when wee keepe not faith and troth towardes him. For this cauſe doth Moſes ſay here, Lorde haue not an eye to the ſtubbornneſſe of this people. So then, it is not ynough for vs to pray God to goe through with the thing that he ſhall haue begun in vs, and to bring his grace to perfection: but wee muſt expreſly pray him, that although hee finde faultes and offences in vs, (as indeede the number of them is infinite): yet that he forbeare not to take vs ſtill for his people: and that although we deſerue to be forſaken of him for our ſinnes inaſmuch as wee haue broken his couenant, yet notwithſtanding he ceaſe not to keepe promiſe with vs ſtill, and to make vs feele ỹ fruit thereof, and to forgiue our ſinnes in ſuch wiſe, as we may neuer ceaſe to continue in his adoption: & that although our ſtraying away was ynough to bereaue vs of the inheriting of our ſaluation, yet notwithſtanding hee ceaſe not to take vs for his children ſtill. To bee ſhort, whenſoeuer wee reſort vnto God, wee muſt acknowledge our ſins with all humilitie. For it will be to no purpoſe for vs to ſay, Lorde thou haſt promiſed vs, thou haſt tolde vs that thou of thy goodneſſe wilt bee merciful to vs, thou haſt declared that thou wilt bee our father, wee haue thy promiſe: it will not boote vs to ſay all theſe thinges: for all ſhall bee ouerthrowen with one worde, becauſe wee haue done amiſſe, and haue not kept the courſe whereunto God called vs, but haue drawen cleane backe. Therfore we be warned, that whenſoeuer we pray vnto God, wee muſt acknowledge our faultes, and confeſſe them freely, that God may not ceaſe to haue pitie vppon vs, ſpecially when wee ſhall haue committed any groſſe fault, as this people had done in committing abhominable ydolatrie. The greater then that our ſinnes bee, the more let vs caſt downe and humble our ſelues, to craue pardon of our God by confeſſing wherin we haue offended him. After that manner muſt we deale. And it is certaine, that if euerie of vs conſider well his owne life without flatterie, he ſhall finde himſelf exceedingly indaungered vnto God, and we ſhall always haue good cauſe to be aſhamed of our ſelues. And therefore when we pray, let vs beare theſe two things in remembrance: namely, that although we be neuer ſo wretched, yet notwithſtanding foraſmuch as God hath choſen vs for his people, wee muſt come to him familiarly and without doubting, for he guideth vs thither and openeth vs ỹ gate by his promiſe, & that muſt be our grounde to ſtande vpon. Againe, we muſt bethinke vs of our ſinnes, ſo as we may feele them & be deadly wounded by them, to the ende we may bee ſorie for them before God, & beſeech him (notwithſtanding our vnworthines) to applie his promiſes to our ſaluation, when it ſhall haue pleaſed him to bury our ſinnes & to receiue vs to mercy. Yea & let vs mark well ỹ wordes ỹ are ſet downe here, the ſtubbornnes of the people, their wickednes, and their ſin. For Moſes here maketh not a ceremonious confeſſion as theſe ſhameleſſe fort doe: that is to ſay, in manner the greater part, when they haue done amiſſe, do beare themſelues in hand, that it is ynough to haue ſaide in one worde, I grant it is a fault: but ye muſt cõſider I am a mã, I am not as a timberlog. It is ynough for them (ſay I) that they excuſe not thẽſelues altogether. But we muſt come after another faſhion, as wee ſee by example here. For firſt of all Moſes ſetteth downe Stubbornnes: ſhewing thereby that there was a horrible rebelliouſnes in that people. Next he addeth wickednes: wherin he betokeneth ỹ the people were ſtarke naught: for ỹ word that he vſeth, importeth ſuch a leawdnes, that they which are ſo termed are diſordered in their whole life. And laſtly he addeth Sinne, that is to ſay ỹ particular fault which they had committed, namely their offence in making themſelues an ydol. And ſo we ſee that he acknowledgeth the peoples offences in good earneſt, to condemne them.

Nowe like as Moſes ſpeaketh here of the people: ſo do we ſee that Daniel ſpeaketh of himſelf, for in his report howe he confeſſed his own ſins and the ſinnes of the people, he ſaieth, Lord we haue ſinned, wee haue offended thee, wee haue done wickedly, we bee tranſgreſſors, our ſinnes are outragious, and our iniquities are exceeding great. Daniel goeth not to worke by halues, in confeſſing that himſelfe and the reſt of the people had done amiſſe and deſerued to bee chaſtiled at Gods hande: but he ſaith flatly, we be wicked and we haue behaued our ſelues leawdly, we haue beene diſobedient and vntrue to our God, we haue prouoked his wrath too much, and wee be curſed and damned, vnleſſe God powre out ỹ infinite treaſures of his mercy vppon vs. Yee ſee then how the true confeſſion which God requireth at our handes, is not to come to him and to ſay in one worde, I haue done amiſſe: but to be ſo abaſhed as to acknowledge our ſelues blameworthy in all reſpects, and to be diſmayed at the remembrance of our offences, like wretched offenders not looking to haue our inditements red vnto vs, not to haue articles alledged againſt vs, but accuſing our ſelues aforehand in ſuch ſort, as God may accept our ſubmiſſion when we ſhal haue examined our faults throughly, not onely in generall but alſo in particular. And in verie deede, after that Moſes had ſpoken of Stubbornneſſe and wickednes: he addeth the Offence that ỹ people had committed. Whereby hee meaneth that it is not ynough to ſay, we were conceiued in ſinne, it is horrible to ſee howe all thinges are out of order in our whole life: but when we haue offended God any maner of way, we muſt vtter it, as we ſee how Dauid cõfeſſeth generally ỹ ther was nothing in him but vtter corruptiõ, and ỹ he brought nothing w̃ him from his mothers womb but ỹ inheriting of death, & therwall faileth not to confeſſe ỹ ſin particularlie which he had committed, not wrapping it vp amõg ỹother to make as though he wiſt not of it: but ſetting down both twaine of thẽ, as we ſee ỹ Moſes doth in this text. Wherefore when we ſhall haue committed any offence, let vs learne to feele it, & to confeſſe it freely before God. And let the ſame lead vs yet fur-

further: that is to wit, to haue an eye to the offences of our whole life, and to acknowledge our selues altogether indangered vnto God, except hee receiue vs to mercie. And aboue all thinges, let vs acknowledge the hardnesse of our heartes, in that wee cannot submit our selues to God because wee be stubborne against him, and Rom.8.7. all the affections of our flesh are at enmitie with him. After that manner (say I) must we confesse our faults, if we minde to obtaine forgiuenesse of them. For as for them ỹ come to God ceremoniously, cõfessing thẽselues to haue done amisse, and not being touched to the quicke with their lewdnesse, nor minding to acknowledge it in their hearts: they doe but play mockeholyday, and they shall feele with whom they haue to do, and that God is not an earthly iudge that can be deceiued when men craue pardon feynedly. And therefore when we pray vnto God, let euerie of vs quicken vp himselfe in acknowledging our faults better than we haue bin wont to do: & let the same so pull vs downe, as wee may not wote what to say, but thus, Alas Lord what should become of vs if it were not for thine inestimable mercie? For beholde, wee be euen as it were vtterly ouerwhelmed: and though we knewe but the hundreth part of the offences that wee haue committed, surely it were ynough to sinke vs downe to the bottomlesse pit, vnlesse thou remedy it. And as for thee that iudgest after a farre other fashion: howe shoulde we be able to stand in thy presence, if thou wouldest vse thy rigour towards vs? Loe here the right lowlinesse which God commaundeth: which is, that when wee be so ashamed of our sinnes as we wote not what to say, wee flee for refuge to Gods mercy hoping ỹ howsoeuer the case stand, he of his great goodnesse wil not refuse to take vs to mercie.

Nowe to the ende that Moses may obtaine his request, hee beseecheth God expresly to bee mindfull of his seruaunts Abraham, Isaac, and Iacob:
Gen.17.7. and that was by reason of the couenant that he had made with them, for in the same couenant there was this article, I will be thy God and the God of thy seede after thee. Yee see here howe God took the children of Abraham before they were borne, adopting them to bee his Church, and to be inheriters not onely of the Lande of Chanaan, but also of the kingdome of heauen. But how doe the children of Abraham behaue themselues? Leawdly. They falsifie their faith vnto God and become backesliders, so as they deserue to be cut off from his house. Lorde (saith Moses) haue not an eye to their faultes and offences, but bee mindfull of thy couenant which thou madest with thy seruaunts Abraham Isaac, and Iacob. Nowe wee see to what purpose Moses alledgeth here the holy Patriarks. It is not to make them Aduocates and Patrons before God as the Papistes doe, who alledge these textes to proue their owne forgeries of hauing the saints to bee their intercessors. What, say they? Is it not written that God should bee mindfull of Abraham, Isaac, and Iacob, and yet they were deade long afore? Seeing that the fathers vsed such speech, why shoulde not the saincts alreadie deceased bee made patrons and aduocates, to make intercession for them that are aliue? Surely this commeth of too grosse beastlinesse. For they consider not in what manner Moses alledgeth these persons. I haue tolde you it afore: for God had promised them that hee woulde bee the sauiour of their linage, and had giuen them his promise as a pledge, not only on their owne behalfe, but also for all their successours. And that is ỹ cause why Iacob at his death or a little before, said, let my name be called vpõ ouer Ephraim and Manasses, for his meaning was to make two tribes of them, notwithstanding that they had both but one heade, that is to wit Ioseph first of al, & he intended that he shold haue a double portion. Why so? Iacob was in Egypt, not onely as a poore straunger like to haue starued for hunger if he had not come thither: but also as a man shaken off in scorne & disdain. It is manifest that the Egyptians shunned the Iewes, and accounted them as vncleane people. Neuertheless although Iacob had not any house of his owne, but was there as a slaue & banished thither as into an odde nooke of ỹ realm: yet notwithstanding hee assigneth a double portion to Ephraim and Manasses. But [in so doing] hee had an eye to the promise that God had made to him. That is the cause why hee saieth, Let my name bee çalled vppon ouer them; and let them bee taken and esteemed as two of mine owne children. According hereunto it is saide, that God shoulde remember Abraham, Isaac, and Iacob, as we see in Exodus, where Exo.3.15.16 God intending to acquaint himselfe with his people, alledgeth the same for a preface: as if he should say, I haue bounde my selfe in the hande of Abraham. And therby he sendeth them back to the promise as it was made and set downe in Gen.15.13. 16. Genesis, where God saide, that in the ende of fourehundred yeares, after they had beene oppressed with grieuous tyranny, he woulde deliuer them. Nowe then, it is not to be doubted, but that Moseses alledging of Abraham, Isaac, and Iacob, is to ỹ end that God should performe his couenant in deede, and not cease to be constant in his purpose and in discharging of his promise, notwithstanding the wickednes of mẽ. And so we see how the Papistes haue falsly abused the holy scripture, yea & shewed themselues so shameleesse and fond, that euen little children may perceiue their beastlinesse. Wherefore we ought so little to be moued with these texts: that they do rather make wholly against them. And so ye see why Moses alledgeth Abraham, Isaac, & Iacob. He groundeth himselfe vpon Gods word.

Likewise when wee pray, before wee open our mouth wee must be taught of God, hee must direct vs by his worde, for wee cannot call vpon him rightly, except hee haue first preuented Rom.10.14 vs and called vs to him, so as wee bee sure that hee will heare vs. For as for the man that Iam.1.6.7. doubteth and floteth like the waues of the sea (saieth Sainct Iames), let him not looke to obtaine any thing. So then our prayers boote vs not at all, without certaintie of faith. Now let vs see whence wee may gette such certaintie of fairh Surely euen by Gods worde, and that is it that Moſes hath followed. Hee knewe the promiſe that had proceeded out of Gods mouth, wherupon he reſteth, & therupon maketh mention of Abraham Iſaac & Iacob. And why? For it was they ỹ had receiued the promiſe, as well in their owne behalfe, as in the behalf of their ſucceſſors. But now do we ſee that we haue a Mediator to ratifie the new couenant that God hath made with vs. Before Ieſus Chriſt came into the worlde, Abraham, Iſaac, and Iacob were as mediators after a ſort, becauſe they receiued ỹ promiſe in the name of ỹ whole Church. But nowe God ſendeth vs backe to his only ſonne, in whoſe perſon it is his will to ratifie all that euer he had promiſed. How then ſhall we haue any certainty, except we repaire to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, and pray to God his father to remember him, & not to looke at vs, as in verie deede the auncient fathers haue ſhewed vs the good way alreadie in the time of the ſhadows, although they had not the trueth ſo fully as wee haue it in the Goſpel? For ſince the time that the kingdome was ſetled in the houſe of Dauid, and this promiſe made, He ſhalbe my ſon: we ſee that ỹ fathers prayed after this manner: Lord looke vpon the countenance of thy Chriſt or thine anointed. But they ſpake of Dauids ſucceſſors. It is true: Howbeit foraſmuch as that temporall kingdome was a figure of the kingdome that is prepared for vs in the perſon of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: ỹ auncient fathers looked thereat as it were to behold Ieſus Chriſt in a glaſſe. Now then ſeeing ỹ the ſonne of God is come, & hath tolde vs ỹ it is hee to whom we muſt repayre: what excuſe wil there be for vs, if we roue heere and there, and ſeeke other mediators to reſort vnto? Is it not a bereauing of Gods ſonne of his office? yes: for hee is not as was Abraham, or as was Dauid and al his linage: but hee is the true high prieſt which hath appeaſed Gods wrath towardes vs. And hee hath not onely receiued the couenaunt, ſo as he may ſay that God hath tolde him that hee will accept all ſuch as ſubmit themſelues vnto him: but he hath alſo ratified the ſame couenant with his owne bloud: that is the ſeale which he hath ſet vnto it. Then if men will not bee contented with ſuch confirmation of Gods promiſes as is made in the perſon of his ſonne: is it not a treading of his bloude vnder foote to the vttermoſt of their power, and a ſtriuing to make it of none effect? Yes: and ſo we ſee that this text is ſo little able to arme the Papiſts, that it doth rather condemne them of vnthankfulneſſe before God, in that they haue (to the vttermoſt of their power) diſabled the grace that was brought them by the ſonne of God, and not conſidered that Gods adopting of vs was in his hand and by his means, who hath accompliſhed Gods promiſes in ſuch wiſe by his bloude as we may aſſure our ſelues of them without any doubting. Therefore let vs mark wel that whenſoeuer we ſeeke any patrons and aduocats, it is an aboliſhing of the death & paſſion of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, and therwithall an vtter diſanulling of all Gods promiſes, which ought to bee ſprinkled with his bloud, according as wee ſee howe it was commaunded in the Lawe, that the booke ſhould be beſprinkled with the bloude of the ſolemne ſacrifice that was to be offered. When a ſacrifice was to be offred, the bloud of it was to be reſerued, & ſprinkled vppon the tabernacle, vppon the altar, and vpon the booke of the Law: to doe vs to wit, that there is none other meane to aſſure vs of Gods promiſes, than by the beſprinkling of them with the bloude of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. For as for ſuch as runne gadding after their owne imaginations, ſaying wee muſt haue ſuch a patrone and ſuch an aduocate: they (as much as in them lyeth) ſo drayne and drie vp the bloude of Gods ſonne, as it may giue no more force to the promiſes to aſſure vs of our ſaluation.

Exod. 24. 7. 8. Hebr. 9. 19. 20.

Furthermore let vs marke that the Papiſtes haue in all reſpects defaced ỹ office of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. For by their making of the ſaintes to be their patrons & aduocates, they haue alſo made thē as good as mediators, ſo as we ſhould obtaine fauour at Gods hand by their meanes. They ſay not onely Lorde heare the prayer of ſuch a one or ſuch a one: but alſo, for his prayers ſake or for his deſerts ſake. But both theſe things belong peculiarly to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. For to ſeeke to the merits or deſertes of men, is to ſtay vpon a craſed or broken reede, and that is the next way to make vs tumble downe, yea and it is as the ſliuers of a reede that will alſo wound vs beſides our falling. Wherefore let vs vnderſtand, that in ſo doing wee forſake the ſonne of God and bereaue him of his office.

1. Ioh. 2. 1. 2.

Againe, as touching prayer and ſupplication, it is true that we ought to pray one for another as long as wee liue vppon the earth: and we haue ſeene the example thereof in Moſes: yea and wee haue ſeene it in ſuch wiſe, as ſufficeth to ſhewe vs that our prayers are not vaine nor vnprofitable, but that God maketh them auailable and heareth them, when wee pray one for another: Howbeit, that is but while we bee aliue. Moreouer, if wee fall to ſeeking of patrones and aduocates vppon our owne heades, without any warrant of holy ſcripture: it is too great a deſpiſing of God. For wee followe not the manner of praying which God hath ordeyned, and therefore it is a diueliſh malapertneſſe for men to preſume to enter into the kingdome of heauen, there to appoint officers, as though God had made them Lord great maſters there. Nowe then let vs learne that wee muſt let our Lord Ieſus Chriſt alone with the office of aduocate, that hee may be our ſpokeſman for vs, & giue vs acceſſe & means to be accepted at Gods hand. Moreouer, we muſt not imagine any meriting or deſeruing in any mortall creature, no not euen in the Angels of heauē, but we receiue ỹ meriting of Ieſus Chriſt, which thing was not in ỹ holy Patriarks, nor in Dauid, nor in any of his ſucceſſors, for God adopted them freely. But it was his will that in Ieſus Chriſt our ſinnes ſhould bee wyped out, and our debts diſcharged, and ỹ by his obedience righteouſneſſe ſhoulde bee purchaſed vnto vs. That therefore is the thing that wee muſt reſorte vnto.

Where-

Pſal. 2. 7. & 84. 10. & 132. 10.

Wherefore let vs learne, that if the fathers of olde time, when they minded to obtaine fauour at Gods hand, alledged Abraham, Isaac, and Iacob, and consequently Dauid in his order, because he was ordeined to be a figure of our Lord Iesus Christ: if this were vsed in the time that things were yet darke: wee ought to take good heede that wee swarue not to the right hand nor to the left, now that God hath reuealed himselfe fully vnto vs: but that we direct our faith to Iesus Christ, assuring our selues that for his sake God his father hath adopted vs, and liketh well of vs by his meanes, and graunteth vs our requestes. Besides this, forasmuch as ỹ scripture saith that 1.Iohn 2.1. he is giuẽ vs to be our aduocate, that he maketh intercession for vs, and that for his sake we may rest vpon Gods mercie: Let vs not doubt but he will shewe himselfe fauourable vnto vs. Seeing that the scripture fathereth these thinges vppon Iesus Christ, let vs beware that wee rob him not of them, and that we play not the Papistes, who by their praying to their Hesaincts & Shesaints, doe well shewe that Iesus Christ sufficeth them not, and that because they pretende the name of God, they prouoke his vengeance more and more against them. We see also howe God hath blinded them & giuen them vp to a hellish rage, so as they thinke it not ynough to say, These are our patrons and aduocates: but also they make no difference betweene God, and a sainct that they haue forged of their owne braine. For they say, Our father which art in heauen, as wel kneeling before a puppet, as if they spake to GOD himselfe. But yet howe make they their prayers? I shall not neede to speake heere, neither of the Apostles nor of the Prophetes: for they haue saincts which neuer were in the world. And although they take the prophets and Apostles, yet they pray to them as to God, and with the same speech and stile. We see then that they are vtterly brutish, and that God hath giuen them vp to a reprobate sense. And it is good reason, because they haue robbed Christ of his dignitie wherein God his father had set him, and are not contented with him as with their only aduocate and intercessor, but are run astray here & there. Therfore it is meete that God should withdraw himselfe from them and forsake them, that they might fall into such extremitie as wee see they be falne into. Wherefore let vs for our part beware that wee hold fast the simplicitie which the scripture sheweth vs: that is to wit, that in calling vpon God, we haue our eye vpon our Lorde Iesus Christ: and againe that in asmuch as God hath stablished his couenãt for euer in his name, we doubt not but that we be heard as oft as wee come vnto God by him, and that hé is mercifull vnto vs.

Now let vs kneele downe in the presence of our good God with acknowledgement of our sins, praying him to make vs feele them ỹ better, that we may acknowledge them rightly both with heart & mouth, and bee brought to true amendment, & be so humbled, ỹ by glorifying him as he is worthy, and by acknowledging what goodnes he vseth towards vs, we may be prouoked to serue him with the better corage: and he beare with vs in our infirmities as long as we be in this worlde, vntill we be come to him into his heauẽly kingdom, & he haue made vs partakers of his endlesse glorie. That it may please him to grant this grace, not only to vs, &c.

On Tewsday the x. of September. 1555.

The Lxix. Sermon, which is the first vpon the tenth Chapter.

THe same time the Lorde saide, cut thee two tables of stone like the first, and come vp to mee into the mountaine, and make thee an Arke of wood.

2 And I will write in those Tables, the wordes that were written in the former tables, which thou hast broken: and thou shalt put them in the Arke.

3 So I made an Arke of Setimwood, and hewed two tables like the first, and went vp into the mountaine, hauing the two tables in my hande:

4 Then wrate he in the Tables as he had written afore, euen the tenne sayings which the Lorde had spoken vpon the mountaine, from the middes of the fire in the day of your comming together. And afterwarde the Lorde gaue them to me.

5 And I turned me, and went downe from the hill, and put them into the Ark which I had made: and they were there as the Lord had commaunded me.

6 And the children of Israel departed from Beroth of the children of Iaacan towards Mosera, where Aaron died, and was buried there. And Eleazar his sonne executed the office of high priest in his stead.

7 From thence they went towarde Gadgad, and from Gadgad towards Getebatha, in the Countrie where running riuers are.

8 The ſame time the Lord ſorted out the tribe of Leuie, to beare the Arke of the Lords couenant, and to ſtande in the Lords preſence, to miniſter vnto him, and to bleſſe in his name, euen to this day.

WE haue ſeen alredie here tofore the thing ỹ Moſes reherſeth here, ỹ is to wit, ỹ God wrate new againe ỹ ten cõmãdements of his law in two Tables of ſtone: & that was done to the end ỹ the people ſhould the better conſider, that the couenant which God had made with them, was of his own onely mercy. For we ſee how God had giuen ouer ỹ people and it was all one as if he had thruſt them into the commõ aray of other men, which are vtterly accurſed and eſtraunged from God. Truely Gods former chooſing of ỹ people, was of his owne free goodnes. For (as we haue ſeen) none of them was yet borne, when he made his promiſe with his ſeruant Abraham: & therefore needes muſt they acknowledge ỹ his chooſing of them, was not in reſpect of any deſert of their owne. Howbeit forasmuch as men labour al that they can, to darken Gods free fauor, & ſeeke pretie fond deuiſes to chalenge to themſelues ſome pecce of their own ſaluation: it was expedient to haue it fully ſhewed, ỹ God receiued ỹ people to mercy againe the ſecond time, without any reſpect whether they were worthie of it or no, but onely of his owne mere goodneſſe. Men are of opinion, ỹ when God choſe them, he foreſawe what maner of ones they ſhould be, accordingly as we ſee how this diueliſh errour hath alwayes raigned, and ỹ there are yet ſtill ſome fantaſtical perſons, which wil needes haue Gods election to be grounded vpon his foreknowledge, ỹ is to ſay, when God choſe whom he liſted before the making of ỹ world, they fall to gloſing thereupon, ỹ he foreknew who ſhould be worthy of it, & therfore marked them out for the ſame purpoſe, and in the ſame reſpect preferred them before thoſe whom he knew would become wicked. But ỹ is cleane contrarie to ỹ teaching of the holy ſcripture. For ỹ teacheth vs, ỹ the cauſe of Gods choſing of vs is taken from out of himſelf, ỹ is to ſay, of his owne only free goodnes: for he ſhal neuer finde any thing in vs, why he ſhould be inclined to loue vs. Howbeit to the end ỹ this may be the better perceiued in the things which God hath ſhewed vs in the people of Iſrael: he choſe ỹ offſpring of Abraham. And wherefore? Abrahã was a fillie ſoule, he had neither nobilitie nor worſhip in him, he was not of any great reputation to the worldward: & yet notwithſtanding God marked him out, & choſe him alone & his houſhold frõ all others. And what maner of houſhold was it? Was there yet any likelyhood in it? Nay. Abraham was yet childiſhe, hee was barrain, hee was vtterly paſt hope of euer hauing any iſſue. Now then Gods chooſing of Abrahã, was when he was as a blocke alreadie dead aforehand: and therefore S. Paule ſaith, ỹ in the perſon of Abraham, God ſhewed ỹ he choſe the thinges which are not, of purpoſe to giue them being. And for ỹ ſame cauſe it is ſaid in the firſt Chapter of ỹ firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians, ỹ we be of God, that is to ſay, ỹ he giueth vs being vnto ſaluation, bicauſe he hath vouchſafed to chooſe vs: for we be nothing at all in our ſelues. Yet notwithſtanding, this people made great account of themſelues, & bare themſelues in hand that they were better than al ỹ world. For the which cauſe, the couenant & adoption ỹ god had made with that linage was broken off: & ſo ye ſee that the people of Iſrael were reiected at God hands. Yea & wel worthy were they to bee abhorred, inſomuch ỹ this ſentence of condemnation was alredy giuen vpon them, that they ſhould bee rooted out of ỹ world, & the rememberance of them be vtterly deſtroyed. So little cauſe then had the children of Iſrael to make any boaſt of thẽſelues, or to take vpon them aboue the heathẽ: ỹ they were thruſt beneath them, and vtterly diſclaimed and condemned at Gods hand, as whom hee ſhewed to haue nothing elſe but curſednes in them. Now therefore it behoueth them to knowe: ỹ whereas God giueth them his Law, & teacheth them, & performeth his promiſe towards them: all this is done of ſo high & infinite fauor, as ought in maner to make them aſtoniſhed. For what a thing was it, ỹ God after ỹ breaking of ỹ tables of his couenant, did yet ſtill vouchſafe to haue pity vpon ỹ wretched people? Beholde, the two tables were not writtẽ by mans hand, but by gods hãd, ỹ is to ſay by his power: & ỹ was a myracle. And what ſhal a man ſay to it, ỹ Gods own workmanſhip ſhould be defaced? Was it not meete that ỹ people which were the cauſe therof, ſhould haue periſhed vtterly? If we make cõpariſon betwene Gods word, & mens ſaluation: ſurely Gods word is far ỹ preciouſer. But behold, ỹ word of God ỹ is written, I meane ỹ writing ỹ was ſet down in ỹ two tables of ſtone, came as it were from heauẽ, & was not ỹ workmanſhip of man: God himſelfe wrought it of his own power. What puniſhment then ought they to receiue, which committed ſo great and heinous a fault, as ỹ the thing which God had ingrauen with his own hand, was faine to be broken & brought to nought for it? We ſee then ỹ God magnified his ineſtimable goodnes towards this people, in ỹ he vouchſafed ỹ the two tables ſhould be made new againe, and that his law ſhould be regiſtred in them new againe, as a perpetuall monument that he was the protector of Abrahams linage, & intended to keepe them to himſelf for his own flock. Therefore it is not without cauſe, that Moſes maketh mention here of his making of the two tables new againe, & of his offering of them vnto God, & of the writing of the ten cõmandements in them. Surely, it was a thing worthie of remembrance, & wherein mẽ ought to exerciſe thẽſelues day & night, to know ỹ God hauing entred freely in league with ỹ one houſe, was not contented with that alone, but although their ſucceſſours became a froward and crabbed nation, vtterly rebellious & as full of ſhameful churliſhnes as might be: yet he ceaſſed not to continue his couenant, yea, & moreouer to renew it againe with them, & to ſet it in the former ſtate.

And herein we ſee ỹ he had not an eye to mẽ, nor to their worthines, but wil haue thẽ to think themſelues beholden to him for al things: inſomuch that he ouercommeth al ỹ lewdnes & frowardnes of men by his goodnes, adopting euen thoſe to be of his houſe & to be his heirs, which ſhew themſelues vnworthie of the good that he had done for them. That is the thing which wee haue to bear in mind. And we muſt marke that Moſes ſpake not for his own time onely; but that the ſame doctrine toucheth vs as much or more at this day, than euer it did them: ſpecially if wee can conſider the likenes ỹ is betweene vs & the people of old time. In deede we haue not nowadayes the law written in tables of ſtone; but wee haue Gods grace much largelier towardes vs, & which deſerueth to be much more highly eſteemed, becauſe we be ſure that he taketh vs for his church, & wil haue vs to be ruled by him. Now let vs ſee whence this proceedeth, & what is ỹ cauſe thereof. True it is ỹ if we haue an eye to ỹ things ỹ were giuen vs in our father Adam, we be creatures ſhaped after the image of God. But we (to ỹ vttermoſt of our power) haue defaced Gods Eph. 2. 3. image in vs, & wee be ſo marred & corrupted by original ſin, that God diſclaimeth vs, & we be not worthie to be counted his creatures: & yet for all that, he vouchſafeth to gather vs to himſelf. For Rom. 6. 3. in baptiſme we haue gods couenant ingrauen as Gal. 3. 27. it were in our bodies; whereby he doth vs to vnderſtand, ỹ he vouchſafeth to take vs for his people & inheritance. Now haue we any worthines wherby to attaine to ſo great a benefit? Alas, no: for we be giltie aforehand of ỹ defacing of gods image. True it is ỹ that commeth of ỹ roote of ỹ firſt man: but yet are not we our ſelues faultles. Againe, how haue we withdrawen our ſelues frõ God, euen after baptiſme? for we haue not onely cõmitted ſmall faults, as befalleth to ỹ faithfull to do: but alſo in the time of our idolatrie & ſuperſtitiõ, we haue brought to nothing al ỹ grace that was promiſed vs in baptiſme, wee haue renounced the ſaluation that was purchaced vs by our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, we haue forſaken our god, & we haue broken the ſpirituall wedlocke which hee had contracted with vs, ſo as there hath bin nothing in vs but corruption, by gadding away ſo after our own ſuperſtitions: & yet for al this, he hath not failed to returne vnto vs, & to bring vs back againe into the way of ſaluation. Sith we ſee this, ought it not to be a ſufficient proofe of Gods infinit goodnes towards vs, to make vs lay away al fond imagination of deſeruing, & to acknowledge our ſelues beholden to God for all things? Yes: & it is the ſame thing ỹ I alleaged euẽ now out of S. Pauls ſayings, where God ſheweth 1. Cor. 1. 30. vs, ỹ we be of him, not in reſpect that we be men, but in reſpect ỹ we be his workmãſhip, according Eph. 2. 10. as it is ſhewed in the ſecond to the Ephefians, ỹ he hath ſhaped vs: for otherwiſe there is nothing but wickednes in vs, becauſe our nature will alwayes be found to be vtterly froward & accurſed. Thus ye ſee ỹ compariſon which we ought to make betweene our ſelues & the people of olde time, to bring our ſelues low & to make our ſelues perceiue ỹ wee be the more bound vnto God for ỹ free mercie which he hath beſtowed vppon vs, in vouchſafing to take vs to be of his Church, in which reſpect we be (ſay I) more bound vnto him than were the Iewes.

Now it is true ỹ gods writing of his law in two tables of ſtone (as I haue declared already heretofore ſpecially in the firſt place) was to ỹ intent ỹ his doctrine ſhould abide ſure. For he had an eye to ỹ cõmon trade among men, who vpon the making of leags & alliances, are wont to haue thẽ ingrauen in ſtone or braſſe. After ỹ ſame maner it was Gods wil ỹ his law ſhould, for ỹ better continuance therof, be grauen in two ſtones. Ye ſee then how God doth as it were paſſe a ſolemn couenant. Neuertheleſſe wee muſt therwithall alſo come to the figure: namely, ỹ the writing of the law after ỹ faſhion in a cupple of ſtones, ſerued to ſhew ỹ it was not ynough for folke to haue ỹ law giuen thẽ, & to vnderſtand it: vnleſſe it were ingrauen in their hearts. For we muſt come to ỹ ſimilitude ỹ is made by ỹ prophets. For although God ſhewed his law to be ſufficiently authoriſed by vouchſafing to ingraue it ſo in theſe ſtones: yet did he giue an incling ỹ that would nothing boote, verily becauſe ỹ true tables wherein it behoueth vs to write the doctrine of God, are our harts; howbeit not as they be by nature. For what maner of ones are they? Euẽ of ſtone as it is ſaid of them in Ezechiel. So then, let vs marke that ỹ letter of ỹ law is nothing worth, vntil god worke Ezec. 11. 19. & 36. 26. in vs by his holy ſpirit. And that is the cauſe why he hath promiſed to make a newe couenant, not Ier. 31. 32. 33. after the maner ỹ hee made it with the fathers: for, that continued not, ſaith he. And why? Hee ſheweth ỹ the blame & fault therof is in men, becauſe they turne away & runne at rouers as ſoon as God hath called them, & neuer follow him at all. Although they pretend to make great account of his grace: yet is there no ſtedineſſe in them, but rather vtter lightneſſe; for by and by they fling away after their own wicked affectiõs. The couenant of God then, yea though it were written in ſtones, could not hold them in. And why ſo? Not for that God abode not faithful on his part, or that hee perſiſted not to ſhewe that his chooſing of Abrahãs linage was not in vaine: but for that they were bereft & diſappointed of that great benefite, & diſpoſſeſſed of Gods free-beſtowed bleſſing, through their owne vnfaithfulneſſe. And therefore it is requiſite that God ſhould ſpeake to vs after another faſhion: that is to wit, that he ſhould not only write his law with his owne hand in ſtones, but alſo write it in our hearts, by correcting the hardneſſe that is in thé of nature, and alſo by making them fleſhie harts, ſo as they may bee ſoft & ſupple to receiue ỹ ingrauing which he ſhal put into them. Ye ſee then that the thing which we haue to beare in mind, if we intend to fare the better by this preſent ſtorie, is that like as Moſes acknowledged himſelfe exceedingly bound vnto his God for the fauour which he had ſhewed to his people: ſo ought we alſo to bethink vs, how abundantly God hath vttered the treaſures of his goodnes towardes vs. For not only we be accurſed by nature: but alſo we haue forſaken him after his adopting of vs, & wee haue not made account of him as of our father. And yet for all this, he hath reached vs his hand, & ſet vs in our former ſtate againe; & he hath not only taken vs into his fauour againe, & giuen vs his worde to teache vs thereby, nor only deliuered vs his law written in ỹ two ſtones: 2. Cor. 3. 3. but he hath alſo reformed & ſoftened our harts, ſo that whereas erſt there was nothing but hardneſſe in them, he hath now drawen them to obedience, to receiue quietly ỹ things that are told vs in his name, at leaſtwiſe if wee be his. For all they to whome the Goſpell is preached, are not of ỹ nomber. But let euery of vs examin himſelf, & we ſhal perceiue ỹ God in ſending his Goſpell to be preached vnto vs, is ready & forwarde to giue vs his grace, if we our ſelues bee not the let. True it is ỹ his Election doth always beare ſway: but yet do not men faile to be in the fault, if the Goſpel profit thé not, accordingly as S. Paul de- 2. Cor. 4. 3. 4 clareth, ỹ the diuel muſt needs haue blinded our eyes, if we ſee not ỹ light that ſhineth there, ſeing ỹ the image of God ſheweth it ſelfe there ſo euidently. Wherfore let vs marke, ỹ if Moſes vpbraided the Iewes, (& that iuſtly) with the vnthankfulnes whereof they were giltie: much more ought we now to caſt down our eyes, & to ſtand in awe, & to be vtterly abaſhed before God. And in ỹ ſame reſpect, we haue more cauſe to magnifie the grace of our God, than had the auncient fathers, which were in the time that the law was written but only in two tables of ſtone.

Furthermore we haue to marke the figure ỹ is comprehended vnder theſe words, Make thee two tables ſmooth & bring them to mee. For therby god ſheweth the order & right maner of proceeding to be wel taught at his hand: namely ỹ wee muſt bring ỹ tables poliſhed or made ſmooth for him to write his law in, & ỹ afterward he muſt write in them. True it is, that we cannot do this of our own ſelfmouing, but he muſt direct vs thereto by his holy ſpirite. Notwithſtanding, it is to bee noted, that God beſtoweth two diſtinct graces vpon vs. The one is in preuenting vs, to the intent wee ſhoulde be readie and forwarde to yeelde him obedience: and the other is in inlightening vs, and in giuing vs a preſent affection to ſerue him as ſoone as wee knowe his will. This woulde be darke, if it were not opened more at large: but I hope that anon it ſhalbe verie eaſie to vs.

Before men are brought to the faith, and before they be acquainted with the doctrine of the Goſpel to be ridde of all ignorance: they may haue ſome good preparatiue aforehande to ſay, Alas I woulde faine giue eare to my God, let him but onely ſhewe mee his good pleaſure, and lo I am readie to embrace it, ſo as hee ſhal leade mee whither he will. Let him but laye the bridle on my necke, or raine mee one way or other, & I will followe him and ſubmit my ſelfe to him with all obedience. Such diſpoſition is to bee ſeene in ſilie ignorant ſoules, before God haue throughly inſtructed them. They haue not faith, but an entrance vnto faith, in aſmuch as they are prepared to ſubmit themſelues to whatſoeuer God ſhall commaund them. Nowe commeth this inmouing, of men, or of their own nature? No, it is of Gods working in their heartes, who maketh ỹ preparation there by the grace of his holy ſpirit. For by nature we can no skill but to go clean contrarie to Gods wil. And although men haue ſome deuotion, & make pretéce there of: yet is all but hypocriſie, there is no truth nor ſoundnes in them. Therfore whéſoeuer we feele any good forwardnes to ſerue God: it is of his own working in vs, & it is he that giueth vs that grace. In deede it is ſaid here, Bring mee the two tables, & let them bee hewen ſmooth with thy hande. This charge was giuen to Moſes. And what then? Can he do it of himſelfe? No, but becauſe God hath taught him aforehande, and prepared him to the doing thereof. Ye ſee then that that is one grace which God beſtoweth: and yet neuertheleſſe, God ſheweth vs that it is our duetie to do it, though wee cannot do it of our owne abilitie, that is to ſaye, though wee bee not giuen to do it of our owne ſelfemouing, or power. For looke what is our duetie to doe, it is good right that God ſhoulde require it. Therefore let vs learne, that to profite well in Gods doctrine, wee muſt bring ſmoothe or plaine tables. For why? Wee ſee that moſte men haue rough and rugged myndes, ſo as nothing can bee written vppon them.

True it is, that they will reſort to Sermons. But what for that? They be forepoſſeſſed with their owne lewde luſtes: they bee ſo bemyred in them, as is horrible to ſee: and againe, they bee full of thornes, there is nothing but vice and vncleanneſſe in them: all is ſo out of order, that a man cannot tell howe to write one letter in them. Yee ſhall ſee otherſome which haue had their eares ſufficiently beaten, and the Goſpel hath beene preached to them all their life long: and yet are they nothing the better for it, becauſe they bring not ſmooth tables with them, that is to ſay, they bee not diſpoſed to receiue Gods worde. Thus yee ſee what wee haue to gather, vpon Gods commaunding of Moſes to make the two tables ſmooth.

can: but we muſt haue our harts ſmoothed, that is to ſay, quite & cleane rid from al impediments that may hinder our obedience towardes God. And for as much as we haue not that of nature: we muſt pray God to be ſo gracious vnto vs, as to make vs able to ſmooth our hearts ſo well, as we may rid them of all vices & corruptions, and meeken the ſturdines that is in vs, when wee ſee our ſelues drag cleane backe from the wil of our God; ſo as we may haue a deſire to ouercome & ſubdue the ſame. The hammers & chiſils which we muſt vſe to pooliſh our harts withal, are theſe: namely, to miſlike of our ſinnes & to be grieued at them, & thereupon to condemne our ſelues, & to exerciſe our ſelues in ſo doing: for euery of vs muſt inforce & compel himſelfe by violence to ſtoop vnto God, & we muſt hold on in ſo doing, what hardnes & gainſtriuing ſoeuer wee meete withal, ſo as al ỹ loftineſſe of our heartes muſt be pulled down, ỹ nothing may hinder gods ingrauing of his doctrin in them afterward. And when our Lord hath once begon after ỹ maner, he will go through with it, ſo as he will teach vs his wil, & we ſhal profit in it daily more & more. And ſo we ſee ỹ the beginning of our faith, is the ſaid obedientnes wherethrough men offer and yeld vp themſelues in ſacrifice, as if they ſhould ſay, Alas Lord, it is true that I am a ſilly ignorant ſoule, yea & a verie beaſt, for I knowe no reaſon nor wiſdom, but I flee vnto thee, that thou maiſt direct & gouerne mee by thy holy ſpirit. Lo here (ſay I) the ſigne ỹ we be wel diſpoſed aforehand, & this diſpoſednes is as a white vnwritten paper. For if a man bring a black & foule ſullyed paper, or which is bedawbed & beſloubered with myre, & ſay, I would faine be taught, I pray you write me a ſample vpon this paper: it is a flat mockery: for the paper is beſrayed, & a man cannot write any thing vpon it ỹ can be diſcerned. But if a mã bring cleane paper, & ſay, I ſubmit my ſelfe to you, I beſeech you ſhew me what I haue to do: ỹ is a good forwardneſſe. Or rather to come nerer the ſimilitude which we haue nowe preſently in hande, (that is to wit, the couenant which God hath made with vs) if a man intending to bargaine with another man, ſhould ſay, Go to, to the intent ye may vnderſtand ỹ I am willing to yeld to all reaſon; lo, here is a blanke, write what you will & I agree to it. If a man ſay ſo & ſpeake truly, he ſheweth ỹ his intent is to deale dutifully w̃ the partie with whome he hath to do. But if another bring a peece of paper imbrewed with mire & ſay, write what you liſt, I admit it for good: doth he not giue to vnderſtande that he intendeth to breake the whole bargaine, & ỹ he is vnworthie to once open his lippes, as one that purpoſeth not to ſtand to any reaſon at all? So then let vs bring white paper to God, that is to ſay, obedientnes to ſubmit our ſelues vnto him. Although we vnderſtand not his will: yet is that ỹ entrance of our faith. For then doth God traine vs forward to write his worde in our hearts, ſo as we be throughly inſtructed afterward. Ye ſee thẽ that God vouchſafeth a double grace vpon vs: firſt, in that he prepareth our hearts to come vnto him to receiue his doctrin: & ſecondly in that he teacheth & enlighteneth our heartes by his holy ſpirite, framing our heartes & affections aright, to the end we ſhould be faſhioned like vnto his glorie, & ỹ his ſpeaking ſhoulde not bee to our eares only, but much rather to our hearts. So haue we thereupon to conclude, (as I haue ſaide alreadie) ỹ we ſhal neuer attaine to faith, except we haue the ſaid obedientneſſe aforehand. And ỹ is the cauſe why ſo fewe beleeue nowadayes, for they be full of pride, they thruſt God away from them, ſo as he can by no meanes come at them: they take pritch againſt his worde, & reſiſt his trueth, holding ſcorne of their owne profite & welfare. Therefore we muſt vnderſtande, that to be true ſcholers vnto God, the end that wee muſt begin at, muſt be teachablenes. And when we be once in that mind, wee muſt ſuffer him to teache vs, ſo as he may ingraue his learning in our hearts. 2. Cor. 3. 18.

By the way wee haue to marke alſo, that it is not for vs to make or frame lawes to ſerue God withall, but that we muſt ſimply bring our tables & let him write in them what he thinkes good. Moſes was a great & excellent Prophet: and yet did not God giue him leaue or libertie to write any thing in his tables, or to put any thing vnto them, but reſtrained him altogither to ỹ thinges that were written there. And ỹ appeared well in this, in ỹ both the tables were written, not on the oneſide only, but on both, euen to the full, to the intent that no man liuing ſhould ad any thing to them. Seeing then ỹ God wrote his commandements in thoſe two tables himſelfe, & committed not that charge vnto Moſes: is it lawfull for any mortall creature to ad any inuention of his owne to Gods law? Ye ſee then ỹ the way for vs to put this doctrine in vre, is to beare in minde that if Moſes being ſo excellent a man, and as an Angel of God, might not write or ad any thing to Gods law: much leſſe may we. Wherefore to ſerue God aright, let vs learne ỹ we muſt not take vpon vs to inuent any thing at all, nor to preſume vpon our own deuotions, as we term them: for all ſuch geere wilbe miſliked, but that we muſt bring our tables, that is to ſay, our owne ſelues in ſacrifice, ſo as there bee not any thing written in vs, vntil God ſpeak, & that we receiue ſimply without any gainſaying, whatſoeuer proceedeth out of his mouth. Deut. 12. 32. Exod. 32. 15.

But now that we haue ſo much, let vs marke that which is added: namely howe God cõmanded Moſes & told him, How his will was that the cofer or cheſt which he had made, (that is to ſay, the Arke, cõmonly called the Arke of the couenant) ſhould be borne or caried by the children of Leui. And that is the cauſe why he told the people, that the childrẽ of Iſrael ſhould fleet from place to place, vntill they came to Beroth where Aaron died, and that then God would ſhute out the Leuites by themſelues. Surely at the firſt bluſh the ſtorie ſeemeth diſordered. for he ſaith, the children of Iſrael departed from Beroth belonging to the children of Iaacan in Moſera, that is to ſay in ỹ place of mount Hor where Aaron dyed. And it ſeemeth here ỹ Moſes ment to ſay, that Aaron dyed byandby after ỹ God had cauſed the two tables to be made new againe: But there were fourtie yeares betweene the one and the other. For Aaron dyed at ſuch time as the people had outworne their terme of fourtie yeares, during which time god had forfended them the lande of promiſe. Now in the ende of that terme, Aaron was depriued of the dignitie of the prieſthood, and Eleazer his ſon was made highprieſt in his ſtead. But here Moſes comprehendeth all that had bin done by the ſpace of fourtie yeares, from the publiſhing of the lawe, vnto the verie ſame day that he exhorted the people to put themſelues in better readineſſe to enter into their inheritance, than they had beene in at the beginning. He telleth them that although there had happened many changes in the meane time, yet had God in effect prouided, that his lawe was to bee had alwayes in eſtimation, & to be honored, and that the world might perceiue that his maieſtie was therein, & that all men ought to ſubmit thēſelues thereunto. And for that cauſe doth Moſes ſay, that hee had choſen the children of Leuye, notwithſtanding that Aaron had ſinned. For to what ende doeth Moſes ſpeake here of his brothers death? Euen to make it knowen, that God had ſhewed fauour towardes the trybe of Leuye, as well as towards all the reſt of the people. The trybe of Leuye was choſen to offer ſacrifice: it was a prerogatiue which God had giuen them. And were they worthie of it? Could they boaſt themſelues to haue beene more worthie than their brethren? It is true that they executed vēgeance vpon the ydolaters, but yet was Moſes faine to call them to him, and to command them Exod. 32. 29 to ſanctifie their handes. Yee muſt hallowe your hands to the Lord, ſayth he: & howe? In ſlaying thoſe that haue ſo grieuouſly offended, and been an occaſion of turning all thinges vpſide downe. This day therfore it behoueth you to vtter what zeale ye haue towards the maintenance of gods honour, and to ſanctifie his name without ſparing of your own brethrē, or your neereſt neighbours, foraſmuch as they haue ſo defaced Gods glorie to the vttermoſt of their power, & therefore they muſt be vtterly rooted out. The Leuites did well execute the thing that Moſes cōmaunded them: but yet did the high prieſt Aaron make the golden calfe. True it is that hee withſtoode it, or at leaſtwiſe conſented not to it: but yet did he ſwarue at length by graunting the peoples importunate requeſt, and therefore was he faine to beare the puniſhment which GOD tolde him of, ſaying, thou ſhalt not come within the land which I will giue vnto my people. Albeit that he repreſented the perſon of our Lorde Hebr. 5. 1. Ieſus Chriſt, and was a figure of him: although he was a mediatour betweene God and men, ſo as he made interceſſion for the ſinnes of the people, & offered ſacrifices for the reconciling of them to the maieſty of God, yet was he baniſhed out of that lande to his ſhame, hee dyed, hee was ſtripped out of his robes before his death, hee was as a man diſgraded, and God left him as a diſhonoured perſon, and as a man defaced with perpetuall reproche. Now if God extended ſuch puniſhment vppon the perſon of Aaron: what had they deſerued which were inferiors to him? So then, Moſes telleth them, that Gods chooſing of the trybe of Leuye to carrie the Arke, and to be occupyed about his ſeruice, was not for that they were worthie of it, but becauſe hee was Deut. 7. 7. 8. minded to ſhewe the ſame thing to the ſucceſſours of Leuye, which he had ſpoken of the reſt of the whole bodie of Abrahams offspring; namely that they had all things of his only free goodneſſe. That is the cauſe why the death of Aaron is rehearſed here.

But by the way, we ſee that Moſes ſpared not his own brother. For here he repeteth the ſentence ỹ God had giuen & alſo executed againſt him, & ỹ was not for ỹ honor of his own houſe. But what? His meaning was ỹ God ſhould be glorified, & men condemned. Yea & we ſee that his intent was not to conceale his owne fault, but to ſhew that God had puniſhed him for it, though there were great cauſe of excuſe in him, & al the blame was to haue bin layd vpon the people, becauſe his ouerſhooting of himſelfe, was but in ỹ one caſe, & that not through malice, but onely through griefe of mind. Yet notwithſtanding he accuſeth himſelfe thereof, he acknowledgeth it openly, & maketh a chronicle of it to continue of record to the worldes end. Sith wee ſee this, let vs learne, not to be aſhamed to confeſſe our ſinnes, & to ſhew that God is righteous in puniſhing of vs. Let vs not go about to burie ỹ chaſtiſements that God ſhall haue ſent vppon vs, as wee ſee a number doe, who when God ſendeth neuer ſo notable puniſhmentes, coulde finde in their heartes that they ſhoulde neuer be ſpoken of. And why? Forſooth becauſe it is not for their honour, worſhip, or honeſtie. Verily, as who ſhould ſay, yee will needes be honorable in ſpyte of God and his righteouſneſſe. Is it meeter that you ſhoulde be regarded than the glorye of his name? Nowe then, let vs vnderſtand that if wee haue committed any fault, and God haue reached out his hande to puniſhe vs: the ſame muſt be rehearſed among vs, and we muſt think vppon it, and wee muſt alwayes confeſſe that God is righteous, and that wee haue well deſerued that hee ſhould vſe correction towardes vs, ſith wee ſee that Moſes beareth not with his owne brother. That is the thing which wee haue to beare in mynd.

Howbeit on the other ſide, let vs vnderſtand, that if Aaron was faine to paſſe through Gods hande, becauſe he did but conſent vnto euill, & was puniſhed although he claue not to it: (for to ſpeake properly, his conſenting was no conſent at all: for he ſaid vnto them, what meane Exod. 32. 4. you ye wretched people? and in ſcorne of their idolatrie: Lo here thy Gods O Iſrael (quod hee) which brought thee out of the lande of Egypt: as if hee ſhoulde ſay, is a calfe become thy redeemer? Aaron then did after a ſort withſtande them, and yet notwithſtanding I call it a conſenting, inaſmuch as hee ſwarued and ſuffered himſelfe to be caryed away with their importuneneſſe:) Nowe if God (ſay I) did puniſh his high prieſt Aaron after he had aduanced him to ſo great & ſo high dignitie: what wil he do to vs?

There-

Therefore let vs learne to withold our ſelues frō euil, & by no meanes to conſent thereto: vnleſſe wee intend to wrap our ſelues in condemnation with the wicked, as wee ſee did partly befall vnto Aaron. I ſay but partly, for God vſed mercie towards him, becauſe the puniſhment was but temporall, becauſe it was vpon his body onely, and concerned onely this preſent life. And ſurely God is exceeding gracious & fauourable to vs when he puniſheth vs in our bodies, at ſuch time as we deſerue to be vtterly rooted out, and when he vouchſafeth to be contented with ſome chaſticemēt of this tranſitorie life, he ſheweth therin that he is minded to vſe great gentleneſſe towardes vs. And yet for all that though wee deſerue to periſh with the wicked, when wee reſiſt them not, ne forſake their companies and confederacies: yet it pleaſeth God to ſpare vs, and to ſhewe himſelfe merciſull towardes vs, though at the leſt, wee doe in our owne bodies ſuffer ſomewhat in reſpect of this preſent life.

Nowe remaineth the reaſon that I haue touched afore: namely, that here is expreſſe mention made of the Tribe of Leuy, which was ſorted out to carie the Arke of the Couenant. And Moſes plainly rehearſeth that point, to do vs to vnderſtande, that God authoriſed his law by that meanes, in ỹ it was his wil to haue it caryed after that faſhiō, that it might bee as a ſtandard for the people to reſort vnto. We haue ſeene in the fourth Chapter how God ſayde, thou ſhalt not make to thy ſelf any likeneſſe or reſemblance: for thou hardeſt the voice of thy God in Horeb, but thou ſaweſt not any ſhape of man, or of beaſt, or of any other creature. The only image of thy God, are ỹ things that he hath writtē w̄ his own hand, ỹ is to ſay ỹ ten cōmandements. Thoſe (ſay I) are the liuely image wherin he wilbe ſeene. And therefore I ſaid it was a ſtandard carried aloft for the people to reſort vnto, as ſoldiers reſort to a ſtandard in a field, to fight the better. So then, it behoued the people to haue their eyes vppon the Arke of the Couenant. And ſpecially foraſmuch as men are not verie forward of themſelues to obey God: it was meete that ỹ Arke of the couenant ſhould be handled with reuerence, & for ỹ ſame purpoſe had God ordeined the prieſtes & Leuites. For al of them were prieſtes: Howbeit, they ỹ caried the Arke were of inferior degree in the dignitie of prieſthod. Neuertheleſſe god had appointed the Leuites to beare ỹ Ark, to ỹ intent it might thereby the better be knowen, ỹ it was a matter of excellent prerogatiue, & that it was no dalying in the caſe: For we ſee ỹ God woulde not ſuffer the Arke to be ſo much as touched, by any other than by the Leuyts: inſomuch ỹ when Dauid remoued the arke, the partie that did but touch it of good zeale, dyed out of hande for ſo doing. When he ſawe the Arke at the point to tumble down, he did but put forth his hand eue of good wil to ſtay it vp from falling, & yet notwithſtanding he was puniſhed gricuouſly for his labor. This may ſeeme to haue bin ouerrigorous. But it ſerueth to ſhew, ỹ it is not in any wiſe lawful to breake the order that God hath ſet. The endis ỹ thing which he hath an eye at. For if we looke no further than to the thing it ſelfe; why might not the Ark haue been handled & caryed of al ỹ people? They were al ſanctified to God, they were all circumciſed, they did all carye about them the marke of the couenant. And why then ſhould ỹ one man dye out of hand for only touching the Arke vpon good will? Verily God had an eye to the ende of the lawe: which was ỹ men ſhoulde wholly obey his worde. For if his word be deſpiſed: there wilbe nothing but rebelliouſnes againſt him. In deede men will pretend a willingneſſe to honor & ſerue him, but yet is it but counterfeting for all that. Will we then doe true ſeruice vnto God, & ſuch as he accepteth? Al of vs both gret & ſmal muſt ſubmit our ſelues to his worde, & followe the ſinglenes thereof, & therewithall beare in mynd that it is ſo precious a thing, as men muſt not mingle aught of their owne with it: for that were nothing elſe but a corrupting of it. Now foraſmuch as men are not eaſie to be taught this: it was Gods will to ſhewe by a viſible ſigne, howe highly he eſteemeth his own word. That is the cauſe why he ſorted out that trybe from the reſt, to beare the Ark of the couenant. It was Gods will ỹ the Prieſtes which were ſpecially appointed to offer ſacrifice, & to make attonement betwene God & men, & to repreſent the perſon of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, Hebr. 5. 1. ſhould beare abroad his word, & that they ſhold preaſe vnto him to bee as mediators betweene him & men. Ye ſee then how it was Gods will, to teache his people humilitie by viſible ſignes and outward ceremonies, to the ende that his worde ſhould be embraced with all reuerence, & continue euermore in good ſtate. But as for vs, wee haue not nowadayes the ceremonie any more, but we haue the trueth, which ought to continue to the worlds end. Therfore whenſoeuer Gods word is preached vnto vs, let vs learne to ſtoope Col. 2. 17. to it, & to know ỹ it is a heauenly doctrine, whervnto it becommeth vs to encline, & that it is not for vs to bring our own fond imaginations in ỹ caſe, for then wo be vnto vs. Neuertheleſſe God granteth vs a ſpecial fauor, in that he inableth vs to beare abroad his word, & maketh it to dwel in vs, whereby he ſheweth that he hath performed Eſa. 66. 21. the thing which he promiſed by his Prophets, ỹ is to wit, that he hath choſen vs for his Leuytes, as ſhalbe declared more at length to morrowe.

Now let vs fall downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to make vs feele them better, yea, euen in ſuch wiſe as it may lead vs to ſuch repentance, that we may be ſorie for them all our life long, & be aſhamed that we haue bin ſo wretched ſinners: And that therwithall wee may be quickened vp to glorifie him the more for the great goodnes which he hath ſhewed vpon vs, & proceede continually more & more in obeying him, to the intent that his law may be the better ingraued in vs by his writing of it in our hartes, & we become the readier to follow the things ỹ he ſhal haue ſhewed vs, ſo as we may be forward to obey him all our life long, & our life be wholy dedicated vnto him. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, &c.

Deut. 4. 15. 16.

2. Sa. 6. 6. 7.

On Wedneſday the xi. of September. 1555.

The Lxx. Sermon which is the ſeconde vpon the tenth Chapter.

8 The ſame time the Lord &c.

9 Therefore Leuie had no portion nor inheritaunce with his brethren: but the Lord is his inheritaunce, as the Lord thy God ſayd vnto him.

10 And I taried on the mountaine as I had doone afore, fortie dayes and fortie nightes. And the Lord heard mee that time alſo, ſo as the Lord would not deſtroy thee.

11 But the Lord ſayde vnto mee, vp, get thee hence, and goe before the people, that they may goe and poſſeſſe the Land which I ſware to their fathers to giue them.

WE ſawe yeſterday, how Moſes in this text did magnifie Gods mercie, as well towardes the Leuites, as towardes the whole people. For in ſheweing that Aaron was puniſhed for his fault, it appeareth plainly that all his whole linage deſerued to haue ben diſgraded. Yet notwithſtanding, God of his goodnes vouchſafed ỹ there ſhould bee a certaine number of men appointed to his ſeruice: and them he choſe, not for any worthines that was in them, but only for his owne mercies ſake. For if wee be not worthie of ſo much, as that God ſhould crowde vs into a litle corner of his houſe: how ſhould he aduaunce vs to farre higher degree? That then is the meaning of Moſes. Neuertheleſſe wee muſt marke herewithall the three charges which he ſetteth downe here, & which he reporteth to haue been aſſigned to the Leuites. The firſt is, To beare the Arke of Gods couenant, & the veſſels of the ſanctuary: The ſeconde is, To be at hand to ſerue God: & the third is, To bleſſe in the name of God. Theſe are the three things that were incident to the prieſthod of old time. For as concerning the Sanctuarie with al the appurtenances therof, it was but a figure, which we muſt referre to the ſpiritual temple, that is to wit to Gods church, & to the ſacrifices which are offered vnto him by the faithful, when they dedicate themſelues to him both in bodie & ſoule, by yelding vp their ownſelues, ỹ he may be glorified in them. Marke that for one point. The ſecond is the ſeruice wherof he ſpeaketh: which conſiſteth likewiſe in figure: but the trueth therof is performed toward vs, when ſuch as nowadayes are called to the gouerning of Gods church, do their dutie in offering vp mens ſoules in ſacrifice vnto God, by preaching ỹ goſpell, & in maintaining the order & ſtate of the church, in ſuch wiſe as God be glorified, and the church be cleanſed from all ſtumbling blockes. The third is to bleſſe in Gods name: & that is to yeeld a teſtimonie of Gods goodnes and grace to his people.

Hebr. 8. 5.
Rom. 12. 1.
Rom. 15. 6.

Now muſt we applie theſe things to ỹ trueth of them, ỹ we may be edified by them. Let vs (ſay I) haue a regarde to apply theſe three things to their trueth & ſubſtance, which our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt hath brought vs by his comming. It is ſaid here, that the Leuites muſt beare the veſſels of God. And this belongeth, not only to the miniſters of the worde, or to ſuch as beare publike office in the church: but alſo to all the faithful in general. And that is the cauſe why it is ſaid by ỹ prophet Malachie, ỹ the Leuits were made prieſts, which thing I ſay was accompliſhed at the comming of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, at which time the church was aduanced to greater perfection than it was vnder ỹ law. Likewiſe Eſay telleth vs that all men ſhalbe Leuites vnto ỹ Lord. Al the children of Iſrael (ſaith he) ſhal execute the office of prieſthod vnto God. And in the ſame reſpect doth S. Peter ſay, ỹ we be a royal prieſthod. S. Peter ſpeaks not there of any peculiar ſort of people after ỹ maner of ỹ Pope, who hath villanouſly corrupted ỹ ſaid ſentence of his, in attributing it to his owne clergie as he termeth them, ỹ is to wit to ỹ ſtinking rable of his powlſhorn greaſlings: but he attributeth ỹ honorable title to all the faithfull, & to as many as are of the church of God. Moſes could wel ſay euen in his time, Yee be a prieſtly kingdome, ỹ is to ſay a nation holy aboue all others. But S. Peter turning the ſame words, ſaith, ỹ now we be become a royal prieſthod, inaſmuch as our Lord Ieſus Chriſt having ſhewed himſelf to the world, is ordeined prieſt after the order of Melchizedech, to communicate the ſame grace to ỹ whole church. Therfore let vs marke wel, ỹ this gift of becõming Prieſtes & Leuites, is not a priuilege or prerogatiue grãted to three or four: but inaſmuch as al ỹ things which our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt hath receiued of God his father, ar cõmon to vs all, & we be made partakers of thẽ by his meanes: we be of ỹ order & number of ỹ Leuites, that is to ſay, of them that are dedicated vnto god. Not as ỹ people [of Iſrael] were, which held themſelues aloofe in ỹ body of the temple, & worſhipped God afarre of: but we haue a mean to preaſe neere him, wee haue familiar acceſſe, we haue his own ſonne entred afore vs into the Sanctuarie which is not made with mans hand, to bring vs in thither, in whoſe name al the faithfull full haue libertie to come thither. Thus ye ſee that the thing which wee haue to marke in the firſt place, is that God ſhooled out one tribe of the children of Iſraell to ſerue him in the Sanctuarie: but nowe adayes he hath ſhedde out the ſame grace vpon all beleeuers, and there is no exception, but wee be all made holie to offer ſacrifice to God, and not onely to beare the 1.Cor.6.19. veſſelles of the temple, but alſo to be the verie veſſelles themſelues. For although our bodies bee but wretched carcaſſes: yet ſayle they not to be the temples of the holy Ghoſt, and Gods will is to be worſhipped in them. Hadde there beene ſayde no more, but that our ſoules are the temples of God: it had beene a verie excellent honour. But ſeeing it is ſayde of our earthly and corruptible bodies, we ſee what goodnes God vttereth towardes vs. And therefore let vs learne that this doctrine belonges to vs, and that this figure which was vnder the lawe concerneth vs at this day, to the end that we ſhould aduauntage our ſelues thereby. And after what manner?

The firſt is that we ſhould magnifie the goodneſſe of our God, in that hee hath ſhewed himſelfe ſo gratious vnto vs, as to choſe vs to be his ſeruauntes, not onely to beare the veſſelles of his temple, but alſo to be the verie temples théſelues and the altars whereat hee will be worſhipped, both in our bodies and our ſoules, to the intent we ſhould yeelde him, not onely the bodily ſeruice which conſiſteth in ſhadowes and figures, but alſo the true ſpirituall ſeruice by dedicating our ſelues all wholly vnto him. Yee ſee then howe the ende whereat we muſt beginne,
2.Cor.6.17 is to knowe how greatly we by bounde vnto God for vſing ſuch gratious goodnes towardes vs. Moreoueraccording (as Saint Paul ſheweth vs in the ſecond to the Corinthians,) we muſt take warning to ſeparate our ſelues from all vncleaneſſe, as the prophet cryeth out vnto vs, ſaying:
Eſa.52.11. Separate your ſelues from all vncleanneſſe, you that carrie the Lordes veſſels. And Saint Paul alleadging the ſame text of Eſay, ſayth that according to the ſame promiſe, it is good reaſon that wee ſhoulde giue our ſelues to cleanneſſe both of bodie and ſoule. For in very deede, the prophet Eſaie, in ſaying: Be ye cleane you that beare the Lordes veſſelles, hath not an eye to the time of the figures: but extendeth his doctrine to the kingdome of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Nowe then this text muſt needes be performed in vs. But there are not nowe adayes any moe materiall veſſelles as there were in the time of the Lawe: and therefore it followeth that the doctrine thereof muſt bee performed in higher matters: that is to ſay, that inaſmuch as God hath called vs to be members of his ſonne, and by that meane to come ſo neere him as he may dwell in vs & we be his temples: the ſame ſhould prouoke vs to giue our ſelues to all cleanneſſe, which thing wee can not doe but by ſeparating of our ſelues from the corruptions of the world. For wee dwell here among ſuch filthineſſe, as it is not poſſible for vs to ſcape vninfected, vnleſſe we labour to withdrawe our ſelues from it. Yea and there needes no euill to come vpon vs from elſewhere, for euerie of vs ſhall finde ynough in himſelfe. Wherefore lette vs beware that wee turne away from all wicked luſtes, and that we cut off whatſoeuer is defiled in vs, and generally all that euer is of the world, ſo as we may preaſe vnto our God, and hauing giuen ouer the world we may be ſo vnited vnto him, as he may auowe vs to be his prieſtes. For if we doe otherwiſe, we ſhalbe dubble accurſed, and we ſhall not be able to excuſe our ſelues but that God hath aduaunced vs high ynough. But what excuſe will there be for vs nowe when our Lorde hath brought vs ſo neere vnto him, and vouchſafed to make vs prieſtes to offer vppe our owne ſelues vnto him, and to make vs his temples, ſo as we ſhould haue a ſpirituall altar erected vnto him in our ſelues? Seeing that God hath brought vs to that point, is it not a horrible treacherie (ſay I) if wee fall to vnhallowe his temple? Nowe then, lette vs vnderſtande, that whenſoeuer this worlde turneth vs away vnto euill, wee offer God greate wrong, in making his temple a ſwynes ſtie, and in vnhallowing the thing that he had hallowed, by cauſing all the corruptions of Sathan and of this worlde to come into his temple. Surely it ought to holde vs in awe and to make vs walke in all ſoundeneſſe, ſo as we giue not ouer our bodies and ſoules to anie diſhoneſtie, ſeeing that God hath ſanctified them to himſelfe. This is the thing which we haue to beare away vpon the firſt part of this text.

Neuertheleſſe lette vs marke that although God haue extended the ſayde grace of making vs all Leuites or Prieſtes, to all the members of his Church: yet hath hee not vtterly aboliſhed the order of his Church, but his will is to haue ſome certaine men appointed to the preaching of his worde. And that is the thing which is ment here in the ſeconde place, where he ſaith, that they ſhall ſtande before the Lorde to ſerue him, and finally that they ſhall bleſſe in the Lordes name. The ſame muſt bee put in vre at this day by the miniſters of the worde. For although God haue called vs all in common, to bee ſerued and honoured at our handes: yet doeth he require a ſpeciall ſeruice at their handes whom he ſetteth ouer his Church to be the ſhepheardes thereof, that is to witte, that they ſhould ſhewe the way, and alwayes be in a readineſſe to ſerue God. And this ſeruice importeth that the Leuites ſhoulde maintaine the religion pure and vncorrupted among the people, and ſhewe the Iewes that they ought not to deale with the ſuperſtitions of the heathé, and what God it was which had deliuered them, and to be ſhort, that they ſhoulde alwayes holde the people in obedience to the true faith. And for the ſame cauſe GOD allotted them not any one certaine countrie or ſhire to dwell in, but diſperſed thé throughout the whole lande. We knowe there was not anie one tribe which had not Leuites among them. And why was that? For God could well ynough haue gathered thé together, ſo as they might haue bin all together in Ieruſalem where the temple was, and in the places neere aboutes, and haue had some portion assigned them as well as the rest of the tribes had. But hee did not so: but his will was that in euerie countrie, citie, shire, and region, there should alwaies be some Leuites, that the people might euerie where bee taught, and the seede of faith be euerie where spred abroad. For had there beene anie certain countrie assigned to the Leuites: it had beene ynough to haue abolished the remembrance of God, and to haue layde all teaching vnder foote. But forasmuch as God had appointed ỹ tribe of Leuie to preach his worde, and to beare abroade the message of saluation: he gaue them no certaine portion to dwell in, but his will was to haue them dispersed abroade euerywhere. And for proose thereof, Mal.2.4.5. we knowe howe the prophete sayth that GOD made his couenant with the tribe of Leuie. And what manner of one was it? Euen the couenant of peace, insomuch as he sayde that the priestes are Gods Angels & messengers: men shall seeke the vnderstanding of the lawe at their mouth, & they shal teach them knowledge. We see then ỹ the seruice that is spoken of heere, comprehendeth instruction: insomuch that they whome God had so chosen, had charge to preache the Lawe, and to expound it to the people, that religion might continue vnappaired. And the same is to be obserued nowe adayes among vs. For although all of vs from the most to the least bee priestes: yet notwithstanding it is the duetie of the ministers of the worde, to teach and to shew men the way to GOD, and to bring backe the wretched soules that were in the way to destruction. And that is the cause why Saint Paul sayeth that he is a priest, not after the auncient maner that had beene vnder the Lawe, but to slea men with the sworde of the Gospell, as sacrifices ought to be slayne: after the which maner Saint Rom.15.16. Paul sayeth also, that he had the spirituall sword wherewith to offer vp mens soules vnto GOD. Thus ye see what we haue to remember. And therefore let such as are called to the charge of the preaching of Gods worde, vnderstande that they must streine themselues to the vttermoste, that God may be serued and honoured. And the manner is shewed vs in the text which I al. leadged out of the fifteenth to the Romanes: namely that wee must indeuour to sanctifie all that euer is corrupted in this worlde, and that men must become teachable and meeke, that God may renewe them & accept them for his children. And if we doe so, then is Gods seruice accomplished in vs, after the same manner as it was commaunded to the Leuites in olde time.

Nowe let vs come to the thirde point that is set downe here. It is sayde, That the Leuites must bleſſe the people in the name of God. True it is that in the Hebrewe tongue, the worde Bleſſe betokeneth to prayse and magnifie God. Howebeit forasmuch as the matter here, concerneth those whom God did specially ordaine to bleſſe in his name: we must fetch the meaning of this text, out of the sixth Chapter of the booke of Numbers, notwithstanding that this maner of speech Numb.6.24 be verie rife in Moses. But in that place there is more expressed: and for that cause haue I coted the text. It is sayde there, that the priestes of the house of Leuie shall bleſſe in the name of God and say: The Lorde bleſſe you and keepe you: the Lorde make his countenaunce to shine vpon you, and graunt you his mercie. The Lord turne his fauourable face towardes you, & bleſſe you. Nowe hereby wee perceiue, that it behoued the Leuites not onely to prayse GOD, as their duetie was to doe: but also to bleſſe the people in his name: For they were two diuerse thinges. So that To bleſſe the name of God, is as it were a doing of homage vnto him for all the benefites which hee bestoweth vpon vs, by protesting our selues to holde all thinges of his onely meere goodnesse, and that hee is the author of them, so as without him wee be miserable, and haue not one drop of goodnesse in vs, further-forth than he alone maketh vs partakers of it. And so ye see that to bleſſe God and to magnifie his name, is to acknowledge him to be the fountaine of all goodnesse, and that all that euer wee haue commeth of him, and of his onely meere free goodnesse. Nowe this belonged to the Leuites, as wee see it was their office to sing, and 1.Chro.25.1 although that all the people were present there & the prayse of God ought to sounde in al their mouthes: yet notwithstanding the Leuites were to beginne the quire, and to leade the melodie. Neuertheleſſe, they did also bleſſe in the name of God. And how was that? They witnessed Gods grace vnto the people: and the same thing taketh place still at this day, in such as are ordeyned ministers of the worde. For to what ende serueth our dayly preaching of the Gospell, but to bleſſe the thinges in Gods name, which were accursed before? For by nature we are all of vs Ephes.2.3. accursed and reprobate. And therefore it standeth vs in hande to be deliuered out of the wretchednesse wherein we be: which to doe, there is none other meane but onely that God shewe himselfe louing and fauorable towardes vs, and that is the bleſſing which is spoken of here. For when the scripture sayth that God bleſſeth men, it is asmuch to say, as that hee sheweth them by effect that he loueth them, and maketh them to fecle the fruite & operation of his grace and fatherly adoption. Now therefore when we come to heare the Gospel, let vs consider to what ende it is: that is to wit, to certifie vs that God looketh vpon vs with pittie, euen vpon vs wretched creatures, and that hee setteth vs free from the cursednesse that is in vs, insomuch that although we deserue to be cast off at his hand, yet neuertheleſſe hee sheweth himselfe gratious vnto vs, and that whereas he might with good right bee our enemie, he sheweth himselfe as a father towards vs. Let vs (say I) be well aduised that we make our profit of this doctrine, when it is preached vnto vs. For whereas we be assured by the Col.1.20. scriptures, that God sheweth himselfe fauorable to vs, in laying aside all enmitie that was betwixt him and vs by reason of our sinnes: if the same were well printed in our heartes, we would haue an other manner of desire than wee haue, to set forth his prayse. What a treasure is it, that our out Lord ſheweth himſelfe ſo to vs, as though we ſawe him in his owne perſon? & that he openeth the heauens to aſſure vs that he loueth vs, euen vs which make warre againſt him, inſomuch that wheras he ſhould vtterly miſlike of vs, he vouchſafeth neuertheleſſe to take vs into his fauor, & maketh vs to feele it in very dede. But what? We welter in our own dung euen till we do as it were ſtinke in it, without any care or regard at all. And that is the cauſe of ſuch contẽpt of the goſpel, & of ſuch vnthankefulnes as is ſeene almoſt euery where. Yet notwithſtanding, it behoueth ỹ faithfull to conſider of how great value it is, ỹ God receiueth them to mercy, & ſheweth himſelfe to be a father to them, & that ſuch as are appointed to preach his word, are as witneſſes to certifie vs ỹ God beareth vs ſuch fatherly loue. Trueth it is ỹ this was accõpliſhed by our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, for he was the only prieſt: and ỹ that which wee do, is not to take his office vpon vs, but onely to approue & ratifie the thing ỹ he did. And therefore let vs marke well, that it belongeth onely to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt to aſſure vs of the loue of God his father: but yet doth he alſo witnes it vnto vs, by ỹ mouthes of ſuch as preach the Goſpel in his name. It hath bin told vs herewithall, that the things which were figured vnder ỹ Law, haue bin performed in his perſon. For the high prieſts (when they bleſſed the people) had a ſolemn ceremony of lifting vp of their handes, as though they made an offering vp of all the people vnto God. Likewiſe whẽ Ieſus Chriſt wẽt vp into heauen, he vſed ỹ ſame faſhiõ, by lifting vp his hands to bleſſe his diſciples, in whoſe perſons hee pronounced a general bleſſing vpon ỹ whole body of his Church. We ſee then ỹ the figures of ỹ Lawe belõg to vs at this day, howbeit, not as touching the outward vſe of them, but as in reſpect of the ſubſtance & truth of thẽ. Wherby we be warned to get vs to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, who bringeth vs ỹ full accompliſhment of all thinges. And we muſt vnderſtand, ỹ although he be not now conuerſant in ỹ world to bleſſe vs: yet will he haue vs to bee made partakers of the ſame bleſſing by meanes of ỹ goſpel, when it is preached among vs. This is the effect of the thinges which we haue to gather vpon that place.

2. Cor. 5. 20.

Hebr. 5. 6.

Col. 2. 17.

Luke. 24. 50. 51.

Now Moſes addeth, That God hath giuen the Leuites no portion among their brethren, but that he himſelfe would be their portion and heritage. Yea, but yet for all that, he appointed them ỹ tenthes & firſtfruits, as is ſhewed in the fourth booke of Moſes. Now then, Gods aſſigning of a portion vnto thẽ was in ſuch ſort as they poſſeſſed not any Lande or inheritance, more thã their townes & ſuburbs for their cattell. But yet tooke they the tenthes, firſtfruits, & all other ſuch things of all ỹ people. Herein God had a cõſideration, ỹ ſuch as he mẽt to dedicate to ỹ ſeruing of himſelfe, ſhould be wdrawen frõ all worldly affaires, ỹ they might intend to ỹ ſeruing of God. Gods intent then was, ỹ the Leuits & their children ſhold not giue thẽſelues to husbãdry & ſuch other things. And why For they had ynough to do to diſcharg thẽſelues of their dutie otherwiſe: ỹ is to wit, in calling vpõ the people to folow Gods cõmandementes, & to keepe his couenant, ſo as religion might continue vnapaired, & faith might haue his full force, & ſo conſequently ỹ God might be honored. Alſo they had the Sacrifices, which ſerued them in ſteed of Sacraments, & at ỹ time they were many in nũber, becauſe the people could not otherwiſe be held in order: they would eaſily haue bin marde, if they had not bin reſtreined w many bridles. That therfore was ynough to keep ỹ Leuits occupied. And for the ſame cauſe God gaue thẽ a portion beſide the tithes that they might haue wherwith to finde & mainteine thẽſelues, while they were a doing of their duties.

Num. 18. 21.

But th is hath bin corrupted & falſified by the papiſtes. For they haue borne men in hand, that tithes belong to thẽ by Gods Law. And why? becauſe (as they ſay) they belonged to ỹ Leuits. But they conſider not, ỹ the Leuites were inheriters of the land of Chanaan, as well as thoſe ỹ were of the tribes of Iuda, Beniamin, Ephraim, Manaſſes and all ỹ reſidue. In reſpect whereof it was meete they ſhold haue had their portiõ with their brethren. & they ought not to haue bin excluded or baniſhed frõ it: for ỹ inheritance of the land was cõmon to them all: therfore was it meete ỹ they ſhould haue had their part of it. Yea, but God recompenſed them after an other faſhion. It were meete then ỹ the Pope & al his rable, ſhold ſhew how ỹ inheritances of all landes belong to thẽ, & then might they therepon demand their tithes. Thus ye ſee how this text hath bin miſwreſted. But yet for all this, let vs beare in minde howe S. Paul ſaith, ỹ euen at this day it is Gods will ỹ they which preach ỹ goſpel ſhould be nouriſhed and mainteined, as well as the Prieſtes had their liuinges appointed thẽ in old time. S. Paul demãdeth in way of cõpariſon, whether ỹ ſpiritual ſeruice ỹ is yelded to God nowadaies, ought not at the leaſt to be aſmuch eſteemed, as the ſeruice ỹ was vnder the figures of ỹ law? Now it was Gods will, ỹ ſuch as ſerued at the altar, ſhould be mainteined by the altar, therefore it is good reaſon, ỹ ſuch as at this day doe ſerue Gods Church in bringing thẽ his word, ſhould alſo be nouriſhed and mainteined. Thus ye ſee ỹ the way to vnder ſtãd this text a right, is to take S. Paul for our expounder thereof. But to conclude peremptorily ỹ tithes belong to the preachers of ỹ goſpel, is to groſſe an abuſe & fondnes. Neuertheles we muſt mark alſo, ỹ it is not our Lords meaning, ỹ ydols or idle bellies, & much leſſe ỹ ſuch as peruert al order & turne vs away from ỹ ſeruing & obeying of God, ſhould be nouriſhed in his Church. Now then if the Shepherdes will needes claime to be found at ỹ common charges of the Church: they muſt looke that they occupie themſelues in the ſeruice of God. As how? It is no title of idlenes, it is no fantaſticall dignitie, to be called the Shepherde of a Church: but it is a kinde of bondage, howbeit ỹ it be honorable. And therfore ỹ party ỹ is appointed to be a ſhepherd or miniſter muſt looke ỹ he obey God and ſerue his people. For we can not ſerue him ỹ hath put vs in office, but by ſeruing of his Church. Yee ſee then how the Pope & al his hangers on, are diſappointed of the things which they pretend to pertain to them of right. And if they deuour ỹ goods ỹ were apoĩted to ſuch as ſerue Gods Church: they muſt be fain

to yeelde an account of them in the ende. For the world ſees they be but idle bellies and idols, and not onely that, but alſo deadly enemies to Gods honor, laboring to ouerthrow it to the vttermoſt of their power. Now then, all this geere muſt be cut off: for ỹ nouriſhing & mainteining of thẽ, is all one as if men were minded to marre all the good ſeede that is in Gods Church. True it is that where they vſurpe ſuch tyrannie, men may well hope that they ſhall yeeld a reckening for it before God, and ſuch as are held down in ỹ bondage may well ſigh & grone: And although they knowe it to be an intollerable trecherie and extortion, ỹ ſuch exactions ſhould be layde vpon them: yet neuertheleſſe they muſt bee faine to beare with thẽ. But whenſoeuer ỹ Church ſhall happen to bee well reformed and well ordered, doutleſſe thoſe Cormorantes ſhall no longer deuour the ſubſtance of Gods people after that faſhion, but the things ỹ haue bin miſuſed, ſhalbe brought home to their good & holy vſe again, ſo as they ſhall ſerue to the nouriſhing & mainteining of ſuch as haue ỹ charge of the preaching of Gods word, & alſo to the releiuing and mainteining of the poore, after ỹ maner of the prieſtes in the old law, who (as we know) were bound ther vnto, inſomuch that their hauing of ſuch portiõ as I haue told you of before, was for ỹ releeuing of the poore, & of ſuch as were in penury. And ſo ỹ ſee how we may profit ourſelues by this text.

But by the way, let vs come backe againe to ỹ things ỹ I haue alledged as wel out of ỹ prophet Eſay, as out of Zachary, ỹ is to wit, ỹ we in theſe daies are ſucceeded in the roome of the Leuites. And ſith it is ſo, let vs marke ỹ although wee poſſeſſe inheritances of lands, medowes, and vineyardes in this world, yet we muſt make light account of thẽ, without being tied to them, & muſt put the thing in vre which Saint Paul ſpeaketh of in the ſeuenth Chapter of the firſt epiſtle to the Corinthians, ỹ is to wit, that he which is rich be as if he poſſeſſed nothing. And why? For if wee haue not God for our heritage & portion, wo be to vs. And how may ỹ be, but onely by being diſcharged of all earthly affections and cares? Although God giue a man riches, yet muſt he be as a ſheepe, meeke & lowely to offer himſelfe vnto God, ſo as nothing may let or hinder him from following his vocation, or from going on ſtill towardes the heauenly life whereunto he is called. Ye ſee then ỹ the thing which we haue to conſider generally in our knowing ỹ God will haue ỹ miniſters of his word and the ſhepherdes of his Church to be nouriſhed and mainteined: is ỹ we muſt likewiſe know, ỹ all of vs are a royall prieſthood, in reſpect whereof he wil not haue vs to be ſo intangled with ỹ goods of this world, that wee ſhould not look vp to him, but ỹ we ſhould run apace through the world, aſſuring our ſelues ỹ wee cannot be children of the kingdome of heauen, vnleſſe we be ſtrangers here beneath.

1.Cor.7.30

2.Cor.5.6.& Hebr.11.16.

Now after ỹ Moſes hath told the ſayd things, he addeth yet one word more, which is Enẽ vnto this dꝫ. Wherby he meaneth ỹ Gods will was to haue thoſe things obſerued. True it is that theſe things had not at ỹ time indured aboue fourtie yeares: but yet doth Moſes put ỹ people in mind of thẽ, telling them ỹ that order muſt not be broken, but continued ſtill euen till the cõming of ỹ redeemer. In deede the prieſtes thẽſelues were greatly out of order & had marred all, ſo as they had well deſerued ỹ God ſhould vndoe his couenant with thẽ, & bereaue them of ỹ prerogatiue that he had giuen vnto their father Leuie, according to this text of the prophet Malachie, which ſaith ỹ God made his couenant with Leuie, but yet foraſmuch as the Leuits had ſhrunk away, & not regarded the promiſe ỹ they had made vnto God, they deſerued to be cut off, and God would curſe all their bleſſings, as if he ſhould ſay, whẽ ye thinke ye haue made a great hand, thẽ will God but blow vpon you, & by & by it wil appeare ỹ all was but ſhame. Yet notwithſtanding ỹ prieſthod was to cõtinue ſtill, euen to the comming of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, & ſo it did. Likwiſe let vs mark well nowadaies, ỹ when things be out of frame in the Church, ſo as all goes to hauocke, ỹ miſchief is in deed to be corrected, but yet muſt not gods ordinãce be therfore diſanulled, ſo as we ſhould let it alone, & not put it in execution, vpõ miſliking of the vices & offences that haſſe ſet all in a broile: but we muſt alwaies reſort backe to Gods pure rule. We ſee there haue bin no ſuch deuils incarnate, as thoſe ỹ haue boſted thẽſelues to be Prelats, Biſhops, & ſhepherdes. Now if vpon miſliking of ſuch corruptions, a mã would aboliſh all order in ỹ Church, ſo as there ſhould be no miniſters, nor any mo folke appointed to teach ỹ people: what elſe were it thã a horrible cõfuſion, and a ſetting open of hell, ỹ all things in the worlde might goe to hauocke? But let vs keepe ſtill this principle, ỹ mens vices muſt bee corrected, and gods cõmandemẽt therwithal obſerued. Thus ye ſee what Moſes ment, in ſaying ỹ Gods chooſing of ỹ Leuits was not for a day or twain, but to cõtinue ſtill, that by that meane the Church might be mainteined.

Mal.2.4.5.

On the otherſide, we know ỹ the death of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt ſhoulde not come vnto vs in theſe daies, without ỹ preaching of the Goſpell. Therfore if we intend to feele ỹ redemption and ſoul health ỹ hath bin purchaſed for vs, the ſame order muſt be mainteined ſtill. And howe great ſtore of vices ſoeuer ther be, let Gods Church be clenſed of thẽ, let all ſtũblingblocks be remoued out of it, & let not men for all that, ceaſe to haue preachers of Gods worde, & miniſters of his ſacraments ſtil: for otherwiſe it were the next way to cut ỹ Churches throte, & to bring all to vtter deſolation. For we know how S. Paul ſayth ỹ Ieſus Chriſt was giuen to be our peace, and ỹ at his comming he preached it to them ỹ were neere hande, and to them that were farre off. Saint Paul ſheweth there, how our Lord Ieſus maketh the vertue of his death & paſſiõ auailable: namely by cõmanding the Goſpel to be preached vnto vs, wherby we be don to vnderſtand, ỹ God hauing once offered himſelfe vnto vs in the perſon of his ſon, will continually ſtill hold on to take and accept vs for his children, and confirme the adoption which he hath made of vs, euen vntil we come to the preſent inioying of the heritage tage which he hath promiſed vs.

Moſes hauing ſpoken ſo, addeth for a finall concluſion, that God had heard him, and ſayde vnto him, Get thy way and leade this people into the Lande that I promiſed to their fathers, yea euen with an othe: let them goe into it and take poſſeſſion of it. Heare againe Moſes ſheweth the people that when they be come into the Lande of promiſe, they muſt vnderſtande ỹ that befalleth not to thē for their owne deſeruings, but through Gods great mercy, yea and ſuch mercy as ought to rauiſhe their wittes to wonder at it: for they had refuſed all ỹ promiſes that had beene made vnto them. So then it ſtoode this people in hand, to be new reared & ſet vp againe in their former ſtate, through a ſingular grace. That is the intent of Moſes, whereof I haue treated more fully already, and therfore it is ynough as now to touch it. But yet let vs not forget to apply it to our vſe, which is, ỹ it behoueth vs to vnderſtande, ỹ although God haue called vs to the beleefe of his Goſpell, yet ſo ỹ in reſpect of this preſent life, we ceaſe not to ſhrink away frō him, wherby we were worthy to haue ỹ dore ſhut againſt vs, & to be taken as folk vtterly reiected, vnleſſe he receiue vs to mercie, and ỹ not for once only, but alſo in that he muſt double & treble his mercy vpon vs, in ſo many ſins as we cōmit againſt him. Now thē, before we can come to the inheritance of the kingdom of heauen, God muſt bee faine to ſhewe vs many a time and often, that we haue it not for any worthineſſe of our owne, nor for any purchaſe that we can make of it by our ſeruice, to ſay that wee haue earned it: but ỹ his making of vs to be his heires, is of his own meere and freebeſtowed liberalitie, for none other cauſe, but that he hath vouchſafed to chooſe vs, and to beare with vs, and to pardon the infinite offences, whereby we ceaſe not to prouoke him in ſuchwiſe, as he ſhold needes roote vs out, if hee ment to vſe rigor towards vs. Thus ye ſee how we ſhould apply this leſſon of Moſes to our behoofe.

Moreouer it ought alſo to ſerue vs for a comfort, that we be not diſcoraged when we haue offended our God, euen after we haue knowen him and are fallen in traine of walking according to his worde. For though we ſtep a ſide for a time: yet muſt not our ſo dooing make vs to deſpaire, but wee muſt come backe againe, aſſuring ourſelues that if God herd Moſes in the time of the figures of the Lawe, he wil certainely heare him that maketh interceſſion for vs nowe, that is to wit, his owne onely ſonne. For our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt was a prieſt, not only to die once to purchaſe ſaluation for vs, but alſo to inioy the ſame office euerlaſtingly, as in reſpect of appearing in the ſight of God his father, to obtaine forgiueneſſe for the ſinnes which we commit daily. Let vs marke (I ſay) that if this grace was granted to the fathers vnder the Lawe, ſurely wee ſhall not be diſappointed of it as now. Yet notwithſtanding it is not ment hereby, ỹ that ſhould make vs the readier or bolder to offend: but we muſt vnderſtande, that when we come before God, wee muſt acknowledge the faultes ỹ we haue cōmitted, we muſt be ſorie for our miſdeeds, & we muſt beſeeche God to bring vs home againe to him. For as for thoſe that hate not their ſins, they be ſo far of from obteining of fauour at Gods hand, ỹ they do the more prouoke his wrath. Contrariwiſe, when we hate our ſins, God looketh no more vpon them, but burieth them out of ſight. And this warneth vs, ỹ when God cōtinueth his mercie towardes vs, & reneweth the ſame daily, and taketh vs into fauour againe after wee haue offended him: his ſo doing is not to make vs the bolder to do euil, as who wold ſay we haue made a good market at his hand: let vs beware of ſuch blaſphemy: but it muſt be applied wholly to the faultes ỹ are paſt. Therefore when there is ſpeaking of Gods mercy & of ỹ forgiuenes of our ſins in the holy ſcripture, we muſt vnderſtand ỹ God ſendeth vs backe to the ſinnes ỹ are paſt: & therwithall putteth vs in minde to beware afterward of the danger that we were in afore: warning vs to pray him to gouerne vs with his holy ſpirit, ſo as he ſuffer vs not to be led out of the way, nor to fal to wilfull breaking of ỹ couenāt, which ought to be kept vnuiolated, as well on our part by our faithful obedience, as it is on his part, yea & that with ſuch conſtancie, ỹ although we offend him daily, yet he ceaſeth not to continue ſtedfaſt ſtill in his purpoſe. And to be ỹ better aſſured of this doctrine, let vs alwais haue recourſe to this ſaying, ỹ the Lande of Chanaan was as an earneſt penny of the euerlaſting inheritance to the fathers ỹ liued vnder the Law. And ſo the thinges that are ſet downe in the holy ſcripture, muſt be to vs as a lookingglaſſe or picture, wherein to beholde the maner of Gods guiding of vs, til we be come to the euerlaſting life. The people of Iſrael was choſē before they were born, God ſhewed his fauour to them by the law, & moreouer he chaſtiſed them, inſomuch ỹ he liſted not to put thē in poſſeſſion of their promiſed heritage out of hande, as in deede they were not wortie of it, but yet for all ỹ they came into it at the laſt. And ſo we perceiue, that our Lord hath not delayed his receiuing of vs till we come vnto him: but ỹ he hath preuented vs, with his infinite goodnes, inſomuch ỹ he hath choſen vs before ỹ making of the world, & hath offered vs his grace & confirmed it by the preaching of the Goſpel, as well as the Law was publiſhed by the hand of Moſes. For our Lord Ieſus Chriſt hath vouchſafed to be a faithful witnes of God his father, & of the loue ỹ he bringeth vs. And becauſe he is not abiding any more here below with vs in his own perſon, he hath appointed his miniſters to whō he hath giuen authoritie to preach in his name, & therewithall hath giuen commaundement to all people to receiue them, ſaying, he that heareth you, heareth me. And he hath giuen them expreſſe charge to preach the forgiuenes of ſins, as if they ſhould drawe the wretched captiue ſoules out of the bondage of hell. Ye ſee then how our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt hath vttered the grace that was vnknowen vnto vs before: but wee take ſmall profite by it. For although wee were baptiſed from our infancie, yet when wee come to yeares of diſcretion, whereby begin we to ſhew our ſelues to haue ſome witte, but by chooſing

the euill, as though wee ment to ſpite God wittingly? And againe beſide this, when our Lord teacheth vs, and reformeth vs by his worde, ſo as he ceaſeth not to ſhewe vs our faultes, to the intent to tame vs and to daunt vs, and to drawe vs to repentaunce: howe dull are we vppon the ſpurre? After whatfaſhion deale we? Are wee not ſo ſpytefull and ſtubborne, as a man can not by any meanes win vs? yes, and therefore he is faine to ſende vs many chaſtiſements & to make this preſent life to be as a wildernes to vs to wander vp and downe in, with ỹ feeling of his wrath. For all the miſeries wherewith wee be hemmed in, are remembrancers to make vs hang downe our heades, and to make vs perceiue that we be wretched ſinners, & that we be worthy, not onely of temporall correction, but alſo to be ſunke downe into hell. Yet notwithſtanding, this ſerueth not to driue vs to diſpaire, for we may well aſſure our ſelues ỹ God will receiue vs to mercy ſo we flee to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. For if Moſes were heard who was a wretched ſinner: what ſhall he be, who hath all righteouſneſſe perfectly in him? and to whō authoritie is giuen to make full attonement betweene God and man? Nowe thē ſeeing that our Lord Ieſus Chriſt is appointed to be our mediator: let vs not doubt but that although God holde vs in this worlde as poore baniſhed wretches, and withdrawe himſelfe from vs, and ſhrinke aſide to outwarde appearaunce: yet we be not bereft of the inheritaunce which he hath promiſed vs, and purchaſed for vs by our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. But howſoeuer wee fare, let vs not tempt him, nor abuſe his patiēce: but let vs wey wel this ſpeech, where Moſes ſaith that he was heard for that time alſo. For it ſerueth to holde vs in awe, that wee flatter not our ſelues when God beareth with vs, but that we ſhoulde looke about vs to amende our faults, and to bridle our wicked luſtes, that we giue not ourſelues ouer vnto euill, but hate it and abhorre it, ſo as God may goe on with the thing that hee hath begunne in vs, vntill he haue ridde vs quite and cleane of all worldly lettes, and put vs in poſſeſſion of the euerlaſting life. If wee doe ſo, wee may boldely proteſt that we haue prayſed God and that we haue giuen him ſuch glorie as hee deſerueth, and wee haue cauſe to reioyce in that we were able to ouercome all the temptations and diſtruſtes that coulde happen vnto vs: and therefore wee ſhall not neede to doubt, but that our good God is and will be merciſull to vs, though we be not worthy of it.

Rom. 5. 17. & Col. 1. 20.

Nowe let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to vouchſafe to make vs ſo to feele them, as it may ſerue to mortifie vs daily more & more, that when we perceiue his diſpleaſure, we may flee to his goodneſſe and mercy, to obtaine fauour at his hande, that beeing rid quite and cleane of our vices and ſpottes, we may bee ſo gouerned by the power of his holy ſpirite, as we may become true ſacrifices vnto him, by dedicating our ſelues wholly to his glory through newneſſe of life. And ſo let vs all ſay, Almightie God heauenly father, &c.

On Thurſday the xij of September. 1555.

The Lxxj. Sermon, which is the third vpon the tenth Chapter.

12 And nowe O Iſraell, what doth the Lord thy GOD require of thee, but that thou ſhouldeſt feare the Lord thy GOD, and walke in all his wayes, and that thou ſhouldeſt loue him, and ſerue the Lord thy God with all thy heart and all thy ſoule:

13 And that thou ſhouldeſt keepe the commaundementes of the Lorde, and his ordinaunces, which I commaunde thee this day, to the ende it may goe well with thee?

14 Beholde, the heauens, and the heauens of heauens are the Lord thy Gods, and likewiſe the earth and all that is therein.

HEre Moſes proceedeth with the matter that we haue hard theſe dayes paſt, that is to witte, that God had vſed marueilous fauor towards his people, in forgiuing them ſo many and ſo greeuous offences. It was verie much that they were receiued to mercy, ſo as they were not diſpoſſeſſed of ỹ heritage that God had promiſed them. Now Moſes addeth here an other reſpect, which ſerueth to make Gods great and infinite goodnes yet better knowen, & to giue it the greater beauty: which is, that he not onely forgaue the people the faults that they had done, but alſo receiued them againe with ſo gentle and friendly cōditions, as might ſet al mē in a wonder to thinke vpon it. If a Citie or a countrie haue rebelled againſt their prince, ſo as they haue broken their allegeance, although he liſt not to vſe extreeme rigor by putting all to fire and ſworde, but be cōtented to graunt them their liues: yet will he bereaue them of all their priuileges, he wil lay fines and exactions vpon them, & he will perchance depriue them of their ancient liberties, ſo as the wretched ſoules ſhall grone vnder the burden, & haue cauſe to remember their offence a hundred yeares yeres after. But Moſes ſheweth here, that God dealt not ſo with the Iewes. For when he had once pardoned their offence, he delt with them as if they had neuer done amiſſe, & their ſtate was as pleaſant & amiable, as if they had obeied him in all points as became them. And ſo ye ſee the intent of Moſes in this place.

He had reported heretofore, how he had bin heard: & nowe he addeth here, What is it that the Lord requireth of thee? He chargeth thee not with any amerciaments, he layeth no puniſhment vpon thee, he layeth no burden vpō thee to beare thee down ẅ: his only deſire is, ỹ thou ſhouldeſt loue him, that thou ſhouldeſt honor him, ỹ thou ſhouldeſt keepe his commandements. And is this any profit to himſelfe? No. Euery whit of it redoundeth to thine own benefite. Was it not ynough to make this peoples heart to melt, though they had bin the wickeddeſt in ỹ world, when they might ſay, wheras we had forſaken ỹ Lord, & broken the couenant that he had made with vs, & choſē an ydol in ſtead of him; he hath not only forgiuen ỹ ſo hainous cryme, & bin cōtented to take vs ſtil for his children, & to leaue vs the inheritance ỹ he had promiſed vs: but alſo he gouerneth vs after ſuch a faſhion, as it might ſeeme we had deſerued al ỹ benefites in ỹ world. Could he deale more kindly with vs, if wee had honored him & giuen our ſelues wholy to him? Such conſideratiō then ought wel to haue meekened the harts of that people; & although they were hard & ſtubborne, yet ought they to haue bowed, ſeeing they knewe that God ſought nothing but their benefite & welfare. Thus we ſee now the intent of Moſes, & to what circumſtances his ſayings are to be referred. Which is, that the people ſhould knowe that God had not only pardoned their fault aforepaſt, but alſo was minded to forget it vtterly for euer after: & that in the mean while they ſhould think thus deutifully with thēſelues, our God behaueth himſelfe towards vs, as if we had neuer offended him, our ſtate is not a whit appaired, he vſeth nothing but gentlenes towardes vs. Marke that for one point.

But now haue wea general ſentence to gather vpon the thing ỹ Moſes tolde vnto ỹ people. For the doctrine ỹ is contained in ỹ Lawe, belongeth as well to vs, as to thē. Now then o Iſraell, what requireth thy God of thee? After ỹ ſame maner doth God ſpeake vnto vs at this day: he ſheweth vs his will as a rule to direct our liues by. And what meaneth he in ſo doing? Let vs marke what he cōmandeth, & ſee what profit cā redound vnto himſelfe by it. Certaine it is ỹ God requireth no more at our handes, but that wee ſhould loue him; & is not that a condition which we ſhoulde rather choſe, than all ỹ kingdoms of the worlde? Yes; for if our God ſhould make vs princes; ſurely the greateſt honour ỹ hee ſhould do vs therin, were but that he ſhould make vs his ſeruants. We ſee that ſuch as liue at eaſe, yea euen men of worſhippe & of good reuenue, had leuer to trot to the Court, & to be in ſeruice with the prince, and to take much toyle, yea and to ſpende their goods to get eſtimation; than to play ỹ ſnudges at home in their own houſes, & to liue at reſt vpon their owne reuenewes. Behold our God entertaineth vs & keepeth vs in his houſe, & ỹ not in degree of ſlauerie, but as his children; inſomuch ỹ he calleth vs his inheritance. In deede, were there no further than this, that hee acceppteth ỹ ſeruice of vs, of vs I ſay which are altogether vnprofitable, & haue nothing but al maner of corruption in vs: wheras notwithſtanding hee vouchſafeth to imploy vs to good purpoſe, & to make vs veſſels of honor, ſoas we ſhine like perles in his church, whenas of our ſelues we be but dūg & myre: ſeeing our God dealeth ſo gently ẅ vs, what an vnthankfulnes is it, ỹ wee come not to yeeld our ſelues to him with al obedience? And I pray you what profit ſhal he reape by vs, when we ſhal haue ſerued him neuer ſo wel: Shal he be ỹ better at eaſe? Hath he need of our help in any thing? No, but al redoundeth to our welfare, & he intendeth nothing but to our profit. Wo worth vs therefore, yea & dubble woẏworth vs, if ſuch goodnes ouercome vs not, & ỹ our harts be not inflamed ẅ a right affection of giuing our ſelues wholy to our God, to be gouerned by him, ſo as we ſuffer him to ouerrule vs, & ỹ we be preſt and readie to yeeld to his hand, & to turn euery way as he wil haue vs. That is ỹ thing which we haue to mark vpō this text. So then, whenſoeuer the law ſeemeth ouer rough & ſharpe vnto vs, & our wicked luſts tickle vs to ſpurne againſt God, ſo as it is hard for vs to do as he cōmandeth vs: let vs bethink our ſelues thus: Thou wretched wight, is ỹ law of thy god burdenſom & grieuous to thee? what demandeth he of thee? wherat ſhoteth he? His demand is ỹ thou ſhouldeſt loue him, honor him, & ſerue him: & wilt thou in this caſe becom an vnnatural monſter? Shal ỹ life which thy god hath giuen thee, ſerue to make thee kick againſt him? wilt thou grieue thy maker who hath created thee & ſhaped thee, & doeth alſo maintaine thee? Were it not better ỹ heauen & earth were mingled togither, & ỹ al things were cōfounded; than ỹ it might be ſaid that thou makeſt no reckening of thy god? nay rather, ỹ thou ſpiteſt him of ſet purpoſe, inſomuch ỹ there is neither lawe nor ſcripture ỹ can bring thee to ſuch obediēce, as to make thee yeeld glory to thy God? Is it not reaſon ỹ we ſhould ſerue God, when he vttereth ſuch goodnes towards vs, as to tel vs ỹ he wilbe our father, ſpecially by planting ỹ beleeſe of his Goſpell in vs? Now then, as the earth when it is luſtie & in good plight doth alwayes bring forth ſome thing or other, to ſhewe that it hath heart in it, ſo, ſeeing ỹ God hath giuen vs vnderſtanding & reaſon aboue the brute beaſts, it becommeth vs to conſider ỹ his doing thereof is to the ende that we ſhould knowe him that made vs, of purpoſe that we ſhould ſerue & honour him, and ſtoop to him with al humility, aſſuring our ſelues that he ought to haue ſoueraigne dominiō ouer all creatures. Therfore let vs marke wel, ỹ when ſoeuer we be tempted to ſtriue againſt God, and his lawe ſeemeth ouer heauie to vs, and our affections fight againſt it, or go the cleane contrary way from it; then to ouermaiſter ſuch frowardneſſe of our nature, we muſt bethinke vs as it is told vs here, What is it that thy God requireth of thee? And then is it certain that we shalbe too too much ashamed of our selues. For what shal we answere before the Angels of heauen, when this saying shalbe laide afore vs? For it shalbee well layd to the charge of all such as haue made none account of obeying God, & of all such as haue despised him and his worde. Yea and although the Angels were not to iudge of it, verily euen the Oxen, the Asses, the dogges & the very stones & trees might be our iudges: for all those creatures retaine a naturall inclination of obeying God. Therfore how shal we do, when we shal be vpbraided with this saying vttered by Gods own holy mouth, What haue I required at your hands? no more but that you should loue mee & honor me. That is the very summe, & effect of al ỹ my law conteineth. I haue loued you, & my desire hath beene to be loued of you. Were you worthie to be receiued & loued of me, when yee drew cleane contrarie to my wil? Lo here wherwith to hold vs in awe, as oft as we cannot finde in our harts to yeld to the obeying of our God, & ỹ his commandements seeme hard & sharp vnto vs. What? Surely our God could not vse greater curtesie towardes vs, than to allure vs to him by louing of vs, to the intent ỹ wee shoulde loue him againe. His meaning is ỹ we should followe him the same way that he hath led vs afore. But now it is certaine, ỹ although God require nothing of vs but to haue the reuerence ỹ hee deserueth: yet can we not serue him & honour him, vntil he haue reformed our harts. And therby it appeareth what frowardnesse there is in all men by originall sinne. Behold, God commandeth vs but to loue him & to yeeld him honor: that is all ỹ is conteined in his lawe. And yet we come all of vs so farre short of the perfect performãce of the thing ỹ is commanded, that we cannot so much as thinke a good thought, but we indeuer by all meanes possible to withstande whatsoeuer God commandeth. Therefore let vs learne to be abashed & ashamed of the crabbednes of our nature, seeing we be so wayward as to striue against our God & his righteousnes, yea euen though ỹ things that he requireth be more than rightfull. And so ye see what we haue to marke, when wee Rom.7.23. feele such a law in our selues, contrary to ỹ lawe ỹ God hath giuen vs.

And hereby wee be warned that it is in vaine for men to make protestation, as a number doe, which go about to excuse themselues ỹ they can not giue themselues to God, because of ỹ weaknes & sinfulnes of their nature. Verily, as who would say, that the euil which is in vs should serue vs for our defence. Were not that a mocking of God? Shal a man be acquit at his iudges hand, by confessing himself to be giltie? But here it is shewed vs, that al ỹ hardnes that we haue in vs to obey God, yea euen though it be impossible for vs to moue forward to the performance of the least commandement of the lawe: will not serue to iustifie vs. Why so? Let a man looke well to it, & he shal find that the fault is not in the lawe: for it requireth no more but that wee shoulde serue our God, & therewithal loue him by yelding him his dew reuerence: and what is it to do that? let vs knowe therfore, that the whole fault is in our selues ỹ we obey not our God; & that although we haue no power at all to performe our duetie, yet doth not that discharge vs, seeing that God demãdeth nothing but ỹ which is right & reasõ.

By the way, we must call to minde what hath beene declared heretofore: namely that as concerning this text, where Moses sheweth ỹ meane how to fulfill the law aright: it is not meant that we must but onely haue our eyes, hands & feete well ruled; but that wee must begin at the reformation of our harts. Thou shalt loue thy God (sayeth he) & serue him. And howe? With all thy soule, & with all thy heart. Then let vs learne, ỹ if we do the things by compulsion which are cõmanded vs; it is nothing woorth: wee may not thinke that it shall passe in account. And in deed there are diuers that beare countenance faire ynough afore men, so as they cannot be accused of theft, murther, or whoredome: but in ỹ meane while they be full of wicked lustes, so as they bee readie to burst with them, & it is a corsie to them to obey God, neither finde they any taste in his commandements. And therfore al is but hypocrisie, all is but a faire pretence & shewe to the worldward, & (to be short) all is but vanitie and leazing till the heart be wonne vnto God, & vntill we be fully minded & bent to do as God cõmandeth vs. That (say I) is the ende that wee must beginne at, if we will accomplish the lawe throughly. Wherefore let vs not beguile our selues any more as the hypocrites do, with desire that men only should be contented. Let vs vnderstand ỹ we haue to do w̃ the heauẽly Iudge Ier. 5.3. who admitteth no eyeseruice, but looketh to the trueth of ỹ heart. Therfore let vs giue our selues to God with hartie affection, & not content our selues so with ỹ outward workes, ỹ the intent of doing wel should not also be groũded in our harts.

Besides this, Moses telleth vs ỹ God will not only be serued & honored, but also loued. And here are three words; the one is Loue, the other is Reuerence, & the third is Seruice. Now as touching Reuerence or Feare, (for he vseth the same term of feare;) it is not a slauish fearefulnes, but it is ỹ seruiceablenes & honor which we yeld vnto god in submitting our selues vnto him, because we be throughly persuaded that forasmuch as he hath all soueraintie ouer vs, it is good reason that we should be subiect vnto him. First & formost therfore let vs consider, that although God had not spoken to vs to persuade vs to this reuerence; surely euen nature sheweth it vs sufficiently, and it is wel ynough proued vnto vs in our selues. For although it were neuer told vs that the lewdnes of men is such, as they seeke nothing else but to turne away from God, & to become beastlike by al meanes they can deuise, yea euen wittingly & wilfully: yet our heads & harts are stuffed so full of that lesson, as we cãnot be ignorant of it. And therfore it standeth vs greatly in hand to beare in mind what this word reuerẽce or feare importeth, that is to wit, that God ought to be honored of all his creatures, & that seeing we be his, wee ought to offer our selues to be subiect to him.

Also it importeth, that when we thinke vpon God,

God, wee ſhould hallowe his name, that is to ſay, not imagine any thing of him to the derogation of his glorie, but yeeld honor to his righteouſnes, wiſdome & power. This is the firſt point which Moſes ſetteth downe here, cõcerning obedience and the right obſeruing of the Lawe.

Now this reuerence requireth alſo loue. For God wilbee honored with harty affection: If we reuerence his maieſtie, & yet ſtand in feare of it, ſo as it is a terror to vs: then would wee wiſh that there were no God at all, and wee coulde fynd in our heartes to plucke him out of his ſeate, if it were poſſible. As many as woorſhip God vppon no further grounde, but for that they are ſure they cannot ſcape his hãd, & becauſe they know him tobe their maker; thoſe (ſay I) being not touched with any free loue, wil ſhunne God; and when they heare any ſpeaking of him, it grieueth them; inſomuch that if it were in their choyce & power, they woulde plucke him out of his ſeat if they could, as I ſaid afore. So then, it is not poſſible for vs to feare God, (I meane to yeelde him right reuerence, ſo as we beare a hartie god will to him, & haue a feeling of his goodnes towards vs, & ỹ he is the place where we muſt ſeeke al our welfare) vnleſſe we loue him. Therefore if wee haue not this loue, there wilbe no reuerence at all. Wherfore let vs learne, ỹ God requireth free-will offerings, that is to ſay, that our offering of our ſelues vnto him ſhould not be of force or cõſtraint, but with ſuch deuotion as wee ſhould bee Pſal. 19.11. deſirous to ſerue him, & as we might proteſt with Dauid, not onely that wee ſet more ſtore by his law than by gold & ſiluer; but alſo that it is more ſweete & pleaſant to vs, than honie. Thus ye ſee what the ſecond worde Loue importeth.

The third worde is Seruice. For if wee make pretence to worſhip God with ceremonies and gewgawes as they ſay, & in ỹ mean while do him no true ſeruice in deede: is it not a mocking of him? If men beare folkes in hande ỹ their intent is to honor God, & that they loue him, & ſubmit themſelues to him; & in the meane ſeaſon make but a flimflam of it when God ſetteth forth his commandements vnto them: what a preſumptuouſnes were that? And likewiſe what a matter were it, if they ſhould ſhewe no proofe wherby a man might perceiue, ỹ his ioue which he ſpeaketh of here is rooted in their heart? Then let vs learne, ỹ we muſt ſhewe by our deedes that wee loue & feare God. And what are the doings that muſt beare witneſſe therof? Euen our ſeruing of him, ỹ is to wit, when we play not the looſe colts by taking leaue to do euery man after his owne luſt & liking; but ſuffer God to ouerrule vs, ſo as our whole deſire be that he ſhould hold ỹ raines of the bridle, & we yeld euery way vnder his hãd to turne to & fro according to his good wil. And ſo we ſee ỹ the way whereby wee muſt ſhewe our ſelues to loue God, is by our ſeruing of him.

Howbeit, foraſmuch as men are giuen to deuiſe ſeruices of their own brain, & do make boaſt that they glorifie God when they haue followed their owne fooliſh inuentions: Moſes rebuketh this ouerboldneſſe of men, and this curioſitie of theirs, telling them that the ſeruice of God conſiſteth in keeping the commandements & ordinances which he deliuereth to them in the name of God. Now then we ſee here, that our Lorde hath cut off all our fond inuentions, ỹ we ſhould not imagine to ſerue him any more after our owne fancie. For why? He will haue obedience, & hee eſteemeth 1.Sa.15.22. more of that than of al the ſacrifices in ỹ world. Had this point beene wel obſerued, there would not be ſuch diſputing as is ſeene nowadayes, among ſuch as beare the name of Chriſtians. For the Papiſts may good cheape ſay, that a mã may fulfil the law of God. And why? Becauſe they neuer wiſt what end or what mark God aymed at. They think it ynough for a man to be able to diſcharge himſelf to ỹ worldward; & ſo they make God like a litle babe, by reaſon wherof they ſay it is a blaſphemie to ſaye that wee cannot perfourme the law. For they neuer came to the trial of it. The deſpiſers of God ſtepforth here & ſay, that the lawe is eaſie, when as notwithſtanding they neuer put ſo much as their little finger towards the doing of it. But when we haue well weyed the things that are conteyned here; wee ſhal finde that it is not ſo eaſie a matter. Againe if we compare the law with our own frowardnes, we ſhal find that the law were eaſie ynough of it ſelf, if we were as wel diſpoſed as we ought to be. But we come farre ſhort of being Angels; & wee had neede of an angelical nature to the obeying of Gods law. For it draweth vs from the world, and leadeth vs vp to heauen: and we go ỹ cleane contrarie way. Againe, when the ſeruing of god commeth in queſtion, it wil not ſuffice vs to play the hypocrites & to ſay, wel, this or that is to be done, & in the meane while to ouerhip ỹ chiefe point: but when it is ſaid that wee muſt loue our GOD with all our hearte; wee come to the wel head, and to the verie roote, which is that GOD requireth ſuch a ſoundeneſſe, as not onely wee ſhould doe whatſoeuer hee cõmandeth vs, but alſo haue a pleaſure in it, ſo as our chiefe delight ſhould be therin, and when we ſee an agreeablenes betwene God & our affections, we ſhould be gladder therof than if wee had obtained all our fleſhly deſires & likings. Againe, men ſhould not be douſull of the meanes howe to ſerue God as wee ſee the worlde hath alwayes beene, by ſwaruing from the rule that is contained in Gods worde. What is it that is termed Gods ſeruice in the Popedome nowadayes, but fanſies that men haue deuiſed without any reaſon? And no maruel. For (to their ſeeming) Gods law was of no great importance, neither did they buſie their heads greatly about it. And therefore needs muſt they inuent a great number of other ſmall trifles. But they that giue them ſelues to Gods lawe, doe ſee, there is cauſe for them to ſaye thus; Alas, although I take neuer ſo much paine, yet can I not compaſſe it, but alwayes I come ſhort of my wayes ende. Nay (which more is) all my inforcing of my ſelfe is in vaine: in ſo much that if my God were not mercifull to mee, to giue me power & ſtrength, I ſhoulde goe cleane backewarde, and contrarie to his will.

As for the Papiſts, they had no regard of this, but inuented a ſorte of gewgawes to ſerue God withall; as ſetting vp of candles before puppets, gadding on pilgrimage, hearing of maſſes, taking of holy water, and all the reſt of their pelting traſh. But ſuch as knowe what it is to keepe the lawe, do neuer ſet their myndes vppon ſuch childiſh bawbles. But when men knowe not howe to ſerue God aright, then they rome wandring here and there. Therefore let vs beare in mynde, that here our Lord hath declared which is the true ſeruice that hee liketh and alloweth of; namely the following of his commaundementes, ſo as men deale not after their owne fanſie and liking, but holde themſelues to his worde; and as it were bridling and keeping them ſelues captiue, do attẽpt nothing but that which they knowe to bee the pleaſure of their God. Thus you ſee in effect what wee haue to gather vppon this text.

Nowe for a concluſion, heere Moſes ſetteth foorth commaundements for the welfare of the people. Whereas hee ſayeth that he ſetteth them foorth, it is to take away all excuſes of ignorance, and to quayle mennes fooliſh curioſitie, that woulde ſtye aboue the cloudes to knowe Gods will. Yee ſee then howe GOD maketh vs vnexcuſable, when hee ſendeth vs his worde, and commaundeth it to be preached vnto vs. Could he make him ſelfe more familiar vnto vs, than by ſending mortall men as his meſſengers vnto vs, to ſpeake vnto vs in his name, and to giue vs vnderſtanding of his will by their meanes? Then if wee ſaye that wee knowe not Gods will, you ſee here is wherewith to diſprooue vs; for God hath giuen vs his worde in writing, ſo as wee neede not to ſeeke for it: and therefore it ought to be ſufficiently knowen vnto vs. Nowe then let vs alſo learne to receiue it with reuerence & humilitie: and when we heare mortal men ſpeaking vnto vs, let vs aſſure our ſelues, that wee muſt not meaſure the maieſtie of Gods worde by their perſons. But wee muſt haue an eye to him from whome it commeth, and which is the author of it, that wee may ſubmit our ſelues wholly vnto it. Therefore let vs not haue theſe diueliſh fanſies with vs, as ſome dreamers haue, which ſay, O that God woulde ſpeake to mee from heauen, I woulde faine haue ſome reuelation. Let it content vs that God cõmeth down vnto vs, to make vs priuie to his will: for that is it which Moſes ment, in ſaying that hee did ſet foorth Gods commaundements: as if hee had ſaide, that men neede not to goe farre to ſeeke him. And in the ende hee ſheweth, that all this tendeth to the welfare of the people, ſo as God ſeeketh not any benefite to himſelfe, for he needeth not to borowe aught of vs, neither can wee do him any pleaſure: wee can doe him neither good nor harme, all thinges are his: according to the eyght Pſalme, and alſo the fiftith Pſalme, where it is ſaide, that all the beaſtes in the feelde are in his poſſeſſion, and that if hee be hungrie or want any thing he needeth not to ſeeke it at our handes. Why then requireth he to be ſerued of vs? It is for our benefit, for that there can not be a greater good turne vnto men, than to be the ſeruants of their maker. Then let vs vnderſtand, that whereas our Lord layeth not the bridle looſe vpon our necke, but gouerneth vs himſelfe, and holdeth vs vnder his obedience, therby to moue vs to ſerue him the more willingly: hee doeth it to our benefite and reſpecteth nothing but our welfare. Yet notwithſtanding it is true that the lawe will finde vs all giltie, & that when God hath ſhewed vs all that is good and right: that doctrine doeth ſo litle benefite vs, that it rather bringeth vs death, and wee bee curſed by it. For it is a looking glaſſe wherein to ſee that wee bee Gods enemies: and it is a keye to open the gates of hell. And how then commeth it to paſſe that God ſhoulde procure our welfare, and yet notwithſtanding wee ſhoulde receiue nothing but harme by it? That is not of it ſelfe; but it falleth out by another meane, that is to ſaye by our owne fault. Then let vs vnderſtande, that Gods lawe (if wee conſider it in it ſelfe) is vnto vs a doctrine of welfare, whereby God commeth neere vnto vs to bee our father and to make vs finde life in him, that by his ruling of our life, wee might ſticke vnto him, and thereby bee made partakers of his benefites, & in the ende attayne to the heritage of the heauenly life. But herewithal we be ſo froward and ful of corruption, that the law can ſerue vs to no other purpoſe, but to curſe vs, & to make vs perceiue how lothſome we be vnto God, in as much as we be his deadly enemies, & ſo we haue double cauſe to be abaſhed & afraid, & aſhamed of our ſelues, when we ſee ẏ the good is ſo turned to our harm: & it is more than if ẏ nature of ẏ ſunne were changed by our infection. Woulde it not make vs to loth our ſelues, if we ſhould find ſuch foule & vyle ſmokes in vs, as ſhoulde darken and quench the light of the ſunne? yes verily. Nowe we ſee that Gods law is the light of our life: and yet we not only dim it, but alſo turn it into ẏ darknes of death; & it is vnpoſſible ẏ it ſhould ſtande vs in any other ſteed, vntil our Lord Ieſus Chriſt haue wrought in vs, & reformed vs by his holy ſpirit, & by writing his lawe newe againe in our hearts. For aſmuch then as we ſee ẏ men turne life into death, light into darknes, & benefit into bane: alas, ought we not to be exceedingly abaſhed? yes, but yet muſt not ẏ put vs out of conceit of ẏ doctrin of ẏ law, ſo as we ſhuld not loue it, howbeit ẏ we cãnot performe it, vntil god haue chãged our harts to cauſe vs to ſubmit our ſelues vnto him, and haue made vs newe creatures in our lord Ieſus chriſt. True it is ẏ the ſetting forth of ẏ law vnto vs, is not for nought: but yet muſt we needes perceiue by experience, ẏ vntill God hath brought vs home again vnto him, ẏ doctrin of his law wil ſerue for nothing but to cõdemne vs. But when he hath once wrought in vs by his holy ſpirit: then ſhal wee perceiue that in ſetting forth his law vnto vs, he procureth our benefite & welfare, according as is ſaide of it here by Moſes. And ſo you heare what we haue to gather vpõ this text. But Moſes doth yet better confirme the matter that wee haue ſeene; which is, that God helde not his people downe like ſlaues, nor handled them roughly to be reuenged of thẽ, & to make to make them feele the offence they had committed; but that he handled them after a gentle and louing fashion. Now then (saith he) hath the euerlasting thy God any neede of thee? Behold (saith he) the heauens, yea, and the heauens of heauens are Gods. As if he should say, you think that God would fain haue a people, as though he could not forbeare to be without them. Hath not hee the skyes at commandement? hath not he his heauenly host? hath he not whole millions of Angels? hath hee not peaceable dominion in heauen? Yes, and therefore ye must not imagine any more, that his choosing of you was to better his owne estate by you. If hee shoulde destroy you, and make quite riddance of you, should his raigne ceasse? No, no, and for proofe therof, he hath no neede of men. Againe, besides that, is not the earth and all thinges in it, in his possession? Yes: What is the cause then that hee hath not taken and chosen other nations to him as wel as you? Is it for that you are nobler, or mightier, or worthier in any respect, than the rest, as it is mentioned in the seuenth Chapter? No. It is certaine that the Iewes were not better than the Gentiles: insomuch that if they should haue beene compared with them, they shoulde haue found themselues to haue bin neither nobler of linage, nor richer in substance, nor vertuouser in life, nor to haue excelled them in any thing. What is the cause then (saith Moses) that God hath vouchsafed to take you for his people, and that he hath let all others alone, & reached you his hand to gouern you? Sought he his own profite or aduantage? No. Seing then that you be so gretly boũd vnto him; serue him ẏ better wil.

Deut. 7. 7.

Here we see in effect two things. The one is Moses his confirming of the Israelites still in the doctrine ẏ we haue heard; which is, ẏ all of them shoulde learne to glorifie God for their welfare, acknowledging themselues beholden to him for all good things, so as they haue not any worthines or deseruinges to vaunt themselues of, but must exalt their God & vtterly abase thẽselues. Marke ẏ for the one point. And out of this proceedeth the other point; which is, that such as haue had such experience of Gods goodnes towards thẽselues, & are taught aforehand to glorifie god, must take courage to serue him ẏ more frankly, & offer themselues to God with a more zelous will, to be quietly gouerned & ouerruled by him. Thus ye see ẏ two pointes that are to be gathered vpon that text. Yea & let vs mark well, how it is not without cause ẏ Moses standeth so much vpon ẏ doctrine. For wee see how the vnthankfulnes of men is so great, ẏ they labor continually to deface Gods goodnes, by reason of ẏ cursed roote of pride & loftines which cannot be quite & cleane taken from vs. Men then do alwayes beare themselues in hand, ẏ they be somwhat worth, & therupon they stand in their own conceits, yea euen as it were in despite of God. Although God lay on sure loade vpon our heads with beetles; yet ceasse wee not to set vp our bristles stil, & to grunt at him, & to think there is yet some vertue or power in vs. For this cause Moses thinks it not ynough to haue said once or twice, you must father all your welfare vpon the onely fauour of God: but he returneth eftsoone to the confirming of the same doctrine, to the intent that mens cackling might be ẏ better stilled, and that such as deceiue themselues through their vaine imaginations, might learne to conclude in the end, ẏ it is not for vs to looke for any valour or worthines in our selues, but that we must yeld God that which belongeth peculiarly vnto him, namely, that his calling of vs, his choosing of vs, & his maintaining of vs; & likewise our hauing of his word, & our reteining of some order in the Church, come altogither of him, so as we cannot say we haue gotten them by our owne skil, cunning or strength. Thus much concerning ẏ first point.

Nowe for our better confirmation herein, let vs compare our selues with the Angels & with al the world besides, & let vs think thus: what are we? Truely, if we go no further than to our owne selues, we may haue our eies dazeled, & we know ẏ naturaly men do so besot themselues, ẏ they be as good as bewitched with the fond imaginatiõ of their own worthines. Therefore if we should looke no further than to our selues; it would seem to vs ẏ we be something worth: but if wee looke further of, & fall to considering with our selues, What are other men? Do they not set as much or more by thẽselues than we do? yes: & if there were a third partie to play ẏ iudge, would he not make more account of them than of vs? Yes. For to outward showe there is much more greatnes, riches, worthines, & honor; there is much more discretion & wisedom in thẽ than in vs. What is the cause then ẏ God hath chosen vs, & let the others go? Haue we any thing wherof we may be proud? Alas, no, if we be not ouerfarre besotted in our own fond imaginations. But if we cannot yet be brought to this reason by cõparing ourselues with all the worlde beside: let vs mount vp a litle higher & come to ẏ Angels of heauen. Could not God haue contented himselfe with his Angels, wout cõming vnto vs? We be but poore wormes, there is nothing but rottennesse in vs, & yet god vouchsafeth to seeke vs. His wil is to haue vs to be his children, not only to enioy his gifts & benefits here beneath, but also to aduance vs vp to his heauenly kingdom. And for what deserts of ours? [None at al.] Wherefore seeing we cannot be so beaten down at one blow, as to come humble our selues vnto God; let vs wey well these words of Moses, & bethink vs of the thing that is told vs here; namely that the heauẽs of heauens are the lords. For Moses thinkes it not ynough to say simply the heauẽs: but he inlargeth his speech yet further, & saith, the heauens of heauens. It had been ynough to haue saide the heauens; for seeing that ẏ earth (how wide and houge so euer it be) is nothing in comparison of the vnmeasurable greatnes of the skyes: ẏ only word heauens ought wel to haue sufficed. But Moses inteded to expresse it yet more in saying the heauens, yea euẽ the heauẽs of heauẽs. In respect wherof he repeteth those words three times: as if he should say, God can find a kingdõ large & gret ynough, & of such widnes as he shal not need to com borow some litle corner in the world to lodge in: he needeth not to ſeeke in darke caues for any thing wherewith to ſet foorth his glorye. Men are but wormes; they be but like frogges in a puddle of myre; and ſhal God come downe here belowe, to make his glorie ſhine there? Hath he not his heauenly power, to ſhewe there aboue that he hath ſoueraine dominion ouer all creatures? Muſt he be faine to ſtande to our courteſie for the dooing of any thing? So then, we ſee that men muſt not onely become drunken & beaſtlike, but alſo ſtarke diuels through pride, if this declaration of Moſes make them not to ſtoope, & to acknowledge it to be good reaſō that God ſhould be glorified euery where, and that they ought not to reſerue to themſelues any whit of the praiſe of their owne ſaluation or welfare.

Now furthermore Moſes addeth, that Gods affection towards that people, & his louing of them to chooſe their ſeede, proceeded onely of his own good wil. Your God (ſaith he) hath dominion ouer heauen & earth; And yet notwſtanding he hath vouchſafed to be your Lord. What is the cauſe therof? Moſes hath ſhewed it alreadie. But yet hee addeth (for greater confirmation) that Goddid caſt an erneſt free good wil towards this people. The firſt word which he vſeth, ſignifieth ſometime to cleaue vnto, & ſometime to take pleaſure. But here the proper & natural meaning of it is, that God tooke pleaſure in that people, ſo that he acquainted himſelf with them through a free loue: for he addeth the worde Loue thereunto. Ye ſee then, that willing pleaſure went afore, & afterward loue enſued of it, and it ſerueth to ſhewe, that it is a fondneſſe for men to imagine ỹ there is any cauſe why God ſhould loue one more thā an other, ſaue onely that it is his pleaſure ſo to do. Moſes could not haue expreſſed this more plainly, than by ſaying that it was Gods good pleaſure. That is the verie fountaine; and out of that fountaine ſpringeth afterward the loue. Let vs learne then, that God muſt firſt loue vs, and that we muſt feele the ſame by effect in vs; and yet notwithſtanding we muſt not ſtay ſtil at that loue. But to the ende wee may the better feele ỹ it is a free loue, we muſt proceede to Gods pleaſure or will; that is to ſay, wee muſt knowe, that he reſpected neither one thing nor other, wherby to be perſuaded and moued to that loue, but that he ſought the cauſe of it in him ſelf, and becauſe it liked him, therefore he liſted it. That is the thing that Moſes hath declared in this text. Howbeit for as much as we cannot as nowe proceede any farther, let vs beare away but this leſſon, that as oft as there is any ſpeaking of our ſaluation, wee muſt not ſeeke ỹ cauſe of it any where elſe, than in God; & that being vtterly naked of all goodnes, we muſt confeſſe our ſelues to be vtterly accurſed, but that God pitying vs, and mynding to ſhewe vs mercie, draweth vs out of the curſednes wherein we were, in which reſpect, for as much as he calleth & allureth vs to the ſaluation which he hath purchaſed ſo dearly for vs, we muſt not dout but ỹ he wil bring vs thither, at leaſtwiſe if we abide ſtedfaſt in his couenant, & yet neuertheleſſe, that becauſe wee cannot haue ſuch ſtedfaſtnes of our ſelues, hee will hold vs vp & ſtrengthen vs by his holy ſpirit, to the end that feeling his power in vs, wee may be the more incouraged to ſerue him, and not bee vnthankfull for ſo great goodneſſe as hee hath ſhewed vs.

Nowe let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to make vs ſo to feele them, as we may continually miſlike them more and more, and in ſo doing returne vnto him, as to ỹ onely partie that can remedie our diſeaſes, and ſet vs vp againe by pardoning our offences: ſo as we may feele the ſweetenes that is in him, and the bitterneſſe of our afflictions may not make vs to miſlike of his ſeruice, but rather ỹ wee may be the more affectioned vnto it, ſo as by ỹ means we may be framed vnto his righteouſnes, & vnto ỹ obeying of him, vntil we be gathered into the company of his Angels. That it may pleaſe him to grant this grace, not onely to vs, but alſo to all people & nations of the earth, &c.

15 Yet notwithſtanding the Lorde hath through loue acquainted himſelfe with thy fathers, and loued them, and choſen their ſeede after them, that is to wit, euen you aboue all people, as appeareth this day.

16 Therefore cutte away the foreskin of your heartes, and harden not your neckes from henceforth.

We

WE haue to lay foorth more at large, the sentéce that was begun yesterday, which is, that here Moses declareth vnto the Iewes, that all the goodnesse which they had, proceeded of Gods loue, yea euen of free loue. For his louing of them aboue all other people was not for that they were worthier, but because it so pleased him. Moreouer, he addeth that God tooke not Abraham onely, but also all his ofspring into his fauour, so as his choosing of the people, proceeded thereof. Wherof commeth it then, that the Iewes were so preferred before all the rest of the worlde? If we say it was because they were better than the rest, ỳ is a manifest gainsaying of God, who will haue vs to acknowledge his only fauour & goodnes in that behalfe. Then let vs conclude, ỳ God sought not the cause thereof els where than in himselfe: But ỳ his will was to lay forth the infinite treasures of his mercy, to shew that he was not indetted to any creature, but that his bearing of good will towardes them, is for ỳ he himselfe is good, and therfore all things are to be referred to his praise according as the scripture sheweth that his chosing of his church in all ages hath beene to that end. Nowe we see in effect what this doctrine meaneth.

Yesterday it was declared what was the vse of it, namely that men should be humbled in them selues, to exalt Gods goodnes, & thereupon take the better courage to serue him. For how greatly are we bound vnto him, seeing he hath vouchsafed to take vs for his heritage, & to adopt vs to be his children, whereas in the meane season he hath reiected others that were like vnto vs? For if it be demanded wherein we differ from other men: there wil no difference be found in respect of our selues. And therfore, seeing that God hath esteemed vs so highly, we are bound to serue him and to giue our selues wholly vnto him. But by the way let vs marke, that there is a generall election belonging to all this people, which election deserueth well to be had in estimation. But yet should not al auaile, except euery man were made partaker of it particularly in himselfe. This would be darkesum, if it were not declared more at large. But it wil become easie ynough, if we cal to minde, first what Moses teacheth here, and which wee haue seene already heretofore: namely that God chose Abrahams ofspring out of the whole worlde. And why? because it pleased him. All the world was his (as hath beene declared already) and al nations were alike neere vnto him, and in equall degree as that ofspring was that was to come of Abrahā. Nay: (which more is) he chose a people ỳ had no being, and of whō there was no hope. For Abraham was like a drie timberlogge, and therefore was there no hope that euer he could haue any ofspring. Sara his wife was barrē & both of them drooped for age, and their bodies were withered, so as God chose the thing which was not, and his promise seemed as it were to hang in the ayre, without foundation to rest vpon. And yet notwithstāding, by vertue of the promise wherein God sayde that hee would blesse Abrahās lynage, there must needes come a people, as shall be shewed in the next lecture. See here I pray you the election of God, wherby he putteth such difference betwene the lynage of Abraham and all the rest of the world, that he made the same linage his Church of purpose that the signes of his fauour and of his couenant should remaine there, and that his name should be called vpon there, so as he offered the promises of saluation to them that descended of the same race and linage, & the redeemer ỳ was to be sent into the worlde, was set forth vnto thē that they might be gathered togethervnder him. Loe here (I say) a general election that belonged to al the children of Abraham, and yet was that grace to be confirmed by faith but in a parte of them, & in some of them. For we see that many of them were cut off, not for that they were not Abrahams children, in respect of the flesh and the worlde: But for that they were not his children in spirite and before God, which was the chiefe point, as S. Paul declareth. As for those which were vnbeleeuers and vnthriftes, and imbraced not the promise that was made vnto Abraham with true faith, those were set beside the inheritance. In deede they were accounted for his children: howbeit, that was but as Ismael was who was not lawfully begotten. Now then Gods generall election which extended to the whole people, was not sufficient: But it behoued euerie man to be partaker of it in his own peculiar behalfe. And how was ỳ to be done? by faith. But let vs see from whence faith proceedeth, but only of Gods wil, in that he vouchsafeth to confirm his fauor towardes whō he thought good. Therfore chose he whom he listed out of this people, and sealed his promise in their hearts by his holy spirite, so as they were made partakers of his trueth, & it tooke full and perfect effect in them. Lo here the double election of God. The one extendeth to the whole people, because circumcision was giuen indifferently to all, both smal and great, and the promises likewise were common. But yet for all that, God was faine to adde a seconde grace, by touching the hearts of his chosen, namely of such as he listed to reserue to him selfe, and those came vnto him, & he made them to receiue the benefit that was offered them. And in deede, we see that the greatest number of that people haue bin cast off, and as it were banished from Gods fauour, so as there remained but a small remnant of them, not onely at some one time, but also euen after the captiuity of Babilon, according to this foresaying of the prophet Esay: Although thou wart neuer so many in nūber, so as thy folke were as the sande of the sea, yet shall the remnant of you be very small ỳ God wil saue. For the hypocrites abused Gods promise falsly. And because it was sayd ỳ the people shold be in multitude as the sande of the sea, they bragged at the sight of a great number, and in the meane while dispised God. But he telleth them that he coulde aswell diminish them, as he had multiplied them: so as there should remaine but a small portion of them. And so it came to passe, insomuch as the prophet sayth, ỳ if God had not reserued ſerued ſome ſeede, the countrie of Iuda had bin as Sodom & Gomorre, & God had vtterly rooted them out as they had well deſerued.

Now is this very profitable for vs. For nowadayes, when it is tolde vs ẏ we haue the pure doctrine of ẏ Goſpell preached vnto vs, & we haue the ſacrament of baptiſm for the warrant of our ſaluation, ẏ is one choice that God maketh of vs. We be no better than other men, ẏ are drowned in ydolatrie & abhominations, on whō God hath not vouchſafed to looke w̄ ſuch pity, as to make ẏ truth of his goſpel to ſhine vpon thē: but hath let thē alone as deſtitute of all things, ſo as there is nothing but horrible cōfuſion amongeſt them; & yet in the meane ſeaſon, he taketh vs between his armes, and into his boſome, vouchſafing to cauſe his word to be preached vnto vs, whereby we ſee Ieſus Chriſt who inlightneth vs as ẏ dayſun of righteouſnes, & we haue the ſacramentes whereof we knowe the vſe. Lo here one choiſe ẏ God maketh of vs, which is well worthy to be eſteemed, wherin it behoueth vs to cōſider Gods only infinite goodnes, for ẏ he eſpieth nothing in vs, for ẏ which he ſhould preferre vs, before ſuch as are nobler thā we, & haue much more thā we to outward appearance. But yet is it not ynough for vs to be ſo choſē of God as ẏ he taketh vs into his houſe, admitteth vs to bee of his flocke, & dwelleth among vs; euery of vs muſt haue an eie to himſelf, ſo as ẏ goſpel be not preached in vain nor we beare the bare name of Chriſtians, without ſhewing ẏ effect of it in our deedes. For vntil our adoptiō be ſealed by ẏ holy Ghoſt, let vs not thinke ẏ it auaileth vs any whit to haue herd the word of God. but it ſhal turne to our double condemnation, becauſe ẏ when God had choſen vs, we offended him; whē he had entered into a couenant with vs, wee brake our faithfull promiſe which wee had made & plighted vnto him; and therfore me muſt be puniſhed ẏ more greuouſly. But whē we haue once a warrant in our hearts, ẏ his promiſes belong vnto vs, & are behighted vnto vs, by reaſon ẏ we receiue them w̄ true obedience, & ſticke to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, ſuffring him to gouerne vs: ẏ is a ſure ſeale of Gods choſing of vs, ſo as we not onely haue the outwarde apparance of it before men, but alſo the truth of it before our God. And like as Abrahā was made the father of all ẏ faithfull before God: ſo are we made his children in ſpirit & truth, and not only as in reſpect of adoption to ẏ world. Thus we ſee what we haue to gather vpō this text, & vpō this declaration ẏ Moſes maketh here to the Iewes.

And for the ſame cauſe he addeth the exhortation which we haue read, in that he willeth the Iewes to circumciſe their heartes, and to beware that they harden not their neckes any more. Good reaſon it is that men ſhould ſubmit themſelues to God after ẏ maner by forſaking thēſelues, ſeeing that his ſeeking to win vs to him is not for any cōmoditie to himſelfe, (as was ſhewed yeſterday,) but becauſe hee is deſirous of our welfare, ſo as hee putteth vs not to the doing of any thing which redoundeth not to our own benefit & profit. Seeing then ẏ God reſpecteth nothing but vs in his alluring of vs to come vnto him: ſhould we drag backe in that caſe? Or ſhould wee haue proude and lofty heartes to aduaunce ourſelues againſt him? Nowe for the better vnderſtanding of this doctrine, let vs note that Moſes had an eye to the outward ſigne that was giuen at that time to the Iewes, after the ſame maner that wee haue baptiſme at this day. For circumciſion ſerued to two endes. Firſt, God thereby condemned all mankinde and all that is of mans owne nature: ſhewing them thereby, that all of it is euill. And ſecondely he gaue hope of ſaluation in ẏ ſeede of Abraham, accordingly as he had promiſed. To this purpoſe (ſay I) ſerued ẏ figure of circumciſion, namely to put the Iewes in minde, ẏ frō their mothers wombe, they brought nothing with thē but condemnation, & that all ẏ euer was of man was curſed before God, becauſe it had nothing in it but ſinne & corruption. Secondarily againe they were comforted, foraſmuch as they ſawe that God promiſed them ſaluation, by the ſeede of man, and ẏ he receiued them into fauour, and iuſtified thē of purpoſe to haue them ſeparated frō all ẏ reſt of the worlde. Seeing the Iewes had this prerogatiue, ſurely if they had not ment to deface Gods power as much as in thē lay, they ſhould haue made their circumciſion auailable, by cutting off al ẏ euer was of their owne nature, aſſuring themſelues ẏ men can not pleaſe God, vntill they haue giuen ouer the thinges ẏ were their owne. Hereunto had Moſes an eye when he ſayd, Circumciſe your heartes this day. For their obſeruing of ẏ figure was nothing, except they cōſidered to what end God ment to lead them by it. They beguiled themſelues with ẏ viſible ſignes, and ẏ was ynough to thē: for Satan hath alwaies this policie with him, to make men buſie their wits about the thinges ẏ they ſee with their eyes as whereunto he ſeeth them inclined. For all our ſeeking is to content God with faire couers; and though we neuer come nie him in verie deede; yet would we fain pay him with a ſort of pelting trifles. The Iewes then eſteemed their circumciſion ynough & too much, but yet in ſo dooing they abuſed it, becauſe they regarded not ẏ thing ẏ God ment to ſhew thē therby, but were tied altogether to ẏ viſible ſigne. Therfore doth Moſes rebuke them, ſaying: thinke not ẏ the hauing of circumciſion in your bodies, is all ẏ you haue to doe; for Gods giuing of ẏ ſigne vnto you, was to help your infirmity, of purpoſe to leade you further therby, namely to bring you to true repentāce. For when ye once perceiue ẏ al ẏ euer is of your own nature bringeth nothing but curſing: you ſhall ſee that all of it is to be done quite and cleane away. Therefore bethinke ye to mortifie your ſelues: as if he ſhould ſay, Circumciſion conſiſteth not in the outwarde paring away of the fleſhe, but the trueth thereof is within: it is your heartes that muſt bee circumciſed. Moſes his meaning hereby, is not to condemne the outwarde ſigne: but to ſhewe the true vſe of it, which folke had corrupted through ſuperſtition and hypocriſie. Accordingly whereunto Ioell ſayth, Rend your heartes, & not your garments. Wherin his meaning is, not that men ſhould no more ſhew any token of repētance by humbling themthemselues before God, but to shew that all that euer men do by outwarde signes, (as by rending of the hayre from their heades and beardes, by much weeping, by knocking vpon their brests, and by al other maner of gestures that may shew them to be abashed, & in maner out of comfort before God) is nothing, except ỹ hart be broken afore. Euen so, circumcision is vtterly vnprofitable, vnles ỹ hart be circumcised as wel as ỹ body.

Now we see the meaning of Moses, but it will become the plainer & easier vnto vs, if we come to our baptisme. I haue already touched the likenesse that is betweene these two sacraments: and it is all one, as if a man should say vnto vs nowe adayes, if you would ỹ God should take you for his people and heritage, yee must be baptised in your soules. What? baptised in our soules? Yea for south. For the water that is cast vpon our bodies is nothing, if wee haue not the trueth of it, namely that we be so plunged vnder the water, as if we were in a graue; that is to say, ỹ it maketh vs to die in our selues, so as our owne affections, our owne thoughtes, our owne witte, our owne reason, and our owne wisedome beare not any more sway in vs; but ỹ we suffer our selues, to be gouerned by God, so as all our fleshly lustes bee subdued and held in captiuitie vnder him, and vnder his yoke. Therefore if a man would shew vs the true meaning of our baptisme, he shoulde say, looke that yee be baptised within. And for the same cause also doeth Saint Paule in the seconde to the Romans, sette downe a difference betweene the circumcision of the letter, and the circumcision of the spirite: And he sayeth that the one is inwarde, and the other outward. Whereas he termeth it the Circumcision of the letter, it is by a similitude, for he hath an eye to the worde. To what purpose serueth the reading of Gods Law, and of the Gospel, if it touch vs not inwardely? Verily if euery of vs haue his Bible in print, and yet let it alone, what doe we else but make it vnholy by our not applying of so great a treasure to our vse, & by our not imploying of the same to our profite according to the intent of our God? Euen so standeth the case with the sacramentes sayeth Saint Paule. For they be but as a dead letter, so long as wee haue no more but the visible signes, it is but a gay appearance and shew before men: But the whole matter consisteth in hauing the trueth before God. Wil we haue the true Circumcision? then must it be inwardly, that is to say, in the Spirite. That is to say, God must worke there. So we see nowe that the meaning of Moses was, that folke shoulde not boast vainely of the bare name of God, nor of the wearing of his badge, without the trueth of it, so as they could shewe the power thereof: but that they should fare the better by the signe that is giuen them to warrant their adoption, to the entent it might appeare that God hath not without cause separated them from the heathen, which were as good as banished out of his church, & had no acquaintãce at al with him.

Rom. 6. 4. Col. 2. 12.

Rom. 2. 28.

Again we see that this doctrin toucheth and concerneth vs nowadayes, because we haue baptisme which serueth to the same vse ỹ circumcision did, namely to lead vs to repentance. Therfore must we apply it to our vse. And forasmuch as God hath vouchsafed to giue vs a seale of the fatherly loue which hee beareth vs, and that it pleased him to gather vs into his Church, and to shew ỹ he hath taken vs vnto himself to be heirs of his kingdome: Let not vs disappoint our selues of such a benefite through our owne lewdenesse and vnthankefulnesse; but lette vs endeuour to fare the better by it, by beeing washed in our soules, that is to say, by mortifying our owne imaginations, reasons, and lustes, and by offering vp of our selues in sacrifice vnto god, to the ende that he may renewe vs, and that nothing else but his spirite may reigne in vs, so as hee may beare the whole swaye. This exhortation is made vnto the Iewes, because it was their dutie to apply their sacramentes vnto such ende. Neuertheless let vs marke, that it is not in our power to performe the thing ỹ is required here. For although the Iewes ought to haue bin circumcised in their heartes; yet was it verie necessary that God should worke in ỹ behalfe: Likewise it standeth vs in hande nowadayes, to mortifie our selues, & we be cõmanded so to do; but yet must wee be faine to resort vnto God, who reserueth to himselfe ỹ office of renewing our soules. And that is the cause why it is sayd ỹ our Lorde Iesus Christ is only he which baptiseth with fire & the holy Ghost. For if a man ỹ ministreth baptisme, had power to regenerate, then had he in himself the power, maiestie, & glory, which is giuen to ỹ sonne of God. But our baptising is only with water, ỹ is to say, we haue but the signe of baptisme cõmitted vnto vs, yet notwithstanding, our doing is not in vaine: for we must needes be faithfull witnesses of God. And forasmuch as we doe it in his name; we must not thinke ỹ the thing is voide & vnprofitable. But yet for all that, it behoueth vs to resort to our Lord Iesus Christ, and to consider ỹ our ministring of baptisme in his Church, is by his authoritie, & therefore that it belongeth vnto him to make it auaileable & that it is only his spirit wherby we be regenerate. For if euerie man could wash his own soule: it might be sayde that the minister baptiseth with water, and ỹ euerie man baptiseth himselfe with truth; but it can not be sayd so: for that were as much as to robbe Gods sonne of the thing that is peculiar vnto him. He hath reserued that honour to himselfe, & neuer giuen it to any creature, no not vnto ỹ Angels of heauen. Therefore let vs vnderstand, that nowadayes when it is tolde vs, that we must make the outwarde signe auailable vnto vs, by being baptised in our soules: we must therewithall immediately submit our selues vnto God, praying him to performe the thing by the power of his holy spirit, which he representeth to vs outwardly by the figure thereof; and to mortifie and renewe vs in such wise, as we may haue the trueth of baptisme sealed vppe and ingrauen in our soules. In like case was it with the people of olde time.

Iohn 1. 33.

True it is that here Moses exhorteth ỹ Iewes to Circumcise their heartes: but yet we shall see hereafter, howe he will say, the Lorde our God will Deut. 30. 6.

will circumcise your hearts, it may well seeme at the first sight, ỳ these two thinges stande not wel together, but that there is some contrarietie in them: and yet they agree both together very well. For (as I haue touched afore) it is our dutie to be circumcised; that is to say, to cut off all that is of our owne nature, and to ridde it quite away, ỳ God may reigne in vs. But doe wee discharge our selues thereof? No: but God must be faine to supply our want: And therefore it is he that Circumciseth vs. Why then doeth he commaunde vs to doe it, seeing wee haue neither power nor abilitie to doe it? It is to the ende that we should be sorie at the sight of our owne wretchednes, and ỳ seeing wee faile, and are so blame worthy, we should on the other side resort vnto our God, condemning our selues, & on ỳ other side be ẽcoraged to desire him to do ỳ which wee our selues can not. There is yet one other reason, ỳ whereas God doth all in vs, yet he calleth his doing ours, and will haue euerie of vs to endeuour ourselues, though he be the worker of it. Thus it is he ỳ doth all, notwithstanding that we be not as blockes; For he hath giuen vs a will by nature. Neuertheless that will is wicked, but he correcteth it and maketh it good; & his working is after such a sort, as he will haue vs to indeuour our selues lustily like good men of warre; in so much ỳ although we do nothing, & that that which we do cõmeth of him; yet will he haue vs to haue such feeling of his power, as to ouercom all tẽptations, & be circumcised in our hearts, by renewing of our minds, & by forsaking alour own affections, to fight against Satan, vntil wee haue gotten the vpper hande.

But yet by the way we must vnderstand, that this serueth not to magnifie our owne free wil as the Papists haue imagined. We haue shewed already, ỳ we be so litle able by nature to come vnto God, that we drawe cleane backe frõ him. Neuertheless to the intent to shew vs plainly what our duetie is, he sayeth vnto vs, do it: & although we be not able to set hand to the worke, no, nor to put forth a finger towardes it: yet doth he cõmand vs to do our duty, notwithstanding ỳ we be vtterly vnable by any meanes to perform it. And that is to the end ỳ we seeing our defaulte, should be the more ashamed of it, & humble our selues before God, and againe ỳ we should be prouoked to pray him to worke in vs, seeing it is he ỳ doth all in vs, notwithstanding ỳ it be his will, that we should be ỳ instrumentes of the power of his holy spirit. For as he is so gracious vnto vs, as to impute his owne doings vnto vs & to make vs partakers of thẽ: so also it is his will, ỳ we should acknowledge and take them for our owne.

And now to go forward with the matter that I haue touched already, let vs beare wel in mind that if our heartes be not circumcised, we shalbe condemned of falshood, for breaking of the promise, ỳ we haue made to our God, as this people were, who therefore were oftentimes vpbrayded with the vncircumcisednes of their heartes. The Prophetes cried out oftentimes to the Iewes, come on your waies with your circumcision. You beare your selues in hand that God is greatly beholden vnto you, because you beare his marke. But you deale too leaudly w̃ him, & ye abuse his name with too wicked trecherie. That marke was giuen you to make you holy, & yet notwithstanding ye be defiled, insomuch ỳ ye ly weltring in your owne dung, & (which worse is) ye make your circumcision a cloke of hypocrisie to couer your wickednes withall: So that if ye were stripped naked, ye would be ashamed to see your own filthinesse. But now because ye haue Circumcision, yee imagine ỳ that should hide all your vncleannesse; and thereupon yee fall to spyting of God, by your corrupting & falsifying of ỳ thing which he had ordeined for your welfare & profit. Away therefore ye vncircumcised, worse thã the verie heathen themselues. Away ye people of Chanaan, your father was an Amorrhite and your mother an Hethit: that is to say, ye be worse than the verieste naughtipackes in the worlde. Hence ye Harlottes birdes, come yee hither to boast that Abraham was your father? Go seeke your anceters somwhere elsse; for ye be bastards and vnworthie to be counted Abrahams childrẽ or seede. We see howe the prophetes did cutte the combes of the prating Iewes, to the intent they should not brag any more of their circumcision, yea and euen Saint Steuen vseth the same maner of speech in the seuenth of the Actes. Go to ye vncircumcised of heart & stiffenecked people (sayeth he) ye be like your fathers, who hath alwayes rebelled against God, & you follow their footesteppes, or rather ye goe on from euill to worse. And think we that such vpbraidings concerne not vs nowadayes? Yes: For if we be once baptised, wee shall pay deere for our defiling of the water which God had dedicated to so holy & sacred an vse. In deede the water of it selfe is nothing; but when it is once ioyned to the word, there is as it were an authenticall seale which God hath ingrauen in it. Nowe hee that counterfaiteth ỳ seale of a Prince, shal hee not be punished? Beholde, this is the seale of God, which serueth not to seale conueiances of earthly possessions; as Landes, Medowes, Vineyardes, and Lordeshippes: but to assure vs that we be called to the heauenly life; it is such a seale as bringeth warrant with it, that we be washed cleane from our sinnes by the bloud of our Lord Iesus Christ, and regenerated againe by his holy spirite; and shal we breake all this, & scape vnpunished? Thẽ let vs looke well about vs and consider, that our Baptisme will cost vs very deare if we make it not auailable, so as it may take effect in vs by being truely baptised in our soules.

And he addeth immediatly, Harden not your necks any more. We haue expounded the like similitude heretofore: but yet must I tell ye briefly in this text, ỳ by this figuratiue speech which I am about to expound, Moses ment to expresse that the Iewes circumcising of their hearts, was their submitting of themselues vnto God by receiuing his yoke, so as they kicked no more against him like wilde colts. Ye see then ỳ the thing which God requireth at our hands in that he will haue vs to be renewed, is that we should be obedient vnto him. And hereby wee be warned, that as long long as men abide in their owne nature, they be rebelles against God, and doe nothing else but spite him by drawing the contrary way from his righteousnes, so as (to be short) they be enemies to all goodnesse. And for proofe thereof, God requireth no more but that we should bow down our neckes vnto him, and beare his yoke meekely. That is the whole perfection of our life; and the greatest holinesse that God commandeth, is that men shoulde mortifie all their wicked affections, according to the former saying, that they should bee circumcised to please God, that is to say, they must die to liue well, that is to wit, God must ridde them of all that is their owne, if he intend to haue any good of them. Then let vs beare in minde that there will bee nothing but stubbornesse in vs, to make vs to lift vp ourselues against God, and to play the wilde beastes, so long as we abide in our own nature. To be short as long as a man foloweth his owne inclination; hee must needes be at warre with God, and all goodnes: for there is not that veine in him, which tendeth not altogether to euill. Nowe let vs go bragge of our owne freewill, and say that men may well binde God to thē by their good works and desertes, as the papistes haue imagined. For when the Papists heare that God commandeth vs to doe any thing; they conclude thereupon by and by, that then it is in our power to doe it. Yea, but (as I say de before) God respecteth not our abilitie or power, but our duetie. Neither passeth he for the gay appearance or outwarde showe, to accept the thinges that carrie a faire countenance to the worldwarde. But the thing

Mat. 11, 30. that liketh me (sayth he) is ỹ ye receiue my yoke which I lay vpon you, not by tyranny or cruelty, but [of fauour & good will,] so as it shal be sweete and amiable to you, if you can inure yourselues to it with humilitie. Thinke not ỹ I come to bee pleased with your faire coũtenances. In deed ye can well ynough pretende outwardly, to be as lowly & meeke as sheepe in hearing the voice of your shepheard: but inwardly ye be as stallfedde buls, ready to strike at him wt your hornes; ye be wolues & foxes; there is nothing in you but pride & crueltie; there is nothing but hypocrisie, guile, & spitefulnes; ye be of so sturdy nature, ỹ it is vnpossible to tame ye: & therfore it behoueth you to be quite & clean changed, or else ye can neuer away wt my yoke, but ye wil be like wilde beasts, so as I shal not be neuer able to cõpasse you. Such then are we by nature, & such do we cõtinue still vntil god haue reformed vs by his grace, & we see the proof of it here before our eyes. And yet not withstanding we wil nedes stil magnifie our own reason & say we haue some seedes of goodnes in vs, so as we be inclined vnto goodnes, & can help to further Gods grace, so he aid vs, & so we make a hotchpotch of halfe figs & half reysons as they
The speeche of Papists & Pelagians. say. True it is ỹ God stirreth vs vp & putteth vs foreward (say they;) but we go on of our own self mouing: & afterward as he increaseth his grace, so do we put to our collup; and finally our atteyning to ỹ accõplishment of our enterprises, commeth of our owne wisedom, strength & forwardnes. But Moses giueth no place to such follies; but contrariwise, he sheweth, that (spite of our teeth) this sentence of cõdemnation must nedes stande, namely that if we intende to be obedient vnto God, we must first & foremost be circumcised, so as all ỹ is of the world must be killed in vs. Let that serue for one point.

And herewithall we haue to marke, that (as hath bin tolde vs oftentimes) God maketh more account of obedience, than of all the precious 1. Sam. 15. 22 things ỹ men imagine thēselues to haue. For in all ages men haue inuented fond deuotions, and they haue borne thēselues in hand ỹ they should please God well ynough, with deuising of apes toyes of their own brain. But cõtrariwise, ỹ thing ỹ God requireth of vs, is ỹ we should submit our selues to him & say; Lord reigne thou ouer vs, & be thou our only master, so as al our righteousnes & holines may be to frame our selues according to thy worde, & not to make long vagaries to inuent this or that; but to holde ourselues contented with thy single will, to yeeld to ỹ which thou cõmandest, & to beare thy yoke quietly; yea and to learn to stoop & to bow down our necks vnto it, though it seeme painefull to vs. That is ỹ subiectiõ which God requireth at our hands. Whereas Moses saith: Harden not your neckes any more; he rebuketh the Iewes for their former life, as if he should say, It is enough & too much ỹ ye haue hitherto bin stubborn against your God: according to this former saying of his heretofore, Frõ ỹ first day ỹ I was acquainted with you vnto this hour, Deut. 9. 7.
I haue seene nothing but naughtines & froward-nes in you. He rehearseth ỹ same here, as a thing ỹ should make them ashamed. For we like not to haue our former faults laid in our dish. As soone as a man doth but touch them, because our eares are nice, it is a corsie vnto vs, & we thinke ỹ all such thinges should be buried in forgetfulnes, so as they should neuer be remẽbred any more. In deed if we our selues did beare thē well in mind, it should not neede to tell vs of them any more; but we see how euery of vs falleth asleepe in thē; & it greeueth vs to come to any backereckening of the offences that we haue committed against God. We cast them a great way behinde vs, it is a matter of heauinesse to vs: and yet ought wee to bethinke our selues diligently both euen and morne of our former faultes. Howbeit not to be rechlesse of them, or to fall into despaire for thē; but to be sorie in such wise for them, as we may walke more warely than wee haue done, and be thankefull to God for his goodnes in ỹ hee hath vouchsafed to correct vs, as I haue declared often heretofore. Ye see then how meh ought to haue good remembrance of their faults, though they were neuer warned thereof by others. But what doe we? Wee forget them, and can not abide that any man should tell vs of them: and that is a doubling of the fault. Therefore let vs assure ourselues, that it is needefull for vs to be tolde of our sins oftentimes, and to be put in remembraunce of them. And that is the cause why Moses sayth againe; Harden not your harts any more. He doth not alonely warne the Iewes but also therewithall accuse them, telling them that euen vnto that time they hadde behaued themselues themselues so ill; as it was verie requisite for thē to be done to vnderstand, that it was but a fondnesse for them to boast themselues to be Gods people.

Nowe to the intent we may learne to put this doctrine in practise as it ought to be; Let vs vnderstande, that such as will needes harden themselues in naughtinesse, shalbe destroyed by God who will make them to feele ỹ force of his power according to this saying of his, If ye fall to stubLeuit.26.23 bornes with me, I will deale stubbornly with you 24. againe. And it is all one with this saying of the Psal.18.27. xviij. Psalme, With the frowarde I wilbe froward, and I wil deale roughly with such as harden thēselues against me. Then let vs learne that Gods intent is to lay a yoke vppon our neckes by his worde, of purpose to bring vs in subiection to his righteousnesse: And all is for our benefite. Insomuch that although it bee so vnpossible for vs to fulfill the Lawe, that wee can not so much as put foorth one of our litle fingers to the furtheraunce of it, no nor once thinke a good thought: yet is that yoke gentle & amiable of it selfe, and all the harme of it commeth of our selues. For if wee will not bowe downe our neckes, but strout them out as hard as if they were steele or brasse; so as in steede of being as Oxen to labour, or as sheep to heare the voyce of our shepherd, we become sturdy buls and fall to striking with rage & furie to shake off the yoke, so as we not only followe not the worde, but also shake off all subiection, and inharden ourselues against God: what excuse will there be for vs, seeing wee yeelde not ourselues vnto him willingly to be taught at his hande? Yet for all that, we see how the world goeth. God therefore must be faine to ouermaster vs, & to tame vs by maine hande. And in verie deede, looke what afflictions soeuer light vpon vs, we ought to take thē as strokes of Gods hād, to make vs bowe our neckes vnder him, and to become tractable and obedient. But when we go awke and cleane contrary after that fashion, thē doth he threaten vs thus by Moses, I will deale stubbornely as well as you. He vseth that terme of purpose, to the intent ỹ men should not dally with him. For at the first blush the saying might Psal.18.27. seeme straunge which I alledged out of the xviij Psalme; namely, that hee will deale frowardely with such as are froward. For howe can that be? Can God be frowarde? No: But it is all one as if he shoulde say: yee shall finde in me a greater hardnesse than yours is: Let vs incounter together, and see which of vs is stoutest and best able to holde out. I tell you, it is you that are like to be confounded and go to wrecke. And therfore let vs leaue our naughtinesse, and repaire vnto God while he calleth vs; and when we be come to him, let vs suffer ourselues to be gouerned by his holy spirite, which is, the spirit of meekenesse, that we may submit our selues obediently vnto him. And for perfourmaunce thereof, lette vs marke the lesson that Moses addeth immediatly.

The euerlasting thy God (sayeth he) is the God of Gods, a great, a mightie, & a strong God: yea but let vs marke also, that he doth not accept (that is to say, regard) mens persons; but iudgeth according to the truth. Beware therefore ỹ ye trust not any more in your circuicision nor in such like thinges, but beare in mind that God wil haue your seruice to be such, as your hearts may be wholly dedicated vnto him: and that he wold haue you to submit your selues vnto him, so as he may haue you in his possession, and you enioy the inheritance which hee promised to your fathers, and which belongeth vnto you. Gods greatnesse which Moses speaketh of in this place, is the first foundation which wee must lay whereby to take courage to serue him. For if there be no certainetie in our religion, wee shall alwayes make but a colde worke of it, and if it bee macched with any wilfulnesse, it will make vs to stande in our owne conceites, yea and starke fooles; so as there shall be no trueth nor right in our dooinges. Howe so euer the case stande, I say if men bee not sure who the GOD is whome they worshippe; they shall but runne a straye and at randonne, without anye zeale to serue him. For although the Papistes bee so greatly giuen to their idolatrie, that to their owne seeming they haue sure houlde of the thinges that they haue imagined: yet it is but a doubtfull opinion and surmise, which deceiueth them. In deede they doe their seruice with many ceremonies; but if a man come to the searching of their heartes, hee shall finde them alwayes doubting, and so snarled in their superstitions, that they knowe not where they be. And truely whensoeuer they be pinched with aduersitie, then doeth the venime breake out, so as they shewe that they wote not whether there is a GOD or no, but by blaspheming of him, by gnashing their teeth against him, by finding fault with him, and by accusing him of cruelnie, for punishing them (as they suppose) without their deseruing. Loe in what taking all they be, which followe their owne fancies in cases of religion. True it is that the Idolaters become so beastly in their superstitions, that they followe them with a burning affection, as the prophetes say, who vpbrayde the Iewes that they Ier.5.8. were like stoned horses neying after mares, that is to witte, they were so diuelishly minded, that their doinges were not counted as an ordinarie kinde of whooredome, but as a villanie euen against nature. Likewise in the Popedome is it not seene that such as are taken to bee the earnestest maintainers of their religion, are rather carried away with rage, than moued with any true zeale to Godwarde? Yes certainely: and thereby they doe the more bewraye their owne leawdenesse and shame. In deede they be bolde ynough to skorne vs, as though wee were turned away from the right religion: but lette it suffice vs, that wee may alwayes vpbrayde them that they knowe not what GOD they worshippe, whereas wee on our side haue good warrant of the doctrine ỹ we follow, and are sure that God accepteth the seruice which we yeelde vnto him according thereunto, and that in so doing we may boldly offer our selues vnto him.

Ye

Yee ſee then that vnleſſe we bee ſure of our religion, we ſhall neuer haue any right ordred zele, nor hearts diſpoſed to ſerue God. And that is the cauſe why Moſes ſayeth heere, Go too, ye be not as the heathen that go at al aduenture, weening that they doe well in ſeruing their Idolles, howbeit that it be but a weening, ſo as they know not what the Gods be whom they ſerue, for it is but a fancie of their owne deuiſing. But your God is the God that made heauen and earth, it is he that hath reueiled himſelfe vnto you. Now then, if yee followe them that haue not the like aſſurance, and fall to diſguiſing of Gods ſeruice: what excuſe will there bee for you? Were it not meete that ye ſhould rather giue ouer both your bodyes and ſoules to him, ſo as hee might bee honoured at your handes all your life long? And ſo we ſee here the intent of Moſes as concerning this text.

Rom.12.1. & 1.Cor.6. 20.

Now let vs learne heereby, that wee can neuer rule our liues to Gods lyking, vnleſſe we firſt knowe him. For what a thing is it if wee thinke we liue vprightly, and in the meane while know not the God whom we ought to ſerue? For when is our life to bee counted good and holy? When it is ſpent in the honouring of God: that is the finall ende of it. For if wee knowe not what God it is, nor what his will is, well may we toyle our ſelues all our life long, and yet ſhall all of it bee but confuſion. It is as if a man ſhould runne gadding ouer the feeldes, he might well breake his ſhinnes, and tyre his whole body, and yet be neuer the further forewarde, but rather the ſwiftlyer hee runneth, the further is he off from his iourneyes ende. Wee ſee then that all thinges are out of order in the Popedome, becauſe they bee blinde and ignoraunt, and wote not what God they ſerue, nor what Saint they ſhould make their vowes vnto, as ſayth their owne prouerbe. Inſomuch that when they haue tyred themſelues with trotting vp and downe, they wote not where they bee, but are newe to ſeeke in their imaginations, whereas to knowe God as hee hath ſhewed himſelfe to vs in his woord, that they might yeeld him the reuerence which is dewe vnto him: they can no skill of it, neither is there any tydings of it among them. But as for vs, if wee intende to knowe the true ſeruice of GOD, and to obey him throughly, the firſt poynt that wee muſt come vnto, muſt be to knowe him. Indeede this leſſon cannot be diſpatched at this preſent, and therefore it ſhall ſuffice vs to knowe in one worde for a concluſion, that it is an ineſtimable treaſure to vs, when it pleaſeth GOD to ſhew himſelfe vnto vs, ſo as wee bee ſure that our religion is good, and that he alloweth it, and that we goe not by opinion or by weening, as theſe wretched beaſtes doe, which ſuffer themſelues to bee lead by the noſe, as not hauing any certaine rule whereby to guide and to gouerne themſelues. Marke that for one poynt.

And for the ſecond poynt let vs marke alſo, that for as much as our God is great and terrible, it behoueth vs to be humbled vnder his mightie hand, and to learne to walke in ſuch wiſe in his feare, as wee not onely be abaſhed at his Maieſtie, but alſo beſides our honoring of him with feare and reuerence, wee repaire and reſort vnto him without any doubting that he is our father.

Nowe let vs fall downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgment of our ſinnes, praying him to touche vs ſtill more and more, ſo as wee may bee made to knowe that wee haue nothing but ſtubbornneſſe and naughtineſſe in vs, and therefore may ſeeke to him for the ſpirit of meekeneſſe, lowelineſſe, and feare, that being reformed by his grace, wee may ſeeke to amend our whole liues according to his righteouſneſſe, and fight continually againſt our wicked luſtes, vntill we bee diſcharged of this mortall body, and be gathered vp into his kingdome: Beſeeching him further to graunt vs ſuch grace as wee may neuer ceaſſe to followe him whither ſoeuer hee calleth vs, and in the meane while to beare with our infirmities, till he haue rid vs quite and cleane of them: and that for as much as we haue now our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, who is the end of the law, and the ſubſtance and truth of the Sacramentes that hee hath giuen vs, it may pleaſe him to graunt vs the grace to be ſo waſhed in our hartes through the power of the holy Ghoſt, as all our filthineſſe may be purged and cleanſed, ſo as in the end we may be wholy transformed into his glory. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs but alſo to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Saturday the xiiij. of September. 1555.

The Lxx. Sermon, which is the fifth vpon the tenth Chapter.

17 For the Lord &c.

18 Who doth right to the fatherleſſe and widowe, and loueth the ſtraunger to giue him foode and rayment.

19 Therefore loue the ſtraunger: for you your ſelues haue beene ſtraungers in the land of Egypt.

20 Thou ſhalt feare the Lorde thy God, and ſerue him, and ſticke to him, and ſweare by his name.

21 Hee is thy praiſe, hee is thy God, who hath doone thoſe great and terrible thinges for thee, which thine eyes haue ſeene.

WE ſawe yeſterday, that to haue a right zele and affection in ſeruing GOD, wee muſt bee ſure that the religion which wee holde of, is good and allowed of him. For ſo long as we ſtand in doubt, it is vnpoſſible for vs to goe on with a free courage: we ſhall alwayes goe limping and as conſtrained: and if there bee any earneſt minde in vs, the ſame proceedeth of an inſenſibleneſſe, and not for that wee bee giuen in good earneſt to ſerue the GOD whom wee knowe not. And therefore wee muſt bee well and dewly inſtructed, eare wee can bee diſpoſed to doe well. And that is the cauſe why Moſes ſaith expreſly heere, that the GOD which vttered himſelfe by the Law, and ſhewed himſelfe afore to the Patriarkes, is the God of Gods, and that there is not any other to bee ſought: inſomuch that although wee were very well diſpoſed, and that wee were neuer ſo full of deuotion (as they ſay:) yet ſhould all that euer wee Rom.14.23. were able to doe bee nothing woorth, without faith. Therefore wee muſt bee ſure and knowe, that wee doe not any thing in vaine, nor at aduenture: but that we followe Gods will, and that he liketh well of our dooinges.

Now Moſes hauing tould the people, that this Lawe was the Lawe of the liuing God; addeth now further, that hee is great, ſtrong, and terrible. For wee ſee how men take leaue to deſpiſe God, and ouerſotte themſelues ſo much in their pride and preſumption, as they cannot bee brought to any ſubiection. To the ende therefore that men ſhould not dally with ſuch a Lord, he ſayth expreſly that the God which willed his Lawe to bee publiſhed vnto them at that tyme, is great, mighty, & dreadfull. His terming of him Great, is to ſhew what honour is dew to him. His terming of him ſtrong or mightie, is to withhold men from ſtanding againſt him. And his terming of him terrible or dreadfull, is to make vs knowe that if he doe but touch vs with his hand, wee muſt needes be vndone. Therefore let vs beware we deſpiſe him not: and when he calleth vs before his Maieſtie, let vs tremble and quake for feare, that we may come with right humilitie. Thus do we now ſee Moſeſes meaning. And therefore let vs marke, that if we wil direct our liues aright, wee muſt haue pure doctrine, that our religion may be grounded vppon Gods truth, ſo as wee may be ſure that the doctrine which we profeſſe, is infallible, & therewithall we muſt beware that when we know God, we ſet not light by him, but ỹ our knowing of him doe bring a lowelines with it, ſo as we ſubmit our ſelues wholly to the honoring of him ỹ is ſo high and incomprehenſible, Iob.41.16. before whom the very Angels themſelues doe tremble. Ye ſee then how the thing which wee haue to mark, is ỹ men ſhal neuer know God, vntill they haue gotten ſuch feeling of the infinite glory that is in him, as maketh them to ſtoope, yea & to make none account at al of themſelues, that they may giue ouer themſelues wholly to the honoring & ſeruing of him. But this is very yll put in vre. For euen they that make greateſt boaſt of their profiting in the Goſpell, can skill to babble well ynough, & they beare themſelues in hand ỹ they be iolly fellowes, when they can prattle at pleaſure, though it be without any reuerence at all. And we ſee how the holy ſcripture is ſhamefully abuſed nowe adayes by a nomber of mens diſcourſing of it as it were but of a fable, or to ſhew the fineneſſe of their wit, by raunging into curious and vnprofitable queſtions. Thus ye ſee how Gods word is abuſed now adayes at mens pleaſures, without any feare or reuerence, for want of cõſidering that which Moſes telleth here, that is to wit, ỹ when we reſort vnto God, wee muſt bethinke vs of the dreadfull Maieſtie that is in him, that it may bridle vs and holde vs in ſubiection to him, and make vs to yeeld him ſuch honour, as to be abaſhed at his ſpeaking to vs, vntill we haue conceiued what he ſaith to vs: & vpon the knowledge thereof, to be ready and forewarde in obeying the ſame, without any gainſaiyng. And ſo ye ſee what we haue to gather vpõ this text, where he ſaith ỹ the God which hath vttered himſelfe by the Law, is great & terrible.

Certaine it is that GOD intendeth not to to driue vs away from him, but rather to win vs to him by gentlenes. But yet muſt we bee fayne to bee tamed, bicauſe of the pride that is in vs, leaſt wee growe bold to offend him, and cannot finde in our hearts to be inured to his yoke, than the which there is not any thing more harde for vs to doe. Wee muſt (I ſay) bee firſt ſubdued by the feare or terrour that Moſes ſpeaketh of here, before wee can conceiue Gods goodneſſe. But yet muſt it be ſo tempered, as we ſhunne not his good inſtruction, ne bee ſo diſmaied as to refuſe Gods word out of hand; but as it may be as a preparatiue, to make vs good ſcholers, and to drawe our wittes to ſuch a teachableneſſe, as all that euer we haue of nature may be done away, and nothing may hinder vs to receiue his doctrine without gainſaying, but ỹ his word (beſides that wee loue it) may alſo bee reuerenced at our handes, and we follow it by ſubmitting our ſelues to it alwayes and in all caſes.

Now after that Moſes hath ſaid ſo, he addeth that God hath no reſpect of perſons, nor receiueth any rewards. Whereas he ſaieth ỹ he hath no reſpect of perſons, his meaning is that there is no fauor to be had at his hand for the things that men are willingly mooued with. For this word Perſon betokeneth the outward appearance. It is not takẽ here nor in any other places of the ſcripture, for ỹ which we meane by the word perſon when we ſay, Lo here is one perſon, Lo here are two perſons: but it is taken for riches, pouertie, birth, nobilitie, or honour. All things therefore ỹ carie an outward ſhowe before men, to moue vs to fauor them or to hate them, to honour them or deſpyſe them, all thoſe things (I ſay) are comprehended vnder the word Perſon, for they be but as vizors. And after that maner is it sayd that God accepteth no mans person. To what purpose now doeth Moses speake thereof? It is bicause that the great ones perceiuing themselues to bee borne out by the world, thinke they may doe as much before God, & thereupon become proude. If a man haue once won credit, so as mē dare not open their mouthes against his misbehauiour, but he dasheth thē out of countenance as many as stand against him: he beares himselfe in hand ỹ he may beare as great sway with God, & thereupon playes ỹ prince among them. That is the cause why a nūber ouershoote themselues, & cast away all feare of God. For when they see men feare them & stand in awe of them, or whē they see men commend them and fauour them: Then they thinke they haue won the gole, then they fal to triumphing, & they beare themselues in hand ỹ they should no more bee called to account. Now bicause men ouershoote themselues after ỹ fashion: Moses summoneth them to gods iudgement, which is done according to trueth, after which maner S. Paul speaketh of it where he expoundeth this same saying, ỹ God hath no respect of persons. He iudgeth truly (saith he) according to the deede & according to righteousnesse, so as men must not thinke they shall fare euer the better for their alleaging this or that. Col. 3. 25.

Furthermore he signifieth therewithall, ỹ God is not contented with eyseruice, but hath respect to the trueneſse of the heart, & not to ỹ outward seeming of things, as is said in the first booke of Samuel. And so we haue to marke, ỹ although a man be great to the worldward, yet he must not lift vp his head or his necke against God. For they shal gaine nothing by it, bicause all ỹ greatnes of the world, is but as smoke before him. And on the otherside they ỹ are vnderlings, must not thinke that God will beare with them the more for ỹ, as they now and then moue mortall men to compassion thereby. Therefore away with all these things that muster afore our eyes, & wherby we be moued to loue or hatred: for all this is neither heere nor there before God: When we come before him, the first thing ỹ he will loke vpon, is our harts: and although they be now wrapped vp, and (to our owne seeming) we haue lurking holes to hide vs in: yet shall all be laid open. Therefore let vs not beguile our selues in ỹ behalfe. Again, let vs consider, that God will iudge according to ỹ truth of the deede. We may well face out matters for a while, as we do bicause we be naturaly giuen to hipocrisie: but al ỹ paintings and all ỹ gay colours ỹ we pretend as now, shalbe wiped quite & cleane away when we come once before God. Therefore let vs walke vprightly & with a pure hart, & in especially let vs rule all our workes by his law, knowing ỹ he hath no respect of persons, & let ỹ bridle vs all. Let such as are in authority & of power to grieue ỹ inferior & weaker sorte, forbeare to do so. And on the otherside let the weaker beare in minde, that God will not faile to iudge them for all that, bicause he is not an accepter of persons: & therefore let vs bring nothing with vs but righteousnesse & soundnesse of conscience before him, for nothing will passe for payment but onely that. 1. Sam. 16. 7.

It is not without cause, that Moses addeth yet further, that God taketh no rewards. If a man aske vs whether God be like mortal iudges that wil be corrupted with bribes & money: truely there is none of vs all but wil say no: yea and it is such a blasphemie to say otherwise, ỹ euen the wickedst persons ỹ are would abhorre it. For they woulde say, what hath God to do with gold and siluer? Is God corruptible? But yet for all that, wee ceasse not to deeme that thing of him which we know to be false. And how so? Bicause ỹ as we see that worldly iudges are corrupted, insomuch that if a mā grease them in ỹ hand, they wil suffer themselues to be caried away, and whereas they had done him wrong afore, they will nowe doe him right, & they be to be bound & chaunged euery way: we beare our selues in hand ỹ God will bee dealt with after ỹ same maner. We will not speak it with open mouth: but surely men would neuer be so bold to doe euill, if they did not transfigure God, & beare themselues in hand ỹ he is plyable, & such a one as wil be won by rewards. But let vs come to the ordinarie custome of al ages. What is the meanes wherewith men thinke to pacifie God in ỹ Popedome, but by setting vp of tapers, by burning of perfumes, & by doing such other pretie trifles? It seemeth to them ỹ he shold hold himselfe contented with such payments, as if a man brought a bribe to an earthly Iudge to corrupt him & to win him w̄all. But this had not his first beginning in Poperie. The Iewes were deceiued therwith. Also ỹ heathen men had ỹ same superstitiō, notwithstanding ỹ some of them misliked it, I meane some of thē whose bookes wee haue, insomuch ỹ they haue cried out against it, saying: what intend ye to do ye wretched folke? When ye haue giuen your selues to deceit, theft, open wrong, crueltie, extortion, & all maner of wickednesse, ye come by & by to reconcile your selues vnto God. And howe? By bringing him some part of ỹ bootie. But forasmuch as ỹ guise of ỹ Popedome is best knowne vnto vs, let vs see what is done there. Whē a mā hath pilled & polled his fill, if he giue some Cope to ỹ Church, if he build some chappel, if he found some Masses, if he cause some puppets to be made, or if he doe some other such gewgawe: thats a fellow alone, God is well recompenced at his hand, he needes not to doubt of ỹ forgiuenes of all his sinnes before God: If he doe but offer him a peece of the bootie, he is wel ynough contented, his mouth is so stopt ỹ he cā demand no more. In deede men wil not say thus, but yet is it so neuertheless. For whereof comes it ỹ the wicked surmise all their wicked deeds to be couered, but of ỹ they imagin themselues to haue compoūded w̄ God, so as he knowes not what to say any more, when they haue once as it were bribed him after that sort with some present? Now then bicause the world doth daly so with God, & beareth it self in hand that it can agree with him for rewards: Moses saith on the contrarie, that God is not like mortall men, nor will yeeld a whitte for all that: and therfore he wold not haue men to beguile themselues. For if we desire to be reconciled vnto him Persius Satyra 2.

when we haue offended him, there is none other way for vs, but to cast our selues downe, and to come to him with a sory heart for it. For as it is Psal. 51. 19. said in the psalme, that is the sacrifice which hee accepteth aboue all: And when he receiueth vs into his fauor, let vs assure our selues that it is for ỹ paimentes sake, which was made in the person of our lord Iesus Christ. Wherfore let vs not presume to bring him any thing of our own, but let vs borrow elsewhere, that which we haue not in our selues. Yet for all this, it behoueth vs to hate sin, if we meane ỹ God should admit vs into his
1. Cor. 11. 31. fauour. Yea and we must condemne the euill ỹ we know to be in our selues, it we intend to be acquite of it. And therfore let vs not come any more with our owne vaine fancies, vpon hope to pacifie God with such pelting trash; or by likening him to a corrupted Iudge, that will haue his eyes blinded with rewardes: let vs not imagin any such thing in him, but let vs walke soundly.

Nowe then wee see howe Moseses intent was to bridle vs, by shewing vs what the nature of God is: and he exhorteth vs to feare him bicause he is terrible. And again, for as much as he regardeth no mans person, let vs put away all pride & presumption. Let the great ones know ỹ they shall gain nothing by their stoutnes, but ỹ al creatures must stoope to him. Finally let vs not think that when we haue offended God, we shal please him again with this fond shift of offering him some amends for it. For he doth so greatly abhorre & loath sin, as he can by no meanes away with it, neither is there any payment in the world ỹ can make satisfactiō for it. What is to be done then, but to resort simply & plainely to our God, submitting our selues vnto him, & seeking nothing else at his hand but to be reformed by him, so as al ỹ euer he misliketh may be corrected & cast downe in vs? Furthermore when as it is saide ỹ God taketh no rewards, we bee done to vnderstand, ỹ (as much as in vs lieth) we defile ỹ blood of our Lord Iesus Christ, which is the only payment & satisfaction for our sinnes, when we be ỹ bolder to sin vnder pretence of reconciling our selues vnto God. They (I say) ỹ take such libertie to doe euill, defile the blood of our Lorde Iesus Christ, as if they trampled it vnder foote. For to say ỹ when we haue done a fault, we may be discharged of it by bringing some raunsome or recompence for it, were a plaine declaration ỹ we loue not our gold & siluer at all. If a man shoulde breake all lawe bicause he is sure he hath to doe with corrupt iudges, whose fauour he shal win ẇ his purse, and yet notwithstanding for all his offending after ỹ sort, had no care howe he wasted & consumed his money, men would say he were witles. But we haue not any other means wherby to be reconciled vnto God, than ỹ only blood of our Lord Iesus Christ. Now then if we fall to lashing of it out after ỹ fashion ẇout discretion, is it not a token of too villanous contempt? Yes. And therfore let vs learne to hold our selues to ỹ inestimable price ỹ was paide for our raunsome: let vs learn (I say) to hold our selues in the feare of God, so as we giue not our selues ouer vnto euil. And therewall let vs learne also, to behaue our selues in such wise towardes our neighbors, as ỹ mightie greeue not the weeke and feeble. For although we may scape in this world, yet when we come before the heauenly iudge, we shall be punished double for our abusing of our power & credite after ỹ fashion. According whereunto S. Paule warneth maisters ỹ they should not misintreat their seruants: for God (saith he) iudgeth ẇout respect of persons. Wherby he sheweth, that such as are set in high estate & authoritie, ought to abstaine vtterly from al crueltie & pride. For why? They may well be serued of the same sauce theselues. And it is not for thē to think thēselues to haue ỹ better hand bicause that as now they haue ỹ vauntage & are in better degree: for all ỹ geere shalbe dasht, when it cōmeth before God. Thus ye see what we haue to beare in minde. Eph. 6. 9.

Now for a further declaration he addeth, that God doeth right to the fatherlesse, the widowe and the straunger: & that God hath a care of the straunger to giue him clothing & foode. Yea & he telleth ỹ lewes that they had bin straungers in ỹ land of Egypt, & therefore they ought to be mindefull still of ỹ state of theirs, that they might vse all maner of gentlenesse towards straungers. This serueth for the proofe of ỹ doctrine which I touched euen now; ỹ is to wit, ỹ god hath no respect of persons. And in ỹ respect doth Moses say, ỹ the widowes, fatherlesse, and straungers shal be vexed in this world, they shall haue none to beare them out, men shall suffer the widowes to be troubled, the fatherlesse shalbe made a pray, straungers shalbe laid open to all iniuries, & no mā shall withstand it. And why? For in as much as they beare no countenance in this world, nor haue any kinsfolke or friends to maintaine them: it seemeth ỹ they may be put to ỹ bearing of al things: ỹ is the custome of ỹ world. But contrariwise it is said here, ỹ God is a defender of the fatherlesse, a maintainer of the widowes, & a protector of straungers. This is vtterly against ỹ cōmon custome of men. For (as I haue said alreadie) men are giuen to ỹ pleasuring of such as may stād them in some sted again: Kinsfolk & friends will help one another: & in the meane while poore people are forsakē: But see here how God dealeth ỹ cleane contrarie way. When he sees men trust in their owne staies, and in their own strength, he letteth them alone, as if he should say to them, Very wel, try what ye can doe of your selues. For commonly when means are profered vs in this world wherby to helpe vs, we despise God, & we beare our selues in hand, that wee may well ynough forbeare him. Not that wee will so say; but for as much as fewe folke doe call vppon God when the world fauoureth them: therefore doth God also make no account of them. Beholde, it is the widowe, the straunger, and the fatherlesse, that are constrained to make their mone vnto him; and when they haue looked about them, they finde no fauour nor helpe among men. They shalbe dalyed withall, and although some fayre promises be made them, all is but holywater of the court as they terme it: in so much that the poore soules wote not where to become. This kinde of intreatanee driueth them to God, & he hear-hearkeneth to their ſighes & complaints. And ſo we ſee, that by ſuch examples, Moſes hath well confirmed the leſſon which he had ſet downe; namely that God reſpecteth no perſons. For the things that are deſpiſed in the world, are precious in his ſight: and whom men hold ſcorne to beſtowe a looke vpon; them doth he giue good eare vnto.

Sith it is ſo, let vs mark for the firſt point, that if wee vexe ſuch as are without defence in the world, God will ſet himſelfe as an aduerſarie againſt vs. And ſurely, were wee well perſwaded therof, we wold be more afraid to offend a poore fatherleſſe child, a widow, or a ſtraunger, than to offend thoſe that are beſt friended, and are able to reuenge themſelues to the worldwarde. But what? Our vnbeliefe bewrayes it ſelfe in that behalf: in ſo much that if there be a man that is riche, mightie and well propped vp, we dare not withſtand him. And although he haue doone vs ſome wrong, yet we put it vp meekly, & dare not complaine of it, & much leſſe dare we lift vp our hand againſt him. But as for a poore man, we will not tarie till hee haue doone vs ſome wrong or outrage, we wil be at hoſte with him aforehand. For why? Wee feare not that he will be euen w̄ vs; he may not bee ſo bolde as once to murmur againſt vs. And if he doe, wee can put a barre in his way, with who are you ſir? He ſhall obtayne no right in Law. And if he doe, yet ſhall he haue the worſe end of ỹ ſtaffe. Thus ſtand we in feare of men if they be armed with any power, but in ỹ meane while we feare not God, who declareth himſelfe to be the defender of all poore folkes ỹ are deſtitute of help. If we beleeued ỹ holy ſcripture, ſurely this only one ſaying of Moſes would more abaſh vs, than all the worldly conſideratiõs that could befall vs. On the contrary part, when we be ſo bold in troubling poore folks; it is a tokẽ that we believe not any whit of al that is conteined in the holy ſcripture, and that we bee worſe than heathen folke: And yet for all that, it is the cõmon faſhion of ỹ world. But herby it appereth, ỹ nowadays vnbeleef ouerflowcth ỹ whole earth, like a water flud. In deede it is a horrible thing: but yet is it ſo, & it cannot be denied. What is to be done then? Let vs loke into our ſelues. If the Armes of a common weale or of a prince bee ſet vpon a houſe, or vpon a peece of land, no man dareth preſume into it, for it were a breaking of his aleagance and not a priuate offence. Behold, God ſetteth his armes or badge vpon ỹ widowe, the fatherles, and the ſtraunger, & he telleth vs that hee hath taken them into his protection. Now if a man fal to troubling of them, & deale outragiouſly with them: is it not an open deſpiſing of God, and a defying of him, as it were to bid him battaile? In deede we wil not take it ſo, but God wil not referre himſelfe to our vaine opinion and fancie. Whatſoeuer come of it, let vs marke well, that although the widowes bee ſhaken off as to the worldward, though fatherles children bee put to the ſpoyle, though poore ſtraungers be skorned and troden vnder foote: yet doth God ſet neuertheles ſtore by them, but hath his eyes continually vpon them, and will ſurely maintayne them. And therefore vnles we purpoſe to haue God our aduerſary, and that he ſhould ſhew himſelfe to bee our deadly enemy; let vs abſtaine from all wrong dealing, extorſion outrage, deceite, and malice, towards thoſe that are friendleſſe in reſpect of the world, and vtterly deſtitute of all ſhiftes, and after a ſorte ſet open to the ſpoyle, as I ſaid afore. Let vs not oppreſſe them, leaſt God ſet himſelfe againſt vs, & ſhew himſelfe to be their continuall ſhield. Mark well this firſt fruite which wee haue to gather of the ſaid leſſon that was giuen to the Iewes in old tyme, to the end that if we feare not the puniſhment of men, we may yet be afraid of the determinate ſentence that God ſetteth downe: which is, that hee will not ouerſlip the wrongfull trubling of poore folke, without ſhewing of himſelfe to be on their ſide, and that he hath taken their quarell in hand, according to this ſaying, that he will doe them right.

He ſaies not, only that he loueth them, or that he pitieth them; but that he will doe them right. Now then, if we ſee that the Iudges on earth do but mocke poore folks when they come to them for ſuccour, and ỹ in ſtead of helping them they do but skorne them, let vs vnderſtand that thoſe Iudges muſt come before the heauenly Iudge, who will ſurely puniſh both thoſe whome he had put in commiſſion to defend poore folke, and alſo thoſe that haue abuſed the liberty which they had in this world, by dooing the more euill bycauſe they ſaw they might ſcape vnpunyſhed. God therefore looketh vpon them, and yet maketh as though he ſaw them not, for a time; ſo as if men miſintreat poore folkes, be they widowes, fatherleſſe, or ſtraungers, in deede he ſetteth not himſelfe againſt their dooings at the firſt, but when hee hath let them take their pleaſure a while, then layes he his hand vppon all ſuch as haue paſſed their boundes in doing outrage to the feeble and little ones; and ſpecially vppon ſuch as haue not doone their office when they were in authoritie to doe Iuſtice, nor haue ſuccoured poore ſoules when they were oppreſſed. For God muſt needes redreſſe ſuch enormities, and ſhew ſuch perſons their negligence, by ſetting himſelfe againſt them, as againſt the corrupters of the lawe when it was put into their hand. And ſo ye ſee what Moſes ment, in ſaying ỹ God doth right to ſuch as are wrongfully trodẽ vnder foote, and are not regarded in the world.

By the way, wee haue alſo great comforte to receiue of this text: ſo that if wee be deſtitute of worldly helpes, our God here taketh vs into his tuition; yea and he taryeth not till we come vnto him, but telleth vs that he is our defence, and ỹ he will be our maintainer. Now then although poore folk be wronged, and haue neuer ſo much violence offered them, ſo as they be in maner troden vnder foote: haue they not wherewith to content thẽſelues, ſith they know ỹ God looketh vpon them with pittie, and will in ỹ end ſtretch foorth his mighty hand to ſuccour them? True it is ỹ they muſt bee excerciſed with patience ſo lõg as pleaſeth God: but yet if they be not too vnthankfull, they haue well wherwith to content themſelues, in that they be ſure ỹ God neuer forgetteth them, but ſuccoureth them, & keepeth a regiſter of all ỹ wrongs ỹ are done vnto them, to bring thē to account in time conuenient. Howbeit to the intent wee may inioy this comfort, let vs note alſo, ỹ it is not ynough for men to be fatherleſſe or ſtraungers, or for womē to be huſbandleſſe; but wee muſt alſo be truely diſtreſſed before God, ſo as we humble our ſelues & reſort to him for reſcue whē men afflict vs wrongfully. For if a ſtraūger be prouder than he ỹ is at home in his owne countrey and among his friendes: it is in vaine for him to truſt ỹ God wil be ỹ defender of his welfare. When a ſtraunger is ſo lordly, ỹ he will take more vpon him than ỹ partie that hath wherewith to helpe himſelfe: he may goe ſeeke his maintenaunce elſwhere than at Gods hand; for he ſhal not finde it there. But if a ſtraūger perceiuing himſelfe deſtitute of all worldly helpe, & yet ỹ God is on his ſide, do call vpō him & put himſelf wholly into his hands; ſurely then ſhal he finde at length, ỹ Gods promiſing to doe right to ỹ ſtraūger, is not in vaine. If a widow play the ſhee diuell, in troubling and vexing of other folks, and ỹ there is more to do with her than ẅ a doſen men: let her not thinke ỹ God will trouble himſelfe for her. But if a widow be helpleſſe, & behaue her ſelfe meekely, & ſeeke no further than to liue peaceably with al men: ſuch a one wil the heauenly Iudge receiue into his protection. In like caſe ſtandeth it with the fatherleſſe. If they giue themſelues to naughtines, ſhaking off all yoke, & become vnthrifts in ſpite of God & the world; they beguile themſelues if they think that God fauoreth them, vnder pretence of this doctrine. And therefore let vs marke well, ỹ this is ſet downe expreſſely for ſuch as ſuffer afflictions patiently, & auenge not themſelues, but put their caſe into Gods hands. Although then that ſuch folke be ſcorned of the world, and poynted at with the finger, and triumphed at by ſuch as treade them vnder foote: yet doeth God take their caſe in hand, and will ſurely ſhewe it how long ſo euer he delay. Wherefore let vs learne hereby, to comfort our ſelues in our afflictions: which is, by being tamed and made to ſtoope, ſo as we ſeeke to be pitied at Gods hand, & referre our whole caſe vnto him, caſting all our cares & ſorowes into his lap. And again, let vs be wel aduiſed, ỹ although the world giue vs leaue to doe euil, ſo as we may vex & trouble men at our pleaſure; yet ſhal we not ſcape Gods wrath: wel may we wrangle with him, but it ſhall not boote vs at all. Thus ye ſee what we haue to remember vpon that text.

To be ſhort, let vs marke, that here Moſes intended to commend equitie and vprightnes vnto vs. I ſay he ſheweth vs how our Lord will bee ſerued at our handes: namely by behauing our ſelues plainely with our neighbors, ſo as we offer no violence or wrong to any body, & ſpecially to the weaker ſort, and to ſuch as haue no maintenance at mās hand. God then will not haue vs to ſerue him with Ceremonies, but wee muſt deale iuſtly and vprightly, ſo as we yeelde euery man his right. That is the true ſeruing of God, as is ſhewed vs oftentimes in the holy ſcripture. And frō thence alſo is it, ỹ the Prophets haue drawen theſe ſayings, That God requireth mercie & not ſacrifice; That God wil haue vs to liue amōg our neighbours without doing harme to any body; That he wil haue al violence to ceaſſe; & that he wil haue al crueltie & deceite to be farre frō vs. The Prophets haue good ſtore of ſuch exhortations: & the foūtaine whereout they haue fetched them, is this doctrine of Moſeſes, ỹ God wil not be ſerued with I wote not what ſuperſtitions as men are wont to do, who vſe much pompe & gloriouſnes in ſeruing God with faire temples, goodly pictures, gay imagerie, ſweete perfumes, ringing of bels, ſetting vp of tapers, & ſuch other pelting traſh. They beare themſelues in hand ỹ God delighteth in ſuch things, & that when they play vpō their Organs, they make him to daūce as if he were a little babe. But let not vs buſie our heads about ſuch ſmall trifles, for God wil be ſerued ẅ truth, righteouſnes, & foundnes of heart. Againe he will haue vs to indeuour to ſerue our neighbors: for we haue nothing elſe ỹ is worth the bringing vnto him: but he wil haue vs to cōmunicate togither, ſo as euery of vs according to his abilitie, do ſtraine his wits to ſuccour them ỹ haue need of help, & in any wiſe to beware that we take not libertie to doe any hurt or harme to any body. Now then let vs marke wel the meane of ſeruing our God according to his wil, that we trāſforme him not by our vaine folly, by bearing our ſelues in hand, ỹ he is wel honored when we bring in our own pelting traſh, as it were to daſle his eyes withall, which thing is vnpoſſible.

Now after that Moſes hath ſhewed that God is terrible, and that it is not for vs to daly with ſo great a Lorde, who can well ynough hamper vs if we rebel againſt him; and therefore that it behoueth vs to liue vprightly, & to pitie ỹ poore, & to ſuccor them ỹ are oppreſſed, ſo as we offer no crueltie nor tyrannie to ỹ weaker ſort, & to ſuch as are deſtitute of friends to ſupport thē: now after all this he addeth, that God is the praiſe of his people. And it is to ỹ end to win their heartes by gentlenes & friendly dealing. And herein we ſee ỹ God omitteth not any thing whereby to draw vs to him, but ỹ after he hath vſed threatenings & put vs in feare, to make vs to ſtoope & to ſtand in awe of him, he commeth like a father ỹ ſhould flatter his childe, & vſeth myld & gentle words, rather than his fatherly authoritie. Thus ye ſee how our Lord laboreth by al meanes to win vs; & therfore ſo much ỹ more to blame are we, and ỹ leſſe to be excuſed, if we cannot be bowed neither by faire meanes nor by foule, ſeeing ỹ our Lord trieth al ỹ waies to the wood, to draw vs to him. Therefore doeth Moſes purpoſely ſay, That God is the praiſe of his people, & that he had done great & terrible things for their ſakes. For this cauſe he ſaith, firſt of all that God is their praiſe. And by that ſpeech hee meaneth, that when wee once know God, and he hath ſhewed himſelf to vs by his word; his will is that wee ſhould glorifie him. Marke that for one point.

Secondly he putteth ỹ people in remembrāce of the great miracles that had bin done for thē in their going going out of the land of Egypt. For they were as marks or tokens of Gods goodnes, ſo as ỹ people could not but be conuicted of vnthankfulneſſe, forasmuch as God had vttered himſelfe as familiarly as was poſſible, to ſhewe himſelfe fauorable to Abrahams poſteritie. To be ſhort, we ſee how God not onely vſeth his dominion & right of ſouereintie, which hee hath ouer vs to make vs ſubiect to his lawe and commaundementes: but alſo commeth to vs as a father, and vttereth as mield and gracious louingneſſe towardes vs, as can be; and all to the end to breake the hardneſſe of our harts. Inſomuch that if wee bee not moued at his maieſtie, or if we yeelde him not ſuch reuerence as we ought to doe in reſpect of his ſouereintie ouer vs: at leaſt wiſe yet ought we to be meekened, ſeeing he ſtoopeth to vs, & cōmeth downe frō his ſeate vnto vs, as if he ſhould ſay, Wel ſirs, aſſure yourſelues I am your father, and therefore I pray you conſider well the good that I haue done you, and whereby I haue witneſſed my fauour towardes you, and let it moue you at leſtwiſe to loue and ſerue me. That is the very principall meaning of Moſes.

But yet by the way, let vs marke alſo that God is neuer duely honored at our hands, vnles we lay all our glorie vpon him. For wheras he is termed our prayſe, by ỹ word he bereaueth vs of al glorie, & ſheweth vs ỹ there is not any thing in vs, whereof we ought to be proude. Therefore let a man ſet as much ſtore by himſelfe as he liſteth, yet in the end he ſhal come to ſhame, ſo as he ſhall perceiue there is not one drop of goodneſſe in himſelfe. What is to be done then? Let vs reſort right forth to our God, to ſeeke al goodnes in him, & let vs glorifie him for ſhewing him ſelfe ſo liberall towards vs, ỹ wee may alſo make our boaſt thereof, according as it is ſaide by Ieremie, that the rich man muſt forget his riches, Ier. 9.23. and the ſtrong man his ſtrength, & the wiſe man his wiſdome, and all that euer is of man muſt be beaten downe, that wee may fetch our glory at Gods hand, knowing that it is he that executeth righteouſnes, iudgement, and mercie. Thus yee ſee what wee haue to remember in this worde, where Moſes ſaith that God is the praiſe of his people. And if we be not moued by that which is tolde vs in the holy ſcripture, at leaſt wiſe yet let vs open our eyes, and let the often experience of Gods benefits frame vs to ſuch humility as wee may not preſume to commend ourſelues any more, but onely haue our mouthes open to praiſe and magnifie the thinges that wee ſhall haue receiued at Gods hand. For ſith he ſheweth vs ſo many waies, that all our welfare conſiſteth in him, and that it commeth only of him, if we wil ſhut our eyes at it like a ſort of blockeheads, and vouchſafe not ne liſt not to hold our ſelues to the thing that is throughly knowen and apparāt; ſurely we ſhalbe conuicted of bereauing God of his praiſe, & of bringing him to nothing as much as in vs lieth, for his benefits are infinit towards vs. And therfore let vs learn by this leſſō, to acknowledge the benefits throughly which God hath beſtowed vpon vs: for they be a ſufficient buſines to keepe vs occupied. If we gather our wits about vs to conſider Gods goodnes towards vs, we ſhal find that we ought to ſeeke our whole praiſe no where els than only in him. And for that cauſe doth Moſes adde, It is he that hath done the great and terrible things which your eyes haue ſeene. As if he ſhold ſay, God needeth not to ſeek here & there for record, or for iudges to arreigne you: for (ſpite of your teeth) it ſhalbe proued to your faces, that your God is great, mightie, and terrible. For you were ỹ miſerableſt creatures in the world, you were in bondage like bruit beaſts; and your God loued you ſo deerely, that he hath ſtretched out his arme againſt the Realme of Egypt, that ſtately & excellent Realme, ỹ realme ſo renoumed, wherein all the wiſedome of the world was incloſed, inſomuch ỹ hee hath made more account of your welfare, than of ỹ Realme. Sith it is ſo, know ye that it is not for you to glory any more of your ſelues, but to glorie onely of him. Aſſure your ſelues ỹ looke howe manie benefits you haue receiued at his hand, ſo many records haue you to be wray your lewdnes and vnthankfulnes, if ye acknowledge them not vnto him. And ſo by the example that is ſet vs downe here, let vs learne to acknowledge gods gratious goodnes, & to lay it vp in minde, and to make a good memorial thereof, & to call it often to remembrance, that wee may be prouoked thereby to yeld al glory vnto God, & to confeſſe that for our parts we be fillie and wretched creatures, in whom there is nothing but condemnation, and therefore there belongeth nothing to vs but wrath, & it is only God to whom all the glory & praiſe of our welfare perteyneth. Wherefore let it ſuffice vs that he is ours, and that hauing giuen himſelf vnto vs, he vouchſafeth alſo to make his benefits common vnto vs. Rom. 8.30.

Nowe let vs fall downe in the preſence of our good God, with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to make vs to perceiue them throughly, and that therwithal we may ſo know the greatnes of his maieſtie, as it may moue vs to ſubmit our ſelues to the obeying of him, and draw vs to ſuch ſubiection, as we may frame our ſelues to his wil, and bee no more intangled and wrapped in worldly things; but that we may bee ſo rid of them, as all our ſeeking may be to dedicate our ſelues wholy vnto him, ỹ he may acknowledge & accept vs for his people, & haue his hād alwayes ſtretched out to ſuccor vs at our neede. And that in the meane while we may patiently beare al the aduerſities that he ſhall ſende vs for the tryal of our obedience, & ſo apply our ſelues thereunto, as wee may not fayle to take comfort in his goodnes, and to reſt vppon the ſame, til he haue made vs to feele ỹ things perfectly, whereof hee hath giuen vs a taſt alreadie in this tranſitorie life. That it may pleaſe him to grant this grace, not onely to vs, but alſo to al people & nations of the earth. &c.

On Wednesday the xviij of September. 1555.

The Lxxiiii. Sermon, in which the laſt verſe of the tenth Chapter is expounded, and this is the firſt Sermon vpon the eleuenth Chapter.

22 Thy fathers went downe into Egypt, in number threeſcore and ten ſoules: and now the Lord thy God hath made thee in multitude as the ſtars of the skie.

The eleuenth Chapter.

LOue the Lorde thy God therefore, and keepe his appointmentes, Ordinances, Lawes, and Commaundementes for euer.

2 And conſider you this day (for I ſpeake not to your children which haue neither knowen nor ſeene[them])the inſtruction of the Lord your God, his greatneſſe, his mightie hande, and his ſtretched out arme,

3 And his wonders and workes which hee did in the middes of Egypt, vnto Pharao king of Egypt and all his Land:

4 And what he did to the hoſt of the Egyptians, vnto their horſes & Chariots, when the Lord brought the waters of the read ſea vpon their faces when they purſued you, and how the Lord deſtroyed them vnto this day.

HAue alreadie ſhewed ỹ meaning of Moſes, how that by rehearſinge ỹ wonders ỹ GOD had wrought for the deliuering of his people out of captiuity he ſhewed the Iewes that they ought to haue bin the more conformable to him, in reſpect of the fauor and loue which he had ſhewed to them at al times. For he had alwayes ſhewed by his doings, that his promiſing to take Abraham & all his ofspring into his protection, was not in vain. Ye ſee then an euident proofe ỹ God hauing receiued Abrahams ofspring into his free fauour, hath alſo confirmed it by deedes & experience. And thereupon it is to be concluded, that if that people had not beene altogether froward, they ought of reaſon to haue ſerued God. And that is the point that Moſes ſhot at. Conſider with your ſelues (ſaith he) if ye be not bounde to giue your ſelues wholy to the obeying of your God. For he hath multiplied you as the ſtars of the ſkie. Through his gratious goodnes you are become ſo great a nũber, ỹ euen you your ſelues may be aſtoniſhed at it. To be ſhort, if ye look vpõ your body, ỹ is to ſay your ſtate; you cãnot but ſee ſuch a wõderful fauor of your God, as you could neuer haue once looked for or hoped. Sith it is ſo, there is now no excuſe for you if you cannot find in your hartes to glorifie his name, ſeeing he hath ſhewed him ſelfe ſo good & merciful towards you. That is ỹ ſũme of ỹ matter ỹ Moſes intended to ſet down.

Gen. 15. 5.

And he ſpeaketh expreſly of the ſtars of the skie, becauſe of the promiſe. For God ſpeaking to his ſeruãt Abrahã, ſhewed him in a viſion ỹ multitude of the ſtars, which is infinite. Euen as they be paſt reckening (ſaith god) ſo alſo ſhal thy ſeed be. Now then the meaning of Moſes in this text is, ỹ Gods ſaying ſo was not in vain, & that Abraham was not diſappointed of his hope in reſting altogether vpon ỹ promiſe: for we ſee the thing performed before our eies. And this is wel worth the noting. For if God haue done vs any good, we wil indeed for maners ſake ſay it was he ỹ did it: but to be throughly perſuaded of it in our hart, that is a very hard thing. Therefore is it requiſit in reſpect of ſuch rudenes, ỹ we ſhould be cõdemned by Gods word, to the end we may ỹ better conſider of his hand & power. As for example: if we had neuer read any whit of holy ſcripture, & yet notwithſtanding god ſhould haue deliuered vs frõ ſome aduerſitie: to ſay ỹ truth, our own naturall wit would put vs in mind, to think our ſelues indetted to God for ỹ ſame: But when we be exerciſed in the holy ſcriptures, and haue ſeene there ỹ God reſerueth to himſelf the iſſues of death, & that it is in him to ſuccor vs, yea euẽ after a ſtrange faſhion when al ſeemeth to be vterly forlorne; ſo as if we call vpon him, he will heare our ſighes: the performance therfore maketh it the eaſier for vs to conceiue his goodnes, bicauſe we be taught aforehand, the ſame things which we come to find by experience. For why? The word ỹ went afore, is as a lampe to giue vs light. Of our owne nature we be as it were blind. True it is that God inlighteneth vs by his holy ſpirit: but yet are we ſtill in darknes & cannot ſee two fingers bredth afore vs. But whẽ God teacheth vs by his word; ỹ is as a lampe to guide vs & ſhew vs our way. Therfore let vs marke well ỹ to profit our ſelues by the benefits ỹ God beſtoweth vpõ vs, it is good, yea & nedful for vs to be put in mind of his promiſes, & to compare thẽ together God had promiſed it; & now he hath performed it: here we ſee a teſtimony ỹ he is alwaies faithful in his ſayings, & ỹ a man may ſafely reſt vpõ his truth. That is ỹ thing which Moſes ſheweth vs in this text, text, in that he ſpeaketh not ſimply of the great multitude whereinto the people had bin increaſed, but alſo ſaith ỹ God had multiplied them as the ſtars of the skie, to the intent that euery mã ſhould think vpon ỹ promiſe which was vniuerſally knowen among them, & thereby confirme themſelues, inaſmuch as God had ſo kept touch with his ſeruãt Abraham: & euery man conſider thus in himſelf, Indeed we ought to receiue gods ſimple & ſingle word, although the effecte of it were not ſeene. But now that Gods hande & his mouth go iointly together, ſo as hẽ hath ſhewed a true proofe of his preſẽce before our eyes, and that he meant not to diſappoint the hope of his ſeruants; we know ỹ our God hath a care of vs, & forgat vs not at ſuch time as we were in the land of Egypt. For ỹ time of the peoples abode there was as a kinde of buriall in their graues, ſo as it might haue ſeemed ỹ all Gods promiſes had bin quite daſhed. Whẽ he drew Abraham out of the land ỹ he was borne in, he ſaid vnto him, I giue

Gen. 12, 7. thee al this land frõ one ſide to another, to thee & to thine ofspring for euer. And yet for al this, yee ſee howe Abraham did but ſoiourne there as a ſtrãger: he was hunted & faine to fleet frõ place to place, & he trotted vp and downe like a poore Hebr. 11. 9. man that had not a corner to hide him in. The like befel to his ſonne Iſaac, Iacob was baniſhed thence during al the flower of his youth, & when he returned thither againe, hee was faine to remoue oftentimes in his old age, and in the ende God conueied him away into Egypt. Thus was ỹ houſe as it were broken vp & cleane baniſhed out of the countrie. And where is the lande of Chanaan which was the heritage ỹ God had promiſed thẽ? They were bereft of it. Indeed Iacob cauſed his body to bee conueied thither againe when he was dead: but yet did the people abide ſtill in Egypt, & god ſeemed to haue mocked thẽ in ſaying, ye ſhal inherit this land. But when god brought them again out of the captiuitie & cruell tyranny wherein they were, it was as a riſing again frõ the dead, & as a taking of them againe out of their graues. So then, ỹ people are exhorted in this text, to vnderſtand that they ought to impute this redemption of theirs to the promiſe that had beene made long time before.

And we on our ſide haue generally a very profitable leſſon: which is this. As oft as we fal aſleep and minde not Gods benefits ſo ſufficiently as might make vs to perceiue his working & power: we muſt reſort to his promiſes, ỹ they may be as a light vnto vs to ſhew vs the good way. Let that ſerue for one point. And now by the way, we ſee how God vttered his power in multiplying the people after ỹ faſhion. For who would haue looked that of threeſcore & ten perſõs there ſhould haue iſſued ſeuenhundred thouſand & aboue? It is incredible (if wee looke no further than to the courſe of nature) ỹ in three hũdred yeres, threeſcore & ten perſons ſhold increaſe & multiply to ſo great a number. Had there come of them ten thouſand or twentie thouſand, it might wel haue bin imputed to the courſe of nature. But when it came to a hundred thouſande, or a two or three hundred thouſand, yea & to ſo huge a number as ſeuen hundred thouſand; al men muſt needes be abaſhed at it, & it was not to be thought ỹ euer it could haue bin poſſible. But we muſt not meſure Gods power by our wit: for it was his wil to work after that ſtrange & vnaccuſtomed faſhion, that men might be driuen to think it to be his worke. For if God worke after an ordinary maner ẅ vs, we be ſo vnthankful, ỹ we take the thing to happen by chance, or by our own policie, or by ſome mans fauor, or other meane which we haue foũd in ỹ world: & we bereaue God continually of his honour. In deed we wil not ſay ỹ we purpoſe any ſuch thing; nay, we proteſt the cleane contrarie: but yet for al ỹ, men are ſo wickedly giuen, ỹ they alwaies deface Gods power & goodneſſe to the vttermoſt ỹ they can. God therfore is faine to bring vs perforce to the acknowledging of his works, ſo as we muſt be compelled to confeſſe ỹ it is he which helpeth & ſuccoureth vs. Let vs mark wel then, ỹ when he multiplied his people after ỹ ſort, he meant to work a myracle that had neuer bin looked for, to the intent ỹ men ſhould no more doubt that it was he that ſpake vnto Abraham, & that he had not in vain promiſed him to become ỹ defẽder of him & of al his ofspring. Nowadais there ar a ſort of ſkoffers, who to make al things doubtful, wil cauil after this maner; Is it poſſible ỹ in ſo ſhort a ſpace of time, threeſcore & ten perſons ſhould grow to ſo huge a number as ſeauen hundred thouſand? Is it poſſible? Yea, & if that people had bin increaſed but after an ordinarie maner, what would they ſay then? Came not this of other men? & ſhould we then ſay that god gouerneth vs? Why? ỹ order of nature afordeth as much. After ỹ maner would the mockers prate. And therby we ſee the lewdnes ỹ is in mẽ. For if God goe not beyond the ordinarie courſe of nature, they haue no ſight at al to diſcerne his hand, but (to their ſeeming) it is fortune or their own wiſdom, or ſome inferior meane of ỹ world. And on the other ſide, if God lift vp his mighty hand, & do a thing beyond mans capacitie, and ſuch as men would haue thought coulde neuer haue bin done: then wil they ſay, how coms this to paſſe? And they could find in their harts euen to deface gods power quite & clean, vnder color ỹ it ſurmounteth their reaſon & capacity. But for our part, let vs learne to do god ſo much honor, (for ſo hee well deſerueth) as not to iudge of his workes after our own fancy ſpecially when they be miraculous.

And here wee haue as it were a looking glaſſe, wherein to ſee how God raiſeth vp his Church, according alſo to this his ſpeaking of it by his prophet Eſay, Loke backe to the quarrie of ſtone Eſa. 51. 1, 2. (ſaith he) whereout of ye were hewen, haue: n eye to the womb of your mother Sara. Loke vpõ Abraham your father: was not he alone? yes, & yet haue I now made you manie in number, as ỹ thing it ſelfe declareth. In that place God likeneth Saraes womb to a quarrie of ſtone. See here (ſaith he) from whence ye be come. Howe is it poſſible that ſuch a multitude of people as you be nowe growen vnto, ſhoulde be drawen out of one quarrie of ſtone? And yet notwithſtanding, from thence haue I fetched you, all of you are come come from out of that ſpring. For as for your father Abraham, what was hee? A fillie olde man forworne and broken with yeares. Who would haue looked for ſuch a people from out of him? Nowe then, learne to knowe that it is I which haue ſo multiplied you, and that you bee beholden to me, for al that euer you haue. Thus ye ſee ỹ the thing which we haue to gather, is that whē God calleth his Church & giueth it a being, his working is after ſuch a ſort in that behalfe, that (as ſaith Saint Paul in the firſt chapter of the firſt Epiſtle to the Corinthians) it may well be ſaide that it is he of whom wee haue our being. And his meaning is not that wee were but created of him as mortall men onely: but that he hath gathered vs together to bee his people, and that he was inclined to the doing thereof, without anie likelihoode giuen on our behalfe. Therefore let vs firſt and foremoſt beare well in minde, to be as it were aſtoniſhed at the power that God hath ſhewed, ſo as wee may reuerence the thing that paſſeth our ſmall capacitie. And therewithal let vs vnderſtand, that the maner of Gods raiſing vp of his Church, is, that where nothing was afore, but men reckened that all ſhoulde haue gone to wracke: there men are at their wits end to ſee howe thinges fall out cleane contrarie, as we finde by often experience. True it is that the people which receiue the doctrine of the Goſpell, are but a handefull in compariſon of them that refuſe it: but yet was it not thought, that thinges ſhoulde euer haue ſpred ſo farre abroad as they haue doone. For when God ſtirred vp the poore Frier, yea euen out of a Cloyſter or Cel: who woulde haue thought, that from thence the Goſpell ſhoulde haue beene ſpredde farre and wide, and that ſo manie folke woulde haue ſubmitted themſelues vnto it? Againe we ſee that although the whole worlde haue cōſpired to oppreſſe this doctrine, and that the power of the enemies thereof bee ſuch, as they be like enough to ſwallow it vp quite and clean: yet doth not God ceaſe to augment his Church ſtil continually. It is ſeene what crueltie is executed againſt al her children: & yet notwithſtāding ſhe holdeth on ſtil. Seeing then that in our time God hath gone beyonde all hope and all imagination of man: let vs vnderſtand that hee hath renewed the remembrance of that which is ſpoken here by Moſes: namely that out of nothing, it hath pleaſed him to raiſe vp a kingdom to himſelfe in this worlde, inſomuch that at this day there is as great a nūber of his, as euer there was at anie time. If a man compare the children of Abraham, with ſuch as haue ſome knowledge of the Goſpell nowadayes, it is certaine that the number of the preſent ſort is farre the greater. And therefore let vs learne to magnifie ỹ goodnes & power of our God. And to the end ỹ Gods glory may be the greater, let vs vnderſtand that we come vp of nothing, & let it be conſidered ỹ it is he which hath ſtretched out his hand, ſo as al muſt be fathered vpō him, and he muſt be acknowledged to be the author of all. Thus ye ſee what we haue to marke vpon that place.

Furthermore the people are warned, not to glorie of their owne greatnes, as if it were ſaide, whatſoeuer you poſſeſſe, you haue obteined it at Gods hand, and therefore doe him homage for it with al humilitie. Therefore whenſoeuer our Lord increaſeth vs, ſo as we haue greater proſperitie than we looked for: let it not blinde vs, nor ſhut vp our eyes, but let vs alwayes remember to haue our eyes vppon Gods hand, who had promiſed to haue pitie vpon vs, & hath alſo ſhewed vs it by experience. And ſo ye ſee in effect what we haue to marke, where Moſes ſpeaketh of the increaſe of ỹ church. For like as God raiſeth vp a people where none was to be ſeene afore: ſo alſo is it his will to repaire his church again with his owne hande. And to be ſhort, the holy ſcripture ſheweth vs, ỹ foraſmuch as the Church is ỹ ſpiritual kingdom of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: he wil alſo worke after a maruellous faſhion, when ỹ caſe concerneth ỹ preſeruation thereof. Therfore let vs truſt in him by all meanes. Let vs not doubte but ỹ he which multiplyed ỹ offſpring of Abrahā as the ſtars of the skie, is as wel able to do ỹ like with vs ſtil at this day: & therfore let vs not be afraid but that God can wel skil how to ſet vp his Church again, when it ſeemeth at ỹ point to be vtterly ouerthrowen. And this is accompliſhed cheefly in our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, as the ſcripture ſheweth vs. For al ỹ euer was before his cōming was but a ſhadow of ỹ things ỹ are nowadayes in their perfection. Therfore when ỹ whole world Col.2.17. ſeemeth vnto vs to be vtterly voide of beleeuers & that al is forlorne & as a waſt wildernes, let vs loke vp to ỹ ſtars of heauen, & both conſider and hope ỹ our Lord which did once raiſe vp ſo huge a multitude out of threeſcore & ten perſons, can likwiſe do aſmuch for his church at this day. And when he hath done it, let it not be vnto vs as a dreame, but let vs be amaſed & aſtoniſhed at it, foraſmuch as it ſhal haue ſurmoūted our natural wit and reaſon. But let vs come now to ỹ concluſion ỹ Moſes maketh. Therefore loue the Lorde your God, keepe his Lawes, his ſtatutes, his cōmandementes, his rights, & his ordinances, euē for euer. Hereby we be done to vnderſtand, ỹ when wee once knowe Gods grace, we muſt bee the more inflamed to giue our ſelues wholy to the ſeruing of him, accordingly as S. Paul found not a more vehement Rom.12.1. & effectual perſwaſiō, than ỹ ſame wherehe ſaith, Brethren I beſech ye & adiure ye by the pitie & mercie which God hath ſhewed towardes you. Becauſe S. Paul ſaw men ſlow & negligent, yea & ỹ euen the faithfull, (for it is they to whō he directeth his doctrine) haue need to be quickened vp & pricked forward: therfore to giue the more liuelines to his exhortatiō, he taketh this for his ground, & ſaith: brethren, I beſech ye by ỹ mercifulnes of God. As if hee ſhould ſay how harde harted ſoeuer you be, yet muſt ỹ great number of ỹ gratious good turnes which God hath done for you, haue ſome power to mone you, & to ſet your harts on fire. Were your harts as cold as ice, yet muſt you needs be moued, & you cannot but feele how gratious and liberall your God hath ſhewed himſelfe towards you. Nowe therefore whenſoeuer we finde not our ſelues ſufficiently diſpoſed to ſerue God, but ỹ we be held back and hinhindred by the vanities of this world, and by our own fleshly lusts, let vs put this saying of S. Pauls in vre: & when we be intangled in our delightes, let vs come backe again & say: what? Shal God haue lost his labor in shewing himself so good towards vs? & shal we become vnprofitable people towards him? We be his Vineyarde, and he hath dressed vs, & we bring him forth no fruit but wild sower & bitter fruit, such as were able to choke one: & shal we by our naughtines defeat ỹ grace that God hath shewed towardes vs? After such manner ought euery of vs to rebuke himselfe, when we liue not as we ought to do. But when in steed of going forward, we go back, or els lie weltring in our own idlenes: let vs bethink vs of gods benefits, & keepe a register or booke of remembrance of them: & therupon fal to concluding ỹ there remaineth no excuse for vs, if we make not some acknowledgement vnto God, of ỹ mercie ỹ he hath shewed towards vs. That was the thing ỹ Moses amed at. Therfore loue ỹ lord your god (saith he) seeing you know him to be such a one.

And further besides ỹ thing that we haue sene alreadie; which is ỹ the true performance of the law beginneth at the louing of God: here Moses telleth vs. ỹ Gods intent is not to be feared like a prince ỹ desires no more but to haue his subiects to stand in awe of him, & therfore will not suffer any man so much as once to quetch against him, but wil haue thē to do al ỹ he cōmādeth thē: but ỹ God cōmeth to vs after a more louing maner. Truly if we consider wel what the princes of the earth are, they be but smoke or verie wormes of ỹ earth: but yet are they to be honored, bicause god hath printed his marke vpon thē. Albeit ỹ they be nothing of thēselues: yet are they so ful of pride, ỹ their subiects must be faine to put it vp quietly at their hands, though they would set their feete vpō the throtes of them. And they be so far of frō considering themselues to be shepherds or herdmen, or to owe any duetie or good demeanor towards their people: ỹ to their owne seeming, the world was created alonly for themselues. They passe not for meeke & quiet reuerence: but they wil needs haue an inforced & constreined bondage. But behold, Our God whose maiestie is so great, ỹ euen the Angels of heauen are faine to Iob. 41. 16. sinke vnder it, euen he I say stoopeth downe vnto vs, & saith, loue me. He could haue said, stand in feare of me, & trēble at my speech, or else ye shal feele that there is such a glory in mee, as ye must needes be ouerwhelmed by it. Nay, he vseth no such spech, but saith: true it is ỹ I am to be feared, for I haue soueraine dominion ouer heauen and earth, & therefore it is not for any man to dalie with me as with his fellow, for if he be so malapert with me, he cannot but go away with confusion. Now then, my desire is ỹ men should reuerence me: but yet would I also ỹ you should come familiarly vnto me, & ỹ ye should come boldly as to your father. And ỹ is the cause why I require loue at your hands as the cheefest thing ỹ I like best of. Loue me therefore, & shew your selues to beare me hartie good wil. For my mind is not to draw you to me by constraint of feare, my mind is not to rule ye like Oxen & asses. My intent is to hold ye as my children, without exercising anie tyrannical lordlines ouer you. I would haue but a fatherly authority ouer you, & ỹ you likewise should serue me with a childly loue, & giue your selues wholy & obediently vnto me. Thus see ye ỹ two points which we haue to note in Moseses concluding, ỹ the people shold loue ỹ euerlasting their God. For if we will performe gods law well, we must first & formost loue him before al things 10 Wel may we be busie with our feet & hands, so as we shalbe blameles before men: & yet shal all be nothing, except God possesse our affections, and ỹ we serue him with a good wil, & with a free and vnfeined hart. That is the one point. The other is, ỹ we must vnderstand how God appleth himself to vs, & fashioneth himself to our capacitie, in that his wil is not ỹ we should stand in feare & terror of him, but ỹ we should take him for our father, according to his calling of vs, which is 20 so gentle and so full of allurement, as though he would set vs in his lap, because he hath adopted vs to bee his children. That is the effect of the things which we haue to remember here.

Now as touching that Moses addeth, that men should keepe gods obseruāces, his statutes, his iudgemēts, his rights, his ordinances, his cōmandements, & his decrees: I haue declared already here tofore why he setteth downe so many words. For it had been enough for him to haue said shortly, Keep the cōmandemēts of your god; you haue his law, which 30 is the certain rule, hold your selues to ỹ. But Moses thinking it not inough to haue spokē simply after ỹ maner, to the intent to expresse the contents of the law, & what doctrine we haue to gather therof, setteth downe Statutes, cōmandements, rights, ordinances, & obseruances. And why is that? To doe vs to vnderstand, that there we haue the ful perfection of al holines. We know ỹ in al ages men haue bin tickleheaded: & that their failing 40 to serue god simply & purely, hath sprong of this that euery man would needs be casting of some peece or collup of his own making, to the things that God had commanded. And thereof come al the superstitions that are at this day in ỹ worlde. The very ground (say I) from whence al the diuelish superstitions wherewith gods seruice hath beene corrupted, is that men haue not thought it enough to haue obserued the things that God commanded, vnles euery man added somewhat 50 more of his owne deuising. But now God to hold his people in awe, saith thus: In my law ye haue rights, ordinances, statutes, &c. And to be short, whē ye haue throughly examined the rule ỹ I haue giuen you, ye shal find it perfect & without want of any thing. Therefore play not the loose colts: but be contēted to serue me simply, according to my will: & ad not any thing of your own braine. Ye see then ỹ as wel in this text as in other without nūber, (for ye shal find at ỹ lest two hundred 60 of the like) Moses indeuoreth to magnifie Gods law, to the intent ỹ men should not esteeme it to be of vnsufficiēt authority, or but as able to teach vs by halfes: but ỹ they should know it to be their duty to hold thēselues wholy to it, so submitting thēselues to ỹ same, as they may giue ouer their own wit, & not take vpō them to be wise in their opinion, but

but onely aunſwere: Let GOD bee obeyed,
1.Chro.16. 36. according to the praiers which he hath cõmanded folke to make with this ſolemne proteſtation Amen, ſo as there may not be any replying at all to ỹ which God hath once vttered with his mouth. And that is the verie cauſe why the word Keepe, is ſet downe here. For men wil needs haue manie things to keep, and they beare thẽſelues in hand, that they haue kept the law very well, after what faſhion ſo euer it be. But our Lord telleth vs that we haue things enough to keep and to obſerue, in following his lawe, ſo as we neede not to adde any thing to it.

Furthermore to the intent ỹ the people may be the more moued, Moſes confirming here the matter ỹ we heard euen now, ſaith thus: Bethinke you therfore: for it is not ſpoken to your children which haue neither ſeen nor heard of it, but to you your ſelues which are witneſſes of the great myracles, mightfull workes, and tokens which God ſhewed in bringing you out of the land of Egypt, and ſpecially in your paſſing of the read ſea, where he wroughs with a wõderful power. For what a thing was it ỹ the ſea ſhronk aſide to make you way to paſſe through it? And that afterward it ſwallowed vp al your enemies, that followed you with ſo great puiſſance, ỹ you thought your ſelues vtterly vndone? You haue ſeen thoſe thinges with your eyes ſaith he. What a thing were it then, if ye ſhould forget ſuch wonderfull workes of God, and ſuffer them to vaniſh away? Might it be imputed to any ignorance? No, but to vnthankefulnes, & it were malicious ſpitefulnes for you to tread the thinges ſo vnder foote, which God hath ſhewed vnto you.

And wheras he ſaith. It is not ſpoke to your childrẽ which haue neither ſeen nor heard of it: He meaneth ỹ he ſpeaketh not of thẽ as ſhal be ſpoken afterward. True it is that at this day when we reade the ſtorie of the deliuerance that was wrought at that time, we ought to be moued at it. For it is an euerlaſting euidence of the care which God hath had of his Church. And in ỹ ſame we haue a liuely picture to ſhew vs how God draweth vs as it were out of the dungeon and gulf of death, by choſing vs to be of his houſe, and therefore it behoueth vs to make our profit of the thinges that were done then, although we ſaw them not. But here Moſes reaſoneth thus by compariſon. If I ſpeake to your children (ſaith he) yet were it their dutie to make their profit of ỹ things which they were taught: and although they haue not ſeene the things with their eyes, yet ought this recording of them, to do them good. But as for you, ye ought to be better aduiſed in taking heed to the things ỹ God hath ſhewed you. For your thankleſneſſe is dubble, & much forer ſhal your condemnation be, if you profit not by thẽ. What can ye alledge for your ſelues, if ye giue not your ſelues whollie to the magnifying of ſuch grace, that is to ſay if ye honor not God, ſeing he hath bought you ſo dearly, and ſhewed that he ſetteth ſo great ſtore by your welfare? Seeing that God hath ſhewed himſelfe to be ſuch a one towardes you, what is your dutie? Here we be put in mind that when our Lord hath made vs to find fauour by experience, if we profit not by it to ſerue him with the better courage and earneſter zeale, it muſt of neceſſitie come to account, & wee muſt looke for more horrible damnation in reward of ſuch vnthãkfulnes. But now let vs ſee what we become the better by gods benefits. Hath it not bin ſufficiently ſeene & perceiued in our time, how he hath helped vs at our neede, & howe he hath ſtretched out his mightie hande? If euery man would acknowledge for his own part, how many waies god hath ſhewed himſelf boũtiful towards him, ſurely we ſhould be at our wits end. Againe, let vs loke vpõ the ſtate of ỹ Church in generall. Hath not godwrought after ſuch a fort on al ſides in our daies, as if we be not very monſters, or at leaſtwiſe worſe than bruit beaſts, we muſt needs perceiue by his miracles, ỹ he ment to ſhew here how he reigneth in heauẽ? But now let vs ſe how euery of vs is ſtirred vp therby, to ſerue him. Nay it ſhould ſeeme we ſeeke nothing elſe but towels to hid our eyes withal, and ỹ we beleeue not the thinges which are & ought to be moſt apparant to vs. Yet was not this doctrine vttred to no end. For if God haue ſhewed vs by his deeds, that he dwelleth amõg vs, & haue reached out his hand frõ heauen, to proue ỹ all power belongeth vnto him, and ỹ he wilbe ỹ ſauior of his church, & yet we beleeue it not, but play ỹ blind buſſards, and turne our backs vpon him, ſhutting our eyes wilfully when we ſhould take moſt heed to cõſider in what wiſe ỹ Lord hath ſhewed himſelfe to be ỹ father & ſauior, both of our ſelues & of al ỹ are his: what excuſe will there be for vs? Ye ſee then here is a leſſon ỹ toucheth vs. For if euer God vttered himſelfe: ſurely we of our time haue ſeene ſuch deeds of his, as are worthy of remẽbrance. And whẽ men ſhal reherſe thẽ a hundred yeres hereafter, (if ỹ world indure ſo long) it is certain ỹ they ſhal ſerue to make them aſhamed ỹ ſhall haue heard thẽ ſpoken of, ſo we may wel ſay, (as is ſaid by ỹ prophets) ỹ the ſtrãgenes of thẽ ſhal make their eares to glow ỹ ſhal heare of thẽ: for ỹ is ỹ maner of ſpeech which the Prophets vſe in ſuch caſes. And we haue ſeene theſe things, and had experience of them. Now if ỹ report of them in time to come, ought to moue ỹ people ỹ ſhalbe then: although they ſhall haue had none other knowledge of thẽ: ought not we much rather to be moued by them now preſently? Ought they not to pearce our hearts? Muſt not Satan needes haue vtterly ſotted vs, whẽ after ſuch perceiuing of gods benefits & power, we ſee nothing at all, but go on ſtil & conceiue nothing? Is ſuch blockiſhnes to be borne with? No verily. And therefore let vs bethink ourſelues, & conſider wel how god hath wrought in gathering vs together, & in that we can worſhip him purely as he requireth. Who is he, (be he a citizen borne or a ſtranger,) which hath not cauſe to ſay, lo how my god hath ſo vttered himſelfe to mee, as if I had ſeene his hand come downe from heauen to me in ſome viſible ſhape? For what hope had they which are here townſmen borne, to be either in libertie, or to be but euẽ a mean people? Inſomuch as it ſeemed ỹ al ſhould haue gone to wrack, & come to vtter ruine ere this time. As touching ỹ Goſpel, this citie was but a helliſh gulfe of ſuperſtitions

and diueliſhnes,(as was to be ſeen euerywhere) and al maner of abuſes,ydolatries & practiſes of Satan did ſo reigne in it,as there was no likelyhood that euer there ſhold haue bin any roome for Gods grace. And therefore thoſe whom God hath viſited ſo louingly, and to whom hee hath vouchſafed to come home into their houſes to ſeeke them out,haue good cauſe to glorifie him. And as for them ẏ are come out of forrein countries,and are gathered together here as it were into one flocke; what can they ſay, but that our Lord hath performed ẏ thing towardes them at this day, which he ſpake ſo long ago by his prophet Eſay,namely that he would make charyots and wagons trotte apace through the world, to bring folke from al coaſts to ſerue & worſhip him in his Church? Nowe then if we looke not vp at ſuch things; ſurely it wilbe no excuſe or ſhift for vs,to ſay: I thought not on theſe things,becauſe they were not knowen to me:for God ſheweth vs thē apparantly ynough,ſo as we need but to opē our eyes to ſee them. Thus ye ſee how we ought to practiſe this leſſon nowadays, where it is ſaid, I ſpeake not to your children which might reply that they neuer ſawe nor heard of theſe things. For looke what you ought to know as cōcerning Gods power, he hath done you to vnderſtand it by his deeds.

Eſa 2.3. Ier.17.25.

And now by the way let vs be contented with the experience which we haue had of the goodneſſe and power of our God,in his redeeming of vs from ẏ endles confuſion wherin we be al born in Adam. For what is our original? Whence doth God draw vs when he vouchſafeth to haue vs to be of his flock? Frō our mothers womb we bring nothing with vs but vtter curſednes: we be heires of endleſſe death: wee be forlorne & damned: if God ſhould iudge vs after our deſerts, he ſhould needs be our enemy and aduerſary,and imploy all his power againſt vs. Now if our nature be ſo graceleſſe & frowarde, that as long as it beareth ſway in vs,it bendeth it ſelfe againſt God: muſt we not needs alſo wage battel againſt him? Yes: for looke how many luſts be in vs, ſo many defiances are there, as if our purpoſe were to arme him to vengeance againſt vs. Yet notwithſtanding it hath pleaſed him to pull vs backe. When God taketh vs ſo to him to be his people and of his houſhold, it is more than was his deliuering of the Iewes out of the thraldome of Egypt. For that was but a figure of this redemption that is wrought by our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. For his deliuering of vs is not from thraldom to ſome earthly & mortal prince: but from the gulf of hel,& from Satans bonds. Where doth God take vs,when he vouchſafeth to call vs to him, & to make vs feele his grace? Muſt ſome meſſenger be faine to bring vs newes from farre? Let euery of vs looke vpon himſelfe, and we ſhall finde that as in reſpect of our ſelues, our ſtate is nothing but eternal death. Therefore to applie this doctrine to our vſe, wee muſt vnderſtand ẏ when God calleth any of vs to him, it is more than if hee had rid vs out of all the bondages and ſlaueries of this worlde, yea euen of the cruelleſt that could bee indured. Let vs know that: and alſo let vs apply our ſelues aduiſedly to the cōſidering of Gods works: for that is the thing whereto the ſcripture bringeth vs, to make vs perceiue the benefites that he hath beſtowed vpon vs, that wee may fare the better by them. And it is alſo a way to bring vs to ẏ knowing of God, and to prouoke vs not onely to worſhip him as our God, and to make vs ſtoope vnder his glorious maieſtie: but alſo to beare him ſuch a childly loue, as to come vnto him willingly, and to yeelde him ſuch reuerence, as he may accept vs and auow vs to bee his, for our Lorde Ieſus Chriſts ſake.

Now let vs caſt our ſelues downe before the heauenly throne of our good God, acknowledging our wretched ſinfulnes, ẏ we may be wholly caſt downe before him: & yet notwithſtanding, praying him to vouchſafe to admit vs in ẏ name of our lord Ieſus Chriſt, ſo as we may not be ſhakē off at his hand, though we be worthy of it, but rather ẏ he beare with vs of his infinite goodnes, vntil he haue conueied vs quite & cleane out of this world, & clothed vs againe with his owne righteouſnes, & with ẏ perfection which he hath promiſed vs. And ſo let vs ſay, Almighty god &c.

The Lxxv. Sermon which is the ſecond vpon the eleuenth Chapter.

5 And what hee did for you in the wilderneſſe, vntill yee came vnto this place:

6 And what hee did to Dathan and Abyram the ſonnes of Eliab the ſonne of Ruben: how the earth opened her throte, and ſwallowed them vp with their houſeholdes and Tentes, and with all the ſubſtance that was vnder their feete, in the middes of all Iſraell.

7 For your eyes haue ſeene all the greate workes of the Lord which hee hath doone.

8 Therfore keepe all the commaundementes which I commaund you this day, that yee may bee ſtrong and goe in and poſſeſſe the Land, whereunto you goe to poſſeſſe it.

WE haue ſeene heretofore howe Moſes hath tolde vs, that ſuch as haue bin witneſſes of Gods wonders, are much leſſe to bee excuſed than ſuch as haue but only heard ỹ things by report, and haue not ſeene them with their eyes. For when God hath beene ſo gracious vnto vs as to ſhewe vs his power to our faces; it muſt needs be that we bee too blockiſh, if wee bee not mindfull therof. When our children ſhal but heare of it, it ſhal becom thé to be moued at it: & what ought then to bee done in the very preſentneſſe of the things? Hitherto Moſes hath ſhewed after what manner God had delt with his people through his goodnes, for he had behaued himſelfe as an vtter enemie to ỹ Realme of Egypt, to ſhew him ſelfe to be the ſauiour of the linage of Abraham. It is a benefite that ought to bee very highly eſteemed, when God chooſeth vs after that ſort to be his: which is not for any worthines that he findeth in vs, but of his owne onely goodnes, in that he vouchſafeth to prefer vs before others, ſo that although we bee no better than they, yet he taketh part with vs, and fighteth for vs at our neede. If folke doe trouble and torment vs, and God be alway ready to ſuccour vs; is it not ſuch a bond, as if we keepe it not vnbroken, the verie world may condemn our malicious frowardneſs? Nowe after he hath ſpoken of the wonders that were wrought in Egypt, & in the paſſing of the red ſea, he telleth them briefly, thas they ought to conſider well how God handled them in the wilderneſſe. And vnder that ſpeech hee comprehendeth the thing which we haue ſeene expounded heretofore: that is to wit, both ỹ great number of benefits which they had receiued at Gods hand, and alſo his chaſtiſements: for both of them ought to teach vs to feare God, & to walk in his wayes. If he do vs good, it is to draw vs to him by gentlenes, ỹ we ſhould worſhip him. And if he correct vs for our faults, it is to meeké vs, ỹ we may learn to beare his yoke, & to ſerue him as becommeth vs. Moſes therefore comprehendeth here both twain of them: As if he ſhould ſay, Seeing ỹ God hath fed you ẅ Manna, without any trauell or labor of your own; ought ye not to giue your ſelues al wholy to ỹ ſeruing of him? If a mortal man had kept you in his houſe & maintained you ẅ foode & apparel, ſhould ye not be ſo bound vnto him, as your whole life might bee anſwerable to ſuch a benefite? Behold, God hath maintained you in ỹ wildernes, by ſending you Manna from heauen. Now then if ye ſhold forget ſuch a gracious good turne, what an offence were it? Nay, he hath not only ſent you Manna: but he hath alſo preſerued your garmẽts, ſo as thei haue not bin marred nor outworne by ỹ ſpace of forty yeares together. He hath ſhewed himſelf to be your guide in ỹ night, in giuing you a viſible ſign by fire: & he hath kept you likewiſe a day times from ỹ heate of ỹ ſun, by ſpreading his clouds ouer you. In al ſorts he hath tendered you as much as was poſſible. When ye were thirſty, he made water to come guſhing out of ỹ rock that was dry before. To be ſhort, he left nothing vndone, wherby he might ſhew himſelf a louing & liberal father towards you. Now then what can you leſſe do, than yeeld your ſelues to ỹ obeying of him? Again, remember what he did, when ye murmured againſt him for your fonde luſts ſake. Did ye not then feele his heauy hand for your labor? When ye required fleſh, indeede he ſent it you; but he made ye to pay deare for ỹ ſhot: for ỹ meat was as good as a choking of you. While the meate was yet in your mouthes, his wrath came downe vpon you. Againe, when yee misbehaued your ſelues in whoredome, ye know ỹ his hand ſtrake ye in ſuch ſort, ỹ a great nũber of people periſhed among you. When yee were diſobedient to his mouth, he ſẽt a fire amõg you ỹ conſumed you, vntill ỹ braſen ſerpent was ſet vp. All manner of wayes therefore haue you bin chaſtiſed at Gods hande; ſo as if ye be not mindfull of it, ye be worſe than brute beaſtes.

Exod. 16. 4. Deut. 8. 4. Exod. 13. 21. Exod. 17. 6. Numb. 11. 33. Num. 25. 1. 9. Num. 11. 1. & 21. 5. 6.

Now after that Moſes hath declared al theſe chaſtiſemẽts: he inferreth an example ỹ was notable and worthy to be borne in mind aboue all ỹ reſt: that is to wit, of the rebellion that was made by Coree, Dathan, and Abiram. For (as is declared in ỹ ſixteenth of ỹ numbers), theſe three with another of ỹ tribe of Rubẽ, made inſurrection againſt Aaron, laying to his charge ỹ he had vſurped the prieſthood, which was an office of great authority among ỹ people. For Aaron was there as in ỹ perſon of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, & went into the Sanctuary to make attonement between God & the people. Nowe it ſpited theſe men, that they could not come to ỹ like dignity, & therfore vpon enuy they would needs ſtir the people to a commotion, ſaying: What? This is a derogation to ỹ prerogatiue ỹ belongeth in common to al of vs ỹ are the children of Abraham. God hath ſanctified vs, he termeth vs his heritage and a prieſtly kingdome: & yet ye ſee here how Aaron and his children haue taken ỹ thing peculiarly to themſelues, which belõgeth generally to ỹ whole people. Therfore let vs maintain our right, & not ſuffer this dignity to be turned to a ſtate of inheritance. This was their pretence: but indeed they did it of great ſpite. For firſt of all God had well prouided aforehand, ỹ there ſhold be no indirect or wicked ſuſpition againſt Aaron, & his childrẽ for the prieſthoods ſake. Moſes was ỹ leader of ỹ people; he was ỹ ſetter of them at liberty, & therfore there was good likelyhood ỹ his ofspring ſhould haue bin preferred before all others. Hee had childrẽ: & yet he took not ỹ prieſthood vnto himſelfe, but left it to his brother. True it is ỹ he made no choice, god did that. But howſoeuer he fared, to ỹ intent that ỹ law and the things ỹ depended thereupon ſhold not be ſuſpected: Gods will was not to doe Moſes ſo much honour as to make him ỹ prieſt, but he was faine to ſtand humbly aloofe ẅ the reſt of the people worſhipping God, when Aaron his brother went to carie the names of ỹ people of Iſrael into ỹ ſanctuary, & to offer ſacrifice to God in their behalfe. And what wer his childrẽ? They abode in ỹ inferior degree, without aduancemẽt to ỹ dignity, which remained to his brother Aaron. Wherby God ſhewed that thoſe things were not done vpon ambition or worldly couetouſneſſe, but that it was his own doing, who had ſet down the order that ſhold be kept kept in his Church and Temple. Notwithſtanding al this, thoſe leawd perſons fel to rebelling, & charged Aaron falſly with vſurping ỹ dignitie of ỹ highprieſthood. So was God faine to maintaine his own doing. And thereupon Moſes ſaid vnto thẽ, How now? What is Aarõ? As if he ſhold ſay, hath he thruſt himſelfe in of his owne head? No: & now although he be of Gods aduancing to ỹ high and honorable ſtate, yet if ye conſider all things aright, hee doth but onely ſeruе you. But thoſe malicious creatures were not contented ẅ that. We be ſãctified (ſaid they) we be gods people; & what are you more? In this caſe god was to put to his hand for ỹ redres of it: And according as was commanded by Moſes, To morow (quoth he) let euery of you bring his ſenſor, & you ỹ are the chief of this rebellion, (for they were as then to ỹ number of twe hundred & fifty) come together, & you ſhall ſee by your offerings, whether parties ſeruice is beſt liked of God. This done he ſaid vnto ỹ people, Aſſure your ſelues that if theſe folk do dye ỹ common death, and ỹ God lay not his hand vpõ them in your ſight, ſo as ſome horrible & dreadful puniſhment do not light vppon their heads: I am contẽted ỹ ye ſhal not eſteeme me as ſent of God. But if ye perceiue ỹ god make good the thing ỹ I haue vttered with my mouth, then be ye ſure that I haue don nothing on mine owne head, but that I haue faithfully performed that which was inioyned me from heauen. Hereupon the earth opened and ſwallowed vp thoſe rebels ỹ had made the inſurrection among the people. And when this was done, ỹ people forbare not to murmur ſtill & to ſay, See here I pray you, how Moſes and Aaron fall to deſtroying of Gods people. Thoſe whom God hath choſen muſt be fain to periſh at their pleaſure, to maintaine their prieſtly dignitie, and of ỹ ſame number are we alſo. What an vnkindneſſe is this? Ye ſee here how God had wrought a myracle that ought to aſtoniſh & amaſe the whole world, yea euen the very brute beaſts & al. and yet this people which reported themſelues to be choſen and holy, ceaſe not to repine & rebel ſtill of malicious ſet purpoſe, againſt God and his hand that was openly to be ſeene. God was faine to ratifie Aarons prieſthood yet once againe: whereupon he commanded that euery of them ſhould bring a wodden ſtaffe ẅ their names written vpõ them and put them altogether, ſo as they might not bee diſcerned aſunder but by the ſight of the names. Theſe Staues were laid before God in ỹ Sanctuary: & when they were taken thence againe, Aarons ſtaffe that had his name vpon it did floriſh, & al the reſidue remained drie: wherby God ſhewed that he had choſen that houſe to the Highprieſthood.

Num. 17. 2. 8

Of theſe things doth Moſes here put ỹ people in remembrãce, to do them to vnderſtand, firſt ỹ if they dalyed any more with God by ſeeking any chaunge, or by attempting any thing againſt the commandemẽt of his word: they ſhold feele his vengeance in likewiſe as they had ſeene it light vpon Coree, Dathan, & Abiram, and their partakers. Beſides this, he telleth them of their ſpitefulnes, how they had prouoked God againe, euẽ after they had felt his iuſtice: to ỹ intẽt they ſhould no more returne to ſuch doings, becauſe ỹ if they abuſed Gods patience & bearing with them for ỹ one time, he wold in ỹ end vſe ỹ greater rigor againſt thẽ. And ſo ye ſee what ỹ intent of Moſes was. Now hereby we be warned to conſider wel with our ſelues, ỹ whenſoeuer any fault or offẽce is cõmitted among vs, & God hath laid his hand vppon vs for it: wee ought to beare it ſo printed in our hearts, as it may make vs to keepe his commaundements, as Moſes addeth afterward. For it is not ynough for vs to know ỹ bare ſtorie: but we muſt alſo apply ỹ ſame to our inſtruction. So ỹ if god haue corrected vs gently, we muſt acknowlege his fatherly goodnes towards vs. And from thencefoorth let vs not prouoke him any more, but to ỹ intent we may keepe our ſelues frõ offending, let it ſuffice vs to know ỹ he cannot away with ſin. That (ſay I) is ỹ thing wherof we be warned in this text. And herẽwal let vs alſo haue ſuch humilitie printed in our hearts, as to be cõtinually ſory for the faults ỹ we ſhall haue committed. And if our God haue bin ſo gracious as to execute his wrath vppon ſome others, let vs bee wel ware ỹ we wrap not our ſelues in ỹ ſame cõdemnation with them, by taking their part. Nay, let vs ſhun them a great way off, and let vs haue nothing to doe with them, if wee intende not to prouoke ỹ wrath of our God. That is the effect of the matter which Moſes ſpeaks of here. And it is written for our ſakes, to the intent that euery of vs ſhould haue an eye to himſelfe.

I haue tolde you already, ỹ the thinges which were ſpoken as then to ỹ people of Iſrael, do concerne vs likewiſe. After what ſort haue wee felt Gods hand? I meane as well thoſe that are Citizens borne, as thoſe ỹ reſort hither from ſtrange Countries. Is there any of vs that hath not perceiued gods wonderful power in his deliuerãce? For hath not this Towne bin as it were appointed to ruine and deſtruction? Was it not likely ỹ it ſhould vtterly haue periſhed, and ỹ there was none other remedy as in reſpect of ỹ world? Yet hath God reached out his hãd after ſuch a faſhion, as the world hath ſeen an incredible alteration. It was as a dreame, men would neuer haue thought it: euen they themſelues ỹ did ſeruice in it, were aſtoniſhed at it afterward. Nowe then, if this be forgotten, on whom ſhall we lay ỹ fault? And God hath not only giuen liberty to thoſe ỹ were in bondage, and drawen them out of ỹ gulf of death at ſuch time as it was looked ỹ al ſhould haue gone to hauocke: but alſo vouchſafed to ſet vp his kingdome among them. He hath planted his Goſpel here, he hath ſet vp his chayre of eſtate here, here hath he choſen him a ſanctuarie & a place to dwel in. And as touching them that are come from ſtrange Countries, how hath god reached his hand to thẽ? Were not they alſo as it were in ỹ gulfe of hell, when they were in the curſed popedome? Ye ſee then how we be gathered here, altogether vnder ỹ hande of God. And therfore wel ought we to eſteeme this grace, and not onely to preach it with our mouthes, but alſo to ſhew throughout all our whole life, that foraſmuch as our Lord hath gotten vs to him, wee be willing to be his, & thereupon indeuor to pleaſe him in al things. Vnleſſe we do ſo, ſurely there wil be no excuſe for vs, but ỹ we ſhalbe a hundredfold more blameworthy, than thoſe whom God hath let alone, ſo as they continue ſtill in their old trade, wout finding him ſo gracious & fauorable towards them. Beſides this, Gods working in our behalfe hath not bin for once & away: but if we looke wel vpon his maintaining of the ſtate which he hath ſtabliſhed in this city; there hath not bin any yeare wherein he hath not renewed his myracles, & made it appeare openly by ſome notable ſigne, ỹ he hath had a continuall care of vs, and ỹ he hath neuer forſaken vs. And in deed we be worſe than blind, if we perceiue not ỹ our life hãgeth as by a threed. For there needeth but ỹ turning of a hand to diſpatch vs al: one conſpiracy was like inough to haue put ỹ whole church of God in daunger of deſtruction. But yet for all this God hath preſerued vs. And after what faſhion? We cannot tell. Had we any drop of wiſedome, ſurely as oft as it came to our minde wee wold be aſtoniſhed at it & ſay; Lord, how far haſt thou exceeded ỹ expectation of men! Againe on the other ſide let vs mark, let vs marke I ſay how God hath lifted vp his hande to puniſh ſuch as went about to trouble ỹ order of his Church, and to ouerthrowe ỹ building which he had ſet vp by his Goſpel. For it is certaine ỹ he hath puniſhed them, to ỹ end that we ſhould take inſtruction at their coſt. He hath bin ſo gracious to vs as to let vs ſee and know his vengeance, and yet wee our ſelues haue beene exempted from it: not for our own deſerts, (for there is none of vs al, but vpon due examination of his doings, he ſhall find him ſelfe faulty) but becauſe it pleaſed God to ſpare vs. Neuertheleſſe hee hath ſhewed vs as it were with his finger, that it is not for any man to prouoke him: and that if any bodie ſtep vp againſt him, he ſhall finde himſelfe too hardly ouermatched. This (ſay I) hath bin tolde vs ſufficiently. But what? God worketh, and we haue no eyes to ſee his working: & although we haue, yet do wee wilfully ſhut them againſt him. Yea & (to goe no further,) let vs apply this ſtorie to our owne vſe. Truly I touch things as ſoberly as I can; but yet is not ỹ holy ſcripture written to ỹ end we ſhould but onely know what was done to the people of Iſrael: but to ỹ end we ſhold conſider the likenes that is betweene them & vs, ỹ when the like matters befal amõg vs, we might do our ſelues good by the warningpeales that are giuen vs by thẽ.

1. Cor. 10. 11 According wherunto S. Paul ſaith, that ỹ things which God did at that time, are as a picture for vs to look vpon, to ỹ end we ſhould refer al to our own profite: For ỹ end of time (ſaith he) is come vpon vs, and we ſee nowe the perfection of the things which God had but begun as then.

And here is mention made of Coree, Dathan, and Abiram, ỹ is to wit, of ſuch as could not abide the obſeruing of thinges in ſuch ſort as God had then commanded them by Moſes. True it is that they profeſſed thẽſelues to be Gods choſen, & the children of Abraham: mark ỹ for one point. For they alledged ỹ they were ſanctified; their intent was that their circumciſion ſhould be as a warrãt for them that they were a holy & ſacred generation. But yet for al ỹ, they would none of the preeſthood, at leaſtwiſe not as God had ordeyned it, but euery of thẽ would haue it to him ſelfe. Now I pray you, haue not we for our part ſeene the like rebellion againſt God & his word? For wherefore hath al the skirmiſhing bin, both againſt the doctrine & againſt ỹ diſciplyne of the church with ſuch rage: but to diſplace the order ỹ God ſet among vs? When heretikes, (yea euen ſuch heretikes as brought mo blaſphemies than euer were herd of ſince there was any chriſtian Church) came hither: they were mainteyned here with tooth & nayle, & openly, yea euen by ſuch as ſate in the ſeate of iuſtice: in ſo much as they tooke part with them, and ſhewed them as much fauor as Turkes ſhoulde haue vnder Mahomet. Afterward when other heretikes came hither to bring in Freewil again, & to ſet it vp to the derogation of Gods grace, blaſpheming his election and Prouidence: they had thoſe mẽ for their Patrons & Aduocats, which ought to haue bin their Iudges: & thoſe ſpake for them in our preſence, and that with ſuch impudencie, as if they had bent them ſelues like buls to ſtrike vs with their hornes, & to ſet themſelues as ſhamefully as could be, againſt God and his doctrine. This haue we ſeene. Againe, when thinges were ſhewed them ſo plainly by the holy ſcripture, as would haue beene receiued euen among the very papiſts, and when ſo cleare and euident texts were alledged, as coulde not be gainſaid, which things we not only ſpake by mouth, but alſo gaue them the articles in writing, & ſet downe ỹ ſentences of the ſcripture whereby the truth was pointed to as with ones fiuger: They were not aſhamed to reiect all, but ſtepped forth proudely ſtill, as it were to ſay; wee will fight againſt God whatſoeuer come of it. True it is that they ſpewed not out ſuch ſayings with full mouth, for they proteſted ſtill to hold themſelues to the Goſpel. O (ſayd they) our deſire is to haue ỹ Goſpel. Yea but what maner of Goſpell? A tauerngoſpell. There was no talking among them of the grace of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: For it was a cõmon by word among them to ſay, There needs no more to be knowẽ than ỹ which al of vs know; that is to wit, that we muſt loue God and our neighbour. And what needeth there ſo much preaching for that matter? If a man replyed hereupon & ſayd vnto thẽ, how can ỹ be? If yee wil haue preaching to ceaſſe & the Sacraments to be ſuperfluous, thẽ muſt the whole order which God hath ſet in his church be diſanulled: Wel (would they ſay) then let ỹ Goſpel be preached ſimply wout ſuch ſtorming. And againe as touching ỹ Sacraments, belong they not to vs as well as to you? Why not? would we ỹ there ſhould be no more order kept? Nay we cã miniſter ỹ ſupper as wel as you preachers. Such things as theſe (I ſay) were ſeen and herd. But if Coree, Dathan, & Abirã be condemned here by ỹ holy ghoſt, to haue intẽded ỹ breaking of al order: I pray you what ſhal a man ſay, of thoſe which haue fought ſo manifeſtly againſt god after this faſhion? for theſe things were not done of ignorãce. Although they be ſo ſhameles as to ſay ſtil, wee haue ment no ſuch thing: yet is

their malice too too apparant. For had no man ſpoken to them of it, or had no man pointed thē as with his finger to ỹ texts of the ſcripture, ſo as it might haue bin ſaide, ſee here the will of God, there is no difficultie in ỹ matter, it needeth not any ſcanning as though there were any doubtfulnes in it, ſee here ỹ opē text: [they might haue had ſome colour for their pretence]. But ſeing ỹ things were ſo ſhewed vnto them, & yet they cōtinued wilful ſtill: ſee yee not that it was an open making of war againſt God? Is it not to be ſeene alſo what pretence was made by Coree, Dathan & Abiram? Out of queſtion, their ſayings were after this maner: Why? If Aaron haue the high-prieſthod alone to himſelf, he ſhal haue al ſuperiority, & what ſhal we be? Euen ſo ſtandeth ỹ caſe with theſe men: to their ſeeming, al were marde on their ſide, if God ſhould beare ỹ ſway. But god will beare the ſway by this order, and we ſee it is no impeachment at all to the ciuill power which is a thing vtterly diſtinct from it, neither can any thing better maintaine Magiſtrates in their ſouerainty, foraſmuch as ỹ order of Gods Church is ſpiritual, ſo as it medleth not with ỹ puniſhing of mens bodies, nor ẅ penalties, nor with impriſonments, nor with ſuch other like things: but all is referred to ỹ word & the ſacraments. Seeing ỹ this is apparant doth it not ſerue better for ỹ ſtabliſhment of Empyres, kingdomes, & Lordſhips: than if there were nothing elſe to be had than a confuſed tyranny, where nothing were reſerued vnto God & to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt? And therfore when men ſtreine themſelues to ỹ vttermoſt of their power to ouerthrow ỹ order, do they not fal to ſpitting in ỹ face of Ieſus chriſt to ſpite him withall? For it is his will to reigne among vs, yea & he will haue his kingdom to be in vs. Now thē, when he chooſeth men & ſetteth them vp to gouern his church in his name, is it not too ſhameful an vnthankfulnes to ſay, we will not admit it, but thruſt it from vs? As who ſhold ſay, they wold make men beleeue ỹ the Conſiſtory were a thing vtterly ſeuered from Geneua it ſelf, wheras God hath granted vs ỹ grace to make it a member of the body. Nowe then, to diſmember Ieſus Chriſt by ſeparating ỹ things which he hath ioyned together, is it not a ſetting of themſelues openly againſt him? We ſee then ỹ theſe rebellions haue happened among vs: & who is to bee blamed for it? Truly ỹ heads of the ſedition are to be ſeene, and ỹ perceiuing of thē hath not bin at ſome one time, or a day or twaine ago, but it is now a ſeuen or eight years ſince it began, inſomuch as Gods children haue bin faine to grone and ſigh vnder their burthen, & to cry out alas, beſeeching God to haue pitie on his poore Church, ſeing it was in ſuch a hurly burly. Things went worſe & worſe, and one licentiouſnes brought in another, ſo as they bare thēſelues in hand ỹ al things were lawful for them. And yet notwithſtanding, of all that while they did but double the ſtings which they had felt afore in their wicked cōſciences, by thinking thus ẅ thēſelues: What? We can neuer hold out, except we lay our heads together to fortifie our ſelues thus & thus. Herupon they made cōtinually new prouiſions. And after what maner? By practiſing al maner of treaſō & diſloyalty, & by applying their minds to al wicked ſhifts for ỹ maintenance of ỹ thing ỹ they had misbegun. But in ỹ end our Lord wrought. And what haue we to cōſider therin? That we be worthy of blame. For although thoſe folk did fight opēly againſt God: yet would he not haue ſuffered ſuch miſeries to haue happened among vs, but for our offences. And therefore let vs conſider ỹ ſeeing he hath ſo puniſhed ỹ parties that came to ſet themſelues apparantly againſt him, & made their reckening to ouerthrow all ỹ he had builded: he hath ſcholed vs at their coſt, & therefore we ought firſt of al to thank him for his ſparing of vs, and that he wrapped vs not in ỹ cōfuſion ỹ was prepared for vs, but hath put a myraculous differēce betwene them & vs. Thus ye ſee that the thing which we haue to marke, is on the one ſide Gods mercy in bearing with vs, & on ỹ other, the puniſhing of a few folk, which ought to ſerue vs for an inſtructiō to teach vs to fare ỹ better by it. For it is certain ỹ thereby God hath ſhewed vs, how it is his wil to haue things go peaſably, & to keep their ordinary courſe according to his worde. For it is not for men to pretend Gods name falſly in this behalf, to ſwarue aſide one way or other. The miniſters of ỹ word & ſuch as are appointed to be preachers, muſt for their part bee able to proteſt before God, & to ſhewe openly before men, ỹ they neither be nor deſire to bee counted any other, than as perſons to whom God hath committed ỹ charge of preaching & of adminiſtring his ſacraments, with ſuch purenes as things may not bee corrupted in ỹ church. Whē it is ſo: let vs vnderſtand ỹ we muſt ſubmit our ſelues thereto, & that we ſhal winne nothing by ſtriuing againſt it, but Gods hand muſt needs be always againſt vs. For he forgetteth not what he hath ordeined, but wil maintaine & defend ỹ ſame continually. Therefore let vs learn to leaue ỹ ſeeking of any change againſt Gods ordinance. Let vs looke vpon the rule that is conteined in the holy ſcripture, & let no man attempt to incounter it by any maner of meanes. Let vs rather die than alter any thing, or attempt any thing againſt our God. Let vs be as ſheepe, if we will haue Ieſus Chriſt to bee our ſhepherd. For whatſoeuer hee is that hath not a meeke heart like a lamb, is vnworthy to be counted of Gods Church, becauſe our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt wil not be our ſhepherd, but vpon ỹ condition. That then is the thing which wee haue to beare away in the firſt place. But let vs alſo look wel vpon the maliciouſnes of ỹ Iewiſh people, & take good heede that we become not like them. Sothly it is a terrible caſe ỹ God ſhold ſhew forth his power ſo vpon rebels, ỹ the very earth ſhould open and ſwallow them vp with their wiues and children. There were to the number of 250 that had murmured againſt Moſes and Aaron, which were al rooted out in ỹ open ſight of men, ſo as men ſaw that God wrought from heauen: & yet notwithſtanding complaintes were ſtill caſt foorth againſt Moſes and Aaron, men charged them with al ỹ blame, all ỹ fault was laid in their necks. Seing it was ſo, muſt it not needs be that ỹ people was exceedingly hardharted? Yes: but let vs nowe looke into our ſelues. For we alſo are guilty of the like maliciouſnes nowadays in that

behalf. For there are a number to be ſeene which foſter poyſon in their hearts, & are wilfully wedded to wicked matters, and yet knowe neither why nor wherefore. If a man aske them what it booteth them: they cannot tell, ſauing that the diuell hath ſo caryed them away, that they bee eaſily wonne to maintaine euill matters, and to murmure and grudge: and therwithal they fal to running vpon thoſe that cannot doe withall, for none other cauſe but ỹ they indeuour to maintaine the things that concerne God. How haue wee had an eye to the thinges which God hath done beyond mans expectation? He wrought of al the while, when no mã thought it. There were neither Iudges, nor people, nor miniſters of the word, ỹ euer thought vpon ỹ thinges ỹ are come to paſſe. Wel: is the thing done & paſt? and do we not perceiue ỹ God pitied vs in ỹ ende, and that therby he ment to ſchole vs, and ỹ we ſhoulde be mindfull of that deed for euer? Why conſider we not ỹ he laid his hand vpon vs to humble vs, to ỹ intent we ſhould henceforth liue in al ſubiection vnder him, & according to his order? Are they not too too vnexcuſable, which cannot make their profit therof? Yes ſurely. For it is as a wilful ſhutting of their eyes againſt Gods workes. But no maruel if things be ſo out of order nowadays. For wee ſee ỹ in the countries where the Goſpel is, there is more inordinate liberty & more leaudnes than is among ỹ papiſtes. Whereby we may vnderſtande, ỹ God doth iuſtly giue them ouer. For when men haue heard ỹ goſpel and will not beleeue it: they muſt needs alwayes become deuils incarnate and as badde as monſters, ſo as nothing may be ſeen in thẽ but curſed diſorder. In deede ỹ Papiſts, foraſmuch as they be deadly enemies vnto God, are well worthy of ỹ reprobate minde wherin they be. But as for them that boaſt of ỹ Goſpel, & make a mocke of it, vtterly refuſing al good doctrine, & fighting againſt god: muſt not God needs vtter greater rigor towards them, as men ſee he hath done? And a mã needs not to looke far for ỹ matter. Let vs but looke a little about vs, & we ſhall ſee ỹ Gods vengeance hath broken out to ỹ vttermoſt, vppon thoſe vnhappie creatures which doe ſo refuſe his grace dayly offered vnto them. Now then, if thoſe kind of folk conceiue rancor againſt al goodnes, what get they by it, but ỹ they heape vp ſtil greater puniſhment vpon their owne heads? But as for our part, let vs learn to keep our ſelues in aray vnder ỹ ſtandard of our God: and then let vs aſſure our ſelues, ỹ as he made Aarõs rod to floriſh in ſpyte of all ỹ rebels, ſo will he alſo make ỹ order to floriſh which he hath ſet among vs. Let vs wait vpon him, & reſt vppon that order: and in ỹ meane while ſhrowd our ſelues vnder his wings, and not ſeeke any thing againſt his preheminẽce & dignity, but honour him all of vs both great & ſmal. If we proceede after ỹ faſhion, we may wel hope that as he wrought then, ſo will he continue alſo towardes vs.

But by the way let vs beare in mind what Moſes ſaith here. Bethink your ſelues (ſaith he) euen to keepe the commaundementes which I ſet before you this day. Hereby he ſheweth vs whereto ỹ minding of the chaſtiſements which we haue perceiued to haue bin done by Gods hand, ſhold ſerue vs. Namely to bring vs vnto his obedience. For if we think to quit our ſelues by condemning ſuch as haue ſo troubled gods order, & gone about to ouerthrow the doctrine of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: and yet in the meane while do play the ſame pageants, and followe their footeſteppes within an houre after: ſurely wee ſhalbe double puniſhed. Wee ſee what befell to Iehu, and it is a lookingglaſſe for vs to behold continually. For if a iudge turne his one hand vnto bribes, and puniſh theeues with the other for his owne profite: is not he himſelfe worthy of dubble puniſhment? Euen ſo ſtoode ỹ caſe w Iehu. True it is ỹ God vſed his ſeruice in puniſhing ỹ ydolatries & abhominations of Achabs houſe: but yet for al that, Iehu himſelf followed the ſame, & therfore was God faine to puniſh him alſo as a robber, & to vſe greater rigor againſt him than againſt the houſe of Achab, though al things were out of order there and ful of wickednes. As much ſhall befall vs when wee ſhall haue condemned the wicked, and the deſpiſers of God, and ſuch as haue turned quite & cleane againſt him: if we our ſelues reſemble thẽ afterward. Therfore let vs take heede to ỹ which is ſpoken heere, which is that God calleth vs home to him, by our beholding of ỹ deſolation that men had practiſed. Very well then, our Lord puniſheth them: but his puniſhing of the wicked is for our benefite. For his meaning is ỹ by their example we ſhoulde learne to turne head when we haue gone aſtray, that wheras erſt we followed him not, ne framed our liues according to his word, we ſhold come to attonemẽt again in him, and take heed to our conuerſation, ỹ we obſerue al the cõmandemẽts which he ſetteth before vs.

2. Kin. 10. 30 31. & 15. 12.

Againe, Moſes ſheweth vs heere, that it is not ynough for vs to ſerue God by halues, as men commonly doe to make their market as they liſt themſelues. Indeede we wilbe aſhamed ſo to do, ſpecially if we perceiue that God chaſtiſeth any man for the like doings, and that wee our ſelues haue found that hee hath vouchſafed to beare w vs, and to ſhewe himſelfe as our father. I ſay wee will be aſhamed to diſdaine to haue any regarde at all of it. But what? We will ſet a good face vpon the matter, and we will pretend ſome ſhadow of vpright dealing, at leaſtwiſe in ſmal particular matters: but otherwiſe, wee will holde on ſtill in our old trace, and we will do ſuch thinges as may wel bewray that in al the reſt there was nothing but hypocriſie, ſo as we went not to work roundly & ſoundly becauſe we be doubleharted. But god admitteth no ſuch parting of ſtakes. He ſaith expreſly, Looke about you when I puniſh ſuch as haue done amiſſe. For vnleſſe ye purpoſe to wrap your ſelues in the ſame curſe, ye muſt not onely reforme your liues in one or two points, but alſo rule your ſelues throughout according to my law, ye muſt walk in ſuch vprightnes, as it may be perceiued that ye haue giuen your ſelues to my ſeruice, and ỹ your whole ſeeking is to haue me to be your Lord & maſter. Thus ye ſee whereat Moſes looked in ſaying. Therfore do yee all the cõmandements which I ſet before you this day.

But

But ſurely mans frailty is ſuch, as he can neuer attaine to the full performing of the law: but yet muſt we ſtil indeuour towards it. When we haue inforced our ſelues to ỹ vttermoſt, yet ſhal we be behind hand ſtil in many things. And if we enter into accoũt for euery poynt which we ſhal haue performed, we ſhall haue failed in a hundred. Therefore let vs acknowledge our faults: but yet for all that, the marke that wee muſt ſhoote at, muſt be the obeying of our God without exception, ſo as we make no parting of ſtakes with him to ſay, Go to, as for in this thing, I am contented to yeelde to God, but hee muſt pardon me in that thing, and he muſt beare with me for the other matter. If we fall to ſuch chaffaring with him, wee ſhall finde in the ende that our fond ouerweening hath beguiled vs.

And in any wiſe let vs wey well this ſaying, where he ſayth: that it is hee himſelfe that ſetteth forth the commaundements of God. And thereby he bringeth vs back to Gods word in ſuch wiſe as it is preached, for he wil not haue vs go ſeeke in the aire, nor yet aboue the clowdes for ỹ knowledge of his wil. We muſt be contented with his comming downe vnto vs, and with his ſpeaking to vs by the mouthes of men. The rebellious ſort haue alwayes ſayd that their intent was to ſerue God: for it were too horrible a thing to be ſo blaſphemous in wordes, as to ſay that they giue ouer God and will be none of his. Therefore doe they make faire proteſtations: but in the meane while they tread vnder foote the worde whereby God will be knowen and ſerued. This hath bin ſeene in all ages: and we haue found it in theſe deſpiſers that haue crept in here among vs to corrupt vs, that all their talke hath tended to none other end, but to aboliſh ſome peece of the holy ſcripture. For they haue giuen forth that there is no more neede of the Lawe and the prophets, but that they be quite aboliſhed. And this blaſphemie hath bin held or rather fluſhed out in ſuch ſort, as it required to be reſiſted with ſtouteneſſe. Inſomuch as they haue not bin aſhamed to ſpew out ſuch wicked ſayings as theſe in my preſence: namely ỹ the old Teſtament was to be reiected, and belonged not at all vnto vs. And on their Alebenches they made it a common prouerbe, that the hauing of the Goſpell was ſufficient, that is to ſay, that wee ought to holde vs contented with theſe two wordes, A man muſt loue God, and he muſt loue his neighbour. Thus ye ſee how they haue gone about to bring in a Turkiſhneſſe vppon vs, yea and a confuſion more horrible than Turkiſhneſſe, in that they durſt ſo openly pronounce all thoſe leawd ſpeaches. Let vs marke then how it is not without cauſe that Moſes ſayth here, The commaundementes which I ſet before you, as if hee ſhould ſay: come not hither to proteſt diſſemblingly that your intent is to ſerue God: but [ſay flatly] ỹ ye wil not admit his Lawe becauſe it is preched vnto you by me, by me (I ſay) which am a mortall man as you be and not your God, leaſt ye ſhould make an idoll of me. Alledge none of all theſe ſhiftes, ſayth he: for God hath ordained me to ſet forth his Lawe, and he will haue it receiued at my hand. And ſeeing he hath giuen me that charge and office: it behoueth you on your ſide to obey. Now againe wee knowe that our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt intendeth not to dwell here viſibly in his owne perſon among vs. Hee hath ordeined Paſtors in his Church, and hee will be heard by their meanes: that is the perfection whereunto hee bringeth vs, vntill wee come to that happy meeting, to bee throughly ioyned vnto him. Thoſe are the wordes of Saint Paul. Now if wee will not ſubmit our ſelues to that order: it is as if we would rend aſunder the body of Chriſt as much as in vs lyeth. Therefore let vs beware that wee yeelde due authoritie to Gods word, and accept it reuerently when it is preached vnto vs. So then, whenſoeuer wé haue to deale with Gods ſeruice and religion: let vs not fall to fancying of high ſpeculations, as if we would ſay, Let God ſhewe me what pleaſeth him, and I wil doe it. For that is but a vaine excuſe, as wee ſhall ſee that Moſes himſelfe will tell vs hereafter where he ſayth: Thou needeſt not to goe ouer the ſea, nor to mount vp into the ayre, nor to goe downe into the deepe, foraſmuch as thou haſt the worde in thy heart and in thy mouth. And this word (ſaith S. Paul) is not only that which was preached by Moſes: but alſo the ſame word of faith which we preach at this day. Sith it is ſo, let vs beare in minde ỹ God ment as it were to bridle vs by telling vs ỹ it was his wil to make vs ſubiect vnto him, and ỹ for the bringing thereof to paſſe, it behoued vs to obſerue the doctrine which he did ſet forth by the hand of Moſes. And cõſequently it behoueth our Lord Ieſus Chriſtes gouerning of vs nowadays to be ſuch, as we receiue and beleeue whatſoeuer is preached to vs in his name. Ye ſee thẽ that the way for Gods word to haue due preheminence and authoritie among vs: is that wee gouerne not our ſelues after our owne lyking: but hearken to the voyce of Ieſus Chriſt to ſubmit our ſelues thereto, ſo as hee may haue the ſouereintie ouer vs that is giuen him by God his father, and we receiue his word without exception or gainſaying, knowing that that is the meane whereby God intendeth to try what obedience wee yeelde vnto him.

Now let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs perceiue them better than wee haue done heretofore, ſo as we may fare the better by all the inſtructions that are giuen vs, as well by the benefites that are dayly beſtowed vppon vs at his hand, as by the chaſtiſementes which hee ſheweth vs: that thereby we may be brought to feare him, and to honor him by all meanes, and not take vppon vs the name of Chriſtianitie falſely, but become his people in very deede, being ſeparated from all worldly infections, and from all wiched luſtes that are contrary to his lawe, or which ſtriue againſt it. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs but alſo to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Tewſeday the xxiiij of September. 1555.

The Lxxvi. Sermon, which is the third vpon the eleuenth Chapter.

8 Therefore keepe all &c.

9 And that yee may prolong your daies in the lande which the Lorde ſware to your fathers to giue to them and to their ſeede, euen a lande that floweth with milke and honnie.

10 For the land which thou goeſt vnto to poſſeſſe it, is not as the lande of Egypt whence thou cameſt: where thou diddeſt ſow thy ſeede and water it with thy feete as a garden of herbes:

11 But the Lande which thou goeſt vnto to poſſeſſe, is a land wherin are hilles and plaines, and it drinketh raine water from the skie.

12 It is a land which the Lord thy God regardeth: the eyes of the Lorde thy God are continually vppon it, from the beginning of the yeere to the end of the yeere.

13 And if ye be diligent in obeying my commaundementes which I commaunde you this day, ſo as ye loue the Lorde your God, and ſerue him with all your hart and with all your ſoule:

14 Then will I giue the foreraine and the afterraine in ſeaſon vppon your lande, that thou mayeſt gather vp thy Corne, thy Wine, and thyne Oyle.

15 Alſo I will giue thee graſſe vpon the feeld for thy Cattell. So ſhalt thou eate and haue thy fill.

AFter that Moſes hath warned the people to keepe Gods commaundements, now hee harreneth them by ſetting Gods promiſes before them, as if GOD ſhould tell them, that his will was they ſhould not ſerue him but for good wages. And in deede, God perceiuing how loth & ſlowe we be to follow him, allureth vs to it, by promiſing vs that wee ſhall not loſe our labor in ſo doing. Not that he is bound to doe it, or that he intendeth to haue vs as hirelings, or that we can deſerue or earne any thing at his hand: wee muſt rid away all ſuch imaginations. It is meete ỹ wee ſhould yeeld obedience vnto God, though no reward at al were behighted vs. For we ought to loue him for his owne ſake, & not for any recompence that can be looked for. Againe on ỹ other ſide, our affection muſt be francke & free, and not lyke theirs that wil doe nothing, except their profite be alwayes before them. We muſt loue God ẅ a free heart. Thirdly, we can deſerue nothing at all by our doings: doe what we can, God is neuer ỹ more bound vnto vs for it. For we be his already, & what can we bring, which is not due to him already by nature? Yet is he contented to apply himſelfe to our rawneſſe, in ſaying ỹ if we ſerue him, there is a reward ready for vs, ſo as we ſhall not neede to be afraid ỹ our Labor in honoring him ſhoulde be vnprofitable to vs if we indeuour ſo to honor him. Now we ſee what a fondneſſe it is for men to conclude, that becauſe God promiſeth rewarde to ſuch as keepe his Lawe, therfore men can deſerue at his hand: For that is not his meaning: but it is done for our infirmities ſake becauſe God ſeeth that wee haue nede to bee quickened vp. And therefore all the promiſes of the lawe are as ſtrokes with ỹ ſpurre. Beſides this, we muſt alſo come backe to the doctrine of S. Paul, which is, that whatſoeuer promiſe with condition God doe make vs in his lawe, it ſtandes vs in no ſtead. For wee on our ſide, in ſteade of performing the thinges ỹ God commaundeth vs, doe goe cleane backe from them, and by that meanes are farre off frō all ỹ benefit ỹ is behighted vs there. And whereas the Lawe ſayth, hee that doth theſe thinges ſhall liue in them: that booteth vs nothing at all vntill God of his owne free goodneſſe be at one with vs againe. For then writeth he his lawe in our heartes, and we learne to obey him: which thing we cannot doe by nature. And yet for all that, we doe it not then perfectly, but there is ſtill ſome blemiſh in our doings, ſo as God might iuſtly reiect our workes, becauſe they be altogether ſinfull. Neuertheleſſe hee taketh them in good woorth, and yeeldeth vs reward, not as of duetie, but of his owne good will.

Gal. 3.10.11 12. Rom. 7.14 Leuit. 18.4. Rom. 7.22 23. Phil. 3.12.

Therefore to come againe to the firſt matter, let vs note ỹ God prouoketh vs to the keping of his commaundements, by ſuch meanes as he knoweth to be moſt conuenient for vs. And that is the cauſe why he ſayth, that if wee be wholy his, he alſo is ours: and ỹ if wee draw neere vnto him he will drawe ny vnto vs: & will bleſſe vs, & he wil not only proſper vs in this tranſitorie lyfe: but we may wel hope for a far greater reward in ỹ kingdome of heauen. All theſe thinges are told vs: and to what end? Not to puffe vs vp with any vaine preſumption, as though wee were able to deſerue aught at Gods hand, but to incorage vs the more to doe well, ſeeing that our God which might might well exact the performance of all that is conteined in his Lawe, without allowing vs any rewarde at all, doth neuertheleſſe voutſafe to binde himſelfe freely of his owne accord. Marke that for the firſt point. For we ſee here, ỹ Gods promiſing of all theſe thinges to that people, was not for any obedience that they had yelded vnto him; for the land had bin promiſed to their fathers, yea euen by othe, long before they were borne. And if a man ſpeake of the time that was to come: we ſee that God had no reſpect of that, he looketh not that the people ſhould behaue themſelues ſo well as to receiue reward of him for it: but he ſayth; I haue already promiſed you the land, yea I haue promiſed it you for your inheritance, to the intent ye ſhould not thinke ye haue gotten it by your owne purchaſe. And for proofe thereof, I aſſured it vnto you by free gift before you were begotten: but yet if yee intend to inioy it, take heede that yee giue your ſelues to me. Here yee ſee how God preuenteth all deſeruing: he regardeth not what wee haue deſerued, but whereas he ſeeth vs to be wretched and deſtitute of all goodneſſe, ſo as he findeth nothing but ſinne in vs, whereby we deſerue to be reiected: yet neuertheleſſe he of his owne infinite mercie bindeth himſelfe vnto vs, & telleth vs he will doe vs good, as though we had ſerued him according to his law. Marke ỹ for one point.

And thereupon he ceaſeth not to ſay, Do the thinges that I haue commaunded you, that ye may inioy the benefites that I haue promiſed you. The reaſon is, that he will not haue his goodneſſe dalyed withall. If he be liberall, he will not haue men to abuſe it as they commonly doe. When it is told vs that all that euer we haue at Gods hand, is of his onely free gift: wee beare our ſelues in hand, that we haue leaue to doe euill, and to liue euery man after his owne lyking, and that it is no matter what we doe. But God wil not haue his gratious goodnes ſo diſgraced. For his ſhewing of himſelfe fauorable vnto vs, is to another end and purpoſe: namely to prouoke vs to loue him againe; and that becauſe wee finde him ſo good a father, we ſhould be lykeminded againe towardes him, & behaue our ſelues as his children. That is the thing which Moſes telleth vs here when hee ſayth, Looke that yee obey your God, if ye minde to poſſeſſe the land which he promiſed to your fathers. For on the one ſide hee ſheweth that the land of Chanaan was an heritage of free gift: and yet hee forbeareth not to tell them, that they muſt not dallie w̃ God in abuſing ỹ liberalitie of his, but ſo much the rather both loue him & feare him. And when they ſee that God hath powred out the great riches of his mercie ſo vpon them; the ſame ought to inflame them to ſay, let vs giue ouer our ſelues wholy to our God: Seeing that hee hath ſought vs out at ſuch time as wee were gone from him, & preuented vs w̃ his goodneſſe, not reſpecting our vnworthineſſe, but taking occaſiõ of himſelf to doe vs good: let it kindle ỹ greater deſire in vs to ſubmit our ſelues to his power and will.

And whereas Moſes ſpeaketh here but onely of the land of Chanaan, & of the fruites that the people ſhould gather there for their finding and ſuſtenance: it is not for that God meant not to leade the faithfull any further than ſo at ỹ time: for it is certeine that they had the promiſe of life after the ſame maner as it is conteined at this day in the Goſpell. And therefore it is horrible blaſphemie againſt God, to ſay ỹ God held the people of olde time lyke ſwine in a ſtye, and that they had no more but a certeine figure of ỹ ſpirituall good thinges which are giuen vs preſently in theſe dayes, as that wretched caytife ſayd which was puniſhed here, who turned all thinges vpſide downe, & was ſo bold as to belke out this hereſie, ỹ the olde teſtamẽt was nothing elſe but a figure: inſomuch ỹ euen Abraham the father of all the faithfull, had but a fantaſticall faith and knew not God aright. And for proofe therof (quoth he,) he worſhipped Angels in ſtead of God, & had no knowledge of the euerlaſting lyfe. Loe what curſed ſtuffe here was: for we know (ſaith S. Paul) ỹ the fathers of old time were the childrẽ of God, & heires of ỹ kingdome of heauẽ as well as we. There is but this difference, ỹ they were lyke young children: but yet for all ỹ they failed not to poſſeſſe ỹ benefite, howbeit ỹ they were ſtil vnder tutors and gouernours, according to ỹ ſimilitude that S. Paul alledgeth there. The auncient fathers had the law & the ceremonies & ſuch other lyke thinges: but yet they wanted not the ſubſtance & trueth alſo. Now then, Gods ſetting forth of the land of Chanaã to the Iewes was not to the intent they ſhould ſtand poring vpon ỹ, lyke ſwine that ſtand muſling with their groyns in their ſwiltrough: but vnder the earthly inheritance which he had promiſed to their fathers, he gaue them a taſte of the heauenly heritage, accordingly as we ſee ỹ in their ſacrificing, although they offered brute beaſtes: yet were they made partakers of the redẽption that is purchaſed for vs by our Lord Ieſus Chriſt; and their offering of ỹ brute beaſtes in ſacrifice, directed thẽ to ỹ redemption ỹ was wrought by the ſonne of God, when he ſheaded his holy bloud to waſhe away our ſpottes and ſinnes. And after the ſame maner was it w̃ the land of Chanaan. For ſuch was their ſlender capacitie, ỹ it behoued thẽ to be guided that way. The land of Chanaan then, was to thẽ not onely a pledge but alſo an earneſt penny of the heauenly lyfe & endleſſe welfare which the fathers hoped for as well as we, inaſmuch as they had the ſame faith that we haue. So then let vs marke well, that whereas here is mentiõ made of the land of Chanaan, and of Gods mainteining of his people there in wealth: it ſerueth not to the end that the Iewes ſhould looke for nothing els but earthly things: but to the end that by taſting of Gods goodnes in this trãſitorie life, they ſhould vnderſtãd that he had prepared thẽ another heritage in heauẽ, which was more worth than al the world.

But our Lord vſeth no ſuch maner of dealing with vs nowadayes. True it is that (as ſaith Saint Paul vnto Timothie) if we walke as becommeth vs, we haue promiſes both of this preſent life, & of ỹ life to come. God telleth vs ỹ he wil not only receiue vs into ỹ euerlaſting life, but alſo ỹ he will wil neuer forſake vs ſo lõg as we be in this world and in this earthly pilgrimage, but will ſtil haue a care of vs to doe vs good, and to ſuccor vs and prouide for vs in all our needes: howbeit the heauenly lyfe is the chiefe thing, and that is the place whereunto our Lord draweth vs, notwithſtanding that he ad this preſent lyfe to it as an acceſſorie. And that is done becauſe wee haue a greater light nowadayes, than our forefathers Iohn 1.51. had vnder the Lawe. For Ieſus Chriſt is come downe from heauen, and hath opened the euerlaſting kingdome vnto vs: & he is gone vp thither as in our perſon: for he is riſen againe in ỹ nature of man which he took of vs. Ye ſee then ỹ heauen is now opened: and therefore it is not to be wondered at though God ſpeake in a larger language now, thã he did in the time of the law. For it behoued the people of thoſe dayes to bee led as we ſee little children are: & (as ſaith Saint Gal.4.4. Paule) we be come to mans eſtate, in compariſõ of them. Yet notwithſtanding we may gather hereupon, that God intending to incourage his people to ſerue him with the better will, telleth them ỹ he will ſhewe himſelfe a father towardes them, euen in reſpect of this world, howbeit not in all pointes, but onely ſo farre forth as may giue them ſome taſte and feeling of his fatherly loue, that they may lift vp the eyes of their faith yet higher, and vnderſtand that God hath reſerued the true bleſſednes and perfection of glorie for them, till they be taken out of this worlde and out of this corruptible lyfe. Thus ye ſee in effect what we haue to gather vppon that text: Yea and it behoueth vs to marke wel this ſaying, That thou maiſt be ſtrengthened.

Hereby Moſes declareth that God for his parte is faithfull, and that when hee hath once ſpoken the worde, we may well aſſure our ſelues of it. But foraſmuch as we drag our legges after vs, and although he allure vs to him ſo gently, and draw towards vs of his owne accord: yet are we lazie & ſlow in comming vnto him: we haue need to be ſtrengthened. That is the very end ỹ al ỹ promiſes of the lawe do tend vnto. It is not meant that God ſhould binde himſelfe vnto vs as our detter: it is not for that he looketh whether wee haue deſerued any thing at all or no: neither is it of purpoſe to bargaine or indent with vs, as though he ſhould take vp hackeneies among vs to ſerue his turne withall, by conſtraint: but foraſmuch as he ſees wee be feeble, and haue not ſo reſolute a minde as were requiſite, but are intangled in this world, and held backe with a number of vanities, and wicked affections, and (to be ſhort) are not ſo liuely as to yeelde our ſelues vnto his obedience: his purpoſe is to ſtrengthen vs, and to help vs. He ſeeth our default, and he remedieth it. Be ſtrõg therefore. And how? Euen by conſidering thus with your ſelues: Go to, Our Lord might commaund vs peremptorily at one word: for he hath full ſouereintie ouer vs, and we be his by nature. And when we haue all of vs ſtreined our ſelues to the vttermoſt of our power, yet can wee not doe as we ought to doe. Yet notwithſtãding, he will not be ſerued at our handes wout recompence, but he ſaith ỹ if we doe but a peece of that which is due to him, he bindeth himſelfe to vs for it. Sith we ſee this, are we not too leawd if wee bee not touched to the quick, & amend not all ſlothfulneſſe, to go forth vnto God luſtily without ſtopping for any worldly impedimẽt or hinderance? That is ỹ ſtrength which Moſes ſpeakes of here.

And he addeth hereunto, that it is not enough to be entred into the land: but wee muſt alſo abide and dwell there: for if wee haue once receiued the promiſe of ſaluation, and God hath bleſſed vs & made vs to proſper to ỹ worldward: we muſt not thereupon fall a ſleepe, but wee muſt ſtill folowe our cauſe. We know that this life is a way, and therefore wee muſt ſtill goe on foreward. And 2.Cor.5.6.
whither is it that God calleth vs? Saith he to vs, when ye haue gone on a little way, tary ſtill intangled in the world? No: but we muſt trauel ſtil vpward to the heauenly lyfe. And that can not be done without forſaking the world continually more and more. Then let vs marke well, how it is told vs here, ỹ when God hath once put vs in hope of ſaluation, ſo as he hath taken vs into his Church and into his flocke, and begunne to doe vs good: we muſt not fal aſleepe vpon it, but proceede on ſtil, aſſuring our ſelues ỹ al is to no purpoſe, vnleſſe wee hold out to our liues end, without ceaſing or failing in the middes of our way. This is it ỹ Moſes meant, in ſaying ỹ when the people were once entered into ỹ lande, it behoued them to haue an eye to ỹ euerlaſting inioying & poſſeſſing thereof which had bin promiſed them with the ſame. Hauing ſaid ſo, he addeth that the land of Chanaã is not as the land of Egipt. And why? For your being in Egipt (ſaith he) was as it had bin in a garden. For men doe water their gardens, ſo as when they haue ſowed or ſet their herbes, they wil haue water at hand to moyſten thẽ wal. After ỹ ſame maner was it with you in ỹ land of Egypt, which is watered partly by cunning, & partly by nature. For we muſt vnderſtãd, ỹ that land hath one propertie which all other landes haue not. We reade not ỹ any other coũtrie of the world is vnmoyſtened with raine and ſhowers frõ aboue, ſaue only Egypt. For once a yeere ỹ riuer Nilus ouerfloweth his banckes, & according to ỹ growing therof, ſo doth it behight thẽ abundance of fruites. Inſomuch ỹ if it ouerflowe not aboue fiue or ſixe foote deep, it is a token of dearth, as who ſhould ſay ỹ God threateneth famine to ỹ whole countrie. If it riſe to twẽtie foote or ſomewhat vpward, well, there will be ſome abundance. But if it increace to thirtie or fortie foote, then will there be much more: ſo as in Egypt they haue none other ſigne of a good yeere & a fruiteful harueſt, than the ouerflowing of Nilus. Whereas all other riuers doe marre the landes where they ouerflowe: and although they be muddie, yet doe they much harme: This riuer, by his ouerflowing, cauſeth ỹ land to yeeld great abũdance. That is ỹ cauſe why it is ſaid, ỹ at ỹ time ỹ Iſraelites had as it were euery man his garden, & were faine to haue water to moiſtẽ thẽ wall after ỹ maner of ỹ coũtrie, which is cut into many ditches & trẽches to water the land wall: & all this is according to ỹ ordinance which God hath ſet there. But here Moſes telleth the Iſraelites, that it ſhall not be ſo with thé in the land of Chanaan. For why? There is ſmall ſtore of riuers in many of the countries, yea and in the moſt part of them. True it is that Iordan paſſeth through it, and there are certaine lakes alſo: but that is all, and yet one of them ſerues but to infect the land. For the lake where Sodom ſtood, did rather marre the countrie, than yeeld any commoditie. And therewithall wee ſee how the fathers had much adoe to digge pittes, and were in daunger to be vndone with drought: inſomuch that they were driuen fró place to place for lacke of water. Ye ſee then that the land of Chanaan was not watered after the maner of Egypt, neither had it water at hand and at commandement as Egypt had. And therefore is it ſayd vnto them, See how God viſiteth the land of Egypt but once a yere: and if the riuer flowe luſtily ouer all the countrie, it is as good as if he had rayned neuer ſo much vpon it, ſo as the Egyptians are ſure of a good harueſt, when the riuer hath increaſed after that faſhion. But your God muſt be faine to ſend you raine and conuenient moyſture from aboue, from the one end of the yeere to the other. When yee haue ſowen your ſeede, ye muſt waite for raine from aboue, and thinke thus with your ſelues, Alas Lord, wilt not thou make the ſeede to increaſe which wee haue layd into the ground? Now muſt thou ſhew that thou regardeſt vs, and that it is thy wil that our labour ſhal proſper. And when thou haſt ſo giuē vs raine, we muſt be faine to returne againe and looke vp ſtill to heauen, that thou our God maiſt haue thine eyes cōtinually vpon the land, to make it yeelde fruite. For it is not enough for you ỹ your God ſend you rayne once; but he muſt be faine to hold on ſtill: for other way there is none to water ỹ land, except your God power out his bleſſing vppon you from heauen. Otherwiſe the land muſt needes lye dry and vntilled. Thus doe we ſee how Moſeſes meaning is, to ſtirre vp the people to liue in awe and feare, and to prouoke them to call vppon God continually, and therewithall to ſubmit themſelues to his gouernment, and to conſider how great need they haue of his help, ſo as they may ſay: Alas Lord, what will become of vs if thou bleſſe vs not?

Moreouer hee putteth them in minde alſo, to conſider what a fatherly care God had of ỹ land of Chanaan, ſith it was his pleaſure to raine ſo vpon it, not for once a yeere onely, but yerely from the beginning of the yere to the ende of it. That is the effect of the thinges that Moſes intended to ſay here. And thereby wee be done to vnderſtand, that Gods bringing of vs into diſtreſſe and neceſſitie, is to prouoke vs to repaire vnto him, and to looke vp to his goodneſſe, ſo as wee ſhould not onely haue cauſe to giue him thankes for his benefites; but alſo bee driuen to call vpon him by being held at the ſtaues end, and thereupon dayly reſorte vnto him. After the ſame maner, wee ſee nowadayes how wee haue needé of faire weather; and that not for fower or fiue dayes in a yeere: but as oftē as ſeed is to be layde into the ground, or the lande is to be tilled; or elſe we ſee men coulde not put the plough into the ground, nor ſowe their corne: if they ſhould, it would rotte immediately, and neuer take roote in the earth. Againe the grapes would rotte vppon the vines and neuer ripen. Neuertheleſſe, when corne is layde into the ground, it requireth rayne; and it is mard if there followe an vnmeaſurable drought. Afterward in ſōmertime when harueſt commeth, the time muſt be fit for it, and likewiſe for dreſſing of vines and for mowing of graſſe. To be ſhort, all the yeere long God calleth vs to him, by making vs to haue needé of him. And although wee were not prouoked at all; yet the very wit and vnderſtanding that he giueth vs by nature, may cauſe vs to ſee that hee calleth vs dayly to come vnto him, and to put our whole truſt in his goodneſſe. This is the thing in effect which we haue to remember vppon this text.

But the chiefe point is to put this leſſon well in practiſe. And therefore whenſoeuer we ſee that our God hath looked vppon vs throughout all the yeere; let vs vnderſtand that his intent was to ſhewe the more familiarly, what a fatherly care he hath ouer vs. For if wee had any riuer lyke to Nilus which watered the land in ſtead of rayne: wee would thinke thus with our ſelues; well, now hath God done pitying of vs for this yeere: & it would not touch vs ſo wel, as when we ſee ỹ God not onely regardeth vs in the ſpring-time, but alſo holdeth on all the yeere lóg, ſo as there is not any one day of all the yere, wherein we may not behold Gods wonderful goodneſſe, in making ỹ earth to yeeld fruite for our ſuſtenance, by conſidering how he is faine one while to hold ỹ raine lockt vp, & another while to opē the windowes & watergates of heauen, that wee may haue moyſture in due ſeaſon: How hee is faine to ſend heate, and to aſſwage it againe: & to ſend cold and to abate it againe; how hee is faine to ſend faire weather & fowle, and to temper the one with the other: ſo as finally, we haue needé of all theſe diuerſities, in their due times and ſeaſons. And ſith we ſee that God prouideth vs of all theſe thinges; ought wee not to be the better aſſured that he hath a continuall regard of vs and neuer forgetteth vs, and that hee is a father to vs all the yeere long? Lyke as a man ỹ is mindful of his houſhold, riſeth betimes a morninges to goe to his buſineſſe; & when hee hath done one thing, looketh about if there bee any thing els to ſet in order; forecaſting in his minde how to diſpoſe the thinges ỹ are giuen him, ſo as the benefite thereof may redound to his whole houſhold: euen ſo God behaueth himſelfe as a houſholder towardes vs, ſo as hee ceaſeth not to watch for our benefite both earely and late; not that he is faine to toyle after the maner of men: but that howſoeuer the caſe ſtand, hee maketh vs to feele that he is more than a foſterfather to vs, & we be too blind & beaſtly if we conſider it not. Thus ye ſee how the practiſing of this leſſon of Moſeſes, conſiſteth in giuing thāks to our God, according to the varietie of ỹ time & weather which we perceiue in ỹ yere. And whē he hath prouided vs for the whole yeere; let vs assure our selues that hee hath had pitie of vs, and regarded vs, and neuer turned his eye from our benefite, to the end that we might be furnished and prouided thereof. Furthermore, it is not enough for vs to thanke God when we haue so felt his goodnesse: but lyke as Moses sayth here, that his eyes are alwayes vpon the landes ỹ are full of hils & dales, where hollow grouֹdes are not at commaundement to cut trenches in, nor streames at hand to water ỹ fields as it were gardens: so when we thinke vpon those thinges, we must beare in minde that God hath his eyes continually vpon vs, to ỹ end that we alsoֹ should lift vp our eyes vnto him, to call vpon him and to resorte to him for succor all ỹ yeere long, & that when he hath giuen vs a good season, we should pray for the continuance thereof thereafter, as we should haue neede of it, and it ought to prouoke vs to doe ỹ lyke from day to day. But contrariwise, we see our owne negligence. For when thinges fall out according to our minde, wee doe as it were despise God. If we see there hath bin a good seede time, then go to, let vs make good cheere: seeing the seede time was so good, we are lyke to haue as good a harueſt. And doe we wonder ỹ God disappointeth vs of our desire, because of such vnthankefulnesse? What a leawdnesse is ỹ? God hath his eyes vpon vs, & yet we shut our eyes at him, & kicke & spurne against him, & mocke at him: and thinke we ỹ he either ought or can beare ẇ such beastlynesse? Nay rather, seeing ỹ he sayth first, My children, I looke vpon you & haue a care of you, to prouide sustenance for you: it would become vs to be answerable vnto him. Seeing ỹ our Lord beginneth after ỹ fashion, what ought we to doe? Ought we not at leastwise to say, well Lord, and we likewise will haue an eye vnto thee? Nay, contrariwise, when we haue receiued benefites at his hand, we fall to kicking against him. He would take vs into his protection, & we fall to flinging away from him. Againe, where is ỹ care ỹ we ought to haue to cal vpon him? It would become vs to consider thus with our selues, Our Lord holdeth vs as it were at ỹ staues end, to ỹ intent we should stand in awe of him: now therefore, let vs not giue our lustes the head: as if a father shoulde say to his children, sirs, looke ỹ yee apply your selues wel, the one of you at his booke and the other at his worke, & then shall ye haue your dinners, & else ye shall haue nothing. If a father hold his childrē at that point, so as they knowe not wether they shall haue meate & drinke or no, except it appeare that they haue done some good, surely it will moue thē though they haue no reason nor vnderstanding. Behold, our God could well giue vs at once all that euer we need: or else he could in one day shewe vs ỹ the yere should be prosperous, so as there should bee both a good harueſt and a good vintage: but he wil not doe it. When wee haue passed ouer one day, we must beginne againe the next day to pray to him: & God hath ordeined that it should be so, because he sees wel ỹ it is more thā requisite for vs to be held in awe. And therefore let vs learne to profite our selues by this lesson: & whensoeuer we want raine, let vs beware ỹ we be patient, in waiting quietly till God open ỹ clowdes. And on ỹ other side, when he voutsafeth to water ỹ earth; let vs vnderstand ỹ he giueth vs sustenance ẇ his owne hand, and let vs call vpon him dayly: & sith wee perceiue ỹ he watcheth for vs; let vs lykewise haue our eyes vpon him againe. Thus ye see in effect what Moses meant to declare here.

Now he addeth thereunto; If ye keepe the commaundements which I set before you, so as ye loue your God, & serue him with all your hearts, in the landes which I will giue you. Here Moses putteth ỹ people in minde againe what ỹ true seruice of God is: namely ỹ we learne to obey him. This hath bin sufficiently layd forth alreadie: but yet is it not ẇout cause ỹ the holy Ghost speaketh of it so often. For it standeth vs in hand to haue such warnings set before vs, as it were euery minute of an howre. And for proofe thereof, how serue wee God, but by force & constreint? We haue no willingnesse nor desire at all to it. But our Lord telleth vs ỹ he accepteth no seruice ỹ is done vnto him, except it come from the heart, & that wee loue him as our father, according as it is sayd in ỹ psalme, ỹ we cannot feare God but because he sheweth himselfe mercifull vnto vs. For so long as we cōceiue nothing in God but rigor; we can doe nothing else but shun him, & shrinke away from him as farre as is possible: & although wee be constreined to looke vnto him, yet shall hee drawe nothing ỹ is aught worth frō vs. Therfore ỹ first step to serue God wel & to loue him, is to knowe his fauorableneſſe, that we may rest vpon it, & looke for mercie & fauor at his hand. For lyke as in ỹ sayd hundred & thirtie psalme: so also here, mention is made of obediēce after loue, to shew vs ỹ it is not enough to pretend ỹ seruice of God; but that we must so submit our selues to him, as we may say, Lord thou hast giuen vs the grace to rule our lyfe aright; & therefore voutsafe to gouern vs in such sort, as none of vs may take leaue to doe what he list, but all of vs may harkē simply to thy voyce, to submit our selues thereunto. Psal. 130. 4. 7.

Now let vs come to ỹ word ỹ Moses addeth; which is, I will giue. Here he speaketh in the person of God. He had sayd afore, looke ỹ yee obey the cōmandements which I set before you, & the Lord your God will blesse you. And now he sayth: I will giue, as though he himself were god. It is not ẇout cause ỹ he chaungeth the person after that fashion: for it serueth to giue the greater authoritie to his doctrine, & to make it to be the better receiued. For we be inclined to such contempt & skornefulneſſe, ỹ when God speaketh vnto vs by men, we make no account of it, because his worde is preached vnto vs by mortall men. Behold, a man speaketh in the pulpit, & we bee not touched with his doctrine as were requisite. It ought to haue there a heauenly maiestie; and we be so dull and grosse, that we perceiue not how it is God that speaketh there. In this respect Moses saith here; I will giue thee: and yet for al ỹ, he was not able to giue them one drop of raine. And what is his giuing then? Verily hee sheweth that his speaking is not of himselfe, but of God,

God, and therefore that wee muſt receiue it as if God had ſpoken it with his owne mouth, and had ſhewed himſelfe in viſible ſhape, and vttered his glorie to the eye. Let vs marke well then that in this text we be done to vnderſtand, that when we come to the hearing of a ſermon or to the reading of the holy ſcripture, wee muſt not bring deafe eares with vs to bee no whit moued at the wordes, nor to bee quickened vp by the commaundementes and exhortations that are giuen vs there: but wee muſt yeelde our ſelues vnto our God, aſſuring our ſelues that although he ſerue his turne by men as his inſtrumentes, yet is it hee himſelfe that ſendeth the meſſage and authoriſeth the word, according to this ſaying of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: Hee that heareth you heareth me, and he that receiueth you receiueth mee. And whoſoeuer reiecteth you, reiecteth mee alſo, and lykewiſe my father that ſent me. Ye ſee then how it is an open rebelling againſt God, when wee diſdayne to heare his word that is preached vnto vs by men, and to heare it with as much humilitie as if he himſelfe came downe vnto vs, or as if he ſent it vs by the Angels of heauen. That is the matter which Moſes meant to ſhewe here.

Now in the end he ſayth, that they ſhall haue their fill, and be well maintained, when they ſhall haue kept Gods commaundements after that faſhion. Wee haue two points to marke in this text for a concluſion. The firſt is, that our Lord telleth his people, that hee wil not barely giue them whatſoeuer is needefull for them: but alſo giue them their fil of his benefits, ſo as they ſhal be through ly ſatiſfyed with them. That is for the one. The ſecond is a comming backe to that which hath bin touched alreadie: namely, that although God ſpeake but of temporall goods, ſuch as concerne but this tranſitorie lyfe; yet hee leadeth them further thereby. Firſt therefore let vs vnderſtand, that God not onely giueth and beſtoweth vppon vs, ſuch thinges as hee knoweth to be needefull for vs; but alſo inlargeth and extendeth his riches yet further, by vſing a kinde of ouermeaſure. And in very deede wee ſee it to be ſo. For as in reſpect of naturall neceſſitie, what needed wee more than bread and water? But God addeth wine to cõfort and glad mans heart, as is ſayd in the pſalme. Againe wee ſee he vouſafeth to pleaſure vs after all ſortes, by ſending vs ſo many thinges as are in the worlde to delight vs withall, which are all witneſſes of his liberalitie towardes vs, in that he not onely prouideth vs of all the thinges which we coulde not forbeare; but alſo addeth as an ouerplus, a great number of good thinges that ſerue for our pleaſure: Whereby wee ought to bee the more prouoked to loue him, and they ought to bee as winges to vs, wherewith to fly vnto him. But contrariwiſe, if God giue vs ſtore, wee cannot forbeare to pamper our ſelues lyke brute beaſts, inſomuch that wee be wedded to this world. I ſpeake not only of drunkards and Gluttons that cram themſelues till they be without wit & reaſon: but alſo of all ſuch as are in loue with their delicates and delightes, ſo as if they haue abundance more than ordinarie, they cannot holde themſelues within any meaſure, but thereupon doe fall aſleepe, and in ſtead of being prouoked to reſort vnto God, doe runne away from him, or rather lye weltring and bathing of theſelues in their pleaſures, and forget themſelues I wote not how. Wherefore let vs marke wel, that whē God giueth vs abundance, it is not to miniſter occaſion of diſorder, but to make vs the more in loue with him, foraſmuch as he handleth vs not as ſeruantes or hirelinges, but as his owne children, from whom he withholdeth nothing. Now the firſt we ſee this, let vs learne to fare ẏ better by it. Thus much concerning ẏ word Fill. But yet let vs marke, ẏ although God giue vs not our fill; yet faileth he not to ſhewe his freegoodneſſe in ſo dooing, inſomuch that there was neuer yet ſo great a famin, but that our Lord hath alwayes ſhewed himſelfe a father, yea and more than a father towardes men: but ill is that conſidered of vs. And that is a cauſe alſo why hee beſtoweth not ſo much as were requiſite. Becauſe Gods benefites haue ſo ill intertainment at our handes, he alſo is faine to ſhut his bleſſings from vs, and to lette vs alone in want and penurie. Thus much concerning the firſt poynt.

And touching the ſecond, let vs marke that when God feedeth and maintaineth vs in this world euen to our owne contentation; the ſame muſt be a prouocation to vs to conſider by faith, the infinite riches that are reſerued for vs aboue in heauen. It is ſayd in the pſalme, I ſhal haue my fill of the abundance of thy goodneſſe. And in an other place it is ſaide, Lorde howe greate is the abundance of thy goodnes, which thou haſt layd vp for them that loue thee? True it is that God maketh vs to feele the abundance of his goodneſſe, partly euen in this world: but yet ſhall we neuer haue our fill of it, (as is ſaid in the ſixteenth pſalme) vntill our Lord haue taken vs vp to himſelf, & rid vs quite out of this world. And ſo let vs marke, that the full meaſure of the good things that are promiſed vs, & which we looke to inioy, is not to be found here beneath, it is enough that we ſee ſome part of them. Yea and although our Lord beſtow but as much vppon vs as he ſeeth requiſite for our infirmitie: Let vs alwayes be led vp higher therby, ſo as it may make vs to conſider, ẏ when the time commeth wherein God wil ſhewe himſelfe vnto vs face to face, then ſhall we be linked much neerer to him, than we be now: and (to be ſhort,) that whē we be gathered vp into his heauēly kingdome, then we ſhall haue our fill of all thinges. Ye ſee then that we muſt ſo paſſe through this world, as we muſt not take our fill, contentation, and reſt in the thinges that are here, but bee drawen euer higher and higher to the ſpirituall good thinges: and that if we linger in penurie heere beneath, we muſt conſider that by that meane God prouoketh vs to come vnto him, vntill wee bee perfectly vnited vnto him, as the vnion ſhalbe at the laſt day.

Pſal.17.15.

Now let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good GOD with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs feele thē better than we haue done, ſo as it may cauſe vs to hũble our ſelues continually, and to miſlyke of our ſelues, and to aske him forgiueneſſe of the great number of ſinnes and iniquities which we haue committed; and that in the meane while it may pleaſe him to beare with vs in our weakeneſſe, vntill he haue clothed vs againe with his owne righteouſneſſe, and alſo taken vs vp into his endleſſe glorie. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs but alſo to all, &c.

On Wednesday the xxv of September. 1555.

The Lxxvij Sermon which is the fourth vppon the eleuenth Chapter.

16 Beware that your heart bee not beguyled, and that yee turne not away to ſerue other Gods, and to bow downe before them,

17 Leaſt the wrath of your God bee kindled againſt you, and hee ſhut vp the heauen that it raine not, and the earth yeeld not her fruit, and leaſt ye periſh ſodenly from of the good Land which the Lord giueth you.

18 Therefore lay vp theſe wordes in your heartes and in your mindes, and tye them for a token to your hands, & let thẽ be as frontlets written between your eys.

19 And teach thẽ to your childrẽ, talking of thẽ when thou art at home in thine houſe, & when thou goeſt abroad, and when thou lyeſt down, & when thou riſeſt.

20 See thou write them vppon the portals and gates of thy houſe, 21 That your dayes & the dayes of your children, may be increaſed in the Land which the Lord ſware to your fathers to giue you, as lõg as ỹ skyes are ouer ỹ earth.

WHen as Moſes ſayth here, that men muſt beware that they ouerſhoote not themſelues: thereby he doth vs to vnderſtand, howe frail we be, & how inclined vnto euill, if we be not diligently reſtreined by the feare of God, & by continuall minding of ỹ doctrine whereby he guideth and gouerneth vs. To our ſeeming it had bin enough to haue ſayd; Keep the cõmandements of your God. Yee ſee what he requireth of you: ſith yee know his will, holde your ſelues to it. But foraſmuch as men are vnconſtant, & a ſmall thing or nothing will make them ſtart out of ỹ right way: he addeth yet further this warning, that they ſhould beware; As if he ſhould ſay; Syrs, keepe good watch. Why ſo? For wee ſhall be ſurpriſed by and by, if we watch not to withſtand Satans temptations & wiles. Specially when ỹ caſe cõcerneth ỹ ſeruing of God, wee bee ſtreightwayes turned aſide, and we need none other bodie to tempt vs, for euery man ſhall finde continually ſome ſeede of ſuperſtition in his owne heart, and the minde of man is a warehouſe of Idolatrie, ſo as euen without ſchõoling, euery of vs will forge idols, & ouerthrow the ſeruice of God. For ỹ diuell ſleepes not, ne ceaſeth to intangle vs in many fond & wicked fancies. Hereby therefore we may iudge how needefull this warning is for vs, where we be willed to be watchfull. Yea and wee know ỹ frailetie of our minde to be ſuch, ỹ if wee be not well fenced to wſtand Satans tẽptations conſtantly, he wil ſoon haue turned vs out of the way of ſaluation, & from ỹ pure doctrine of God. And therefore let vs vnderſtand at a word, ỹ we haue need to ſtand continually vpon our garde, as long as we liue in this mortall lyfe. For why? On the one ſide ỹ diuell tempteth vs, & hath an infinite number of wiles to winde about vs euery minute of an howre: & although his tẽptations were not ſo great as they be; yet are we ſo weake of our ſelues, ỹ euery thing of nothing is able to ouerthrowe vs. Sith it is ſo with vs, let vs watch, ſpecially ſeeing ỹ the ſpirit of God warneth vs ſo to doe. But what? It is well ſeene how we be takẽ vnwares & vnprouided, and God puniſheth our negligence in falling ſo aſleepe, as though wee were at peace & reſt here. Nay our life muſt bee kept occupyed here as though there were continuall warre, & the diuell faileth not to put vs to infinite aſſaultes & skirmiſhes on all ſides. And therefore ſeeing we on our ſide be ſo ſleepie, and our enemie on ỹ other ſide is ſo watching to cut our throates: it is good reaſon ỹ we ſhould ſo be ouercome. For ſeeing ỹ God warneth vs to ſtand at our defence, & we voutſafe not to be mindeful of it, & to cal vpon him & to refer our ſelues vnto his protectiõ; muſt he not needes ſhew vs by experience, ỹ his warning of vs is not wout cauſe? Yes; & therefore let vs beare this exhortation in mind, & ſpecially when God is to be ſerued (as I ſaid afore), let vs aſſure our ſelues there needeth nothing to dazle our eies, as appeareth by experience. As ſoone as ỹ true & pure religion is ſtabliſhed in any place; by & by mẽ fal to imbacing of it; for their very nature affordeth it. And therfore ſo much ỹ more behoueth it vs to hold our ſelues as impriſoned, and not to ſwarue one way nor other, ỹ we may hold our ſelues continually in ỹ pure ſimplicitie of Gods word. Againe let vs not be out of quiet though neuer ſo many mẽ do turne out of ỹ right way: for it is their kinde ſo to do. Wherfore let vs ſtrengthẽ our ſelues againſt ſuch ſtumblingblocks, when we ſee corruptions creepe in againe, & that ſuch as were in a good trade doe diſgrace themſelues. Sith it is ſo ỹ men doe eaſily fall aſleepe, & take no heede to themſelues: let vs not maruell though euery thing of nothing do corrupt them. Thus ye ſee how this ſentence may ſerue vs to dubble purpoſe.

1. Pet. 5. 8.

And it is ſayde expreſly, that our hearties ſhould

not be beguiled. For it is not enough for a man to abſteine from doing of euill wilfully: but alſo all fond deuotiõs are l, kewiſe condemned, becauſe our Lord wil not haue men to be ſelfewiſe, but to obey ſimply whatſoeuer God commandeth thẽ. Men thinke it to be a reaſonable excuſe before God, when they can ſay, I meant to doe wel: but that meant is but a mockerie, as Moſes ſheweth here. And for proof thereof, although our harts be beguiled, ſo as men perceiue not their owne euil doings and deſtruction, but make their reckoning that God will take their doinges in good worth: yet are they condemned here (as ye ſee) with all their good intentes, and they faile not to offend God neuertheleſſe, and in offending him they faile not alſo to heape vp vengeance vpon their owne heads. And why ſo? Euen becauſe they walke not in obedience vnto him. Now then, let vs learne, not to sheeld or ſhrowd our ſelues any more vnder deuotions after the fooliſhe maner that hath reigned too much in the world: but let vs vnderſtand that our Lord will haue vs to fetch light at his word, and to rule our liues by that. And ſith he is ſo good to vs as to teach vs what is good, to the intent that Satan may not haue any entrance into vs, but that hee may be put backe though hee goe prying about vs and indeuour to vndermine vs, and ſeeke neuer ſo many bywayes to creepe into vs: let vs aſſure our ſelues throughly, ỹ we haue but only one way, from ỹ which it is not lawful for vs to ſtep aſide in any wiſe. And when we ſtand ſo vpon our gard, let vs not doubt but ỹ God will reach vs his hand, & ſo fence vs on all ſides, as Satan may well practiſe what he liſteth, but hee ſhal neuer win any thing at our handes. For otherwiſe this exhortation were to no purpoſe. If God ſhould ſay vnto vs, beware, & in the meane while we had no meanes to beware, hee might ſeeme to mocke vs. But inaſmuch as when wee reſorte vnto him, he voutſafeth to guide vs, by giuing vs ỹ ſpirit of wiſedome & diſcretion, to ỹ end we ſhould not be deceiued: ſurely whatſoeuer the deuill practiſe, yet ſhall he not preuaile, but we ſhall euer ouercome his temptations, at leaſtwiſe if wee ſuffer our ſelues to be gouerned by Gods pure word, ſo as wee forſake our owne fanſies, & truſt not to our own wit, but pray God to inlighten vs, and to ſhew vs by his holy ſpirit, what is acceptable vnto him. When wee goe to worke after that faſhion, ſo as our warineſſe is matched with humiltie, it is certeine ỹ God will alwayes reach vs out his mightie hand. Thus ye ſee that the thing which we haue to put in vre, is firſt of all to be vigilant & to keepe good watch: and ſecõdly that foraſmuch as we know we may quickly be deceiued, we muſt pray God to defẽd vs, & vtterly diſtruſting our ſelues, leane onely vnto him. Theſe two thinges wil ſo preſerue vs, that we ſhall continually keepe ỹ right way, euẽ in the middeſt of darkneſſe. For why? God himſelfe will ſerue vs both for Sunne and Moone, as it is ſayd in the Prophet Eſay.

Eſa. 60. 19. 20.

And now by the way he ſheweth that if ỹ children of Iſrael continued not in ỹ ſeruing of God and in his pure religion, they were leſſe to bee excuſed than all the infidels of the world: for it is ſaid vnto them, turne not away. Men that haue neuer had any good inſtruction, are by nature as brute beaſtes; but when God hath called vs and ſhewed vs the true ſoundeneſſe, then if we faile afterward, it is not with vs as with the ſillie infidels that haue euer bin blinde and ignorant, but it is a rebellious turning away vnto wickednes, as though we meant to ſpite our God by ſeparating our ſelues from him, by renouncing the couenant which he had made wt vs, to hold vs vnder his ſubiection. This ſaying therefore ought to be well weyed, & ſpecially of vs in theſe dayes which haue the pure trueth of ỹ Goſpel, whereas wee ſee how all our neighbours round about vs runne headlong on ſtill in blindneſſe. In deede it is pitie ỹ they haue not knowen Gods trueth; but yet ſhal not ỹ excuſe them. But what is to be ſayd to vs in compariſon of them, ſeeing that our God hath ſhewed himſelfe to vs, & hath layd the matter ſo playne before vs, as we cãot miſſe but knowe how to obey him? Wherefore let vs take heede ỹ we keepe on our courſe, when God ſhall haue ſet vs in ỹ way of his obedience, & taught vs how to do it. Let vs beware (I ſay) that we ſtep not aſide in any wiſe, vnleſſe we intẽd to be worthie of dubble blame. Let vs bethinke vs of this ſaying, that ỹ ſeruant which knoweth his maiſters will, ſhal haue dubble puniſhment if he doe it not. And ỹ we may ſo doe, let vs ſeeke to ſettle our ſelues ỹ more by Gods word. When he hath once told vs what he would haue vs to doe, let vs profite therein, & let vs be ſo ſtrẽgthened thereby, ỹ the diuel (doe what he can, and inforce hee himſelfe neuerſomuch againſt vs) may not bee able to turne vs out of the way.

1. Tim. 3. 16

Luk. 12. 47.

Now he ſpeaketh afterward of ſtrange Gods. For the welſpring of all euil, is the not knowing what God we ſhould ſerue. If men bee to ſeeke in that point, needes muſt all the reſt of their lyfe be vterly vncerteine, & wrapped vp altogether in error. And therefore it is not for naught ỹ God ſtãdeth vpon this point, ỹ men ſhould know him, & ſerue & worſhip onely him alone. For when wee ſay we muſt ſerue no ſtrange Gods: it importeth two thinges. The firſt is that we ſhould be able to diſcern who is our God, ſo as we ground not our ſelues vpon falſe opinion or fanſie, but vpon ſubſtantial certeintie: which thing cannot be if we giue way to our own mother wit. For ỹ is ỹ roote whence all the ſuperſtitions in the worlde haue ſprong. And the very cauſe of ỹ huge confuſion ỹ is ſtill in the world at this day, is that men take leaue continually to imagin whatſoeuer comes in their heads. O (ſay they) I trow God will lyke wel of this: & to my ſeeming, ſuch a thing is good. Now if men behaue themſelues ſo after their owne imagination, all things muſt needes be out of order. Ye ſee it is euen a very ſeagulfe. Therefore let vs learne to giue eare to God when hee ſpeakes to vs, & let vs not take leaue to cõceiue any thing of him, otherwiſe than is ſhewed vs by his worde. This then is the firſt point, that we ſhould learne to diſcerne our God from all the Idols which the world forgeth to it ſelfe: & therewithall ỹ we ſhould not attempt any thing, but that which he alloweth. For ỹ Papistes can wel enough protest, ỹ their intent is to serue ỹ God ỹ made both heauen & earth; & so also doe the Iewes & Turkes: ỹ case is common to them all. But yet for al ỹ, ye see how ỹ Turks haue wounde themselues into a maze of superstitions, through ỹ deceitfulnesse of their Mahomet who hath bewitched them. Again ỹ Iewes on their parte are growen out of kinde, & haue mingled ỹ Lawe w their owne inuentions, refusing ỹ redeemer that had bin promised them, who is the very foundation of all ỹ religiō which they should haue held. And as for ỹ Papists, ỹ world sees how they haue corrupted all trueth, & turned it vtterly into lying. Therefore let vs learne, ỹ if we will not worship straunge Gods, we must so holde our selues in awe, as we attempt not any thing, vnlesse we be sure ỹ it is according to Gods will. For whensoeuer we fal to worshipping him after our owne deuice; we doe set vp an idoll in our owne braine: & that is a thing which he vtterly misslyketh, reiecteth, and abhorreth. Thus ye see ỹ the thing which we haue to remember vpon this place is, ỹ seeing God hath graunted vs ỹ grace to haue his word to be our guide, we ought to be ỹ more watchfull: & sith we be so weake as we neede not any thing to thrust vs out of the way; wee ought to take so much ỹ moore heede, ỹ we may profit dayly by his word. And besides ỹ, let vs assure our selues throughly, that it is not enough for vs to weene we doe well: for we win nothing by being deceiued, our case is neuer a whit amended by it before God: & therefore let vs learn to pray him to inlighten vs. And therewithall let vs knowe, ỹ whē God hath shewed vs his wil, we must hold vs to it without adding aught thereto. Thus yee see in effect what we haue to remēber vpon this text of Moses.

Now he addeth immediately, that men shoulde lay vp the things in their hearties which he telleth thē, & that they shoulde make a continuall monument of them: as if it were of bracelets about their wristes, or of attyres on their heades, or of deuices in writing at the entrance of their dores: to the intent they might occasion them so thinke vppon the lawe of God: so as at their ryssing in the morning, & at their going to bed at night, men should talke & conferre of it, that their children might learne thereby. Hereby Moses sheweth yet better, ỹ vnlesse men be held as it were by force, they will soone start away frō God: Lyke as whē a man thinkes he hath made a Foxe tame, if he let him alone but one halfe day, he returnes againe to his kinde by and by. Euen so is it with vs. We be so wilde, ỹ although it may seeme for a time that we be throughly brought home vnto God, & very wel reformed: yet in ỹ turning of a hand all is quite forgotten. And therefore our Lord is faine to put vs in remēbrance, (as hee doth in this text) & to quicken vs vp to inforce out selues to seeke al the means and helps ỹ may be, to hold our selues in awe vnder his obedience. That is the cause why he saith, ỹ folke shoulde make thē frontlets as ornaments of their heads. Whereas men doe commonly weare brooches, buttons, & such other thinges, & women weare billiments of gold and other costly attyres vpon their heades: the attire of the faithful must be to haue some remembrāce of Gods law. In stead of bracelets & other fine toyes to apparell & deck our selues wal, we must vse such an attyre as may teach vs to garnish our soules, yea & to giue our selues wholy to God, & to submit our selues altogether to his word. In stead of the hauing of gay things to furnish our houses withal for delight, we must haue some such thing as may put vs in minde to say, These are the things that our God calleth vs vnto, he will neuer haue vs to forget him. And if we haue ouershot our selues, so as our minds do wander abrode, he calleth vs home againe, & telleth vs ỹ we must not raunge so after our own vaine fansies. Thus we see ỹ summe of that which is contained here. We haue had the like saying in the sixth Chapter. But yet this sheweth vs more expresly, that it is not ynough for vs to haue withdrawen our selues for once frō our vain and wandering imaginations: but God must bee faine to bring vs to that point againe, by putting vs in minde of our slouth and negligence, or else we shall dwel in it continually, and he must be faine also to shewe vs the weakenesse & feebleneſse of our spirites. And in deede, very experience shewes it: for the whisking of a flye before our eyes, is ynough to make vs run after it, & to do what we can to stop her. Wee builde castles in ỹ aire, & by and by al vanisheth away. Now then seeing there are so many vanities in our braine, do we wonder ỹ we doe very quickly start away from God? What a nomber of occasions are there in this world, to turne vs this way & that way, so as we shal be led & caried quite away ere euer we thinke on it? Again, Satan is such a suttle Sire, that if we be not wel armed against him, we shal neuer continue in ỹ obeying of our God. This repetition therfore is not superfluous, where God telleth vs again, ỹ it is good for vs to haue his law written euerywhere, so as we might reade his cōmandements vpon our fingers. And he hath disposed them into ten sentences, to the end they should be ỹ better knowen vnto vs. For looke how many fingers there are vpō our hāds, so many are ỹ commandements of God, to ỹ intent they should be ỹ easier to beare in remēbrāce: so as there needeth no lōg registers, (which were hard to carie away,) forasmuch as he hath giuen vs so short a rule, ỹ if we be long in learning of it, we proue our selues to be wilful. To be short, if we shut not our eyes wilfully, we cānot say but ỹ we may soon haue lerned ỹ things which our god sheweth vs. Againe sith it is his wil ỹ in stead of ỹ deckings whereunto both men & women are too much giuen through fond desire of vainglorie, wee should haue wherewith to put our selues in mind of his lawe, ỹ we might be held in awe by it: what excuse wil there be for vs, if we fal to going astray, or if we bee wedded to this world; or giue our selues to wickednesse? Thus much concerning this text.

Deut. 6. 7. 8.

But according to ỹ fashion of ỹ world, which is alwaies giuen to hypocrisie, & to shamefull mocking at al Gods ordinances, ỹ Iewes made them frontlets of certaine sentences of Gods law, and they obserued the law very well as in respect of the

ỹ words ỹ are set down here. For they had bracelets of them, & rolles, & attires on their heads, so as it might seeme ỹ there was nothing but holinesse in them. Also they had the commaundementes written in their houses. All this (say I) was well done. But they surmissed that they serued God by these outward shewes: and that was nothing so. We also for our part should come to the same point lykewise, if wee considered not what the will of our God is, to submit our selues thereto. For as I said afore) hypocrisie is so rooted in mans nature, that they would alwayes be dalying with God, & content him with counterfeitings, so as there might be nothing but dissimulation: & yet for all that, they beare themselues in hand, ỹ he ought to hold thē discharged. But we must marke that God will not bee serued by the wryting of some sentence of his Lawe vpon a post or a doore, or at the entrie of a house; his meaning is nothing so. But what? Forasmuch as he seeth that we be short witted, & that although we haue bin taught his word duely, yet we bee easily turned away frō it; it is not without cause ỹ he will haue vs to seeke all the helpes that can be, ỹ we may haue the better stay of our selues, & learne the remedies of our frailetie, sith wee need none other thing to turne vs out of ỹ way. And sith we know ỹ vice to be in vs, let vs bee the diligenter in seeking God, & let vs say: How is it possible ỹ I should hold my selfe in ỹ feare of my God? If I should passe but one day wout thinking vpon him & vpon his cōmaundements: I should forget him by & by. What is to be done then? As soone as I rise in the morning, the diuell offereth me ỹ, many lettes. Now it standeth me in hand to resist him, & that I tary not till mine enemie giue me ỹ assault: but I must think vpon my God who calleth me to him. Againe at night when I goe to bed, forasmuch as a nighttimes thē diuel ceaseth not to put many fond fancies in my head, and a man is not able to restreine his own minde from conceiuing some vaine thoughtes or other: it behoueth me to be stil fenced by being mindful of my God, & by referring my selfe vnto him & by resting wholy there. For if I tary long, I shall be so wdrawen from him, ỹ I shall not finde the way thither againe, lyke as when a man taketh no heed, but runs galloping on wout minding of his way whether he be right or no; ỹ longer he trauelleth, the further he is from his way; yea & if there be folke to set him in the way, & he regardeth not to take the right way againe, then is hee well woorthie to wander still out of his way. If one say to him, Sir, you must take on that hande, and yet he will needes goe the contrary way, as though his wits were rouing in the aire, & so goeth on stil in the ende hee shall find himselfe farre off from the right way. And therefore let vs beware that we be not so headstrong in our vanities, as not to indeuour to amend our selues. For (as I said afore) we may easily wander out of ỹ way euery minute of houre, so as we need not any thing to make vs stray frō ỹ right way. But if wee bee out of it, let vs seeke to come in againe by & by & to be reformed. For our God is Esa. 30.21. not far frō vs, he promiseth by his Prophet Esay, that he wilbe at our backs, as a scholemaster is at the back of a yong scholer. And like as ỹ mother ỹ hath her eye alwayes vpon ỹ childe ỹ she bringeth vp, wil alwayes be at hand by it: so God sheweth by a familiar example, ỹ he wil be at our elbowe, if so be that wee seeke him & suffer him to reforme vs. And therefore let vs learne to exercise our selues in ỹ studie all the time of our life. And specially sith we see there is so vrgent necessitie, let euery of vs quicken vp himselfe, & let vs not tarie til ỹ diuel haue caried vs so farre astray, ỹ we can no more return into ỹ way; but as soone as we set but one step awry, or swarue neuer so little aside, let vs bethink our selues againe by & by. Nay let vs not tarie so long; but let vs be aforehand, & let vs call so much ỹ more earnestly vpon our God to guide vs, & to preuent vs with his goodnesse. Let vs follow his word, which is ỹ true shooteanker, & the very lampe to giue vs light. Let vs open our eyes to behold the light that he sheweth vs, & let vs often call to minde ỹ things which we haue learned. Let euery of vs marke to what vice he is inclined, ỹ he may seeke the remedie of it, as some be giuen to one affection & some to another. And so when we once know our owne diseases, let vs apply the fit medicines vnto them. In Gods word we shall finde ynow of them wherewith to heale & cure vs, so we be willing to vse the good ỹ is offered vs there. Thus ye see in effect how we ought to practise this text. It consisteth not in the doing of a sort of Ceremonies, nor in pretending faire countenāces, by wearing texts of Gods law vpon our apparell, or by writing vp of a nomber of goodly sentences without any other minding of them at al; al ỹ (say I) is nothing. What then? We must seeke the meanes to confirme our selues in ỹ feare of our God, and to recouer againe into the right way: & bicause wee bee so weake, wee must receiue such remedies as God appointeth vs.

Aboue al things we must obserue that which is said here; Lay vp the commandements which I set before thee, in thy heart and in thy soule. To the intent then ỹ men should not stand poring vpon ỹ outward fashion & figure; that is the chiefe poynt. The marke (say I) whereat hee shootes, and whereunto all this doctrine is to bee referred, is that Gods lawe should be in our hearts and in our soules. For though wee haue it euer before our eyes, & at our tongues end, so as wee seeme to set neuer so great store by it, and yet in the meane while our heart is locked vp, & wee haue no courage to serue God: truely we doe but deceiue men, & procure our selues the sorer condemnation before God. Now then let vs haue Gods law written, let vs haue the sayings of it painted vpō our walles as in tables, & let vs haue thinges to put vs in minde of it earely & late; but let not ỹ serue for our discharge, as though God were to be payed in such coyne. How then? Let vs indeuer to haue it so grauen in our heartes, as it may neuer be wiped out againe, yea euen in our harts & in our soules, ỹ is to say, in such sort as it may possesse al our affectiōs. For that is ỹ place where Gods word is to bee kept. But what? The thing ỹ S. Iames speaketh of, is seene more now- Iames. 1. 23.

adayes than euer it was, namely that they which come to heare Gods word, take as much profite by it, as by looking vpon themselues in a glasse: they be no sooner gone, but all is forgotten. What fareth a man the better by his seeing of himselfe in a glasse? As soone as he turneth away his face, his shape vanisheth away. Euen so is it with vs. Whereas our comming to Gods word, should be to be transformed into ỹ lykenesse of 2.Cor.3.18. God, (as S. Paul teacheth vs in the second to ỹ Corinthians,) & whereas it is the power & propertie of ỹ Gospel, to transforme vs into the glory of God, by beholding him in the person of Iesus Christ: we come to it but to make a pastime of it, so as anon all slippeth away againe, & there remaineth no substance nor power of it with vs. And by that meanes the precious seede of the Gospell perisheth. For it lighteth amõg stones, so as it can take no roote. A man may loose a good deale of corne, if he cast it vppon the drye
Matt.13.19 ground, or in a footepath, or vpon stones: for the byrdes will picke it vp by and by. Euen so let vs not maruel though Gods word enter not into vs, for whereas our heartes ought to be tilled as when a plowgh hath eared a peece of land: they lye still vnopened & vnbroken vp at all. By reason whereof, Gods word may wel be giuen vs as a seede, but it shall doe vs no good, the diuell wil catche it away by and by, because it sinketh not into our heartes & our soules. That is the cause why I sayd ỹ al ỹ Moses hath spoken of frontlets, of bracelets, & of writings set vp in mens houses, must be referred altogether to this, ỹ wee shall fare neuerawhit ỹ better for ỹ vttering of ỹ Lawe vnto vs, nor vnderstand any thing at all by it, vntill it haue taken roote in vs, & that wee haue receiued it with hartie affection to giue our selues vnto God.

And yet is not all ỹ wee haue to doe, neither doth God thinke it enough ỹ euery man shoulde indeuer to profite himselfe by it: but he will also haue the fathers to teach their children. Wherin he sheweth ỹ (as I haue sayd afore) it is not enough for vs to serue our God during our owne liues; but we must also prouide ỹ the seede of religion may remaine after our decease. For we be transitorie, & our lyfe is but a shadow: & therefore inasmuch as Gods trueth is immortall, it is good reason ỹ it should continue for euer, & that it should be preserued frõ hand to hand, & that men should put their indeuour thereunto. And specially whẽ God hath giuẽ them childrẽ, it behoueth them to know ỹ it is a treasure, and that they must yeeld an account thereof. For it is no small honor ỹ God doth to men & women, when he giueth them children. They be creatures fashioned after ỹ image of God, & we terme them ỹ seede of ỹ Church. Now then seeing that God committeth thẽ to our charge; it is good reason ỹ we should indeuour to bring thẽ vp in such wise as God may be serued by them, ỹ when religion shal haue continued her course all our lyfe long, it may also hold out and continue stil euen after our death. But here we see our owne negligence, or rather our leawdnesse. For wee bee not onely slothfull; but we see how the most part of vs doe shun & eschew (as much as we can) to be trained in Gods worde. If men bee spoken to of it, it is a corsie to them, & if they perceiue ỹ there shall be talke of any good doctrine, they haue no regard to come there. It is well seene ỹ a number are worse than ỹ Turkes, & are so bewitched wt their owne fond opinions, ỹ as soone as ỹ bell tolleth to call & prouoke vs to come dayly to ỹ hearing of Gods worde, they goe another way. And for proofe thereof, what a number are there which wdrawe thẽselues from it as much as they can? Yea & when they come, they stoppe their eares wilfully, because they bee occupyed about their wicked affections, and the diuel hath so besotted them, as they finde not any sauor at all in any word that is spoken vnto thẽ, but are weary of it as soone as there is any matter spoken concerning God.

As for ỹ bringing vp of children, ỹ world sees what it is. Fathers are loth to haue their childrẽ better than thẽselues, for feare least they should put them to shame. Forasmuch as they themselues haue despised God all ỹ time of their lyfe, they be contented ỹ their children shall despise him full as much or dubble: & if they happen to haue any regard of ỹ doctrine, it is but for fashions sake, & by way of constreint. But wee bee so taught these thinges in this text, ỹ it shal cost vs full deare to haue bin so warned by God, if we regard not the thinges ỹ he hath tolde vs. Therefore let vs bee alwayes carefull to beare Gods word in minde, assuring our selues ỹ although we haue profited neuer so wel, yet are we but in the way, & we must goe on still; so as the once knowing of things is not enough for vs, but we must be faine to be put in rememberance of thẽ continually, & to be stirred vp by God; or else wee shall start away by and by. Now then let vs think vpon it, & let euery of vs haue an eye to ỹ charge ỹ is committed vnto him. Let such as haue children bring them vp in the feare of God, & let ỹ be their chiefe care; for it is the best inheritance ỹ they can leaue them. For otherwise, although they leaue them neuer so riche, and set them at neuer so good a stay; al must needes go to ruine. For God will curse all, if it bee not grounded vppon the pure religion. For whereas our Lorde speaketh of going to bed, and rising vp, of rest and labor: it is not for nought. For he sheweth vs that wee haue neede of all the helpes that can bee, to put vs in minde of his lawe. And therefore sith we see that by all manner of meanes we be turned away frõ the remembring of God, if the helps that are shewed vs here bee not set still before vs: these occasions ought to quicken vs and stirre vs vp thereunto.

First of al then, whereas it is saide; when ye goe to bed at nights, and when ye rise a mornings: it sheweth vs that wee may well take our rest, and thinke vppon all our bodily needes, so as a man may wel seeke his ease when hee is weary of trauelling & of following his busines al day long: but if we be so careful to seeke the rest of our bodies: Mat.11.29.
is it not said also ỹ the rest of our souls is to heare ỹ voice of god? If a man say, I haue no leasure: hast thou no leasure to rise in the morning? Againe,

when thou commeſt to the table to take thy repaſt, haſt thou not time ynough to edifie thy ſelfe in the feare of God? Moreouer, when thou art about thy buſineſſe all the day, or when thou art going a iourney; muſt God needs be forgotten all the while? No: but yet doe men alwayes finde lettes to keepe them from comming vnto God. Indeede we may eaſily finde trifling excuſes to content men withall: but when God ſaith vnto vs, Go to, what haue you to doe all your life long? are yee ſo ſore troubled that yee cannot ſpare a little time to exerciſe your ſelues in my worde? I giue you time ynough to followe your owne buſineſſes: and yet ſo as yee may beſtowe ſome time in the ſtudie of my doctrine: but you thinke not vpon it: Nay rather you take occaſion to turne away from it at euery ſmall let that can happen. And by that meanes you bee hardened in all euill, ſo as a man cannot reclaime yee, but ye become worſe than wilde beaſts. Thus ye ſee of what contempt and vngodlines we be conuicted, when we benefit not our ſelues by Gods doctrine, wherein we ought to keepe our ſelues occupied at all times.

Furthermore whereas he ſpeaketh of talking of it; it is a rebuking of the wicked corruption ỹ is among men, who neuer make an ende of their fooliſh talk: but when they ſhould ſpeake of god, the matter muſt be cut off by & by by the waſte, and they thinke it to be but matter of griefe. Yea and they be not contented to vſe fond and fooliſh talke; but they do alſo vſe ribaldrie & leawd talke, ſuch as tendeth to the poyſoning one of another. And therefore it is good reaſon, that God ſhould tel vs that the thinges which wee haue heard to day, had neede to bee brought oftentimes to our rememberance: and that God had neede to quicken vs vp, ſo as wee may bee made to bethink our ſelues; And that foraſmuch as we be pulled backe with ſuch ſloth, and we ſee our ſelues are caried away with ſo great and vrgent neceſſitie, that our mindes are giuen altogether to euill; inſomuch that whenſoeuer God allureth them to good, by and by they ſhrinke away vnto euill: we perceiuing the ſame, ſhoulde take the helpes ỹ God ſetteth down for vs, in telling vs that we muſt think vpon his lawe both at our vpriſing a mornings, and at our going to bed a nights, & that we muſt talk of them all the day long. Let vs aſſure our ſelues it is not without cauſe that God ſpake ſo to his owne people; but that it is a generall leſſon for all men in all ages, and hee ſpeaketh not onely to the rude and vnskilfull, that they ſhoulde take thoſe helpes to refreſh their remembrance: but he ſaith All of you, doe it euerie one of you. Hee ſpeaketh to thoſe that weene themſelues wiſeſt. And therefore let no man thinke himſelfe excepted here. Let ſuch as haue the charge of teaching others, vnderſtande that this is not ſpoken onely to the rude and ignorant; but alſo to the intent that euen they themſelues ſhoulde learne to rouſe vp themſelues, and ỹ all of vs together ſhould ſhew our ſelues ſo deſirous to profite in Gods word; as we may ſeeke to be put continually in mind of it. And let vs aſſure our ſelues, that it is the chiefe thing wherein we ought to occupie our ſelues, ſo long as we be in this world.

And nowe let vs caſt our ſelues downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgment of our faultes, praying him to bring vs to ſuch repentance, ỹ being aſhamed of our ſelues, our only ſeeking may be to win his fauor by fleeing to his mercy, and that we may attaine thereunto by meanes of our lord Ieſus Chriſt, praying him not only to forgiue our offences paſt, but alſo to correct them after ſuch ſort in vs, as our whole ſeeking may be to obey him. And that in ỹ meane while it may pleaſe him to guide vs by his holy ſpirite, vntill hee haue brought vs to the full fruition of the glorie whereunto we be nowe going. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs, but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth &c.

The Lxxviij. Sermon which is the fifth vpon the eleuenth Chapter.

22 For if ye do earneſtly keepe all the commandements which I command you to doe, and that you loue the Lord your God and walke in all his wayes and ſticke vnto him:

23 Then the Lorde will driue out all theſe Nations before you, and yee ſhall poſſeſſe Nations that are greater and ſtronger than your ſelues.

24 Whatſoeuer place the ſole of your foote treadeth on, it ſhalbe yours. Your bounds ſhalbe from the wildernes and from Libanus, and from the Riuer, euen the riuer of Euphrates, vnto the vttermoſt ſea.

25 No man ſhall be able to ſtand againſt you. The Lorde your God will caſt the feare and dread of you vpon the face of all the Land whereunto you go, as hee hath ſaid vnto you,

WE haue seene what promise Moses made to the Israelites: namely ỳ they shold possesse ỹ land which was giuen them to inherite. Howbeit forasmuch as their enemies might bee a stop in their way, and it might well seeme that God was not yet fully minded to performe that which he had said: he addeth further, that that let also should be taken away. As howe? Euen by this, that God would cast a terror vpon all the nations whom he had erst condemned, so as none of them should bee able to withstande the people that was so guided by his owne hande. That is the effect of Moseses meaning in this place. And it is as much as if he had said vnto vs, Whē God hath once warranted vs a thing, although all the lets in the world shoulde incounter vs, yet ought we not to doubt of his promise. For why? The thinges that may seeme vnpossible to men, are altogether in his power, because no creature is able to resist him. And therefore when we be abashed at the sight of the impediments that come before our eyes: wee must fall to the considering of the mightinesse of our God, which is able to ouercome all things. So then let vs marke well, that wee must fully conclude with our selues, that God is able to performe what soeuer hee hath vttered with his mouth: insomuch that although all accesses bee (in our iudgement) forecloſed vnto him; yet will hee wade through them all by his power. And therefore let vs not measure the effect of Gods promises, by our owne eyesight, nor by the conceite of our owne naturall vnderstanding: but let vs assure our selues that hee hath victorie alwayes in his hande, howe much so euer the worlde set it selfe against him, and striue to stop the performance of that which hee hath spoken.

Herewithall, it standeth vs in hand to applie this thing chiefly to our owne strenthening: and forasmuch as we see the diuel euer ready to hinder our welfare, yea and to disappoint it vtterly: let vs haue this saying continually printed in our rememberance, that God which hath receiued vs into his fauour, and promised to leade vs into the heritage of the kingdome of heauen, is the God of hosts and of victorie, and that although all the furniture of hel do set it selfe against him, it is all noughtwoorth, but shalbe turned into smoke: insomuch that although wee bee driuen to abide neuer so many assaultes in this worlde, and that the diuell neuer cease to practise one thing or other against vs: yet are we sure that god will welynough worke such deuises, as wee shall neuer be ouercome, so hee be on our side, as hee hath assured vs, so that wee keepe our selues vnder his protection. And this is to be vnderstood, not onely of Satan himselfe, but also of al his vpholders. For the diuell vseth all the meanes that can be; he hath all the wicked at his becke; hee ruleth them and driueth them to all euill. Forasmuch therefore as they be led by the wicked spirite; they vex and trouble vs as much as they cā. But we haue God on our side to fight for vs, and we shalbe defended by his power. Wherefore let vs not feare but that hee will alwayes giue vs the victory, though wee bee faine to indure much paine and trouble; for it cannot bee but that in such incounters, there must euer needs be some terrour, because wee see that the wicked are alwayes as whot as fire to annoy the children of God, and that as soone as they bee able to sturre but one finger, by and by they begin a new skirmish. Therfore must we beare it patiently, when soeuer it pleaseth God to exercise vs after ỳ fashion. And we must waite for the end which Moses promiseth here to the faithful; which is, that they shal alwayes haue victory of their enemies. And so we see to what end this doctrine is to bee applied.

Now remaineth to be noted also, that whereas God promiseth such thinges, hee hath mens harts in his hand: for he addeth the mean, which is, that hee will cast our dread and our feare vppon all our enemies. As if hee should say, hee will print his mark vpon vs, so as the wicked (be they neuer so full of rancor, and bee they caried with neuer so great fury and rage) shalbe abashed, dismayed, & vtterly at their wits end. As to the worldwarde, they may well seeme to haue the heartes of Lyons: but God will make them to melt away like water, so as men shall see with their eyes, that there is not so much as one drop of corage in any man, but so farre forth as God giueth it them. And as for vs, although we bee afraide, and haue not so stoute a courage by nature: yet wil God change vs, & giue vs inuincible constancy, so as although we had bin men of warre, and very valeant; yet should our manlinesse bee nothing like to ỳ which he will make vs to feele in our selues, so we goe not presumptuously to worke, but rest vpon him, seeking to be vphelde by his hand and fauor. The matter therefore which wee haue to mark vpon that place, is, first that wheras our life is as a warfare, yet must wee not bee afraid, because god hath promised to fight for vs. Yea, but we haue to do with an ouermightie enemie: and it is not one diuell alone that wee haue to withstand, but infinite legions of diuels. What cā we do then, seeing wee be so fraile, and are tempted so on all sides, & (to be short) our safetie is set as it were to the spoile? For what haue we to defende our selues withall? But wee must haue an eye to our god. I haue told you heretofore, that it is not without cause that he intitleth himselfe to be the Gods of Hosts. It serueth to shew that he will defende vs in such sort, as our enemies shalbe disappointed. Although they aduance themselues with neuer so raging violence, & that we be scared at their first alarmes, yet shal we always get the vpper hand, by the helpe of him which hath all power in his hand. And indeede wee knowe that God hath his Angels, whom he hath ordeined for our safegard. He thinks it not ynough to reach out his arme to helpe vs, but he hath also vttered foorth all his blessings, to fence vs with them on all sides. Therfore let vs trust to it, and let vs walke on boldly through all the troubles that are prepared for vs, not doubting but that we shall ouercome them, hauing such a guide as is spoken of in this text.

Psal. 34. 8. & Hebr. 1. 14.

Againe,

Againe, let vs also apply these things euen to the necessities of this present life. Indeede the chiefe point is, that god should succour vs to the intent wee may finish the course of this present life. But yet must we be faine to be aided by him euerie minute of an houre, so as hee leade vs through the great number of euill wayes which we haue to passe, and preserue vs from all daungers. So then we must be fully resolued of this, ỹ God will not onely giue vs victorie in the ende, thereby to bring vs to the kingdome of heauen; but also will helpe vs continually in this worlde, so as we shal wade out of al the troubles and perplexities wherin we be; insomuch that euē when we seeme to bee vtterly ouerwhelmed, he needeth no more but to reach vs his hand, and by & by wee shalbe aflote againe. Moreouer let vs assure our selues, that seeing God hath promised vs such victory against Satan and our Ghostly enemies: men also shall not bee able to preuaile, when they set themselues against vs: but although the whole world be bent against vs and at deadly foode with vs; yet ought it to suffice vs, that God is fauorable to vs. For inasmuch as he hath promised that al their practises which they attempt shalbe to no purpose, and that he wil turne them vpsidedowne: we may wel be quiet, and tary his leasure still with patience; and although we be abashed for a time, and perceiue not that God intendeth to worke according to his sayings: yet let vs stand stedfast in his doctrine, vntil he haue shewed vs the effect of his truth. That is the way for vs to despise and defie all the wicked ỹ seeke nothing else but to destroy vs. They be like a sort of madde dogges, and when they cannot bite they wil barke. They haue their throtes alwayes open, and their teeth always sharpened, & their pawes are alwayes in a readines, so as whensoeuer God letteth them loose, they be crueller thā Lyons or any other beasts. Let vs sticke alwayes to this that our Lord hath taken vs into his protection, and that when the wicked haue done what they can, in ỹ end they shalbe ouerthrowen and all their attempts shall come to no purpose or effect: That is the thing which wee haue to remember here. Notwithstanding, forasmuch as it cannot but bee a trouble and vexation of minde vnto vs at al times, to see what power our enemies are of, and to see howe spitefull they shew themselues against vs; let vs haue recourse to that which is said here, namely that God hath mens hearts in his hande. And therefore be the pride of men neuer so great, and their stoutnesse such as were able to make the aire and the world to tremble: yet let vs assure our selues that our Lord will turne it into feare and cowardlynes, so as the parties that would needes be so feared of others, shall in the ende haue lesse courage than women and children. For why? it is God that giueth men corage and constancie: and it is he that bereaueth them of it again whē he listeth. Now then if we be fully perswaded and resolued ỹ our Lord bridleth mens hearts: we wil not doubt but that he will alwayes giue vs victorie against our enemies; and it is the point which the scripture standeth expresly vppon. And to the intent wee may know that men haue not one spark of prowesse or manhood in them, further foorth than god giueth it them, Salomon saith expresly, that the hearts of kings are in the hand of God. It shoulde seeme that though all the rest of mankind be in subiection and bridled; yet kinges bee exempted from the common aray: for no man dares once open his lippes against them: & when they haue once spoken ỹ word, by and by it must be put in execution. It shold seeme therfore that they haue a prerogatiue aboue al ỹ world beside. Yea, but like as God maketh ỹ riuers to run here and there, and turneth their streams which way he listeth: so also doth he hold ỹ hearts of kinges in his hand saith Salomon. And what shall then become of ỹ little Goslings when they perke vp, & haue no power nor strength at al? Shall we be dismayed at their threatnings? The thing then wherin we must trust, is our yeelding of ỹ honor to God which he requireth at our hands, to wit, ỹ it belongeth to him to giue men corage when they be fearefull, & to daunt the corages of such as are as lustie as if they had the thunder & lightening at their commandement: for God will so cut their combes, as they shal not know where to become, but be vtterly dismayed, so that in steed of ỹ stoutnesse which they had shewed before; there shalbe nothing in them but weaknesse and fearefulnes. After that manner must ỹ faithfull assure themselues. For otherwise what will become of vs? In what taking are we? As I said afore, we be hemmed in on al sides by Satan & his vnderlings. There is not ỹ minute of an houre, wherin we haue not somewhat to be afraid of: a thousand dangers be set vs round about: & therefore what will become of vs, if wee be not so fully perswaded of this doctrine, as to make it to serue vs for dyches & rampyres, to hold out al ỹ assalts that our enemies make vppon vs? And so, forasmuch as our life is full of vnquietnesse, & we bee threatened with many sortes of death, so as wee cannot stepfoorth one foote but wee shall meete with some mischance or other, specially considering the meanes which the diuell hath to annoy vs withal, & the indeuer which he putteth therunto; & also considering ỹ multitude of ỹ wicked, whom hee driueth forward & carieth headlong: let vs put this lesso in vre, ỹ the god of hosts who hath ỹ victorie in his own hand, is on our side & wil defēd vs, so as we shal not be ouercome, but be preserued & defended by his power. Haue we this once well printed in our hearts, we may go on boldly: and though we see men neuer so full of pride that they spew it out again, and so spitefull that they coulde finde in their hearts to eate vs vp at one bit: let vs not passe for that; for God will strike them in such a feare, that they shalbe daunted and discouraged; and although wee haue neither sworde nor staffe, yet shall they be vanquished by themselues, & not perceiue why nor how, but only by Gods secret working. Let vs looke vpon it, & experience will shew vs that God ment not to beguile vs when he behighted it vs with his own mouth. But our own vnbeliefe & leawdnesse, suffer vs not to perceiue the thing by experience which is spoke here. We cā wel y-

nough make our complaints and say; howe happeneth it that God giueth such prowesse to our enemies? how happeneth it ỹ we be so cowardly and forlorne? We can aske such questions wel ynough. But we consider not the cause of them: & yet it is in our selues: & our enemies haue none other power, than we our selues giue them: and I say the same of Satan, as well as of all his vnderlings. For whē we forsake our god it is good reason ỹ we should be disfurnished of his help, and ỹ he should let vs alone like poore forlorne caitifs looking on either side of vs, & not espying any remedy to resist our enemies withal, because we be bereft of ỹ garde and inuincible fortresse ỹ God promised vs, according as it is spoken of, both in Exodus and in the Psalme, where it is said that ỹ people were disappointed of their strong holde, when they had once forsaken God. I pray you if we stand not in awe of God, is it not reason that he should make vs afraide, both of men & beasts, yea and euen of a flie when it doth but flie by vs, as the scripture telleth vs? Beholde, our God offereth himselfe in his maiesty, requiring that we should do him homage, by humbling our selues vnto him, and by offering our selues both bodie & soule in sacrifice to him, ỹ he may possesse vs: & we despise him, making but a mocke at his holie word, so as he cānot get any seruice at our hāds, for we striue against him like wild beasts. Seeing ỹ this is apparant, is it not reason that he should chastise vs, by making vs to stand in feare of mē? Yes: for what are we? Behold I am scared & made afraide, at the peering of a worme that doth but put vp his head at me. I neede not to seeke farre to knowe the cause thereof. Let me but consider whether I haue behaued my selfe well towardes my God, in yeelding him obedience in al things. Nay contrariwise, I haue turned away frō him, and moreouer I haue played the rebell, I haue leaped beyonde my bounds, and to bee short, I haue fought against him: and therefore I must not thinke it straunge, if I bee afraide of men, which are nothing. Verily God will yet more laugh our pride and ouerweening to scorne. For he will make vs to quake at the falling of a leafe from a tree. To be short, as Salomon sayes, wee shall flee when noman followeth vs: euerie little noyse shall make vs to thinke that we be pursued with maine strokes. Verily it is a singular gifte of God to haue quietnesse of conscience, so as wee may bee assured of his defence. And on the contrarie part, if we be not vnder his protection, wee shalbe dismayed without any cause on mans behalfe, onely because we haue God against vs. And so the cause why our enemies doe so trouble vs as wee wote not where to become; is that we regard not our god. For is it reason that hee shoulde bee our friende when we be not on his side? No: but he must rather set himselfe against vs. And that is ỹ cause why Moses both in other places, and specially in his song that is in the 32. Chapter, saith, How coulde it bee that a hundred of you shoulde flee before one man, and that a thousande of you should be chased by a hundred of your enemies, if it were not for that the Lorde hath forsaken you, and deliuered you as prisoners into your enemies handes? Consider then (saith hee) that when yee be afflicted by your enemies, it is for that your God hath appalled you. For you be not worthy that he shoulde put his power into you, or vtter it in your behalf. And therfore whensoeuer we stand too much in feare of our enemies, & are so dismayed that we can hardly call vpon God, but are ouerwhelmed with distrust and vexation of minde: let vs vnderstande that God hath withdrawen himselfe from vs, and hath left vs destitute after ỹ fashion, because we be turned away from him, and haue shaken off his feare, and not stoode in awe of him as wee ought to haue done, in respect whereof hee threateneth vs by men, & maketh vs to feele our owne wretchednesse, to the intent we should returne vnto him. Furthermore hee sheweth well by the sequele, that his promise was not in vaine. What a proofe was there thereof, at the entring of the people into the land of Chanaan? For they had such a multitude of enemies, as might haue made them al dismayed. But what for that? God himselfe fought for his people. And that did the poore harlot well perceiue, when shee said to the men that were come to spie out the land, I know that your God is the God of heauen and earth, which reigneth ouer all. And for proofe therof, I see ỹ al the inhabiters of these countries, are astonished at the only fame and report of you, wherwith they be discoraged, that they be as good as vanquished already. She attributeth this indeed to ỹ wonderful working of God. Now seeing that this silly woman, hauing but a little tast of faith, did lay so sure hold vpon it: I pray you ought not we to behold ỹ strēgth much more openly, which our Lord promiseth vs here, which is, that he wil cast a terrour and fearefulnes vpon all those that are much stronger & mightier than we? It is said ỹ euen when God setteth his mark vpon kings & princes, ỹ brute beasts which haue no reason do stande in awe of them. And why is that? Because God worketh by a secrete meanes vnknowen to vs. If our lord had not such power to inspyre men withal; surely principalities & seniories could not continue one minute of an houre. Nowthen seeing that God imprinteth such a marke, ỹ he maketh not only mē but also beasts to stand in awe, & to be subiect to those to whom hee hath committed the sword of iustice: let vs note ỹ if we bee his children, wee shall also beare his image; insomuch ỹ if we be vnder his tuition, wee shalbe defēded in despite of our enemies: yea & we shall be feared, so as wee shall perceiue by the effect, that it is long of none but our selues that wee be not succored by him, and ỹ although our vnthākfulnes do beat backe his hand, yet doth he ouercome vs w̄ his infinite goodnes. For we see ỹ although the wicked haue the Law in their owne hand; yet notwithstanding they be so abashed & dismaied, ỹ they be quite and cleane w̄out heart. We must needes see it, or else we be duller than blockes. For our Lorde hath wrought with such power, that though wee were blinde, yet wee might grope it with our hands, namely that God hath daunted those that thought to haue cut the throtes of his children, euen when no man durst lift vp his little finger against them, in so much ỹ when they thought themselues to haue wonne ỹ gole, then were they seen to be so striken down & discoraged, & cast into such feare & perplexitie, and so at their wits end, as they wist not what to do nor where to become. Indeede they had ỹ Law in their own hand (as I said), they had practises and deuices ynow, and ỹ world sees ỹ they had neither vprightnes nor faithfulnes in them. But yet howsoeuer they fared, they were discoraged, & were made to stand gaping & gasing one vpō another, & could not tel what to do for feare. Hereby we see that our Lord not only held their hands tyed, but also bereft them of heart: so as he disappointed them of wit & reason, by reason whereof they were so dulled, that there was lesse skill in them than in little babes, yea or euen in beasts. Ye see then how it is a goodly proofe of ỹ which is promised here: so as if we yeeld god his due honor, we should bee the more stayed vnder his protection, to walke on continually, yea & to keepe our selues from stepping out of the way.

Now let vs take good heed to ỹ which I haue said, namely ỹ such as do so go astray & giue thēselues to naughtines, haue not ỹ protectiō which our Lord hath promised: for they goe wilfully to cast themselues vp as it were to ỹ spoile. Therefore it is good reasō ỹ God should forsake them, & that they should find themselues to be taken vnprouided. But if we walk in humility, & seeke to be always guided by ỹ hand of our God: then let vs hardily put our trust in him, and we shal euer be maintained. Although men gape vppon vs like Lyons with opē mouth, & although we haue not wherewith to resist them: yet will God be able ynough to beate them backe. Wee may be driuen to fight; but in ỹ mids of the incounter we shalbe sustained as God hath promised vs, and ỹ will be an inuincible fortres vnto vs. That is the thing which we haue to remember vpon this place.

Yea and Moses saith expresly, People or Nations that are mightier and stronger than you; to the intent wee shoulde not make comparison with the things that are seene, to thinke that God wil not helpe vs except there be some naturall meanes, or some worldly enterance. No no, wee must not bee at that point: but wee must consider that his power is infinite. Therefore wee doe him great wrong, when we restraine his power to ỹ which our senses can attaine vnto. Nay, when our enemies are too strong and too mighty for vs, and when it seemeth that they be ready to treade vs vnder foote: euen then must wee perswade our selues that God wil vtter his power to succor vs. And therefore let vs go on boldly, at leastwise so there bee no presumption in vs, and that we bee not stubborn against our God. For there are two things which are very requisite for vs. The first is that we giue ouer our selues wholly to the seruing and honoring of our God: & secondly that we put our trust in him, and sticke vnto his promises, not doubting but that he will giue things a good ende, though they seeme vtterly past all hope. Thus you see in effect what we haue to remember vpon this lesson.

Now immediatly Moses addeth, That where-soeuer the people set their foote, they shall possesse the whole land from the wildernes vnto Libanus, and from ỹ great River Euphrates vnto the Sea. For those were the bounds & borders which God had promised to his people, as appeareth in the person of Abraham. For the promise that is made here is no newe thing, but a ratifying or confirming of the same thing that God had spoken long afore. As if he should say, nothing shal bar you from inioying ỹ heritage ỹ I haue assigned you: stick you to me, & I wil performe what soeuer I haue said vnto you. True it is that if ye haue an eye to ỹ great nūber of Nations which you haue to ouercome, ye may be so feared as to say, How shall we nowe do? Indeede wee be a great multitude of vs; but what are we in comparisō of our enemies, which are men exercised in feats of armes, & houge mē like gyāts? as we haue seene already heretofore. Againe they be nestled already, they haue their townes well fortified, and when we shal haue taken a two or three hundred of their townes, yet is it nothing in respect of ỹ rest, but our enemies will be continually both before vs & behinde vs. Ye see then ỹ these were thinges that might well haue made ỹ people afraid. But it is said vnto thē, Although ỹ land be neuer so large, although yee haue neuer so many cities to take, and although there be neuer so great a number of battels prepared for you: yet settle you your selues vpon the promise of your God, for he can skil wel ynough how to performe the thing that he hath spoken. Shut you your eyes against all likelyhoodes of thinges that may daunt your corages, and open your eyes to behold ỹ inestimable power of your God, & doubt not but he will shew himself faithful. Now we see wherat Moses aimed. But yet was not this thing accomplished to the ful, vntill the reigne of Dauid & Salomon. For although Iosua made partition of their portions, & god appointed him to ỹ office: yet were ỹ vnbeleeuing people mixed stil with ỹ Iewes; and (which worse is) wheras they should haue rooted them out quite & cleane, & haue had peasable possession of the land: they payed tribute to their enemies, which held thē in bondage like slaues & fleeced ỹ wool from their backs. They were vexed in such sort, ỹ they were as good as slaine quick, & they indured such cruelty as was pity to see. It should seeme therfore ỹ God kept not touch w̄ them. But here is an excellent goodly text, to open vnto vs the thing which I haue expounded afore, and which wil come to be spoken of again. It is said that God will giue his people the victory, conditionally that they keepe all the commandements which are inioyned them. God tieth it w̄ a conditiō. Do what soeuer I commaund you (saith he,) & then shall you finde my power to be such, as your enemies (do what they can) shal not be able to preuaile any whit against you. Nowe let vs see if ỹ Iewes were able to performe all Gods cōmandements. Nay, they were vtterly disobedient vnto thē. And we also cease not to take ỹ clean contrary way to ỹ which god teacheth vs & commandeth vs vntil he haue reformed vs by his holy spirit. Ye see then that the Iewes were disobediēt vnto god, & therfore were disappointed of his promise. Yea, but yet for al ỹ he ceased not to make place for his owne mercy still by meanes of their leawdneſſe. For although their enemies pricked them like thornes; yet they held ſtil the poſſeſſion of the dwellingplace that God had appointed them. Trueth it is that it is ſaid expreſſly, forasmuch as ye haue behaued

But our Lord hauing chaſtiſed them ſo many waies, did afterward ſhew vnto them, that he failed not to pity them ſtil; for he raiſed them vp ſuch men from time to time, as ſaued them frō their enemies. In the end, Dauid and Salomon obtained the promiſe, ſo as God by their hand did ſet the people in ful & perfect liberty, & their kingdome was perfectly ſtabliſhed, becauſe god had ſo promiſed. But wee muſt note, ỹ Dauid and Salomon were a figure of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: and we be ſure ỹ it is long of none but our ſelues, that God ſheweth not himſelfe bountifull & liberall to the vttermoſt. For if we obeyed him according to his commaundement; wee ſhould want nothing, but we ſhould euen in this earthly life feele his drawing of vs vnto euerlaſting ſaluation. And foraſmuch as he is ỹ fountain of al goodnes, he would giue vs ſuch abundance of all thinges, that wee ſhould haue al things at wil; and we ſhould paſſe through this world as through an earthly paradiſe, and afterward attaine to ỹ kingdom of heauen ỹ is prepared for vs. Lo howe God offereth himſelf vnto vs in his law: but yet with condition ỹ we do whatſoeuer he commaundeth vs. But we be ſo far off from doing it, ỹ we drag back from it, and there is not that thought nor that affection
Rom.8.7. in vs, which is not enemie to God & his righteouſnes. By reaſon wherof, in ſteede of the inioying of his benefites which hee hath promiſed in his Lawe, he is faine to become our enemy, & to arme himſelfe againſt vs, and to conſume vs till we be vtterly come to nothing. Sometimes hee thundreth in ſuch ſort, ỹ wee be ouerthrowen in ỹ turning of a hand. And wherof commeth that? Euen ſo it muſt needs be: for (as I ſaid afore) god ſheweth himſelf liberal towards vs & vtreth his great treaſures towards vs. But what? Our hearts are ſhut & locked vp. And therfore muſt we needs be bereft of them, and feele the paine therof; we muſt be ſo vexed as we may grone again, & be in ſuch anguiſh of mind, as we may not wote where to become. Yet notwithſtanding, if we be his, he neuer faileth to mingle ſome ſweetnes continually with the corrections ỹ hee ſendeth vs. True it is that hee beareth with the wicked, and with ſuch as are vtter caſtaways: but yet in the end he is terrible to them, and dealeth not in ſuch wiſe with them, as he doth with thoſe whom he intēdeth to reſerue to himſelfe. Although that naturally all of vs be diſobedient vnto him, yet ceaſeth hee not to haue pitie vpon vs: and although wee feele ſore blowes at his hande; yet doth hee ſhew vs therewithall ỹ he is not minded to roote vs out vtterly. But ſurely we ſhould continue ſtil in our ſins to the end, yea and rot away in them, were it not for his raiſing vp of the promiſed Dauid, that is to ſay, of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. For by his meanes wee recouer ỹ which we had loſt by our owne ſinnes, and ſo yee ſee how Ieſus Chriſt ſetteth vs in poſſeſſion of the heritage that was promiſed vs by the Lawe. Yet notwithſtanding we ſhoulde be diſappointed of it, and it coulde not belong vnto vs, vnleſſe ỹ Ieſus Chriſt had as wel made vs partakers of the benefites of God his father in his own perſon, as redemed vs in our owne perſons. Nowe then, wee recouer all this in him, whereas erſt we were quite & cleane bereft and cut off from the inioying thereof. Therefore let vs marke well, that whereas God made ſo many & ſo large promiſes to the Iewes in his law, vpon condition that they ſhold keepe his commaundements: he ment to ſhew that the ſame tooke no place, vntill the kingdome was ſtabliſhed in the perſon of Dauid. And therefore wee muſt not alledge as the beaſtly Papiſts doe, who ſay: Tuſh, God promiſeth vs this and that, if we keepe his commaundements; therefore it followeth that wee winne Gods fauour by our owne deſertes, and that wee purchaſe the kingdome of heauen, and are able to attaine ſaluation by our owne obedience; for God hath an eye to yeeld vnto euery mā according to his deſert. They ſhew fulwell, that they neuer vnderſtoode one ſillable of the holy ſcripture. And euen this text without going any further, is ynough to bewray their beaſtlines & ignorance. True it is that God promiſed his people that they ſhould inioy ỹ land which he had appointed vnto them: but ỹ performance thereof was to bee deferred to the reigne of Dauid. Wherupon let vs marke how it is our Lord Ieſus Chriſt which maketh ỹ promiſes of ỹ Law auailable towards vs, ſo as wee ſhall not be diſappointed of ỹ thinges ỹ are conteined therin. And indeed, ỹ is the very cauſe why ỹ promiſe is made expreſſly to Dauid & Salomon, as it had bin made before to al ỹ people. And this ſerueth well to make ỹ doctrine yet plainer which I com to treat of. For there are two ſorts of promiſes in ỹ holy ſcripture. The one is; He ỹ doth theſe things, ſhal liue in thē. The other is, He ỹ beleeueth in ỹ ſon whom ỹ father hath ſent, ſhalbe ſaued. Loe here two promiſes, betweene ỹ which it behoueth vs welto put a differēce: for they be far vnlike. When God ſaith, He ỹ doth theſe things: he bindeth not himſelf to vs but with an if, namely that wee diſchardge our ſelues by performing his Law; and that, not only in part, but throughout and perfectly. But no man is able to do that;

and therefore yee ſee wee be ſhut out from all hope, and we cannot looke ỹ the promiſe ſhould bee of force any more towardes vs, becauſe of our default. For God continueth alwayes faithful, but wee ſuffer not his goodnes to come vnto vs. Now when he ſeeth vs ſo bereſt of all his benefits; he findeth another newe remedie for vs, which is this: Lo here my ſonne who is vniuerſal heire both of heauen and earth; hee holdeth all the worlde in ſubiection, hee hath the whole fulneſſe of the Godhead incloſed in him, my image ſhyneth moſt perfectly in him: which is ſhewed foorth in his Goſpell: and therfore they that are members of his bodie, are made partakers of all the benefites which hee hath in him. That is the way for the promiſes to haue their effect and force in vs, and not to looke ſimply to the doctrine of the lawe. For when God ſayd, I will giue you the lande: to whome ſpake he? To all the people. But yet with condition, if yee keepe my commandements. And that was made voide. As howe? Becauſe the people were diſobedient, and kept not couenant with God. And ſo ye ſee that the whole couenant was broken, ſo as God was ſet free againe, and no longer bounde vnto them, becauſe it was tyed to a condition. What doeth he then? He ſends vs a king to whome he ſayeth, I will giue thee the lande for thine inheritance. Hee vſeth the ſelfe ſame wordes that are ſet downe here by Moſes. I will giue thee the lande (ſaith hee) for thine inheritance, from the wilderneſſe vnto mount Libanus, & from the riuer Euphrates to ỹ great ſea. And to whome doth God giue it? To Dauid & Salomon. True it is that he had giuen the ſame land afore to all the people; but the people were baniſhed from it through their own fault. And was it then but for one onely perſon? was it the worthines of Dauid or Salomon that made God willing to giue them the thing which hee had promiſed to al the ofspring of Abraham? No: but it was becauſe they were a figure of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. And in verie deede when the Prophets intended to aſſure the people of the quiet ſtate that was promiſed to thẽ, and of the inioying of the land: they ſaide, I will raiſe you vp a Dauid. Now then, Gods offering to lay foorth his riches to al men without exceptiõ in his law, to maintaine them withall in this preſent life, is as if he ſhould ſay, whatſoeuer I haue promiſed to giue to the fathers of olde time, belongeth to you alſo, at leaſtwiſe if ye obey my law throughly in all points, & not by pieces & ſtarts. But wee be ſo farre vnable to diſcharge our ſelues of that duetie, that we fall to deſpiſing of God, ſo as hee is faine to ſhewe himſelfe an enemie vnto vs. That is al that we be able to win by our keeping of the lawe, if we wil needes ſtick ſimply to it as I ſayd afore. Neuertheleſſe there is this other remedie for it. Whẽ our Lord Ieſus Chriſt cõmeth forth & reacheth vs his hande to pull vs to him; then we find that he is not without cauſe termed the vniuerſal heire of all the goods which God his father hath. And his poſſeſſing of them is not for himſelf: for he is one ſelfeſame eſſence ẅ God the father, he hath bin the God of glory at all times. But in this fleſh of ours & in our humaine nature wherewith he was clothed, he was ordeyned chiefe king, and the dominion of the worlde was giuen vnto him, euen as wel in heauen as in earth. Now then if we be once grafted into his bodie, and perfectly made one with him; then ſhall wee recouer that thing in him, which we cannot obteine by our deedes & deſerts. And then ſhal we ſee that Ieſus Chriſt beeing raiſed againe vnto glorie, wil of his goodnes drawe vs after him, to make vs partakers of all things that he hath.

Furthermore, the telling of this thing vnto vs is not to giue men ſcope to do euil; but wee muſt marke that when God reſerueth vs to himſelfe to put vs in poſſeſſion of his goods, he doth alſo reforme vs by his holy ſpirite. Yet notwithſtanding, all that euer we can do, albeit that wee bee gouerned by God & haue a good will to ſerue him, is of no value at all if it bee eſteemed of it ſelfe: but yet for Ieſus Chriſtes ſake God will accept vs and our workes, and the inheritance ſhal abyde ſure & ſtedfaſt vnto vs: for wee muſt not be afraide but that we ſhal attaine vnto it. It is not giuen vs for our own ſakes, but becauſe wee be partakers of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, & receiue the grace that he hath purchaſed vs, ſo as we bee reconciled to God by his death & paſſion, in reſpect whereof he is mercifull to vs, & we be ſure of the forgiueneſſe of our ſinnes, becauſe all our ſpots are waſhed & ſcoured cleane away. Although there bee ſinnes & imperfections in vs, which might make vs blamable before God; yet are we iuſtified and brought into his fauour againe, when hee hath once renewed vs by his holy ſpirite. Therfore if we go that way to work, let vs not dout but the promiſe ſhal ſtand faſt, ſo as we ſhal feele the effect & force of it to our ſaluation. But in the meane while let vs not glorie in our ſelues, for there is no matter nor cauſe why we ſhould do ſo.

Now let vs fall downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to make vs feele them better, yea and ſo to feele them as that miſliking and condemning our ſelues for them, we may ſubmit our ſelues to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, beſeeching him ſo to reform vs by his holy ſpirit, as Gods image may ſhine forth in vs, and wee not faile to continue in the poſſeſſion of the heritage which hee hath promiſed vs, becauſe it is not grounded vpon our owne workes & deedes, but vppon his freebeſtowed goodnes. And moreouer let vs pray our Lord to be ſo gracious to vs, as to giue vs ſuch ſtrength while wee paſſe through this world, wherin wee haue a great ſort of enemies to fight againſt, that we may get the vpper hand of them, & be alwayes certified more and more, ỹ he is neere at hand to ſuch as call vpon him & ſubmit themſelues vnto him, that by ỹ meanes he may continually be glorified at our hands, & that it may appeare howe hee will alwayes vphold vs, if wee fight vnder his ſtandarde. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not only to vs, but alſo to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

Ioh. 17. 1. & 17. 5.

On Fryday the xxvij. of September. 1555.

The Lxxix. Sermon which is the ſixth vpon the eleuenth Chapter.

26 Behold, I ſet before you this day a bleſsing & a curſe.

27 A bleſsing if ye obey the commandements of the Lord your God which I commaund you this day.

28 And likewiſe a curſe if ye obey not the commandements of the Lorde your God, but turne out of the way which I cõmaunde you this day, to go after ſtrange gods which ye know not.

29 And when the Lord your God ſhal haue brought you into the land which thou goeſt vnto to poſſeſſe it: then ſhalt thou ſet the bleſsing vpon mount Garizim, & the curſe vpon mount Eball.

30 Are they not on the other ſide of Iordan, on the weſt ſide in the lande of the Cananites, which dwel in ỹ plaine ouer againſt Gilgal, beſide the groue of Moreh?

31 For ye ſhall paſſe ouer Iordan, to go & poſſeſſe the lande which the Lorde your God giueth you: and you ſhall poſſeſſe it & dwell therein.

32 Take heede therefore, & perfourme all the ordinances & lawes which I ſet before you this day.

THE proteſtation that Moſes maketh here, ſerueth to ſhewe ỹ men themſelues are the cauſe of all their miſeries, & that it is not for them to ſeeke the blame therof any where elſe. And on ỹ other ſide, that when God declareth his will vnto vs, the way of welfare is ſhewed vs, & it is long of our ſelues ỹ our life is not happie in al reſpects throughout. So then, the meaning of Moſes is, ỹ God doth men a ſingular good turne, when hee vouchſafeth to teach them by his word. For whē they haue the record of his wil, it is as good as a ſhewing of them howe to attaine to ſaluation, & how to proſper in this tranſitorie life. Contrarywiſe alſo they be warned ỹ if they fare not ỹ better by the doctrine that is deliuered vnto them, vnhappie are they, & they haue not cauſe to cõplaine of God afterward as though it were long of him; for they had choyce. Therefore when we haue beene inſtructed in Gods worde, & knowen ỹ true & pure religion: if we hold not on through out, all the blame is to be layed vpon our ſelues. For God had ſhewed vs the good way; & we held it not, ne kept our ſelues in it. Needes therefore muſt we be barred from al excuſe, and God muſt hold vs as conuicted for that we had leuer to periſh wilfully, & to go to deſtruction, than ſubmit our ſelues to him who was willing to haue led vs to life & ſaluation. For this cauſe Moſes ſayeth, Behold, this day do I ſet before you a bleſsing & a curſe. As if he ſhould ſay; Bethinke your ſelues: Seeing ỹ God hath commanded me to publiſh his lawe, it is not for you to fall aſleepe: For on the one ſide hee ſheweth you howe you may proſper all your life long: namely by obeying him. On the contrarie part thinke not to ſcape ſcotfree when ye ſhall haue diſobeyed your God; ſuch vnthākfulnes ſhal not abide vnpuniſhed. For God muſt needes be reuenged of ſuch as haue refuſed his doctrine & made no reckening of it.

So then, firſt we be done to vnderſtand that ỹ hauing of the knowledge of Gods will is an ineſtimable treaſure. All of vs are deſirous to lead a happie life, but there is no meane for vs to attain to it, vnleſſe God open vs the gate to come vnto him. If it be alleged, How then? Shal not men be bleſſed, if they indeuour to do wel? Wil not God accept all their ſeruice when he ſees them go on with a good intent? Let vs marke firſt of all, that men may (to their own ſeeming) haue as greate deuotion as is poſſible, & yet they ſhall but erre. To weene that we do wel is not all that we haue to do. We muſt be ſure ỹ the way which wee take is no bypath, but the way that leadeth ſtraight forth vnto God. Ye ſee then that we cannot bee ſure of any bleſſing, that is to ſay, that our liues pleaſe God, and that the ſeruice which wee doe him is wel liked of; vntil he haue ſhewed vs what he requireth & what he alloweth. For ſo long as we walke after our own imagination, wee go the clean contrarie way; & in ſtead of going forward wee go back. Marke that for one point. Againe, for the ſecond point, when we haue done all, yet is God nothing beholden to vs for it. What oweth he vnto vs? [Nothing.] Now then al that we can hope for is by reaſon of the promiſe ỹ he maketh vnto vs, & by telling vs that if wee keepe his law, we ſhal not loſe our labour nor be diſappointed, but we ſhall haue a good rewarde at his hand. Gods ſaying ſo, is the ground from whence the bleſſing ſpringeth that Moſes ſpeaketh here. And it is the ſame thing that S. Paul telleth vs, where he preſuppoſeth ỹ euen before ỹ law, men could not deſerue any thing: & not without cauſe For if wee had done all that which were poſſible for vs to do, (as I ſaid afore) were it poſſible for vs to deſerue aught at Gods hande? No: for wee owe it him euery whit of it, & he oweth nothing vnto vs. And ſo yee ſee why Moſes ſayeth here, ỹ when the lawe was publiſhed, then was a bleſsing ſet before the people. As if he ſhould ſay, Heretofore ye haue knowen no rule, ye haue beene as the wretched infidels which go on at all aduenture & haue no certeintie to truſt vnto. But now hath your God gathered you to him, & ſhewed you ỹ right way. Therfore ỹ way for you to leade a happie life is to obey the wil of your God.

Alſo here is a promiſe added to it, whereby the people might bee in the better hope ỹ God would would bleſſe them. It is al one then with ỹ which I haue told you alreadie, namely ỹ God is verie gracious to vs, in ſhewing vs after what manner we ought to lead our life. For without that, wee might martyr our ſelues as much as we liſted, & yet it ſhould be to no purpoſe. Wherefore let vs beware that we receiue the word the more reuerently which is preached vnto vs in his name, ſpecially ſeeing it bringeth vs a bleſſing, not only in ỹ we learne therby to know what Gods wil is, & how to liue in his fauour; but alſo for that hee bindeth himſelfe of his own good will inſomuch ỹ although no duetie compell him thereto; yet vouchſafeth he to couenant with vs in ſuch ſort, as we ſhal not ſerue him in vaine. But here a mã might caſt a dout, how it commeth to paſſe that Moſes ſpeaking of the law, ſayth that he ſetteth forth a bleſſing? For (as was declared yeſterday) whatſoeuer God promiſeth vs in his lawe, wee fare neuer a whit the better by it, becauſe of the conditiõ that goeth with it, which is that ỹ promiſe of his bleſſing is tyed to performing of his commandemẽts. But no man doth that; & therfore are we al diſappointed of the promiſe of the lawe, by reaſon of the vnpoſſibilitie of the condition. It ſhould ſeeme then ỹ Moſes ſpeakes to no purpoſe in this text, in promiſing a bleſſing to the people. And in deede wee heare how S. Paul Rom. 4.15. & 7.14. ſpeketh of it. He ſaith ỹ the law bringeth nothing but Gods wrath & vengeance; for it rebuketh euery one of vs, ſo as there is none of vs all that is righteous, neither hath euer any man bin. All of Pſal 14.3. vs then are conuicted by the lawe, as tranſgreſſors againſt Gods righteouſnes; & ſo be wee in danger of endles death. Sith it is ſo: it followeth ỹ the law of it ſelfe can do no more but ſhewe vs that we be accurſed of our God, & that he is our deadly enemie & muſt needs be our Iudge. And where is then the bleſſing that Moſes ſpeakes of here? The anſwere hereto is this: that if we looke no further but what we be in our own frowarde nature, in reſpect of the ſinne ỹ we haue drawen from Adam: the law can doe nothing but curſe vs. For whereas God ſheweth vs what our righteouſnes ought to be; if we fall to the examining of our liues; we ſhal find ỹ we haue offended him in euery point, & therfore we be paſt hope. Yea,

Rom. 7.14. & 8.7. but ỹ ſpringeth not of the nature of ỹ law, but of our own ſinfulnes, in ỹ we are ſtubborne againſt God, ſo that in ſteede of obeying him, wee indeuour altogether to follow our own wicked luſtes. The lawe then as in reſpect of our ſelues, bringeth nothing but wrath & death. But as in reſpect of it ſelfe, ſurely it bringeth bleſſing. For were we as we ought to be, that is to wit, were we ſo ſound & vncorrupted ỹ we were as throughly diſpoſed to ſerue God as was our forefather Adam by creation before his fall: the lawe ſhould bring vs his bleſſing. For why? It ſheweth vs that we muſt loue God with all our heart. When wee be once ioyned vnto him, & when wee bee onee knit vnto him in all perfection of goodneſſe, of ioy, of life, & of glorie; then ſhal this ſaying bee found true. For were we of nature good & right, we ſhould be anſwerable to this doctrine, & wee ſhould obſerue it: & ſo ſhould this bleſſing be performed towards vs. Wherof is it long ỹ as now the law bringeth vs nothing but death & damnation? Euen for that wee be not able to receiue the promiſes ỹ are conteined there. Our Lorde ſaith, Come ye to mee, & I will fill you full of all goodnes; & we ſhrinke quite & cleane from him. So is it not long of the doctrine. Wherof then? Euen of our ſelues. Where is the fault to bee found? In the law? No: but in our owne ſelues. Now then let vs mark, that whereas Moſes proteſteth here ỹ he ſetteth a bleſſing before ỹ people, his ſo doing is not without cauſe.

But here it might be replyed, that although our own ſin be the let that we be not made partakers of ỹ bleſſing that is behighted in ỹ lawe to enioy it; yet notwithſtanding, for aſmuch as wee be vtterly excluded from it; it is in vaine for him to ſay, I ſet before you a bleſſing. That is not ſo: For we haue two points to note. The one is, that Gods ſpeaking after that maner concerning his word, is to the ende ỹ we ſhould haue it in reuerence & eſtimation, & alſo loue it & ſet our harts vpon it; & moreouer fall to the conſidering of our owne curſednes, ſo as we might be humbled & caſt downe, & be ſorie when we ſee our benefite turned to our bane, & our life into death becauſe we be not diſpoſed to receiue it. But God ſhall haue wunne nothing at our handes by letting vs alone there: wee muſt be faine to go one ſtep further. Foraſmuch as we ſee our ſelues bereft of the bleſſing of the law ſo long as it continueth but a dead letter; that is to ſay, ſo long as 2. Cor. 3.6. it doth but only tel vs what wee ſhould do, & giueth vs not power to do it in deede: wee muſt reſort to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, whoſe office is to write the thinges in our heartes which God had 2. Cor. 3.3. written in ſtones, that hee may make vs willing to obey, in ſteede of our ſwatuing aſide to ỹ contrarie. Againe, our Lord Ieſus Chriſt hath deſerued this bleſſing for vs; that wee might henceforth be receiued into fauour for his ſake, & our workes be accepted at Gods hande though they be nothing worth of themſelues. For we come not as euery man in his own perſon, nor as they ỹ had performed the law thẽſelues: but we come in the name of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, as members of his bodie. Ye ſee then that the bleſſing is perfourmed in vs by ſeeking the remedie which we want, which is that whereas God hath promiſed to bleſſe men vpon condition, foraſmuch as the ſame booteth vs not, there is added another point of fauour, which is that he receiueth vs for his ſonnes ſake, & writing his lawe in our Ier. 31.34. & 36.26.29. harts, imputeth not our ſins vnto vs; by meanes wherof we faile not to bee partakers of the bleſſing that is contained here, though we be not able to performe the law, but that the ſame paſſe our abilitie. Marke that for one point.

Now let vs come to ỹ which Moſes ſayth concerning ỹ curſe. He ſayth ỹ like as the law offereth vs Gods fauor, which is the bleſſing ỹ tendeth to our welfare; ſo alſo we muſt not ſet light by the threatnings ỹ are ſet downe there. For if we giue deafe eare to Gods ſpeaking, ſo as our harts rancle againſt it through ſtubborneſſe, or ỹ we play the ſcoffers which turne all thinges to

2.Cor.2.15. 16. laughter: let vs beare this in mind, that howſoeuer the world go, Gods worde ſhall either be our life or our death, there ſhall not ſo much as one word therof fall to the ground. Such as benefite themſelues by ỹ things ỹ are told them on gods behalf, ſhall find ỹ the doctrine ſerueth to their ſaluation: And on the other ſide, the deſpiſers thereof, & ſuch as refuſe to be taught by it, muſt yeeld an account thereof, and they ſhall feele ỹ no one iote of it ſhalbe loſt, neither is to be deſpiſed. For ſhould the thing be vndone & vaniſh away wout effect, which paſſeth out of ỹ mouth of God? No. And therefore let vs marke well, ỹ if men cannot find in their hearts to vſe Gods doctrine to their benefite when he ſendeth it vnto them; it ſhal turne to their euerlaſting death, & their damnation wilbee doubled, becauſe they held ſcorne of the benefite ỹ was profered them. And this is very needfull for vs. For we ſee how men dally with Gods word; & they ỹ caſt it not quite & cleane away, do thinke themſelues to be more than half perfect; becauſe they becom not vtter enemies to fight againſt it, they beare thẽ ſelues in hand ỹ God ought to hold himſelf contented with it. But think we that God wil ſuffer ſo good a thing to periſh? He offered vs life, and we refuſed it: and doeth not ſuch vnkindnes deſerue horrible vengeance? Againe, God ſetteth more ſtore by his own honor, than by the ſaluation of our ſoules. And good reaſõ it is ỹ he ſhould. Now he hath ſhewed vs after what manner he wilbee glorified by vs, & wee make no account of it but reiect it vtterly. And therfore let vs conſider wel, ỹ if we receiue not the bleſſing of Gods worde, ỹ is to ſay, if it ſerue not to reconcile vs to him, ỹ we may take him for our father: we muſt (ſpite of our teeth) feele him our Iudge, & his worde muſt condemne vs. Wheras it ſhould haue ben a witnes of his loue towards vs to bring vs to ſaluation, & to the inheritãce of ỹ kingdom of heauen: it muſt become an inditement to paſſe vpõ our liues, ſo as we ſhalbe accurſed in this preſent life, & after our death Gods vengeance ſhal purſue vs for euer, becauſe we obeyd not gods word when it was preached & ſet forth to vs.

Eſa.49.8. Now then, ſeeing ỹ God telleth vs ỹ this is ỹ conuenient time, & ỹ he calleth vs vnto him: let vs learne, let vs learne I ſay to go to him and to make haſt, leaſt this threat light vpon vs, that we be curſed for our wickednes, in ỹ we liſted not to receiue ỹ benefite that was offered vs. And ſpecially nowadayes we ought to be ỹ more prouoked therunto, becauſe our fathers of old time had not the like occaſion. It is true that Moſes might wel ſay he offered ỹ bleſſing to thoſe people in ỹ law: But we in theſe dayes haue the bleſſing ſet forth more openly in ỹ Goſpel. The promiſes at ỹ time were dark, & they pointed at Ieſus Chriſt, howbeit a farre off. They yeelded ſome ſmal taſt of life; but wee at this day haue our fill of it, ſo as god giueth vs euen his hart there without omitting of any thing, to ỹ intent to make vs to perceiue his ineſtimable loue, therby to draw vs & to win vs vnto him. Sith it is ſo, ỹ the law ſheweth vs it aloofe, & ỹ goſpel bringeth it neerer to vs: let vs not bee ſo froward as to ſhrinke awey as though we would needs ſpite God of purpoſe to be curſed: but let vs rather imbrace the bleſſing which coſteth vs nothing as they ſay: For there is no more for vs to doe but to receiue it willingly, according to ỹ promiſe which he maketh vs, ſaying: Opẽ thy mouth & I wil fil it. And for ỹ ſame cauſe alſo doth S. Paul ſay, Now are ỹ acceptable dayes, now are ỹ dayes of ſaluatiõ; ſhewing how ỹ ſame is to be applyed to ỹ preaching of ỹ Goſpel. His alledging of that text of Eſayes is as he ſhould ſay, Our Lords deſire is nothing elſe but to do ỹ office of a ſauiour among vs: & therfore ſuffer him to ſhew himſelf ſuch a one. Againe, let vs vnderſtand ỹ we neede not to ſeeke farre for him; for he offereth himſelf to vs before we once thinke of him, to make vs perceiue his fatherly kindnes & goodnes. And on the contrary parte, when he threateneth vs & is minded to make vs feele his rigour; he runneth not vpon vs at ỹ firſt daſh, neither lifteth he vp his hand by and by to ſtrike vs: but only ſheweth it vs firſt aloofe. Yet notwithſtanding, howſoeuer he fare, let vs mark ỹ the Goſpel is neuer preached, but ỹ he witneſſeth on ỹ one ſide ỹ he is readie to receiue men to mercy, & to open them ỹ gate of his kingdõ, ỹ they may go into it: & on the other ſide that if they be ſtubborne & wilful in their wickednes, it ſhal not booſe thẽ to think to eſcape, or to ween ỹ the word ſhalbe vaine & to no purpoſe: for god wil always giue it force & power. What to doe? To deſtroy thoſe ỹ haue ſo refuſed it, & trodẽ it vnder foot, & made a mocke of it, & openly reſiſted it. Now by the way we muſt call to minde again what I haue touched alreadi heretofore in following Moſeſes diſcourſe: namely ỹ God promiſeth not any bleſſing but to ſuch as obey his cõmandements: like as on ỹ other ſide he threateneth none but ſuch as turne away from him. And therby he ſheweth that men may well take much paine, but they ſhal but loſe their labour if they rule not themſelues according to the lawe. Here ye ſee how al ỹ deuotions ỹ men deuiſe, are caſt down: Moſes ſaith they be vtterly fruteleſſe. In deede ỹ Papiſts, Turks & Iewes doe perſwade themſelues, ỹ they deſerue much at Gods hande by their doing of things vppon their own head, whẽ they be able to ſay; I take it to be very good. They beare themſelues in hand ỹ they come very neere to God by their wãdring in their windlaſſes after ỹ faſhion. But on ỹ contrary parte wee ſee, ỹ God promiſeth not any thing but to ſuch as obey his word. Therfore if we intẽd to be vndiſappointed of our hope, let vs ſeeke to knowe Gods wil by asking it at his own mouth, & therupõ let vs ſimply obey whatſoeuer he telleth vs. For as long as men rule themſelues after their own imaginations, or after ỹ traditions of men; it is no obedience, but a diſpleaſing of God, & he wil not admit it to come in their account. Thus much for the firſt point cõcerning this bleſſing.

On ỹ contrarie, how much ſoeuer mẽ repine at it, ſetting themſelues againſt vs, yea & condemning vs for our refuſing to follow their fooliſh inuentions; God acquiteth vs here, for he threateneth none but ſuch as rebel againſt him. Nowadays ỹ Pope thundreth againſt vs, becauſe wee wil not wil not be subiect to him as other do, which hold downe their neckes vnto him and yeeld themselues in bondage to him like wretched beastes.

True it is ỹ their imagining that he hath power to ding vs down to the deepe pit of hell, is ỹ thing ỹ amazeth them, & maketh the rude and ignorãt sort to quake. But forasmuch as we heare it at the mouth of our God, ỹ we neede not to be afraid except we haue disobeyed him: let vs hold vs to it, & be bold to laugh al the popes manaces to scorne, for they be no better than the rattling of a bladder with a fewe beanes in it to scarre a yong babe withal. In deed it makes a great noise: but yet it is but a toy. And euen in like case is it with all the manacings that men can make.

But here is yet one other saying wel worthy to be noted. Moses saith that the curse shal come vpon the people when they turne away from their GOD to serue straunge Gods and such as they haue not knowen. Here againe he sheweth ỹ they which haue bin rightly taught, are much more blamewoorthie than the wretched infidels. For they spite God maliciously & wilfully: they offend not any more of ignorance, but turne aside wilfully frõ ỹ way ỹ God had willed them to walke in, & seeme to make warre against him of set purpose: by meãs wherof they make their condemnation the grieuouser. And therfore let vs marke well, that wee which haue receiued ỹ doctrine of the Gospell, shalbe lesse excusable than ỹ papists, if we obey not our God. For the papistes holde on stil their old trade, they be gone astray like sillie beasts, & all that euer they do is but filth & abhomination. This is true. And yet do we for our partes much worse in turning away from our God, after his comming vnto vs, & ỹ hee had brought vs nigh vnto himselfe. And Moses saith expressely; The Gods which you haue not knowen. Wherein he rebuketh the malice of men, in that they had leuer tõ follow ỹ vncertaine than the certaine. True it is ỹ we haue a cleane contrarie ground in nature. For if a man be demanded whether he had leuer to be sure of a thing or to be doutful of it; He wil alwaies say he had leuer be sure of it. And yet for all that, we seeme all of vs to striue who may bee most wauering, doutful, & vncerteine of his soul-health, & yet notwithstanding what is there that we should make more account of? And God is readie to assure vs of it, warranting vs it by his word, so as we cannot faile of it, if we obey him. We heare it, & can God ly? No: & therfore let vs go on as he hath cõmanded vs, Nay, we be loth to do so. And what do we in steed therof? I trow, I weene. Loe at what point we be! Let vs see howe the papists do. When they should pray vnto god, this one good point they haue, that they knowe themselues vnworthie to prease vnto him. That is true. But behold, our Lord giueth vs a remedy, which is, that our Lord Iesus Christ shalbee our spokesman: so as if he intreat for vs, we shalbe admitted & God wil heare all our prayers. It is the thing which the holy scripture assureth vs of euerywhere. But what do the Papistes? I am not worthie to prease vnto God (say they) & therefore I wil go seeke to the virgin Marie, S. Michael, & S. Peter: & therupon they deuise & set vp a great sort of Saints at their own pleasure. And what a dealing is that? Sure we be that our Lord Iesus Christ wil not faile vs: for as much as it is his office appointed him of his father; hee will discharge it. And why then do we not go rightforth vnto him? He wilbe a good stay for vs. Com vnto me saith he, alluring vs gently. Againe wee haue promises innumerable, that if we resort vnto him we shal not be disappointed of that which we hope for: & yet for all this wee leane to our own weening, & we say to my seeming I were best to go to S. Michael or to our Lady. And so we fall to forsaking the certaintie ỹ God hath giuen vs, to ketch an vncerteintie: and in likewise wise deale we with al ỹ rest. For in seruing God according to his law, we be sure that our seruice shalbe wel taken. But the Papistes fall to inuenting of this & that, & leaue the law of God: & is not that a forsaking of the certaine to followe an vncertaine? Yes, & that is against nature. Therefore it appeareth ỹ we be blinded by Satan. For we haue the cleane contrarie in vs by nature. We haue wit ynough to say, I would faine be assured & we bee loth to hazard our selues at all aduenture: & yet in this case we be so mad, that neither ropes nor chaines can hold vs. My alleaging of these examples is to shewe after what sort wee should put this doctrine in vre: for it falleth out ỹ men haue wilfully estranged themselues from God in al cases. Howso? For whereas God hath discouered himselfe vnto them; they haue not vouchsafed to hold themselues to him, but rather haue busied themselues about their own dreams & dotages. In deed they wil easily say, We know there is but one god ỹ maker of heauen & earth: but in ỹ meane while they hatch a whole swarm of other gods, as we may wel perceiue by ỹ idols which they haue forged. And wherof commeth that? Euen of this, ỹ wheras men knew God, yet they haue had no list to glorifie him, but haue wandred away after their own imagination, by meanes whereof they be turned away from him. And at such time as God gaue his law, ỹ blessing was more darksom than it is nowadays in ỹ time of ỹ Gospel. Beholde, God doth not onely report himself to be ỹ maker of heauen & earth; but also because he is incomprehensible, & his maiestie passeth all our vnderstanding: he will haue vs to looke vpon him in his liuely image, that is to wit in our Lord Iesus Christ. He is the sonne of god, which hath shewed himself so familiarly, ỹ we may be sure ynough that we worship the liuing God forasmuch as we knowe that the whole fulnesse of glorie & of ỹ Godhead dwelleth in him. That is the cause also why ỹ Prophet Esay speaking of him, saith, Lo this is he, lo this is our god. If the case stoode so with the fathers of olde time, ỹ it behoueth them to stand vpõ a certeintie euen in the time of the law, so as God woulde not haue his people hang in dout, but that they should be certified of as much as was for their behoofe & benefit: much more ought we to bee sure nowadayes. For we haue a larger discouerie of things in our Lord Iesus Christ, so as ỹ voyce of the prophet Esay, Lo this is he; lo this is our God, ought to sound continually in our eares; by reason wherof it is not for any man to turn away from it, nor to runne gadding arrouers, nor to reele one way or other; but we must knowe & assure our selues ỹ we haue ỹ ful & perfect mesure of al wisdome, if we can hold vs to Iesus Christ, & to the things which his doctrine teacheth vs. But herein we see how the wretched world gadeth vp & downe, euery man trotting after his own way, so as euery mans will is to go astray: & yet notwithstanding we shield our selues with ignorance. When we haue shut our eyes after ỹ fashion against ỹ light, when we haue stopped our eares against ỹ doctrin of saluation, whē we haue turned our backs vpon him at his shewing of his face, & whē we haue spit at him for his reaching of hand vnto vs: yet we fall stil to excusing of our selues by ignorance. So then the thing which we haue to remember here in this place, by Gods vpbraiding of men with their turning away from his word when it is preached vnto them; is that their so doing is through a diuelish stubbornes, & ỹ (euen by ỹ witnes of their own consciēces) it is a worshipping of gods which they haue not knowen. For our faith must not be vncerteine, it must not be an opinion or weening, but it must bring a sure knowledge with it. And what maner of knowledge? Truely as in respect of our own wit & reason, if we intend to come vnto god, we must worship him w̄ al humilitie, & remēber that his secrets surmount our vnderstāding. But yet here withall it behoueth vs to stande vppon so sure a ground, euen by knowledge; as our owne consciences may beare record of it, & wee bee able to 1 Iohn 3. 2. say with S. Iohn, we wote well ỹ we be ỹ children of God. Lo here what the true Religion is. It is not an vnaduised zeale, or a liking that men cast to this thing or that: but a sure knowen doctrine grounded vpon Gods trueth, wherethrough we be able to say ỹ it is he which hath spoken to vs, & ỹ he is a faithfull witnesse of ỹ things ỹ are for our welfare & saluation. And againe, whatsoeuer we alleage, wee shall alwayes abide conuicted of our malice. So that when wee haue once beene taught ỹ word of God, if wee afterwarde worship gods whom we haue not knowen, if we swarue aside to any superstition, or if we continue not in ỹ pure simplicitie of ỹ holy scripture: surely we shal iustly be accused to haue had strange Gods, & to haue bin forgers of them, as folke ỹ loue the vntrueth better than ỹ truth. According wherunto S. Paul speaking of all such as obeyed not the

Ro. 1. 25, 28. Gospel, saith it is good reason they shold be stricken with horrible blindnes, & that forasmuch as they honored not the creator, it was meete that they should become vnderlings to the creatures, ỹ is to say, to the things which they had dreamed in their own fond braine & foolish fancies. Now thē seeing ỹ our God hath taught vs; let vs learn to hold our selues at a stay to his word, & to vnderstand in what maner he hath shewed himself vnto vs; & let vs benefite our selues by al the records which he giueth vs, & beware ỹ we wander not one way or other, ne followe not our owne leasings. For there wilbe no excuse for such as would not be certified of God when he was readie to do it.

Now in the end Moses addeth, that when the people were come into the land of promise, they shoulde diuide their companie in two parties: the one halfe vpō mount Garizim, & the other halfe vpon mount Ebal: & that they which should bee vppon mount Garizim, should pronounce the blessings; & that those which should be vpon mount Ebal, should pronounce the curses, which thing wee see was done accordingly. For this commandement shalbee rehearsed yet
Deut. 27. 12 & Ios. 30. 35 againe in the 27. Chapter of this booke. And Iosua in his eyghth Chapter declareth ỹ he had obeyed the cōmandement of Moses. The effect of ỹ storie is, that when ỹ people were entred into ỹ land, they should meete with two mountaines, ỹ one called Hebal & ỹ other Garizim. Now god had commanded ỹ one part of ỹ people, namely certaine tribes, shold be on ỹ one side on mount Garizim; & ỹ the rest of the tribes should be vpō mount Hebal, & ỹ the Leuites shold stand in the middes of ỹ host bearing the Ark of God, to shew ỹ God was chiefe souerein there, & that the Leuites were as witnesses or sureties to vndertake matters in ỹ behalf of the people, like as if there were two parties to make som solemne match or couenant, a notarie or regiſter is present to take an othe betwixt them: euen so God had ordeyned ỹ the people shoulde be there to heare & receiue ỹ doctrine of saluation, & ỹ they should answere on their part, as in ỹ passing of som solemn contract; to ỹ end they might knowe vpon what condition God had chosen thē & preferred thē before al other nations of ỹ earth, as shalbe shewed hereafter in the foresaid 27. Chapter. And what were ỹ blessings? They were a rehersal of ỹ same thing that God had spoken afore: namely, al such as keepe my law shalbe blessed; Al such as worship me with a pure conscience shalbe blessed: all such as hallow my name, shalbe blessed: al such as obey their fathers & mothers, shalbee blessed: all ỹ liue chastly shalbe blessed: all ỹ abstaine from deceit, extortion, & al maner of euil, shalbe blessed. God then on his parte promised blessing after ỹ maner. Hereunto the people answered, Amen, Amen: ỹ is to say, So be it: whereby they ratified ỹ which had been spoken by the mouth of God. Again, on ỹ contrarie part, ỹ curses were vttered on mount Hebal in this wise: Cursed be he ỹ turneth aside after strange gods: Cursed be he ỹ dishonoreth his father or his mother: Cursed be hee that offendeth in theft or in whoredom: Cursed be he ỹ performeth not all ỹ cōmandements conteined in this booke. Amen, Amen, said ỹ people. When the curses were vttered after ỹ fashion, it behoueth euery man to answer Amē. And so ye see what is said in this text.

Now let vs mark ỹ by that meanes god ment to touch ỹ people neerer to ỹ quicke, by their agreeing to such a couenant. And the same belongeth vnto vs. For although wee haue not ỹ same ceremonie ỹ was obserued at ỹ time, yet haue we ỹ trueth howsoeuer the world go: & whensoeuer Gods word is preached vnto vs, although we receiue it not, yet shal it not fal to ỹ grounde, but it shal light vpō our heads spite of our teeth, & it shalbe an intolerable burthen to sink vs down to ỹ bottom of hel. Therfore when we receiue gods

word into our harts, let beware ỳ we like wel of it & ỳ we ratifie the promise of our saluatiō which he maketh vs. Nowe hee adopteth vs to be his children; and if we be his children we be also his heires. Therfore when we imbrace the preached word by faith & obedience, although our mouth speake not a worde, yet doe wee confirme Gods truth to our saluation, according to this saying of S. Iohns, that as many as beleeue in the only sonne of God, haue setto their seales that God is true. Thus ye see howe the full measure of our saluation and of the promise is accomplished & hath his full effect & power, when we on our side do aunswere rightly Amen. And although it be not spoken with the mouth, yet let the heart say it: for ỳ is the chiefe point. True it is that if there be faith in the heart, the mouth must needes agree vnto it also; according to this saying of the Psalme, I did beleeue, and therfore will I speake, which saying, is alledged likewise by S. Paul to the Corinthians. But my speaking at this time is of the ceremonie; namely ỳ although wee haue not a mount Garizim & a mount Heball among vs; although we assemble not together into one cōpanie, to seuer our selues into two hostes, and although there be not a visible Arke among vs; yet is Gods once declaring therof inough for vs, & his once setting downe of a memoriall thereof before vs is sufficient for vs, to make vs know ỳ same belongeth to vs at this day, & ỳ the preaching of the Gospell vnto vs in the name of our Lorde Iesus Christ, is all one as if wee confirmed God to be our father by our saying Amen. That is ỳ very meane wherby we be receiued to be his children, & wherby we be assured of the inheritance of the kingdom of heauen. For otherwise, how were it possible that we wretched creatures should attaine to such dignitie, as ỳ God should vouchsafe to win vs by gentlenes, & vtter ỳ good loue that he beareth vs, & be willing to haue vs to be his, to the ende ỳ he might be owner of vs? Must it not needs be ỳ we be worse than froward if we benefit not our selues by such grace? Yes, & therfore let vs learn to answere Amen willingly, when our Lord behighteth vs his blessinges. For on the contrary part, although wee harden our hearts & shut our eyes, yea & grind our teeth at God as it were in rage & dispite of him: yet must there follow an Amen therupō, which shall burn vs like a fearing yron, wherby God wil shew ỳ his word is as a burning fire to consume all thinges, so as we must needs feele ỳ inward fealding therof when God vttereth ỳ power of his word, by reason whereof we shalbe in continuall vnquietnes & torment for euer, if he set himselfe against vs. Yet for all this ỳ faithfull must answere Amē, as well to the blessings as the curfings. Amen, by imbracing ỳ grace ỳ God offereth vs. Doth God offer himselfe so vnto vs? Cōmeth he to seeke vs out when we be vtterly lost & forlorne? Doth he come downe to these horrible miseries wherein we be plundged? Well, then it is our duetie to go vnto him, and not to be so froward as to drawe back when he allureth vs so gently. Thus ye see how we must answere Amen to the blessings, by imbracing ỳ grace of the holy Ghost, ỳ we may be guided & gouerned by it, & made acceptable to our God, by fashioning our life after the rule ỳ he hath giuen vs, in resting vpon ỳ grace of our Lord Iesus Christ, wherby he is reconciled vnto vs, & accepteth vs for righteous, insomuch ỳ although we be sinners, yet he receiueth vs for his sonnes sake, & couereth al our sins & vices. After that sort therfore must wee answere Amen, that our Lorde may performe all the free promises which he hath made vnto vs.

Iohn 3.33.

Psal. 116.10 & 2. Cor. 4. 13.

Also we must aunswere Amen to ỳ curses. For why? We haue such a number of contrarieties in vs, as is pity to see. Although God haue giuen vs a good desire to receiue his word, & ỳ we receiue it in deedes yet do we it not to the full. For wee drag our legges after vs; there is alwayes some gainstriuing in vs; we haue still some remnantes of our flesh; & besides that, there is too too much stubornes in vs, so as we be like asses ỳ haue need to be driuen forwarde by force. And therefore I sayd ỳ we must answere Amen to ỳ curses. When we see ỳ God will haue vs to passe through ỳ afflictions of this worlde, & through the cares ỳ are vpon earth: Let the prouoke vs to repaire vnto him, and let vs assure our selues ỳ oftentimes his causing of vs to feele his curse, is for our benefit. Moreouer let vs consider thus with our selues: Alas, if God curse all such as transgresse his cōmādementes; what shall become of me? Now then let euerie of vs finde such fault with himselfe, as we may patiently indure whatsoeuer it pleaseth God to lay vpon vs in this present life. Thus our pronouncing of the curses must be to ỳ end that they light not vpō vs. For they ỳ quicken vp thē- 1. Cor. 11. 31 selues after ỳ maner, shalbe set free from the curses. And let vs mark by the way, ỳ when we shall not haue performed all ỳ cōmandements of the lawe, we haue a remedie for it in our Lord Iesus Christ, for otherwise we shold be accursed euerychone of vs, according to this alegation of saint Pauls to the Galathians: Cursed are they ỳ per- Gal. 3. 10.
forme not the whole Lawe to the full. Whereupō he concludeth, ỳ all men are cursed of God as in respect of their owne workes, and ỳ if we will be iustified by our owne desertes, we must go seeke our payment in hell. For God hath shot out one thunderbolt against all mankinde, in saying, cur- Deut. 27. 26.
sed be all they ỳ perform not the whole Law. But no man performeth it. Euen ỳ holiest men in the world are indebted in ỳ behalfe. So then S. Paul rightly concludeth, ỳ we be all accursed in our selues. But yet he sendeth vs to our Lorde Iesus Christ, & telleth vs ỳ forasmuch as he is giuen vn to vs, we be set free from ỳ rigor of the Law: so ỳ whereas God as now doth teach vs his will, telling vs what way we should walke, & setting before vs both his promises & his threatnings: although our liues be still vnperfect, yet wil he not cease to accept vs, so wee haue recourse to him which hath supplied our want. For our Lord Iesus Christ hath made such satisfaction by ỳ sacrifice of his death; ỳ God accepteth it in full paymēt to couer al our faults. Therfore let vs repaire thither, & let vs so plundge our selues in it, as we may be clensed & scoured frō al our spots. Which thing will come to passe, if we learne to walke in humihumilitie and feare before our God,& abuſe not his goodneſſe & patience. For ỹ is the meane to make vs acceptablevnto him,ſo as his curſes ſhal be turned frō our heads,& his grace & bleſſing ſo increaſed after he hath once vttred the ſame, as it ſhal growe cōtinually in vs,vntil it be come to the full perfection.

Nowe let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him &c.

On Saturday the xxviij. of September. 1555.

The Lxxx Sermon, which is the firſt vpon the twelfth Chapter.

THeſe are the ordinaunces and Lawes which yee ſhal keepe, that yee may doe them in the Lande which the Lord God of thy fathers hath giuen thee to poſſeſſe,all the dayes which thou ſhalt liue vpon the earth.

2 Ye ſhall deſtroy all the places wherein the people, whom yee ſhal conquere haue ſerued their gods,whether it be vpon high mountaines, or vpon the hils, or vnder any maner of greene trees.

3 Alſo yee ſhall digge downe their Altars, and breake their images,and burne their woods with fire. Yee ſhall deſtroy the images of their gods, and diſpatch the names of them out of that place.

4 Yee ſhall not deale ſo with the Lord your God.

5 But looke what place ſoeuer the Lord your God ſhal chooſe out of al your tribes to ſet his name in and to dwel in: there ſhall yee ſeeke him,and thither ſhall yee reſorte.

WHeras Moſes exhorteth ỹ people here againe to obſerue the ordinances & ſtatutes of ỹ law, and to do thē;it doth vs to vnderſtand, ỹ if we be not diligēt in following Gods will,we ſhal ſoone be carried away vnto wickednes one way or other.For it falleth out vpon vs ỹ we do cōmit many faults through ouerſight, we ſtumble at euery turning of a hand becauſe ỹ deuill doth eaſily beguile vs;& we haue no great wit or diſcretion in vs,our mind is ful of fondnes,& conſequētly vnconſtant: & therfore if we be not very diligent in obeying our God:we ſhall neuer obſerue his law as we ought to do.Now thē let vs beware ỹ we ſet our mindsearneſtly to ỹ ordering of our life. For if we bethinke vs not aduiſedly of it, ne haue any great care of it;we ſhal not fail to do amiſſe ſome way or other. That is ỹ thing which we haue to gather vpon this place where Moſes ſaith ỹ we muſt not only put gods cōmandemēts in execution,but alſo keepe thē to do them. As if he ſhould ſay,ỹ if men holde not themſelues well in awe; if they bee not very watchfull in following their duety, & if they be not well aduiſed & earneſt in their doings: by & by they ſlip away, and there is no ſtedines in them;and although there haue bin ſome good zeale in them, yet it vaniſheth away out of hande.

And he ſayth expreſly that *they be the ſtatutes and ordinances of the God of their fathers.*Which ſerueth to the better confirming of the matter ỹ we haue ſeene heereto fore:which is,that the Land of Chanaā was giuen thē by vertue of the couenant and promiſe ỹ wasmade before they were borne. The Iewes then are put in minde in this place to thinke thēſelues beholden to Gods free beſtowed goodnes,for their promiſed inheritāce foraſmuch as they coulde not boaſt of it as of a cōqueſt, becauſe God had aſſigned it to their fathers before they were borne. Neuertheleſſe his purpoſe is alſo to confirme them in the doctrine of the Law, to the end they might knowe ỹ they worſhipped not a new god,or a godlately found out:but the ſame God which had bin reueiled to their fathers in all ages afore; & therfore he telleth them they were leſſe to be excuſed, if they held thē not to the religion ỹ had bin knowen in all times afore, at leaſtwiſe among their fore fathers. For we heare what God vpbraydeth them withall by his prophet Ieremie. Go ſeeke all the worlde about(ſaith he)go ouer ỹ ſea,& ſee if the heathen nations haue changed their gods, and yet theybe but idols.Sith you ſee ſuch ſtedfaſtnes & conſtancie in the infidels, ỹ they be not variable in their ſuperſtitions, but rather as it were wedded & wilfully giuē ouer to thē:what a ſhame will it be to you to haue forſaken the liuing God when ye haue knowen him,& not to continue in his word?Then let vs marke wel in this text,that Gods vpbraiding of ỹ Iewes with his manifeſting of himſelf vnto thē &to their fathers ſo long time aforehand,is to ỹ ende they ſhould be the more worthy to be condemned, if they hild not themſelues to the doctrine which had bin ſo well warranted vnto thē. But let vs marke alſo ỹ it is not inough for vs ỹ our forefathers held ſome kind of religion:but we muſt alſo ſee ỹ the ſame be alowable. And whereas it is ſayd here, ỹ their forefathers knew the ſameGod which had ſetforth his Law to thē at ỹ time: the knowledge or opinion which the fathers had,is not ỹ chief ground that we ought to ſtand vpon; for God preſuppoſeth ỹ he had ſo certified thē of his word, as they were not in any doubt at all.Therfore firſt let vs learn to knowe what our Lord declareth vnto vs; and then let vs afterward go to antiquitie. And it is certaine that if the religion be true,& good, it is not new nor deuiſed in our time; but our repaire muſt be to the things ẏ are witneſſed in the Law and ẏ prophets. ¶ here we ſhal ſee how God hath gathered his Church, how he hath gouerned it, & how it hath alwayes had his truth, euen from the beginning of the world. In dede the number of people is but ſmall ẏ haue followed godlineſſe: the reſt haue turned away after their owne inuẽtions. Howbeit, we muſt not haue an eye to the world, but let it ſuffice vs ẏ god hath had a church of his owne in all ages, whereunto it behoueth vs to be ioyned & to become one w̃ it. For although the Church haue bin deſpiſed of the worlde; yet hath it alwayes bin precious in Gods ſight. And we ſee the like ſtill at this day. True it is that the moſt part of ſuch as boaſt thẽſelues to be beleeuers, are doted with leaſinges, errours & abuſes: but wee muſt let thẽ alone, & ſubmit ourſelues to the truth ẏ God telleth vs, knitting ourſelues in vnity of faith & concord with the faithfull which are contented to followe whatſoeuer God hath ſhewed thẽ. Thus ye ſee ẏ the way for vs to put this text in vre where the God of the fathers is ſpokẽ of, is ẏ it is not ynough for vs to haue ſom antiquitie as the papiſts alledge, ſaying; we haue bin a long time in poſſeſſion: but we muſt be well groũded vpõ certainty, ſo as we know ẏ the God whom we worſhip is not an idoll. When a man knowes ẏ once, then let him proceede to the cõſent & agreement of faith, according to our beleef wherby we confeſs ẏ there is but one almightie god, which is ẏ father of our lord Ieſus Chriſt, and by the ſame reaſõ our father too; ẏ our Lord Ieſus Chriſt is the redeemer that hath appeared vnto vs; that we be ſanctified by the holy Ghoſt, and alſo ẏ we can beare record of the maieſty of our God, at leaſtwiſe according to his vttering of himſelfe vnto vs by his holy ſcriptures. Which done, then let vs adde, ẏ we beleeue the holy catholike Church, and that there is a cõmunion of Saincts, ſo as there is but one body. But yet muſt God be faine to ſhewe himſelfe to vs to be the almighty: that he is ẏ ſame which made both heauen & earth, that he is the ſame at whoſe hande we muſt hope for ſaluation; ẏ he is able to maintaine his owne glory, ſo as all the thinges ẏ men haue deuiſed of their owne braine are but lies. That is the firſt end whereat we muſt begin. And afterward we muſt agree with the holy patriarks, Apoſtles, & all the faithfull that haue liued ſince the worlde began. We muſt haue ẏ indiſſoluble band of faith, & al muſt come to this point, namely that they be grounded vpon the certaine and vnfallible truth. As for example, The Iewes that came after, had the fathers as well as they, of whom alſo they made thẽſelues a ſheelde. but God did vtterly miſlike their ſo doing, according to this ſaying of the prophet Ezechiel; Walk not after the righteouſnes of your forefathers. At the firſt bluſh here ſeemeth to be ſome cõtrarity. For in this ſame place it is ſayd; Worſhip ye the God of your fathers, ſtick to him, & beware ye change not your religion. And there ẏ prophet Ezechiel ſayth contrariwiſe, beware that ye follow not ẏ deuotion of your fathers. Yea verily: for there were two ſortes of fathers among the Iewes: the one was Abraham, & the holy Patriarkes & Prophetes, and ſuch as knewe the liuing God, & ſerued him in all pureneſſe: thoſe it behoued the Iewes to rule thẽſelues by. And in ẏ reſpect doth Moſes ſay now vnto them, beware ẏ ye turne not away from the God of your fathers, but cõtinue ſtill in their faith. Beſides this, they had other fathers alſo, which were backeſliders, & frowarde, and had corrupted the Lawe, & made a minglemangle of it with all the ſuperſtitions of the heathen. In reſpect of this it is ſaid, beware ye folow not your fathers: for they were frowarde & falſe-harted towardes God. In the ſame taking is the world at this day. The Papiſtes alledge their fathers. But what? Are not the Apoſtles the true fathers of the chriſtian Church? Yes, but the papiſtes will not heare them ſpeake, nor any other that haue ſtabliſhed ſuch order in the Church as God cõmanded. But they haue their baſtard-fathers like themſelues, which being a misbegottẽ generation, they take Monkes & old dotterelles for their fathers. Againe, when they alledge any of the auncient doctors, if there be any folly or ſuperſtitiõ in their writings, they can skill to cull it out euery whit: but as for the good, they caſt ẏ a great way off Now then let vs beware of ſuch maner of fatherſhip, & let vs vſe diſcretiõ in choſing out ẏ true fathers, & let vs put ẏ in vre which Paul ſpeakes of where he ſayth ẏ all fatherhood dependeth vpon God and vpon our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Thither (ſay I) muſt we refer our fatherhood, if we wil haue good fathers; ſo as God may be the chiefe father of them all, & they giue record ẏ they be his ſonnes. ẏ they may beget vs by the vncorruptible ſeede of his word: or els there wilbe nothing but vtter confuſion. Thus ye ſee what we haue to remember vpon that ſaying.

Eph. 3.15.

Now heretofore Moſes addeth further, ẏ the Iewes muſt not ſerue God at the firſt, and afterward become cold: but ẏ they muſt perſeuere in it all the time of their life. And after ẏ maner will God be honoured of vs. For he taketh vs not to hyre for certain dayes, & then to let vs go, or to giue vs leaue to depart at the ende of our terme: he taketh vs for life & death. And it is good reaſon, as S. Paul ſheweth vs where he ſayth ẏ our Lord Ieſus died & roſe again to reigne both ouer the quicke & the dead. Though there were none other reſpect than this, were it not ynough? Behold, ẏ ſon of God which bought vs by his death and paſſion, is riſen againe immediatly: & is it not meete then ẏ we ſhold giue our ſelues to him & to God his father, and ẏ we ſhould be wholly dedicated vnto him, & that we ſhould both indeuor to ſerue him as long as we liue vpon ẏ earth, and alſo ẏ our death ſhould be as a ſacrifice & offering vnto him, to ſhewe ourſelues obedient to him in all points? Yes: & therefore let vs marke well, ẏ we muſt not doe it, as it were in a pang, as a number of folke do, who are very whot in gods ſeruice for a two or three dayes, and afterward their mind is altered, & their deuotion is quite gone, & they ſhew full well ẏ there was no zeale in thẽ. But let vs alwayes beare in mind to ſerue God as long as we liue. And therewithall let vs alſo bethinke vs of ẏ which is ſet downe heere, where where Moſes ſpeaketh yet againe of the heritage that had bin promiſed to ỹ Iewes. For ſeeing that our Lord doth daily put vs in mind of his grace: it is good reaſon ỹ wee ſhould plucke vp a good corage to honour him, & gather new ſtrength to ſay, forasmuch as I haue liued out this day in the world, & haue ſerued God this morning, ſeeing ỹ I perceiue he cõtinueth his goodnes ſtil towards me, yea, & increaſeth it: is it not reaſon that my zeale & mine affection to ſerue him ſhould be ỹ more kindled, and ỹ my hope ſhold not be abated? That is the thing which Moſes ment in ſaying, Ye ſhall poſſeſſe ỹ land: & as long as ye poſſeſſe it ye ſhal haue a faire mirrour before your eyes to ſhewe you how your God calleth you to him, & maintaineth you in the poſſeſſion of the benefit which he hath once beſtowed vpon you.

Rom. 14.9.

Ezech. 20.18

And therefore let vs marke, ỹ we deſerue well to be bereft of the grace ỹ God ſhal haue granted vs, if we acknowledge it not toward him, but forget it, & apply it to another end than he ment it.

Deut.11,21. It hath bin ſayde heretofore ỹ the Iewes ſhould poſſeſſe the land, as long as ỹ beauen hung ouer the earth. And yet we ſee how they be put out of it, inſomuch ỹ at this day they poſſeſſe not any part of it, but wander abroad in the world, & are hunted to & fro. And what is ỹ cauſe therof? Surely God had mainteined them in the inheritance which he had promiſed thẽ, if they had not turned away frõ him after ỹ faſhion. For it was not without cauſe, that ỹ land was called Gods reſtingplace. As if he had ſaid, ỹ when al the reſidue of the worlde were toſſed & turmoyled, ỹ Iewes ſhold dwel at eaſe & reſt in ỹ land, ſo as if any mã made war vpon them & troubled them, yet God wold ſtabliſh thẽ there. Yea but they haue brokẽ couenant wh him. And therfore at this day (as we ſee) they be baniſhed frõ reſting in any place of the whole world. They be as vagabonds euerie where. And what is the cauſe of it but their own vnthankfulnes in ỹ they haue forſaken gods promiſe through their vnbeleefe and ſtubborneſſe, and haue vtterly diſanulled it to the vttermoſt of their power? Therefore let vs bethinke ourſelues. True it is ỹ we muſt be as wayfarers in this world, if we wilbe heires of heauen, as ỹ Apoſtle telleth vs. But howſoeuer the caſe ſtand, if we intend to be bleſſed of our God, & to feele ỹ he is a good defence for vs: let vs hold vs in obedience & ſubiectiõ to him. Otherwiſe let vs aſſure ourſelues, ỹ although al ỹ whole world hold with vs, yet we ſhall finde ourſelues ſo perſecuted and purſued, as we ſhall finde no reſt any where. If a faithful man walke in the feare of God, although he be perſecuted & tormented; yet may hee reſt vpon this point to ſay, yet is God my protector; and he will call vpon him, & by his calling vpon him he ſhall finde cauſe of cõfort. But on ỹ contrarie part, if an vnbeleeuer play ỹ rebell againſt God, although he haue peace to the worldward, and be in fauor of men, yea & alſo dreaded: yet ſhall he euer be vnquiet & agaſt. And the reaſon is, becauſe he ſeketh not to be at peace with God. So then let vs marke that whereas Moſes exhorteth the people heere to ſerue God all their life long: it is to the end wee knowing ỹ God renues his mercie and goodnes daily toward vs; ſhould be inflamed to ſerue him with ỹ greater corage, & that frõ day to day we ſhold always continue therin as though we were at reſt. We ſee ỹ euen ſleepe ſetteth a man in good plight againe, ſo ỹ when he hath wearyed himſelfe with walking or working, he becommeth ready and diſpoſed to returne to his labour againe the next morning. Euen ſo muſt we take corage at our Lords incoraging of vs, and at his calling of vs vnto him, ſo as it may appeare that we be willing and readie to follow him.

But now let vs come to that which Moſes hath ſet down concerning the Lords ordinances and ſtatutes. The firſt cõmandement ỹ he giueth the Iewes, is that when they be come into the Land which they were to poſſeſſe for their inheritãce they ſhoulde beate downe all the altars of the heathen, breake and deface their ydolles, burne all the groues where they had vſed their ſuperſtitions, and vtterly root out the remembrance of them Here we ſee again how hatefull a thing ydolatrie is vnto God, and that he can not abide ỹ his ſeruice ſhould in any wiſe be corrupted. Let vs marke I ſay, that God accepteth not any ſeruice at our hands, when it is mingled with any abuſe or folly of our owne heades: but as we muſt ſerue him onely, ſo muſt we ſerue him not after our owne faſhion, but according to his owne wil, cõmandement & allowance. Wherein we ſee how a great number of ignorant wretches beguile themſelues nowadayes. For hauing proteſted that their intent is to ſerue ỹ only one God, they put to many patches of their owne, bearing themſelues in hand that ỹ is not amiſſe. And why? So long as mine intẽtion be to ſerue God ſay they, & that I do it of a good intent; why ſhold it be condemned? Yea, but we heare how our God can not away with any companion, as he declareth euerywhere; and Eſa.42.8. euen in this text we be taught the ſame expreſly ynough: for God will haue all remembrance of ydols vtterly rooted out. For why? As long as ydols haue their vſe; God is defaced & ouercouered that he can not be diſcerned, and likewiſe all things in the world are confounded by it. Therfore it is all one as if mẽ ſhold go about to ſpoile him of his maieſtie & glory. And euen ỹ papiſts themſelues auow the ſame thing in their cõmon byword, when they ſay that God is not knowen for the Apoſtles. And it was Gods will that they ſhould make a common prouerbe of it, to ſhewe that they cut their owne throtes with their own knife, in that they can alleadge no excuſe at the latter day. For they ſay they ment it not: no, but will not their prouerbe proue them liers? Yes: for their owne wordes ſhall iudge them. Howſoeuer they fare, let vs note that if Gods ſeruice be not kept in the owne pureneſſe, all is marde: ſo that although men worſhip him neuer ſo much, yet hee miſliketh it, as wee ſee by his ſpeaking thereof in his prophete Ezechiell. Goe ſerue your owne Gods ſayth he, for I haue done with you. As if hee ſhould ſay; belong altogether to the deuill if you will: Seeing that ye hold ye not all wholly to me, but that I muſt haue companions ioyned with me, and ye make me but as one of the common ſort, ſo as I muſt bee as good as no body: I renounce you and giue you ouer ẏ ye may goe to the deuill; for I will haue no more to doe with you. So then let vs marke well, that to ſerue our God aright, wee muſt yeelde ſuch preheminence to his maieſtie, as to depende all wholly vppon his worde and doctrine, without adding any thing to that which hee commaundeth, as ſhall be declared more at length in the next Lecture.

Nowe furthermore, whereas it is ſayde that the [very] remembraunce of ydolles muſt be rooted out: it is to the end that folke ſhould be the better aduiſed. Truely God ſheweth vs on the one ſide (as I haue ſayde) howe greatly he hateth all ydolatry, ſeeing hee willeth men to burne the woods & all that euer hath ſerued to the mainteinance thereof, inſomuch that hee will haue the very ſtones beaten to pouder, and the golde and ſiluer broken, ſo as all may be quite & cleane done away. Seeing that God doth ſo condemne the creatures which are good as in reſpect of thẽ ſelues, becauſe they haue beene inſtrumentes of ſuperſtition: thereby we ſee well that hee can in no wiſe away with ydolatrie. Beſides this hee hath alwayes reſpect to the frailetie of men: for as ſoone as we meete with any thing, by and by we be miſcarried: wee be euer ſtarting one way or other. And what is the cauſe? Naturally we be inclined to ydolatrie: and becauſe wee bee earthly and fleſhly; wee bee euer imagining of God ſome thing that ſeemeth good to ourſelues, by reaſon whereof wee turne him into ſundrie ſhapes. If we haue neuer ſo ſmall an occaſion, by and by we be drawen vnto euill. If a flye do but croſſe our eyes, we make an ydoll of it. We ſee then whereat God looked when hee gaue ſo ſtraite commaundement to beate downe the altars, to heawe downe the groues, to burne vp the woods, to breake the images, and to deſtroy the puppets vtterly. For had thoſe things continued ſtill among the Iewes; there woulde euer haue been ſome among them, which would haue giuen themſelues to the ſuperſtitions of the heathen. Tuſh, would they haue ſayd: what and if a man had deuotiõ to it? it is a hallowed thing: like as at this day, ſuch as haue beene nuſled in papiſtrie, are ſo held to it as long as they ſee their pelting traſh, that they can neuer winde themſelues out of it, though they would neuer ſo fain. If a man that hath beene long inured to the Maſſe doe ſee a chalice: his minde giues him ſtill that there is ſome holineſſe in it; whereas cleane contrariwiſe it is as filthie and ſtinking an infection as any can be, and yet notwithſtanding wee can not conceiue it. For why? As I ſayde afore, we be fleſhly by nature: and beſides that, Satan vſeth ſuch ſlight, that when he ſetteth ſuch thinges before our eyes to beguile vs with, we be ſnared by them out of hande; and therefore there is none other remedie, but to make cleane riddaunce of all ſuch thinges as may allure vs to ſuperſtition. Truely if their were puppettes among vs as are in the Popedome, it might be alleadged that they could not hurt vs as long as they were not worſhipped. In deed it is true that they of themſelues could not hurt vs: but lette vs looke into ourſelues, and wee ſhall finde ourſelues ſo weake, that wee ſhoulde be blinded immediatly by ſuch baggage, and it would turne vs away from Gods pure worde, inſomuch that if we had altars ſtill, we ſhould not knowe that the Lordes ſupper were miniſtred vnto vs to the intent wee ſhould be partakers of him, and inioy all his goods: but there woulde remaine I wote not what a wicked imagination of ẏ helliſh Sacrifice which is done in the popedome; namely of the Maſſe, wherein men thinke that Chriſt is offered there to GOD his father for the remiſſion of our ſinnes. And ſo there woulde alwayes remaine ſome wicked fancie ſtill in our heade. That is the cauſe why God hath ſo ſtraitly commaunded to breake the ymages, deſtroy the altars, and burne vppe the woods or groues where ydolles haue beene ſerued and worſhipped. The Papiſts in theſe dayes replie that that commaundement was giuen but to the Iewes, becauſe they were giuen to ſuperſtition. Verily as who ſhoulde ſay that we were better diſpoſed noweadayes than they were. True it is that GOD giueth not this commaundement to vs as touching the Ceremonie of burning all thinges wherewith ydolles haue beene ſerued: but yet for all that, his will is that we ſhould make cleane riddaunce of all thinges that may turne vs from the pure religion. If it were of neceſſitie that all thinges ſhoulde bee doone away wherewith ydolles haue beene worſhipped; this temple ſhoulde not nowe ſtande to haue the name of GOD preached in it. It hath beene a brothelhouſe of Satans, but nowe muſt wee apply it to good vſe, by taking away the trumperie that hath reigned in it, which was quite contrarie to Gods worde. But howeſoeuer the worlde goe, if we looke well vppon our infirmitie, wee ſhall finde that this leſſon belongeth to vs at this day, namely that all remembraunce of ydolles is to bee vtterly raſed out. And nowe inſomuch as the maladie of ſuperſtition is ſo rooted in vs, there is none other remedie for it, but to take away all obiectes that may moue vs thereunto, that the deuill may haue no more any meanes to intangle vs in his nettes which hee layeth for vs: but that wee may knowe ſimply after what manner God wilbe worſhipped and ſerued.

Alſo we may gather further vppon this text, howe mad men bee in their ſuperſtitions, accordingly as the prophetes doe ſpeake thereof. For they vſe ſuch ſimilitudes as theſe; namely that men not onely reſemble ſuch folke as are carried away with fonde loue, and haue loſt both honeſtie, witte, and countenaunce: but alſo reſemble horſes that ney after Mares, and ſuch other brute beaſtes. Yee ſee then after what manner the wretched Idolaters are carried away in their ſuperſtitions. And this is declared vnto vs, in that wee heare him ſpeaking of woods of high growth, as men terme them, and of Mountaines and Hilles. For there was not that odde nooke wherein the Iewes hadde not Ier. 5. 8.

ſome peculiar deuotion; after which manner we ſee howe our ydolaters alſo haue poyſoned the fountaynes, Woods and Hilles with the filthineſſe of their ſuperſtitions and charmes. Whereſoeuer was any notable thing, by and by there was reared ſome Temple, or there was ſome chappell builded, and all to worſhippe ſome ydol in. There is neuer any ende or meaſure when men take leaue after that faſhion to worſhippe GOD after their owne liking. And foraſmuch as wee ſee that, wee ought to brydle our ſelues the more, that we attempt not any thing without the warrant of Gods worde. For if we hold not ourſelues within our bounds, and as it were tye our ſelues ſimplye to that which GOD hath commaunded: it can not bee but that Sathan ſhall leade vs out of the way, ſo as there will be horrible confuſion in our caſe.

The firſt reaſon then is, that ſuch as will needes ſerue GOD after their owne fancie, doe alwayes goe into ſuch a dungeon as they can neuer gette out of againe, and they fall continually from one ſuperſtition to an other. Marke that for one point. And on the other ſide we ſee howe greatly it will bee to our condemnation, that we can not finde in our heartes to dedicate our liues vnto GOD, ſeeing that the ydolaters are ſo carried away by their fooliſhe fancies, that they haue neuer doone with them, nor can neuer thinke them ſelues ſuperſtitious ynough. Therefore if we for our parte ſeeke not to keepe ourſelues in obedience to our GOD, what will become of vs? For God hath layde ſuch a yoke vpon our neckes, as is gentle ynough. He hath an eye to our infirmitie, hee giueth vs ſuch ſtrength as he knoweth to be meete for vs, hee beareth with vs as gently as may bee. And yet for all this, hee can not compaſſe vs, wee bee ſo nice as is pittie to ſee. Wee fall to complayning and ſay; Alas, GOD pincheth vs too ſore. And if wee doe him but halfe ſeruice, yea or but the hundreth parte of our duetie, wee thinke hee ought to holde himſelfe contented with it: whereas in the meane while the ydolaters doe martyre themſelues out of meaſure, they indure after a ſorte the peines of damned ſoules, and they are euer readie to increaſe their ſuperſtitions.

Wherefore let vs looke well to ourſelues; and ſeeing it is not lawefull for vs to attempt any thing beyonde Gods will; but it behoueth vs to knowe what he requireth of vs, and to ſubmitte our ſelues wholely vnto him: lette vs be gentle and meeke minded to beare the yoke patiently which GOD layeth vppon vs, ſeeing it is neither harde nor greeuous (as I ſayde afore). And ſeeing that the ydolaters doe ſo followe their geere, and nothing can ſtay their trotting and gadding, but that they doe as it were flye to the ſeruing of their ydolles: Lette vs ſteppe forewarde alſo, ſith wee ſee that our Lorde ſheweth vs the way, yea and ſuch a way as though it be verie harde as in reſpect of our corruption, is neuertheleſſe verie playne and eaſie to vs, in reſpect of the grace of his holy ſpirit.

Heere is this moreouer, that Moſes ſayeth not heere, ỹ the Iewes ſhall deſtroy and breake the ydolles in all places whereſoeuer they become: but that GOD commaundeth them to doe it in the lande that is giuen them to inherite. Wherein we ſee that the holy Ghoſt commaundeth not all the faithfull in generall to pull downe and to breake all ydolles in the worlde: but onely where they themſelues haue authoritie. And it is a point well worth the noting. For if we be among ydolaters, it lyeth not in vs to ridde the Lande from the ſuperſtitions that reigne in it. What is to bee doone then? Euerie man muſt reforme himſelfe in his owne heart, ſo as all ydolles may be thruſt out from thence. When I ſee Gods ſeruice corrupted any where, I muſt forbeare to haunt that place or to communicate in companie with thoſe ydolaters. I muſt cutte off all the wicked affections that are in my fleſhe, and I muſt ſhew moreouer that I am not minded to forſake my GOD, nor to falſifie the faith that I haue plighted vnto him by defiling my ſelfe with the ydolatries that are about mee. Therefore euerie man muſt firſt and formoſt reforme his owne heart, and ſecondly ſeparate himſelfe from all things that may defile him. And that is becauſe GOD hath giuen vs a charge of our owne perſons, and made vs as it were keepers of his temples, to the intent that euery of vs ſhoulde looke narrowly to ourſelues. That is a thing which it behoueth vs to doe when wee be in the countrey of Idolaters. Beſides this, euerie man muſt purge and clenſe his owne houſe from all filthineſſe. So as if a man be a houſholder, hee muſt looke well about him that he hold well his children and ſeruauntes in the feare of GOD and in the pureneſſe of religion. For if a man ſuffer his houſe to be defiled, and all thinges there to goe to hauocke: he ſhalbe ſure to make account thereof to God. Not that a man can holde his wife and ſeruants continually tyed to his ſleeue to turne them to the chriſtian faith when he lyſteth: but my meaning is, that he muſt not ſuffer any ſuperſtition or ydolatrie. For why? Seeing that GOD hath giuen him ſouereigntie in his owne houſe; it behoueth him to deale in ſuch wiſe as GOD bee honoured there, and as no filthineſſe be mingled with the pure religion, but that all be ridde quite and cleane away. But as for Kinges, Princes, and Magiſtrates, which haue power and authoritie, they muſt roote out all ſuperſtition and ydolatrie. And ſeeing that GOD hath armed them with the ſworde: it behoueth them to vſe it in that behalfe, ſo as they doe not in any wiſe ſuffer or giue leaue, that there be anie vncleanneſſe to greeue GOD withall, or to abolish or deface his ſeruice. Thoſe are ỹ thinges which we haue to marke vpon this text of Moſeſes. And therefore to be ſhort, let vs remember that hee commaundeth euery of vs to keepe cleane his owne

body and ſoule. For why? God hath laide ſuch a charge vppon vs, that he will haue vs to be the 1.Cor.6.19. 20. Temples of his holy Ghoſt: and therefore hee will haue euerie of vs to keep his bodie as cleane as can bee. Nowe then let vs bee carefull to driue al idolatrie farre from vs, and not to meddle with it in any wiſe. And agayne, let euerie of vs haue an eye to his houſeholde, that there bee no infection in it to mar the ſeruice of God. And thirdly let thoſe that are in eſtate of cheefe ſouereintie; as kinges, Princes and magiſtrates, let them I ſay conſider, that ſith the Lord hath giuen them authoritie and power, if they ſuffer his ſeruice to bee defaced; they ſhall bee called to account for it. For it is ſaide that when thou art come into the lande: thou muſt driue out al Idolatrie, and vtterly deface whatſoeuer hath ſerued to any ſuperſtition.

And in ſpeaking after that maner, Moſes ſheweth that the putting away of idols is not all that wee haue to doe: but that the cheefe point is the aduauncing, reſtoring and ſtabliſhing of Gods pure ſeruice. And that is well worthie to be noted. For wee ſhall ſee a great number nowadayes, which can wel enough mocke at the follies of the Pope, & at the abuſes which reigne vnder his tyrannie. They dare well enough eat fleſhe vpon fry dayes, and they make no great account of Lent & Saints euens, or of the taking of holy water, or of kiſſing of Relikes, or of gadding on Pilgrimage, or of anie other ſuch petie traſhe. They haue no great deuotion to ỹ maſſe, or to Shrift, neither paſſe they for the deade, or for the ſinging [of diriges and ſuch other paltrie] for ſuch as are deceaſed. Wee ſhall ſee a great number that can well enough deſpiſe all the ſuperſtitions of the Popedome, yea and euen laugh them to ſkorne and vtterly condemn thē. But what? There is nō feare of God, there is no Religion in them. Surely it were much better for them to haue gone on ſtill like bruite beaſtes in their ignorance, than by ſuch contempte to fall to ruſhing againſt Gods Maieſtie like wilde beaſtes, and not to perceiue that there is a God which reigneth ouer the whole worlde. Then doeth it not greatly boote to haue aboliſhed Idols, except the true religion bee ſet vp in the ſteede of it: Like as when a houſe is builded amiſſe, if it be ſaide to bee nothing worth, or that there be many faultes in it; it ſhall be wel done to pull it downe againe, whereas notwithſtanding if it were let alone in the ſame plight, ſo as a man had leuer to haue ſome Hoggeſcote to lodge in; yet for all the ilfauoredneſſe and faultineſſe of it, it would ſerue his turne after a ſorte being let ſtande ſtill: but if it were pulled downe and raſed to the grounde and none other builded vp in ſteede thereof, the pulling downe of it were to no purpoſe at al.

Let vs marke then that here Moſes deliuereth vs a perfecte doctrine which conſiſteth of two rules: Namely that wee worſhip our GOD purely; and moreouer that all ſuperſtitions bee caſt downe, ſo as nothing may hinder the worſhipping of God according to his worthineſſe, but that men may haue an eye to him alone, & holde themſelues alonely to his Maieſtie. And firſt he ſpeaketh of the aboliſhing of al ſuperſtitions. Why ſo? For if a man intende to til & ſow a feelde, if the ſame bee full of bryers, thornes, and noyſome weedes, he muſt firſt and foremoſt cleanſe ỹ ground, or elſe he muſt breake it vp w̄ Ier.4.4. ỹ plough to kil wicked weedes before he lay his ſeede into it. Euen ſo muſt all corruptions be taken from among vs, ere we can giue our ſelues ouer to the ſeruing of God. Well may it be preached vnto vs that there is but one God whome we ought to worſhippe: but if wee bee poſſeſſed aforehande with fond fancies or imaginations, we ſhall be neuer the better for it, but our minds ſhall euer be intangled. That is the cauſe why Moſes beginneth at that ende. But yet hee addeth further, that it is not inough to haue clenſed a peece of grounde, vnleſſe it be alſo tilled & ſowed, that it may bring forth fruite, for elſe it will continue barren ſtill. And what is a man the better then for his plucking vp of the buſhes and brambles that were in it afore? That is the thing which is ſhewed vs here. But firſt let vs marke, that it is but a flat mockerie, when men will needes ſet foorth Gods worde, without correcting of the vices that are contrarie to the right religion; after which manner there are a number to be founde noweadayes in the Popedome, which rowe betweene two ſtreames, of which ſorte are theſe hypocrites which haue perchaunce ſome taſte of the Goſpell, and can boaſt indeede of the preaching of Gods worde But howe is that? Whereas they ſee the wretched worlde as ſore blinded and beſotted as may be, ſo as nothing elſe is minded but idolatrie and ſuperſtition: yet they thinke it enough for them to ſay, there is but one God whome it behoueth vs to worſhippe. They dare not ſay that he onely is to be worſhipped: but let vs worſhip God, ſay they. And will not the Paynims ſay as much? Haue not the Papiſts alwayes ſayd the ſame? And yet when they haue ſaide, wee haue Ieſus Chriſt for our aduocate: it is ſeene neuertheleſſe, that they let him alone behinde them and run gadding after the patrons which the worlde hath deuiſed, and holde the wretched world at ſuch a bay, that (like a ſort of traytors to God and his Church) they make mē beleeue that it is not euill to be partakers of all the abhominations that are committed in it. But we ſee howe Gods meaning is cleane contrarie. For Moſes ſaith not onely, You ſhall ſerue the Lorde your God: but before hee come to that point, he ſaith, Ye ſhal beat downe the Altars, breake the images, burne the groues, and make cleane riddance of all that euer hath ſerued vnto wickedneſſe: euerie whit of it muſt be vtterly done away. And why. For had the people continued ſtill in ſuch infections: it had beene vnpoſſible that God ſhoulde haue beene worſhipped purely. Then it is not enough for a man to giue ſome taſt of Gods trueth: but if we ſee that Leaſinges haue borne ſwaye aforetimes; they muſt be cut off, men muſt crie out againſt them, men muſt be reformed, they muſt bee brought into the right way, and they muſt not bee ſuffered to ſtray ſo any more. But yet therewithall let vs alſo learne, that when men haue cryed out againſt ſuperſtitions, they muſt not ſtay there: but they muſt cheefly proceed to ỹ ſetting vp againe of Gods ſeruice, as Moſes ſpeaketh thereof. For the very cauſe why there are ſo many Epicures in the worlde nowadayes, and why there are ſo manie folke that reſemble ſwine and bruit beaſtes rather than men: is that they be contented to mocke at the fondneſſe and ignorance of the vnbeleeuers, and yet coulde neuer skill thẽſelues what it is to worſhippe GOD purely, and to ſticke to him, and to humble themſelues to his worde. And therefore it is meete that they ſhould be giuen vp to a reprobate ſenſe, & that GOD ſhould giue them the bridle, that they might no more haue any honeſtie, humanitie or aught elſe in them that is good. Wherfore let vs learne not onely to know that Papiſtes are miſerable & wretched creatures, and to condemne them in all their follies & ſuperſtitions: but alſo to be ready to goe vnto God when he calleth vs.

And let vs vnder ſtand that when he hath beene ſo gratious vnto vs as to teach vs the true religion and doctrine of his Goſpel; thereby he ſheweth vs that it is he onely whome wee ought to worſhip. Thus ye ſee what we haue to remember vntill the reſt may be laide forth more fully.

Now let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our GOD with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to make vs feele thẽ the more liuely, that being caſt downe and as it were ouerwhelmed in our ſelues, wee may go ſeeke ỹ mercie which he hath promiſed vs for our Lord Ieſus Chriſtes ſake. And ſeeing he hath graunted vs the grace to put away all ſuperſtitions from among vs, let vs beſeech him that his ſeruice may be ſo ſet vp again, as he ſuffer vs not to become heatheniſhe, but that as he hath once ſanctified vs, ſo we may holde out in the ſame, and profit continually more and more therein, vntill wee haue finiſhed the courſe of this life. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace not onely to vs but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth &c.

The Lxxxj. Sermon, which is the ſecond vpon the twelfth Chapter.

3.4.5 But looke what place ſoeuer &c.

6 And thither ſhall yee bring your burntofferinges, and your ſacrifices, and your tithes, and the heaueofferings of your handes, and your vowes, and your free-willofferinges, and the firſtborne of your kine and ſheepe.

7 And there ſhall you eat before the Lorde your God, and be merrie both you and your houſehold in all things that you ſet your hande vnto, wherein the Lorde your God ſhall haue bleſſed you.

IN the Doctrine that I haue deliuered vnto you alreadie, there are two partes. The one is that God will haue all thinges vtterly rooted out wherewith Idols haue beene ſerued. And good reaſon hath hee ſo to doe, becauſe he ſeeth the frailtie of men: for if we haue neuer ſo ſmall an occaſion, by and by we be miſcaried. For Idolatrie is ſo rooted in our heartes, that wee haue neede as it were to plucke ourſelues from it by force: and what wil then become of vs, when we be drawen to it? Let vs marke wel therefore, that foraſmuch as we be inclined to ſuperſtition, if we intende to ſerue GOD, we muſt put away all things that may turne vs from the right way, & from the ſimplicitie which God commaundeth vs. And men cannot ſtand too much vpon their gard in that caſe. True it is that a number of mẽ do weene themſelues to be ſo ſtrong, ỹ although they be neuer ſomuch conuerſant among ỹ ſuperſtitions of the vnbeleeuers, yet they ſhal not be atteinted with them: But God is wiſer thã we. And therfore let vs remember the leſſon that he telleth vs: namely that we muſt ſhunne all the ſuperſtitions of the heathen and the misbeleeuers, or elſe his ſeruice will bee marred among vs by and by. But foraſmuch as I haue declared that part alreadie, I wil ſtand no longer vpon it.

Let vs proceed to that which Moſes addeth, namely that mẽ muſt not deale ſo with God: by which ſaying he meaneth, that the Iewes muſt not go about to honour the liuing GOD by building vp the altars, Chappels, or any other of all the filthie things again which they had beatẽ down. As if he ſhoulde ſay, GOD will not bee ſerued after the manner of Idols, and therefore regarde not what the heathen haue done, followe them not, neither faſhion your ſelues to their example: but holde you to this one rule, of doing that which your God commaundeth you. And this is well worth the noting: for when we haue condemned Idolatrie, we ceaſe not for al that to imagine that God liketh well that we ſhoulde do ỹ ſame things in honor of him, which were done by the vnbeleeuers: and ỹ appeareth by the dealinges in the Popedome. After that the Goſpell had beene preached to the worlde, men fell to mingling of al maner of ſuperſtitiõs of ỹ heathẽ with the true ſeruice of God. And what was the cauſe cause thereof? The heathen had their Pilgrimages: and men knewe well it was a diueliſhe abuſe: neuertheleſſe they did not put them quite and cleane away, they did but onely chaunge them. In ſteede of going on pilgrimage to ſuch an Idol, they goe now to our Ladie of Laurette, to * the holy handekercher, to Saint Michael, to Saint Iames, and to viſite the holy Sepulchre. Men ſhould haue vtterly rooted out all ỹ things that had beene ſo brought in by Satan, and in ſteed thereof they did but change them. Whereas men ſaw that the heathen made great feaſts, and kept a great number of ſolemne holy dayes in honour of their Idols: O (quoth they) wee muſt no more doe ſoe, for that were a ſeruing of the diuell: but let euery pariſhe make a Churchholyday, to play, to daunce, and to feede in till they burſt againe, and all in the honour of God. Beſides this, let euery one haue their patron, and let them worſhippe him. And ſo in ſteade of the ſolemne feaſtes that were among the heathen, let others be brought in among vs. O ſirs (ſay they) theſe thinges are not doone any more in honour of the Idols; but in honour of Saint Martine. And then let them daunce and playe the drunkerdes, for all is well enough ſo it be done in the honour of God. Againe the heathen were wont to keepe a holy day which they called the feaſt of all Spirits: and we muſt chaunge ỹ word and haue the feaſt of all Soules. Moreouer the heathen had a Temple which was called the Temple of all goddes: and wee doe nowe call it the Church of all Saintes or all Hallowes. See what an act worthie of remembraunce and an Angelicall act the Pope thought hee did, as the Papiſtes can well skill to make their bragges. For Io (ſay they) there is a temple called the Temple of all the gods: but what? Wee haue but one God, and therefore it muſt not continue after that faſhion. Wel, we will chaunge the worde, and whereas the heathen had a Temple which they called the Temple of All their gods, we wil haue it the Church of all Hallowes, and we will haue a Churchholyday added to it. Again when they ſawe that the heathen had their ſacrifices: Needes muſt they alſo haue their Maſſes ſet vp in the roome of them. Moreouer perceiuing that the heathen had their waſhings, they alſo would needes haue their holywater. To be ſhort, whatſoeuer filth and infection was among the Infidels; the Papiſts tooke it to themſelues to keepe. And what was the cauſe thereof? Euen for want of taking heede to this text, wherein it is ſaide that whereas the Infidels haue many deuotions deuiſed of their owne braine; we muſt not couet to doe the like to our God, nor looke that way; but we muſt harken what he ſaith and commandeth. Were this ſaying of Moſeſes vnderſtoode; all the diueliſh deuiſes that haue reigned & doe reigne ſtill at this day in the Popedome, ſhoulde get them away to the bottome of hell. For we ſee here a generall condemnation, whereby GOD ſheweth that he hateth al ſuch things. And why? Becauſe he will not haue men to deale with him as the ignorant doe with their Idols. A thing may ſeeme faire to the worldwarde, & men may clap their hands at it: but behold God ſaith here, I wil not be ſerued after ſuch faſhiõ, or ſuch maner, let not men preſume into my preſẽce to deuiſe what they think good thẽſelues. And if it be alleadged, yea, but ſhall ſuch a thing bee euil taken, when I doe it in the honour of God? Shal it be ſaid that I ſerue Idols, when I do ſuch a thing of a good intent, and all to ſerue God? Is it ſõ great an euil that men ſhould cry out at it? No, no, men muſt hearken what God commandeth, and ground themſelues altogether therepon, ſo as they preſume not to adde any thing thereunto. We ſee then that the meaning of this text is, that wee muſt forget al the follies that haue beguiled vs, and not alledge cuſtome or continuance of time, but receiue the doctrine of the holy ſcripture like litle children. A yong childe will not ſay, thus and thus haue I beene taught; for he knoweth yet nothing at all: But he receiueth that which is put to him, and is the readier to learne, becauſe he is not inured aforehande with anie maner of miſteaching. But if a childe haue been miſtaught and nuſled in his fondnes: then if a man go about to amend him, O (ſayes he) I was taught ſo, and a man ſhal not be able to make him pronounce one ſyllable aright, nor to ſpeake one worde to any purpoſe. And why ſo? Bicauſe he hath bin trained by an Aſſe, who hath framed him to his owne faſhion, and hee hath learned ỹ right trick of him. After the ſame maner it is with a great number of folke that haue been brought vp in curſed poperie: alwayes they hold ſtil ſome relikes of it, ſaying, Yea ſir, but can ſuch a thing be euil? There is euer ſome replying againſt God. But as for vs, let vs practiſe ỹ which is ſaide in the foure & fortith Pſalme: My daughter, forget thine owne people and thy fathers houſe, and thy husband wil take pleaſure in thee. We know that in that place our ſpiritual marriage with Ieſus Chriſt is deſcribed vnder ỹ perſon of Salomon. And firſt of all we bee commaunded to forget all that euer is of our owne. For by our people and by our fathers houſe, is meant all that euer we haue of nature, all things that we haue loued afore, and al the pleaſures & delights wherewith we haue beene helde backe. Al theſe thinges muſt be thruſt vnder foote, or elſe the ſonne of God wil neuer like of vs, whoſe calling of vs to him is to make vs all one with himſelfe. Alſo we muſt put the ſame thing in vre which I haue alledged heretofore out of Sainte Peter: namely that we muſt be like newe borne babes. For when a child beginneth at his Apſie he is eaſie to be taught and ſuffereth himſelfe to be ouer ruled: euen ſo in al things, let vs learne this leſſõ which God teacheth vs in his doctrine, & let al our wiſedome be to obey him. That is the thing which we haue to marke in this texte where it is ſaid, thou ſhalt not deale ſo with thy God: for God wil not be weighed in the balance nor ruled by ỹ meaſure of Idols; but wil haue mẽ to imbrace whatſoeuer he commandeth, and to reſt vpon it wout gainſaying or replying. For declaration hereof he ſaith, Ye ſhal reſort to the place which hee ſhall haue choſen to put his name in, and to dwel in. Which ſaying here is expounded of ſome to bee his habitation, that is to ſay, his ſanctuary or tabernacle. But all cõmeth to one end: Gods meaning is plain & vndoutful, namely ỹ whereas the heathen had ſet vp many Altars, builded many Chappels, and gone on many pilgrimages: the Iſraelites ſhoulde holde themſelues contented with the only ſanctuarie. Now if it were lawfull for men to bee ruled by their owne reaſon, ỹ Iewes might here haue pleaded in this wiſe againſt GOD, What, the countrie is great, and ſhall there be no Altar in no place of it but onely in one? There are diuerſe great Cities; and ſhall there be neuer a Temple in them for men to offer ſacrifice in and to doe their deuotions? There are a great number of countries bordering vpon it, [which doe otherwiſe;] and ſhall we in worſhipping GOD looke onely vnto heauen? Why ſhall there be no altar? It might ſeeme therefore that the Iewes had verie iuſt cauſe to refuſe this commaundement and to ſay wee will bee ſo deuout that wee will haue ſome ſigne or marke of Gods dwelling among vs and wee will worſhippe him, and doe ſolemne ſacrifices vnto him. But what? In this caſe men muſt bridle themſelues and holde their owne wits in captiuitie, ſo as they giue God leaue to ſpeake, and they themſelues holde their peace, without attempting to go anie further than Gods mouth permitteth them. Ye ſee then howe it is Gods will to humble his ſeruauntes by making them ſubiect to his word. Wherfore let vs learne that wee muſt not followe our owne ſway nor our owne imagination: but this ought to ſuffice vs, that our ſeruice be acceptable vnto God, by ordering of it according to his will: there is no other way but that.

And it is ſaid expreſſely in the place which the euerlaſting, thy God ſhal chooſe: as if he ſhold ſay, it is not in the choice of ỹ Iewes to appoint God a place or to ſay vnto him, here wil wee ſacrifice. Men muſt not preſume ſo far. It belongeth to thy God to chooſe ſaith Moſes. To be ſhort hee will haue Gods authoritie to bee receiued and him onely to be the ruler of his people, ſo as he may command what he liſteth and be obeyed without gainſaying. Ye ſee then that the foundation of true religion is not to ſay, it ſeemeth ſo to me, I weene ſo, I would faine haue it ſo, it is a goodly thing: but to let God ſpeake, and to aſſure our ſelues that it is not for vs to doe any thing but ỹ which he alloweth. And ſo is meant by this ſaying that obedience is more worth before him thã all maner of ſacrifice. And in verie deed can wee doe him any greater honor than to reſt vpon his worde, and ſuffer our ſelues to be gouerned by it, and to be as poore blinde folkes vntill hee haue lightened vs and ſhewed vs the way? Now as for thoſe that folow their owne deuotions, they bereaue GOD of his ſouereintie and yeeld him no reuerence at al: therefore it is but a building in ỹ aire and an vtter confuſion. Wherefore let vs weigh wel this word chooſe, that we may be fully reſolued in our ſelues that none but God hath authoritie to ſet order how he ſhould be honoured and ſerued.

1. Sam. 15. 22

And he addeth yet further, from out of al your tribes. Here the people might bee tempted to a kind of ieloſie, for we know that men do willingly drawe things to themſelues, and that it is a greeſe and a corſey vnto vs when others are preferred before vs. The ſame might bee alſo among the Iewes. The lande of Chanaan is diuided into twelue tribes, for the Tribe of Ioſeph made two, and the Leuites had no portion at al. But yet for all that, yee ſee there were twelue Tribes, which had euery one his portion to enherite. Now GOD tolde them that his Tabernacle ſhould be ſet in Ieruſalem, and that his tẽple ſhould be builded vpon mount Sion. Hereupon the reſidue might haue quarelled thus: What? Are not we the children of Abraham aſwell as they? with whome is it that GOD hath made his couenant? Are we not al of one ſtocke? Why then ſhoulde the Tribe of Iuda be preferred before vs? ſpecially ſeeing he is not the firſt begotten. Doth ỹ birth right belong vnto him? Why then ſhoulde he bee more honoured than all the reſt Whence hath hee this priuiledge? After that manner might the matter bee debated. Alſo it might be alledged that the Arke ought to be remoued euery moneth of the yere frõ one tribe to an other throughout al ỹ twelue Tribes. There are twelue moneths in the yere, and we be twelue tribes of vs: and therefore wee ought to begin according to the order of birthright, ſo as the eldeſt haue the carying of the Arke the firſt moneth, and euery Tribe after in his order. Were it not reaſon it ſhoulde be ſo? Yee ſee then that the reſt of the Tribes might haue made that allegation when they ſawe the Tribe of Iuda preferred before all the other Tribes. But Moſes preuenteth that, ſaying, it belongeth vnto thy GOD to chooſe and to commaunded what hee thinketh good. Accordingwhereunto it is ſaide in the Pſalme, that the land of Chanaan was in deede made holy, and that God had promiſed it to his ſeruant Abraham. But what? He refuſed the tribes of Manaſſes and Ephraim, and reſted not there, but chooſe the Tribe of Iuda. And why? becauſe it pleaſed him. If a man ſhoulde looke vppon the outwarde apparance, it is wel knowen that the kingdome of Iſraell was farre greater than the kingdom of Iuda. True it is that in king Dauids time they were all one kingdome: but when the people fell away, then the Tribe of Ephraim became of greateſt honour among them: but yet for all that, God reſerued this dignitie to the citie of Ieruſalem and to mount Sion, that hee woulde be worſhipped there. Sith it is ſo, let vs vnderſtande that to ſerue GOD aright, men muſt vncaſe themſelues of al pride, ſo as they ſeeke not to aduaunce themſelues, but ſubmit themſelues wholy to Gods wil without regarding to bee honoured aboue others after the ambitious manner of the Papiſtes which ſtriue who ſhall goe foremoſt to the offering. They pretend to doe it of deuotion; but indeed they doe it of diueliſh pride. And therefore if we wil haue God to accept our ſeruice, let vs learne to come vnto him with humilitie and not to turne our tayles to our neighbours: & if god vouchsafe to endue any others with greater grace than our selues, wee must not spyte them for it, as wee be warned of it. Wee see that God distributeth his giftes more vnto one than vnto another; What is nowe to bee doone? shoulde wee haue spite at it? Shoulde wee gase aboute vs howe to make our selues iolie fellowes? Alas wee doe but wander away from GOD when we steppe foorth to aduaunce our selues before men. Therefore let vs proceede with all lowlinesse, and not bee so fondly and wickedlie disposed as to haue a will to bee preferred before our neighbours: And so we see what Moses meant to expresse here in saying, God wil choose him out some one certaine place from among thy tribes: and let it not greeue them that are put backe from it. For why? If it bee Gods will to humble them, they shall gayne nothing by their comming to rushe against him. And therfore let euery man holde himselfe contented with his degree and measure, and let him that is little holde himselfe contented with his littlenesse.

God

And nowe hee addeth expressely also, that God will choose a place to put his name in. Whereby he meaneth that he is not to be inclosed in it as in respect of his substance. For (as I haue declared afore) there are alwayes two thinges which it behoueth vs to marke well. When we haue an outwarde order or forme of serving God, wee muste obserue two thinges therein. The one is that forasmuch as God seeth vs to be rude and earthly, hee stoopeth vnto vs, and pleasureth vs so far, as to giue vs things fit for vs: As for example, when wee in praying doe vse these ceremonies of kneeling down, of putting off our cappes, and lifting vp our handes: wherfore doe we so? It is not for that GOD hath neede of it for his part, but for our owne weakenesse sake. Becausse we bee ouer grosse, we bee faine to be exercised after that fashion. After the same manner wee haue Baptisme, and the Lords holy Supper, all which thinges are for the weakenes of our nature. And so ye see that that is one thing which wee haue to marke on our part. But when as God beareth with vs after that fashion, let vs beware that wee surmise him not to be like our selues, or that wee thinke him not to behaue himselfe after our lust. For men are alwayes in daunger of falling into that extremitie. The thing then in effect which Moses ment to say, is this: The Lord will choose him a place to set his sanctuarie in, there will he haue you to worshippe him: there will he haue you to offer your sacrifices to him, thither will hee haue you to bring your oblations; there will he haue you to honor him w̃ your persons & goods, protesting your selues to bee wholy at his deuotion. But yet must you not thinke that your God is come downe from heauen and shut vp in a cofer or cheft. You must not thinke that he sitteth betweene Cherubins after the manner of men; but that it is ynough for you that his name is there, that is to say that he giueth you some token of his presence and power, to the intent yee may be sure that he will heare all our prayers and be mercifull to you. And yet for all that hee filleth heauen and earth, howsoeuer the worlde goe. Therefore ye must not fall to shutting vp of the infinite maiestie and substance of your God, into a corner, or into a material & corruptible Temple. Beware of such superstition, and be contented with the hauing of his name, that is to say, ỹ your God is there called vpon, that his Law is there preached to you, that his promises are there set before you, that you be grounded vpon his grace, that you neede not to doubt but that he is your father and Sauior, that you may boldly sue vnto him, and that you be sure he is ready to receiue your requests. That is the intent why your God is minded to be among you.

Of this place we haue a good lesson to gather, which is, that seeing God hath ordeyned means agreable to our infirmitie to serue him withall; we ought to vse them, according to this saying, thou shalt seeke out that place. For Moses hauing warned the Iewes of their rudenesse, commaundeth thẽ to benefite themselues by such meanes as the Lord teacheth them: that is to wit, by the ceremonies which he would giue them. Nowe adayes we haue not the like ceremonies to those that were vnder the lawe. But yet doth our Lord beare with vs also, so farre foorth as hee seeth it requisite, and giueth vs such ceremonies as are meet for vs, in respect wherof we haue the meetinges that are made among vs, as I haue saide afore. And why? To the end that Gods worde should be preached to vs, that we shoulde make cõmon prayers as it were with one mouth, that we should confesse our faith, and christendome together, and that ỹ Sacramentes should be ministred in the companie of the faithful. Seeing ỹ our Lord giueth vs such meanes, it behoueth vs to vse them. For whosoeuer despiseth thẽ, mocketh God openly. Let vs marke wel that whatsoeuer our Lord hath ordeined for our behoofe, we must receiue it, & be diligent to strengthen our faith therby dayly more & more. For if I thinke my self to be so perfect, ỹ I passe not to come at ỹ Church, there to benefit my self with others: it is a diuelishe ouerweening; and it were better for me that I were some poore begger that had neither witte nor vnderstanding, (so as in the meane while I knewe mine owne pouertie) than to be so high minded. For it is the next way to cast me downe to the bottome of hell, when I will needes exempt my selfe from the common order. And therefore whosoeuer hath any zeale and affection to serue God, must doe that which is commaunded here in seeking the place that God hath appointed: that is to say, he must not holde skorne of any thing which he hath ordeined for the confirming of our faith. That is one point.

Againe we must alwayes beare in minde, that when God vouchsafeth to plant his name amõg vs, we must not serue him after our owne fashion, and after our owne rude manner: for his seruice is alwayes spirituall, and the thinges that he sheweth vs here beneath, must draw vp aloft to heauen. And hereby a man may see howe the wretched world hath bin beguiled. For ỹ greatest warrant that we haue of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſts preſence among vs, is left vs in his holy ſupper. There he doeth as it were put himſelf into our handes, of purpoſe to be incorporated into vs, as the breade and wine become one ſubſtance with vs when we haue eaten it and taken ſuſtenance of it. The ſonne of God ſheweth himſelfe familiarly vnto vs. Yet for all this, we muſt not imagine that he is come downe from heauen, & that wee handle him here betweene our pawes, or that he is incloſed within any certaine place. No: but his comming downe to vs, is to drawe vs vp to him. Therefore when wee receiue the communion, let it content vs that wee haue there a good and ſure pledge of the grace of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, and that we be ſure of his dwelling in vs, and of our beeing one with him. And yet for all that, we muſt not be ſo fleſhly and groſſe, as to ducke downe our heades to it, or to worſhip it: but rather wee muſt beholde him by faith in his heauenly glorie, & ſeeke him there. For wee ſee howe beaſtly the papiſtes became: They beare themſelues in hande that there was no God at all, if hee were not ſhutte vp in a boxe: they worſhipped Ieſus Chriſt after ſuch a groſſe manner, that they became vtterly brutiſhe and witleſſe. Foraſmuch then as we ſee that the wretched worlde hath beene ſo bewitched by Satan, let vs reſorte to the remedy. For the fault grewe of this, that men followed not the rule that is conteined in this text, There ſhal you ſeek your god. And why? For there is his name. Where as it is ſaide you ſhall ſeeke him there: it is not meant that ye ſhoulde ſhut him vp there: but that ye ſhould there glorifie his name. True it is that notwithſtanding the choſing of that place, yet the people were ſtill taught to ſerue him ſpiritually. For God renounced not his own nature, when he appointed a temple to be worſhipped in: but his doing thereof was to the end that the people ſhoulde exerciſe themſelues continually in his ſpirituall ſeruice, notwithſtanding that the Ceremonies were outwarde. That is the thing which we haue plainely to gather out of that place.

Nowe we haue to marke likewiſe, that God helde his people a long time in ſuſpence, before hee ſhewed them the place where hee woulde dwell for euer. True it is, that whereſoeuer the Arke was, there the ſacrifices were to bee made. Yet notwithſtanding the place was not appointed out, that is to wit Mount Sion. Although the Arke were for the moſt parte at Silo: yet did it wander vp and downe for a great time, and the people were in continuall waytingwhere it ſhould reſt: and that was a greate temptation. For ſee what might haue beene ſaide: GOD promiſed vs to chooſe out a place: but hee doeth it not. And why then ſhoulde wee not chooſe a place our ſelues? And why ſhoulde not hee like well of vs for ſo dooing? Howeſoeuer the worlde goe, it is not lawefull ſo to doe. The matter ſtoode not here vppon tenne, twentie, thirtie, a hundred, or three hundred yeares: but yee ſee the people were faine to tarie a much longer time, euen to the reigne of Dauid. There had beene a number of chaunges, a great ſorte of Iudges one after an other, and a great ſorte of gouernours: and yet of all that whyle GOD ſpake not one worde of that matter, whereby it might ſeeme he had vtterly forgotten ỹ promiſe ỹ he had made by Moſes. But yet muſt the people tarie his leaſure ſtill. And therefore let vs not bee as though wee ſtoode vppon thornes, when our Lorde liſteth to holde vs at a bay. Let vs beare in minde that hee tryeth our obedience. If hee vtter not thinges vnto vs at the firſt as wee woulde wiſhe, it is his meaning therein to trie vs the better, whether wee can finde in our hearts to be ſubiect to him or no, & whether we haue the lowlines and reuerence to walk on in the ſimplicitie of his word. That is the thing which we haue to mark concerning ỹ firſt point.

Furthermore, wee muſt vnderſtande, that when God hath choſen a place; it is not for vs to remooue to and fro. And yet wee muſt not bee drowned in ſo brutiſhe ſuperſtition, as to thinke that GOD is tyed to the place which hee hath choſen. Indeede it was an excellent prerogatiue for the citie of Ieruſalem to bee called the royall citie of GOD, ſo as he would vouchſafe to haue his Temple there. But we ſee what befell them for abuſing ſo honourable a tytle, and for refuſing to ſerue GOD with pure conſciences. After that God had patiently wayted for their conuerſion, hee withdrewe himſelfe from them. When he ſawe the Iewes become ſtubborne; hee tooke away his glorie from that place. Yea and the Prophete Ieremie had vpbrayded them with it aforehande. Goe your wayes to Silo (ſayth hee) and ſee how deſolate it is at this day. And yet notwithſtanding Silo had beene preferred before Ieruſalem. For Gods Arke had beene there a long time, and yet was that place raſed to the grounde. Beholde a thing euen at this preſent that might make your hayres to ſtand vp vpon your heads. Ier. 7. 12.

Doe yee boaſt of your Temple (quoth Ieremie?) Thinke you that God is ſo much bounde vnto you that hee can not withdrawe his glory from thence? The threatenings were vttered by Ieremie; but the people followed ſtill their wicked trade: and in the ende Gods glorie was faine to departe, as is ſaide by Ezechiell. For the Maieſtie of GOD was ſhewed him in the Temple, ſo as hee ſawe there both heauen and earth, and thinges that were aboue nature. And yet for all that, hee ſawe alſo that all vaniſhed away as ſmoke, and the Temple abode emptie and was vnhallowed, becauſe GOD had forſaken it and giuen it ouer. Whereby wee bee done to vnderſtande, that when our Lorde ſheweth vs fauour aboue others, we muſt liue the more warely and fearefully; and that if wee will continue in the poſſeſſion of the benefites that wee haue receyued, wee muſte not abuſe them. Had Rome beene choſen as was Ieruſalem, howe proude would they haue beene? For although they boaſt themſelues to haue the Apoſtolike ſea, and that the Pope is the head of the worlde, ſo as the vniuerſall ſupremа- Ier. 7. 4. Ezec. 10. 18.

premacie of all thinges is there: yet haue they not one syllable for them in the holy Scripture, but haue vsurped all that euer they chalenge to themselues, and they haue no colour that God liketh of them. But what though there were some text that God gaue preheminence to that Citie? Yet we see that as now it is a very dungeon of hell, insomuch that they haue not onely burst out into all maner of leaudnesse, and by all meanes wrought dishonour vnto God: but also are become as voyd of religion as Sodome, so as the deuils themselues haue more feare and reuerence to Godward, than al those filthy and stinking rable that rule the roste there. Seeing then that there is such contempt of God, and so outrageous wickednesse there, thinke wee that God is so bound vnto them, that he cannot depart from them? He had said of Ierusalem, This is my resting place: but of Rome he neuer sayde Psal.132.13 any such thing. And therefore wee see what a fondnesse it is to make such bragges as to say, that howsoeuer the Pope doe, yet is hee still the head of the Church. Nay contrarywise wee haue God for our head, and it is not lawfull for vs to change him, except we wil go to destruction with those whome wee see to haue beene so farre ouerseene after that fashion. And nowe sith wee see that this is fallen out in the Popedome, let vs looke well to it when God dwelleth among vs, that we driue him not away, but that we serue him with all pureness, that as hee reigneth ouer vs at the present, so he may continue with vs to the ende, and neuer forsake vs. That is the thing which wee haue to beare in mind when wee looke vppon the examples that Iosua.18.1. befell both to Silo and to Ierusalem. I say, to Silo where the Arke had beene a long time: and to 1.Sam.4.4. Ierusalem where the place was appointed for the Psal.132.13. building of the Temple, according to the promise that Moses had made.

And now hee addeth, That they should resort thither to offer their Sacrifices and burnt offeringes, there to doe all their deuotions, and to pay all their vowes. As if he should say, that they might not attempt any thing vppon their owne fonde heads, but hearken vnto God, and be gouerned by his only word. And herewithall wee must call to minde what hath beene touched afore; namely that Gods ordeining of Sacrifices, burnt offeringes, vowes, and such like things, was not for any neede that hee himselfe had of them, or for that they could stand him in any stead: but to keepe the people occupied with those ceremonies, and all bicause men are so fraile and earthly. God then did ordaine Sacrifices. And to what purpose? To instruct folke withall. For when the Iewes came thereunto, it was for them to consider thus with themselues: Wee be wretched sinners, wee bee not worthie to approche vnto the Maiestie of our God, for he is righteous and the verie righteousnesse it selfe, he is the fountaine of all cleanesse, and wee on our side bring nothing to him but all maner of filth and vncleannesse. Therefore it stoode the Iewes in hand to haue some meanes to wash themselues and to make themselues cleane before God. It stoode them in hand to bee discharged of their debtes, and of the curse wherein they felt themselues to bee wrapped. For the dooing whereof God gaue them the said Sacrifices. When they came to him, they protested on ỹ one side, Alas Lord, wee deserue death, but wee hope that thou wilt heare vs for the blouds sake which is to bee shed for the washing away of our spottes. Besides this, they had washings, wherby they were made to acknowledge thus: True it is Lord that wee be full of filth, but it is in thee to make vs cleane. And so yee see that the Sacrifices were ordeined to instruct the people, as I sayde afore, and wee likewise haue the same order at this day, which God would haue to continue still among the Christians. And therefore let vs referre all to that ende, namely that in asmuch as wee bee grosse and rude, it is for our behoose to be exercised with some Ceremonies. Yea, but yet must not those bee of our owne inuenting. For wee shall neuer haue doone, if we goe to worke after our owne fashion. Let vs content our selues with the playne thinges that are conteined in Gods woord. For that is all our wisedome.

Finally Moses addeth, There shall yee eate and drinke in the presence of your God, both you and your housholdes. And when yee come thither your God will blesse you. Heere Moses addeth that when the people submit themselues after the manner aforesaid, God will make them to prosper. That is the effect of his meaning heere. And herewithall he sheweth vs, that euen in the matters ỹ concerne this temporall life, wee must dedicate all things to the seruice and honour of our God. And that is a thing well worthy to bee marked. For wee see howe the worlde is desirous to discharge it selfe in such wise to Godward, that when they haue once serued God a little, they woulde haue truse for a good while after. As how? When the greatest hypocrites in the Popedome haue performed all their ceremonies in their Churches, as the besprinkling of themselues with their holy water, their crossing of themselues, and their much mumbling of their Mea culpaes: they beare themselues in hand that all the day after they may turne their backs vppon God as soone as they haue turned their tayles from the Church, and God seeth them no more. For why? He is well payde, and he must holde himselfe contented. After that manner doe men behaue themselues. And why so? It is bycause that although wee knowe Gods seruice to bee spirituall, yet notwithstanding wee consider not that all things which wee doe in this present life must bee referred to the seruice of GOD: like as when wee eate and drinke, it is trewe that the dooing thereof is to sustayne vs in this worlde till GOD take vs out of it. Againe, wee haue other needefull thinges to bee doone, as the applying of euery mans trade, in traueling and labouring for his liuing. True it is that all these thinges are worldly and earthly, and therefore they must not withdrawe vs from the heauenly things, whatsoeuer come of it. Therefore when we eate and drink, our taking of our bodily sustenance naunce muſt bee after ſuch a ſort, as therewith we muſt find ſome further taſte of the goodneſſe of our God, and ioy in him for that hee is our foſterfather, of whom we haue our dayly bread, as wee profeſſe by asking it at his hande. And when we haue taken our repaſt, wee muſt proceede to take ſuſtenance of ỹ good things that are prepared for vs in heauen, againſt wee departe out of this worlde, that wee may haue ſome beginning of them afore hande, and trauell towardes the attaynement of them dayly more and more. That is the thing which Moſes ment plainely in this place ſaying, When yee haue offered ſacryfice to your GOD, yee ſhall make merry there in his preſence. For the people were woont to make feaſtes at their ſacrifices. And what maner a ones? Holy feaſtes: not that God was honoured by their eating and drinking: but for that it was a teſtifying, that it behoued them to beare in mind that they were all their life long in Gods ſight: So as it behoued them not onely to think vppon him at the beginning of the yeere, or a three or foure times a yeere when they came to Ieruſalem to do ſacrifice, but alſo to thinke thus with themſelues continually: Although wee bee farre off from the Temple, ſo as wee cannot bee there to doe our ſacrifices: yet doth not our GOD fayle to regarde vs: for hee watcheth ouer vs, and wee bee in his protection. Therefore whenſoeuer wee eate or drinke, let vs aſſure our ſelues that hee ſeeth vs, and we cannot hide our ſelues out of his ſight, neither ought wee on the other ſide to forget him, as men commonly doe when they be minded to make merry. They friske it out in ſuch ſort, as if they thought they could get away from him. But on the contrary parte, Gods will was to doe the people of old time to vnderſtand, that whenſoeuer they did eate and drinke, they ſhould thinke that God ſawe them. Wee in theſe dayes haue no ſuch Ceremonie of feaſting in Ieruſalem and in the places neere about the Temple: but yet doth the truth thereof continue ſtill to vs: which is, that we be done to vnderſtand ỹ after we haue beene at the Church, and haue mette there together in the name of our God; when euery of vs returneth home to his houſe to dinner, we muſt not let god alone in the Church, and take our leaue of him; but we muſt beare in mind that God guideth vs, and when we be come home to take our repaſt euery man by himſelfe, we muſt behaue our ſelues as in the preſence of our God, & our mirth muſt be after ſuch a ſorte, as he may bee the witneſſe of our gladneſſe. For we know that if our mirth be vnholy, it is curſed of God. Therefore let vs learne to beare alwaies in mind, that our God is our guide euery where, and that he neuer forſaketh vs, to the intent that we on our part ſhold not be as beaſtes that runne aſtray. That is the thing which wee haue to marke vpon this text. The Ceremonie thereof was in force during the time of the Lawe. But as for vs nowadayes, let vs bee contented with the truth therof, & learne to vnderſtand ỹ ſith our Lord Ieſus Chriſt is come, we neede no more any materiall Temples to tell vs that God is with vs. For our Lord Ieſus hath not for naught taken to him ỹ name of Emanuel (as the Prophet Eſay calleth him) that is to ſay: God with vs. And foraſmuch as our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt telleth vs ỹ he wil be with vs continually to ỹ worldes end, let vs not feare but ỹ God will accept vs for his childrē, ſo ỹ in paſſing through this tranſitorie life, we haue our eye alwaies vpō him, and goe foreward ſtill towards his heauenly kingdom. For then wil he make all the reſt to be dedicated to his honor, ſo as euen our eating & drinking ſhalbe a peece of his ſeruice, & he will take it in good worth & like well of it, ſo that we do wholly worſhip him, looking to be fed at his hand, not onely with this corruptible foode, but alſo with ſuch nouriſhing foode to himſelfward, as wee may liue with him the ſame life that he himſelfe liueth. Eſa.7.14. Matt.28.20.

Nowe let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our innumerable faults, which we cōmit dayly againſt his Maieſtie without ceaſſing, praying him to make vs perceiue thē better than we haue done, and in the meane while to beare with vs, vntill he haue rid vs quite & cleane from all vices, and vnited vs throughly to his righteouſneſſe. And ſo let vs all ſay., Almightie God heauenly father, &c.

On Munday the vij. of October. 1555.

The Lxxxij. Sermon, which is the third vpon the twelfth Chapter.

8 Yee ſhall not doe according to all the things that you doe heere this day, that is to wit euery man as he thinketh good.

9 For as yet you be not come into the reſting place and the inheritaunce which the Lord your God giueth you.

10 You ſhall go ouer Iordan, and dwell in the land which the Lord your God will make you to inherite. And he wil giue you reſt from all your enemies round about you, and you ſhall dwell in ſafetie.

11 And when the Lorde your God ſhall haue choſen a place there, to put his name in: Ye ſhall bring thither all that I commaund you that is to wit, your burnt offeringes, your ſacrifices, your tenthes, your Heaue offringes, and all the choiſe of your vowes which ye ſhall haue vowed to the Lord.

12 And ye ſhall make merrie in the ſight of the Lord your God, both you your ſelues and your ſonnes and daughters, your Menſeruauntes and your Maide ſeruauntes, and the Leuite alſo that is within your gates: for he hath no part nor inheritance with you.

13 Beware that thou offer not thy burnt offeringes in all places which thou ſeeſt.

14 But in the place which the Lorde will chooſe in one of thy Tribes. There ſhalt thou offer thy burnt offerings, and thither ſhalt thou bring all the things that I commaund thee.

ALthough Moſes haue treated of this matter heretofore, yet is it not without cauſe that he goeth to it againe for ỹ better confirming thereof. For as I haue told you alreadie, Men are alwaies deſirous to paſſe their boundes, & cannot ſubmit themſelues to God, to attẽpt nothing beyond his word. Wherfore let vs marke well that God thinkes it not ynough to tell men once for all, that they ſhould behaue themſelues according to his word & ordinance: but he repeateth ỹ ſame leſſon oftentimes, to the intent that men ſhould take ỹ better heede of it, and marke it the better. And bicauſe ỹ people had not as yet the law written as touching the Ceremonies; it is ſaid expreſſely, You ſhall not doe as ye doe now. For it behoued the people to bridle themſelues thereafter as they were taught. Howbeit, for the better vnderſtanding of this text, it might bee demaunded firſt, whether the Iſraelites did for a time offer ſacrifice at their own pleaſure, without rule, or without being certaine what God required or allowed. The anſwere hereunto is, that they had alwayes ſome marke to ſhoote at, and that they had not the bridle ſo looſe in their neckes, but that they knew how they ought to ſacrifice. And in deede, wee heare how the Apoſtle ſaieth to the Hebrewes, that frõ Abel forth on, there was no ſacrifice accepted but by faith. And fayth importeth alwayes an obedience, ſo as if men deale at alauenture, there is no faith at all in them. But the Apoſtle ſaieth expreſſely that Abels ſacrifices pleaſed God bicauſe of his faith. Whereupon it followeth, that God hath euer ſhewed his will to ỹ faithfull, ſo as they haue not gone to woorke vnaduiſedly, but haue had ſuch certaintie as was requiſit for them. And wheras Moſes reporteth in Geneſis that Noy ſacrificed of cleane beaſtes vnto God; it doth vs to vnderſtand that Noy muſt needes haue had ſome knowledge of the difference of them aforehand: for it paſſed his vnderſtanding to finde out which beaſtes were cleane. Needes therefore muſt it bee that God had imprinted it in him: and that order hath continued for euer. And ſo is it certaine that the Iſraelites neuer had any ſuch lawleſſe libertie, but that they knew which was the trewe way of worſhipping GOD. Alſo it is expreſſed by Moſes that Abraham would inſtruct his poſteritie in the iudgements, Lawes and Ordinaunces of GOD. Whereby he doth vs to vnderſtand, ỹ although there was not as then any law writtẽ; yet notwithſtanding Abraham failed not to haue knowledge of the things ỹ God required & of whatſoeuer elſe was requiſite. For Moſes coulde haue ſayde at one woorde, Abraham will teach his children to liue well and holily and according to the wil of God: but he ſayeth that he wil teache them his lawes, ſtatutes & ordinances. To what purpoſe? I haue told you before, that it was to magnifie God the better, for his well prouiding of all things requiſite to the ſeruing of him, ſo as the faithful could not ſtand in any doubt, but were ſure of their dutie what they ought to doe.

Hebr. 11, 4.

Gen. 8, 20.

Gen. 18, 19.

According hereunto therefore let vs marke, that when the people of Iſrael came out of Egypt, their ſacrificing was not after the maner of the Heathen, according to the inuention of man: but after a heauenly order, that is to ſay, according to the order which God had appointed. Yet notwithſtanding, it is true that there was not as yet any ſuch particular declaration made of the Sanctuarie, and of all the appurtenances and things belonging thereunto, as wee ſee is ſet downe in Exodus and Leuiticus. Theſe things (ſay I) were not ſo particularly ſet forth: it was not yet ſayd vnto them, You ſhal haue but one altar, which ſhalbe of ſuch a meaſure, of ſuch a heigth, and of ſuch a breadth: you ſhall haue a Tabernacle of ſuch manner of ſtuffe, of thus many peeces, thus long, and thus broade: You ſhall haue fire burning continually in the Sanctuarie: Your ſacrifices ſhall neuer bee offered without Salte: there ſhall alwayes bee lyght and perfume in the Temple: The cakes that ſhall bee offered in the Temple ſhall bee of ſuch a faſhion: There ſhall be bread continually before the Lord, and it ſhall be renewed day by day: Againe there ſhall bee a hygh Prieſt, which ſhall enter once a yeere into the narrowe Sanctuarie, and there ſhalbe an Aultar of burnt ſacrifices for him to offer vpon from day to day. Theſe things were not yet thus ſet out: & that is the thing which Moſes meaneth in this text whẽ he ſaith, Ye ſhall not doe after the ſame manner

as we doe this day. For there was greater libertie before such time as God had set foorth his commandements to brydle the people withal, and to hold them in such awe as they should not attẽpt any thing vpon their owne head, nor step aside to the right hande or to the left; but followe the thinges roundly which were conteyned in his Lawe.

Andheereof wee haue to gather, that after as God vttereth his will vnto vs, so are wee the more bound to follow the same. For if we knew not what to doe, and that God had let vs alone in suspence: we might haue some excuse for our doeing of thinges as seemed good to our selues. For why? Our Lord hath not bin so gratious to vs as to say vnto vs expresly, Thus shal ye doe: And therfore we may do according to our owne skill, seeing we haue no expresse word to ỹ contrarie. After that maner might a man reply. But now that God hath witnessed his will vnto vs, we must stoope to it, and it is not lawefull for vs to adde any thing thereto, For that were as much to say, as we would fall to scanning whether God or wee were the wiser. And what a presumption were it, if wee would needes haue better thinges than those which he inioyneth vs? Yet notwithstanding, if men cannot find in their heartes to yeelde to the thinges that GOD commaundeth, they enter into this diuelish presumptuousnesse of purposing to be wiser than God hath giuen them leaue to be. Wherfore let vs learne, that when we haue once assurance what God alloweth, we must rest wholly vpon it. And herewithall we must marke, that God did not without cause giue the people of olde time so many rules to shewe them how to doe sacrifice. When we read the thinges that are conteined in Leuiticus, to our seeming there bee many needelesse thinges. For God might well haue sayd in feawe woordes, I will haue a Temple, and there will I haue you to sacrifice vnto me. But there are such a sort of commaundements as may make a man amazed and out of his wits. And what is ỹ cause thereof? True it is that all thinges were made Exod.25.40. and doone according to the patterne that Moses had seene in the Mount, as God himselfe declareth. And thereby we be doone to vnderstand that the figures, (although that at this day we know not perfectly in all pointes to what vse they serued) had a spirituall truth, which may Heb.9.8.10. bee referred to the thinges which we haue nowadaies by the comming of our Lord Iesus Christ:
Col.2.17. for hee is the very body and substaunce of all the shadowes that were vnder the Lawe. When wee reade that the highpriest might not enter into the Sanctuarie, but with such attyre as is Leuit.16.4. there described; wee would thinke it straunge to see a man so disguised, with so many thinges about him. And why was that? We must marke that it was to doe the people to vnderstand, that the partie which was to bee the mediator betweene God and men, was not of the common state and sorte of men, but that it behooued him to haue a speciall kind of holinesse to preace vnto GOD with all. And that was the cause why hee caryed this tytle in his frontlet vppon his head; Hallowed vnto God, or the holinesse of God, Exod.28.36
Againe, hee had other attyres about him, so as hee coulde not goe or stirre, but there went a noyse or sound from him. For hee ware belles Exod.28.33 to shewe that all men ought to giue eare, when it is told them that the sonne of God was offered for vs in sacrifice, so as the same may ring into our heartes, to the intent wee may seeke the meanes to be reconciled to GOD. There were other things whereof a man may perceiue the reason. As the twelue precious stones Exod.28.21 which the highpreest ware on his brest aloft vpon the Ephod: and the names of the twelue tribes grauen in other stones vpon his shoulders. Exo.28.9.12 Whereby was ment that Iesus Christ did nothing for himselfe but all for vs and in our behalfe: and that his going vnto God after that fashion, was to bring vs into his presence, according to this saying of his, I sanctifie my selfe to Ioh.17.19.

make you all partakers of the same holynesse. Nowe then wee see the reason of many thinges that were commaunded in the law, and we know it was not without cause that the Apostle sayde Hebr.8.5.
that all things were made according to the patterne that Moses had seene vpon the Mount: after the which maner Saint Stecuen alleageth the same text in the seuenth of the Actes. Ne- Act.7.44.
uertheless wee must note, that Gods meaning was to hold his people in awe, that they might be the surer what to doe, and not bee occasioned to transgresse the true seruice of God, by mingling of any inuentions with it. I say it was Gods intent to inure his people to obedience. For if we shew our selues to serue God otherwise, all that euer we doe will bee nothing woorth: nay Rom.14.23.
it will be sinne. If I weene I doe well, and in the meane while stand in doubt and perplexitie; al must needes goe to wrecke. For if wee bee not inlightned by certeintie of faith; God alloweth not any of our doinges. And therefore I say his intent was to keepe the people of old time in obedience. And that was the cause why hee willed that there should bee light continually in the Exod.27.20.
Temple. It was not to giue light vnto God, or to doe him any seruice, but to do the rude people to vnderstand, that we must not doe thinges disorderly, and be as blind folkes when wee approch vnto God: but that we must haue light to guide vs by, which light is not to be found in our owne braines, but must come from aboue. And for that cause the holy candlesticke had Lampes vpon it, wherein was oyle continually. Whereby was ment, ỹ if men be not guided & gouerned by ỹ holy Ghost, they do nothing but wander vp & downe, & in ỹ end they shall fall into destruction. Again, God willed that no strange fire should be Leuit.10.1.
brought vnto his Altar. Wherby is ment ỹ men must not bring aught of their own to the seruing of God: but we must haue the holy fire, ỹ is to say we must pray to God in ỹ Church, & not go beyond his word, or beyond ỹ doctrine ỹ he giueth vs. Moreouer it is said ỹ no sacrifice shold be offe- Leuit.2.13.
red wout salt. And why so? For when wee offer things to God wout warrant ỹ he alloweth them & requireth thẽ, they haue no sauor at al before him.

him. Thus you ſee in effect how it was Gods intent to cõfort his ſeruants, & to incourage thẽ, ẏ they might ſerue him as became them. And again, it was his wil to cut off al occaſiõ of adding any thing which they had learned of ẏ heathen. We know ẏ although mẽ haue no incoũters before their eies, yet they ceaſſe not to forge many fond things, weening to pleaſe god by ẏ meanes. But when we ſee examples on either ſide of vs, it is a further prouocation to vs. Beſides ẏ tickliſhnes which we haue already of nature, it pricketh vs foreward to ſay, why ſhould not ſuch a thing be good? For ẏ Iewes had ſeen ẏ faſhiõs of Egypt & of other heathẽ folke: & therfore they might haue bin prouoked to faſhion thẽſelues like vnto them: & that had bin a corruption to ouerthrow ẏ whole ſeruice of god. To preuent this miſchief, God gaue them a remedy, which held them occupied in ſuch ſort, as they had ynough to do in ẏ things ẏ were inioyned them, & had no leaſure to withdraw themſelues or to adde any deuiſe of their own. And ſo we ſee it was not for naught ẏ God gaue his people ſo many lawes, rules, & ceremonies at their going into ẏ land of Canaan. For firſt of al, it was meete ẏ the figures and ſhadowes ſhold ſupply ẏ roome of ẏ truth ẏ was yet vnreuealed, vntil Ieſus Chriſt was ſhewed opẽly to ẏ world. Secondly it was Gods will to try ẏ obedientnes of his people by ẏ means. And thirdly it tooke away al occaſion of intermedling thẽſelues ẅ ẏ ſuperſtitiõs of ẏ heathẽ & vnbeleuers.

And for ẏ cauſe doth Moſes ſay, You ſhal goo ouer Iordan, & God wil giue you reſt in the land that he hath promiſed you, & there ſhall you dwell in ſafetie, though you haue enemies round about you. And then wil he chooſe him a place in one of your tribes, and thither ſhal you bring your ſacrifices, burnt offerings, & oblations. And the very true ſacrifice (ſaith he) is to do nothing vpon your own heads, but to obey your God throughly in all poyntes. Whẽ he ſaith ẏ they ſhall come into ẏ land, it is to ſhew ẏ Gods deferring to giue his law til that time, was to declare more particularly what things he liked of. For it was his will to performe his promiſe made vnto Abrahã, before he would eſtabliſh his owne ſeruice. And thereby he gaue thẽ to vnderſtand, ẏ the land of Canaã ought to haue led thẽ to a further thing. For had there bin no further matter in it than ẏ land it ſelfe; it had bin ynough for thẽ to haue bin ſetled in it, and there to haue had wherẽ to finde them abundantly. But God ſetteth vp his ſeruice, & ſheweth thẽ after what ſort they ſhold honor him thẽceforth: & al is referred to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. We ſee then ẏ the land of Canaan ſhould haue guided ẏ Iewes to ẏ hope of ẏ heauenly life; ſo as they ſhould not haue ſet their mindes vpon ẏ inioying & poſſeſſing of the profits ẏ came therof, but haue proceeded on further & conſidered ẏ Gods meaning was to raigne among thẽ after a ſpirituall maner. That was ẏ cauſe why he liſted not to giue thẽ ẏ ceremonies at ẏ firſt, after the maner ẏ they be ſet down in Leuiticus: but reſerued the ſetting of them foorth, vntill the people were come into their inheritance.

And he ſaith expreſly that the Iewes ſhould dwel in quiet & ſafetie, notwithſtanding that they were beſet round about with enemies. Hereby we bee done to vnderſtand, ẏ it was not ynough for thẽ to haue conquered the country, but ẏ it behoued God to maintaine them ſtil vnder his protectiõ. And as the Iſraelites were warned of it then: ſo doth the ſame belong to vs at this day. For God telleth vs ẏ if he hath once called vs, it is al one as if he had made vs to paſſe the red ſea. True it is ẏ he could cal vs without making of vs to chaũge our place. But let vs conſider from whence God taketh vs, & whither he draweth vs. He taketh vs out of ẏ bottom of hell. For ſo long as we be in our owne nature, we haue none acceſſe to ẏ kingdome of heauen, nor any acquaintance with him, but are vtterly baniſhed from ẏ hope of life. And whẽ he hath drawen vs out of ſuch confuſion, he pulleth vs vp to himſelf, to the end we might cleaue vnto him: & although we dwel as yet on the earth; yet notwithſtanding wee ceaſſe not to be heires of ẏ heauenly inheritance. This is a farre greater thing thã to paſſe the red ſea. For we haue an enemy ẏ is greater and much ſtronger than was Pharao & al his people. For what can we do whẽ we haue all ẏ diuels againſt vs, labouring to hinder our ſaluation, & being ſo ſuttle & hauing all ẏ meanes ẏ can be to do it withall? They be called the princes of ẏ aire, & they reigne ouer our heades, ſo as they might eaſily ouerthrowe vs if God deliuered vs not from them. Therfore it is a great power which God vttereth when it pleaſeth him to gather vs vnto himſelfe. And yet is ẏ to no purpoſe, except we be preſerued ſtill vnder his hand & tuition. For as long as we bee in this world, we ſhalbe inuironed continually round about ẅ enemies. The diuel ceaſſeth not to trouble vs; he hath wyles & ſlightes ynow to doe it withall: & we on our ſide are vnarmed & vnprouided; & therefore it ſtandeth vs greatly vpõ, to haue God to bee our defender. Nay, the diuell needes not to ſeeke farre: for we carie ſuch a nũber of vices with vs of our owne, as we might be ouercome a hundred times without any great adoe or noiſe. Let vs mark wel then, ẏ like as God promiſed to maintaine the Iewes in the inheritance ẏ he had giuen them: ſo it ſtandeth vs in hand at this day to be maintained by his hand in the faith, ẏ we may perſeuer in his ſeruice: or elſe our ſaluation wil go to wreck euery minute of an hour, ſo as there wil be no ſtay nor continuance.

Rom. 6. 12, 13. & 7. 23.

Now afterward Moſes addeth: God will haue you thenceforth to ſerue him in the place which he ſhal haue choſen to put his name in. Which is as much to ſay, as that we muſt not make this our reſt; to inuẽt this or that; but we muſt hold our ſelues in quiet, and abide vnder the gouernment of our God. When we be at reſt, then is our mind much troubled ẅ vnquietnes, which is cleane contrary to Gods meaning. For if he giue vs reſpit, ſo as we be not troubled with feare & terror, to what end is it? Is it not to the end that we ſhould bee ſo mild as to ſay, go to my God, if I were vexed or diſquieted in minde, I had ſome cauſe to bee caryed here and there and to doe ſome thing or other. I ſhould bee ſeeking of ſundry remedies. But now that thou vouchſafeſt to maintaine me in quiet reſt, it is good reaſon that I ſhould bee ſtill, and ſuffer my ſelfe to bee ruled by thy word, and to bee bowed which way thou liſteſt, without giuing heade to my luſtes, for that were a wicked vnthankefulneſſe. That is the thing which Moſes ment by that text. And the ſame matter concerneth vs alſo. For whenſoeuer God vouchſafeth to giue vs reſt from our enemies, wee ought to bee ſo much the quietter in our ſelues. As for example. If we were among the Papiſtes, wee might bee in ſuch feare, as we ſhould bee driuen to ſeeke new ſhiftes euery day, as the poore ſoules are which bee among them, who may well ſay, Alas, I haue no liberty to ſerue God. How may I behaue my ſelfe in ſuch ſorte as I may not defile my ſelfe with the ſuperſtitions of theſe Idolaters? Thus ye ſee how theſe poore catifes are faine to ſeeke al the waies to the wood to find ſome ſhift to ſwim between two ſtreames. And no maruell though they be in that taking. In deede it is no ſufficient excuſe; for howſoeuer the world goe with vs, we muſt bee fully reſolued in our ſelues to ſerue God neuertheleſſe. But yet are we the leſſe to be borne withal, when we abuſe the time of quietneſſe that God giueth vs. If we be at libertie, then muſt nothing withhold vs from hauing our religion pure and clean. For he offereth himſelfe to vs dayly in his word. And therefore let vs refraine our ſelues from wandring after our owne imaginations, and let vs bridle our ſelues in that behalfe. Seeing that God hath giuen vs reſt: let vs followe all that he ſheweth, without attempting any thing at all to the contrary. But we ſee the contrary come to paſſe. For commonly it falleth out that when men be in reſt, ſo as no man trubbles them nor diſquietes them; then fall they to bee luſtie or ſporting like a horſe that is broken looſe and hath neither bridle nor ſaddle. And the experience hereof is too cõmon, in ſo much ỹ thoſe to whom God hath graunted ſuch fauour as to haue his truth in moſt ſafetie, doe thinke it better to behaue themſelues after another ſorte, and to chaunge their ſtate: and what a kinde of dealing is that? It is a diueliſhe rage that we be caried away withall, when wee cannot bee quiet in our ſelues at ſuch time as god hath giuen vs outward reſt, and holdeth our enimies locked vp, ſo as although they be round about vs, yet he ſuffereth them not to make any chaunge to diſquiet vs with all, and yet we our ſelues cannot abyde to ſit in quiet. Wherefore let vs marke wel, ỹ ſeeing God is ſo gracious to vs as to grant vs libertie to ſerue him purely: it is our dewtie to holde our ſelues quietly vnder his obedience, without attempting any thing at all. But the Papiſtes haue well ſhewed in this caſe, that they cannot find in their harts in any wiſe to ſubmit themſelues vnto God, and that their intent is not to yeeld him any obedience. For firſt of all they looked not what God ment by the olde figures of the Lawe, and yet they followed the things that Moſes cõmaunded concerning lightes, perfumes, and apparell. And why was that? Bicauſe they conſidered not that all thoſe things were referred to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. They were much more brutiſh than the very Iewes that had no faith at all. For the Iewes at leaſtwiſe held themſelues to the rule that was giuen them. In deede they knewe not the right vſe of their Ceremonies: but yet had they an expreſſe commaundement from God, & durſt not attempt any thing againſt the ſame. But as for the Papiſtes, notwithſtanding that Ieſus Chriſt bee manifeſted, and haue accompliſhed all the thinges that were betokened in olde time: yet haue they vtterly ouerthrowen that good and ſubſtantial foundation, and thruſt his death and paſſion vnder foote. They fall to taking vp of lightes. And what needes that? The holy ghoſt hath ſhewed himſelfe viſibly in the perſon of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, and afterward vpon the Apoſtles, to doe vs to vnderſtand that we muſt no more looke for any outward figures, bicauſe we haue the truth and ſubſtance of them. But what? The Papiſts haue aboliſhed the infinite grace of God, and vtterly made a mocke of it. They will needes offer ſacrifice, and haue attyred their prieſtes thereafter, diſguiſing them as though it were to the playing of an enterlude. And all this geere is but gugawes, for they bee not commaunded of God, and beſides that, they be done as it were in deſpite of him. All that was doone in the law was of Gods ſetting vp: & theſe men fall to ſetting vppe of newe faſhions ſuch as God neuer ſpake of. Againe, they place a mortall man in ỹ roome of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt; as who ſhold ſay that the office of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt were not welynough knowne and apparant, vnleſſe it were figured out with newe and ſtraunge toyes. It is all one as if a body ſhould ſhew forth the picture of a man when the partie himſelfe is preſent, and ſhoulde ſaye, Behoulde this picture, and yet the man is there himſelfe who can much better ſhew himſelfe what he is than the picture can doe. Euen ſo doe the Papiſts in ſetting forth of ỹ picture of Ieſus Chriſt. He is named the liuely image of God. Although the father be incomprehenſible in his owne maieſty: yet hath he ſo vttered himſelfe in the perſon of his ſonne, as wee may behold him there face to face, as ſayth Saynt Paule in the ſecond to the Corinthians. But the Papiſtes drawe a Curteine before it, and tell vs that wee muſt bee contented with pictures. It is therefore a turning of all thinges vpſide downe, and a bringing in of diueliſh confuſion. Neuertheleſſe, wee ſee that in the Popedom there is no harkning what God ſaies; but all is doone at the appointment of man. Looke whatſoeuer they do, they terme it by the name of Gods ſeruice. Yea, but how is God dewly ſerued? God ſayth, ye ſhall not doe whatſoeuer ſeemeth good to your ſelues: ſeeing that I haue ſet you downe a certaine order, bee contented to bee gouerned by my woord. But what ſay the Papiſtes? Mee thinkes this is good: This we take to be excellent: euery man caſtes to his collup, and in all Gods woord a man ſhall not finde one ſyllable of al the things which they terme Gods ſeruice, and which they will needes haue to paſſe in their account. For let a man ſearch all ỹ things through which are compriſed vnder ỹ name in ỹ Popedom, & he ſhall find thẽ

euery chone to bee forged and builded by men; and that God not onely diſclaymeth them, but alſo condemneth them, bicauſe he hath ſhewed vs his certeine and infallible truth, which is the thing that we muſt frame our ſelues vnto. Wee ſee then howe all this doctrine hath beene wickedly throwen downe in the Popedome: and that is bicauſe they haue peruerted the true vſe of the figures of the Lawe, and taken inordinate liberty to doe whatſoeuer came in their heades, without hauing any regarde tō the witneſſinges that God giueth vs, whereby they might haue ſaid, Theſe be the thinges which we ought to do. Now ſo much the more diligēt ought we to be in marking this place: For were wee ſtill in doubt nowadayes what to doe, ſo as wee knewe not what thinges God alloweth: then might wee haue ſome fancie to make vs to ſway to and fro. But ſeeing that God hath tould vs what hee requireth at our handes: that ought to be ynough for vs. And now hath hee aboliſhed, the Ceremonies of the law that were of his owne appointing? Yea. And wherfore? To ſhew vs therby ỹ he wil not haue vs any more intangled in the outward figures. The reaſon is added; bicauſe we haue them throughly fulfilled in Ieſus Chriſt. Now then, if we wil not deface the glory of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, and ouerthrowe the benefits that he bringeth vs; we muſt put away the old figures. Marke that for one point.

Col.2.14.

Col.2.17.

Againe, wee ſee that God is contented with fewe ceremonies. For it is not his will that wee ſhold haue any more deckings, lights, perfumes, Cakes, ſacrificings of beaſtes, nor other ſuch thinges: but his wil is that in our baptiſme we ſhould haue ſuch an aſſurance of our waſhing & clenſing by the grace that is purchaſed for vs in our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, as ſhould continue with vs for euer. Haue we that? We muſt hold our ſelues contented with it. For God could haue added more, if he had liſted: but he liſted not ſo to do. And ſo ye ſee heere is a bridle which muſt reine vs backe to gather vs home to GOD, or elſe he ſhall neuer be able to weeld vs. Now what haue the Papiſtes done? Tuſh, this ſimplicitie of baptiſme pleaſed not them, they would needs adde this & that to it at their own pleaſure. What ſay they? Should there be but ſheere water? What a thing were that? yea, but god hath ſo ordeined it, Ieſus Chriſt who is the infinite wiſedome of God his father hath ſo appointed it. It is ſaid that laſt of all God hath ſpoken to vs by his mouth, and that we muſt ſtand to whatſoeuer he ſaith. Now he hath ordeined it in water alone. Yea, but wee muſt haue a taper (ſay the Papiſts) to repreſent the holy Ghoſt: we muſt haue ſalt, to repreſent ỹ heauenly wiſedome, and the grace of God: wee muſt haue diuers other things, and we muſt haue ſpittle to make infantes and dum folks to ſpeake, and we muſt haue a number of other gugawes to mocke God wall, which are ſo groſſe, and fond, as they can ſerue for nothing but to make Chriſtianity a laughingſtock to the Iewes and Turks: and the diuell plaies his part with them, when ỹ world is ſotted after ſuch a ſort. We ſee thē that the Papiſts haue broken and tranſgreſſed Gods order, by adding after ỹ maner to ỹ things which he had ſet downe certaine, and in ſuch meaſure as he would not haue men to go beyond them.

Eph.5.26.

Hebr.1.2. Matt.28.19

But there hath bin yet a farre more outrageous diſorder in ỹ Lords Supper. For therein our Lord Ieſus Chriſt ment to ſhew vs, ỹ his wil is ỹ we ſhold ſettle our whole truſt in him, bicauſe we be fed ẅ his ſubſtance, & therfore wee muſt not ſeeke life any where elſe thā in him: we muſt not eate there & drink ſomewhere elſe; for we haue there ful ſuffiſance for ỹ ſuſtenance of our ſoules, we haue ỹ ful perfection of all goodneſſe in him. That is ỹ thing which he ſheweth vs by his holy ſupper, & his wil is ỹ we ſhould receiue ỹ bread & wine in witnes therof, and ỹ it ſhould be diſtributed among vs, to the end we ſhould be knit together in him, to become members of his body. But on ỹ contrary part, they haue ſet vp ỹ abhominable Maſſe, & wil needs ſacrifice Ieſus chriſt. And whereof comes that? Euen of ỹ they vnderſtād not ỹ they vſurpe ỹ office which is allotted to him in the holy ſcripture, according wherunto he hath offered vp himſelfe once for al, & behold, mē wil needs take vpon them to coūterfet him, for by their owne ſaying, it is all one ſacrifice. Yet for al ỹ, they be but Apes to Ieſus Chriſt. For it becommeth them not to take vpon them the office ỹ is not allotted vnto thē. Againe they wil needs make a minglemangle of al things: for they not only diſguiſe & falſifie all thinges that were ordained by our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, but by all likelihood are fully bent to fight furiouſly againſt his inſtitution. Ieſus Chriſt ordeined ỹ the bread & wine ſhould be diuided among ỹ faithful. But it is ynough ẅ them ỹ one doe take it all, & eate it vp alone. Yea & when the people come of purpoſe to cōmunicate with them, (which is but once a yeere) they be faine to content themſelues ẅ the one part of it, & the other part is reſerued. Beſides this, there is no opening of Gods word, their ſaying is ỹ they go to receiue their God, & they make a charme & ſorcerie of their conſecrating of the bread & wine. Thus ye ſee how proudly they be turned away frō Chriſtes ordinaunce, ſo as they could not deuiſe howe to fight againſt him ẅ more violence. Now ſith we ſee theſe things, we ought to acknowledge Gods grace in drawing vs out of ſuch confuſion. And therewall let vs marke, ỹ Gods ſtanding ſo much vpon ỹ point ỹ his people ſhold not do what they liked thēſelues, is not wout cauſe. For why? we ſee what mē are whē they once go aſtray. Whē they once take ỹ libertie, they diſguiſe the trueth, and there is no end of their leaſings. Therfore let vs beware ỹ we hold our ſelues ſhort, ſpecially whē God hath giuen vs reſt from our enemies, & wee dwel in a place where we may worſhip him purely, let vs keepe ỹ ſimplicitie ỹ he commaundeth, & alloweth by his word, wout any ſwaruing aſide from ỹ ſame how little ſoeuer it be. For we had need to keepe our ſelues farre off frō al corruptions, if we be determined to obey our God. And why ſo? For mans heart is a dreadfull gulfe. And again, euery mā drawes his neighbor into error after him. Therefore it is like an endleſſe maze wherof there is no way out again, vnleſſe ỹ thing be obſerued that is ſpoken here: namely that men do not what euery man thinks good in his owne eyes.

And let vs note alſo, ỹ by this ſaying, al our intentes (as men terme them) are condemned, though they ſeeme neuer ſo good to our ſelues. For we be no competent Iudges; God muſt tell vs what is good: & if we on our ſide find any apparant reaſõ, it is altogether but ſmoke. So then for as much as God in this place ſetteth his own word, and ỹ teſtimony of his will, directly againſt all our deuotions, and al that euer ſeemeth good to vs: let vs aſſure our ſelues that it is not lawfull for vs to followe whatſoeuer we think good. For al that is nothing worth: but al ỹ ſeruice that wee do vnto god, muſt be grounded vpon his word & his infallible truth. Without ỹ, we doe but build in the aire, that is to ſay, all that euer we do is but dreaming.

Now Moſes addeth ỹ ſame things again which he had ſpoké concerning Sacrifices, Burntofferings, freewillofferings, vowes & tenthes; namely, that all thoſe things muſt be done & paide in the place that God had choſen out of one of their tribes. This thing was not ſo ſoone performed as I haue ſhewed heretofore. And ỹ reaſon is, for ỹ god intẽded to proue his peoples patience, & alſo for ỹ ỹ people were not worthy ỹ God ſhold ſtabliſh the order at the firſt, in ſuch ſort as he had promiſed it. And that is a thing well worthy to be marked. For we ſee ỹ gods gracious gifts are oftentimes long in coming. And yet God ſaith, ye ſhal no ſooner haue ſpoken, but I will be ready to ſuccour you, yea & my hand ſhalbe ſtretched out to helpe you before your words be out of your mouths. So doth God promiſe: & yet notwithſtanding he ſuffereth vs to linger. And why? Bicauſe we haue hindered the courſe of his grace by our vnbeleefe; and we be ſo rechles, that hee maketh no haſte to come vnto vs, bicauſe we for our part come not to him but w̃ great hardneſſe, & as it were limping. Yet notwſtanding he doth alwaies ſurmount all our vices w̃ his infinite goodneſſe, as it came to paſſe in ỹ which Moſes ſpeaketh here. God had promiſed to chooſe a place for his Sanctuary to reſt in for euer. Now, ỹ thing was to haue bin done as ſoone as ỹ Iſraelites were entred into the land of Canaan; & yet it was delayed a long time: inſomuch as there paſſed a hũdred yeeres or twaine, yea three or four hũdred before ỹ promiſe tooke effect. And that was bicauſe the people were not worthy to be ſo ſatisfied, as God had declared, & therefore were faine to abide the puniſhment of their ſin. For they draue not out their enemies as he had commaunded them, but became negligent: and beſides ỹ, they themſelues turned away & fell into all maner of vices & corruptions. That therfore was the cauſe why God withdrew his hand, and performed not his promiſe till the time of Dauid. Neuertheles, although ỹ people were malicious, although they were vnthankfull towards God, although they prouoked his wrath ſo many waies to ỹ vttermoſt: yet could they not vtterly diſappoint ỹ promiſe altogether. The reaſon was, for ỹ it depended not vpon ỹ deſerts of mẽ. Therfore although men be vnworthy of it; yet doth God in ỹ end performe whatſoeuer he ſaith. Yet notwithſtanding there is a delay made for a time, to the intent that folke ſhould learne to know their own naughtines, and miſlike of it, and be ſory for it. Wherfore let vs learne hereby, that if God at any time do ſhew himſelfe vnwilling to put vs in poſſeſſion of his benefites out of hand: it is bicauſe that we haue procured the delay of them by our own naughtines. But yet ſhal we not be vtterly bereft of them, ſo we acknowledge our ſinnes and be ſory for them: but in the end he will reach out his hand again, to put vs in poſſeſſion of the benefites wherof we had deſerued to be vtterly diſpoſſeſſed. Truly this wil not boot the hypocrites at al: but as for gods church, although it liue in ſuſpence for a time; Yet will our Lord ſhew in the end, that his goodneſſe ſurmounteth all the ſinnes of men, and that he will not faile to be faithfull, though all of vs be lyers. 2. Tim. 2. 13. Sothly (as I ſaid afore) we muſt not vnder this colour flatter our ſelues. For if we be ſtubborne in euil, our Lord wil welynough find the meanes to diſcharge himſelfe of the promiſe wherof we ſhal haue beene diſappointed. But let vs learne to acknowledge our ſinnes; & when we haue acknowledged them, let vs learne alſo to reſt vpon the goodnes of our god, not doubting but that it is ſo great and infinite, that notwſtanding all the lets which we on our ſide ſhal caſt in the way of it, yet it will ſo ger the vpper hande, that in the ende we ſhall find the welfare from the which we had ſhut our ſelues out of doores. That is the thing which we haue to remẽber vpon this text of Moſes where he ſaith that god wold appoint a place, euen ſuch a one as he had choſen out from amõg all the tribes of Iſrael, where he would haue his name to be called vpon. The reſidue which cãnot bee declared as now, ſhalbe purſued heereafter.

2. Sam 7. 10

Now let vs fall downe in the preſence of our good god with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs perceaue them better than we haue done heretofore, ſo as wee may miſlike them more & more, & therby be brought back vnto him: and that ſith wee for our partes bring nothing to him but vtter corruption; it may pleaſe him to graunt vs the grace ſo to reforme vs by his word, as ỹ ſacrifices which we ſhall offer vnto him may be made holy by faith, and he accept them for our Lord Ieſus Chriſts ſake. And for as much as we knowe that he requireth ſpirituall ſacrifices: let vs call vpon him w̃ ſuch bouldnes, as we may be hard at his hand, & yeeld him praiſe for all his benefites beſtowed vpon vs; and moreouer indeuer to diſcharge our ſelues of our dueties euery man towards his neighbor, bicauſe thoſe be the ſacrifices which he receiueth & alloweth. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace not onely to vs, but alſo to all people and nations of the earth; &c.

On

On Tewſday the viij. of October. 1555.

The lxxxiij. Sermon, which is the fourth vpon the twelfth Chapter.

12.13.14. And ye ſhall be merry, &c.

15 Neuertheleſſe, looke whatſoeuer thou haſt a mind vnto, that maiſt thou kill and eate within any of thy gates, according to the bleſſing of the Lord thy God, which hee hath giuen thee; as of the fallowe deere or of the Red deere: both hee that is cleane and he that is vncleane may eate therof.

16 Onely of the bloud ſhal you not eate, but you ſhal powre it vpon the ground as water.

17 Thou maiſt not eate the tithes of thy Corne, of thy wine, or of thine oyle, within any of thy gates, nor yet the firſt ingendred of thy kine, or of thy ſheepe, nor any of the vowes which thou ſhalt haue vowed, nor the free will offringes or the liftinges vp of thy handes.

18 But thou ſhalt eate thoſe thinges in the preſence of the Lorde thy God, in the place which the Lorde thy God wil chooſe to himſelfe. There ſhalt thou eate them, both thy ſelfe, thy ſonne, thy daughter, thy manſeruant, thy woman ſeruant, and the Leuite that is within thy gates. And thou ſhalt bee merrie before the Lord thy God in all things whereunto thou putteſt thy hande.

MOſes going forewarde ſtill with his matter, commaundeth the Iewes here to bee merrie in the preſence of the Lorde. Nowe although this leſſon haue bin laide foorth alreadie, yet is it requiſite for vs to bee put in minde of it againe. For the treating of it heere newe againe, is not for nought, neither hath the holy Ghoſt let down any thing more than needeth, as I haue ſayde heretofore. Men cannot keepe meaſure in their mirth without ſome diſorder alwayes. And the cauſe therof is ỹ they haue not an eye vnto God in their making merrie. Nay rather (which worſe is) they thinke it is no mirth at all vnleſſe they turne their backs vpon him. Whereas we ſhould ſeeke all our welfare in GOD to haue our reſt there: wee beare our ſelues in hand that wee be beſt at eaſe when we bee furtheſt from him. For this cauſe God ordeined the ſayde Ceremonie of ſolemne feaſting when the folke offered ſacrifice vnto him, as it were of purpoſe to put them in remembrance, that God was there preſent, and ſhewed himſelfe vnto them. Not that the doing thereof once a yeere was a ſufficient diſcharge to them; but that euery man ought to make a leſſon & a generall rule of it, that whenſoeuer they did eate or drinke, they ſhoulde re-1.Cor.10.31 ferre it wholly vnto God, accordingly as Saint Paule warneth vs to doe. And thereby wee ſee that ỹ truth thereof abideth vnto vs, though the Ceremonie thereof bee done away. Wherefore let vs learne, that in playing and ſporting after the faſhion of the children of this worlde, wee ſhake off God and bereaue him of his honour. And ſurely it is an vnexcuſable vnthankfulneſſe, when we acknowledge not the author of all welfare. If we referre all our mirth vnto God, it will be alwayes moderate. Beſides that it ſhall euer haue a good end, God wil ſo hold vs in aw by his Maieſtie, as we ſhall not paſſe our boundes as we ſee the wretched and blind vnbeleeuers do, who haue no more ſtay of themſelues in their making merrie, than wild beaſtes haue. Now then, if our eies be ſo ſet vpon God; we ſhalbe ſober and modeſt ynough. Marke that for one point.

But beſides this, it is the meaning of Moſes alſo, that fathers ſhould teach their children, and maſters their ſeruants, to do the like. For it is not ynough for a faithful man, that he himſelfe ſerue God: but he muſt alſo gouerne his houſhold, aſſuring himſelf that it is committed to him to the ſame end, & that he is to yeeld account of it. And in deede, what reaſon is it ỹ a man ſhould haue ſuperioritie ouer his neighbors ỹ are creatures faſhioned after ỹ image of God as wel as he, and that in the meane while God ſhould be bereft of his right, and not be vſed as chiefe ſoueraigne of all? What a preſumption were that? Were it not an vtter peruerting of the order of nature? Then let vs marke well, that heere wee bee warned to rule our houſes in ſuch wiſe, as GOD may bee ſerued both of great and ſmall. Let him to whome God hath giuen children, beware that he bring them vp in the right religion, & let him do the like to his men and his maides, ſo as God may be the common father and maiſter of them all. That was the thing whereof Moſes intended to warne the Iewes, & in their perſons it behoueth vs alſo to bee taught at this day to doe our duties, in ỹ behalfe. And therewithall wee be exhorted to gentlenes alſo. For although the maiſter of a houſe haue preheminence & authoritie ouer his houſhold; yet notwithſtãding his inioying thereof, muſt not be to himſelf alone: but he muſt impart it to al his whole houſhould: for elſe it is a ſeparating of himſelfe from ỹ ſtate of mankind,& a barring of the common ſocietie which God hath ſet among men. Therefore there are here two points to be noted. The one is ỹ whoſoeuer hath charge of children and ſeruants, muſt do his indeuer to lead them to god. And ỹ other is, that all ſuch as are ſet ouer others and haue inferior perſons vnder them in what ſtate of ſubiection ſoeuer it be, ought to be kindharted towardes them, and not to reigne ouer them with tyrannie and cruelty, but to rule them w̃ al gentleneſſe, ſo as they make them partakers of the benefites and gratious gifts which they haue receiued at Gods hand.

That which Moſes addeth concerning the Leuites, ſerueth for a further confirmatiõ of ỹ which he had ſpokẽ of their reioycing or making merrie in ỹ preſence of God. For (as I haue declared alreadie) God had appointed ỹ townes of ỹ Leuites to be diſperſed among ỹ tribes, to ỹ intent there ſhould be good doctrine taught throughout ỹ whole country. We know what the ſtate of ỹ tribe was, namely how it is ſaid in ỹ ſecond of the Prophet Malachie, ỹ the lippes of the prieſt ought to teach knowledge, & that men ſhoulde ſeeke for good doctrine at his mouth, & that the Prieſts were as the meſſengers of ỹ liuing God. God then had choſen ỹ tribe of Leuie to be cõtinually among his people, to hold them in the true and pure religion. For had they bin placed all together in ſome corner by themſelues, after the ſame maner ỹ the reſt of the tribes were in their portions; all the people beſides had bin w̃out teaching. But inaſmuchas there was no tribe where the Leuites had not ſome towne allotted to them; by that meanes the ſeede of Gods word was ſpred abrode, ſo as the perſons whom God had ordained to gouerne his Church & to haue the charge of mens ſoules; were ſo diſperſed ỹ the land was furniſhed with them throughout. And now it is ſaid ỹ the Iſraelits ſhal make merrie with the Leuites ỹ were mingled among thẽ. And why? For they might holde the people in ſome awe. Though there had bin ſome vnruly perſons, yet if they had ſeene the Leuites, who bare their marks, & were ſpecially choſen to the ſpiritual gouernmẽt of ỹ Church: it would haue bin a bridle to reſtraine thẽ wal. Thus the Lord ſeeing ỹ frailtie of his people, gaue thẽ this help to hold them in order & modeſtie. As if he ſhold ſay, True it is that I haue choſen you for mine inheritãce, & you be ỹ people whom I haue dedicated to my ſelf: but yet is there a ſpecial holineſſe in the Leuites, bicauſe they preace into ỹ Tabernacle, and are appointed to teach you the lawe, and to keepe you from running into ſuperſtition, & from ſtarting aſide to ſtraunge gods. Seeing then ỹ I haue committed this charge to my Leuites: let them be in your company, that by your beholding of them you may be ỹ more prouoked to feare mee, and to bee merrie after a holy manner, without defyling of your ſelues with the luſtes of the world as ye ſee the vnbeleeuers doe, who ruſh out into all diſorder: that ſeeing I haue appointed my Leuites to bee as meſſengers from me, and ỹ my lawe is in their mouth, & their office is to beare abrode my doctrine: you may not be ſo giuen to diſorder, but rather conſider ỹ I dwell among you, ſo as the very ſight of my ſeruants may do you to vnderſtand, that I am neere at hand, & that you ought not to ſeparate your ſelues from me. And hereby we be put in minde to behaue our ſelues ſoberly and modeſtly, & that we haue neede to be exhorted dayly thereunto by the word of God, for feare of ſtarting out into vnthriftineſſe; for we ſee what feeblenes is in vs. True it is ỹ when we be once entered into a wicked trade, we ſhall ſoone be hardened in it: but to be conſtãt in doing good, we ſhal haue much ado. Therefore although we haue ſome good diſpoſition & deſire to ſerue God: yet muſt he bee faine to quicken vs vp ſtill from day to day. Wherfore let vs ſeeke the meane; which is to reſort to the doctrine ỹ ſhould be our guide, and to yeeld willing care to the warnings ỹ are giuen to draw vs vnto God, & to confirme vs in his feare & obedience. Yea and when wee haue bin at a ſermon, and haue heard ỹ word that is preached to vs in his name: let it ſerue to keepe vs in awe, & although we bee tempted to vnthriftines, yet let it be as a bridle to reine vs backe vnto God. Thus you ſee howe we ought to vſe the meanes & remedies ỹ God hath appointed vnto vs to redreſſe the frailtie that is in vs. For otherwiſe we would ſtart away by and by, and wonder that we ſhould be ſo vterly ſtrayed away from our God. That is the thing in effect which we haue to remember vpon the firſt ſentence that is ſet downe here.

Leuit. 35.8. & Ioſ. 21.3.

Mal. 2.7.

Now he addeth afterward, as we haue ſeen alreadie heretofore, that the people ſhould not ſacrifice in all places, but only in the place that God ſhold chooſe among their tribes. And that is to hold the people in obedience, that they ſhoulde not attempt to ſerue God after their owne fanſie & imagination. In deede a man might ſay at the firſt bluſh, ỹ there needed no rehearſing of the thing ỹ was eaſie ynough of it ſelfe. But the caſe concerneth not ỹ only vnderſtanding of it, there is another reaſon why god ſetteth down this ſaying ſo oftẽ: which is that men cannot refraine frõ ſwaruing one way or other, but that although they be fully minded for a time to ſerue God, yet doe they ſtart aſide in the turning of a hand, bicauſe they be vnconſtant & light minded. Not w̃out cauſe therefore doth God rehearſe here ỹ ſame thing that we haue ſeene here before, namely that the people ſhoulde not offer ſacrifice in all places. And why? For thinges in thoſe dayes were very darke, & it was needefull for the people to be reſtrained, to know ỹ there was but one God. The heathen had euery one their religiõ by himſelf, & there was no certaintie at al among them. But it behoued the people of Iſrael to be fully reſolued in this wiſe. The God whom we worſhip is the maker of heauen & earth: & bicauſe we bee not able to gette vppe vnto him, hee hath ſhewed himſelfe vnto our fathers, ſo as wee cannot doe amiſſe, if wee worſhip him according to his Lawe. It behoued the people of Iſrael to bee at that point. For had they had diuers altars, and ỹ euery man might haue followed his owne deuotiõ: what a thing had it bin? There wold haue bin ſtore of inuẽtions: they would haue brought in diuerſitie of religions, euery man would haue deuiſed what he had liſted, & the God of Abrahã ſhold no more haue bin worſhipped after his owne maner. For this cauſe is it ſaide, you ſhall haue but one Altar and one Sanctuarie, and God reſerueth to himſelfe the chooſing and appointing out of the place wherin he wil be worſhipped & ſerued. We ſee then ỹ here all libertie is taken from men, ſo as they may not take any thing at all vpon them in the ſeruing of God. Marke that for one point.

Againe, it is ſhewed vs here moreouer, ỹ foraſmuch as we be ſubiect to this corruption of forging fond opinions, & conſequently of falſe and wicked opinions out of nomber: God ment to hold his people in ỹ true vnitie of faith, and his chooſing of one Sanctuarie was as a band of cõcord, to the intent ỹ men ſhould not run gadding euery one after his owne fanſie. To bee ſhort, without agreement in ỹ one faith, wee cannot ſerue God or doe any thing to his liking. And hereby we ſee that men do themſelues no good at all by their fooliſh deuotions, but rather prouoke Gods vengeance the more, by their ſtraining of themſelues to do the things ỹ they haue deuiſed of their owne braine. For ỹ very ground of religion is to knowe whom we ought to ſerue,

Iohn 4.22. as our Lord Ieſus telleth vs in ỹ fourth of Iohn, ſaying: We knowe what we worſhip. Nowe he ſpeaketh there of the Iewes, bicauſe they had ỹ law, & therein the full certeintie howe God was to be ſerued. But it is ſaid by the Prophets, that at the comming of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt there

Eſa.19.19. & 23.24. ſhould be three Altars, one in Egypt, another in Aſſyria, & the third in Iewrie. Whereby is ment ỹ God ſhalbe ſerued eueriwhere. For the materiall Altars were beaten downe. As for the things that are termed Altars in the Popedom, they be diuelliſh abhominations: for their ſetting of them vp is to ſacrifice chriſt on thẽ. But he hath offred

Hebr.9.26. himſelfe once for all, according to ỹ office ỹ was giuen him by God his father. And therefore it were high treaſon & blaſphemie againſt God to haue altars nowadayes among Chriſtians. For Ieſus Chriſt is our onely ſpiritual Altar: & when we be knit vnto him; then is God duely worſhipped and as he himſelfe requireth. Wherefore let vs learne ỹ although the ceremonie be diſanulled; yet ỹ meaning of it may greatly profite vs: which is, ỹ we muſt ſerue God, not by turning aſide euery man after his owne conceites, but by linking our ſelues together in ỹ bond of faith & by agreeing rightly together. And whereupon ſhal this concord be grounded? Vpon Gods word & vpon our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, who is his very wiſdome. For if we reſort to him, we ſhal haue a certaine marke to ſhoote at, & ſuch a one as cãnot deceiue vs. But as ſoone as we ſwarue aſide from him, be it neuer ſo little; by & by we vaniſh away in our own fooliſh thoughts. Thus ye ſee in effect what we be taught as concerning this place.

And let vs marke wel that it belonged to God to chooſe the place, as hath bin told you before, ſo as ỹ Iſraelites had not leaue to ſpie it out thẽſelues, & to ſay, This is the fitteſt place: but God bare all ỹ ſtroke alone. Hereby we be done to vnderſtãd ỹ it is not for vs to ſet vp a ſeruice of god after our own lyking, but ỹ we muſt herken vnto him, and ſo receiue his woord as nothing be added thereunto, as ſhalbe declared yet better in ỹ end of this chapter. And verily when as he ſaith that he will choſe it in one of their Tribes: thereby he doth vs to vnderſtand that we muſt not enuie our brethren, though one of them be more honoured than another. Let it content vs that god accepteth our ſeruice; & although ſome of vs be leſſer and ſome greater and excellenter than others: yet muſt not that breed any hartburning among vs, nor occaſion vs to be greeued at Gods graunting of more fauour vnto others than to vs: but euery of vs muſt doe his dewtie in his owne degree, & ſeeke no further but to bee receiued at Gods hande all togither, both they that goe before, and they that come after.

Furthermore let vs marke well, that whereas God ſaith he wil chooſe that place to put his name in: it is not ment that his beeing was ſhut vp in the Sanctuarie: but onely that foolke ſhoulde there haue a recorde of his preſence. And that was to the intent that the Iewes ſhoulde not buſie their heads about groſſe imaginations, as we ſee men commonly inclined to doe. When God ſtoopeth to imparte himſelfe familiarly vnto vs, wee take occaſion to make him ſome Image; if wee could wee woulde tye him to ſome ſtone or to ſome piller, or coope him vp in ſome corner: and wee thinke wee haue him not with vs, except wee haue ſome viſible ſigne of him. And this was the cauſe why men made puppets and Idolles to repreſent God by. For this cauſe he telleth them expreſly that he himſelfe wil chooſe the place wherein hee will bee worſhipped and ſerued, howbeit not that his being ſhall bee ſhut vp there, but onely that his name ſhall bee there, that is to ſay, that hee will bee called vppon there. And moreouer the Iewes were ſto bee put in minde, to

Exo.25.40. Hebr.8.5. looke vp to the heauenly patterne that Moſes ſawe on the Mount, as oft as they looked vpon the arke of couenant and the other ſignes that God had giuen them, and thereby to bee led to the ſpirituall ſeruice which was figured by thoſe

Col.2.17. things, wherof Ieſus Chriſt was ỹ very ſubſtance. True it is that euen at this day ſtill God cometh downe or ſtoopeth vnto our rudeneſſe; inſomuch that it is his will wee ſhoulde haue temples or Churches to aſſemble in, and thither we come together to make our cõmõ prayers there. Againe, Baptiſme is miniſtred there, for Ieſus Chriſt alſo is there amõg vs & ruleth ouer vs, & in his ſupper we haue an aſſurance ỹ we be knit vnto him, & grafted into his body, ſo as we haue but one life cõmon to vs all. Yet muſt we not be held downe by the ſignes and tokens that God giueth vs for our helpe; but wee muſt rather bee conueied vp by them, and not bee wrapped in ſuperſtitiõs, to worſhip god after a fleſhly maner. Wee muſt conſider that hee filleth all thinges, yea euen abyding in his heauenly glory, and there muſt wee ſeeke him by fayth. When wee thinke vpon him, we muſt not draw him downe hither to haue him here after a fleſhly manner, but wee muſt mounte vp by faith into heauen Pſal.3.4.& where he dwelleth, as the ſcripture ſpeaketh of 113.5.& him. That therefore is the thing which we haue 121.1. to remember vpon this place beſides ỹ thinges ỹ haue beene declared already. For I doe but put you in remembrance of the thinges that haue beene diſcourſed more at large heretofore.

Nowe afterward here is leaue giuen by God to his people, to eate fleſhe throughout all the lande of Chanaan, ſo it be not of any Sacrifices, tithes, burntofferinges, Heaueofferinges, or firſt fruites. It ſhall be lawful then for you to eate of all common fleſhe euery where; but as for that which ſhal haue bin ſacrificed vnto me, let it not be eaten of in any other place, than in the ſame which I ſhall haue choſen to ſet my Sanctuarie in. Howebeit, he addeth one worde more here, ſaying: according to the bleſſing which thy God ſhall giue thee. Here wee ſee firſt of all, that it were not lawfull for vs to eate one bit of breade, vnles we were ſure in our minds that God giueth it vs and that wee haue leaue of him to eate it.
Rom.14.13 And that is the cauſe why Saint Paul requireth faith where he ſpeaketh of eating and drinking;
ſaying that whatſoeuer is not of faith, is ſinne.
And whereof treateth hee there? Euen of the eating of fleſhe or of herbes, of bread or of fiſhe, and of all manner of foode: and hee ſaith that it muſt be doone with faith. As howe? Some will ſay that faith is too precious a thing to bee mingled with corruptible meates. Yea, but wee muſt be ſure in all our life, that wee attempt not any thing which may diſpleaſe God, or that is not lawfull for vs to doe by his leaue or warrant giuen vnto vs. Therefore in the foreſaide text, by the worde Faith, Saint Paul meaneth the recorde that we haue in our eating and drinking, that God ſheweth himſelfe a father to vs, by giuing vs foode to nouriſhe our bodies withall:
and that our vſing of the benefites which the earth yeeldeth, is not by ſtealth as though wee woulde robbe him of them; but as it were by receiuing them at his hand. When a father giueth his children euery one his pittance, ſaying, hold here, & eat it: it is no more than God doth dayly vnto vs, when we be certified by his word, ỹ he hath giuen power to ỹ earth to bring foorth corne & wine for our vſe, & deliuered vs ỹ beaſts & all other things to eat of. We muſt aſſure our ſelues ỹ the growing & encreaſing of victuals in the worlde commeth not by haphazard, but of Gods ordinance, who hath appointed them to feede vs through his goodnes. I tolde you this doctrine is verie needeful. For what a thing were it, if we could not eat a morſell of bread without offending God? And yet S. Paul auoweth it to be ſo. And why? For if in my eating & drinking at all times & in all places, I know not that I am beholden to God for ỹ good things ỹ hee hath ordeined for mee: it is al one as if I ſtole it frō him:
I do but filch it frō him like a dog or a cat, which taketh that which was not ordeined for her. Yee ſee then that that is one fault.

Againe, it is as it were a burying of God, whē men knowe not that it is he which giueth them the foode for their ſuſtenance. If wee bee not fully perſuaded of that; then is God diſappointed of the honour that belongs to him, ſo as wee acknowledge him not for our father and foſterer, but become ſo brutiſh that wee minde no more the life which is prepared for vs in ỹ kingdome of heauen. But his taking of ſuch fatherly care of vs in this world, is to leade vs vp higher thereby. And ſo wee ſee that vnleſſe we bee ſure that God giueth vs leaue to eate and drinke according to his bleſſing; wee bee but as brute beaſtes, and much worſe than they. Againe, on the other ſide, who giues vs authoritie to deuour Gods benefits? Shall wee wretched creatures which offend God without ceaſſing, preſume to do it of our own heads, without conſidering that wee haue thoſe things of his free goodneſſe, and that they belong not to vs otherwiſe than of Gods good will, who vouchſaſeth to ſhewe him ſelfe liberall towardes vs? Surely then doe wee ruin all things to vs without any right or title.
Therefore are we blame worthie euerie way for our eating and drinking, till wee knowe that GOD is the giuer of all. And heereby wee bee doone to vnderſtande further, that in our eating and drinking wee muſt not obſerue the traditions of men, but content ourſelues with the teſtimony of Gods good will. And there-unto alſo doeth the holy ſcripture referre vs by condemning the fond toyes that men deuiſe of themſelues, as when they ſay, it is not Lawefull to eate fleſh vpon ſuch a day, this muſt be done and ỹ muſt be done. And what authoritie haue men to bid and forbidde ſuch thinges? For the Pope and all his rable are not able to make a ſil-ly flye: and ſhall they forbidde vs to eate beefe, mutton, or any other of the thinges that were made for our ſuſtenance? What elſe is their v-ſurping of ſuch authoritie, than a robbing of GOD of his ſoueraignetie ouer vs? Now then let vs haue an eye to the will of our GOD.
And ſith wee knowe that hee hath giuen vs all meates without exception: let euerie of vs vſe them ſoberly, and bee contented to bee ruled by his worde: for to him onely doeth it belong to lay Lawes vpon vs, and it is not for any mortall man to preſume ſo farre. If any man take that vpon him which is not due to him, let vs deſpiſe him, yea and abhorre him, as one that goeth about to ouerthrowe ỹ authoritie of God.
And ſo ye ſee what wee haue to marke in Gods ſuffering & giuing leaue vnto his people, to eate fleſh in all places, ſo it were not ſacrificed. As if he ſhould ſay: In your eating and drinking con-ſider well what is lawefull for you. And howe may you diſcerne that? By my word. Giue your ſelues once ouer vnto me; and you ſhal no more be afraide of any thing. If men lay new Lawes vpon you; make no account of it: for it is ynough for you, that ye haue leaue at my hande.

And nowe Moſes addeth expreſly, according to the bleſſing which thy God ſhall haue giuē thee. wher-by he doeth vs to vnderſtande, that euerie man muſt haue an eye to his owne abilitie, and ther-by rule his deſires. For if the riche man hauing whereof to liue, doe fare according to his

abilitie, and the poore man will needes fare as wel as he: he muſt needes ſmart for it. And God liketh not of it when he that hath not wherewith will needes fare as dayntily as hee that is riche. Indeede we muſt alway beare this leſſon of Saint Pauls in mind and put it in practiſe, namely that he which hath abundance glut not himſelfe till he burſt, ne giue himſelf to his pleaſures, according to his ſaying in the xiii. to the Romanes, that we muſt not haue a care of our fleſhe to cocker it too much: For our fleſhe deſireth not the beſt things, and our appetites are inordinate: and therefore the following of them were but a confuſed diſorder. Although the richer ſort haue great ſtore of all thinges, yet muſt they not pamper themſelues out of meaſure, ſo as they ſhoulde at any time fall into diſorder, and not indeuour to beſtow of their abundance vppon ſuch as are in neede and pouertie. For Gods meaning is to try the charitie of ſuch as haue wherwith, by giuing them more than they themſelues haue neede of, to the intent they ſhoulde not bee nigardly of the thinges which they haue, but be helpefull to their poore brethren & to ſuch as want. Neuerthelatter, a rich man may fare according to the bleſſing ỹ God ſhall haue giuen him, and the poore man muſt content himſelfe with browne breade if he haue none other, and not ſtrayne himſelfe to eate whytebread as wel as the riche man, but beare his pouertie patiently, and pray to God to nouriſhe him as it were with Manna from heauen: And although hee haue nothing elſe but drie bread to feed on, the ſame muſt ſerue his turne in ſteede of all other vittels. That is the thing in effect, which Moſes meant to ſhewe vs here. And it is a verie good and profitable leſſon: for thereby wee bee doone to vnderſtande that if God giue vs abundaunce, it is a continuall putting of vs in remembrance that hee dwelleth among vs, that wee bee not as theſe drunkardes which in a yeare when there is ſtore of wine, do deſpiſe God and plaie the very brute beaſtes, ſo that if they may not drinke wine till they ſpewe it out again, and powre it in as it were with tunnelles, they haue neuer enough. Let vs beware of ſuch beaſtlines: and let vs beare in mind that we be in Gods preſence. And ſurely if wee beare him that reuerence, we will bee aſhamed to cram our ſelues like dogges or ſwine, and to deface his image in vs by vnmeaſurable eating & drinking til we burſt againe. Lo what we haue to beare in minde. Likewiſe on the other ſide, if the yeare be barren, ſo as there be ſmall ſtore of wine, and corne is deere: This text teacheth vs to thanke God for it, and to cut our morſels the ſmaller, and to bridle our ſelues. For why? It is ſaide that our eating muſt bee after as our God hath bleſſed vs, ſo as we muſt haue an eye to the abilitie that God hath giuen vs: and accordingly as we haue wherewith, ſo muſt euery of vs learne to rule himſelfe, and not play the vnthrifts ỹ are led away by their luſts, which put all into the platter (as they ſay) to ſatisfie their bellies withal. Some are ſo delicate of their diet, that rather than they wil forbeare when God ſendeth them ſcarcetie, they will ſell their cotes, yea and their diſhes and platters too. Such folke might conſider, that it were good for them to keepe ſomewhat in ſtore, for afterwarde, to the intent that if they fel into ſickneſſe or any other neceſſitie, they might haue wherewith to releeue them. Had they anie honeſtie or any ſtay of themſelues, to thinke that it is Gods will to deale ſparely with them at that time: Had they anie conſideration at all I ſay: they might ſay, Lord thou haſt all good thinges in thine hand, and that ſo plentifully, as thou couldeſt wel giue vs much more: but thou intendeſt to try our patience. Vouchſafe therefore to bleſſe the little that thou haſt giuen vs, ſo as it may ſuffice vs. Let it be as the Manna to vs, that we may perceiue thy fauor towards vs, euen thereby though there were none other thing. But what? All our minde is vpon the filling of our bellies; yea euen without regarding how far God giueth vs leaue to goe. So much the more therefore ought all men both rich and poore, to mark wel this text. Let ỹ man of wealth ſay in himſelfe, it is the bleſſing of my God: & ſith it is ſo, I muſt yeelde him account of it, and I muſt looke verie well about me howe I may vſe theſe thinges aright according to his ordinance: ſo as I giue not my fleſhe whatſoeuer it liketh or luſteth for, but that I behaue my ſelfe ſoberly howſoeuer the worlde go, and alſo imparte my ouerplus to ſuch as haue want or neede, and releeue them with mine aboundance. Let the rich deale after that maner. Againe on the otherſide, let the poore bethinke them thus: Wel, God giueth vs not wherewith to finde our ſelues, and therefore it behoueth vs to beare our poore ſtate patiently, and not giue head to our luſtes: for then ſhall we but prouoke Gods wrath, by following our deintie deſires & ſuch other like thinges: wherefore let vs be well aduiſed to content our ſelues with the little that he giueth vs.

1.Cor.7.30.

Rom.13.14.

Thus ye ſee that although the rich enioye their eaſe & haue wherewith to maintaine their delights for the preſent time: Yet they muſt bee of ſuch mind, that if God liſt to bereaue them of all things the next morrowe, they muſt not repine to giue ouer al, but ſo humble theſelues as they may ſay, Lord I will liue to day according to the bleſſing which thou haſt giuen mee: and if thou liſt to impoueriſhe mee to morrowe, doe thy good pleaſure: onely graunt mee the grace to learne to content my ſelfe with anie other ſtate of liuing than I liue in to day. Whereas to day I fare according to mine abilitie; if thou liſt to bring me downe to browne breade, let mee abide to be brought thereto, and let my necke be pliable to receyue thy yoke. That is the effect of the thinges which we haue to marke vppon this ſentence of Moſeſes, where he declareth that euery man muſt moderate his dyet and fare according to gods bleſſing, that is to ſay, according to the abilitie that God giueth him wherewith to doe it.

And wee bee further warned to beware that we deuoure not all that euer wee can get by pilfry and wicked trades: for that is no bleſſing of

God. When a man hath raked other folks goods to him by fraude and leawde dealing, can that be called Gods blessing? True it is that riches come alwayes from Gods hande: but yet whosoeuer he is that inricheth himselfe by rauin & fraude, is reiected of God, and vtterly misliked of him. So then, let vs marke that although a man coulde by wicked shiftes gaine wherewith to feede himselfe fat; yet must he not take such libertie to him. For why? In this place we bee restreyned backe to the blessing of God. Were this point wel marked, we should not see so much naughtinesse in the world as there is to be seene nowadayes. For all the care is howe to gette wherewith to maintaine vs: but as for whether the meanes be Lawfull and reasonable, no man entereth into the examination of that: but so he may scrape and catch, he neuer takes any further care at al. We see what rauening there is, we see what deceitful and leawd dealing there is; in somuch as there is not anie state or trade of men in ỹ world this day, which is not so peruerted as wold irk a man to think vpon it. Euery mans seeking is to pul to himself ỹ goods of other men, & commonly all is fishe that comes to net. For why? We haue no regard of Gods blessing, but we winde them in vnto vs, some by lying, and some by faire gloſing. And to what ende? Forsooth to finde our selues withal. Beholde, God calleth vs all, & telleth vs that his blessing shall light vpon vs if we followe his worde simplie: & that he will not faile vs in any thing, at leastwise if we indeuour to doe what we can. Indeede we may hap to fare hardly nowe and then, so as God will not feede vs so full as we woulde wish: but yet howe soeuer wee fare, hee promiseth to giue sustenance to as many as resort vnto him. But wee disappoint our selues of it by our owne leawdnesse. For first and formost we be troubled and tormented with distrust; secondly our vnordinate lustes doe tempt vs and tickle vs: & thirdly the diuell doeth so blinde vs, that wee make no conscience of pilling and polling, of deceyuing and beguiling, and of giuing our selues to al naughtinesse, so we may bee fat fedde, and liue deintily: as for all the rest wee make none account of it. And therefore let vs remember this worde Blessing, as whereby God sheweth vs that we must resorte wholy vnto him, accordingly also as our Lorde Iesus Christ teacheth vs by bidding vs to aske our dayly breade of God his father, whereby wee protest that wee holde all thinges of his blessing.

Pſal.128.3.

Finally he addeth, That as well the cleane as the vncleane may eate thereof. Our Lorde doth not here giue leaue to the vncleane, to eat the fruits of the earth with an euill conscience: but his meaning is that there is not so great streitnesse to be vsed in the receiuing of the cõmon meats and drinkes, as in eating of the sacrifices. For ỹ eating of the Sacrifices was to another purpose. In those holy feastes aforementioned, it behoued them in any wise to be cleansed afore hande according to the ceremonie of the lawe: so as it was not for any man to come to the Temple and to eate of the Sacrifices, vntill hee hadde first cleansed himselfe; and water was set readie at the comming in of the dore for the same purpose. But here it is saide that there was no such straite bondage to bee obserued in their common eating and drinking. That is the verie meaning of Moses. But yet must wee marke also therewithall, that all that euer we touch is defiled by our vncleanesse, if wee our selues be not dedicated vnto God, according to this saying of Saint Paules, that all things are cleane to the pure and cleane, which haue their consciences right before God, and cleansed by faith: whereas on the contrarie part, the vnbeleeuers and such as haue no feare of GOD, defile the breade and wine by their touching of it, and do but make all thinges vncleane, so as Gods creatures are infected by ỹ filthines that is in them.

Tit.1.15.

This must wee holde for a rule: and specially in eating and drinking wee must haue the saide cleanesse of dedicating our selues vnto God. Neuertheless wee must note that wee cannot at all times be so well disposed in our eating and drinking, as when wee come to the Church: there we must bee of an other minde. True it is that euen in our laboring, and in our looking to our household, wee ought to haue God alway before our eyes; and that when we eate and drinke, we ought to doe it in his name, according to the lesson that I alleadged out of Saint Paule. But when wee come to the Church God is yet neerer vs and more familiar with vs. For our Lorde Iesus Christ assureth vs that he is there among vs when we come together in his name: and by our holding vp of our hands towardes heauen, wee shewe that our comming thither is to present our selues in the sight of our God. And therefore wee must haue a more singular and earnest affection when we bee come thither, than when wee bee doing of our common businesse. Ought there not to bee a difference put betweene the Lordes supper and our common eating and drinking? True it is that whensoeuer we receiue our ordinarie repast, we ought to call vpon God and to giue him thanks, or else wee bee defiled. But yet when wee come to the holy supper, wee must be rauished after an other fashion, as though wee were no more in this worlde: Our mindes must not runne vpon the feeding of our bodies, but vppon the sonne of GOD, who calleth himselfe our life, telling vs that his flesh is our foode, and his bloode our spirituall drinke. And therefore it is meete that it should be separated from the thinges that belong to the common order of this earthly life.

Ioh.6.51. 53.& 11.25. & 14.6.

Wee see then that the meaning of Moses in this place where our Lorde giueth vs libertie to eate and drinke, is that wee shoulde call vppon him: and that although there bee infirmitie in vs, yet must not we therefore forbeare ỹ libertie and leaue that GOD giueth vs to vse the foode which he hath appointed to our vse: which thing wee may doe with a quiet conscience, not doubting but that GOD doeth well like of it, seeing hee hath giuen vs such warrant, & hath dispensed with vs of his owne free-free goodnes, And ſpecially that when we reſort vnto him, we muſt retyre & call our ſelues backe from al earthly cares, ỹ we may mount vp wholy vnto heauen. As for example, when we be to receiue the holy ſupper, or when wee ſee ỹ Chriſt aſſureth or warranteth vs by Baptiſme, ỹ we be made cleane by him, and newly reformed, ſo as he accepteth vs and taketh vs for his members, to the intent that his fathers iudgement ſeate ſhoulde not be terrible vnto vs: when we thinke on theſe thinges I ſay, it becommeth vs to bee drawen to the heauenly life, and to be as it were ſecluded from our earthly cares, that wee may the better ſticke vnto our God, and fare the better by it all the dayes of our life.

And nowe let vs fall downe in ỹ preſence of our good God w̃ acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to make vs perceiue thẽ daily more & more, & to teach vs ſo to ſerue him, as we may abide continually in the pure ſimplicitie of his worde, without adding aught to it or taking aught frõ it, vpon our own head. And ſeeing we know our ſelues giltie before him of ſo many ſins committed againſt his maieſtie, let vs flee for refuge to his mercie, and not doubt but that ſeeing hee hath vouchſafed (not to haue a viſible Sanctuarie among vs, but) euen to knit himſelfe to vs in the perſon of his ſonne Ieſus Chriſt, wee may aſſure our ſelues that he alwayes hath cõpaſſion of vs, to receiue vs, notwithſtanding that we be ſo wretched creatures as we bee well worthie to bee cut off from him, and to bee vtterly thruſt out of his kingdome. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace not onely to vs but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth, &c.

On Wednesday the ix. of October. 1555.

The Lxxxiiij. Sermon, which is the fifth vpon the twelfth Chapter.

19 Beware that thou forſake not the Leuite of all the time that thou ſhalt be vpon the earth.

20 When the Lorde thy God ſhall haue inlarged thy borders as he hath ſaide, and thou ſayeſt, I will eate fleſh: if thy mind be deſirous to eat fleſh, eat thou whatſoeuer fleſh thou haſt a mind vnto.

21 If the place which the Lord thy God will chooſe to put his name in, be farre from thee, thou ſhall kill of the Oxen and ſheepe which the Lord hath giuen thee, as I haue commanded thee, and thou ſhalt eat of it within thine owne gates, according to thine owne hearts deſire.

22 As the Fallowdeere and the Reddeere are eaten: ſo ſhalt thou eate them. The cleane and the vncleane may eate therof alike.

23 Onely take heede that thou eate not the bloud: for the bloud is the life, and thou mayeſt not eate the life with the fleſh.

24 Therefore thou ſhalt not eate it, but ſhalt powre it vpon the earth as water.

25 Eate not of it therfore: that it may go wel with thee and with thy children after thee, when thou ſhalt haue doone the thing that is right in the ſight of the Lorde.

26 But as for the halowed things that are in thy cuſtodie, and thy vowes; thou ſhalt take and carie them to the place which the Lorde hath choſen.

27 And thou ſhalt offer thy whole burnt offerings both the fleſh and the bloud, vpon the altar of the Lord thy God. And of thy Peace offrings thou ſhalt powre the bloud vpon the altar of the Lorde thy God, and thou ſhalt eate the fleſh.

28 Take heede and hearken to all theſe words which I commaund thee, that it may go well with thee and with thy children after thee for euer, when thou ſhalt haue done the thing that is good and right in the ſight of the Lord thy God,

WE ſawe yeſterday why God appointed the Leuites to haue cities here & there throughout the land of Iurie: namely for the mainteining of the true & pure religion among his people. For if any of them would haue turned away to ſuperſtition, or idolatry, thoſe whom God had appointed to his owne ſeruice, might haue amẽded them by good admonitions. So by ỹ meanes was ỹ ſeed of good doctrine ſowen euery where. now purſuing ỹ ſame matter Moſes addeth, That the peo-

people shoulde beware in anie wise that they defrauded them not of their rights. And not without cause. For as I haue told you before, God had appointed them of purpose to serue him, and the greater part of them also to teach his people, that his lawe might be knowen. Seeing it was so, it was good reason that they shoulde haue wherewith to find and maintaine them. For in very deede a part of the inheritance belonged to them, because they were descended of the linage of Abraham. But GOD had put them from it, to the ende they shoulde not bee troubled neither with tilling of the grounde nor with any other businesses, but onely giue themselues all wholly to the doing of their office. And it is not without cause that Moses plainely exhorteth ỹ people to doe their duetie in this behalfe: for wee see the vnthankfulnesse of the worlde. The Idolaters can finde in their hartes to maintayne their priestes, and they spare for no cost: but as for them that serue God purely, there is commonly no account made of them, as hath beene seene in al times. We see how God himself complaineth that he was defrauded both of his first fruites and also of his offeringes, and of all the residue which he had appointed to himselfe in his lawe. But if a man had inquired howe the heathen behaued themselues towardes their idols: he should haue founde that they were willing to spende the most part of their substaunce in their superstitions. We see then as I haue told you alreadie, that the worlde is so thankeles towardes the liuing God, ỹ if men be not throughly quickened vp, they let slippe al that euer God commaundeth, and coulde bee contented that such things shoulde neuer be spoken of. Specially as for those whom God hath ordeined to preach his word, men can find in their hearts, not onely to set light by them, but also to forsake them vtterly. And why? It is because god rebuketh vs for our faults, but we wold he were further off from vs, & that he would lay the bridle in our neckes, so as euery man might do what he listed: & therfore it greeueth vs to be touched by Gods word. But yet for al that, if those ỹ haue that charge cõmitted to them do their duety; they must be importunate in calling vpon vs, by rebuking, exhorting, and reprouing vs, that they may ouercome vs by their liuely rebukes & sharpe threatnings. Now, that is not ỹ thing which the world coueteth & desireth. Nay ỹ world had leuer to maintaine such as shoulde neuer speake worde of it, than to haue a preacher that woulde rebuke sin liuelyly. And if it were in ỹ worlds choice, it had alwayes leuer to maintaine a whole couent of Munkes & Chanons to houle out with ful gorge, than to find one preacher that would speake as he ought to do. Men can be contented to haue Organs. And why? For they put men to no griefe by rebuking their sins. But as for such as preach Gods worde to the quick, men could find in their hartes that they were rid out of the worlde, if it were possible. And therfore it is not wout cause ỹ our Lord saith he will not haue them forsaken, which beare abrode ỹ true doctrine in his name. For by that meanes folke bereaue themselues of the foode of life, in that they refuse to mainteyne those that bring them the doctrine of saluation, which is all one as if they ment to starue themselues for hunger. And that is the cause also why Saint Paul standeth so much vpon ỹ warning. Certaine it is that he sought not his owne profit. Insomuch that he forbare to take his due wages in some places, becaus he sawe that men grudged at it. And he chose rather to take it of other Churches, where he serued not, than of ỹ Corinthians, because of the vnthankefulnesse, which he sawe among them. Nay, he chose to labour with his owne handes, rather than hee woulde giue them any occasion to speake ill of him. Thus haue we a man that is not giuen to his owne profite, but rather forbeareth willingly euen that which God had granted vnto him; and yet he ceaseth not to tel them, that ỹ preachers of Gods worde ought to be found & mainteined. And why is that? Because wee see the diuelles suttletie, who desyreth nothing so much as that the Churches shoulde bee destitute of good shepeherdes. Againe Saint Paul hath an eye to the spitefulnesse of the worlde. And that is the cause why he standeth so much vpon the said point, That those to whome God hath committed the charge of the preaching of his world, should be faithfully mainteined. It is a great matter (saith he) that we for bringing our spiritual goods vnto you, should haue wherwith to susteine our bodies. It is a very faire recompence. And yet if ỹ mislike you, you shewe great malice, and that yee set but litle store by the inestimable treasure sent you of God. Now we see to what purpose Moses commendeth here the tribe of Leuie vnto them. It was not so much for the profite of those that were to be mainteyned by the offrings, first fruites, and tithes; as for the common benefit of the whole people. For it was to the end they should be mainteined altogether in the true vnion of faith, & that they might alwaies haue men to put them in mind to liue in obedience towardes God, and that the Religion might be preserued in ỹ purenes therof. This is not for ỹ peculiar benefite of ỹ Leuites, but for ỹ general welfare of the whole Church of God.

1.Cor.9.11.

Now hereupon Moses repeateth ỹ same thing again which I haue expounded heretofore: that is to say, That the Iewes might eat flesh throughout all the land of Iurie, conditionally that the sacrifices were reserued for the sanctuarie, & for the temple whã she time were come that it were builded. I haue tolde you already that the cause why God gaue such leaue, was to the end that men should learne to refraine frõ the attempting of any thing which they were not sure to be lawfull for them to do. And howe shall we knowe that the things which we doe are acceptable to God? By hauing his word which he giueth vs. For it is not for vs to be further of his counsell, than he discloseth vnto vs. To be short, it is shewed vs here, that in all our life wee must not stirre one finger, except we be sure that GOD hath giuen vs leaue. Now he for his part leaueth vs not in doubt, but hath giuen vs a sure and vnfallible rule, so as we may alwayes discerne the certaintie at leastwise wise if wee will holde our selues contented with the thing that God alloweth, without adding any thing to his doctrine and his lawe. For there he hath vttered his wil in such wise vnto vs, that if we want any thing nowe, it is because we list not to harken to him that hath all dominion ouer vs. As for example, all the doubtes that are among the Papistes proceede of nothing elsse but of a foolish curiositie which they haue to do better than GOD commaundeth them. O (say they) I woulde be so holy as nothing might passe from mee which shoulde not be good. And is it not enough to obey GOD? Yes (say they), but I would do yet more. He ỹ passeth those bounds, shall but torment himselfe, and dwell in vnquietnesse al the time of his life, as wee see these hypocrites are, which are alwayes tossed and turmoyled with some doubt. And what is the cause thereof? It is a reward which they deserue verie well because they will not rule themselues by Gods worde. But (as the Prophet Esay saieth) if we walk purely and simplie according to Gods word, we shall haue rest in our soules, and wee shall be free from all these troubles and debates which the wretched vnbeleeuers make: for they wote not at which ende to beginne, neyther knowe they where to make an end. Therefore let vs marke well howe it is not without cause, that GOD speaking of eating and drinking, doeth giue here expresse leaue to his people, to the ende we shoulde not aduenture anie thing, but in his name, and to doe vs to vnderstand that he hath such a care of vs, that hee will guide al our steppes, and therefore we must liue as in his presence.

Furthermore let vs learne to receiue the libertie which GOD hath giuen vs, that we may enioy it so far forth, as is expedient: for we know ỹ this libertie of ours ought to carie a restraint with it: & S. Paul telleth vs ỹ al the things which are lawfull, are not alwaies behoueful, bicause they do not always edifie our neighbors. But yet howsoeuer the case standeth, we must haue our consciences free, so as wee may vse the thinges that GOD hath graunted vs by his worde. And therefore both in eating and drinking wee may giue him thankes with a cheerefull hearte, as they that knowe howe it is hee that feedeth vs, and that we doe receiue all thinges at his hand. Moreouer we bee continually put in mind hereby, ỹ he is neere at hand with vs, and ỹ his prouidence extendeth euen to ỹ leaste things. For it may well seeme that eating and drinking are no such thinges as are worthie that God shoulde haue regarde of them. But yet it is Gods will to beare sway in that behalfe, to the ende that we shoulde knowe the fatherly care that hee hath of vs, not onely in respect of our soules, but also in respect of our bodies, though they bee transitorie and corruptible.

2. Cor. 6. 12. & 10. 23.

Hereunto Moses addeth, that the people shoulde refrayne from eating the bloude of beastes. Whereby he doeth vs to vnderstande, that wee must so vse Gods creatures, as we abhorre all crueltie. For at the first sight it seemeth an vnnaturall thing to kill the beastes to whome GOD hath giuen life, by knocking of them downe and by cutting of there throtes. It seemeth to be a chaunging of Gods ordinaunce, and an vtter peruerting of all thinges, when men take leaue to doe such thinges. Yet notwithstanding our Lorde sayth that men may lawfully eate the flesshe of beastes, and that hee hath created them for mans vse. Neuertheles to the intent to inure his people to meekenesse, hee willeth them to abstayne from bloude. But that serued but for the time of the Lawe and the ceremonies. For as wee haue seene alreadie, our Lorde gouerned the people of olde time as little babes. And wee knowe that men teach young children all thinges that are good: but for asmuch as they haue not yet the capacitie to vse thinges as they that are come to mans estate: men holde them in awe, and suffer them not to haue thinges at will which are lawfull of themselues. As howe? Men beate a childe for handling a knife, because hee cannot tell yet howe to vse it. So then GOD vsed a childishe kinde of instruction and as it were rudimentes, or euen as wee say, the A, B, C, to enter that people withall which was yet rude and weake; but yet wee knowe what the ende and intent of the Lawe was, in commaunding men to abstayne from the bloud of beasts. For Gods will was that men shoulde abhorre all crueltie. And the same exposition hereof is set downe by Moses himselfe in the ninth Chapter of Genesis. For after the floude God declareth that men may well eate the flesshe of beastes, so they forbeare to eate of their bloud. And why is that? Because it is to bee considered, that the soule or life of euerie liuing thing is after a sorte represented by the bloude. And I forbidde you all manslaughter (sayth GOD:) beare well in minde that men are created after myne owne image: and therefore yee muste not worke any outrage one to an other. For whosoeuer sheddeth mans bloode, shall haue his bloude shedde by man. Wee see (I saye) that the respect which our Lorde hadde, was not of the brute beastes: but rather that his meaning was to holde vs together in brotherly loue. And therefore hee gaue the people of olde time a figure, whereby to put them in minde that they shoulde not offer any outrage to the reasonable creatures. That is the very effect.

Gen. 9. 3. Gen. 9. 4. Gen. 9. 5.

Nowe as touching the Ceremonie, that is no more in vse: it was meete that all such thinges shoulde bee doone away at the comming of our Lorde Iesus Christ: but yet doeth the substance of it continue with vs still, so as GOD commaundeth vs to liue peaceably one with another For seeing it is tolde vs in his Lawe, that it was not lawfull to eate the bloude of beastes: howe much the rather ought wee to spare the bloode of men? For men are not sette in the worlde to make meate of; but GOD hath prynted his marke vppon them, and made his owne image to shine foorth in them, to the ende that wee by our sparing of them, shoulde shewe what reue-reuerence we beare towards GOD. There are two thinges which we ought cheefly to regarde in maintaining concorde and friendſhip among men. The one is that wee bee all of one kinde.

Eſa.58.7. Thou ſhalt not deſpiſe thine owne fleſhe, ſaith the Prophete. And in deede, we ſee that euen the wilde beaſtes do through a naturall inſtinct keepe companie together, and euery of them liues quietly with others of the ſame ſort. Needs then muſt wee bee more peruerſe and leſſe reaſonable than the brute beaſtes, if wee fall to deuouring one an other, and play the cats and dogges, as they ſay. Neuertheleſſe, conſidering the inordinate vnrulineſſe that is among men, howe there is neither vprightneſſe nor indifferent dealing among them: ſurely there needeth none other iudge to condemn them of their crueltie, than the very wilde beaſtes.

But there is yet a further thing, which I ſaide to bee the ſeconde point: and that is, that God hath ſet his image in vs. Therefore when I doe any outrage to my neighbour, it is all one as if I ſhoulde deface the image of GOD, and ſo am I guiltie of high treaſon. Wherefore let vs beare well in mind ỹ our Lord maketh great account of the maintenãce of peace & agreement betweene men: the meane whereof is that no man offer any violence or wrong vnto his neighbour. And ſurely wee knowe howe greatly God
Deut.21.1. miſliketh manſlaughter. For the lawe was made ſo ſtrait in that behalfe, that if a bodie were founde deade by chaunce, and it was not knowen who killed it, the elders ſhoulde meete about it, and after great ſearch for the matter, they ſhoulde take a ſolemne othe that none of them was guilty of the murther: thereupon they ſhoulde offer a ſacrifice, to witneſſe that the land ſhoulde be as it were defiled if God puniſhed not ſo heynous an offence, thoughe the murtherer were not founde. And what ſhall then become of vs when our handes are imbrewed with bloode, and the murtherer is knowen, and we be full of cruelkie towardes our brethren? Thinke we to ſcape the hande of ỹ Iudge vnpuniſhed, when as he hath pronounced ſuch ſentence? Yea and euen when manſlaughter is committed in battels, although the ſame be permitted when the warres are Lawfull: Yet notwithſtanding the ſcripture telleth vs there is a kinde of defiling in it, to the end ỹ euen
1.Chro.22.8 when men are compelled to ſlaie their enemies in the maintenaunce of iuſt quarels, they ſhould conſider thus with themſelues: Alas, I muſt be faine to deface here the creatures that are ſhaped after the image of God: and thereupon be ſorie and loth to doe it. Nowe then let vs marke that aboue all thinges it is Gods will we ſhould liue quietely among our ſelues, without offering of any violence or outrage one to another. But truely, murthers are aboue all thinges moſt horrible in Gods ſight: and yet muſt we marke therewithall, that by that meanes all other outrages are forbidden. And that was the cauſe
Eſa.7.15. why the Prophete Eſay vpbraided the Iewes, with the blouddineſſe of their handes. It was not for that they had robbed by the highwayes ſides, or for that they had ſo beaten or ſtricken foolke, as they might haue beene indited for it before earthly Iudges, but it was for the pilferies and extorſions which they had committed ſecretely, and for their wrongfull conſuming of other mens ſubſtaunces. Although then that there bee no open murther committed nor any ſuch outrageous act done as may be condemned by ordinarie iuſtice: yet doeth not God accept that as ſufficient, except wee bee free from all rauin, and wrongdealing, and haue liued ſo vprightly among our neighbours, as we haue done nothing to them which wee woulde not haue done vnto our ſelues.

Moreouer we haue to note howe Saint Iohn 1.Ioh.3.15. in his Canonicall Epiſtle ſaith that he which hateth his neighbour in his heart, is a murtherer alreadie before God. Although this hatred of ours be not knowen, although wee ſhewe no outwarde token to the worldewarde that we be caried with deſire of reuẽge, although there appeare no ſuch thing as may diſcouer our malice vnto men: Yet are we guiltie of murder before God, if we haue any hartburning at all within vs. For euen that were a giuing of place vnto Satan, as Saint Paul telleth vs here where hee warneth vs that the ſunne ſhoulde not go downe Ep.4.26.27 vppon our anger. He ſaith that the partie which hath his heart ſo infected with hatred and rancor giueth Satan the poſſeſſion of him to reigne ouer him. That is the thing which wee haue to beare in mind.

I tolde you euen nowe, that the vſe of this ceremonie hath ceaſed euer ſince the comming of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. And therefore we ought to bee the more incouraged to ſerue GOD, ſith wee ſee that wee bee not reined in with ſo rough a bitte, nor held ſo ſhort as the Fathers of olde time were. Yee ſee howe at this day, GOD giueth vs leaue to eat the bloud of beaſtes, which thing was not graunted to the Iewes. Wee knowe what is tolde vs of it by the Apoſtles themſelues. For they made not a decree of it, as the Papiſtes vnderſtande it, neither chaunged they any thing in Gods word, (for that had beene high treaſon to God): but foraſmuch as they knewe that our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, had by his comming aboliſhed the Ceremoniall lawe: they ſhewed that it might bee lawful to eate bloude, ſo it were done without offence to others. For their forbidding of it in the fifteenth of the Actes, was but for a Act.15.20. time; and thereby they ſhewed that it was free 29. for euery man according to conſcience, to maintaine peace and concorde withall. In deed they counſelled men to abſteyne from it, howbeit that was but for a time (as I ſaid) vntil the faithfull were better ſetled in the doctrine of the Goſpell.

And nowe let vs applie this doctrine to our owne vſe. I haue told you alreadie, that firſt and foremoſt it behooueth vs alwayes to brydle ourſelues, aſſuring ourſelues that nothing is permitted vs which breedeth offence. And why? Becauſe God bindeth vs one to another. But yet for al ỹ, we haue our conſciences at liberty, ſo as wee knowe that the thinges are free to vs, which were not permitted to the fathers of olde time. Nowe then ought not this to moue vs the more to serue God, which sheweth himselfe so freehartted towardes vs? For if we were vnder the bondage of the Lawe; wee ought to abstaine from manslaughter, seeing that the bloude of beastes were forbidden vs, which at this day is permitted vnto vs. And therefore let vs beware wee abuse not such goodnesse of our God: but rather the more that hee graunteth vs, the more let euerie of vs bethinke him to holde himselfe in his obedience & subiection, that we play not the loose Colts as the prouerbe saith. That is the effect of the thinges which wee haue to note vppon this text.

Now as touching the Vowes and Oblations whereof Moses speaketh so much; let vs remember what hath bin saide heretofore; namely howe it is not Gods will that his people should eate and drinke, without hauing some recorde that all commeth of him. As for example, whereas at this day he giueth vs leaue to eate and drink, euerie man according to his abilitie; his meaning is that wee shoulde giue our neighbours part with vs, and shewe by our almosedeeds that wee doe homage vnto him with the things that he hath giuen vs, as belonging vnto him alone. There is not nowadayes the like order that was vnder the Lawe of Moses, concerning oblations, firstfruites, and Sacrifices: but Almosedeedes are the sacrifices that God liketh of, as Hebr.13.16 is shewed vnto vs, specially in the Epistle to the Hebrewes. And it is a doctrine that is verie rife in the holy scriptures. But there it is saide expresly, that wee must not forget the brotherly loue which wee ought to haue in succouring our neighbours that are distressed: for they bee the sacrifices which God requireth and alloweth. Sith it is so then, let vs marke well, that if a man haue wherewith to maintaine himselfe abundantly, hee must not exempt himselfe from doing seruice vnto God therewithall. And after what manner? Euerie man must streine himselfe to the vttermost of his power to succour and relecue such as haue scarcetie & want of worldly goods. Thus yee see howe the right vse which our Lorde appointeth to all his creatures, is to offer them vp vnto him, to shew that we holde all of him. That is the very meaning that was intended in all the first fruites of olde time. And although the Ceremonie continue not at this day; yet ought the truth thereof to reigne still among vs. Wherefore let vs learne to cherish our selues in such sort, as wee forget not other folks: and specially let vs beare in minde, that our vnthankfulnesse will defile all our good fare, if wee acknowledge not God to bee the giuer of all thinges vnto vs. Wee heare what our Lorde Iesus Christ saide to the hypocrites that tooke greate paines to make cleane their vesselles that there might bee no
Matt.23.23. 25.26. spotte in them. Make cleane the insides of them too, quoth hee. And afterwarde hee addeth, that the right way for men to make themselues cleane, is to giue to the poore, and not to busie themselues about a sort of pelting trifles as the worlde doeth continually, who thinke to dally with God, and woulde giue him rittlerattles to play with as if hee were a babe, but they cannot beguile him so. Therefore according to Iesus Christes exhortation, if wee meane that the meates which we take shoulde be sanctified vnto vs, let vs looke that God bee honoured by them, and let vs beare well in minde howe it is of his onely freegoodnesse that wee bee nourished by them. And forasmuch as wee can neither doe him good nor harme, neither hath hee neede of any thing: let vs shewe our good will towardes his poore seruauntes: For they bee his bailifes whome hee sendeth to vs, to receiue the fines and other dueties that wee owe him for all his benefites. Thus yee see in effect what wee haue to gather vppon that saying.

Nowe it is saide further, that if the people doe the thinges that are right and iust before God, they shalbee blessed, both they and their children. Hereby wee bee still warned, that if wee will direct our life aright, wee must not followe our owne good intents as they cal them, but hearken what God sayth vnto vs, and rest simplie vppon his will, as shalbe declared more at large to morrowe by Gods will. Neuertheless Moses warneth the people here as he doth in manie other places, ỹ they must not demeane themselues after their owne fancies, but in any wise giue eare vnto God. If thou doe that which is good and righteous saieth he; And in whose sight? In the sight of men? True it is that we ought to liue in such sort as wee giue no cause of offence to any bodie, so as if any speake euil of vs, they may haue their mouthes stopped. But yet must not men bee made iudges of their liues; that authoritie must bee reserued vnto GOD. And that is the cause why the scripture meaning to betoken an angelicall perfection, saieth that such a man hath walked before God. For if wee shoulde fashion our selues after the worlde, what a thing were it? Wee see howe the greatest multitude liue out of all order, and so shoulde wee make euill custome a Lawe. When whoredome, drunkennesse, outrage, violence, and blasphemie reigned; wee woulde beare our selues in hande that such thinges were permitted vs. And why? Because they be growen into custome.

Nowe therefore, if wee shoulde followe the guise of the worlde, wee should bee caried quite away. Againe, euen they that pretende to bee fullest of deuotion, may chaunce to vse some pelting trash and baggage in the seruing of God: they may happe to make a number of geugawes and rifferaffe: but all such thinges are nothing worth, they bee but flatte mockerie. So then, it behoueth vs to walke before God; & although wee see thinges vtterly out of order, and all brought to confusion, yet must wee holde the right way still which GOD sheweth vnto vs. If wee see men goe astray, and deuise neuer so many fonde deuotions, let vs leaue all such thinges, and be contented to follow Gods ordinance. Surely although the worlde like neuer ſo well of our doings, yet ſhall wee not faile to bee condemned: but if God allowe of vs, then haue wee a good warrant. As for example, becauſe that nowadayes wee vſe not the gewgawes of the Papiſts, we haue not any puppets here, wee haue no decking of altars, wee haue no tapers nor ſuch other ſtuffe: they laugh our plaine dealing to ſcorne, and they thinke there is no ſeruing of GOD among vs. But howſoeuer wee fare, wee haue heere a good recorde; which is, that wee doe the thinges that are good in the ſight of our God. And it is not for once onely that Moſes ſpeaketh heereof. Wee haue ſeene other textes heretofore tending to the ſame effect: but here this ſaying is ſet down twice within tenne lines: and it is no more than needeth, conſidering howe frowarde wee bee to doe the thinges which the worlde liketh, inſomuch that wee couet to bee ſoothed, and will needes alwayes iuſtifie our ſelues to the worldwarde. Moſes therefore bringeth backe to that point. No (ſaieth hee), be contented to doe whatſoeuer our Lorde inioyneth you. For if hee allowe of your doings, then is it perfite righteouſnes: and therfore hardily laugh all the world to ſcorne. So then, that is one point which we haue to beare in minde, when Moſes telleth vs that wee muſt doe that which is good before God.

And nowe to giue the people the better corage, hee addeth immediately a promiſe, ſaying: To the intent thou maiſt proſper, both thou and thy children for euer. Here firſt of al we ſee that which hath beene touched alreadie; that is to wit, that our Lorde prouoketh vs to ſerue him with the better courage, by profering vs reward. Truely hee is not bounde to vs in any caſe: inſomuch that when we ſhall haue ſerued him, yea though it bee a hundred thouſande times more than wee doe; yet are wee ſtill indetted to him neuertheleſſe: for wee be his. And wee muſt marke our Lorde Ieſus Chriſtes ſimilitude, howe that if a man haue a ſeruant that is as his ſlaue, when his ſeruaunt hath laboured all the day long, and commeth home at night, his maſter will not riſe vp to giue him his ſupper, but commaunde him to waite vppon him ſtill at his table. Nowe it is certaine that wee owe much more vnto God, than men owe one to another. Let vs ſtreyne our ſelues to the vttermoſt of our power, yea and aboue al our power, and yet ſhall wee not bee able to diſcharge our ſelues of the hundreth parte of our duetie towardes him, and what rewarde then can wee deſerue at his hande? Neuertheleſſe, of his owne freegoodneſſe it is ſaide that wee ſhall not loſe our labour in ſeruing him. So then let vs marke that Gods meaning is not to place any worthineſſe in our workes by promiſing vs rewarde: but onely to incourage vs the more to them. And indeede wee bee too ſlothfull, if the regarde therof moue vs not. Beholde, God might commaund me, and exact at my hande whatſoeuer he liſteth, for I am bounde to him in all caſes and all reſpects: and yet to the ende that no ſloth ſhoulde holde me backe, hee telleth me that if I ſerue him hee will proſper mee; and in his ſo doing there paſſeth as it were a couenant, whereby he bindeth himſelfe vnto vs. If this moue vs not, muſt it not needs bee that we bee more harde than ſtones? Yet notwithſtanding, wee ſee that the wretched world cannot be wunne by any meanes. When the promiſes are ſet before vs; that God will bleſſe vs, though wee bee minded to giue our ſelues to his ſeruice, yet do we not ceaſe to yeeld to all euill, and wee beare our ſelues in hande that wee ſhall benefite our ſelues greatly by prouoking his diſpleaſure. If wee ſpie any likelihood of gaine; wee runne gadding after it, and euery of vs is rauiſht in loue of it. And what commeth of it when we go about to inrich our ſelues after that faſhion by craft & wicked practiſes? When wee will needes attaine to ſome ambition or dignitie, what will bee the ende of it? Our Lorde will curſe it euerie whit. It ſeemeth then that we intende to proſper euen as it were in deſpite of God. And wee bee ſo caried away by our affections, and ſo driuen by the headineſſe of them, that God cannot holde vs backe, neither by bridles, nor by ropes, nor by cheynes. Loe here a greate miſchiefe, that although our Lorde allure vs neuer ſo ſweetely to him, & labour to win vs to him by promiſing vs rewarde: yet notwithſtanding we bee ſo full of miſchiefe, that to our ſeeming, all his promiſes are vaine & nothing worth; they moue vs not a whit. But as for the allurements of Sathan, they drawe vs to thē, inſomuch that we beare our ſelues in hand, that although God bee againſt vs and our enemie, yet wee ſhall not faile to proſper, ſo the worlde laugh vppon vs, and that there bee ſome likelihood of aduancement. Marke that for one point.

Furthermore, wee ſee that euen the wickedeſt faile not to ſtande in their owne conceites. As for example, wee ſee nowadayes that in the Popedome men make a ſhielde of theſe textes, to ſhewe that God is beholden to vs, that our workes are deſertfull, and that wee bee able to purchace Gods grace, yea and euen euerlaſting ſaluation; ſo as not onely God muſt needes proſper vs in this worlde, but alſo the heritage of the heauenly kingdome becommeth as a conqueſt vnto vs. The world (ſay I) beguileth it ſelfe in this behalfe. And who bee they that ſpeake ſo boldly of it? Euen the greateſt deſpiſers of God. As for example, ye ſhall ſee a ſort of theſe Frierly flatterers diſpute of deſertes with full mouth; and yet for all that, they bee men without God, without religion, wicked out of meaſure, and ſcorners of God. Alſo let vs take the greateſts pretenders of holineſſe among them, and wee ſhall finde them full of pride and ſtatelineſſe, full of malice and enuie againſt their neighbours, and burning with couetouſneſſe. They make a faire outwarde ſhewe of holineſſe, but inwardly, there is no ſoundneſſe at all. Their life bewrayeth that they bee ranke rebelles againſt God, and that they doe but turne the beſt ſide outward in al their deuotions: and yet in the meane while, all their talke is of Merites, Merites.

rites. And what manner of deſerts? Looke vppon their liues, and you ſhall ſee what they be. But firſt and formoſt, howe can our workes deſerue, but by Gods accepting of them of his owne free goodneſſe? For it ſtandeth vs in hand, not only that he bind himſelfe vnto vs, as he doth notwithſtanding that hee neede not except hee liſted; but alſo moreouer, that hee accept our works in good worth, forgiuing the faults & blemiſhes that are in them. For we cannot bring any one work vnto him which is not defiled with ſome imperfection, ſo as there is alwayes ſome fault to be found in it. Now then we ſhoulde bee found blameworthy in all our vertues if God liſted to examine them with rigour. And ſo what becommeth of the promiſes, which tell vs that our works are deſertfull? Nay, let vs marke that after our Lords binding of himſelfe ſo freely vnto vs, hee yeeldeth vs rewarde for the ſeruice that we haue offered vnto him, and then acceptеth our workes of his owne freegoodneſſe. As howe? By putting all the blots and blemiſhes of them out of his remembrance, ſo as hee imputeth them not any more. And that is the way for vs to proſper all kinde of waves, through his onely freegoodneſſe. But yet by the way let vs call to minde the matter that wee haue touched afore: namely that we be verie wretched, ſeeing our Lorde allureth vs to him ſo gently and with ſo great courtiſie, ſaying, Go to my childrē, I deſire nothing elſe but to maintaine you in proſperitie, doe you no more but followe mee: and yet notwithſtanding, after this choice of proſperitie offered vnto vs, wee forſake our GOD, and runne gadding after the vanities of this worlde, Sathan carieth vs away with his trumperies, and wee ſhut our eyes wittingly, and wilfully, as though all our ſeeking were to bee deceiued that wee might periſh: and yet for all this, wee ceaſe not to complaine when wee ſee the miſeries and aduerſities of this worlde light vpon vs. And in what a time are wee? Wee ſee nowadayes howe there is war on ỹ one ſide, and dearth on the other; all thinges are ſo farre out of order as it is pitie to beholde, and euery man mourneth, but no man hath an eye to the cauſe of the miſchiefe. For if wee thought vppon it, wee coulde not but perceiue Gods hande to be vppon vs, yea and that in ſuch wiſe, as it woulde make vs to bethinke vs after this manner: Alas, wee haue forſaken the fountaine of all welfare, and therefore it is good reaſon that wee ſhoulde nowe feele thirſt. For God is readie on his part to giue vs our fill, hee is not nigardly, his power is not diminiſhed, he hath the fulneſſe of all good thinges in him: and therefore if wee be deſtitute, of whom is it long? When a man runs gadding heere and there, and forſaketh a fountaine, and goeth on wandering into deſert places where hee is in daunger to die for thirſt, ſo as hee beareth out his tongue halfe a footelong, and findeth not a droppe of water to refreth himſelfe withall: is hee not worthie to die for thirſt, ſeeing he hath ſo forſaken the fountaine? So then let vs marke that God withdraweth his bleſſings from vs, becauſe wee haue forſaken him, and it is a iuſt rewarde whereof wee bee well worthie. And yet by the way wee be warned therewithall, to returne to our God: for his will is not that we ſhoulde pine in ſuch ſort, as he ſhould not bee ready to receiue vs againe. True it is that wee bee driuen to feele our harmes in good earneſt, that wee may bee moued with hartie deſire to returne vnto him: But yet notwithſtanding, for all his rough chaſtiſing of vs, and for all the long continuance of our miſerie, wee miſſe not to come into his fauour againe, and to be made partakers of his benefites, when we ceaſe to ſhrinke away from him, and be fully minded to put our ſelues againe vnder his obedience.

So then, let vs learne to put this doctrine of Moſeſes in vre, namely of doing that which is good and rightfull in the ſight of our God. And let vs marke howe it is not onely for a day or two that God ſaieth hee will bee merciſull and fauourable to his people: but that he will holde out to the ende, yea euen after the deceaſe of thoſe that ſhall haue ſerued him. And heerein wee haue a confirmation of our hope of the euerlaſting life. For if God holde on in doing vs good euen after our deceaſe, in the perſon of our children: it followeth that hee will not forget vs, but that when wee haue finiſhed our race in this worlde, we ſhalbe gathered vp vnto him, to inioy the benefites fully and perfectly, wherof hee hath giuen vs but a taſt by hope. Therefore muſt wee marke that point; and ſith we bee ſo naughtie and frowarde, that wee ceaſe not to go aſtray and to runne gadding here and there: let vs runne backe againe to him, and conſider that his vttering of his will vnto vs by worde of mouth, or his writing of it in paper or parchment, is not ynough for vs: but that hee muſt bee faine to write in it our hearts alſo. Seeing then that wee bee ſo frowarde as to ruſh out into naughtineſſe, and to turne aſide from the right way: let vs pray our good God to holde vs ſo in by his holy ſpirite, that although wee ſee things in horrible diſorder nowadayes, ſo as wee bee moued at the beholding of the preſent ſtate of the world: yet notwithſtāding we may not ceaſe to holde our ſelues ſtill vnder his hande, and gouernement: which thing if wee doe, ſurely wee may defie all that euer the vnbeleeuers doe practiſe againſt vs. For if they deſpiſe vs, if they ſhake vs off, if they abhorre vs: what for that? Yet are wee ſure that God hath not giuen vs his worde in vaine, but that if wee ſticke thereunto, wee may bee well apaide though men finde fault with vs, for wee ſhall bee acquit and iuſtified before GOD and his Angels, though the worlde haue condemned vs. Thus yee ſee howe wee may walke in ſuch certainetie and hope, that although wee ſee ſtumbling-blockes rounde about vs, yet ſhall wee neuer bee thruſt out of the right way, and therewithall wee ſhall bee well aſſured, that our Lorde will holde vs vnder his protection, ſo as when Satans vnderlinges haue wrought what they can, and the diuell himſelfe hath ſtreined all his force to the vttermoſt to ouerthrowe vs; yet not-withſtanding forasmuch as wee bee ſhrowded vnder the ſhadowe of our God, and haue his bleſſings printed in vs, wee neede not to feare but that hee will continue the ſame from day to day. And although wee ſee neuer ſo many changes and backturnings in this world: yet are wee ſure that we cannot light vpon our feete, ſo long as our Lorde bee our vpholder and ſtocke to leane vnto.

Nowe let vs fall downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to make vs ſo to feele them, as wee may bee led to true repentance, and not onely craue forgiueneſſe of the ſinnes which we haue committed, but alſo obtaine ſuch increaſe of his grace in vs henceforth, as he may bee glorified by our whole life, when hee hath brought vs backe againe to his holy Lawe. And ſo let vs all ſay, Almightie God, Heauenly father, &c.

On Thurſday the x. of October. 1555.

The Lxxxv. Sermon which is the ſixth vpon the twelfth Chapter.

29 When the Lorde thy God ſhal haue rooted out before thy face the nations which thou goeſt to poſſeſſe, ſo as thou haſt them in poſſeſſion and dwelleſt in their Lande:

30 Then beware thou be not ſnared by them, after that they be ouercome before thee. And enquire not after their gods, ſaying: Howe did theſe nations ſerue their gods? I wil doe ſo too.

31 Thou ſhalt not doe ſo to the Lorde thy God. For they haue done all ſuch things to their gods, as the Lorde abhorreth and hateth. For they haue burnt euen their ſonnes and daughters in fire to their gods.

32 Therefore whatſoeuer I commaund you, looke that yee doe it, and put not any thing to it, neither take any thing from it.

WHen we heare that Moſes warneth the Iewes that they turne not away from the right ſeruing of God after his ſetting of them in poſſeſſion of their inheritance: we may thinke they were a very malicious people, & right hard to be gouerned. For what is it that Moſes requireth of them? That they ſhould not forget the partie that had redeemed them, and afterward giuen them his lawe, but that they ſhoulde holde themſelues at a ſtay, and not defile themſelues with the ſupeſtitiuons of the heathen. And they had two thinges to hold them to the ſeruice of God. For they ought to haue borne in minde after what maner he had deliuered them from the bondage of Egypt: and did not ſuch a gracious goodneſſe well deſerue that they ſhoulde haue perſiſted continually in the acknowledging of their redeemer? Againe they had very faire lookingglaſſes ſet before them for example, in that they ſawe that Gods rooting out of the inhabiters of the Lande of Chanaan, was a token that hee coulde not away with any of all their abhominations: and ought not the Iewes to haue fared the better by their beholding of ſuch examples? But nowe that wee knowe the naughtineſſe of that people, let vs come to our ſelues and bee well aſſured that wee bee not better than they were, but haue neede of the warning that is giuen heere. And for prooſe hereof God doth dayly renew his gracious goodnes towards vs. Had we felt his goodneſſe but once in all our life, it ought to ſerue vs for a bridle to hold vs vnder his obedience. But he ceaſeth not to increaſe his benefites ſtill dayly, and yet wee forget it in the turning of a hand, and wee neuer think vpō it any more, to benefit our ſelues by it. To bee ſhorte, it ſeemeth that all our indeuour is to burie Gods benefites that hee beſtoweth vpon vs, that we might haue no occaſion to honor him. Lo how our vnthankfulnes bewraieth it ſelf too much on ỹ one ſide. Yet notwſtāding we ſee how God giueth vs ſufficient warnings, by chaſtiſing others ỹ haue doone amiſſe before our eyes, and by ſparing vs: and ought wee not to bethinke vs better of the iudgementes which hee executeth, after that faſhion? Yes: for they bee no thinges done in hudder mudder, there is no more for vs to do but to take heede to them. But it ſhould ſeeme that wee play the blinde buſſardes wilfully, and liſt not to knowe any of the thinges which are too too apparant and notorious. Therefore whether it bee that God do drawe vs to him by the great number of benefites which he beſtoweth vppon vs, or that hee teache vs to feare him by puniſhing offenders in our preſence; al this booteth vs not, for we be vnthankfull, and the time is but loſt in doing vs good, inſomuch that although though wee see howe hee hath shewed himselfe iudge against such as haue offended him, yet wee thinke not vppon it, but let it slippe. Can wee cast our eye any where nowadayes, but wee must needes see a great number of manifest examples, whereby wee ought to take warning to liue warely and aduisedly? Wee see howe whole Nations and Countries are not spared, and wee see the like in priuate persons: all is full of sighing and crying, and it is all one as if God should sounde a trumpet to the punishing of some offender, that euerie man might bee warned to take example by him. Wee see these thinges: but howe doe wee benefite our selues by them? Let vs not thinke then that in this place Moses speaketh but onely to the Iewes: but let vs vnderstand ỹ it was Gods will to shew vs by them, that euen after wee knowe him to be our father and Sauiour, and euen after hee hath powred out the infinite riches of his mercie vppon vs; Yet haue wee still neede to bee warned to liue in his feare: for otherwise wee will turne our backes vppon him. Againe, when hee hath warned vs by many examples; that is not ynough vnlesse hee quicken vs vp to set our minds vpon it, so as wee may perceiue wherein it was his will that we shoulde fare the better by it.

But there is yet another point; which is, that when wee bee so taught by other mens harmes, and by Gods bearing with vs in that hee listed not to punish our faultes: we shoulde atleastwise preuent his anger, and seeing there bee so manie that suffer, yea and which suffer to serue for our instruction, the same shoulde bee as a schooling vnto vs; that when wee see our Lorde vtter his rigour after that sort, and shewe himselfe to bee a Iudge; wee shoulde not tarie till hee smite vs on the heades, but come meekely vnto him, acknowledging our faultes, and taking good heede that wee wrappe not our selues in his curse with those against whom he hath shewed himselfe such an enemie and aduersarie. That is the thing which we haue to beare in minde.

And Moses saieth expresly, Beware thou fall not into the snares after them. As if hee shoulde say, If yee bee not starke blinde, yee must needes shunne these people and not followe their example, seeing that God hath punished them after that fashion. For if yee meddle with their corruptions, God can make you to fall into the same pitte wellynough. Yee see into what case they bee falne: and therefore take heede to your selues, or else it will be an open tempting of God, as though ye sought your owne destruction euen in despite of him. Neuertheless, wee see howe men playe the beastes in that behalfe. For when wee haue seene GOD correct a man for some offence, by and by wee faile not to prouoke his wrath in the selfesame sorte, that they did which were punished. Indeede wee haue witte ynough to condemne them that suffer the punishment; O it is good right say we, they haue well deserued it, they bee worthie of such correction. Wee can skil to talke after that fashion: but in the meane while, when wee plaied the Iudges towardes other men, wee cannot finde the fault in ourselues; and therefore must wee bee double condemned at Gods hande, becausе our hypocrisie blindeth vs, and wee looke not into our selues to correct our own misdoings.

Moses therefore speaketh heere expresly of the snares that the Cananites were falne into. As if hee shoulde say, whatsoeuer you see in any vnbeleeuers, is all one as if God warned you long aforehande, to beware that yee fall not into the like curse by following their steps; and therefore shunne them. For wee must vnderstande that as oft as our Lorde punisheth those that haue offended him, and wee knowe it, and hee will haue it so; it is all one as if hee shoulde make some signe to vs, or rather arrest vs with his owne hande and say, Take heede to your selues, proceede no further, goe not on still; for if yee doe, yee bee vndone, yee bee forlorne. Seeing that our Lorde giueth vs such warning, may it not bee saide that wee bee worse than madde if wee proceede on still? What excuse will there bee for vs, when God shal haue shewed vs the ditche and bidden vs beware that wee fall not into it, and yet we bee so wilful in wickednesse, that he cannot winne so much at our handes, as to make vs turne backe againe from it?

Moreouer wee see by this text, that it is but a simple shift to say, Other men doe so as well as I: and yet a greate number of sillie soules beguile themselues with it euen at this day. If a man warne the Papistes of their superstitions, to bring them to Gods trueth; O (say they) I am not alone, there be many others in the worlde. They beare themselues in hand that they may by and by dissappoint God, with the multitude of their partakers. But Moses telleth vs heere, that all shall bee tyed together in one bundle, and one of them shall not helpe to acquite another or to diminishe anothers fault, but that all of them shall bee rooted out together, according to this saying of our Lorde Iesus Christ, If the blinde leade the blinde, they shall both fall into the ditche. What shall I haue gained by it, when a great number of people shall haue perished with mee? Then let vs not thinke our faults the lighter for the greatenes of the number of them that offende with vs: but rather let vs marke on the contrarie parte, that there is not a worse thing than euill custome: and it is the thing that wee had neede to beware of as long as wee liue in this worlde. For wee see verie fewe of that sort of men which guide vs the right way; but on the contrarie part the multitude is infinite of those that thrust vs out of the way: so as if wee leane vnto men, wee shall scarsely finde one among a hundred, which walketh aright, but all of them doe go astray. Also when the Prophet Esaie speaketh of the disorders that reigned euerie where, hee saieth no more but that euerie man had turned aside after his owne wayes. Whereby hee doeth vs to vnderſtande that we neede not to be beguiled by others, for euerie of vs beguileth himſelfe too much. Therefore when men followe their owne imaginations, then are they quite and cleane out of the way of ſaluation. And ſith it is ſo that we ſhal finde verie few that can amend vs, and all the reſt doe but draw vnto euill: what ſhall become of vs if we grounde our ſelues vpon cuſtome? If wee ſay, O, there be thus many and thus many that take this or that to be good: yea, but God miſliketh it, and it makes no matter what men doe, for wee ſee they bee all giuen to naughtineſſe, and are corrupted in their vnderſtanding. Againe, their hearts are ful of malice, ſo as they dragge cleane backe from that which God hath ſhewed them. And if wee alledge, It is not nowalate that this thing came vp, it hath beene vſed of cuſtome in all ages long agoe: verily it is all one as if wee ſhoulde ſay, the worlde is hardened in naughtineſſe. But yet hath it not gotten ſo ſure holde that it can diſplace God from being Iudge, that he ſhoulde not condemne them as they deſerue. And therfore let vs marke wel howe it is ſhewed vs here, that if we followe the ſteppes of ſuch as haue gone aſtray; when God hath puniſhed them, wee alſo muſt come to account after them. Yea and wee deſerue double puniſhment, when wee fare not the better by the corrections that God hath ſhewed vnto vs: for it is all one as if we reſiſted him wilfully. The matter in effect which wee haue to gather vppon this ſaying where Moſes ſpeaketh of the ſnares that are laide for vs, is; that when our Lorde hath once warned vs, and we haue ſeene the verie examples themſelues before our eyes; we ſhould ſet our minds vpon them, that wee intangled not our ſelues in the curſe that is prepared for the deſpiſers of Gods word.

And it is ſaide further, that men ſhoulde not inquire after their gods. Heereby hee doeth vs to vnderſtande, that men are oftentimes turned away from well doing, by their fooliſh curioſitie. For when wee bee once inſtructed in the pure ſimplicitie of Gods worde, if wee holde our mindes impriſoned, that is to ſay, if wee holde our ſelues contented with Gods trueth; then are wee ſure that our Lorde will confirme vs more and more, ſo as though all the worlde were on a broyle, yet ſhoulde wee bee knitte ſtill in good agreement of faith. But our wittes are ſo fickle, that they bee alwayes rouing: wee cannot holde our ſelues from inquiring of this and that: not for any benefite that wee reape by it, for wee wote not what is the reaſon thereof: but yet our deſirouſneſſe ſo tickleth vs, and ſo prouoketh vs, that wee cannot holde our ſelues in quiet to ſay, let vs obey our God. Therefore Moſes meant plainely to condemne the vice that reigneth ouermuch in men, and is too deepe rooted in their nature: which is, that in ſteede of ſoberneſſe to holde our ſelues in ſimple obedience to Gods worde; wee bee continually turmoyled with vaine fancies, and all our ſeeking is who did this and who did that, that wee might bee cunning in iudging thereof. As for example, wee ſee a great ſort that woulde faine knowe al the Religions of the worlde. And to what ende? It ſeemeth to them that they bee not ſure of the Chriſtian faith, vnleſſe they knowe Machomets Alcoran; and al the diueliſhneſſe that hath reigned among the Paynims and Papiſtes; and haue their heads full ſtuffed and beſotted with all the dotages of the Iewes. Thus doe they play the beaſtes through their wicked curioſitie, and it appeareth well that there hath beene nothing in them but vtter vanitie and hypocriſie. Wherfore according to that which Moſes hath declared heere, let vs learne not to be too inquiſitiue of the thinges that are not good for vs. Wee ſee that euen in reading Gods worde, wee muſt vſe this modeſtie of forbearing to ſeeke thinges needeleſſe which ſerue not to edifying: & what will come of it if wee diſguiſe Gods worde, by ripping vp the thinges which cannot but infect our mindes, and corrupt them, and turne them from the pure trueth? True it is that ſuch as are to make warres are faine to be inquiſitiue of the force and policy of their enemies, that they may beware of them: but when wee be ſo eager, that without any occaſion or neede, wee will needes knowe that which doeth not touch vs nor concerne vs; is it not a tempting of God? is it not a caſting of our ſelues into the ſnares which wee ſee that Sathan hath laide for vs? Therefore when men haue beene taught the Goſpell purely, let them abide quietly therein, let them bee contented with this, that they are approued of God; who cannot deceiue them, and let them refuſe all manner of trumperies, which can ſerue to no purpoſe but to intangle them in trifling diſputations without profite, or without any furtherance to their faith. Wee ſee what hath happened to ſome, I meane of theſe wildheaded fellowes that woulde needs be inquiſitiue of all thinges, and there was not any ſect or opinion, but they woulde needs know it and haue skil to diſpute of it. Verie well: but what wonne they by ſo doing? God gaue them vp, ſo as they were deſtitute of vnderſtanding, and there was leſſe wit and diſcretion in them than in little childrē. Where things were in quiet they would needes ſet all on a broyle, yea euen without any rime or reaſon, ſo as they ſawe not a whit euen in the thinges that were ſo viſible and apparant, that they might haue picked out their eyes with thē. Seeing then that GOD doeth ſo puniſh theſe troubleſome heades that ceaſe not to martyr themſelues in their owne vnquietneſſe, and cannot bee ſatisfied but that they muſt needes bee inquiſitiue of the thinges that are not for their profite: wee ought to bee the more mindefull of Sainct Paules leſſon, which is that wee muſt not bee ouer wiſe, but wiſe according to ſobrietie. Let vs bethinke vs of our ſlenderneſſe, howe rude and groſſe witted wee bee, and let it ſuffice vs that GOD can well skill to teach vs, if wee take him for our maſter and teacher. And ſeeing we haue his worde, let euerie of vs keepe himſelfe within the boundes thereof, and not play play the colts that are broken loose.

Nowe after that Moses hath spoken after ỹ maner, he saith Thou shalt not do to the Lord thy God, as these nations heere haue doone to their gods. As if he shoulde say, we must not looke vpon men, when we intend to serue God aright; but Gods only will must bee our rule, as he wil adde for a conclusion in the end. Let vs marke well then that there is not a worse thing, than to fashion our selues after the customes of men in cases that concerne the seruing of God. For that hath bin ỹ very cause of so manie minglemangles and of so great confusion of all things in Christian religion. A man needeth but a litle Leuen to sowre a whole batch of dowe. But there hath bin so much Leuen brought in, that it hath marred all the righteousnesse whereunto GOD calleth those that are his. For as I haue declared heretofore, men haue thought it good that in steede of the fashions that were vsed by the heathen, there should bee some such fashions brought in as had some resemblance of them.

As for example, the heathen worshipped such an idol, or helde such a high feast on such a day: and therefore must wee also appoint a feast to some Saint vpon the same day. Yea, but that was but a changing of the name of the idol: and the neerer they came vnto it, or tooke couert vnder it, the more did they falsely abuse God his name and defile it. Thus made they an exchange of the ydols of the heathen, and in their steeds tooke vp Heesaints and Sheesaints and made ydols of them. Nowe seeing that this manner of dealing hath bin the cause of the peruerting of all things; it standeth vs the more in hand to take heede to the things that Moses telleth vs here, to witt, that God requireth not that we should do as the wretched and ignorant infidels doe to their Idols: but that if wee will walke rightly wee must keepe vs from counterfeiting the thinges that wee may happen to see euery where. True it is that forasmuch as wee bee fleshly, wee will thinke the thinges that are done by men to bee very godly: but what shall wee gaine in this case, by bringing our owne weightes and balances? For God will haue vs to hearken vnto him; and shall not wee then make a faire bargaine, to say I weene I doe well? All such stuffe is nothing woorth, it must bee striken off, euerywhit. That is the cause why Moses in this text expressly presupposeth that God wil not haue the thinges done to him which the wretched infidels did to their idols.

And yet to perswade vs the better in all these things, he addeth that they had done such thinges as God abhorred, as namely the burning of their children in fyre. Here vnder one kind, Moses sheweth that the wretched Paynims rushed out into so beastly dealings, as woulde make a man to abhorre their crueltie to thinke vppon it. For how is it possible that they should bee so destitute of all reason, as to forget euen naturall kindenesse, when they meant to serue their Gods? What a thing was it, that they should goe burne their owne children? Beholde, the fathers which ought to haue considered, that when God had giuen them children, it was a singular blessing, forasmuch as hee had ordeined them to bee in his owne stead, to the end there should alwayes bee some seede in the worlde to honor him and serue him: euen the fathers themselues (I say) did cast their owne children into the fire, and became murtherers of them. Whereby wee see that idolaters may well bee caryed away with some deuotion; but the same is but as a fury, they bee out of their wittes, and the diuell doth so possesse them, that they haue neither wit nor discretion any more. And shal wee allowe of such doinges? Wee see then whereat Moses amed in declaring here that the wretched Paynims burned their owne children, by meanes whereof they became starke diuels, and there was not a more horrible thing than was their deuotion, though they commended it neuer so much. If it bee obiected that GOD commaunded Abraham to doe the lyke; wee see the ende thereof. True it is that GOD meant so farre foorth to try Abrahams fayth, by commaunding him to kill his owne sonne: but that was a singular example for a speciall purpose, and not a common rule. On the other side, GOD prouided for it, and shewed that hee desired not to haue mans bloud sacrificed vnto him: for hee preserued Abraham from dooing it when it came to the point. Therefore there is greate diuersitie betweene the obedience that Abraham yeelded to God in going about to sacrifice his sonne Isaak: and the madnesse of these blinde wretches in purposing to honor their idols by murthering their owne children. Gen. 22. 2. 12.

Hereby let vs learne generally to marke well, that whensoeuer wee see the wetched vnbeleeuers rushe out into disorder lyke brute beasts, we must learne to haue the more stay of our selues that wee followe them not. As for example; whereas it is sayd nowadayes in generall, that wee must not followe the steppes of the Papistes, because that all the thinges which they learne by the name of Gods seruice, are but a heape of vaine fancies, such as euery man listed to forge of his owne brayne, and a horrible hotchpotch of thinges confounded together, for the dooing whereof they haue not so much as one syllable in Gods woorde to allowe it, and yet they martyr themselues exceedingly in the doing of them: besides this, they become so brutish, as wee ought to be euen ashamed of them. For proofe whereof, what a thing is it that they should goe kneele downe before puppets, as though GOD were present there? They say they worship not the images; but men see what reuerence they yeeld vnto them, and it is the first lesson that is taught in their Synagogues. And surely what excuse soeuer they make, when they kneele downe before the image of S. Barbe which neuer was, (for yee must vnderstand that men haue made a God of such a creature as neuer was in the world) or when they goe to S. Catherin, or Saint Christo-

Christopher which are things of the same stamp and say nine Paternosters and an Auemarie to them: to whome speake they? Is it not a flatte mocking of God, or rather a villanous blaspheming of him? The heathen therefore had much more than the Papistes, wherewith to colour their abhominations when they did thinges so farre out of square as was pitie to see, and yet thought they pleased God in so doing. When they drinke til they be drunken vppon the holyday, they thinke that God is content therewith. Againe, when they be well apparelled, they suppose it is a good seruice of God. To bee short, they haue such fond toyes and gewgawes, as are woorthie to bee spit at as often as a man heares them spoken of. And whosoeuer hath but one drop of good vnderstanding may perceiue the fondnesse that is in them. Insomuch that when wee consider the matter, wee thinke it vnpossible that men should bee so brutishe as wee see they haue bin. But it is Gods owne dooing, who executeth this threat, made by the prophets, that hee woulde powre out the spirit of giddinesse and blockishnesse vppon the world, to blinde it withall, because that such as haue forsaken the pure doctrine of God, and turned away from the holy scripture, are worthie to be so caryed away, to the committing of such vnreasonable thinges as we ought to bee ashamed of and vtterly to abhorre. And this is tolde vs to teach vs to shun their companie, and euen that is the meaning of Moses when he sayth, Marke what is befallen vnto them. Now then, let vs beware that God punish vs not after ỹ same maner, by giuing vs ouer to a reprobate sense. Wherefore let vs receiue the light of his worde, and followe the way while hee sheweth vs it, suffering our selues to be held altogether in obedience vnder him. For step we once aside one way or other, in deede wee shall not at the first dash fall into so great confusion as wee see the idolaters are, but in the ende wee shall bee payed home to our smart. For how became they so brutish? Had they neither wit nor reason? yes: but God punisheth them because they submitted not themselues to his word. Let vs therefore stand in feare of the lyke condemnation: for it is certeine that the lyke shall fall vppon vs, if wee followe their steppes. And wee heare how Saint Paul speaking generally of all such as list not to obey Gods will, sayth that they must needes haue their eyes stopped, so as they may not bee able to discerne any more, but bee trayned in all thinges to other mens lures. And this threate pointeth at vs. And therefore let vs keepe good watch, and bee wel ware that we set not one foote foreward, without the direction of Gods worde; for there is not any other way that is certeine.

Esa.29.14.& 29.10.

Now let vs come to the conclusion that Moses addeth. Looke thou doe all that I commaunde thee this daye, without adding any thing to it or taking any thing from it. Heere hee sheweth vs the remedie to preserue vs from all stumbling, and from all the wiles of Satan and al his snares, and from all occasions that are ministred to thrust vs out of the way of saluation: and that is, to bee contented with the rule that GOD giueth vs, and to followe the same, and to bee so pliable to it, as wee alwayes haue our eares stopped against all other sayinges whatsoeuer, reiecting all thinges else, that none but onely GOD may haue dominion ouer vs. And so let vs marke well, that wee shall neuer haue the witte to keepe our selues from superstition, and from Satans sleightes; except our Lord remedie the matter by his word. True it is that wee ought to giue good eare to the counsell that is giuen vs, and not to followe the follies and errors of the world, nor intangle our selues in such a sorte of fond toyes; but to bee shorte, to eschewe all the foolishe deuotions that men haue deuised of their owne heades; wee ought well to marke that. But yet is not that enough. For there is none of vs all which hath not a storehouse of many errors in his own head, in so much ỹ euery of vs is a prouocation to himselfe although we be not furthered by others. What remedy then? There is none other way, but to suffer our selues to be gouerned by God. And that is the cause why Moses, after all his exhortations, telleth vs that if wee followe not Gods worde, wee shall euer bee intangled in many wicked imaginations, whereby the diuell will finde a gappe open, or as it were a breache to win vs by. Therefore if wee purpose to put Satan backe, and to bee preserued from all vncleanesse of superstition: let Gods word haue his authoritie among vs.

And first of all Moses sayth; Doe whatsoeuer is commaunded thee. Whereby hee meaneth (as I haue declared in other places) that it is not enough for vs to obey GOD by halfes (for he can away with no such partnership:) but that wee must submt our selues to his commaundementes in all cases and all respectes, without any gainsaying. And that is a thing very worthie to bee noted. For most men can well enough finde in their heartes to confesse that it is good reason that GOD should bee serued, yea euen according to his owne wil as he himselfe requireth: but yet they cease not to take exceptions still, and to say, This lykes mee not, such a thing woulde doe better. To bee shorte, for all their pretence of obeying GOD, and although that in many respectes they yeelde to the thinges that are spoken to them; Yet doe they beare themselues in hand, that they may let the rest alone. But contrariwise, GOD admitteth not any exception, but sayth that whatsoeuer hee commaundeth, must be done; and that wee must not enter into disputation with him, to make him amendes in one thing for missing in another; but that his Lawe must bee obserued, yea euen according to the contentes and substaunce thereof. For if I should receiue some couenant or some publike instrument or writing made vppon it, and yet say, as for this poynt or that article, I will not admit it: what a thing were it? It were to disanul ỹ whole. So thē let vs marke, that to honor God and to yeelde him him obedience, his worde muſt beare the whole ſway, ſo as wee ſubmit our ſelues wholy vnto it. Marke that for one point.

Againe whereas Moſes ſayth This day; it is a ſummoning of the people to follow without delay when God calleth them. For is it a ſmall matter that God communicateth himſelfe ſo familiarly vnto vs? Then is it not for vs to require ſpace to deliberate: but as ſoone as God openeth his mouth, by and by wee muſt giue eare to him, and bee conformable to his worde out of hand without delay, by ſubmitting our ſelues thereunto. And not onely this place ſerueth to warne vs how forward wee ought to bee to followe his Lawe: but alſo wee heare how it is ſayd in the Pſalme, To day if you heare his voyce: ſo that our Lord generally meaneth that as ſoone as men heare him ſpeake, they ſhould by and by followe his ſaying, and faſhion themſelues thereafter. And the Apoſtle in the third Chapter of the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes, ſheweth vs what is meant by this worde To day: Namely the very ſame times wherein our Lord is ſo gracious as to ſend vs his worde, whatſoeuer theſe times bee. Therefore let vs not delay till to morrowe, for it were too great a mockerie: and it may bee that the gate ſhall be ſhut againſt vs. Seeing then that God ſpeaketh vnto vs to day, let vs giue eare vnto him readily and without any delay. That is the thing which wee haue to beare in minde. And therefore when we come to a Sermon, or reade the holy ſcripture by our ſelues, as ſoone as wee haue heard a ſentence, let vs enter into our owne conſciences: and if wee finde any ſloth there, let vs waken and quicken vp our ſelues, and thinke thus: what? It is no dalying with god in this caſe, it is not for vs to defer to come vnto him when hee calleth vs, but wee muſt anſwere him with ſuch readyneſſe, as the thing that is commaunded vs here by Moſes may bee performed, ſo as wee burie not Gods word, ne ſuffer it to hang in the hooke; but receiue it into our heartes at the firſt, that it may take good roote there, and bring forth fruite. Thus yee ſee what wee haue to marke vppon this worde This day, or To day.

Hebr. 3.13. & 4.7.

Now let vs proceede to that which Moſes addeth. Without adding aught to it, (ſayth hee) or without taking aught from it. And this is an excellent text to ſhewe vs how mens lyues may be well ordered. I haue tolde you before, that it is a good tryall of our ſubiection vnto God, when wee receiue his worde, and that his commaundements beare ſuch ſway with vs, as wee bowe downe our neckes to receiue the yoke that he layeth vppon them. But that were not ſufficient, vnleſſe wee had that which Moſes addeth here, which is, that it is not lawfull for vs to adde any whit to ỹ thinges ỹ God commaundeth, nor to take any whit from them, as the Papiſtes doe in theſe dayes, who beare thẽſelues in hand that they cannot doe amiſſe in mingling their owne follies with Gods word. And why ſo? For wee doe as GOD commaundeth vs, ſay they. Wee deny not but that wee ought to keepe God Lawes; but what harme is it for vs to doe more? If we vſe ſome deuotion of ouerplus, will not God take it in good worth? If I doe more than I am bounde to doe, why ſhould not God accept it in good part? I may well doe whatſoeuer hee appointeth: yea, & I will adde ſomewhat more to ſerue him withall. When the Papiſtes get ſuch a ſhrowding ſheet, they beare thẽſelues in hande that all their matters goe very well, but in the meane while they conſider not ỹ God will haue none to be counted wiſe but himſelfe, nor none to haue the authoritie to bee our Lawegiuer but himſelfe. The Papiſtes then doe blaſpheme GOD two wayes: firſt in taking vppon them to bee holyer than hee would haue them to bee. For when wee deuiſe meanes of our owne head to pleaſe God withall after that faſhion; it is all one as if hee had not bin well aduiſed in the matter. Behold God ſayth that all our wiſedome muſt conſiſt in hearkening vnto him. Wee haue ſeene it in the fourth chapter & alſo in ỹ tenth, where it is ſayd, O Iſraell, what is it that thy God commaundeth thee but only to ſticke to him, & to be wholy his. Hereby wee ſee how it was Gods intent to compriſe ỹ ſumme of al holyneſſe and righteouſneſſe in his Lawe, ſo as it is a full perfection whereunto nothing can bee added. Neuertheleſſe men thinke and ſuppoſe that they themſelues can doe yet much better. And what is that to ſay? Is it not a blaming of God, as who ſhould ſay hee had forgotten himſelfe, and foreſawe not all thinges? Verily that is a curſed and diueliſh blaſphemie. Therefore, let not the Papiſtes boaſt of their ſeruing of God: for the diuell is their founder, and God diſauoweth all that euer they doe. For hee may alwayes reply againſt thẽ and ſay, Who required theſe things at your handes? And not without cauſe: for their ſo doing is all one as if they charged God with enuy towardes men, as who would ſay he had not faithfully taught them all thinges that were for their behoofe to doe. And I pray you is that blaſphemie tollerable?

Deut. 4.6, & 10.12.

But there is yet another point which I glanced at. For thoſe two may bee put both into one. The other point then is, that they vtterly deface the ſouereigne dominion that God hath ouer vs. For thus doe they alledge: Very well, God hath ordeyned by his lawe, that we ſhould keepe his commaundementes, Statutes and Ordinances: but yet is it not amiſſe to adde moreouer what I my ſelfe would haue done. But if a priuate perſon ſhoulde fall to mingling of the inuentions of his owne braine, with the ſtatutes that are ſet foorth by publike authoritie, ſhoulde he not trouble the whole order of the Common weale? And as for ſuch as took part w̃ him, ſhold they not ſhewe thẽſelues to bee rebels to their ſuperiors? Now our Lord ſaith by his prophet Eſay ỹ he himſelfe wilbe knowen to be our onely lawgiuer. That is a title which he chalendgeth to himſelfe. Seeing then that God will bee our onely Lawmaker, what ſhal we ſay when men doe thruſt themſelues into his place? Is it not more than to confounde heauen and earth together? And ſurely Saint Iames expreſſeth

Iam 4.4.12 expresseth yet better the same thing that was sayd by the Prophet Esay. For he sayth that there is but onely one Lawegiuer which is able to saue and condemne. When men are set vp in state and authoritie of making Lawes to gouerne our soules by, I meane as touching the spiritual gouernenment; (for wee treate not here of ciuill Lawes, but of the seruing of God;) when men (I say) are so highly exalted or take so highly vppon them: it is all one as if they bereaued God of the title of Sauiour and Iudge. For if hee be not the onely Lawemaker, Saint Iames concludeth that he is not the onely Iudge, nor the partie that hath power alone to condemne vs or to saue vs. And what a presumption is it that the creature should proceede so farre, as to father our saluation vppon wretched carkesses and earthwoormes, which is to be fathered alonely vppon God? So then let vs marke well, that whereas Moses hath tolde vs heere that it is not Lawefull for vs to adde any whit to the thinges that God commaundeth in his Lawe: thereby hee condemneth all the deuotions that euer were inuented by the world. It will seeme strange why God hath so streitly forbidden men to adde any thing to his Lawe: but ought not the reasons to suffice which I will aleadge? Verily the world condemneth it selfe by his owne mouth. Hath this prouerb bin inuented in our time? Hath it not bin euer a common saying among the Papists to say, Thou art the deuils seruant, for thou doest more than thou art bidden? This manner of speech hath bin vsed a hundred yere before we were borne: It hath bin a common byword. And what haue the Papists done? They haue let the commaundementes of God alone, to runne gadding after their owne inuentions, and gewgawes: And yet neuertheless they say dayly still, Thou art the deuils seruaunt. If a Master bee angrie with his seruaunt for leauing the thing vndoone which he had commaunded him; to do the thing which he had conceiued in his owne imagination, and he thinketh to content his Maister in saying: I haue done better than you were aware of: thou art the diuels seruant (wil his Master say) for thou hast done more than was commaunded thee. And I pray thee, what art thou? Thou doest the lyke to God. For thou wilt needes serue him after thine owne fashion, without regard what he hath commaunded thee. And therefore let vs beare in minde, that forasmuch as GOD is robbed of his honor, and the creatures set themselues in his iudgement seate, when they take vppon them to make Lawes for the stablishing of a spiritual gouernment: God declareth that he
Esa. 29.14. wil take horrible vengeance of it, & deale terribly with them. And why so? Euen because they haue serued him after the commaundementes of men, and not held themselues to his single worde, and therefore hee will blind the wisest of them, so as they shall be destitute of all reason, and become so brutish that they shal not be able to discerne any thing at all. Is not this enough to make the hayre stand vp vppon our head? What is to bee done then? Let vs followe this saying: That obedience is better than sacrifice. 1.Sa.15.22.
Loe here a sentence that needeth no glose. The Papistes shew themselues to be farre past shame in these dayes, in that they will needes maintaine the tyrannie of that idoll, and still continue in their wilfulnesse of folowing their owne fond deuotions, which haue not any foundation in Gods word. Behold, our Lord requireth but obedience, that is to say that men shoulde submit themselues to his trueth, and be contented with that which he commaundeth. And the declaration hereof is deliuered vs here by Moses in two wordes; that is to wit, that they shoulde neither ad nor diminish aught at all in Gods worde; but that when God speaketh, they should receiue his sayinges with quiet obedience, saying: Yea Lord, all this is iust and rightfull, there is not any thing to bee gainsayed in any one poynt. Againe, thou Lord hast set vs boundes within the which it behoueth vs to holde our selues and not presume to say, this is good, or I will doe this more than is commaunded me. No, but wee must assure our selues that our true wisedome and perfect soundnesse, is to submit our selues meekely to thy word. If wee haue that, let vs not doubt but that God alloweth our whole lyfe. And if wee swarue neuer so little from it; wee shall not onely bee vterly mislyked of him, but also prouoke his vengeance against vs.

But now let vs kneele down in the presence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs to perceiue the better, so as it may bring vs to a true and liuely repentance. And because wee bee so much inclined to followe our owne inuentions, it may please him not to suffer such hardnesse of heart in vs, as may make vs to turne away from his commandemẽts, but rather that euery one may submit our selues to his word, and frame our selues wholy thereafter, that being voyde of all ouerweening of our owne wit and discretion, we may suffer our selues to bee guided & gouerned by his hand: and specially that when he sendeth vs preachers to shew vs his wil, hee vouchsafe vs such grace, as wee may submit our selues thereunto, so as wee may not onely receiue his word when it is preached by the voyce of men, but also haue it written in our heartes by his holy Ghoste. That it may please him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs but also to all people and nations of the earth. &c.

On

On Fryday the xj. of October. 1555.

The Lxxxvi. Sermon which is the firſt vpon the thirteenth Chapter.

IF there riſe vp among you a Prophet that is a dreamer of dreames, which giueth the ſigne or a myracle;

2 And the ſigne or myracle which hee hath tolde thee, commeth to paſſe: and he ſay vnto thee, let vs walke after other Gods which you haue not knowen, and let vs ſerue them:

3 Thou ſhalt not hearken to the words of that Prophet, or dreamer of dreames; For the Lord your God trieth you, to weete if you loue the Lorde your God with all your heart and with all your ſoule.

HEERE godſheweth what ſteadfaſtneſſe of faith ought to bee in thoſe yhaue bin taught by his word namely eué ſuch as may bee able to withſtād all the lyes and ſleightes of Satan, ſo as they bee not hindered by any falſe doctrines or errors; but may continue alwayes in the trueth. For if wee receiued his worde when it is preached vnto vs, and yet it had no hold in vs: but that wee ſhould turne aſide from that which we had learned as ſoone as we perceiued any thing to the contrary: what a thing were it? It is ſayd that faith muſt be the victorie whereby to ouercome the whole worlde: for ſo doth Saint Iohn ſpeake thereof in his firſt Epiſtle. And if wee yeelde to euery winde, ſo as euery blaſte of vntrueth is enough to withdrawe vs from GOD: our faith will ſoone bee ouercome; and where is then our victorie? Therefore let vs marke that when GOD graunteth vs the grace to bee taught by his worde; it is not onely to the end wee ſhoulde learne the thinges that are ſpoken, and beare them in minde for a while; but alſo to the ende wee ſhoulde ſtaye vppon them, and bee ſo grounded vppon them, that if all the troubles of the worlde ſhoulde riſe vp againſt vs, wee ſhoulde ſtill holde our owne, and continue ſtedfaſt and inuincible. If this were ſayd to the people of olde time, which had not ſo large inſtruction by a greate deale as wee haue: much more dooth it belong to vs nowadayes. God gaue the Iewes ſufficient inſtruction, ſo farre foorth as was requiſite for their welfare. That is true: but yet did he teach them vnder ſhadowes and figures, which maner of teaching was darkeſome in compariſon of that which we haue nowadayes. For in the Goſpell wee haue the ſunne of righteouſneſſe ſhining as it were at nooneday. So then, Gods worde muſt ſerue vs, not onely to ſhewe vs the right way, but alſo to inable vs to withſtand all the temptations of Satan and his vpholders. We muſt (ſay I) be ſo armed, as we may fight and put backe all errors and falſehood, ſo as after we haue once knowen God, we may ſtick to him ſtedfaſtly to the vttermoſt. And that is the cauſe why Saint Paul treating of the vſe of the Goſpell, ſayth that we muſt not be lyke little babes which are drawen too and fro, ſo as we ſhould no ſooner ſee any trifling toye to beguile vs, but we ſhould by and by be gadding after it: and what a thing were that? But we muſt (ſayth he) be ſo ſetled in the fayth, that if there come any couſiners that goe about to leade vs by craft, and to deceiue vs, wee may bee fenced againſt them, and not bee ſhaken by them ouerſoone. True it is that we muſt needes haue a begetting in our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, and that at the firſt our faith may be ſo weake, that we ſhall be lyke little babes: But we muſt growe ſtill, and dayly gather new ſtrength, vntil we come to mans eſtate that we be perfect to meete with our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Thus yee ſee what force the doctrine of trueth ought to haue, when it is taught vs. That is to wit, we muſt not onely count it good in conſenting to it; but alſo be ſo well aſſured of it, that the diuell, doe what he can, may not be able to remoue vs, by reaſon of the certeintie which wee haue, whereby wee bee inabled to beate backe whatſoeuer ſhall beeſet againſt vs. And doubtleſſe wee ſee by the example of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, that ſuch as haue bin faithfully taught, may well repulſe all the wiles of Satan. For when Ieſus Chriſt was tempted, wherewith armed he himſelfe but with the holy Scripture? Wee ſee that if there riſe vp neuer ſo many falſe Prophets among vs, yet if wee be throughly well grounded in faith, & ſetled in it as we ought to be: we ſhal cōtinue ſtedfaſt, & the diuell ſhall win nothing at our handes. True it is that now & then we ſhal find ſome impedimēts; (for Gods ſeruauntes ſhall bee ſure of trouble, that ſerueth to humble thē:) but yet whatſoeuer

it be, their faith is alwayes the better prooued by errors, hereſies, & ſuch other lyke thinges, whereby our Lord ſheweth that we haue profited well in his ſchoole, & that wee can neuer be led away vnto wickednesse, whatſoeuer betideth. Also we heare what Saint Paul ſayth, when hee armeth vs againſt all ſpirituall battels that may befall vs: hee giueth vs the ſword of Gods word, hee deliuereth vs the Shield of faith, and hee giueth vs the helmette of hope. And thereupon hee inferreth, that wee ſhall not onely be inabled to withſtand all the aſſaultes that Satan can make vppon vs, but alſo bee defended from his fiery dartes when there is no lykelyhoode for vs to eſcape from his ſubtleties. Now therefore, whenſoeuer the Goſpell is preached vnto vs, or that wee reade the holy ſcripture, let vs learne not onely to receiue the thinges as true which are told vs out of the mouth of God, but alſo to bee ſo fully reſolued of them in our ſelues, as we may not be trayned vnto wickednesse nor turned aſide from the right way when the diuell ſtirreth vp any hereſies. And ſo ye ſee what is told vs in this text. For our Lord thinkes it not enough that the faithfull ſhould ſerue him and hold them to his trueth when they bee in quiet & without temptation; but alſo hee will haue them to yeeld ſuch truſt vnto his worde, that if the diuell fall to ſowing of his darnell to marre al, and wicked men riſe vp to deface the truth by al the meanes they can, and to turne it into lyes: ſuch as haue learned what the true religion meaneth, ſhould not change nor be fickle and vnconſtant, but ſhewe that the thinges which they know are of God, and an abiding trueth, ſo as it is not for men to ſwarue or ſtart from them in any wiſe.

Eph. 6. 13. & 16. 17.

Now the, let vs beare this warning wel in mind, and euery of vs examine himſelfe; and when we haue once vnderſtoode ỹ things ỹ haue bin told vs, and are neceſſary to our ſaluation: let vs not imagine our ſelues to haue a perfect and right faith as is requiſite, vnleſſe wee bee ſo conſtant and fully reſolued in the thinges that our Lorde hath ſhewed vs, that we abide by it and followe our courſe ſtill, whatſoeuer come of it. For whoſoeuer fleeteth or ſtarteth aſide at euery matter, ſheweth that hee neuer knewe Ieſus Chriſt as hee ought to doe. And therefore Saint Paul in another place vſeth two ſimilitudes to ſhewe of what force Gods word ought to bee with vs, to hold vs faſt vnto him in his obedience. Hee ſaith that wee muſt be throughly grounded and rooted. For many haue a kinde of faith: but that is but in outward ſhewe and appearaunce: as for inwardly it hath no liuely nor deepe roote. For if a man haue but a faire braunch couered with flowers, to what purpoſe is that? One blaſt of wind will deface it. But if a tree bee well planted, the roote of it will hold it faſt in the middeſt of all ſtormes. Euen ſo muſt wee bee rooted in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, and we muſt be throughly well grounded vppon him, ſo as men may perceiue not onely that wee haue knowledge, but alſo that our heartes doe yeeld record of our playnedealing. And marke here the cauſe why ſo many men are ſo greatly hindered, and indeuour no further but to purchaſe themſelues credit among men. When they come to a Sermon where the Goſpell is preached, for the moſt part they thinke they haue well profited, when they can skill to talke of it: and there are very feawe that haue a care to be ſo grounded in it, as to lay it vp in their hartes, that GOD may be witneſſe of it: there are very fewe that indeuour to atteine to that ſteddineſſe. And therefore doth God abhorre that fooliſh vaineglorioſuneſſe, wherethrough men ſeeke but onely to win themſelues eſtimation, by ſetting a faire face and countenaunce vppon the matter.

And therefore let vs marke in feawe wordes, that Gods word ought to ſerue vs to dubble purpoſe. Firſt to teach vs his will, that wee may ſubmit our ſelues ſimply vnto it: ſo that when wee haue the grace giuen vs to haue the doctrine purely taught vs, then euery of vs ſhould agree thereunto, and hearken to the voyce of our ſheepheard, and followe whatſoeuer is tolde vs, without gaineſaying. The thing which wee muſt doe when wee haue order in the Church, ſo as there be no ſectes nor troubles in it, but Gods trueth is purely preached: is, that there muſt bee true concorde and brotherly loue among vs, to anſwere our God all with one hart and one mouth, that his trueth may be aduaunced among vs. The ſecond vſe thereof is, that when it falleth out that Satan indeuoreth to turne vs away, and there ſpring vp hereſies, falſe doctrines and errors among vs: wee muſt withſtand all ſuch things, and ſhew that Gods trueth is ſtrong enough to hold vs ſtill vnto him; according to my former ſaying that our faith muſt get the vpper hand of all the world, ſo as wee bee ſtarke deafe in hearkening to any of all the wiles that are put to vs to intice vs from GOD and his pure trueth. Thus yee ſee in effect what is told vs in this text.

And let vs marke well Moſeſes maner of ſpeache. If a prophet ſteppe vp among you ſayth he. Hereby hee ſheweth that wee muſt not onely withſtand the open enemies that fight againſt Gods word, and pretend not at all to bee of his flocke, or to haue any partnerſhip or neighborhoode with vs: but alſo reſiſt our homebred battels, inſomuch that if there riſe vp any deceiuer among our ſelues, that is to ſay if any ſuch as maketh pretence to be of the fellowſhip of the faithfull, and to be as it were of the very houſehold of faith, ſtep vp: we muſt not bee troubled at it out of meaſure. And that is well worthie to be noted, for if the chriſtian faith be impugned by the wicked, which pretend not to come vnto God, (as by the Turkes, Paynims, and Iewes) ſo as they blaſpheme with open mouth: foraſmuch as they be vtterly cut off from the Church lyke rotten members, their reſiſting of the Goſpell, and their ſtriuing to aboliſhe the Chriſtian religion, is no great woonder to vs. For why? Wee be as it were hardened with ſuch examples. Therfore when the opē enemies ſet themſelues againſt God & his word, it is a tēptation that will eafily bee ouercome. But when thoſe that are knitte vnto vs, and are as it were of our owne bodie, doe fall to tearing of the vnitie of our faith in peeces, to peruert Gods trueth, and to marre it in ſuch wiſe as it ſhoulde bee diſtigured: that is ſuch a perplexitie and griefe to vs, as wee wote not where to become. And that is the thing that troubleth ſo many ſimple folkes nowadayes. What ſhall wee doe, ſay they? For wee ſee ſo much diſputing in the Church, and ſo greate diuerſitie of opinions, that it were better to aske no queſtion of any thing, inſomuch that a great number become careleſſe, for feare to bee intangled in wicked matters and to bee beguyled, and therefore they let all alone, and will not in any wiſe come neere vnto God. Wee ſee a greate ſorte of men of that ſtampe. Otherſome let looſe the raynes of the brydle, and take libertie to maintaine one while one mans ſaying and another while another mans, and are neuer fully perſuaded of any thing; but are in one mynde to day, and in another minde to morrowe, and chaunge at euery minute of an houre.

Wee ſee a number of wild heades nowadayes which haue no ſtay at all, but thinke that all thinges are lawfull. And why? For I ſee there are diuerſe opinions, ſay they. But ſuch men do ſhewe that they neuer taſted what Gods trueth is. The firſt ſort doe well bewray a curſed vnbeleefe. For our Lorde promiſeth that ſuch as ſeeke him with a lowly heart, ſhall not be diſappointed, but hee will ſhewe him ſelfe to them. Let vs knocke, and the doore ſhalbe opened. If wee deſire reuerently to be guided by God, ſurely he will not faile vs. Let vs diſtruſt our owne infirmitie and rudeneſſe; and our Lorde will giue vs the ſpirite of diſcretion, ſo as wee ſhall not bee beguyled. To be ſhort this ſaying of Saint Paul which I haue alleaged alreadie heretofore ſhall euer be perfourmed; namely, that hereſies ſhall turne to the true tryall of our faith, and not bee able to ouerthrowe it. For as touching thoſe that are ſo fleeting without cauſe; they ſhewe that there was nothing in them but a falſe pretence, and that they did but play the hypocrites in making a countenance to ſticke to Gods trueth; for had they beene well rooted in it, as I ſayde, they woulde haue continued ſtedfaſt in it ſtill.

Eſa. 45. 19. Matt. 7. 7. Luke, 11. 19.

2. Cor, 11, 19.

To conclude, let ſuch examples prouoke vs to put this leſſon the better in vre. And when wee ſee the troubles that are nowadays in the world, let vs not be ouercome by them, neither let our faith be defaced. But the more the diuel laboureth and inforceth himſelfe to vndo it, the more let it aduaunce it ſelfe and get the vpper hande of ſuch aſſaultes. And when wee ſee falſe prophets ſtep vp among vs, let vs not ceaſſe to yeeld this honour ſtill to God, that wee hold our ſelues to his word, and ſtart not from it by any means. And very neceſſitie conſtraines vs to it in theſe dayes, becauſe wee ſee that ſuch as call themſelues Chriſtians and take that title moſt vppon them, are the worſt enemies of God that a man can finde. For the Turkes & Iewes are not more fierie and venemous at this day againſt God, to deface the whole doctrine of ſaluation; than are the Papiſtes. And therefore let vs arme our ſelues with the warning that is giuen vs heere: which is, that when wee ſee falſe prophets ſtep vp in the ſheepefold and in the middes of Gods houſe: yet notwithſtanding wee muſt not faile to hold on ſtil, nor make a ſtumbling blocke of it to ſtep aſide or ſtart away, but ouergo it through the power of faith. Yea, and to come yet neerer the matter, when wee ſee theſe varlets that had pretended to be at oddes with the Papiſtes, and had mingled themſelues among vs, do thereupō fall to inuenting of falſe opinions: let vs not bee ouermuch amazed for all that. True it is that wee be not ſenſeleſſe, & that we haue neede to be waked: but yet muſt wee alwayes conclude thus with our ſelues: How nowe? Our Lord hath beene ſo gratious to vs as to open his owne holy mouth to giue vs the certeintie of faith by his Goſpel: and ſhall wee nowe turne away at euery puſh? After that manner (ſay I) muſt wee withſtande all the temptations that may befall vs, when deceiuers and falſe fellowes ſtep vp amōg vs, of purpoſe to deface by their ſuttletie the pure doctrine that hath beene preached to vs, & wherein we haue beene trayned vp.

Now firſt of all it is ſaid, Thou ſhalt not hearken to the Prophet when he ſayth vnto thee, Let vs go and ſerue other gods which thou haſt not knowen. It behoueth vs to wey well all theſe woordes of Moſes; For here he ſpeaketh to al beleeuers. He ſpeakes not only to the great doctors that haue beene at the Vniuerſitie all their life long, but alſo to the vnlearned. Although then that we be no clerks, yet let vs learne that we muſt haue this conſtancie of faith, of not following the wyles of Satan to bee withdrawen from our God when he hath beene ſo gracious vnto vs, as to communicate himſelfe to vs. Wee muſt not ſay, Alas, I haue no learning, nor fineneſſe of witte, to be ſo cunning; euery man hath not like meaſure. I graunt that euery man is not of abilitie to enter into diſputation againſt ſophiſters, and againſt ſuch as are full fraught with malice to deceiue ỹ ſimple: but yet, all men from the moſte to the leaſt ought to haue this inuincible ſtedfaſtnes of ſticking vnto God and his trueth when they once knowe it. There is no excuſe in that caſe. For it is not in vaine that God hath ſet downe this generall law for all his Church. And it is certaine alſo that he will giue vs power, ſo wee reſort to him, and ſeeke to him for ſuccour. For what is ỹ cauſe why ſo many folke are ſeduced, but onely their own fond preſumption, or their negligence, or elſe their contempt of Gods worde? For yee ſhall ſee ſome ſtand ſo much in their owne conceits, as (to their own ſeeming) no man is able to ouermatch them: and yet for all that, they are but ſillie beaſtes. Our Lorde therefore doth blow away their pride, as men may perceiue: and experience ſheweth that God puniſheth many folkes pride, which had too great an ouerweening of themſelues. Now thē, what is to be done? Let vs humble our ſelues & pray God to gouern vs ſo by his holy ſpirit, & to giue vs ſuch wiſe dōe, as wee may not bee taken tardie when the diuel goes about to make a breach into vs to enter at. If we goe ỳ way to worke, let vs aſſure our ſelues that God will guide vs, and that wee ſhall neuer be caught in Satans ſnares. But there are many that keepe on their race without care, as though they were priuiledged from all dangers. But let vs for our part keepe good watch, and haue ſuch a care to warde our ſelues, as the deceiuers (whē they come) may not finde vs aſleepe. And that will ſo bee, if wee beare ſuch reuerence to Gods worde, as wee acknowledge it to bee the preciouſeſt treaſure that we haue. For if a man make ſo little reckening of a thing, that he leaue it at aladuenture: the firſt that commeth may robbe him of it: but as for him ỳ locketh vp his goods, (ſpecialy thoſe that are the chiefe and which he counteth to bee moſt worth:) he cannot bee ſo bereft of them. And therefore let vs put our faith in good cuſtodie, and be ſo warie in the keping of it, as [it may appeare] that we haue it in ſuch eſtimation as it deſerueth; for it is an ineſtimable treaſure. Thus yee ſee what wee haue to note here, where Moſes ſpeaketh to all ſuch as had taſted what Gods lawe is, exempting no man from ſtanding ſtoutly in battaile and defence againſt the lyes and ſleyghts of Satan.

Nowe hee addeth, If he ſay vnto thee, Let vs followe ſtrange gods, which thou haſt not knowen. This ſerueth to ſhewe vs who bee falſe prophets. For God telleth vs that wee cannot withſtande the wyles of Satan, without the knowledge of the trueth: that is the onely meane. And no marueil though the wretched worlde nowadayes be allured to deſtruction: for Gods worde is as it were buryed: and when men are deſtitute of that light, it is certaine that they bee in horrible darkneſſe, ſo as they cannot but ſtumble & ſtray here and there, becauſe they haue no certaine aime at any thing. But here our Lorde declareth that wee muſt bee inſtructed in his worde; and thereunto alſo is this ſaying after a ſort referred. For hee preſuppoſeth that wee bee in a good trade alreadie, and that wee knowe the way of ſaluation: accordingly as Moſes wil proteſt hereafter; ſaying, I haue ſhewed you the way of life and the way of death. Nowe therefore, whenſoeuer wee will reſiſt falſe Prophets, and their lyes, let vs take to vs the doctrine of trueth. And that is the cauſe why it is ſaide, The gods which thou haſt not knowen. For in this caſe wee muſt match the liuing God whome wee haue knowen, againſt all the ydolles which the worlde hath forged to it ſelfe. For God ſpeaketh not to ſuch as neuer heard nor vnderſtood any thing of him before: but to ſuch as he had giuen his lawe vnto, whome hee had ſet in the right way, and to whome hee had giuen an infallible rule. When hee hath ſo fenced men aforehande, then ſayeth hee vnto them, Beware that yee followe not the gods whome yee haue not beene acquainted with.

Deut. 30, 15 & 19.

To be ſhort then, it is ſhewed vs that this doctrine concerneth ſuch as haue beene duely inſtructed in the faith. Will wee beate backe all Satans deuices? Let vs haue the skill to ſay, It is God that hath certified vs, hee is a faithfull witneſſe to vs, wee neede not to be in dout or vncertaintie any more, or to caſt doutes, or to ſay, What? Which way ſhall we goe? We may well aſſure our ſelues that this is the way, that is the thing which wee muſt ſtay vppon. That in effect is the order which wee haue to keepe, according as it is ſhewed vs in this text.

But let vs marke alſo, that wee muſt haue our eares ſo ſtopped, as we may vtterly miſlike whatſoeuer may cauſe vs to ſwarue to the contrarie of thoſe things which we haue learned by Gods worde. For as ſoone as wee giue eare to them, by and by wee be halfe corrupted, according to this ſimilitude which Saint Paul alleageth in the ſeconde to the Corinthians, that when a woman giueth eare to a bawde or a Ruffian, although ſhee conſent not to him out of hande, yet is ſhee alreadie peruerted, and it is already an euill token. For if a woman bee chaſte and ſhamefaſt, ſhee will in any wiſe ſhunne all ſuch meſſages as may be brought to her to intyce her to follie, and to make her to breake wedlocke. Shee muſt eſchewe ſuch manner of thinges. Nowe Saint Paul ſayeth, that as long as wee abyde in the ſimplicitie of the Goſpell, wee bee as a chaſte wife that keepeth her faith & troth to her husbande, and that our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt who hath made ſuch couenant with vs, to chooſe vs to bee of his bodie, taketh and receiueth vs for his owne. But if wee hearken to the lyes and trumperies that are brought vnto vs; and wee refuſe not to learne what Darnell is: it is an euill ſigne, and wee bee corrupted alreadie. And therefore let vs beare well in minde, that wee ought ſo little to conſent to falſe prophets, as wee ſhoulde not in any wiſe giue eare vnto them, but ſhunne them a farre off, as ſoone as wee perceiue that they goe about to deceiue vs and to entyce vs to naughtineſſe. And to ſay the trueth, this curſed curioſitie hath beene the cauſe of many mennes deſtruction. For it ſeemeth to many high minded perſons, that all thinges ſhould paſſe the tryall of their wit: and that when they haue ſifted things after their owne imagination, they may followe whatſoeuer they themſelues thinke good, for they bee able ynough to diſcerne the trueth of all thinges. But when our Lorde findeth ſuch ouerboldneſſe in them, hee putteth them to confuſion. The trueth is, that they would ſo inquire of all things, as nothing might eſcape them: in ſo much as they could finde in their hearts to mingle Mahomets Alcoran, and all the dotages of the Heathen, and all the ſuperſtitions of the Papiſts with the pureneſſe of ỳ Goſpell, and to make a medly of them, that whē they had well clowted them together in their owne brayne, they might ſaye, This is the thing that is good. But our Lorde (as I ſaide afore) cannot abyde that men ſhoulde truſt ſo to their owne wittes. And againe on the other ſide, hee cannot abide ſuch iniurie to bee done to his worde, as that it ſhoulde bee matched with the wyles of Satan, ſo as it might bee ſayde, now will I chooſe what liketh mee beſt.

2. Cor. 11, 2, 3.

It is

It is too high a mounting for men to make themselues iudges and vmpers of Gods trueth, which the Angels do honour with all reuerence. Needes therefore must such men fall into horrible destruction. And therfore let vs beware that wee brydle our selues, so as our mindes wander not out into fond curiositie. And as soone as wee perceiue that ỹ diuel goes about to falsifie Gods pure trueth, let vs stop our eares, and not harken to any such thing, but vtterly abhorre it.

Now moreouer Moses sayth, That although the false prophets shewe some signe or myracle, & the same commeth to passe, yet must not men giue eare vnto thē. Here he sheweth that we must haue such constācie and stedfastnesse in our faith, as it may not bee ouerthrowen though there bee neuer so great occasion of stumbling. As for example, if there bee such an illusion of Satan, that a false-prophet say vnto vs, such a thing shall come to passe, and it commeth to passe in deede: then are wee at our wittes end, and it is ynough to ouerthrowe our whole building though it were neuer so well builded, vnlesse God worke on our side aboue the power of mans abilitie. But yet howsoeuer the world go, Gods trueth must be of such force with vs as to holde vs backe against al such temptation, so as if the diuel bring any illusion, he may not gaine any thing at our handes, nor preuaile against vs.

And let vs marke, that before that Moses saith so: he giueth vs a sure declaration of false prophets, that is to say, of such as go about to turne vs from the true God, whome wee haue once knowen, and would wrap vs in wicked superstitions wherin there is no reason. If any such thing befall vs, no maruel though our Lorde will haue vs to resist all that euer the diuel putteth to vs to bleare our eyes withal, yea, euen though there bee false miracles, in so much that although all that the falseprophet or deceiuer foretelleth, do come to passe; yet must wee not be led away by it. We see then in effect what the meaning of Moses is, that we must be so well fenced by gods worde, that although the diuell rush against vs with neuer so great violence, and worke all the meanes he can to beguyle vs; yet we must not be ouercome, but our faith must be as a wel garded fortresse, that notwithstanding any assault, or any battrie made against vs, yet it may warde all blowes, and bee able to saue it selfe from beeing vanquished by any enemies.

And now let vs marke, that if God sende such false miracles; it is not to intrap those that are his; but to punish such as haue not beleeued the Gospel, as Saint Paul speaketh thereof in the seconde to the Thessalonians. And therfore doth Moses also adde, Then is it Gods will to try thee whether thou louest him with all thy heart & all thy soule or no. It is a saying that deserueth to be wel marked. For first Moses doeth vs to vnderstande, that such thinges happen not without the ordinance of God: and secondly hee sheweth the ende or reason wherefore: namely that the faithfull may haue wherewith to bee confirmed, knowing well that God will giue them constancie to holde out, though the temptation be neuer so rough and violent. Those are the two thinges which wee haue to remember here. First, it is sayd, God tryeth thee. Hereby hee sheweth, that Satan hath no power ouer vs, nor can sowe any wicked weedes, further foorth than God giueth him leaue. And that is a verie needefull thing for vs to marke. For were wee perswaded that the doore were open for Satan, and that all errours might spring vp at all aduenture, and that God ouer ruled them not: alas what a thing were it? For wee see howe mad the diuel is to ouerthrowe all trueth: wee see with what furie hee goes to worke when hee is to fight against the kingdome of our Lorde Iesus Christ: and we see what spite hee beareth to our saluation. And therefore things would go too much to hauocke if God wrought not to hinder Satan of his full scope, that hee might not set vp his lyes among vs. Wherefore let vs vnderstande, that whensoeuer there is any trouble, diuision, or diuersitie of opinion in the Church, the same happeneth not at all aduenture, but God worketh from aboue, and ouerruleth the whole matter, according to this protestation of Moses, Thy God tryeth thee. Yee see then that by knowing that God holdeth vs vnder his hande, wee bee assured that no errours or abuses can haue accesse vnto vs, vnlesse so farre foorth as our Lorde giue them accesse. And marke it for a speciall point, to the ende wee thinke not that the diuel reigneth at his owne pleasure, and doeth all thinges as it were whether God will or no: for hee must bee faine to haue leaue of his master.

And nowe let vs come to that which Moses addeth concerning the ende and reason why God doeth it: For wee may thinke it strange. What? That God shoulde trye vs? That errors shoulde bee saide to come so of God? Then is hee the author of lying. Againe, doeth God stirre vp the diuell vnto euill? Then might wee take occasion of stumbling at it. Yea; but in as much as Moses addeth that God doeth it for iust cause, the stumbling blocke is taken away. Hee sayth that God tempteth vs, that is to saye, that hee tryeth vs. After what maner? Whether we loue the Lorde our God or no. And hereby hee sheweth, (as I haue declared heretofore) that if wee haue a right meaning and pure heart, and haue receiued his trueth without hypocrisie, he will helpe vs at our neede, and we shalbe vpheld by his power, so as Satan may well straine himselfe to the vttermost, but the victorie shall alwayes go on our side. And this is the thing that I haue touched out of Saint Paul where he sayth, that all the false miracles which befall vnder the reigne of Antichrist, (as many haue been seene) are all reuengements of God, to punish such as woulde not obey his trueth. And it is good reason that Satan shoulde driue them to destruction, sith they woulde not open their eyes at such time as God woulde haue enlightened them. And seeing they haue thrust all good doctrine vnder foote; it is meete that they shoulde bee deceiued by lyes.

2. Thes. 2. 12

2. Thes. 2. 10

But let vs come backe againe to the wordes of Moses. He sayth that wee be tryed, to weete if wee loue the Lorde our God. Heereby hee ſheweth, that God putteth a difference betweene the hypocrites and ſuch as ſerue him in ſoundneſſe of heart, at ſuch time as hereſies ſpring vp and that there is trouble and diſagreement. And why? For it is certaine that ſuch as loue God are preſerued by the power of his holy Ghoſte, & that the troubles which they ſuſteyne are a good proofe and ſealing vp of their faith, whereby the ſame is made autenticall. God ſheweth by effect howe hee hath wrought in them, and that they bee in verie deede of the number of thoſe whome hee hath choſen. So then let vs vnderſtand, that all the errours and hereſies which the diuell ſhall haue ſowed among vs, ſhalbee turned to good ende to all Gods children. So farre off is it that they bring vs any hurte or harme, that they ſerue euer to make our faith ſhyne the brighter, and to warrant vs that God hath ſuccoured vs, and that hee will haue the ſame knowen to the whole worlde, ſo as he may bee glorified for it. And we alſo haue the more cauſe to reſt vppon him with the greater certaintie of faith, and to truſt that hee will neuer faile vs.

For as much then as wee ſee that our Lorde worketh in ſuch wiſe as hee turneth darkeneſſe into light, and deadly poyſon to our health: haue wee not whereof to reioyce? and ought wee not to bee patient albeit that troubles doe vexe vs for a time, and that wee haue much adoo to reſiſt? Yet ought not our heartes to quaile, ſeeing that God giueth it ſo happie an iſſue. Thus much concerning the firſt poynt; that is to witte, that if wee loue God with all our heart, that is to ſay, roundly and ſoundly and without counterfayting: hee will not ſuffer vs to bee beguyled: but whenſoeuer Satan comes to ſowe troubles and hereſies, wee ſhalbee confirmed ſtill better and better, and profite in ſuch wiſe, as wee ſhall neuer bee ouercome. And therewithall wee ſhall haue the better proofe that wee bee of the number of his ſeruauntes, and of thoſe whome hee hath committed to the cuſtodie of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, and that wee ſhall ſee this ſaying fulfilled, that hee will neuer ſuffer any of the things to periſh, which his father hath put into his hande. Wee ſee then howe our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt is the keeper of our ſaluation; & that wee finde the thing by experience which Saint Peter ſayeth; namely that our ſaluation is kept in heauen by faith, and that wee our ſelues alſo ſhall get the vpper hande of all the temptations which the diuell ſtirreth vp againſt vs, by ſowing ſuch cockle and darnel to the preiudice of Gods trueth.

1.Pet.1.4.5.

But let vs marke alſo, that ſuch as are windeſhaken, doe ſhewe that they neuer wiſt what it is to loue God with all their heartes, and that there was nothing in them but vanitie and hypocriſie. And therefore when wee ſee men ſeduced, let vs not wonder as though God were cruell to them. For it was meete that their hypocriſie ſhoulde bee diſcouered. They meant to mocke God, and vſed a kinde of verniſhing and painting to make a ſhowe of that which they were not: and God bewrayeth what they were in deede. Nowe therefore, whereas wee ſee the wretched worlde ſo carried nowadayes into darkeneſſe, ſuperſtition and ydolatrie; wee muſt not thinke that they doe it of meere ſimplicitie, as though they were innocent and faultleſſe, and that God had giuen Satan the brydle without cauſe: but wee muſt rather conſider that God with iuſt vengeance puniſheth the vnkindneſſe of ſuch as had neither purpoſe nor deſire vnto him.

Trueth it is, that a man ſhall ſee ſome outwarde ſhewe of holineſſe in a number of thoſe that are ſeduced in the popedome and elſewhere. But yet for all that, they bee double hearted, and God perceiueth what they bee in ſecret. So then, let vs vnderſtand that God is a iuſt Iudge, and let vs glorifie him for his puniſhing of ſuch as loued him not ſoundly in their heartes as they ſhoulde haue done. That is the thing which wee haue to note.

And in deede, experience ſhewes it in ſuch as turne backe and fall to naughtineſſe after they haue once knowen the Goſpell. Wee haue ſeene here that when Satans vnderlinges haue come hither to ſet troubles in the Church, thoſe that haue beene ſeduced by them haue knowen them welynough of olde, and not nowe of late, for I ſpeake of the ſpace of eyghteene yeares. Since the troubling of this Church, diuers ſectes haue beene ſeene, and ſtil God hath beene faine to ſhewe and to poynt theſe out with his finger, which had nothing in them but diſſimulation & hypocriſie, howe faire countenance ſoeuer they did make. And I ſay that this hath beene knowen nowe theſe eyghteene yeres; inſomuch that euen they that haue pretended to bee great vpholders of the Goſpell, are well knowen to mee howe they haue behaued themſelues, & I could rehearſe their doings if neede were, but it is ynough to giue men an incling of them, that others might take example by them. When the Anabaptiſtes came hither to infect all, there was great cheere made them in the townhouſe, and this was about an eyghteene yeares ago. True it is, that men were conſtrained to reproue their doctrine openly: but yet in the meanewhile they were ſtill chockt vnder the chinne; & in ſteed of reſiſting them luſtily, feaſtes were made to entertaine them with. And ſince that time, wee haue ſeene in our owne dayes, (and that not long ago) howe other heretikes haue beene fauoured at their comming hither, and ſpecially howe that horrible blaſphemer was ſupported. And by whom? By ſuch as had ſo long deſpiſed God, that in the ende their ſhame was of neceſſitie to bee diſcouered. They proteſted ſufficiently that their deſire was to haue the Goſpell: but that was the goſpell of Mahomet to turne all thinges vpſide downe, and to bring all things to confuſion. For the worlde hath ſeene howe farre they ouerſhot themſelues; inſomuch that they tooke parte againſt God and his word. Nowe ſith wee haue ſuch examples, let vs learne to liue in feare and warineſſe, and alwayes come backe to that which is tolde vs here, that is to wit, mit, that it is not without cause that our Lorde sayeth, that hee tryeth and examineth such as were disguized afore: and that when hee sufferreth false prophets to bee stirred vp by Satan, to sowe their darnell among vs, it is to trye vs whether wee loue him with all our heart or no. And therefore let vs proceede more and more in the feare of our God, accordingly as it is said here, that wee must serue him and obey his holy commaundementes, not douting but that hee will make vs to get the vpper hande in al assaults and conflictes wherewith wee be assayled, so as wee shalbe sure of the victorie, because hee will fight for vs.

Nowe let vs kneele downe in the presence of our good GOD with acknowledgment of our faultes, praying him to make vs so to feele them, as wee may not proceede to prouoke his wrath through our vnthankfulnesse; but that seeing he hath giuen vs the infinite treasure of his holy worde, whereby wee haue full assurance of our saluation; wee may imbrace it with all reuerence and liue in such pureneſſe of heart before him, as hee may bestowe his riches more and more vppon vs & make vs partakers of them, and that wee may walke the whole race of our life after such sort in his obedience, as wee may moreouer resist all our enemies, and by the power of the spirituall sworde of his worde, and of the shield of faith, beate backe all the assaultes that shalbe made vppon vs. That it may please him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs but also to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Saturday the xij. of October. 1555.

The Lxxxvij Sermon, which is the second vpon the thirteenth Chapter.

2.3 And the signe or miracle, &c.

4 Yee shall walke after the Lorde your God, and feare him, and keepe his commaundements, and obey his voyce, and serue him, and sticke to him:

5 But that Prophet or dreamer of dreames shalbee put to death: for hee hath spoken to turne you from the Lorde your God (which hath brought you out of the lande of Egypt, and deliuered you from the house of bondage) and to thrust thee out of the way which the Lorde thy God hath commaunded thee to walke in. And so shall you ridde away the euill from among you.

WEe sawe yesterday wherefore God giueth the brydle to Satan, in such wise, that hee soweth many errours and corruptions, not onely in the worlde, but also in the Church. For it is good reason that our faith should be tryed, to weete whether we liue in vprightnesse, soundnes, and loue before our God, or whether there bee any faynednesse in vs. And there is not a truer tryall thereof, than when wee come to the incounter to know, whether Gods trueth ought to bee inuincible against all errours and leasings. And therefore let it not offende vs when wee see him sowe darnell: but let vs bethinke vs of that which is sayde here, namely, that our Lorde wil search vs to the harde bottome, whether wee beare reuerence to his worde in good earnest and vnfeynedly or no. Not that hee knoweth not welynough what wee bee; (for it is not for himselfe that hee doeth it:) but to the ende that our faith should shewe it selfe, and that there shoulde be true record thereof.

Nowe moreouer it is tolde vs, that wee must followe Gods worde and hearken to him, that wee may serue him and sticke to him. And this is still to shewe vs that which I haue declared afore: namely, that wee can neuer bee at any stay, vnlesse wee knowe well what God it is whome wee worship. For if wee bee in dout, there needeth nothing to shake vs downe, as wee see by experience. Therefore let vs learne to profite so in our Gods schoole, as wee may not bee remoued by false doctrines, but may haue wherwith to withstande the sleightes of Satan; as was declared more at large yesterday.

But let vs goe backe againe to this saying, that although the false Prophet haue giuen some signe or foretolde some wonder, and the same thing is come to passe; yet notwithstanding wee must hold our owne still. Here it might be demaunded whether the diuell can prophesie or no. I stande not much vppon that, it is not materiall: but I haue aunswered before, that GOD is aboue him, and that it is his will that his Church shoulde liue in warrefare, to the ende that the faith of all his might be exercised. Then if a deceiuer foretell a thing, and the same fal out in deede: it is not to bee saide, but that GOD hath giuen him the brydle. Therefore it is not for vs to trouble our ſelues greatly, to knowe whether Satan foreſee thinges to come or no. For it is very certaine that notwithſtanding all the craft and ſubtletie that is in him, yet knoweth hee not any more than our Lorde imparteth vnto him. And all is to deceiue the vnbeleeuers according to their deſert: or elſe to ſhewe, that doe what he Matt. 24. 24 & Iohn. 10. 28, 29. can, yet ſhall hee neuer get the vpper hande of the choſen, as is ſayde in other places of the ſcripture.

Let vs then leaue theſe needeleſſe queſtions, whereby many folke haue deceiued and intangled them ſelues; to wit, whether the diuels doe knowe more than men doe: for it is nothing to the matter as I ſayde afore. But rather let vs vnderſtande this iuſtice of GOD, that it is his will to puniſh the vnbeleeuers, becauſe they bee neuer contented with the ſingle trueth, but will needes bee ſtill wandering here and there, and therefore are they woorthie of ſuch payment. Beſides this, the faithfull alſo are exerciſed by incounters; and that is alwayes to their benefite, and to their welfare. For God doeth ſo preſerue them, as it is not poſſible for them to be deceiued.

But as yet there remayneth one queſtion
Deut. 13. 2. more: for it is ſaide in the eyghteenth Chapter, that a man may diſcerne a true Prophet from a deceiuer by this ſelfe ſame marke. If a Prophet (ſayth Moſes) haue foretolde a thing, and the ſame is come to paſſe; yee ſhall vnderſtand that that Prophet hath ſpoken truely and in the name of God. But if he be founde a lyar in the thinges that hee hath ſpoken, it appeareth that he was puffed vp with pryde and preſumption, & that he tooke too highly vpon him: and therefore let him be driuen away and rooted out from among you. It may ſeeme at the firſt bluſh, that here is ſome contrarietie: but wee muſt marke that in ſo ſaying, Moſes intendeth to declare, that God deceiueth not his ſeruauntes as the ydols are wont to doe, that is to ſay, as the diuels haue vnder the title of ydols deceiued the ignorant wretches that did put their truſt in them. For they foretolde lyes: and the people founde them ſelues diſappointed in giuing eare vnto them. And that is the cauſe why it is ſayd by the Eſa. 41. 23. 26. 27. Prophet Eſay, that the gods of the Heathen can do neither good nor euill. But our Lord ſeparateth himſelfe there from all the gods that had beene inuented by mans deuiſe, and telleth vs ſaying: It belongeth to mee onely to ſhewe what is to come. And why? For I order all things, and I haue the worlde in my hande; and therefore I can well tel what ſhal come to paſſe. But as for ỹ ydols, they haue no power at all: and therefore howe can they declare any thing to ſuch as ſerue and worſhip them? This then is true in general. And according hereunto, the Prophet Ieremie
Ier. 28. 9. ſpeaking to Hananiah in his eyght and twentith Chapter, confirmeth this ſaying of Moſes which wee ſhall ſee in the eyghteenth Chapter of this booke of Deuteronomie. I wiſhe (ſayth hee) that the thing which thou haſt foretolde may come to paſſe. For, that lyar did ſoade the people with vaine hope. When Ieremie told them ſaying, you haue offended your God too much, and haue continued in your wilfulneſſe vnto this daye; I haue often times warned you to come to amendement, but you would not heare mee, and therefore wee bee come nowe to the laſt caſt; thinke not that GOD will beare with you any longer, but prepare your ſelues to beare the yoke and burthen; for yee muſt bee carryed away to Babylon, where your ſtate ſhalbe miſerable; Becauſe you haue forſaken your God, hee hath giuen you ouer to bee a praye to your enemies, and therefore there is no more remedie but to diſpoſe your ſelues to patience, that this aduerſitie may tame you, and your GOD ſhewe pitie vnto you at the ende of the terme which hee hath ſet you: Hananiah ſetting himſelfe againſt him, ſaide no, feare not that any ſuch thing ſhall befall you. And therewithall hee went and put a yoke vppon his neck, in skorne of Ieremie who had worne bondes & lynes about his necke. Beholde (ſayes hee) I come to breake the thing that Ieremie hath ſhewed you for a ſigne that you muſt bee priſoners in Babylon. Very well (ſayde the Prophet Ieremie:) I woulde it were ſo; I wiſh not any harme to my countryfolke: but yet muſt not thou on the other ſide abuſe them with vayne hope as thou doeſt. Moreouer, thou ſhalt finde whether it bee ſo or no: and experience ſhall ſhewe whether thou bee a true Prophet or no: for whoſoeuer foretelleth a thing and the ſame commeth to paſſe; yeeldeth proofe that hee was ſent of God, and that hee ſpake out of Gods owne mouth. But if it come not to paſſe, it appeareth that all was but a lye. In that place Ieremie had an eye to the foreſaide text which wee ſhall ſee hereafter. Yee ſee then howe it is a generall rule for all of vs to holde, that it belongeth onely to God to foretell thinges to come, and that ſuch as declare thoſe things truely, do by that token ſhewe and proue themſelues to be true Prophets. Yet notwithſtanding, it may well bee that particularly GOD will permit a deceiuer to foretell ſome thing to come. And yet doeth not that falſifie the generall rule. For why? when our Lorde foretelleth things to come, it is to frame al men to his lawe: And the falſe prophets what ſay they? In abuſing the people, and turning them from God, they promiſe them that all ſhall go well with them: whereas contrariwiſe Gods ſeruauntes doe alwayes matche faith and amendement of life with their admonitions: and they vſe a kinde of teaching that hath a good foundation to buylde vppon: but the ſpeaking of the other ſort is altogither in the aire. Nowe wee ſee howe deſirous the worlde is to be beguyled, accordingly as it is ſayde in the Prophet Micheas, that the vnbeleeuers doe like of none Mich. 2. 11. but ſuch as bring them good tydinges of a good vintage or of a good harueſt. For ſo ſaith hee expreſſely, when it is ſayde vnto them, Yee ſhall bee fatte fedde, and GOD fauoureth you, take no thought, make good cheere. Thoſe are the thinges which the worlde deſireth. Neuertheleſſe GOD will nowe and then

then permitte the deceiuers to speake trueth: but that is but in some peculiar case, and then doe they builde without foundation. Therefore is that no impediment to the continuall trueth of this rule, that when Gods prophetes foretell thinges to come, it is a proofe to warrant their doctrine, so as men may thereby knowe of whome they bee sent. For in verie deede although there appeare some trueth at the first blushe in the false prophetes: yet notwithstanding there is no holde of it. Marke that for one speciall point. Againe all the matter lyeth in the falling out, which in the ende sheweth it selfe cleane contrarie to that whiche was surmised. For in the turning of a hande all thinges goe backewarde, and the vnbeleeuers finde that it was but a blearing of their eyes to make them the more blockishe; and that their hauing of some trewe signe was but a baite to beguyle them, whereas in ỹ meane time they ceased not to hoord vp Gods wrath & vengeance still against themselues.

Then let vs beare well in minde, that whereas it is sayde in this text, that a prophete may say some thing that shall come to passe afterwarde, and yet neuertheless not haue the more warraunt to bee taken for a seruaunt of GOD: the reason is, for that his matter hath no grounde in the worde of GOD, as I haue sayde afore: And secondely, that it is but as a bayte, and a peculiar case, whereof there is no holde to be taken; like as when God suffereth Satan to transforme himselfe into an Angell of light, it is to harden the vnbeleeuers as they de- 2. Cor. 11. 14 serue to bee. And because they woulde not conuert, therefore must the darkenesse be made the thicker for them; and the deuill must haue all manner of effectualnesse of errour, as sayth Saint Paule in the seconde to the Thessalonians; insomuch that GOD not onely giueth 2. Thes. 2. 10 him leaue to deceiue, as a point belonging peculiarly to his office, and as wherein hee is his crafts maister: but also giueth him suche efficacie of errour, that is to saye such force and power, that men are blinded by him beyonde all measure. Thus yee see what wee haue to note. And therefore wee bee warned in effect, to pray GOD to giue vs the spirite of wisedom and discretion, that wee may not be snarled by Sathans lyes, what colour or couerte of craftinesse so euer he vse. Marke this for one point, that men must in any wise beware of presumption. For they be not so well able to iudge as were requisite. But let vs resorte vnto God, and hee will make vs to discerne betweene whyte and blacke.

Againe on the contrarie part, we must vnderstande that whensoeuer any good is promised vs, or any euill is threatened vs, wee must take Gods doctrine for our foundation, assuring ourselues that Gods will is not to separate his blessing and grace from his Lawe; And therefore that it is in vaine for vs to hope for fauour at his hande when wee haue offended him. For seeing wee haue prouoked his wrath wee shall finde that his threatening of vs is not in vayne, seeing that hee sayeth in his Lawe, that hee will persecute all such as settethemselues against him; it must needes bee performed. Therefore let vs first lay the foundation of faith and repentaunce; and then shall wee not be deceiued as in respect of the particular prophesies, but that this rule shall alwayes holde trewe, to witte, that such as speake the trueth are sent of GOD. Yet notwithstanding Sathan will not leaue off to haue leaue after a certaine sorte to deceiue the vnbeleeuers as they bee worthie: but that trueth is no trueth (as sayeth Sainct Paul): such miracles are but illusions to deceiue those that trust to them, and the ende that they tende vnto is but to seduce the wretched world. 2. Thes. 2. 9. 10. After the same maner also doeth our Lorde Iesus speake of them. And therefore let vs marke wel Matt. 24. 24. that although the deceiuers haue a showe of trueth in some particular case, yet is it nothing woorth: for there is no holde of it: and it is so farre off from any substantial trueth, that in the ende it appeareth to bee vtter vanitie and vntrueth, to deceiue the wretched vnbeleeuers withall, which are turned away from God. That is the thing in effect, which we haue to mark vpon this text. But howsoeuer the worlde goe, if we put the thinges in vre which are spoken here by Moses, that is to wit, if we followe the Lorde and walke in the way which hee sheweth vs: wee neede not to feare but that we be out of all danger of being deceiued by the wylinesse of our enemie. Although the deuill be the father of lying, and doe forge an infinite number of illusions against vs, and although wee on our side be neuer so roughly assayled by him: yet will GOD preserue vs; so wee abide continually in the obedience of his worde, and be willing to harken to him in all cases.

But nowe let vs come to that which Moses addeth. As for the prophet (sayeth hee) or the deceiuer which shall haue deceiued and abused folke, to make them turne away from the Lorde their God; Let him be put to death, and let the euill be taken from among you. Here our Lorde will haue vs not onely to beware that wee harken not to false prophetes, but also to roote out such pestilent persons vtterly. And therein he sheweth how earnest wee ought to be in the mainteyning of his honour. Therefore to the ende wee shoulde abide in the pure singlenesse of faith, he had sayd afore, Beware that yee harken not to the false prophete. And not without cause hath our Lorde forbidden all his to giue eare to the bringers in of newe learninges. For why? Sith wee haue the worde of GOD, that ought to content vs well ynough: and if that will not satisfie vs, what an vnthankefulnesse is it? For if wee will needes intangle our selues in false doctrines, is it not a yeelding of our selues to bee a pray to Satan? Doe wee not well deserue that God should leaue vs destitute of vnderstanding, to be drawen into all errours like brute beasts? But it behoueth vs not onely to shunne false prophetes and to giue their subtilties no

entraunce into vs: but alſo (as Saint Paul ſayth)
Gal. 5. 9. 12. & Tit. 3. 10. to bee diligent in purging of Gods Churche from them, that ſuch a plague be not nouriſhed among vs. And truely if wee knewe our owne frailtie, and conſidered well on the other ſide what Sathan is able to doe againſt vs: it is certaine that wee woulde ſtande more vppon our garde than we be wont to doe. Trewe it is (as I haue ſayde alreadie) that wee woulde fayne repoſe and ſtaye our ſelues vppon GOD, ſo as we might not miniſter any occaſion to Satan to beguyle vs; and ſurely if wee through our owne fonde deſire of ſeeking lyes, did not caſt our ſelues into Sathans ſnares, wee ſhoulde be ſure that GOD woulde alwayes preſerue vs. But foraſmuch as we bee too too weake, and Sathan needes no more but to holde vppe his finger to vs, to carrie vs out of hande from the right way of ſaluation: in reſpect thereof wee ought ſo much the more to ſeeke the remedies whereby to preuent the miſchiefe. Againe let vs conſider what Satan is able to doe: He is the prince Iohn 12. 31. of this worlde, and therefore wee ſhall ſoone be ouertaken by him, the rather if wee be ſlothfull, careleſſe, or negligent. Then is it not without cauſe that our Lorde warneth vs to take ſo good order, as ſuch a plague may not lurke among vs; that is to wit, that wee may not haue deceiuers to beguile the ſimple, and to marre them by turning them from the pure trueth. For it is a likelihoode that wee woulde faine bee turned away from GOD, when wee giue the miſchiefe ſuch ſcope. If there were a breach in our towne wall, and our enemies were at hand or that wee were alreadie beſeeged, ſo as wee looked for the aſſault euerie minute of an houre; would we not prouide for it? Now the caſe ſtandeth ſo with vs, that our enemie is not onely at hande, but alſo is entered in already. When wee heare his lyes, and withſtand them not, ne make account of the, we may ſeeme to be wilfully diſpoſed to periſh, as wee bee worthie. And as touching vs that are ſhepheardes, it ſtandeth vs in hande to haue a double voyce. For wee muſt gather together the ſheepe as much as is poſſible: and when they bee in the flocke, wee muſt keepe them there quiedy. But if there be wolues alſo, and theeues that woulde inuade the flocke: againſt thoſe we muſt crye out aloude. And yet beſides this, ſuch as haue the ſworde in their hande, muſt prouide for it alſo, and euerie man to his power muſt ſtreine himſelfe to keepe Gods Church from infecting with ſuche poyſon, that the deuill may not haue his full ſcope to falſifie the pure trueth, to aduaunce himſelfe againſt GOD, to ouerthrowe the right religion, and (at a worde) to turne all thinges vpſide downe: but we muſt let theſe thinges as much as we can. Wherefore let vs marke, that it was Gods will that falſeprophetes ſhoulde be rooted out from among his people. Nowe at the firſt ſight this Lawe ſeemeth to bee ouerſtreite: for is it meete that a man ſhoulde bee puniſhed ſo ſore for ſpeaking his minde? Verily it is a wonder that we can abide that one ſhoulde be puniſhed for ſpeaking againſt a mortall man, and that when a man ſhall haue blaſphemed the liuing GOD, we coulde finde in our heartes that he ſhoulde ſcape vnpuniſhed. It appeareth what zeale is in them, which woulde haue ſuch rigour aboliſhed. If a Prince be miſuſed, men will thinke that death is too ſmall a thing for the offender, and that the fact can not be ſufficiently reuendged, inſomuch that whoſoeuer ſpeaketh againſt the princes authoritie ſhall bee puniſhed, and no man will ſpeake againſt it. If a man be founde ſo wicked as to procure a rebellion, or to rayſe an inſurrection among the people; verie well, he muſt looſe his heade for it, and no man will ſay that ſuch a Lawe is vniuſt or wicked. And why? Becauſe it ſerues for the maintenaunce of the ſtate and common weale of the Countrey. And yet for all this, whereas GOD hath the ſoueraigne dominion of all, a woorme of the earth ſhall ſette himſelfe againſt him, and goe about to robbe him of his honour, and to deface his maieſtie and authoritie; and yet all this ſhall be as nothing, it ſhall be let ſlippe, and becauſe it is but woordes, there is no reaſon why ſuch puniſhement ſhould enſewe of it. But they that ſay ſo, doe well ſhewe that they haue no loue at all towardes GOD, but (which worſe is) that they coulde finde in their heartes that all thinges were confounded together in a horchpotche, ſo as men might ſcoffe at GOD and at his maieſtie, and turne all religion into a mockerie and ſcorne. To be ſhorte, whoſoeuer he is that ſpeaketh ſo: he is not to be taken for an ignoraunt perſon, ſeeing hee woulde that falſe doctrines ſhoulde be vnpuniſhed: but rather hee is to bee counted a deſpiſer of GOD, and an vphoulder of the deuill, which ſeeketh nothing elſe but the turning of all thinges vpſide downe in the worlde. For our parte, lette vs learne to haue Gods honour in ſuch eſtimation, that wheras we reuenge the wronges doone to men, wee thinke it much more reaſon that the partie ſhoulde bee puniſhed which violateth the maieſtie of him that hath created and faſhioned vs. And the matter concerneth not onely the honour of God, but alſo the ſaluation of our owne ſoules: for they be thinges inſeparable. And that ought well to whette vs on the more, not to beare with the errours and deceites of falſe prophetes. See howe GOD witneſſeth the infinite Loue that hee beareth vs, in that hee matcheth our ſaluation with his owne glorie, ſo as men canne not touche the one without hurting of the other: inſomuch that if a man deface the honour of GOD, the ſaluation of man is aſſayled therewithall. In reſpect whereof GOD ſayeth vnto vs, ſuffer mee not to bee miſuſed among you, nor your ſelues to bee inticed to ſhrinke from my obedience: But if there be any wicked man among you, that goeth about to egge you away, beware yee nouriſhe not ſuch a plague. Doeth not our Lorde in ſo ſaying ſhewe, that wee can not ſerue to his honour, nor mayntaine him in his eſtate, but that in ſo dooing wee procure our owne welfare? And therefore theſe dalyers and mockers that

woulde haue vs to beare with all manner of falſe doctrine, and that it ſhoulde bee Lawefull for euerie man to ſpewe out whatſoeuer hee lyſteth, (beſides that they ſhewe themſelues traitours to GOD, and vtter defacers of his maieſtie if it lay in them to doe it:) doe alſo bewraye themſelues to bee enemies of mankinde, and deſirous to bring their ſoules to ruine and deſtruction, ſo as they bee worſe than murtherers. Let vs marke then that if Gods honour bee precious in our ſight, and that the ſaluation of our owne ſoules bee deere vnto vs; we muſt not nouriſhe hereſies, nor abuſes, nor any other of Sathans trumperies; but euerie of vs in his owne ſtate and calling, muſt procure the purging of Gods Churche from all euill, that wee may worſhippe him with one common conſent, that his doctrine may bee receiued, and that there may bee no diuiſion among vs.

But this was ſayde to the people of olde time. Yea, and Gods honour muſt not be diminiſhed by vs at this day: the reaſons that I haue alleadged alreadie doe ſerue as well for vs as for them. Then lette vs not thinke that this Lawe is a ſpeciall Lawe for the Iewes: but let vs vnderſtande that GOD intended to deliuer vs a generall rule, to which wee muſt tye our ſelues. In deede it is alleadged that when our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt came into the worlde, he aduaunced not his doctrine by the ſworde, but rather both he and his were perſecuted, and therefore that the right way to mayntaine the true religion, is not to puniſhe ſuch as ſet vppe themſelues againſt it: but rather to holde our ſelues contented with the ſpirituall ſwoorde, and to vſe that in our fighting againſt Satan, ſo as our vnholding of the trueth, bee alwayes by ſufferaunce and patience, if the worlde doe perſecute it. But lette vs ſee whether our Lorde haue excluded and baniſhed Princes and Magiſtrates and Officers of Iuſtice out of his flocke, ſo as they may not be Chriſtians. No ſurely. For when he ſpeaketh of the kingdome of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſte, hee ſayeth expreſly; Yee kinges ſtande you in awe; and yee Iudges of the earth, humble you your ſelues, and all of you kiſſe the ſonne. Moreouer, before hee ſpeake to priuate perſons, hee willeth expreſly that Kinges, Iudges, and Officers of Iuſtice ſhoulde doe homage to our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt: then they bee called to the knowledge of ỹ Goſpell. And in deede, according hereunto it is ſayde in the Pſalme, that kinges ſhall come to ſubmitte themſelues to him that was to bee ſent to be the redeemer. And againe that they ſhal be as foſter fathers to the Churche, and that Queenes ſhall giue her ſucke; that is to ſaye, that ſuch as haue the ſworde of Iuſtice in their hande, ſhall take Gods Churche into their protection to mainteine it in the pure doctrine, and in the ſame Religion that is ſet downe in Gods worde. Sith it is ſo, it is to be concluded, not onely that it is Lawefull for all Kinges and Magiſtrates, to puniſh heretikes and ſuch as haue peruerted the pure trueth; but alſo that they be bounde to doe it, and that they misbehaue themſelues towardes GOD, if they ſuffer errours to rouſt without redreſſe, and employ not their whole power to ſhewe a greater zeale in that behalfe than in all other thinges. For is it reaſon that he which ſitteth in the ſeate of Iuſtice, ſhoulde puniſhe a theefe for doing wrong but to the valewe of fiue ſhillinges: and in the meane while let a traytour to GOD goe vnpuniſhed? Gods name is thereby blaſphemed, his trueth whiche is his image is trampled vnder foote, and it is much more than if a man ſhould rende ſome [princes] Cotearmour in peeces. In ſo dooing the liuing image of GOD is skorned, and as it were ſpitted at, and the ſaluation of mennes ſoules hindered: and ſhall the Magiſtrates ſit ſtill at it like ydolles? They muſt puniſh a theefe for the valewe of fifteene pence; and beholde, this is ſuch a traytour as goeth about to confounde heauen and earth together, and muſt the ſame go vnpuniſhed? What a dealing were that? Doeth not euen nature teache what is to be doone in this behalfe? And as for thoſe that ſay that we ſhould let the euill weedes growe ſtill, doe they not ſhewe themſelues to be growen out of kinde like monſters, and that they bee more intollerable than if they were ſtarke madde? For it ſhoulde ſeeme that their meaning is to defie the whole order of nature, and men ſee that they not onely ſpeake againſt GOD, but alſo poyſon mennes ſoules, and bewray themſelues not to haue one droppe of ſetled diſcretion. Nowe then let vs marke, that ſith God hath declared that in the reigne of his Sonne, euen kinges ſhoulde bee called to the knowledge of the trueth, and become a parte of his Church: It behoueth them to giue example to their people, and it is good reaſon that they ſhoulde employ their whole power and authoritie to maintaine the good doctrine, and to cauſe GOD to be honored and ſerued, and to driue away all ydolatrie and ſuperſtition, and to ſee that it bee not Lawefull for anie man to ſpewe out blaſphemies againſt GOD. That is the thing which we haue to marke vpon this place.

And whereasit is alleadged that Ieſus Chriſt vſed not the materiall ſworde to aduaunce his doctrine withall: that is true, and wee alſo bring not the ſworde in our hande into the pulpit to prooue the things that wee preache. But lette vs learne to put a difference betweene offices, and let vs conſider howe our Lorde Ieſus Chriſte came to preache his worde, when hee woulde that ſuch as receiue it ſhould euerie man in his owne ſtate and calling, followe whatſoeuer is ordeined for him. Nowe it is true that in the time of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, the great men of the worlde claue not to the Goſpell, no more than we ſee them doe yet ſtill at this day: but the little ones and weakelinges were faine to be choſen, thereby to beate downe the pride of the worlde, as Saint Paule auoweth in the firſt to the Corinthians. Ye ſee (ſayeth he) that there bee not many noble men, men of power, or wiſe men among you. And why? For men are but too much giuen to the aduauncing of themselues: and if God had begunne at the great ones, the litle ones shoulde haue seemed as nothing. But God ment to beate downe all pride, that men might learne to chalendge nothing to themselues. Notwithstanding howesoeuer the case stand, when the great ones are called to the seruice of God, then must they imploy thēselues in the thinges that belong to their charge. For the thinges that I alleadged out of Esay, Dauid, and diuerse other Psalmes, belong to the reigne of our Lorde Iesus Christ, and to the state of the Christian Church. Therefore must we needes conclude, that our Lorde will haue Princes and magistrates to vse the sworde that is giuen them, to the mainteynaunce of his honour, and of the vnitie of faith and good agreement; so as if any man rayse vp trouble or goe about to sowe darnell, he may be rooted out. But is not that punishment too rigorous? [Yes:] for some will well ynough graunt (as constrained thereunto) that it is good that heresies shoulde be repressed: but that it were too great an extremitie to proceede so farre as to punishe them with death. Yea, but (as I sayde afore) wee must esteeme Gods honour as it deserueth. For if wee woulde that deceiuers shoulde be reproued, so as they might not haue their mouthes open, and yet that they shoulde not bee vtterly suppressed as were requisite: it were all one as if we shoulde say, In deede we ought to please God, but as for to put a man to death for blaspheming him, what a thing were that? Loe at what point we be.

Bet God for all that, will not faile to be had in estimation as I sayde afore: yea and that to our cost, if wee goe that way to worke. For the very cause in deede, why we see the worlde infected with so many troubles and errours, is our lasines in that wee haue neither zeale nor disposition to beate downe the leasinges of Satan. Nay rather (which worse is) there are a great number which maintaine them willingly. And yet in the meane while men crye out that all thinges are confounded, that all thinges goe to hauocke, and that there are so greate troubles as is pitie to beholde. And what is the cause thereof? Euen the princes that are willing to maintaine errours, and further them by all the meanes they can, so as it may seeme that they bee of Satans setting vp, as it were to vpholde his part against God and his worde. Their people likewise desire nothing so much, as to be fedde with lyes; that is al their seeking, and God sendeth it them. For (as I haue shewed afore) it is a iust rewarde for them. Why then should men cry alas, or why should they be greeued at the matter, when all men both great and small seeke the vtter defacing of Gods trueth, and to giue scope to all manner of leasinges? Therefore let vs learne in any wise to haue the zeale and affectiō which our Lorde commaundeth vs: or else it wil come to passe that heresies and errours shall in the end picke out our eyes, if we feede them still as wee be seene to doe. Let vs take the forementioned example of Ananias, and Ieremie. Ieremie taught in the name of God, and it was prooued sufficiently that hee stepped not foorth on his owne heade: and yet for all that, the people woulde haue hadde him to let them alone, that euerie man might haue followed his owne wicked lusts; they could not away with him, God his threatninges were to corrasiue, and therefore euery man sought to withstande Ieremie. Yea (quoth they) shall this fellowe trouble vs thus continually? Nowe heereupon God sent a deceiuer that went about to make Ieremie a lyer before all the people assembled in the Temple: and no doubt but a great number were offended at it specially such as might consider, or say thus: What? We haue heere the Temple of God, as he himselfe appointed, and it is the place where he will be worshipped; wee haue the Lawe, wee haue Gods promise that he will dwell among vs for euer. And yet nowe beholde, heere are two prophetes, of whome the one sayes, ye shall go into captiuitie, and the other sayes, it shall not be so. Besides this the deceiuer fell to buffeting of Ieremie as it were to shame him, and giueth him the lye, so as Gods prophet was faine to stande there as abashed at the sight of such trouble. By reason whereof many might be sore moued as I sayde afore. But what? Let vs a litle consider the state of that people. For when the gouernours were assembled, (which ought to haue mainteyned the pure religion, and had the prophet Ieremie as it were in their keeping) they to shewe themselues voyde of all iust dealing, did not onely sette themselues against Ieremie, but also (which worse is) affirme him to be worthie of death. Thus yee see howe Gods prophet was condemned both of greate and small: insomuch that euerie man ranne vppon him. For they were fully bent to giue themselues to all wickednesse, and to bee no more threatned in the name of GOD. If wee see the like noweadayes, let vs vnderstande that we bee worthy of such payment. For without going anie further, for all the preaching of the Gospell among vs, howe is it receiued? what reuerence yeelde wee to it? All men rush out into disorder, and we neede not speake any more of the popishe superstitions: for there is so deuilish wickednesse to bee seene, that euen such as haue beene counted the simplest cloynes, are fraughted full of blasphemies to spyte GOD withall and to laugh his worde openly to skorne. Yee see what murmuring there is, specially when vices are rebuked. To be shorte, mennes onely desire is to haue dumbe dogges, such as may haue no authoritie at all to speake, and vnruly people, drunkardes, gluttons, Leacherous, and I wote not what else. At a worde, men woulde haue either dogges or swine in the pulpit. This is the thing that they seeke for; And this is mennes desires in most places; who in steede of good and faithfull seruauntes to GOD, doe choose dogges and swine. And if a man seeke the remedie and the redresse of it: Hee must goe to the newefounde yles, for there is no man heere that will meddle with it. Sith we see such dealing, let vs consider what manner of obedience and feare of God there is in such folke. So much much the more therfore doth it ſtand vs in hand to beare ỹ exhortation wel in mind which I haue ſet downe alreadie: namely ỹ Gods working of our ſaluation is alwayes matched with his owne glorie. And therefore whenſoeuer he perſwadeth vs to maintaine his honour, it is all one as if he ſayd, Ye wretched people, if ye make reckening of the ſaluation of your owne ſoules: yee muſt prouide alſo that I may beare ſway among you, and that I may be honored: and therefore ſee that yee lay for it. Gods meaning then heereby is to ſhewe vs that he will haue his honour mainteined by making vs furtherers of his caſe, and that he will haue vs to ſette it foreward as much as in vs lyes, or elſe we ſhalbe a pray to the deuill. Seeing that hee vttereth ſuch loue towardes vs, it is no reaſon that wee on our ſide ſhoulde be negligent: but it behoueth vs to indeuour that errours and hereſies may be rooted out from among vs. For if we doe not, we muſt looke for the rewarde that I ſpake of, and God giueth vs too much proofe of it. On the other ſide when wee followe the order that is ſhewed vs heere, we muſt vnderſtande that it behoueth vs to haue Gods honour in ſuch eſtimation, as all other thinges may bee nothing with vs in compariſon of that. Which thing will come to paſſe, if wee ſticke ſtedfaſtly to his worde, and holde our ſelues to it though wee bee aſſaulted on all ſides; and ſpecially if wee reſiſt the miſchiefe by looking to it aforehande, ſo as it neſtle not among vs. Therefore let vs take heede that we bende our ſelues to it euerie man in his calling; and then wee neede not to doubt but that GOD will ſtrengthen vs and ſtabliſh vs in the faith which wee haue receiued of him, ſo as we ſhal continue ſtedfaſtly therein vnto the end; and be throughly well fenced againſt all the aſſaultes of Satan and his vnderlinges.

Nowe let vs fall downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes; praying him to make vs perceiue them better; And therewithall foraſmuch as wee ſhould ſoone be ouertaken by falſe teachers, let vs flee for ſuccour to our God, and yeelde him thankes for his ridding of vs from the hereſies and errours wherein wee were snarled, and for his giuing of vs the foode of life; praying him to make vs to taſt thereof in ſuch wiſe, as wee may neuer be turned away from it, but wiſely diſcerne the way of life and the way of death aſunder, to the ende that our ſaluation may bee kept ſafe in his handes, and we in the meane while eſchewe the wyles that Satan worketh againſt euerie of vs particularly, ſo as wee may put them from vs luſtily, and they haue no acceſſe vnto vs: but that wee may ſticke ſo ſtedfaſtly to our God, as our whole ſeeking may be to acknowledge him for our king, and wee behaue our ſelues as his people, that hee alſo may alwayes auowe vs to be ſo. That it may pleaſe him to grant this grace not onely to vs, but alſo to all people and nations of the earth. &c.

The Lxxxviij. Sermon which is the third vpon the thirteenth Chapter.

6 If thine owne brother the ſonne of thy Mother, or thine owne ſonne, or thy daughter, or the wife that is in thy boſomme, or thy neighbour that is to thee as thyne owne ſoule, goe about to intice thee, ſaying ſecretly, Let vs goe and ſerue other gods which thou haſt not knowen, nor yet thy fathers:

7 That is to wit, any of the gods of the nations that are about thee, whether they bee neere thee or farre off from thee, from the one ſide of the earth to the other:

8 Conſent not to him, neither giue eare vnto him: neither let thine eye fauour him, ſhewe him not any pitie, neither conceale him.

9 But thou ſhalt put him to death, thy hande ſhalbe the firſt vpon him to put him to death, and afterward the hand of all the people.

10 And thou ſhalt ſtone him with ſtones and ſo he ſhall die: (for he hath ſought to thruſt thee from the Lorde thy God, which brought thee out of the land of Egypt, from the houſe of bondage:)

11 That all Iſraell may heare and be afraide, and not doe ſuch a wicked thing among you any more.

Had

Pſal.69.10. HAd we the zeale in vs that is ſpoken of in the Pſalme, that wee tooke the reproch which is done vnto GOD, as if it were offered to our ſelues: this lawe here were in a manner needeleſſe. For euerie of vs woulde willingly of his owne accorde indeuour to maintaine Gods honour. But nowe inaſmuch as manie men thinke it to be too exceſſiue rigour to put the troublers and peruerters of religion to death: thereby it appeareth that we deſpiſe Gods honour and make no greate account of it. For euerie of vs would faine haue his owne honour maynteined, and if anie man haue ſtormed againſt vs, wee thinke the time will neuer come ſoone ynough for vs to bee reuenged. If a man doe vs any wrong or iniurie, wee woulde that euerie man ſhoulde ſette himſelfe againſt it in our defence: but if Gods honour bee trampled vnder foote, wee lette it ſlippe. Wee ſee then howe colde and vnluſtie wee bee, but this vnluſtineſſe of ours deſerueth a more ſhameſull name. For if a man ſuffer his father to bee ſcorned, folke will ſay hee is not worthie to liue in the worlde, becauſe he doeth againſt his kinde. And beholde, GOD is as it were torne in peeces by wicked mennes aduauncing of themſelues to rend aſunder the vnion of the fayth wherethrough it is his will to bee knowen, and whereby it is his will to reigne among vs: and that is borne withall. And is not that a token, that if it lay in vs wee woulde neuer haue any remembraunce of GOD at all? But foraſmuch as there is ſo litle zeale in vs; therefore is this Lawe giuen vs. And GOD declareth that hee is not vnmindefull of his owne maieſtie, but that hee will haue the defacing thereof to bee puniſhed. Naye rather hee ſheweth that hee diſclaymeth vs for his people, if we haue not a ſpeciall regarde of this caſe of his.

Wee haue hearde heeretofore what hath beene ſayde concerning falſe prophetes: namely that if anie man troubled the Churche of GOD, hee ſhoulde bee ſtoned to death without ſparing. Nowe God expreſſeth yet better the thing that he hadde ſpoken: which is, that we muſt put all affections of nature vnder foote, when his honour commeth in queſtion, ſo as the father muſt not ſpare his ſonne, nor the brother his brother, nor the husbande his wife, nor the friend his friende ỳ is as deere to him as his own life, ỳ he be not put to death. And good reaſon. For doe not all the friendeſhippes in the worlde proceede of that order of nature whiche the creator hath eſtabliſhed? Then if wee will not ſette the carte before the horſes, wee muſte alwayes beginne at GOD. And Saint Paule Eph.3.15. doeth not without cauſe ſay; that al kinred commeth from thence, and iſſueth out of that fountayne.

Alſo when there is any friendſhippe betweene man and man; it muſt alwayes bee referred to this marke, that GOD haue ſtill the cheife preheminence, and that wee be ioyned together in him. And curſed be al alyaunce that ſeparateth vs from our maker, in whome conſiſteth all our life, welfare, and ioye. Then if a husbande loue his wife, without regarde of GOD, hee is woorthie to bee thruſt out amonge the brute beaſtes. In like caſe is the father, which aimeth not at the ſame marke in louing of his children. If wee be ſo linked together, and haue ſo plighted our faith and trothe one to an other, as wee may ſeeme after a forte to haue as ye would ſay but one ſoule in two bodies, and in the meane while GOD be lette alone vnthought on: doe yee not ſee that it is too ſhamefull a beaſtlineſſe? Then is it not without cauſe that GOD hath tolde vs expreſly that his honour is to bee preferred before al worldely or naturall conſiderations. And lette vs marke well the wordes that are ſette downe heere; for they bee of great weight.

Moſes coulde haue ſayde ſingly, If thy brother, thy wife, thy ſonne, or ſome friende of thine incice thee, and goe aboute to allure thee to naughtineſſe, but hee addeth (which is of much more vehemencie) If thy brother the ſonne of thy mother, which laye in the ſame bellie that thou thy ſelfe diddeſt. And to what ende is this doone of GOD, but to ſearche the bottome of our affections, by entering euen vnto our bowels, as if hee ſhoulde ſay, I will ſee whether yee loue mee better than yee doe theſe carkeſſes? For what is thy brother? Hee is but a mortall creature: and I will ſee whether thou ſette more ſtore by him than by mee. Naye (ſay wee) but he and I laye both in one bellie. That is trewe, (ſayth GOD:) but is it not meete that I ſhoulde alwayes haue the vpper hande and higheſt preheminence? The ſame caſe is it when hee ſayeth, thine owne ſonne, thine owne daughter, thy wife that ſleepeth in thy boſome. Hee coulde haue ſayde ſingly; thy wife: but hee ſayeth, No, thou muſte forgette and quite and cleane ſhake off all the loue which thou beareſt to thy wife, if ſhee goe about to plucke thee away from me.

Agayne, If thou haue a friende (ſayeth hee) which is as deere to thee as thine owne life: thou muſt lay thy hande vppon him alſo to ſtone him: thou muſt not onely bee his accuſer and giue euidence againſt him; but thou muſt alſo ſette hande vppon him without ſparing: all mercie and pitie muſt bee put away in that caſe. Hereby wee ſee in effect, as I ſayde afore, that Gods will is to trie vs, whether wee truely loue him. And for that cauſe doeth he ſette downe vnto vs whatſoeuer might holde vs backe, or hinder our deſire from ſhewing ſuch zeale as wee ought to haue to the mainteinaunce of his honour: declaring vnto vs that if any thing bee an impediment to our continuall keeping of the vnion of fayth aboue all thinges, in ſuch wiſe as it is contayned in his woorde: wee bee traytoures and falſe hearted towardes him, and hee will ſhake vs off; and in ſteede of taking vs for his children, hee will giue vs ouer and baniſhe vs from his kingdome and his Churche: for hee will haue that order

obſerued among thoſe that are his. Marke that for one point.

And herewithall it behoueth vs to conſider of whome hee ſpeaketh. Hee ſayeth not onely, if a man goe about to aboliſh all religion, as wee ſee ſome worldlings doe, which coulde finde in their heartes like a ſort of dogges and ſwyne, that men ſhoulde make a mockerie of all the ſeruice of God; hee ſpeaketh not of ſuch kinde of men: But his saying is, if a man go about by ſuperſtitious meanes to turne thee from mee to the ſeruing of ydolles; although it bee of the gods that are moſte renowmed in the worlde, in the ſeruing and worſhipping of whome, the people that are about thee doe thinke themſelues to do well: If any man labour to turne thee from my worde, to make thee followe after thoſe gods: let him bee rooted out.

Nowe then, wee ſee, that God puniſheth, not onely thoſe that woulde aboliſh all religion: but alſo thoſe that woulde corrupt his trueth. And therefore for the better vnderſtanding of this lawe that is giuen vs heere, let vs marke at a worde, that it is not for vs to ſaye, There is no God, it is but folly for men to trouble themſelues about any deuotion, for wee ſhall gaine nothing by it: but [wee muſt conſider,] that if a man bee neuer ſo deuout, and thinke to doo neuer ſo well, yet if hee turne himſelfe to the ſuperſtitions of the Heathen like a renegate, and knowe not the true God: hee is condemned. And it is a diſtinction which wee ought to beare well in minde. For our Lorde ſheweth vs, that hee will haue vs to bee contented with his worde, and to reſt wholly vppon it, that wee may bee brydled by it, and not attempt to alter any thing, ſeeing hee hath once declared with his owne mouth what hee alloweth.

And hee ſayeth expreſſely, the gods which neither thou nor thy fathers haue knowen. By this saying hee doeth vs to vnderſtande that it behoooueth vs to bee well aſſured of our religion. For to put a man to death without hauing knowen which is the true God, were but a frantike zeale, as wee ſee the Papiſtes doe at this day, and the Heathen haue beene wont to doe at all times, yea, and euen the Iewes alſo, who haue put this lawe in execution (howbeit amiſſe) againſt the prophets. And vnder the ſame pretence were our Lorde Ieſus and his Apoſtles driuen to ſuffer perſecution.

As for the Heathen, when they made lawes for the obſeruing of the manner of religion that was ſtabliſhed among them; they had a good grounde and foundation for the thing they did. For it is not ynough for Magiſtrates to make lawes to repreſſe robberies, murther, and violence; but they knewe alſo howe it was meete that God ſhould haue the forehande. Nowe if nature taught them ſo much; what excuſe will there bee for vs that profeſſe Chriſtianitie, if we ſay it is ynough for men to repreſſe robberies, aduowtries, murthers, and other ſuch violent and outragious doings that tende to the hurt of priuate perſons: and in the meane while make none account of God? What a dealing were that? The Heathen then had a good grounde in that they knewe that in a well ordered Common weale, religion ought to bee obſerued, and that if any man attempted ought to the contrarie, he was to be puniſhed: in ſo much that it was a matter of life and death among them, and it was obſerued throughout all the worlde in all ages.

The Iewes did not amiſſe in beeing zelous in puniſhing falſe prophets after that God had giuen them this lawe. Likewiſe in theſe dayes, whereas the Papiſtes ſay that Heretikes are to bee puniſhed; that is true, wee confeſſe that they bee worthie of it. But therewithal they ought to come to the poynt that is ſet downe heere, namely, that it behoueth vs to knowe which is the GOD whome wee ſerue, and that wee bee ſure that our religion is not a thing ſet foorth at all aduenture, but that wee holde the infallible trueth of Gods owne ſending, and that it is preached vnto vs in his name & by his authoritie: ſo as it is hee on whome our faith is grounded. It woulde become vs (ſay I) to come to that poynt. But the Papiſtes play the beaſts in that behalfe, bearing themſelues in hand that ſo they ſhut their eyes, they may execute their rage and furie vppon innocents.

And after the ſame manner haue the Heathen ouerſhot themſelues. For, becauſe religion was to bee maintained, they not diſcerning what they did, nor perceiuing whether it was good or euill: did ſet themſelues againſt the ſeruauntes of God. Likewiſe dealt the Iewes with the Prophets. Yee ſee then here is a point which it ſtandeth vs in hande to wey well all our life long: and that is, that wee muſt haue knowen the true God, ſo as wee may iuſtly and without grudge of conſcience condemne the errours which men woulde drawe vs to. Which thing will come to paſſe, if wee haue the light of Gods worde to ſhewe vs the way: for thence it is that all good diſcretion commeth.

Nowe then, to the intent wee may benefite our ſelues by this text, let vs marke firſt of all what loue wee ought to beare to our Lord God, when hee hath vttered himſelfe vnto vs. Namely that wee muſt beware that in any wiſe hee may bee ſerued without gainſaying; and that the rule which hee hath giuen vs bee vnbroken, and that nothing bee chaunged in his worde; but that we make much more account of the doctrine which wee haue receiued of him, than of our liues. And therefore let vs not bee plucked backe from the ſaide zeale for any worldly reſpect as wee ſee the worlde is, which fauoureth more his owne fleſhly affections than God. But howſoeuer the caſe ſtande; yet muſt wee fight againſt all impedimentes and diſtreſſes, vntill the ſaide zeale doe get the vpper hande in vs, ſo as wee will rather cauſe them to dye which ſeeke the defacing of the true Religion, than ſuffer ſuch a plague to preuaile in the Church, to the infecting and marring of our ſelues or of any others.

And hereof wee may gather a good exhortation; which is, that when wee ſee Gods honour impaired any manner of way, it muſt greeue vs at the heart, according to the generall ſaying of the Pſalme, concerning all reproches. I ſay wee muſt not beare with any thing whatſoeuer it be, whereby Gods honour may be impeached or defaced. But what? Little (in deede) is this doctrine imbraced nowadaies. For blaſphemie hath his ful ſcope euery where; and if a body be to be reproued for ſo doing; though a doſen perſons bee at the hearing of the blaſphemie: yet ſhall not a man finde ſo much as one witneſſe. In this caſe God ordeyneth all both ſmall and greate to bee his aduocates, and hee will haue euery man to doe him ſeruice in it.

Pſal 69,10.

For it needes not to bee ſayd to a man, Haue a care to bewray blaſphemie when ye heare it: No for hee is knowen to haue beene preſent; and yet if hee bee asked of it, hee doeth but wring his groyne like a ſwyne, and ſaye, I heard him not. Such folke are well worthie, not only that God ſhould plucke their eares from their head, but alſo vtterly ouerwhelme them. They bee monſters that can heare the name of their maker blaſphemed, and yet couer ſuch filthines and ſuffer it to abyde vnpuniſhed. Is it not reaſon that God ſhould ſhew how it is hee to whom they be to yeeld accompt for it? And though he winke at it, yet let not vs thinke that they which forſweare themſelues ſo vntruſtily, ſhall ſcape ſcotfree, but that in the ende GOD will ſhewe howe it is not without cauſe that hee hath pronounced, that to fauour euill is worſe than to doe euill. For it may bee that hee that doeth the euill is carried to it by choler or by ſome other affection: but as for him that cloketh it, he is not onely a partaker of it, but alſo a wilfull iuſtifier of it as it were in deſpite of GOD: and that is an vtter peruerting of the order of nature. And therefore lette vs learne by that which is tolde vs heere, that euerie of vs muſt beare ſuch zeale to the mainteinaunce of Gods honour, as not to ſpare anie kinne or friende, if they ſteppe vppe to ſette themſelues againſt him to whome wee belong, and to whome wee owe all ſeruice, going about to ouerthrowe his ſeate, and to diſappoint him that hee may no more reigne among vs. And therefore whenſoeuer Gods honour is darkened or diminiſhed among vs, let euerie of vs in his ſtate looke to it that we be ſo zealous as to redreſſe it to the vttermoſt of his power. This is ỹ firſt point which we haue to marke heere.

And moreouer, if any man ſhoulde goe about to alter the Religion, ſo as GOD ſhoulde after a ſorte bee driuen from among vs; it were meete that our zeale ſhoulde in that caſe be kindled yet more. For if wee bee nice in hauing our owne honour touched: what ought wee to be when Gods kingdome is in daunger of vtter diſpatch? If there be ſome wicked practiſe in a Citie, ſo as ſome treaſon, inſurrection or alteration of the ſtate is a bruing, and one hauing but ſome ſecret incling of it tolde him in his eare, doe conceiue it; ſhall hee not bee taken as neceſſarie, and bee adiudged woorthie of puniſhment? If it be proued againſt a man that ſome wicked treaſon was a practiſing; and hee heard of the matter and yet diſcouered it not; he ſhall be puniſhed as a traytour, and men will ſay hee was well worthie of ſuch puniſhment. And ſhall we bee helde excuſed of our ſilence, when an inſurrection is made againſt GOD, and men goe about to ouerthrowe his holy temple, that he might not dwell any more among vs, ſo as they indeuour to deface his maieſtie, and furthermore to caſt vp the ſaluation of mennes ſoules as a pray to Satan, and wee ſay nothing to it? Doeth not our diſſimulation import both trecherie and periurie againſt GOD? Yet notwithſtanding there be ſome ſo farre paſt ſhame, that they demaunde at euerie turne, Who is he that findeth faulte with mee? Whome haue I wronged? Behoulde, hee hath played the blaſphemous and wicked wretche, in fluſhing out ſome matter ſo vglye againſt GOD, as hee ought to be rooted out for it; and yet hee ſayes, Who complaines of mee? If hee had ſtolne but fifteene pence, he ſhoulde be whipped; and for the ſeconde or thirde offence, he ſhould goe to the gallowes: and like a Churchtraytour hee hath trampled Gods maieſtie vnder foote, wherin hee hath doone worſe than the theefe that cuttes a trauellers throte, in a wood; and yet to his owne ſeeming he is iuſt ſtill. And whereof commeth this, but of the foreſaid laſineſſe, that no man bethinks himſelf of his dutie in that behalfe? GOD doeth vs the honour to make vs mainteyners of his trueth, as though he made vs a ſolemne commiſſion of it.

And is not that ſuch a preheminence, as of duetie ought to make euerie of vs to ſtreine himſelfe (yea euen beyonde his power) to ſhew a conſtant and inuincible zeale in cauſing men to ſerue and honour GOD? For if a prince imployed a man in his afaires, and did put him in commiſſion; hee woulde ſtrayne himſelfe ſo farre, as he woulde euen hazarde his life; and hee woulde thinke that what paine ſo euer hee tooke, though he did much more, yet all were too litle ſeeing hee hadde ſo honourable a charge.

Beholde, the liuing GOD taketh vs as if wee were his defenders, and will haue euerie of vs to repreſent his owne perſon: and yet for all that, we deſpiſe all thoſe thinges; when Gods name is blaſphemed wee make no reckening of it; the partie himſelfe that hath taken the othe to conceale no ſuch thing, ſhall playe the traytour firſt. And therefore it is no woonder though wicked folke take ſuch libertie, and that when they bee conuicted, they alleadge that no man complaines of them, & that they haue done no man any wrong.

For were wee the true children of GOD, ſurely wee woulde tender the wronges that are doone to him, more than the wronges that are doone to our ſelues, and wee woulde take them much ſorer to hearte.

For

For if wee our ſelues bee offended, is it any great matter? But when Gods holy name is lightly eſteemed, and reproched; then wee ought to bee verie tender hearted. And becauſe wee thinke not of it; when wee haue blaſphemed God, wee ſay wee haue done no man any wrong.

Furthermore, let vs conſider (as I haue ſaide afore) that if wee muſt endeuour by all the meanes wee can to haue ſwearing redreſſed: much more reaſon is it that wee ſhoulde not ſuffer any man to ſtep vp to trouble the Church, and to make any rebellion, but vtterly roote out ſuch a peſtilent fellowe out of hande. But yet before all other thinges, let vs looke that wee knowe Gods trueth aforehand, that wee may be able to maintaine the ſame: for without that, wee ſhall goe lumpiſhly to worke, and our zeale ſhalbee but as the rage of madfolkes; as I haue alreadie ſhewed by the examples of the heathen men, Iewes, and Papiſtes. The Papiſtes haue a faire colour, in ſaying that if a man deface the maieſtie of a Prince, hee ſhall not ſcape vnpuniſhed: and therefore it is much more reaſon that men ſhoulde bee puniſhed for ſetting themſelues againſt God. Yea: but in the meane while they wote not what GOD they worſhip: for they bee carried away with their owne wicked and diueliſh ſuperſtitions. Let vs marke then, that wee muſt not take this lawe here at alauenture; but that to begin well, wee muſt lay this foundation, that wee bee ſure that the religion which wee holde is of God. As for example, wee haue the holy Scripture; and there our Lorde hath ſhewed vs his will. Hee proteſteth by his Prophet Eſay that hee hath not ſpoken vainly nor couertly, nor meant to beguile men in bidding them to ſeeke him. Then haue wee an open declaration of Gods trueth, ſo wee obey his worde by faith, and receiue it without gainſaying.

Eſa.45.19.

When wee bee at that poynt, wee may well with good conſcience and ſafetie puniſh ſuch as ſeeke to turne vs away from the trueth. But if wee be doutfull and wauering, and go to it but by weening: what will come of it, but that wee ſhall puniſh innocent perſons, as wee ſee the Papiſtes doe by perſecuting our Lorde Ieſus in his members? It were better for them nowadayes that they killed one another without colour of iuſtice, than to perſecute the children of God after that faſhion. For the matter ſtandeth not vppon the puniſhing of men by taking away their liues, or by ſheading of giltleſſe bloud through wicked crueltie: but vppon the making of warre againſt the liuing God, and vpon the ſuffering againe of our lord Ieſus Chriſt in his members.

And let vs marke, that whenſoeuer wee falſly pretende the name of God for a colour; our fault is doubled in ſo abuſing it, and we become ſo much the more blame woorthie. As for example, when the Papiſtes nowadayes doe perſecute the faithfull, and vſe ſuch exceſſiue crueltie as they doe: they can welynough ſay, it is the zeale of God that driueth vs to doe it. If a man haue ſlayne one or robbed one; very well, hee ſhalbee layde vppon the wheele. And what ſhalbee done when Gods maieſtie is defaced? Shoulde the partie ſcape vnpuniſhed? So will they alleage. Yea; but firſt they ſhoulde inquire of the caſe. For like as ſometimes men puniſh giltleſſe perſons accuſed of falſe crymes: ſo may it well bee (and wee ſee it by experience,) that Martyres are perſecuted in ſteede of heretikes. Therefore were it meete to looke well to the matter.

But nowadayes if a man ſay that wee ought to call vppon none but onely God in the name of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, and that wee ſhoulde not fetche any further compaſſes after the imaginations of men, by praying to the virgine Marie or other Saintes deceaſſed to bee our patrones and aduocates; but that wee ought to holde our ſelues contented with Ieſus Chriſt, to whome that office is giuen by God his Father: By and by they crye out, to the fire with him. And howe ſo? It is the pure doctrine of the holy Scripture. Yea, but the church of Rome admitteth it not.

If a man ſay, wee muſt worſhip God after a ſpirituall manner, without making any puppets to him, and that the breaking of the rule which our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt hath giuen vs, is vtter abomination: out vppon it, thats a foule hereſie, at leaſtwiſe by the iudgement of the popedome. But yet for all that, the Scripture beareth it. If a man ſay wee haue no freewill to doe good, but that wee bee vtterly corrupted; and that if there bee any goodneſſe in vs, it proceedeth of Gods meere grace and mercie; ſo that our going forwarde towardes the marke, is becauſe wee bee renewed by his holy Ghoſte, and yet neuertheleſſe that wee bee weake, and had neede to flee continually for refuge to the forgiueneſſe which GOD promiſeth vs, and whereby wee bee reconciled vnto him, whereunto wee attaine not by out owne deſertes and ſatisfactions, but muſt bee faine to bee purged by the bloudſhed of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, and by that meanes wee obtaine ſaluation: if theſe thinges (ſay I) bee alleaged: by and by hee muſt bee haled to the ſtake. And why? Becauſe all this is condemned by their Synagogues.

Yea, but it were meete for them that they ſhoulde giue eare vnto God. For did hee forgo his authoritie when hee ſayde that we ſhould neither ad too nor diminiſh from the thinges that hee hath ſpoken, as wee haue ſeene alreadie heretofore? For thereby doeth he ſhewe at what ende it behoooueth vs to beginne. Then is it a helliſh kinde of dealing, when men ſtay not vppon the thinges that GOD commaundeth, and that are conteyned in his worde, and yet notwithſtanding doe take vppon them to burthen other men with what lawes they liſt.

If a man ſay that wee muſt ſerue God according to his commaundementes, and not depend vpon thoſe that take vpon thē to enioyne lawes to mens ſoules, and that all ſuch inuentions are fooliſh: What? Shall the traditions of our mother holy Church bee ſo reiected? That were a deadly and intolerable cryme. If a man ſpeake of the Sacraments, & ſay that baptiſme ought to be miniſtred in a knowen tounge, that men may vnderſtande to what ende our Lorde Ieſus ordeyned it, what fruite it yeeldeth, and how to vſe it aright: and moreouer that men may perceiue that baptiſme ſendeth vs to our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, and hath no power of it ſelfe further than God worketh by his holy ſpirite, which appeareth when wee haue an eye to him that is the verie ſubſtance of baptiſme: and that all the trifling toyes ought to bee put away wherewith men haue mocked God to the full, namely, the ceremonies of their owne inuenting which are but vtter corruptions of baptiſme, as their ſpittle, their ſalt, & all their other maygames which they play withall: If a man talke ſo of their ſtuffe, he muſt be put to death for it out of hand. And why? Fye vppon him, hee is a ranke heretike, he is not to bee borne with. Yea, but they ſhoulde ſee firſt whether it bee an hereſie or no. For by that meanes they make God him ſelfe an heretike for want of due examination; and what a dealing is that? If a man ſay that our Lordes ſupper ought to bee receiued according to the rule which hee him ſelfe did giue vs, that is to wit, that wee ſhoulde communicate togither, ſo as the bread might bee a warrant to vs that wee bee truely become partakers of his bodie, and the wine a warrant that wee bee partakers of his bloud, and conſequently that the Maſſe is an abhomination of the diuels owne deuiſing, for that therein the Chriſtians are ſo farre off from communicating together, that one man ſeparates himſelfe from all the reſt of the company: beholde, then muſt excommunication ſerue as a ſauce for all meates.

Againe, if a man come at Eaſter to receiue the Lordes ſupper, hee muſt haue but a morſel, and hee muſt holde him contented with the one halfe of it: and moreouer, contrarie to Chriſt his inſtitution, which ſayes: take and eate: they woulde beare God in hand that he ſhall receiue; wee giue it thee, ſay they. Beſides this, if a man intende to bee reconciled to GOD, the Maſſe muſt ſerue as a new ſacrifice, and although they ſay it is the ſame that Ieſus Chriſt himſelfe offered, yet doe they oftentimes reiterate it. If a man open his mouth againſt ſuch abhominations, O that is an vntolerable cryme. The aire muſt ring of the great outcryes that ſhalbe made againſt it. How now, ſay they? What ado haue wee here? Hee hath ſpoken againſt the decrees of the holy Councels. Yea, but before that God commaunded the puniſhment of Renegates that ſhoulde goe about to trouble the Church, and to ſet diuiſion in the faith; he ſaide, Thou ſhalt not doe what ſeemeth good in thine owne eyes; but thou ſhalt ſubmit thy ſelfe obediently to my ſayinges, and not ſtep aſide from my worde, but yeelde your ſelues to it both great and ſmall; and therefore that order ought to bee maintained.

But wee ſee that all thinges are turned vpſide downe. And therefore let vs looke that wee bee well informed, (as I ſaide afore) and that wee bee well aſſured that wee haue Gods certaine trueth, and that wee bee throughly reſolued of it, ſo as wee may bee able to ſay, It is God that hath ſpoken it, we haue beene taught it in his ſchoole, and wee renounce all imaginations of men: for wee knowe there is nothing but vanitie and vntrueth in men. God then muſt bee the author of our faith, and allowe it, before wee can ſay, This is the trueth. And when wee bee ſo reſolued, then may wee obey this commaundement here.

But wee muſt marke therewithall, that it is not ynough for men to excuſe themſelues by ſaying, as for mee I meane not to aboliſh all religion; and yet if I like well of this thing, why ſhoulde it not bee lawfull for mee to haue it? Moſes ſheweth vs that although a man pretend the title of ſome god, yet is that nothing: for wee muſt haue the liuing GOD; and that when wee haue once the knowledge of the true Religion, that muſt ſuffice vs, and that if wee goe aſtraye, it is through our owne faulte, and there is no excuſe for vs. That is the meaning of Moſes, and it is a doctrine well worthie to bee noted. For many men might finde ſtarting holes in this behalfe.

May not a man bee ouerſeene through ſimplicitie? Yes: but when wee haue once knowen God, wee cannot bee ſeparated from him, but our malice muſt needes bee vtterly vnexcuſable. And therefore let vs take courage to benefite our ſelues: and when Gods worde is giuen vs freely and preached vnto vs purely, let vs bee ſo confirmed in it, as wee bee not anye more like wauering reedes, yeelding to euery wynde, nor as little children whome euery man may beguyle: but let vs vſe wit and diſcretion. And in deede our Lorde giueth vs his worde, not onely to the intent wee ſhould ſaye, Lo, this or that is good: but to the ende that euery man ſhoulde keepe himſelfe from euill, & bee fenced and armed againſt al temptations of Satan, ſo as wee might haue wherewith to reſiſt him when hee goeth about to thruſt vs out of the way.

Eph. 4. 14.

Nowe, Gods worde is tearmed a ſpirituall ſworde: and therefore wee haue wherewith to outſtande all aſſaultes, ſo wee haue profited in Gods worde as wee ſhoulde doe. And hereby it appeareth what diuels they bee, which would nowadayes leaue all things in dout. For there are fantaſticall perſons which ſay, What? If a man will puniſh Heretikes, hee muſt do it continually; becauſe all thinges are out of order. True it is, that men ought to ſerue God. And if any man woulde ſaye there were no diuine maieſtie in heauen, there is no GOD, there ought to bee no religion in the worlde, O, that were not to bee abidden. But as long as men holde this grounde, that there is a GOD; it is ynough.

Eph. 6. 17.

And although the heathen keepe ſtil their dotages, although the Iewes be wilfull in maintayning their falſe expoſition of ỹ lawe, although the Turkes

Turkes holde ſtill their Mahomets Alcoran, although the Papiſtes bee ſtill intangled in their ſuperſtitions: all is one, ſo they holde faſt this principle, that there is a God. Yea, but Moſes ſayeth here expreſſely, that although a man pretende an intent to ſerue God: yet muſt hee bee ſtoned to death, if it be knowen that hee meant but onely to ouerthrowe or diſguiſe the true religion. And what more then? For (as I haue ſayd) wee muſt not onely pronounce with our mouth that there is a God: but wee muſt alſo diſcerne him from all the abuſes that men haue inuented of their owne brayne. For otherwiſe it is but a mocking of all the holy Scripture. I ſhall ſay I worſhip God, and in the meane time I worſhip a pupper. And what is my God? It is a fantaſie that I haue deuiſed in mine owne head: it is not the liuing God, hee diſclaymeth all ſuch dealings, & ſo am I but a forger. For (as Rom.1,21. Saint Paul ſpeaketh of it in the firſt to the Romanes,) ſuch as haue wandred away after their owne imaginations, haue transformed the maieſtie of GOD, though their intent was to worſhip the liuing God, as the Papiſtes doe, which proteſt that they worſhip God the maker of heauen and earth; and likewiſe the Turkes, who ſay the ſame thing; and ſo alſo doe the Iewes, notwithſtanding that they abhorre Ieſus Chriſt.

And it is ſayd in Saint Iohn, that hee which 1.Ioh.2.23. beleeueth not in the Sonne beleeueth not in the Father which ſent him. Nay he that turneth away from Ieſus Chriſt, doeth vtterly renounce God. For where dwelleth the fulneſſe of the Col.2.17. Godhead but in Ieſus Chriſt? When the Turks 2.Tim.3.16. ſet their Mahomet in the place of Gods ſonne, knowing not that God hath manifeſted himſelf in the fleſh (which is one of the chiefe articles of our faith): what a dealing is it? So then, how many thinges ſoeuer men terme by the name of God, they bee but diuels of their owne deuiſing 1.Cor.10.20 and ſetting vp, if they keepe not themſelues faſt incloſed within the boundes of the holy ſcripture. And therefore let vs marke well, that wee muſt holde vs to the pure Religion; and when wee bee well aſſured of that, then muſt we come to this lawe whereof Moſes ſpeaketh here. And whoſoeuer aduaunceth himſelfe againſt it, let him bee rooted out.

Nowe if the man that woulde drawe vs to the ſeruing of ſtraunge gods, deſerue to bee put to death: what is to be done to theſe dogges whoſe whole indeuour is to turne all vpſide downe, and to beſotte the whole worlde, ſo as men may not knowe any more what religion is? And in theſe dayes wee ſee this kinde of weede to riſe thorough the whole worlde, a ſorte of heatheniſh people, which ſerue to no purpoſe but to ſcoffe and ieſt at all thinges that are ſpoken of GOD. Alſo what ſhall become of thoſe that commit ſo open blaſphemie, as they may ſeeme to make but a mockerie of all the holye Scripture, as though it were nothing elſe but fables? Nowe then, ſith wee ſee that Moſes ſpeaketh ſo: what doe they deſerue which do ſo trouble and defile the holy thinges?

Beholde there comes mee an hypocrite that woulde deuiſe a newe Religion, as it were to ſet vp a popedome here againe, or to bring in the Alcoran of Mahomet: nowe ought ſuch a one to bee put to death without forbearing, for ſo hath God ordeyned. And if any man ſay, it is crueltie; let him finde fault with God for it, and wee ſhall ſee if he can preuaile.

On the other ſide, if wee may well ſpit in ſuch mennes faces, notwithſtanding that they ſaye that their ſo doing is to maintaine Gods honor, what is to bee doone to ſuch as will needes after a ſort deface it quyte and cleane? But let vs come backe againe to the matter. There is a man that goes about to peruert the trueth thorough fonde deuotion; and to turne it into vntrueth: the ſame man ought to dye. There is a Royſter that caſteth forth lewd ſcoffes againſt the holy Scripture, as doeth that diueliſh fellowe which is called Pantagruell, and all his filthie and ribauldly writings: and this ſort of men pretende not to ſet vp any newe Religion, as though they were deluded by their owne fooliſh imaginations: but like madde dogges they belke out their filthineſſe againſt the maieſtie of God, and their meaning is to ouerthrowe all religion: and ſhoulde ſuch bee ſpared? Why not? for they haue the Cardinalles for their vpholders, they bee fauoured and maintained by them: in ſo much that the names of theſe Lord Cardinalles are blazed in thoſe goodly bookes, which ſerue to mocke God as well as Mahomet. All is one, all may bee abidden, ſo the Cardinalles bee curryed, it is welynough, and it doth them good to bee ſo regiſtred: whereby a man may ſee that they not onely mocke at all Religion, but alſo coulde finde in their heartes to aboliſh all religion quite and cleane.

But herewithall let vs alſo ſee howe wee may apply this to our owne vſe, for wee muſt not onely condemne thoſe that haue ſhewed themſelues ſuch as I haue ſpoken of: but wee muſt alſo fare the better by their example, to the end wee may knowe howe it is too wicked, yea, and too diueliſh a thing, that when men go about to make ſome backeſlyding or to ſet ſome trouble among vs, and much rather to driue away all feare of GOD, and bee fauoured or ſhrowded, or hardened vnto, or haue any gappe left open to them, or be let alone vnpuniſhed; it is the next way to vndoe and marre all. And yet wee haue ſeene examples of ſuch as haue maintained ſo curſed thinges, yea, and of ſuch importance as the verie Papiſtes themſelues coulde not endure them. For it is certaine that the two heretikes that were here, did wreſt the holy Scriptures much more than the Papiſtes. As touching this Triacle maker, who was the firſt of them; hee maintayned free will, & deſtroyed Gods election: and are thoſe thinges maintained among the Papiſtes? Neuertheleſſe wee ſee how he was fauoured, & hee was held vp by the chinne as it were in deſpite of God.

Againe, as touching the ſeconde, wee knowe how he was ſo horrible a blaſphemer, that al mē abhorred his leawde opinions: and yet for all that, had he not his maintainers and defenders? Yes: for men ſhewed them more fauour than if they had beene the neereſt of their kin. And yet was it not euident that they conſpired continually againſt God and his trueth, to wage battel againſt him? Therefore let vs looke neerlyer to our ſelues, & to conclude let vs vnderſtād that when God hath giuen vs the grace to haue the certeintie of faith, ſo as we be grounded vpō his worde; wee muſt holde vs to it after ſuch a fort, that whenſoeuer we ſee any bodie go about to trouble the order which God hath ſet, wee may all ſet our ſelues againſt it, and not tary till al agree in one, but that whoſoeuer of vs doth firſt perceiue the miſchiefe, the ſame doe diſcouer it out of hande, and euery of vs do his duetie in ſuch wiſe, as ſuch plagie perſons bee not nouriſhed among vs. For (as I haue declared alreadie) wee ſee there is ſuch frailtie in vs, that 1.Cor 5.6. & Gal.5.9. a verie little leauen will ſower our whole batche of dowe; and as ſoone as wee giue eare to Satans iuggling trickes, by and by wee bee ouerthrowen and ſo intangled, that in the ende wee bee carryed quite away from our God and from the true religion.

God therefore beeing acquainted with our frailtie, meant to prouide for it by ſhewing vs that it behoueth vs to cut vp the wicked weedes out of hand. Accordingly alſo as the Apoſtle in the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes ſayeth, that wee Hebr.12.15. muſt not ſuffer any euill weedes to growe: for they will marre the good corne, and if the time bee foreſlowed, it wilbee too late afterwarde. Then muſt wee not driue off till to morowe; but euery of vs muſt quicken and ſtirre vp himſelfe, following the exhortation that is made vnto vs heere.

Moreouer, ſeeing wee bee commaunded to plucke vp whatſoeuer is contrarie to the maieſtie of God, and whatſoeuer may peruert or put away the true religion: let euery of vs ſee that hee ſo offer and dedicate himſelfe to our God, as wee may not thruſt one another out of the right way. If any man goe about to thruſt mee out of the way: beholde, God commaundeth mee to riſe vp againſt him; and though it were mine owne brother, my ſonne or my wife; yet is it ſayde that I ought not to ſpare them. Now then, if I my ſelfe thruſt others out of the way, is it not a farre more heynous crime? I ſhalbe taken for an acceſſarie if I doe but conceale another bodies misbehauiour, and I ſhewe my ſelfe a traytour to Godwarde: Nowe then, if I my ſelfe bee an author of euill, howe deepe am I in? So then, if wee will correct other folkes miſdealings ſo roughly, let vs beare in minde that wee muſt in any wiſe holde our ſelues in the feare of God, ſo as in caſes concerning his honour, wee bee not a ſtumbling blocke to driue wretched ſoules to deſtruction; but rather indeuour to gather home the ſtray ſheepe into the flocke, & to bring back the wanderers into the right way, and to maintaine and further ſuch as are in the good way alreadie, and all of vs lende our helping handes one to another, that wee may goe ſerue our God with one common accord.

Nowe let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to receiue vs into his fauor, and that although wee be wretched ſinners and vnworthie to come in his ſight; yet notwithſtanding it may pleaſe him to accept of vs, and to refourme vs in ſuch wiſe by his holy ſpirite, as all our life may bee imployed to his glorie, and our whole ſeeking hencefoorth may bee to aduaunce the kingdome of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt his ſonne. And ſo let vs all ſay, Almightie God, heauenly father, &c.

On Munday the xxj. of October. 1555.

The Lxxxix Sermon, which is the fourth vpon the thirteenth Chapter.

12 If thou heare ſay, that in any of the cities which the Lorde thy God giueth thee to dwell in,

13 Some wicked men are gone from among you, and haue ſeduced the inhabitants of their cities, ſaying, let vs go and ſerue other gods whome yee haue not knowen:

14 Then ſhalt thou ſearch, and inquire, and examine the matter throughly, & if it be true & certaine that ſuch abhomination hath beene doone among you:

15 Thou ſhalt roote out the inhabitants of that citie with ỹ edge of the ſword, and vtterly deſtroy the citie, and all that is in it, and the verie cattell thereof with the edge of the ſworde.

16 And thou ſhalt gather al the ſpoyle thereof together into the middes of the citie, and burne vp the citie and all the ſpoyle thereof with fire to the Lorde thy God: and it ſhalbe a heapē for euer, and neuer be builded againe,

17 And none of the curſed thinges ſhall ſticke to thy handes, that the Lorde your God may turne away the fiercenesſe of his wrath from thee, and giue thee mercie, and haue pitie vpon thee and multiply thee, as he ſware to thy fathers, 18 Becauſe thou ſhalt haue obeyed the voyce of the Lorde thy God, in keeping all his commaundementes which I commaund thee this day, to the ende thou mayeſt doe the thinges that are right in the eyes of the Lorde thy God.

WE haue ſeene heretofore what manner of zeale wee ought to haue to ỹ mainteining of Gods true ſeruice & the pure religiõ: that is to wit, that we muſt forget al ỹ friendſhip of the world, and ſhewe that we make more account of the honor of our God, than of all thoſe that are as deere to vs as our owne ſoules. But now Moſes proceedeth further, and ſayth that wee muſt vſe ſuch rigour not only againſt particular perſons, but alſo againſt whole cities. Now if a whole Citie ought to be raſed for breaking ỹ ſeruice of God; what ſhalbe done to any one man? Should he be borne with? Here then we ſee how Gods honour ought to be preferred before the whole worlde. And becauſe he had ſet downe a right and pure order to ỹ people of Iſrael how to do it; his mind was that it ſhould be kept to the vttermoſt, and that if any man tranſgreſſed it, he ſhould be cut off; inſomuch that if it were a whole people that had done it; they ſhould be delt withall after the ſame maner. Now then we ſee yet better, howe carefull wee ought to be for the preſeruation of religion in his purenes. True it is that we ought to be alwayes mindefull of ỹ which we haue ſayd already; namely that it ſerueth not to excuſe ydolaters whẽ they be ſo inraged with zeale without diſcretion. For we muſt be ſure a forehande, that the religion which we holde is holy, & that God alloweth of it, ſo as it is not a doctrine forged at the pleaſure of men, but Gods owne will vttered vnto vs of his owne free fauour, whereof we haue good and infallible record, that if any ſet himſelfe againſt it, he muſt be cutte off: yea though it were a whole Citie. So litle ought any priuate perſon to be forborne, that euen a whole citie ought to be deſtroyed for it.

But to the intent this doctrine may be ỹ better vnderſtoode; let vs marke the order which God commandeth here to be kept. If it be ſayde, that is to ſay, if the report go, that ſome wicked perſons are gone from among you, and haue led away the inhabitantes of a Citie: make good inquiſition of the matter, & ſearch it out diligently and vnfainedly to the vttermoſt: and if it be found to be ſo; let that Citie bee vtterly deſtroyed with the edge of the ſworde, and ſo forth. Now firſt our Lordes will is, that when any brute goeth of an euill deede, we ſhould firſt inquire how ỹ caſe ſtandeth. And hereby he ſheweth that ſueh as haue authoritie of the ſword, & ſit in the ſeate of Iuſtice, muſt not be retchleſſe, in ſuffering thinges to paſſe before their eyes, without making any countenance to ſee them. Is there then any brute of a thing? Inquiſition muſt be made of it. For if it be let paſſe, we ſhew that our intent is to nouriſhe the euill: and the parties that haue ſo concealed it, muſt in ỹ ende abide their payment, which is that it muſt light wholly vpon their owne heads, as we ſee it commeth to paſſe. And it is a iuſt puniſhmẽt of God, that when ſuch as are in office to remedie & redreſſe euill, doe beare with it, they themſelues ſhould abide the paine of it. And when they ſuffer it, it happeneth not by haphazard, but God yeeldeth them the iuſt wages which they haue deſerued. Therefore we muſt marke this text, that God will haue vs to be doing aforehand as ſoone as the brute is reported or giuen forth, & not to tary till the thing be apparaunt, without ſetting hand to it or without making inquiſition of it: but he will haue the Iuſtice to inquire of it betimes, ſpecialy when there goeth any brute of it. And by the way, to the intent there be not a ſlight inquirie made of it as it were but for faſhions ſake; he vſeth here three wordes: and afterwarde he addeth that it muſt be done throughly, ſo as there be an exquiſite care vſed in the matter. For diuers times, informations are taken when ſome cõplaint is made, and that the euill is knowen, yea and ỹ in ſuchwiſe as they be aſhamed to cloke it altogether, and ſo witneſſes bee called. But they will not ſeeke to vnderſtand the pith of the matter, they doe but vſe a kinde of forme for faſhions ſake, as who ſhould ſay ỹ matter is not buried, becauſe there hath bin ſome ſeeking to knowe the truth of it. But what? This is no proofe: that is to ſay, we wil not ſearch how the caſe ſtands in deede. For the witneſſes are diſpatched ere they haue tolde halfe their tales: and that which they haue ſpoken is let ſlip, ſo as wee ſee not the thing that is as apparant as the nooneday.

Now to the end that men ſhould not daly after that ſort with God; it is ſayd expreſly that inquiſition ſhould be made, that the matter ſhould be examined, and information dewly taken. And therfore let Iuſtices vnderſtand, that they ſhall not goe quit, but that God will hold them giltie, for neglecting their duetie, if they do not what they can to bring matters to light, when they heare any complaint or any brute of them. Neuertheleſſe our Lords meaning is not that mẽ ſhould iudge at aladuenture, but that the crime ſhould be duly proued whether it be ſo of a truth in deede. He vſeth two wordes to ſhew that a Iudge ought not to be led by bare ſuſpition to conclude what hee liſteth. For wee muſt be faine to beare with the euill when it is not knowen, becauſe God hath not yet brought it to light. As for example, there be ſome ſinnes (ſayth S. Paul) which make haſt to come to their condemnation; and we ſee that God doth ſo thruſt and driue ſome wicked men forward, that they runne a head into miſchiefe. 1. Tim. 5. 24

For ſometimes it is Gods will to humble vs by making our offences knowen, that we may feele them and be ſorie at the heart for them. Yea & [ſometimes againe] a man knowes not at what end to begin, but is letted that he cannot puniſh, becauſe he findeth no mean how to do it. Therfore a Iudge muſt be diſcreete and milde, that he giue not ſentence vpō bare coniectures, but that he firſt of all do ſee the matter ſubſtantially proued. Now then, here are two notable thinges: the one is that we muſt not be rechleſſe, but diligent in ſearching out of thinges, that ỹ euil may be diſcouered & not nouriſhed. The other is, that we ſhould not iudge raſhly, but that the matter ſhould be wel knowen and throughly brought to light, before me come to giue diffinitiue ſentēce of it, ſo as our iudgement may be ripe & ſettled.

Now this being ſo, it is ſayde, thou ſhalt deſtroy the inhabitants of that Citie with the edge of the ſword. Wherby God ſheweth (as I haue declared alreadi) what affection wee ought to beare vnto his ſeruice. For if we conſider what a thing his glory is, it ought to be more deere to vs thā all ỹ whole world. What ſee we either in heauen or on earth but litle ſparks of ỹ power, righteouſnes, goodnes & wiſedome which are infinite in God? They be not to be meaſured: we haue but only ſome litle ſignes and tokens of them in heauen and earth. Therefore it were better that the worlde ſhould periſh ten thouſand times, than that Gods glory ſhould be defaced. But it falleth out that his glory is conueyed ouer vnto ydols, yea & beſtowed vpon Satan, when his ſeruice is corrupted. And therefore it is not for vs to fal aſleepe or to cocker ourſelues in this caſe, as we haue bin wont to doe, making ſale of Gods honour, and letting it paſſe as though we ſeemed to count it as a thing of nothing. But contrariwiſe we ſee here how he putteth all cities to deſtruction, if they haue defaced his honor. So then let vs vnderſtand that it is not for vs to rowe any more betweene two ſtreames as we haue bin wont to, if we intend to keepe our religion vnappayred: but we muſt ſee that all Churchtreaſons, that is to ſay all outrages that are doone to the maieſtie of God, may be puniſhed. Seeing we know and nature teacheth vs that robberies, murthers, theftes, and all manner of pilfries ought not to bee borne with; what ſhal we do when gods name is blaſphemed, all religion turned vpſide downe, and the pure doctrine falſified, to thruſt ſolke out of the way and to breake the vnion of faith? Such thinges are not to be winked at: for they be too heynous crymes.

Yea and it behoueth vs to marke how it is ſaid heere, that if any wicked men be riſen vp, and haue ſeduced the inhabitants of a Citie. For it may ſeeme that this circumſtance ſhould ſomewhat abate the fault, foraſmuch as the whole citie went not away of their own accord, but were carried away by certain wicked perſons, as in deed a few ſuch firebrandes of hell are ynough to ſet all thinges out of order. Yea, but yet are not they to be born with, which haue giuen eare to ſuch deceiuers; they muſt be puniſhed for it neuertheleſſe: yea and ỹ not with ſtripes of roddes onely, but euen with death. And in deede, how triflíng an excuſe is it for a man to ſay, I was vndermined, I would neuer haue done amiſſe if I had not bin inticed to it, ye may ſee what ill counſell is. Yea, but yet notwithſtanding thou haddeſt bin taught by the voyce of thy God, thou knoweſt his will, & waſt aſcerteined of it. Beholde, a man whome thou kneweſt to be wicked came to ſeduce thee, and thou gaueſt more credit to his leaudneſſe and to thine owne wit, than to ỹ infallible truth of thy God. Thou knoweſt ỹ thy God ſpeaketh for thy benefite, and thou leaueſt him, thou giueſt him deafe eare, thou art loth to giue him any hearing, thou refuſeſt all that he telleth thee: and is that to be excuſed? Nay rather, ſhoulde wee not ſpit in the faces of ſuch men as will needes make a ſhield of other mens inticementes? Yes: and for that cauſe doth not God hold a whole Citie excuſed, when the people of it haue bin deluded by wicked perſons. Both great and ſmall (ſay I) muſt be puniſhable: and God is not cruell in puniſhing them all, as wee ſee hee hath ordeined heere.

Furthermore, let vs marke well ỹ God ment to do vs to vnderſtand what it is to haue wicked perſōs in a citie. For (as ſaith S. Paul) a little leuē ſoureth a whole lump of dow. Nowe then, wherſoeuer deceiuers be, there are the people by & by infected. God ſpeaketh ſo thereof plainly, to the intent we ſhould not ſuffer euill to harbor amōg vs. If there be any poyſoninges, we are all afraid of them, and it troubleth vs to prouide howe to ſaue our ſelues frō them: ò (ſay we) ſuch a plague muſt not abide among vs. Now it is certain that there is not a worſe nor a more deadly plague, than the ſtepping vp of vnruly perſons, deſpiſers of God, and wicked men, which ſeeke to turne al thinges vpſide downe, and to bring all to confuſion, corrupting all thinges to the intent to haue the more libertie to doe euill. When ſuch foke riſe vp, & be borne withall; it is good reaſon that al ſhould be giltie of their fault. And we ſee alſo that God puniſheth thoſe ỹ beare with euill doinges when they both ſhould and could correct them: inſomuch that the common prouerbe is verified in them, that when a man is lawed from the gallous, he could finde in his heart to ſee thē hanged ỹ deliuered him from it. And good reaſō it is that they ſhould haue ſuch reward, for their corrupting of Iuſtice, and for their impeaching of right. Therefore when we ſee men goe about to turne all thinges vpſide downe, wee muſt repreſſe them aforehande: and not tarie till ỹ end, for that is a curſed patience. True it is (as I ſaid afore) that if God giue vs not the meane to rid away euill ſo ſoone as we would; then muſt wee be ſory for it & haue patience. But when things are euident, & there is none other let than lacke of corage: then if we be cold and laſie, and ſhut our eyes becauſe wee be loth to ſuſteine diſpleaſure; [as if a man ſhoulde ſay,] I will not be too forwarde, leaſt I bee left in the bryers, for feare leaſt I pay for the ſhot when I haue entered into ſuch a quarell, for I ſee that ſuch fellowes are ful of reuendge and may eaſily be euen with mee: when we vſe ſuch cowardlyneſſe, then muſt wee abide the penaltie of it. And ſurely it is a great grace of God to haue power to redreſſe a miſchiefe that hath bin knowen of long afore: and therfore it muſt not be let ſlip without prouiding for it in time conuenient.

Moreouer we muſt heare what a ſimple ſhift it is to alledge pitie, when men marre all thinges by giuing cauſe of offence. For what kinde of pitie is it to ſpare two or three to cut y̆ throtes ofa whole nation? On the contrarie part, if they that be ſo wickedly bent, be repreſſed that they may no more haue their own ſwinge, but rather be vtterly rooted out: it is a purging of the whole nation, it is a healing of a common ſore. So then if wee loue the welfare of all men, lette vs not giue head after that ſort to ſuch as intice men to forſake the right way. But wee muſt goe backe againe to the matter which I haue ſpoken of alreadie, and which Moſes goeth forwarde withall ſtill in this text: to wit, that the worſt corruption which can befall a nation, is to haue deſpiſers of God that falſifie the true religion, or to haue vpholders of Satan that leade men into ſuperſtition and ydolatrie, to aboliſhe the pure doctrine and the trueth which they hadde receiued. True it is that if there bee gluttons, drunkardes, whooremongers, and ſuch other like folke, it is an infection that is wel worthie to be feared, & meet to be redreſſed out of hande, leaſt the miſchiefe growe too ſtrong: But as for thoſe that put all thinges out of order, ſhewing themſelues to be bent to ſpite God, and to make men to yeelde no more reuerence to his maieſtie: it is as a gathering of all ſinnes togither into one heape, and a packing of them vp in one bundle. For there can be nothing pure when Gods ſeruice in taken away, and when men walke not in his feare, all other thinges muſt needes be out of order. For the knowing of God and the worſhipping of him as he deſerueth, is the verie brydle that holdeth men in all holineſſe and honeſtie. But if men turne their backes vppon him, they muſt needes play the beaſtes, and their life muſt needes become ſo looſe and lothſome, that a man ſhal ſee as it were a gulfe of hell among them. And therefore not without cauſe are we ſo ſtraitly commaunded in no wiſe to beare with men, when they become wicked and goe about to inuegle folke to doe ſeruice to ydolles. Let vs marke then, that if we be deſirous to liue as wee ought and in good concord; we muſt aboue all thinges haue Gods ſeruice in eſtimation, as the thing wherein it behoueth vs to vſe ſeueritie and rigor, or els all will go to wrecke and confuſion. That is the thing which we haue to gather vpon this place: and would to God that it were better in vre now adayes. For as I haue touched heretofore, men are moued at the thinges that concerne and touch themſelues. Inſomuch that if we perceiue that the ſuffering of an offence will turne to our harme or loſſe, euerie of vs cryeth out to haue it puniſhed. And why? Becauſe wee haue no regarde but of our ſelues. But if GOD his honour bee impeached, that is let ſlippe, and we ſay it is not ſo great an euill. And why? For our purſes are not pinched by it: and therefore it ſeemeth to make no skill at all. Nowe ſee heere on the contrarie parte, howe GOD puniſheth vs as we deſerue. For thinges become ſo farre out of order among vs, that wee wote not which way to turne vs. And good reaſon it is that it ſhoulde come ſo to paſſe, euen becauſe we haue forſaken GOD, and beene more mindefull of ourſelues than of his maieſtie, ſo as we haue not yeelded him his dewe honour whereof hee is worthie, and which hee requireth at our handes. Thus much concerning this text.

And it is ſayde, that all that euer is in the Citie muſt be brought together on a heape, and ſet on fire, & be taken as a curſed thing, and be made a ſacrifice vnto God. Heere Moſes ſheweth howe hatefull a thing ydolatrie is, and conſequently whatſoeuer ouerthroweth the true ſeruice of God and the pure religion: and that is done to moue men ſo much the more. But [you will ſay, that] when ſuch a fault is committed, the Citie it ſelfe, the cattell, and the houſes are not to be blamed for it. And why then will GOD haue all to be deſtroyed? It is to the ende that folke ſhoulde learne to abhorre ydolatrie the more, that wee might vnderſtand that the wicked folkes whom Satan dryueth to giue themſelues to ydolatrie are ſo little to be borne with, that we muſt euen abhorre the verie place where they haue dwelled, yea and the verie ſight of them, and thinke with ourſelues, beholde, this is a place wherein Gods wrath hath beene prouoked, and that was ynough to haue ſoonke vs all to hell. Wee ſee then whereat God aimed. For hee knewe that we ſee nowe with our eyes, namely that we haue not ſuch zeale to maintaine his glorie, as wee ought to haue, we paſſe not for it, euerie man is occupied about his owne gaine, and about the thinges that concerne himſelfe. Nowe becauſe we be ſo colde, God on the other ſide quickneth vs vp, and telleth vs that the corrupting of his ſeruice is a great miſdeede, yea and ſo horrible a thing, as might make the hayres to ſtand ſtiffe vpon our heades. That is one point which wee ought to marke.

And herewithall we haue to marke alſo, that the rigour of this Lawe, is not to be obſerued of from point to point as it is commaunded heere to the people of Iſraell. But yet the ſubſtance thereof abideth ſtill in force, as I haue declared heretofore intreating of ydolatry, where I told you that wee were commaunded to put away all places that haue ſerued to ſuperſtition. Nowe then, we in theſe dayes be not in ſuch thraldom, but that we may vſe a Church that hath beene one of Satans brothelhouſes. Ydolles haue bin worſhipped heere, and GOD hath beene blaſphemed heere: and yet for all that wee bee nowe come heere together in the name of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. This place then is newe dedicated, according to the ſaying of Saint Paul, that all thinges are ſanctified vnto vs by faith and by calling vpon the name of God. And therefore if a place be put to ſuch vſe, that God is honoured there, it is a kinde of hallowing of that place. But vnder the Lawe God helde the people in greater and more ſlauiſhe bondage, commaunding them to make cleane riddaunce and vtter diſpatch of all thinges that had beene vſed in the ſeruice of ydolles. So is it in this text, where GOD commandeth that the whole Citie ſhall bee raſed, and neuer inhabited anie more. And the ſtraitneſſe of this bonde ſerued for the time wherein the fathers were gouerned like litle children. Gal.4.1. But yet doeth the ſubſtaunce thereof abide with vs ſtill: and wee haue to gather of this text, that our Lorde abhorreth ydolatry aboue all thinges; and that if other offences bee to be puniſhed, this is not to be indured in any wiſe, but that we ought to abhorre it. And becauſe wee be too colde in that behalfe, we be warned to quicken vp our ſelues, and to take the meanes which wee knowe to be fit for it, to the ende wee may bee the forwarder in cauſing God to bee ſerued purely among vs, and open no gap to deceiuers, ne make any way for ſuperſtitions and ydolatrie, that might bereaue vs of the pure trueth and drawe vs vnto lyes. Thus yee ſee what we haue to remember vpon this text.

But heere a man might aske a queſtion, howe Moſes may ſay that all the thinges which ſhalbe founde in ſuch a Citie ſhalbe accurſed; and yet they muſt bee put ouer vnto God as an offering or ſacrifice? Yet doeth GOD ſpeake after that faſhion in manie places, and not without cauſe. For it is an offering of ſacrifice vnto him, when we proteſt that only he ought to be worſhipped, and when we make as it were a ſolemne homage vnto him. And againe when other appurtenances come in place: as when men ſacrificed vnder the Lawe, they proteſted that they were worthie of death, and yet notwithſtanding they had a warrant of their reconcilement vnto God, by the ſacrifice that was to bee offered. Alſo men offered of their goods vnto GOD, as who ſhoulde ſay, Lorde, all that I haue commeth of thee, and it is alwayes at thy commaundement. Yee ſee then that ſacrifices were bleſſed: and yet neuertheleſſe there was a kinde of curſednеſſe in the ſacrifices that were offered for ſinne. In the Firſtlinges, Tenthes, and ſuch other like things, there was nothing but the praiſing of God and giuing of thankes vnto him: but as for the ſacrifice that was offered for ſinne, it behoueth Gods curſe to be thereupon, as who ſhoulde ſay, Loe this is hee that ſhall aunſwere for all. To the ende that men may bee acquit and deliuered from death, this ſacrifice muſt anſwere for them. And therefore thoſe ſacrifices were called ſinnes: and the ſame name is attributed to our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, becauſe he bare our curſe in his perſon. Leuit.7.2. 2.Cor.5.21. But heere is an other kinde of curſednеſſe; namely that GOD is honoured, and homage is doone vnto him by rooting out the thinges that hadde defaced his honour before. Therefore when a Citie is deſtroied that had erſt beene a denne of ydolatry, and all the ſpoyle thereof is ſet on fire: it is a ſacrifice that God liketh verie well of. And why ſo? Becauſe it is a proteſting that wee be not willing to ſuffer any thing that impeacheth the honoring of him at all mens handes, and that all men ſhoulde ſubmit themſelues to him, and his maieſtie be knowen as it ought to be. Nowe then we ſee howe it is not without cauſe that Moſes commaunded ſacrifice to be done vnto GOD with the vtter deſtruction of all thinges that had beene infected and defiled with ydolatrie.

And hee ſayeth expreſly, to the ende that the wrath of God bee not vpon thee. Whereby he confirmeth the matter that I haue touched already, which is that we muſt beware that wee wrap not ourſelues in other mens ſinnes. For they that correct not euill dooinges when they may, and when their office requireth it; are giltie of it themſelues. As for example, if a preacher winke at the vices that reigne; ſurely he is a traitour and vnfaithfull: for he ſhoulde keepe good watch, and waken ſuch as are in daunger of vndoing. Then if I beare with the euill wittingly or through negligence: I am the firſt that ſhalbe condemned. Likewiſe if they that holde the ſworde of luſtice, execute not the rigor which they ought to redreſſe mēs misbehauiours: ſurely the wrath of God is vpon them continually, yea and vpon ỹ whole country, becauſe no man is found, that complaineth of this, that the miſchiefe was ſo borne withall. One good zealous man is ynough to turne away the wrath of God; for hee will inforce others that were negligent. But when no man beginnes the daunce, but all men drawe backe, and euery man ſayes, What nowe? If all the reſt put not to their handes, what can I alone doe? Surely none of them all can exempt themſelues from condemnation before God; when euerie one of them ſpeaketh ſo. Not without cauſe then doeth Moſes here wrap vp a whole Countrey vnder condemnation, if a wicked deede bee borne with, or not puniſhed when it commeth to knowledge. And hereby we be put in minde, to be more diligent than we are wont to bee, in ridding away of all filth and vncleanneſſe from among vs. For it is all one as if we ſhoulde lay wood vppon the fire that is kindled ynough [and too much] alreadie, ſo as we ſhall all of vs be conſumed with it in the end; and yet wee doe ſo euen wittingly and wilfully. Why then doe wee not open our eyes, ſith our Lorde ſheweth vs the daunger ſo euidently, and warneth vs to prouide for it aforehande? Why doe wee not thinke vppon it? Nay, wee be well worthy to periſh, and to be vtterly confounded, becauſe wee haue not vouchſafed to receiue the counſell that God hath giuen vs.

After that Moſes hath thus threatned vs; now he addeth a promiſe that God will bleſſe his people, if they obey his voyce, & doe the thinges that are right before him. Our Lord indeuouring after his manner, to winne vs to him alwayes by gentleneſſe and friendely dealing: when hee hath doone threatning of vs in this text, doeth alſo attempt the contrarie way ſaying: If ye finde the meanes to haue my ſeruice purely maintcyned, I will be with you; yee ſhall finde that my ſeeking is but to increaſe the benefites which I haue begonne already to beſtowe vpon you, yee ſhall inioy the Lande that I haue giuen you to inherite; ye ſhall perceiue that my promiſing of my fauour and mercie to your fathers is not in vaine. And let vs marke, that heere it is our Lordes intent to drawe vs to a willing ſeruing of him. True it is that yet for all this, wee muſt not forgette his threatenings, ſeeing we be ſo ſlowe in reſorting vnto him. Then lette vs be afrayde of them, and conſider that wee ſhall not ſcape his vengeaunce except we maintaine his ſeruice. But yet howſoeuer the worlde goe with vs, lette vs not doe it by conſtraint, but let vs goe to worke with a free courage. And howe may that bee doone? Euen by beeing drawen by the gentleneſſe that Moſes ſheweth heere vnto vs: as if he ſhoulde ſay, goe to, happie will our ſtate bee if we ſerue our GOD, and euerie man endeuour to drawe his neighbours with him, and ſuffer not any man (as farre as lyeth in vs) to peruert or trouble our ſtate when it is well ſetled. If we doe ſo, our Lorde telleth vs that hee will be among vs, bleſſing vs in ſuch ſorte as wee ſhall proſper more and more, and that he will ſtabliſh vs in the poſſeſſion of all the benefites which he hath giuen vs. Seeing the caſe ſtandeth ſo; too too leaude were wee if we woulde not ſubmitte ourſelues to him, ſeeing that his deſiring to haue vs, is altogether for our benefite and welfare. Let vs learne then on the one ſide to quicken vp our ſelues with Gods threatninges; but yet on the other ſide let vs be moued and allured to ſerue him with a free and pure affection, voyde of inforcement or conſtraint. Let vs goe to worke of our owne goodwill, aſſuring our ſelues that wee be bereft and diſpoſſeſſed of all good thinges, if wee ſerue not our GOD. And why? Becauſe wee can not proſper but by his fauour. And let vs not delude ourſelues: if we ſee that he make vs to proſper this preſent time, lette vs not fall aſleepe, but let vs conſider that wee haue neede of the continuaunce of his benefites and free fauour towardes vs. And this is a very needefull warning: for we ſee howe men take libertie, as ſoone as they haue any reſpitte. So long as GOD ſheweth vs his roddes, or as wee feele his ſtripes; wee make countenaunce ſtill to ſerue him. Yea, but that is but hypocriſie, according to this complaint which the Lord maketh by his prophete. As long as I afflicted them, they turned vnto me; but either the ſame day or the next morow they became like themſelues againe. Therefore let not vs doe ſo; but although GOD let vs alone in reſt, and wee perceiue no harme at hande; yet let vs looke for it afarre of, and forecaſt that there will come a ſuddeine tempeſt which wee looked not for, if we ſwarue aſide from his ſeruice. Wee ſee howe that in ſummer the wether chaungeth in a minute of an houre: euen ſo may it fall out in reſpect of Gods wrath: and therefore let vs not welter in our delightes. When God proſpereth vs, let vs not fall to friſking as abuſers of his goodneſſe and patience: but let vs remember howe Moſes ſayeth, that when he hath giuen vs a Lande to inhabit, he muſt be faine to maintaine vs in it, and to ſtabliſhe vs in the poſſeſſion thereof. For I haue tolde you heeretofore that vnder this worde The Lande of Chanaan, all the benefites that GOD beſtowed vppon his people, were comprehended, as all in one particular. Nowe then, let vs looke to our ſelues, and if we purpoſe to continue in the perpetuall inioying of the benefites belonging both to our bodies and to our ſoules which GOD hath beſtowed vpon vs: let vs looke that wee continue ſtedfaſtly in the ſeruing of him, without ſwaruing one way or other. And moreouer lette vs labour that there may be one common accord among vs, and that euery of vs hearten vp his neighbour to doe well, ſo as we may doe as hath beene declared alreadie, and as we haue ſeene heeretofore; that is to wit, that it is not for vs to demeane ourſelues after our owne imagination and fancie as wee ſee men doe in bearing with themſelues, not onely when they doe as ill as may be, but alſo when they doe their duetie by halues, and yet they beare themſelues in hande that they haue doone ynough, and that there is no fault to bee founde in them, GOD can require no more at their hande. And though a man point them to a thing with his finger, as if he ſhoulde ſay, This is a generall rule, and wee muſt not goe to it by halues; but God muſt haue all that belongeth vnto him, or elſe hee will accept none of all the thinges that can bee doone: they ſhut their eyes at it. O (ſay they) it makes no matter, wee muſt haue a reſpect of our infirmitie, we muſt be well aduiſed by wiſedome and diſcretion. Yea, but for all that, ſhall we ſwarue from that which GOD hath ordeined? Lette men vſe as much diſcretion and gentleneſſe as can be: but yet howſoeuer the caſe ſtande, let him look wel to it, ỹ Gods honour be not troden vnder foote, and that mennes ſinnes bee not ſo bolſtered, that any body come to aduance himſelfe againſt the ſacred maieſtie of him that made vs and faſhioned vs, which alſo maintaineth vs, by whoſe power wee bee vphelde, and without whoſe grace we could not continue one minute of an houre. Let this bee well conſidered, and let men doe the thinges that are right in the eyes of the Lord: for hee will not frame himſelfe to our dyet. Imagine we our ſelues to doo thinges neuer ſo well, to the contentation of men, yet wil not GOD be contented with them, becauſe hee meaſureth not himſelfe by our weyghtes and balance. He will haue vs to harken to his worde, and to haue an eye to the thinges ỹ he liketh, ſo as we may ſay, Lord, thou ſhalt haue the gouerning of vs. Thus yee ſee what we haue to remember vppon this text, if we entende to eſchewe the curſe which GOD denounceth againſt all ſuch as haue ſuffered the peruerting of the true Religion and the corrupting of his ſeruice, and to haue him not onely to bleſſe vs, but alſo to increaſe ỹ benefites which we haue receiued at his hande, and alſo to continue them towardes vs to the ende.

of vs in his worde hath not beene in vaine, but that we may yeelde him ſuch reuerence, as our whole ſeeking may bee to haue him purely worſhipped among vs, and ỹ the ſame may be done with one accorde, and all ſtumblingblockes bee cut off frō among vs, ſo as we ſuffer not ourſelues to bee deluded wittingly, nor the ignoraunt to be led to deſtruction, but that we may looke to the drawing of them backe: and that hauing ſuch zeale to amende other folkes miſdeedes, euerie of vs may beginne at himſelfe, and not giue our owne fleſh ſuch libertie, as that it ſhould turne vs aſide and alienate vs from our God, but reine our ſelues ſhort; fearing his threates and alſo in reſpect of his bleſſinges and promiſes which hee maketh vs for that it is his will to maintaine vs in his houſe as his children. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs, but alſo to all people and nations of the earth. &c.

On Tewſday the xxij. of October. 1555.

The XC. Sermon which is the firſt vpon the fourteenth Chapter.

YE be the children of the Lorde your God; Therefore you ſhal not cut your ſelues, nor make any ſhauinges betweene your eyes for the dead.

2 For thou art a holy people to the Lorde thy God. And the Lorde God hath choſen thee from all people that are vpon the face of the earth, to bee a peculiar people to himſelfe.

3 Thou ſhalt not eate any manner of lothſome thing.

4 Theſe are the beaſtes that ye ſhall eate of: namely, the Oxe, the ſheepe, and the Goate:

5 The Red deere, the fallow deere, the Bugle, the wilde Goate, the Vnicorne, the wilde Oxe, the Chamoyſe,

6 And all maner of beaſtes that deuide the hoofe and cliue the hoofe into two clawes and chaweth the cudde alſo: among the beaſtes them ſhall ye eate.

7 But as for theſe, yee ſhall not eate: among thoſe that chawe cudde or doe but onely diuide their clawes, that is to wit, the Camell, the Hare and the Cunnie. For inaſmuch as they chewe cudde and yet diuide not the hoofe, they ſhalbe vncleane to you.

8 Alſo the Swine, (becauſe he cliueth the hoofe, and yet cheweth not cudde,) ſhal be vncleane to you. Yee ſhall not eate of their fleſhe, nor touch their dead carkeſſes.

9 Theſe are they that you ſhall eate of all that are in the waters: namely, whatſoeuer haue finnes and ſcales.

10 And whatſoeuer hath not finnes and ſcales, yee ſhall not eate thereof, but it ſhalbe vncleane to you.

11 Of all cleane birdes yee ſhall eate.

12 But theſe are they of which yee ſhall not eate: namely the Eagle, the Oſpray, and the Fawcon:

13 The Gleade, the Kite, the Vultur after their kinde:

14 All manner of Rauens after their kinde:

15 The Eſtrich, the nightcrowe, the Cuckowe, and the Sparehauke after their kinde:

16 The Skritchowle, the great Owle, the Swanne,

17 The Cormorant, the Pellicane, the Dopchicken, 18 The Storke, and the Heronſewe in his kinde, and the Lapwing, and the Backe.

19 And all creeping foules ſhall be vncleane vnto you, and yee ſhall not eate of them.

Wee

E haue here two cõmandements to expounde, which God gaue vnto his people: The one is that when anie man died among them, they ſhoulde make no exceſſiue mourning and lamentation for them in diſfiguring their bodies, after the ceremonies and faſhions of ỹ heathen. The other concerneth meats: for it was not lawfull for the Iewes to eate of all meates indifferently: there was a difference ſet them betweene cleane beaſtes and vncleane beaſtes. Nowe as touching the firſt, Moſes telleth them, that they be a people choſen of God to bee ſeparated from al other Nations of the world. Whereuppon hee concludeth, that they muſt not then diſfigure themſelues: for inaſmuch as God had ſet his marke vppon them; they ought not to do anie wrong or violence to their owne bodies. And therewithall this commaundement is ſo moderated, that if a man haue forgone any kinſman or friende of his, hee muſt not lament for him out of meaſure as wee ſee men doe, who are wont to be too exceſſiue in their paſſions. When a body is deade, we ſee what ſorrowing is made for him, yea euen with grudging againſt God, ſo all is out of order and there is no reaſon at all in their dealinges. Moſes therefore commaundeth the Iewes to be patient, when it pleaſeth God to bereaue them of their kinſefolke or friendes. And therewithall he telleth them it is a ſhame for them to diſfigure themſelues after the manner of the heathen, for aſmuch as it was a defacing of Gods image which was in them becauſe they were made holy from among all the people of the worlde. Nowe as touching the firſt point, for as much as this inconuenience reigneth as well nowadayes, as it did at anie time heretofore; that is to wit, that men are too exceſſiuely giuen to making of ſorrowe: this is not ſuperfluous for vs. In deede this ceremonie of rending folkes hayre, and of ſcratching their faces to diſfigure themſelues is no more vſed: but yet wee ſee howe God is grudged at in ỹ greefe that men take for ỹ death of their friendes, inſomuch as they martyr themſelues without regard of ſubmitting themſelues to God. There is no dealing with them to comfort them, they bee caryed with ſuch rage, as God cannot bee hearde, whatſoeuer yee ſay to them they bee deafe. Nowe then, ſeeing that this miſdealing continueth ſtill at this day, wee muſt vnderſtande that this doctrine concerneth vs alſo.

And here we haue to marke firſt of all that if the heathen and the vnbeleeuers, and the poore ignoraunt ſoules which haue not beene trayned in the worde of God were not excuſed for this vice: wee on our ſide offende God much more greeuouſly and without all excuſe. For he hath ſeparated vs from all the worlde. Yet notwithſtanding men may well ſooth themſelues: for there is not any thing where God tryeth our obedience more, than by the liuing and dying at his pleaſure, ſo as wee knowe that our liues be not in our owne handes, but that it belongeth to him to diſpoſe of them: and euerie of vs is readie to departe out of this worlde, whenſoeuer it pleaſeth him to call vs: Or if hee take away our kinſefolke or friendes from vs, we be well contented with it. And indeede, why pray wee dayly that his will ſhoulde bee doone, but to proteſt that we bee willing to holde all our affections in captiuitie, and to keepe them in awe? Sith it is ſo: ſurely they that vexe themſelues with immoderate lamenting for the deceaſe of their friendes, are ſufficiently conuicted by the onely order of nature, that they ſtriue with God and rebell againſt him. Neuertheleſſe, (as I ſaide afore) if the ſillie ignorant ſoules torment themſelues after that faſhion, they bee to bee pitied. For they knowe not that our dayes are determined, and that God reſerued the authoritie and priuiledge of calling vs vnto him, when hee ſent vs into the worlde. They knowe none of all this: and therefore it is no wonder though they vſe ſuch exceſſe in their mourning. Moreouer, they haue not wherwith to comfort themſelues: for none of them hath euer had any vnderſtanding of the euerlaſting life. To their ſeeming, if a man bee once deade, all is loſt, hee is vtterly forlorne, hee is quite and cleane come to nought. And that is the cauſe why they conceiue ſo exceſſiue and vnmeaſurable greefe. Otherſome goe at aladuenture: and although they haue ſome imagination of the endleſſe life, yet are they not aſſured of the ſaluation of the parties, and therefore they cannot comfort themſelues with the fauour of God. But as for vs, wee knowe that death is but a parting of the ſoule and bodie aſunder, to the ende that God may ſhewe his ineſtimable power in rayſing vs againe. And we knowe alſo that hee is a faithfull keeper of our ſoules when hee hath receiued them: and therefore that wee may well put them into his handes, aſſuring our ſelues that our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt dyed not for vs in vaine.

Rom. 14. 8. 9

Seeing wee haue ſuch comfort, is it not too great an vnthankefulneſſe to torment our ſelues after the maner of the heathen and the infidels, when God taketh any man away from vs? Yes: And therefore when Saint Paul exhorteth the faithfull to haue patience in the departure of their friendes, he ſaith expreſſely, Sorrow not as the vnbeleeuers doe. In deede Saint Paul ſawe well that we can not bee ſenſeleſſe: for in verie deede it were no patience if wee felte no greefe. If wee were ſtarke blockes, it were no vertue at all. If a man ſhoulde laugh at the death of his wife or of his father, it were a beaſtly brutiſhneſſe. Therefore it behoueth vs to feele the inconuenience and to be touched with it, ſo as it pinch vs and greeue vs: But yet muſt God aſſuage it againe, becauſe we know that he hath all ſuperioritie ouer our liues, and wee muſt ſuffer him to diſpoſe of vs as hee thinkes good. Againe we muſt goe boldly vnto him, being well aſſured of his goodnes and mercie, and we muſt not doubt but that death ſhall bee to our ſaluation, and that whether we liue or die, al ſhal without fayle turne to our benefite and welfare ſo we be in Chriſt Ieſus. Thus yee ſee what we haue to beare in mind.

To be ſhorte, that we may benefit ourſelues by this leſſon of Moſeſes; let vs vnderſtand, firſt of all, that vntill God brydle vs, our affection wil euer be inordinate whether it be in mirth or in mourning. If wee haue proſperitie, by and by it makes vs to forget our ſelues what we be, ſo as we thinke not our ſelues to be mortall men. And wee ſee howe all men fall to flinging as it were in deſpite of God when they haue their eaſe and delightes. Likewiſe on the contrarie part, if our Lorde afflict vs whether it be by the death of ſome kinſeman or friende of ours, or by ſome other aduerſitie: we be piteouſly forlorne, wee cannot meaſure our greefe, wee be ſo ouerwhelmed with ſorrowe as is pitifull to beholde, and finally our heart is full of bitterneſſe and poyſon. Wee ſee howe a number doe ſpewe out blaſphemies againſt God. Let vs conſider all theſe vices in our ſelues, and ſeeke the remedie of them as it is ſet vs downe here. Let vs beare in minde (I ſay) that our Lorde commaundeth all of vs to holde our ſelues as in captiuitie, that if our nature be faultie in that behalfe, we ſhoulde not nouriſhe the euill, but withſtand it aſmuch as is poſſible. This cannot be doone except we vſe force in ſubduing our ſelues to the obeying of God, and euen ſtreyne our ſelues to the vttermoſt. And one of the cheefeſt ſacrifices that 1.Sa.15.22. God requireth of vs and whereof he liketh beſt, is that wee conſider that wee muſt not ſorrowe out of meaſure, when we be afflicted, but flie vnto God praying him to giue vs the grace to ſubmitte ourſelues wholly to his wil: ſo as if the huſbande be bereft of his wife, he may beare it patiently. And why? Becauſe he knoweth it is Gods will to trie his obedience in that behalfe. Let the wife doe the like by her huſbande, and let euery body ſubmit themſelues to this order of Gods, that wee may bee able to ſay, that like as he hath ſet vs in the world, ſo alſo it is good reaſon that hee ſhoulde take vs hence againe, not at our pleaſure but at his. For it is not without cauſe
Pſal.39.5.6. that he hath limited the race of our life, & that it pleaſeth him to take away one rather than an other. We be mortall before we come into this worlde: for a yong babe may die as well in his mothers wombe as after hee is borne. Sith it is ſo; as ſoone as God giueth vs diſcretion, let vs applie our indeuour to vnderſtande that death beſeegeth vs euerie minute of an houre, and that we muſt not promiſe our ſelues life till the nexte morrowe, nor ſet any terme to God: for his daylie prolonging of our life is but ſo much reſpiting of vs. But howeſoeuer wee fare, let vs bee mindfull of our owne frailtie, and let the ſame leade vs to conſider that if GOD take vs out of this worlde, ſooner than wee looked for, it is meete that he ſhoulde haue vs at commaundement, and that euerie of vs ſhoulde offer vp our owne bodies to him in that manner of ſacrifice, in ſuffering GOD to ſeparate vs aſunder; that what friendſhippe or bende of kinred ſoeuer there haue beene betwixt vs, yet wee may not faile to glorifie God when he taketh away our kinſefolke and friends, nor vſe this beaſtly impatience, in pulling our ſelues by the hayre of our heades, and in ſcratching and disfiguring of our faces, as though wee knewe not what it were, to liue in the obedience of God, and to die in the ſame likewiſe.

And moreouer as well in this as in all other thinges, let vs take heede to that which is tolde here to the Iewes by Moſes: namely that when God is ſo gratious as to dedicate vs to him ſelfe, and to gather vs together to bee his people, we muſt giue our ſelues ſo much the more earneſtly vnto him. True it is that in reſpect of nature we differ nothing at all from the ſillie ignorant & vnbeleeuers. For our being of Chriſts Church befalleth vs not by the right of inheritaunce. Indeede the promiſe extendeth to a thouſande generations: but yet for all that, it is of his freegoodneſſe, that we haue the prerogatiue to bee of his houſe. Sith it is ſo, let vs acknowledge the honour that he doeth vs, in ſeparating vs from the heathen and vnbeleeuers though we were forlorne and damned as wel as they; and let vs benefite ourſelues by that grace, that it periſhe not through our owne wickedneſſe. Thus ye ſee for what purpoſe Moſes ſaid, Thou art a people ſhooled out to thy God; haue a care to maintaine thy ſelfe in thy calling: acknowledge the good that is doone vnto thee, & goe not about to bereaue thy ſelfe wilfully of ſuch fauour. Let vs thinke vppon it (ſay I,) and that in ſuch ſort as God may be glorified in vs, accordingly as hee hath vouchſafed to call vs.

And Moſes ſpeaking here expreſſely of God his election or choyce whereby hee had choſen the Iewes, addeth That they muſt bee a holy people. For God gathereth not the ofskowringes of the worlde to keepe them in his Church; his intent is not to haue his Church to bee as it were a Swine ſtie, ſo as there ſhoulde bee nothing but filth and infection; but hee purgeth vs from all vncleaneſſe. Nowe then whereas God calleth vs vnto him, it is with condition that we ſhould worſhippe and ſerue him in all pureneſſe. True it is that he findeth vs as it were drowned in the depth of all leawdneſſe, ſo as by nature we haue nothing but vtter vncleanneſſe, and we be altogether ſo defiled that we be euen loothſome to him: but yet doeth hee purge vs and make vs cleane by his holy ſpirit, and it behoooueth vs to lead a holy conuerſation al the time of our life. And ſo yee ſee howe hee woulde that men ſhoulde ratifie their free election, as Saint Peter ſpeaketh of it. And that is a thing which wee haue to marke in this ſaying of Moſes: wherevppon wee haue to conclude that it is not lawfull for vs to take example at the vnbeleeuers

uers and such as haue not beene brought vp in Gods school. And it is a verie necessarie doctrine for vs, considering howe wee euer shroude ourselues vnder the causes of offence which we see: & if any body giue vs an euil example, we beare our selues in hande that we bee excused before GOD, and that such a person is a shelter to vs. But contrariwise Moses telleth vs here, that we must bee a people sanctified vnto GOD, so as if the wretched vnbeleeuers doe playe the vnthriftes, we must not maruell at it. When wee see a sillie blinde soule stumble or stray out of his way, we pitie him because he is in darkenes, but we thinke it nó straunge thing. Euen so is it with those that neuer knewe the trueth of GOD: they be sillie blinde soules that goe in darkenesse. But GOD inlighteneth vs, and sheweth vs the way of saluation. If we rushe against thinges, or if wee wander out of the way; whence commeth the fault? Are not wee our selues to bee blamed for it? Yes, and therefore let vs euer beare in minde the greatnesse of the grace which we haue receiued of GOD, that it perishe not through our owne leawdnesse and negligence. And aboue all things, let vs take heede to that which is spoken here concerning the moderating of our sorrow & heauines. And this shall be doone, if wee bee not troubled and greeued out of measure for the death of any of our kinsefolke or friendes, or for any other affliction that befalleth vs, but that we suffer God to vse our liues as hee listeth, to dispose of them according to his good will. Thus yee see in effect what we haue to remember vppon the first point that is conteined heere.

Nowe as touching the second, Moses saith, that the Iewes must not eate of all manner of meates, but that they must haue a care to discerne betweene the cleane beastes and the vncleane. And afterward hee nameth the beastes, whereof it was lawful for them to eat: & also the seueral kinds which it was not lawful for them to touch. And to be short, he saith that the beastes which chaw Cud, (that is to say; which keepe in their mouthes ỹ last of their meat, to chaw it againe) are cleane, so as they might eat of them, conditionally that those beasts do also clyue the hoofe. Now, to seeke here for nice points, as what this should meane, that ỹ hooues should be clouen, or that they should chawe the cud; were no matter to be greatly stoode vppon. And as for them that haue pried into the matter to fetch the new & the old Testament out of ỹ beasts cleauing of their hooues, & haue told vs ỹ we must needs put a difference betwixt them; & moreouer, that we must chew our cud, ỹ is to say feede vpon the doctrine againe and againe, that we may the better digest it, because it is ỹ foode of our soules: it is too too curious. For if it bee so, what do the scales of the fishes betoken? There will be occasion of seeking euerywhere, and wee shal fall into many fond speculations. And therfore let vs be aduised to vse modestie in this case. Some hold opinion that God had no further respect but to the health of mens bodies, when he forbade the eating of such beasts as he tearmeth vncleane, & they thinke that God plaide ỹ part of a Phisition. But that is too colde & too barren stuffe, & the scripture sheweth vs the contrarie. In deed a man may wel think that our Lord had regard what was good and cõuenient for mens bodies: but to thinke that he had a further consideration, than to spy out what meats were best for mans health; that is too childishe a matter. And (as I said afore) it is no matter for vs to scan vpon, seeing the holy Ghost hath told vs plainely, that god amed at a far other end. Let vs mark wel then, that this commaundement is no such order as is wont to be prescribed by a physition for the preseruation of a mans health: but a ceremoniall lawe that serued for Gods people in the time of the lawe, to holde them in obedience and to leade them vp higher and higher to the cleannesse of the minde: for it was Gods wil that the Iewes shoulde alwayes haue as it were lookingglasses before their eyes, to make them see that they ought not haue to doe with the defilements of the world, but to applie their whole indeuour to keep themselues in such wise as god might be glorified in thẽ. That is the first point, which we haue to marke. For when the Apostles treated of meats, they alleadge not that GOD meant to do the office of a Physition. And that is a very short solution. When S. Paul declareth ỹ the false Apostles and couseners troubled the Church, going about to holde men in bondage to the olde lawe: he sheweth that this difference of meates was a part of that childishe doctrine, vnder the which GOD led the people of olde time, because there was more rudenesse, and infirmitie at that time than there is now adayes. Not that we be better, or stronger in faith, or that we be any perfecter in our selues than they were: but because that God hath set vs further forward, by giuing vs the doctrine of the gospel. For the lawe was as an Apsie in comparison of ỹ doctrine that is preached vnto vs at this day. It is not to be maruelled then though there were many Ceremonies for that people, and that we haue not those Ceremonies in vse nowdaies, which serued but onely for that time. If a man replie then and say, that the preaching of thẽ vnto vs is more than needeth: wee see the contrarie. For although the figures be past & vtterly abolished by the comming of our Lorde Iesus Christ: Yet doeth the substance of them continue still with vs, so as it behoueth vs to knowe still for what purpose God would haue ỹ Iewes forbeare the meats that are forbidden thẽ here. Seeing then that the same reason and force remaineth common to vs which serued for them, it is not vnprofitable for vs to haue ỹ same things shewed vnto vs. Moreouer although the Sunne doe driue away all darkenesse with his light: yet is it not vnexpedient for vs to thinke vppon the night in the daytime, and vpon that wonderfull order which God hath established, sith that in winter we thinke vpon sommer, and in sommer thinke vpon winter. For we see how God setteth foorth his wisedome therein. And if there were no such varietie, we shoulde haue no such occasion to wonder thereat and to glorifie our God. Againe, on the otherside, wee bee assured of the grace that is brought vs by our Lord Iesus Christ: for we be preferred before the holy fathers and Patriarkes which were worthier to haue beene preferred than wee, and yet notwithstanding God kept them vnder like litle children, whereas nowadayes hee dealeth with vs as with perfect men of full age and grouth. Seeing then that God vseth such goodnesse and liberalitie towards vs, haue we not the more cause to honour him?

1.Pet.1.10. & Gal.4.1.

But nowe let vs come backe againe to the matter which I was in hand with afore, and shew yet further howe all the saide thinges may redounde to the benefiting and profiting of vs, as well in faith as in the feare of God. I haue tolde you alreadie, that whereas God did put a difference betweene beastes, declaring some to be cleane and some vncleane, it was to accustome the Iewes vnto the spirituall cleannesse, euen in eating and drinking. True it is that God injoyned them soberneſſe and temperaunce therein: but he had yet a further respect, which was that in all thinges they shoulde haue a care to be vndefiled, and to haue such a stay of themselues, as they might not bee steyned with the vncleannesse of the worlde. Gods intent then was to giue them as it were a kinde of exercise, to keepe them the better in vre. We knowe howe men do take too large scope in eating and drinking. For whereas the rest of their life doth put them in minde to pray vnto God, and to take paines, and to discharge themselues of their dutie: when they take their repast, they giue themselues to mirth and reioycing. And it is lawefull for them so to doe, so they keepe measure. But what? They so ouershoote themselues in the turning of a hande as a man might wonder to see their excesse of mirth. This was the cause ỹ God woulde haue his people put in mind of the soberneſſe which we ought to vse in our eating and drinking al our life long, that it might be as a bridle to restraine vs, for after as our diseases bee, so doeth God giue vs medicines for them. Now (as I saide afore) there is more disorder in eating and drinking, than in all our life besides. And therefore it was requisite that our Lorde shoulde exercise his people in that behalfe. And for the same cause did he deliuer them instructions, to warne them that they ought to behaue themselues purely in all things, and to put them alwayes in minde thereof. Ye see then that the first point which wee haue to remember vppon this text, is that God telleth the Iewes that forasmuch as hee had chosen them to be his owne inheritance, they ought to dedicate themselues to him euen in things that concerne the outward conuersation, and to absteine from worldly corruptions, not intermedling themselues with the vices of the heathen after our common maner which we knowe to bee alwayes tending vnto euill. Gods will was to holde them in that awe. And nowe wee see howe it is no more than needeth. For why? True it is that the ceremonie continueth not nowadaies: for our lord Iesus Christ hath set vs in greater libertie than the fathers were vnder the law: but yet is not the pith of it put away, that is to wit, that we shoulde liue soberly vnder the feare of our God, cutting off all corruptions, and abridging our selues of all libertie of hauing to doe with the lustes of the worlde. What though the vnbeleeuers doe beare with themselues too much? shoulde we doe so too? Seeing that our Lord telleth vs that wee be his temples, so as he dwelleth in vs by his holy spirite, and that he woulde haue vs to be as sacrifices vnto him, so as wee shoulde offer vp both our soules and bodies vnto him dayly: is it lawful for vs to cast our selues into the vncleannesse of the worlde, without a nie regard how to represse it? Then let vs mark well that although the ceremonie be no longer in vre, yet the lawe in it selfe is not doone away, but that God injoyneth vs the same sobrietie at this day, whereto he meant to leade the people of olde time by the meanes that were agreeable to that time. Againe sith we see what priuiledge God giueth vs; let the same mooue vs the more to yeelde our selues freely vnto him. If we compare our selues with the fathers of olde time, we shall finde that God led them but as yong babes and yet were they as Angels among mortal mẽ. If we look vpon the life of Abraham, what a perfection of holinesse shall we find there? As much is to be saide of the rest of the Patriarkes and Prophetes: and yet nuertheleſſe, yee see howe God held them in darkishnes, giuing them but a small tast of his grace, insomuch that his shewing of Iesus Christ vnto them, was but a far off. But we in these dayes haue much further preheminence: for God sheweth himselfe fully vnto vs, and we haue the spirite of adoption, whereby we may crie with full mouth, that God is our father, euen wee that come of the heathen, and had no acquaintance with God, but were vtterly vncleane, and (to be short) were by nature cursed, & had none other heritage than death and damnation. Nowe then is it not an inestimable priuiledge, that God hath brought vs so neere to himselfe? What is to be doone then? Seeing that God allureth vs more freely than he did ỹ fathers, let vs be the more earnestly minded to serue him. He dischargeth vs of the burthen as concerning the shadowes and figures: what is to be doone therfore? We must haue this willingnesse of giuing our selues to ỹ spiritual sobrietie which he requireth continually now stil as wel as he required it then. Therfore let euerie man bethinke himselfe, and inasmuch as God giueth vs leaue to eate of all manner of meates freely without exception, (that is to say, of all such as may serue for our sustenaunce:) let vs haue this consideration with our selues, Alas my God, yet must I not abuse thy goodnes. How manie waies doest thou shewe thy selfe liberall to me? Therfore doeth it become me to bridle my selfe of mine owne accorde and to cut off all the wicked affections that reigne in me.

2.Cor.6.16. Rom.12.1.& 1.Cor.5.10. & 2.Cor.7.1.

Rom.8.15. & Gal.4.6. & Eph.2.3. 12.13.

And first of all let vs put the doctrine in vre which Saint Paul setteth down in the thirteenth to the Romanes, which is, that wee bee not carefull for our flesshe, at leastwise to sulfill the lustes thereof (for that is a gulfe that can neuer

Rom.13.14.

neuer be filled) but onely looke to the susteyning of our bodies, so farre foorth as they may bee maintained in good plight, & so vse Gods creatures, as wee defile them not. For although Gods creatures are permitted vnto vs; yet doe we not cease to defile them by our vnbeleefe; intemperance, gluttonie, or other abuses which we commit. GOD sheweth that as now we may eate both of the Hare and of the Connie, as wel as of the sheepe or of the Goate. Yet notwithstanding if wee glut our selues with them, the meate that is cleane of it selfe becommeth vncleane vnto vs, because we bee vnthankefull to GOD, in that we consider not to what end he giueth vs sustenance. One man rusheth foorth into all excesse, and yet is neuer the more mainteyned in strength of bodie by it: for he is readie to burst, and maketh himselfe altogether vnweeldie. A drunkarde playeth the Swine or some other brute beaste, and the wine so ouercommeth him, that he hath neither wit nor reason. And although wine be a creature that God hath blessed, and haue no vncleanneſse at all in it selfe: yet is it defiled by such misusing of it. Othersome neuer remember to giue GOD thankes, nor to call vppon his name. And that is an other kind of defiling our foode. Againe othersome abuse it to vaineglorie and deliciousneſse, and growe so farre out of order, that they can no skill to serue GOD. Othersome are so giuen to daintie fare, that it maketh them to put their consciences in ieoperdie, insomuch that they will not sticke to make them bondslaues to all leawdneſse and wickedneſse, so they may haue good cheere. Othersome are afraide of want, and fall to snatching, to filching, to catching, and to al that can be deuised, to get somewhat by hooke or by crooke. And thus doe all of vs defile Gods creatures, which of themselues are cleane. And that is the cause why I saide, that sith our Lorde hath giuen vs greater priuiledge, and set vs more at libertie, to the end that the bondage of the lawe shoulde not haue dominion ouer vs: therefore wee ought to bee the willinger to restraine ourselues in absteining from all vncleanneſse, and to consider that the cause why God hath giuen vs the free vse of all kinde of meates, is that wee shoulde vse them purely, and not be defiled on our side, so as we might not bee blamed for defiling of the things which haue no manner of vncleanneſse in them selues, in respect of God and in respect of the order that hee hath set among vs. And we must haue this regarde not onely in respect of meate and drinke, but also in respect of our whole life in general. Considering then that God nurtured the people of old time, by forbidding certaine meates, to the ende that they shoulde thinke thus with themselues; well then, seeing that our God hath forbidden vs the things that are lawfull for the heathen, and which they take leaue to doe; let vs vnderstande that it behoooeth vs to liue in all manner of pureneſse, and that seeing God will haue vs to bee pure in smal thinges, hee will much rather haue vs to bee so in great thinges. Let vs nowadayes consider to what purpose this ceremonie of the lawe may serue vs, to the ende that euerie of vs may enter into himselfe. As for example, if a man be led with ambition, so as hee wil needes aduance himselfe and clymbe too high: or if he be caried away with couetousneſse, so as he burne therewith: or if hee be an vnthrift and leade a lawleſse life: or if hee bee a whorehunter and giuen to beastly lust: let vs bethinke ourselues thus: howe nowe? Our Lorde abhorreth euerie little vncleanneſse euen in eating and drinking: and what will come of it then if our soules be defiled, sith they be the thinges wherein he will haue his glorie to shine most cheefely? True it is that our bodies also are the Temples of the holy Ghost: but yet hath God set his owne image in our soules: and what a thing were it then to defile them after that sort with all diueliſhe and worldly vncleanneſse? Thus ye see whereunto it behoooeth vs to applie this doctrine to vse it wel. 1. Cor. 6. 19. & Eph. 4. 23 24.

And by the way let vs marke, that Gods wil was to holde the people of olde time in obedience that they might knowe howe it is not for men to take such libertie and licence as they list, but that they must receiue it at his hande. To bee short, let vs not attempte any thing in al our whole life, except wee knowe it to be acceptable to our God. When wee haue leaue of him, then may we well goe forwarde: but if hee say it not, then let vs be still. And indeede although this prohibition were not put in writing; yet had God put a difference afore betweene cleane beastes and vncleane beastes, as we may easily perceiue by that which is written of Noe. God commaunded him to make sacrifice after the fludde. And whereof? Was it of all beastes ingenerall? No: Neither had hee reserued so great a number of the vncleane beastes as of the cleane, and that was by reason of sacrificing. Then was there a difference alreadie euen at that time. And whereof proceeded that? Had men deuised it of their owne braine? No. And therefore let vs marke howe God reserued to himselfe the prerogatiue of putting difference betweene the beastes that were cleane and the beastes that were vncleane, to the intent that men shoulde know that it is not for them to liue as they list, & to haue ỹ bridle loose in al things; but that it behoooeth them to looke vpwarde to harken what God giueth them leaue to do. And when he giueth them leaue; then let them vse their libertie, or elſe let them keepe themselues still. Ye see here a doctrine that is as profitable as that which we haue touched alreadie: for wee see howe men burst foorth into such disorder, & with so great headineſse, that they haue no mind at all to vse Gods benefites according to his meaning. Ye shall not finde one among a thousande that will consider with him selfe whether God giueth him leaue to doe a thing or no. But men rushe out into all disorder, as though they had leaue to doe what they list. Nowe then seeing wee be so leawde and vnkinde that wee fall to thrusting our groynes into thinges like swine, and consider not from whence the benefites Gen. 8. 20.

come: good cauſe haue we to remember this doctrine, wherein it is ſhewed vs that euen from ỹ beginning of the worlde, GOD did put a difference betweene the cleane beaſtes and the vncleane. And let vs vnderſtande, that although the ceremonie continue not any longer nowadayes; Yet notwithſtanding the ſame ought to ſerue vs for a warning, to lift vp our mindes on high in our eating and drinking and in our vſing of all the reſt of Gods creatures, that wee may know howe farre God hath giuen vs leaue, and ſimply ſubmit our ſelues thereunto.

Again, if he giue vs libertie, let it always prouoke vs to glorifie his name & to giue him thãks: for it is one of the ſacrifices which he requireth of vs, that wee ſhoulde doe him homage for all his benefites as holding them from him. But that cannot be done, except wee bee firſt put in minde that we cannot ſo much as eate one bit of breade, without it be giuen vs from aboue, not onely for that he hath created all thinges, but alſo for that it behoueth vs to receiue all things as at his hande. Therefore whenſoeuer we eat or drinke, we muſt not onely call to minde that God hath created all things for mans vſe; but alſo that hee feedeth vs, as a father that cutteth out meate to his little children, ſo as our hauing of thinges is as it were by his deliuerance, as if he ſhould ſay to vs, I doe the office of a father, I haue a care to nouriſhe you. If wee knowe not this, it is vnpoſſible for vs to thanke God hartily and vnfainedly. True it is that euen they that haue no ſuch thought will ſay grace; but that is but for faſhion ſake and in way of hypocriſie. Wil wee then magnifie Gods goodneſſe truely: then muſt we bee fully reſolued, not onely that God hath created all thinges for mans vſe: but alſo that he ſtil ſheweth himſelfe a father, and giueth vs aſſurance that he will ſuſteyne our bodies, and maintaine vs in this tranſitorie life. Sith it is ſo, is it not an incouragement vnto vs to yeeld him the thankes as he deſerueth? Yes: For it is not without cauſe that hee liſted to put a difference betweene the ceremonies of the Lawe, and the thinges that we haue at this day. But although this prohibition was done away by the cõming of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt; yet ceaſe wee not to come backe ſtill to this point, that foraſmuch as our Lord Ieſus Chriſt giueth vs leaue to vſe all his creatures indifferently, we muſt vſe them in ſuch wiſe as he may be glorified by them, ſo as wee referre all to him, and take all as at his hande.

Pſal. 50.14. 23.

And herewithall we ſee what priuiledge wee haue, in that we may quietly and with ſafe conſcience eate the thinges that God giueth vs. For as for the wretched papiſts, which behaue themſelues after the maner of the worlde, in forbearing certaine meates that are forbidden them, whereas they think themſelues to ſerue God in making but ſmall meales vppon ſome certayne dayes, and abſteyning from egges and whyte-meates on ſome other dayes; and beare themſelues in hand that their ſo doing is great deuotion, and that God is greatly bound to them for it, and yet in ỹ meane while ſuffer themſelues to be led like ſilie beaſtes by the tyrannie of men: in what caſe are they before God? They can not eat one bitte of breade without doubting, becauſe they knowe not who it is that giueth it to them. But ſith we ſee that our Lorde hath ſet vs at libertie, ſo as we may vſe all manner of meats with thankſgiuing: let vs conſider that it is ſuch a priuiledge as cannot be eſteemed ſufficiently: and therfore let vs acknowledge it in our eating and drinking. Sith we perceiue ỹ God hath ſuch a care of vs, as to ſtoope ſo lowe, as to be chary of our food: [let vs aſſure our ſelues ỹ] although our bodies be but carions; yet notwithſtanding God wil giue them ſuſtenance to maintaine thẽ. Seeing wee haue ſuch a certeintie & knowledge (which cannot be without faith,) that is to wit that we be ſure what God hath graunted vnto vs: we ought greatly to magnifie his grace, and therewithall to vſe all his creatures with ſuch ſobrietie, as we may yeeld him good account of them at the laſt day, & glorifie him in al pointes as long as he keepeth vs in this world.

1. Cor. 10. 31.

Now let vs kneele downe before ỹ maieſtie of our good god w̃ acknowledgement of our fauks, praying him to make vs feele them better than we haue done, by touching vs to the quicke, ſo as we acknowledging him to bee the authour of all good things, may learne to ſeeke him in all our life, and cleaue wholy to his will: and that for the bringing thereof to paſſe, it may pleaſe him to graunt vs the grace to forſake all our corruptions, and to fence vs ſo from the wiles and ſutteleties of ſatan and the world, as nothing may keepe vs from being truely vnited to him that is the fountaine both of life, of ioye, and of al happineſſe. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs, but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth, &c.

The XCj. Sermon, which is the ſecond vpon the fourteenth Chapter.

21 Ye ſhal not eat of anie dead bodie, but thou ſhalt giue it to the Straunger that is within thy gates, that he may eat it: or elſe thou ſhalt ſell it to a ſtraunger: For thou art a holy people to the Lord thy God. Thou ſhalt not ſeeth a kidde in his dammes milke.

22 Thou ſhalt giue the tenth of all the increaſe of thy ſeede which groweth yeerely on thy Land:

23 And in the place which the Lorde thy GOD will chooſe to put his name in, thou ſhalt eate before him the tythe of thy grayne, and of thy wine, and of thine oyle, and the firſt borne of thy kine, and of thy ſheepe, that thou maiſt learne to feare the Lord thy God alwayes.

YEſterday I tould you the cauſe why God forbad the people of olde time to eate of ſome certaine kindes of meats. For in as much as we be fed & ſuſtained by his hand, it is good reaſon ỹ we ſhould vſe his creatures purely, and that we ſhould haue leaue of him, ſo as euery man take not leaue to doe what he liſteth, but what Gods word permitteth vs to doe. Therewall I ſhewed alſo, ỹ although the ceremonie be no more vſed nowadayes, nor we any more bound thereto as the fathers of old time were which liued vnder the law: yet notwithſtanding the doctrine thereof ceaſſeth not to be profitable for vs. And hereby we be doone to vnderſtand, that it is not lawfull for vs to eate or drinke without faith, (as S. Paul ſpeaketh of it in the xiiii. to the Romanes) that is to ſay, vnleſſe we be ſure that God giueth vs the thinges which wee receiue for our ſuſtenaunce, as if a father ſhoulde feede his children. On the other ſide, wee haue farre greater libertie nowadayes, than was vnder the Lawe. Wee ſee how liberall GOD is towardes vs: and wee haue the more cauſe to yeeld him thankes. Moreouer the thing that was ſet downe in figures to the Iewes in olde tyme, is vttered as nowe vnto vs without figure: that is to ſay, that in all caſes & all reſpects we muſt bridle our ſelues, ſo as we medle not w̄ the defilements of ỹ vnbeleeuers, but ſeparate our ſelues from them, ſeeing ỹ our Lord hath gathered vs into his flock and ſheepefold. And this figure of the old time, is a warning for vs nowadayes. For although we be no more bound to the keeping of it; yet notw̄ſtanding it ought to moue vs ỹ more to ſerue our god purely, ſith we ſee he hath giuen vs a greater priuiledge than he gaue to ỹ Patriarkes & Prophets. After ỹ ſelf ſame maner is it w̄ the things ỹ Moſes addeth here. For yeſterday he treated of the meats ỹ were foule and vncleane in thoſe dayes. And hee ſorted them into their ſeuerall kindes. You ſhal eate of ſuch beaſtes, ſayd he: but in any wiſe beware ỹ ye touch no ſwine, nor any ſuch like things. Nowe he treateth of ſtrangled meats, as of fleſh ỹ dieth alone wout killing and wout letting of it bloud. And no doubt but ỹ his ſetting downe of this, is to ſhew that in ſo doing there is a double abhomination according to ỹ lawe. For firſt & formoſt when a beaſt died ſo alone of it ſelf, it was vnholy aforehand, & the very only touching of it was able to make a mā vncleane. And ỹ was the cauſe why God did forbid his people to eate therof. Again, the bloud of it was ſetled in it, & we haue ſeene already how it was not lawful for ỹ Iewes to eate bloud, & that was bicauſe ỹ in the bloud wee haue as it were a liuely image of ỹ ſoule & of the life: & Gods meaning was to teach his people to abſtaine frō all crueltie. And hereof we haue ỹ reaſon expreſſed in Geneſis, at ſuch time as Noe and his ofspring were forbidden to eate bloud; where it is added ỹ we muſt ſpare men, bicauſe a man is ỹ image of God, & whoſoeuer doeth any outrage vnto him, ſhal not ſcape vnpuniſhed. Now then, Gods care was not for the beaſts when he forbad ỹ Iewes ỹ eating of their bloud: but his intent was to teach them by ỹ meanes to abſtaine from all crueltie, ſo as they ſhould be loth to do any outrage, and ſpecially any murther. But as for vs in theſe days we bee not in ſuch bondage. For our Lord Ieſus Chriſt hath freed vs by his death and paſſion. Neuertheleſſe, howſoeuer we fare, ỹ groundwork abideth ſtill, ſo as a man may forbid a little child to handle a knife, leaſt he ſhould hurt himſelfe w̄ it: and yet an elder body alſo is to be forefended from hurting of himſelfe, wheras yet notwithſtāding, the handling of a knife were not euill for a child but in reſpect aforeſaid. And therfore God who tooke ỹ Iewes as little children, forbad thē ſtreitly the things ỹ are permitted vs at this day. Howbeit, the finall end is all one both to them & vs: inſomuch that we muſt conſider, that if Gods wil was to haue the Iewes kindharted, & to know ỹ the ſhedding of bloud is a deteſtable thing: the ſame ought alſo to be regarded of vs at this day, although the figure therof be aboliſhed. True it is (as wee reade in ỹ xv. of the Actes) ỹ the Apoſtles forbad ỹ Gentils to eate bloud or any thing that is ſtrangled: but ỹ was not for any ſin ỹ was in ſo doing. It was to auoide occaſion of offence, bicauſe (as it is thēre alleaged) Moſes was read openly, & the law was publiſhed abrode in all Cities, ſo as they heard it there forbidden. The Iewes could not abide at ỹ firſt, to ſee them eate bloud, which named themſelues Chriſtians: for ỹ was a lothſome thing to them. Therefore men were faine for a time to forbeare ỹ libertie that God giueth nowadayes to al the faithfull, accordingly as S. Paul ſpeaketh therof, ſaying that the things which are lawfull for vs are not alwayes expedient: for they edifie not. We haue in deede our conſciences free before God: but yet if I ſee my brother offended, it behoueth me to beare w̄ him, if his ſo doing be through infirmitie, and in any wiſe I muſt haue a conſideration whether a man be already throughly inſtructed in the faith or no. The intent of the Apoſtles then was not to make a grounded law wherewith to tie mens conſciences, & to hold thē in bondage: but only to auoide al occaſion of cauſing folk to ſtumble. But this hath bin ill marked of a great ſort of ignorant perſons. For they haue thought it to bee deadly ſinne to eate ỹ bloud of any beaſt, as wee see it mainteined still at this day: and that was a foolish & beastly superstition. For (as I said afore) our Lord Iesus Christ hath cancelled the obligation of the Lawe of Moses, so as we be no more Col. 2. 14. bound vnto it. But yet for all that, it behoueth vs to liue in concord one with another, and to haue a regarde what our neighbours are able to beare. There is not the like reason for vs noweadayes to forbeare the eating of flesshe vppon frydayes: for it is a meere deuotion, and it was forged and inuented without any likelyhoode of reason, yea and it was matched with a kinde of Idolatrie, for as much as the Papistes haue furmised themselues to serue God by that meanes in forbearing to eat flesshe vpon certaine daies, which was too grosse a folly. Ne-uertheless, if a christenman shold come among the Papistes, and goe about to teache them that are yet altogether blinded, the point ẏ he should begin at, must not bee the eating of flesh vpon frydayes; for that would scare them quite away; bicause they neuer heard that it is lawful to do it, and therfore could neuer conceiue the truth of it, and besides that they should see him go about to breake a law which they take to be most holy, without informing them of the true meaning of the whole. Such dealing therfore should be contrary to Gods meaning, and to Christen-liberty.

And therefore order and measure are to bee obserued in those cases. But by the way, let vs remember that wee haue cause to giue thankes to our God, for exempting vs from ẏ bondage that our fathers were subiect to vnder the law: & that we must also benefite our selues by those figures, by learning to liue friendly with our neighbors, abhorring all murthers and outrages, not onely actual murthers but also hatred, which is likewise condemned for murther before God, though it
1. Ioh. 3. 15. be neuer so secret and close kept, as saith S. Iohn.
That is the thing which we haue to note when it is sayd vnto vs that God vttereth his will without any shadow, and not in darke speeches as he did to the fathers, but as one that speaketh with open mouth: and therefore let vs hold our selues contented therewith.

Now after this commaundement, Moses addeth that wee must not seeth a Kidde in his dammes Milke: but woorde for woorde, it is but in Milke. It hath beene commonly vnderstoode, that a man shoulde not seeth a Kid in his dames milke, or make sawce with Goates milke to eate Kiddes flesshe withall. And thereuppon, the Iewes (who will needes bee alwayes adding of somewhat to the pure worde of God) haue made a Lawe that it shoulde not bee lawfull for a man to eate cheese made of Goates milke after he had eaten kiddes flesh, vntill he had first well scoured and washed his teeth, for to their seeming, that woulde haue bin a defiling of the man. But when al things are wel considered, the meaning of this text is ẏ men shoulde not rost a kid as soone as he were new yeaned, but ẏ they should let it sucke for a time, ẏ it might be flesht meete to bee eaten. And this was doone to the ende that folke should not inure themselues so much to the following of their owne appetites, as to fall into any beastly crueltie: for from the one, men come to the other. Let vs alwayes beare in minde howe it was declared yesterday, that GOD was well willing to giue his people leaue to eate of all maner of good & conuenient meates, sauing that he meant to holde them in awe for the trial of their obedience, and yet notwithstanding ment not onely to set them downe some order of diet or fare like a Phisition.
For it were too grosse an imagination to thinke that God prouided but onely for the diseases of his people, as though all his Ceremonies had tended but to the feeding of their bodyes.
For the putting hereof among the olde figures and shadowes was not for nought. Then let vs conclude that God had a further regarde when he forbad the eating of a kidde in his dammes milke. And in deede we see how in another place hee forbiddeth men to catch an olde birde sitting vpon her yong ones, for it is a kind of cruel- Deut. 22. 6.
tie. If a man finde a nest of Partridges or other birdes, and catch the dam sitting vpon the yong;
God condemneth it, that is to say, he condemned it in olde tyme in the Lawe among the Ceremonies. And why so? Bycause it is against nature. For wee see howe the seely birdes are so carefull for their young, that the damme will rather starue than forsake them. Whereby wee bee put in minde to doe the like. Seeing then that the seelie birds, to discharge their naturall duetie, doe forget themselues so farre that they passe not what miserie they indure, nor what care they take for the cheerishing of their yong ones, in so much as they suffer themselues to bee taken with hand, and yeeld themselues as it were into bondage for them: were it not an acte of extreme crueltie for a man to goe kill them? Good cause therefore had God to forbid it, to shewe that men ought not to passe their bounds, and take leaue to doe what they list, but to restraine themselues to some kind of humani-tie. And so whereas in this text God forbiddeth men to eate a kid in his dams milke; it is as much to say, as men ought not to deuour a yong beast as soone as it is come into ẏ world, vntill it haue sucked a time: neither can the flesh of it be kindly and good to eate. Nay, moreouer it importeth a kind of barbarous ouerfiercenes, when mẽ are so greedie ẏ they will needs take the beastes at the first fal of them, and not tarie till they may come to their full season to be eaten, as some haue bin seene to be so beastly, ẏ they haue ripped ẏ dams bellyes to take out the yong ones. It hath beene seen that a glutton hath not bin contented with the creatures which God hath brought forth into the world, but he must also go rip vp a Hinde to haue the Calfe for the satisfying of his appetite. It is sayde that the earth is full of infinite riches, and ẏ god hathpowred out such treasures Psal. 33. 5.
as are able to amase vs: & yet for al ẏ ye see how some man wil play the detestable monster. Whẽ he hath pãpered his belly with ordinarie foode, he fals to deuising I wote not what: in so much ẏ if it were possible he wold create a new world, to feede his paunch wal. And although he be not able to make a flie, yet falleth he to imagining, I will

wil go ſlit a Hinde or a Doe, and take out ỹ vntimely fruit out of her belly to feed vpon. And is not ỹ too great a wickednesse? No doubt but that ſuch desires haue beene in all ages; but behold, God telleth vs that wee muſt vſe ſuch temperance and ſoberneſſe in our dyet, as wee may alwayes haue a regard to the maintening of humanitie. Wee muſt preſcribe a rule our ſelues, and our eating and drinking muſt not bee ſo barbarous, that it ſhould be a meane to harden our hartes & make vs to forgo all humanitie, which is a thing diuers times quite forgotten; but that we ſhould liue together in good quietnes, & abſtaine from all iniurie and euill dealing.

And as touching the Ceremony whereof I am to ſpeake, which the Iewes obſerue and whereof they haue made a very ſolemne law: we ſee therby how the world will needes pay God alwayes with petie trifles. And ỹ is it from whence ſuch ſuperſtition is come. It is all one with that which we haue ſeene heeretofore, where God forbad his people to disfigure themſelues at the death of any of their friendes. But the Iewes conſidering not to what end ſuch prohibition was ſet downe: obſerued it according to the letter. Well then, they muſt not disfigure themſelues: but yet they had not an eye to gods meaning, which is ỹ men ouerſhoot themſelues too far in making too much ſorrowe at ỹ deceaſſe of their friends, tormenting themſelues wout meaſure, blaſpheming the name of God, and fretting inwardly. And therfore God intended to repreſſe ſuch corruption. Yea and as though mens ſins prouoked not Gods wrath ſufficiently of themſelues: they thinke it not ynough to be impatient, but they do alſo prouoke themſelues to it ſtill more & more. For we ſee there is no meaſure in mens ſorrowing, but they inforce themſelues to weepe, and doe many other thinges to increaſe their greefe and heauineſſe, kindling the fire ſtill more and more, which is great ynough already of it ſelfe. After the ſame maner deale they in all other thinges. But what doe the Iewes ſtill in this behalfe? They may not disfigure themſelues: but in the meane while they rend their garmentes. And ſo the meaning of the Lawmaker, which was ſimple, is disfeated. For to their ſeeming, when a friend of theirs is dead, they muſt not be without ſorrowe for him, for that were a diſhonouring of him, and therefore they muſt rend their garmentes for him. And beſides that, they muſt make ſuch Countenances, and ſuch Ceremonies, ſo as they muſt not eate that day in their owne houſes, but ſpend that day abrode in mourning, and in doeing this and that. When they haue finiſhed a hundred pelting toyes, they beare themſelues in hand that they haue wel pacified God; and yet notwithſtanding that they may diſpiſe him all their life long. And heerein we ſee as in a lookingglaſſe, how greatly our nature is inclined to ſuperſtition; and ſecondly that alwayes we will needes haue ceremonies to content God withall, and to diſcharge our dewties towardes him. Our nature (I ſay) is ſo bent to ſuperſtition, that if God forbid a thing, in deede wee dare not doe it with intent to reſiſt him, but wee ſeeke ſome other byway, ſo as GOD ſhall bee diſappointed, and neuer haue the thing that hee demaundeth. As for example, the Chriſtians which beare that name, take not vpon them the very ſuperſtitions of ỹ Idolaters as they terme them; but yet they followe the ſelfe ſame in deede with a little diſguiſing of them, and ſo they beare themſelues in hande that god eſpies them not at all. The Idolaters caryed bread and drinke to the graues of the dead, bearing themſelues in hand that the ſoules were fed therewith; and they caryed thither lightes to the intent to glad them. Nowe the Papiſtes haue thought this to be too great an abſurditie. But what for that? They offer vp bread, & wine, and candles, and monie at their Maſſes; and the ſoules departed (ſay they) ſhall finde releeſe by it. Verily if it bee replyed that the ſuperſtition of the Papiſtes is not all one with the ſuperſtition of the heathen: in deede there is ſome difference betwixt them. But to what ende do they ſo, but to content GOD with ſome newe exchaunge? For (as I ſayde) it is a thing rooted in mans nature. And wee ought to marke it well: for wee woulde ſoone fall into it, if wee were not reſtrayned by Gods woorde, as by a ſhort and rough brydle. And all commeth from out of this ſpring, that wee will not ſerue GOD as he requireth, but by a ſorte of Ceremonies I wote not what. And when wee haue once made ſome ſhewe of deuotion; wee beare our ſelues in hand that he is well appeaſed, and that he ought not to preſſe vs any further. And thus ye ſee that the cauſe why men in all ages haue toyled themſelues ſo much in the ſeruing of God, and haue inuented ſo many trifling things: is that they will needes paye him in ſuch coyne, bicauſe they were loath to deale vprightly and faythfully with him. God requireth our hearts: & if he poſſeſſe not them, 1.Sam.16.7.
al the reſt is nothing worth. Now we bee full of hypocriſie, and wee bee not willing to diſcouer our backnookes which are full of diſſimulation, malice, and rebellion, but would alwayes keepe them ſtill to our ſelues. And yet in the meane ſeaſon wee pretend a maruelous holyneſſe with our eyes, our feete, and our handes. Therefore let vs learne that this miſcheefe hath reigned in all ages, to the intent we may rid our ſelues of it; and let vs aſſure our ſelues that God will not be ſerued at our handes by outwarde Ceremonies. True it is that all our whole life ought to beare witneſſe that the feare of him is well rooted in our hartes. Faith is a dead thing if it vtter not it Iames 2.17.
ſelfe by good fruites. Moreouer if we intend to haue our ſeruice accepted of God, let vs aſſure our ſelues that we muſt begin at the ſoundneſſe of hart, and that all Ceremonies are to no purpoſe, except they ſhewe ỹ our hart is right, pure, and vnfeined. Thus much concerning the ſuperſtition and abuſe ỹ reigned among the Iewes and ſtill reigneth at this preſent.

We muſt alwayes come backe to this ſaying of our Lorde, that the thinges which goe into a mans mouth defile him not, but the thinges that come out at his mouth, as all maner of wicked affections. One is full of ambition and pride, another burneth in couetousnesse, and a third practiseth spitefullnesse and treason. Euery man hath his vice himselfe, so as one is a glutton and another is a whoremonger. These are the things that infect the man, yea and they infect the whole world. Therefore let vs learne to clense our selues from all such filthinesse: and as for Ceremonies, let vs knowe that wee ought to vse them so farre foorth as God requireth them for the vttering of our faith: but yet must we vse them simply, and not bee wedded too much to them. For wee see that the deuill will by and by haue a towell ready to blindfould our eyes withall, so as wee shall no more consider the principall, but forget it vtterly and abuse our selues to thinges of nothing. To the intent then that we may not haue our eyes so bleared; let vs follow God that way which hee calleth vs: that is, to serue him in all pureness.

And now as touching the principall point of this sentence, where it is said that a kid must bee eaten in his dammes milke: let vs vnderstand that God will haue vs to vse honestie and soberness in our eating and drinking: that is the thing in effect, which wee haue to remember in that text. Truely as touching the figure, we be no more tyed to it, as I haue said afore: but as for Gods meaning, that is durable. When men doe giue themselues to their leawde and outrageous appetites, it is all one as though they ment to ouerthrow the order of nature. Yee see how drunkardes (when they bee so full that they be ready to burst) doe inuent such shamefull thinges, that an honest man would bee ready to cast vp his stomacke to heare the things spoken of which those swine doe. When they be as full as their skinnes can holde, they whet their stomacks, & take shooinghornes (as they term thē) to drawe on a cup of wine, and such other like things, so as wee may see that men cannot content themselues with any measure; but although God shewe himselfe liberall towardes them, yet notwithstanding they wil needs follow their inordinate lustes still, declaring ỹ their desires are vnsatiable, & neuer at rest, till they haue brought themselues to shameful disorder, without regard of any modestie. Sith we see such things, we may well perceyue howe it is not without cause that God hath warned the Iewes to vse a kind of honestie in their liuing and feeding: which thing belōgeth much more to vs at this day. Although we haue not the Ceremonie any more; yet will God haue vs to liue honestly, & to vse a sobrietie in our eating & drinking, so as we may alway lift vp our eyes & say, Lord, we haue receiued foode at thy hand, & we know ỹ thou shewest thy selfe a father towards vs. But if we make a hotchpotch of al things wout discretion, surely it is no taking of them as at Gods hand, but wee shall finde at the last, that we rauened them vp like beastes. And therfore let vs learne to refraine our selues. Thus wee see howe the doctrine that is conteyned heere, is not vnnecessarie at this day, so wee can applie it duely, and with discretion of the holy Ghost to our instruction.

Now after this, he sayth concerning beasts that are strangled, and are dead in their bloud; that they shoulde giue them to straungers or else sell them. It seemeth heere at the first sight, that God should as well condemne those beastes for the straungers as for the Iewes. For if it be not lawfull for me my selfe to doe a thing; why should I bee an occasion to my neighbour to doe it? Am I not giltie of sinne in so doing? Here we haue to consider the reason that Moses addeth: Thou art a People holy vnto thy God. Heere he sheweth that God had shooled out ỹ Iewes from all other nations of the earth, and therefore hee would not haue them to defile themselues with any kind of meate. Now if it be demaunded, and why then had they leaue to sel or giue the things to straungers, which were abhominable as in respect of themselues? The reason is this: That god hauing named the beasts which he would haue his people to eate of, did leaue all beastes without difference for all other men to feede on which were not instructed in his Law. True it is that he had forbidden al mankind to eate the bloud of any thing, and consequently to eate of any beast that was strangled or died alone. But the most part of the world was already gone astraye, so as they knew not the law any more, & we see how ỹ euen in the life of Noe, his posteritie intangled themselues in a nomber of superstitious & Idolatries, and had forgotten god who had preserued them so wonderfully: so as there was no more but the linage of Sem, which was but a very small portion, that held themselues to any pureness in the seruing of God. By reason wherof ỹ whole world grew into such a licentious liberty, that all was mard. God therefore reserueth a people to himselfe, & bringeth them backe to the first law, saying. Seeing I tel you that I haue chosen you to be my housshould: I set you downe a speciall order, ỹ you may haue my badge wherby to be knowne from al ỹ vnbeleeuers of the earth. After ỹ maner doth god deale. But men runne gadding on their own head, & follow alwaies their own affections, & cānot find in their harts to submit themselues simply to Gods law as he requireth. Truely the thing of it selfe were not euill, if there had bin no law against it. And this law was giuen to ỹ Iewes, for the two reasons which I haue alleaged afore. The first was for the tryall of their obedience, ỹ they should shew themselues to be subiect vnto God. And the second was, ỹ thereby they might be quickned vp to keepe themselues from al corruption. But as for the heathen, they might haue eaten of all meates, so they had acknowledged the giuer of them and the creator that had made all thinges to their vse, worshipping him purely and abstaining from al cruelty & outrage: but they liued in ỹ world like beastes. They had in deede a kinde of Imagination that there was one God; & they forged a great nomber of gods: and yet for all that while euery man had an Idoll by himselfe, the liuing God was forsaken of all men. For as much then as the heathen had not the Law appointed vnto them: the Iewes might well leaue those kind of meates vnto them.

Gen. 11.8. & 13.10

And verily thereby they were done to vnder-

ſtand, ỹ the thing of it ſelfe was not euill. Seeing ỹ God gaue them leaue to ſel or giue vnto ỹ heathen the fleſh of ſuch things as were not ordinarily ſlaine; thereby they might perceiue how it behoued them to looke yet further. And why ſo? As touching murther, bicauſe it is forbidden of it ſelf, if it be not lawfull for me to kill a man, neither is it lawfull for mee to lend a ſworde to kill him withall, nor to vſe any maner of treacherie. Now then, in things ỹ God condemneth of thẽſelues, & which are euil of thẽſelues: it is certaine ỹ all men ought not onely to abſtaine frõ them, but alſo to beware ỹ he giue not any occaſion to any other body to do thẽ. And ſo it is to be concluded, ỹ ſith the Iewes might without offending God giue or ſel the fleſh of ſtrangled beaſts: God ſhewed thereby, that ỹ thing of it ſelf was not euil; & that his forbidding of it was but to hold thẽ vnder awe, & thereby to leade them yet further, intending to make thẽ vnderſtand, ỹ they ought to liue in al maner of purenes, bicauſe they were a holy people. This is ỹ which we haue to remẽber vpon this place. Nowe, whereas he ſpeaketh here of ſtraungers, he meaneth all the heathen which were not of ỹ line of Abraham, as if we in theſe dayes ſhould ſpeake of ỹ Turks & Sarazins, wee might ſay they haue no fellowſhip ẅ vs bicauſe they weare not ỹ badge of Baptiſme, and deſpiſe ỹ God whom we worſhip. For Gods lawe ſpeaketh to all men alike, at leaſtwiſe the morall lawe as they terme it, that is to ſay, the lawe ỹ ruleth our life: but the lawe ỹ belongeth to ỹ Goſpel, ſpeaketh to none but to ỹ Church of God. As for example ỹ Turkes and the Sarazins haue not to do with the ſupper of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, neither can they any skill of Baptiſme. True it is that they haue waſhinges, and they waſh themſelues oft ynough: but al ỹ euer they haue is no better than ỹ holywater of the Papiſtes. As for ỹ thinges ỹ are peculiar to vs, & which God hath giuen to vs as to his children and houſholdfolk, thoſe belong not to ſuch as are altogether eſtraunged from ỹ Church, & the holy ſcripture. And therefore let vs marke well, ỹ whereas God doth here giue the heathen leaue to eate al maner of meats: it is bicauſe he was not ſo gratious to them, as to giue them the inſtruction that was peculiar to ỹ children of Abraham, & to the holy linage which he had choſen from ỹ whole world. Nowe notwithſtanding all this, if the Iewes had complained ỹ God held them in more ſubiection than he did the heathen, and ỹ their owne eſtate was worſe than theirs: might we not ſay ỹ it were too great an vnthankfulnes? If a Iewe ſhould ſay, How nowe? Seeing ỹ God hath choſen vs for his children, why doth he not giue vs as great libertie at the leaſt, as he hath giuen to thoſe that belong not vnto him? Is it meete ỹ we ſhould be inferiour to them? If a Iew ſhould ſpeake after that maner, we would be his iudges, and euery of vs would ſay, fie on him wretch, he ſheweth himſelf tootoo vnhoneſt & churliſh. For ſeing ỹ god hath choſen them for his people, & inſtructed them in his pure doctrine: ſhould they finde fault with him for his holding of thẽ vnder ỹ obedience of his law? But nowe let vs apply this to our ſelues. For in as much as God hath gathered vs togither into his houſe; he wil haue vs to walk more carefully and warely, than the ſillie ignoraunt ſoules that are ſtrayed from the way of Saluation. If wee ſay that that were too rough and ſeuere a dealing; wee our ſelues are too vnthankefull. It is ſaid that we muſt liue as childrẽ of the light: & no maruaile it is though ſuch as haue not learned Gods word do ſtut and ſtumble, & go aſtray; for they be like blinde wretches in the darke. But wee haue Gods worde, which is as a lampe to giue vs lyght, and again we haue beene inlightened by the holy Ghoſt, ſo as wee knowe the will of God. And ſhall wee nowe runne aſtray as though wee had neuer knowen any good doctrine? Nowe then whereas God hath tyed vs ſhorter than he hath tyed the ignorant; if we thereupon wil needes ſhake off his yoke and fall to checking at him, as though wee had leuer to haue the licentious libertie of the vnbelecuers, than to bee held vnder the obedience of God our father: we were worthie to bee rooted out of the world. For it were too great a defacing of Gods gracious goodneſſe, to doe ſo, when GOD hath choſen vs to himſelfe and giuen vs his badge, as if hee ſhould ſay, I wil raigne among you, let it appeare that yee haue beene in my ſchoole, let not my ſhewing of my ſelfe to haue beene your father and Sauiour bee in vaine. So then, let vs marke well, that whereas God calleth vs vnto him, it is with this condition, that wee ſhoulde not liue any more after the manner of the ignorant wretches which woote not howe to order their conuerſation: for they doe followe their owne beaſtly luſtes. It is ynough (ſaieth Saint Peter ſpeaking to the heathen that had beene conuerted to the beleefe of the Goſpell,) it is ynough (ſaith hee) that yee haue done heeretofore; ye haue giuen too much heede to your wicked affections already, ſee that none of you take ſuch licentious libertie any more, but ſubmit your ſelues to Gods yoke; and ſith it is gods wil to haue the gouernment of you, ſuffer your ſelues to be guided by his hand, and obey his worde in all thinges, vtterly forſaking your owne wicked luſtes.

1. Pet. 4. 3.

Nowe then, whereas in theſe dayes we ſee the worlde to bee altogether corrupted: let vs not alledge other mens croſſe dealinges in defence of our own, neyther let vs make a ſhield of them to ſay, why ſhoulde wee bee held more in awe than other men? Alas, is it to bee maruailed at that thoſe ſhoulde goe aſtray, which haue no lyght? But ſeeing that GOD hath ſent vs the Sonne of righteouſneſſe, let vs aſſure our ſelues that it will bee no excuſe for vs, though the ignoraunt wretches doe goe aſtray after their owne imaginations. Surely this is yll put in practiſe. For our whole ſeeking nowadayes, is nothing elſe but to heape together all the offences in the worlde, to make a confuſed hotchpotch of them. If it bee ſayde that there bee a nomber of men which are giuen to fraude and guyle, and are full of ſuttletie and deceite: wee reſt vppon that and are contented to counterfet their vices, & to alleage them in ſport.

As

As for mens vertues, wee let them alone, and make none accounte of them: but as for their vices, wee make a barre of them againſt God. O ſay wee, ye ſee howe ſuch a man doth ſo, another doeth after that faſhion: this is a common cuſtome euerywhere: and wil ye haue vs to be holyer than al other men? Beſides this, it is alledged thus alſo. What I pray you, doe not the Papiſtes ſo before vs? Yes: but the Papiſtes haue ſhaken off the yoke of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, they haue withdrawen themſelues from him and from his Church. True it is ỹ they haue baptiſme which is ỹ ſigne of Chriſtianitie: but they haue vtterly abolished the true vſe of baptiſme, and we ſee how they haue no skil at al either of God or of his word. As for our part, forasmuch as we haue the Goſpel, and that wee are thereby conuicted ỹ it is Gods trueth, and we be preferred before thoſe that were at leaſtwiſe as good as we in reſpect of the world, & ſeeing he hath choſen vs after that faſhion, are we not too much to blame, if wee come not to offer our ſelues wholly vnto him, ſaying, Lorde gouerne thou vs, and let vs not looke at other mens dooings to bee caryed away by their miſexample; but let vs alwayes bee gathered together as it were vnder the ſhadowe of thy winges? Thus ye ſee what wee haue to marke vpon this admonition of Moſeſes, Knowe ye (ſaith he) that the Lord your God hath ſeparated you out from all other nations of the earth.

After this, he cõmeth to the tythes wherof he had ſpoken afore, & ſaieth, Ye ſhall tythe the firſt of all your fruites which ye ſhall haue gathered, as well of Corne, Wine, and Oyle, as alſo of the firſt borne of all your Cattell. The repetition which our Lord vſeth here is not more than needeth. For (as we haue ſeene heretofore) men are ſo wedded to their owne profit, ỹ their duetie cannot be had at their handes, but by force, and they muſt bee faine to haue their eares beaten dayly, or elſe (if it bee poſſible) they will doe what they can to exempt themſelues from dooing their duetie, ſpecially when it commeth to the Lawe of God and to the things that he requireth at our hand: for we wil be aſhamed if wee yeeld not our duetie vnto men. Whẽ a man hath misbehaued himſelfe towards mẽ; ye ſhal ſee him aſhamed to lift vp his head. True it is ỹ faults ſhal not faile to be committed, & that there wilbe a thouſand deuiſes to defraude men by theft, robberie, extortion, and other wicked practiſes: but yet will men alwayes looke the warelyer to themſelues, bicauſe they be reſtrained by ſhame. But as for to Godward, men are quite paſt ſhame, and ſet all at randon as though they would pul out his tongue, or forbid him to ſpeake, when they haue taken from him ỹ which belonged vnto him. And ſo yee ſee what is the cauſe that God hath ſpoken ſo oft of tythes which he would haue offered vnto him, & likewiſe of ỹ firſt fruits. I haue tolde you already ỹ the tythes were allotted to the Leuites, bicauſe God reſerued them to do him ſeruice: & it behoued them to liue vpon ỹ Altar, bicauſe they were dedicated therunto. The ſame reaſon is in force at this day towardes vs. Not that we be bound to the ſame maner of tything that the Iewes were, ſurtherforoth than ciuill order requireth: but that wee muſt alwayes come backe to this ſaying of Saint Paul, that lyke as the Leuites liued vpon tythes bycauſe they were dedicated to the ſeruice of GOD: ſo nowadayes they that haue the charge of teaching in the Church, ought to be maintained with liuing likewiſe, & God hath made an euerlaſting law thereof. 1. Cor. 9. 13 14.

But yet moreouer, we haue to note, that the tithes were allotted to the Leuites as in recompence of their inheritance whereof they were depriued. For God had promiſed the Land of Canaan to all the linage of Abraham, by reaſon whereof the children of Leuie ought not to haue beene bereft of their portion. Yet notwithſtanding, God bereft them of it. And why did he ſo? To the intent they ſhould not toyle themſelues in tilling the ground as other men do, but giue themſelues wholly to his ſeruice as became thẽ. In reſpect whereof it was good reaſon that they ſhould bee recompenſed after another manner. Truly this matter cannot be diſcourſed at large as now, and therefore wee will delay the going through with it till to morrowe, taking this breefe ſumme of it for a concluſion, that our Lordes meaning in this place, was to ſet downe a Lawe for the maintenance of his ſeruice. And for that cauſe it was his minde that the Leuites ſhould haue whereon to liue: for they were the parties that had the charge to maintaine the pure religion: and for that purpoſe were they diſperſed throughout the whole land of Canaan to the end they ſhould keepe the people in the pureneſſe of Gods ſeruice, as we ſee the prophet Malachy ſpeaketh of them, ſaying ỹ they ought to be expounders of gods law, as at whoſe mouth men ought to ſeeke what is good and lawfull. The cauſe then why GOD hath not onely ſet downe this lawe but alſo repeated it, is for that he will haue his ſeruice mainteined. And bicauſe men are negligent in yeelding him his dewe, he hath vouchſafed to repete the law againe which he had ſet downe before; and beſides that, his intent was alſo to put vs in minde to honour him with al the goods which he beſtoweth vpon vs in this life. For ſurely if men eate and drinke without yeelding any honor vnto God, they defile ỹ things which they receiue. For ỹ true meane to ſanctify meates, is by faith & praier ſaith S. Paul. Without faith and prayer, all things become vnclean to vs. And now ye ſee here how god cõmãdeth men to offer vnto him their firſt fruites and tenthes. And why is ỹ? Bicauſe that by ỹ meanes folke were prouoked to ſay, True it is ỹ the earth bringeth forth her fruites, wee haue a good harueſt and vintage, we haue ſtore of Oyle and victelles; & who is he that giueth vs all theſe things? Hath the earth a ſoule to determine with it ſelfe to nouriſh vs? No, it is God our father that doth it: and therfore it is good reaſon that wee ſhould haue regard of him, & conſider how much we be bound vnto him. Thus ye ſee how ỹ in the tithes and firſt fruits, there was a ſolemne proteſtation ỹ whatſoeuer we haue we receiue it at gods hãd, & therfore we ought to do him homage & ſacrifice Mal. 2. 7. 1. Tim. 4. 5.

ſee therewith. Which thing is then done, when we pray vnto him to bleſſe them all, and when wee ſhew effectually by our almesdeedes and ſuch other like thinges, that we be willing to offer all things vnto him which hee hath put into our handes, and to vſe them in ſuch ſorte, as wee may haue a care to follow meaſure, and to frame our ſelues to the ſobrietie which hee hath commaunded vs.

Now let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good GOD with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to vouchſafe to behold vs with pitie, and not to impute vnto vs the great number of offences whereof wee bee guiltie before him, but that it may pleaſe him to rid vs cleane from them, euen by forgiuing them: and moreouer to drawe vs ſo vnto him by his holy ſpirite, as our whole ſeeking may bee to dedicate our ſelues throughly vnto him, continuing throughout in his holy calling, to the end. And ſo let vs all ſay, Almightie God heauenly father &c.

On Thurſday the xxiiij. of October. 1555.

The XCij. Sermon, which is the third vpon the foureteenth Chapter.

24 And if the way be too long, ſo as thou canſt not bring them, becauſe the place which the Lord thy God ſhall haue choſen to ſet his name in, is too far from thee: and that the Lord thy God haue bleſſed thee:

25 Then ſhalt thou make it into monie, and take the monie in thy hande, and repayre to the place which the Lorde thy GOD ſhall haue choſen for himſelfe.

26 And thou ſhalt giue the monie for whatſoeuer thy heart deſireth; whether it be oxen or ſheepe, wine, or ſtraunge drinke, or any other thing which thy heart liketh of. And there feede thou on it in the preſence of the Lord thy God, and bee merrie both thou and thy houſeholde.

28 At the three yeres end thou ſhalt gather together all the tythes of thine encreaſe of that yeare, and lay it vp within thy gates.

29 And then the Leuite which hath no part nor inheritance with thee, and likewiſe the ſtraunger, the fatherleſſe, and the widowe which are within thy gates, ſhal come and eate, and be refreſhed, that the Lord thy God may bleſſe thee in all the workes of thy handes which thou doeſt.

Deut. 12, 5. 6

Forasmuch as Moſes, in ſpeaking heretofore of firſt fruites and offeringes, and freewill oblations; had commaunded that they ſhould be offered in Ieruſalem, or elſe in the place which God was then to chooſe: now hee addeth, that if a man dwels too farre off from that place, hee might make mony of the thinges that were to bee giuen for an offering vnto God, and after the ſale thereof, buy the lyke thinges againe, which ſhould be wholy dedicated to God whatſoeuer they were. Now I haue tolde you already, how it was not for naught that God would haue one certeine place, wherin to offer ſolemne ſacrifices vnto him and to worſhip him: for it ſerued to mainteine the vnitie of faith. Inſomuch that if euery trybe, or at leaſtwiſe euery citie had had an Altar by themſelues; it had bin enough to haue made hauock of all, and men could not haue continued in concord and brotherly loue. Therefore it behoued the Temple to bee a meetingplace for Gods people, to the intent they ſhould altogether acknowledge themſelues to be but one bodie, and vnderſtand that they were bound all to one rule, which is the lawe, and all of them obey the ſame, without any diuerſitie of opinions, or ſtraunge maner of dealinges, or ceremonies among them. And in the ſame reſpect alſo were they commanded to offer in the Temple, to the end that euery man ſhoulde not behaue himſelfe after his owne deuotion as they terme it. For when men will needes ſerue God after their owne fancie, there will be nothing but corruption. Wee muſt alwayes beare this ſaying in minde, that obedience is better than all the ſacrifices in the worlde. And therefore they were forbidden to offer ſacrifice in any other place than onely one which was appointed for that purpoſe, to the intent they ſhould not euery man muſe vppon fooliſh ſuperſtitions, but hold themſelues to the order that was ſet down, without attempting any thing raſhly and fondly vppon their owne heades as I ſayd. And this is ſpoken expreſly vnto vs. For although wee haue not the ſelfeſame order of religion which was among the auncient fathers vnder the Law: yet doth this ground ſtand ſtill, that God will not be worshipped after our opinion, but according to his owne will. Therefore let vs bee well ware that we inuent not superstitions (as the Papistes haue done) vppon surmise that they will be accepted of God: for they will doe nothing else but prouoke his wrath, insomuch that when men turne away from Gods trueth, the more they inforce themselues foreward, the further off doe they still stray from it. Will wee then keepe the right way? Gods word must ouermaister vs. And this thing is yet the better confirmed to vs, by Gods reseruing of the place to himselfe wherein he woulde be serued. For he could well haue sayd by Moses; Choose what place you your selues lyke best, and when yee haue so done, God will giue you leaue to come euery man thither, and there to doe him seruice. Al this might wel haue bin sayd. But God sayth, it belongeth to mee to choose, I will not giue the choyce to men. Herein wee see how hee reserueth the right of souereintie to himself, to the end that the faithfull shoulde the better knowe, that it is not for them to enterprise aught at aladuenture, but that it behoueth them to haue warrant from aboue, so as they may say, God accepteth all that euer wee doe; for we doe nothing but what he commaundeth vs, none of vs dealeth vppon his owne head in this behalfe. Wherefore let vs marke well, that God hath here done vs to vnderstand, that he wil not haue his seruice mingled with our inuentions, but that wee should simply followe the thinges that are conteined in his worde. And so yee see that as concerning the thinges which I haue sayd already, God was to bee worshipped solemnly no where else than in the Temple of Ierusalem after it was declared: and that vntill that time, it behoued the Iewes to resorte to the Arke and to the Sanctuarie. But now let vs come backe againe to that which is set downe here in writing.

If the place (sayth Moses) bee too farre from thee, thou shalt sell the thinges which thou wart minded to offer, or the thinges which thou oughtest to offer. For it behoued them to offer the first borne of all their cattell. Nowe they that dwell in the vttermost coastes of Iewry should haue had much ado to driue thither their Lambs, Sheepe, Goates, and Calues. Therefore they were to be borne withall: and God being no oppresser of his people, giueth them here a remedie, to the intent they should not be greeued too much. As for those that dwell neere to Ierusalem sayth hee, let them bring thither as wel the first borne of their cattell, as also all their freewill offerings, and whatsoeuer other thinges they haue dedicated vnto God. For otherwise the Citie of Ierusalem might bee famished. If all that had come thither should haue bought their sacrifices there: what a thing had that bin? Therefore it was Gods will that men should bring thē thither from al the countries, vnlesse the places were ouerfarre off. And in that case hee saith it should bee Lawful for them to sell the thinges that they had dedicated, namely such as were due by commaundement of the Lawe: as the first borne thinges, in remembraunce that God had smitten the firstborne of Egypt, and spared the firstborne of Israell, whereof he would haue the memoriall to continue for euer. Thou shalt sell it (sayth he,) & put vp the mony, or folde it vp (for so doth the word signify which he vseth.) Folde vp the mony in thy hand (sayth he:) that is to say, consider with your selues that that mony is none of your owne, but that it must bee put vp alone by it selfe as a holy thing. And when thou commest to Ierusalem, thou shalt buy thine offeringes after thine owne lyking, and after that the same hath bin offered in the Temple, the Priestes shall take their dues therof, & then shall you eat and drink therof before the Lord as soone as you haue made your oblation therof, and you shall be merry in eating of your sacrifices, as farre as euery mans portion will extend. That is the thing in effect which wee haue to remember in this text. Exod. 12. 29 & 13. 1.

And here wee see (as I haue sayd afore,) that although God held his people vnder very strait bondage, yet notwithstanding hee layde no more vppon them than they were able to beare, but so mitigated the rigor of the Lawe, as no man could say it was vnpossible to doe the thinges that hee had inioyned. Sith wee see it is so; Let vs assure our selues, that if our good GOD doe in these dayes lay any burthen vppon our shoulders, that may bee too heauie for vs; hee doth also giue vs abilitie to beare it, so as wee bee not borne downe by it, at leastwise if wee commit our selues to him; so as we haue no cause to complayn of him as though he did vtterly ouerwhelme vs. True it is, that the righteousnesse which God requireth of vs in his Lawe, dooth farre surmount all our abilitie, yea and we come so farre shorte of the performing of all that hee hath commaunded vs, so as wee bee not able to stirre one finger towardes it; nay, wee cannot so much as thinke one good thought towardes it: GOD must be faine to giue vs euerywhit. But when he assisteth vs with his holy spirit, then wee finde his yoke sweete and easie, specially, when hee layes it vppon our neckes by the hand of our Lord Iesus Christ. And that is the cause why Iesus Christ protesteth that his burthen is not too heauie, nor his yoke too hard. But how commeth that to passe? It is because God giueth vs both the will to serue him, and also the abilitie to put the same in execution. And therewithall hee addeth a second grace, which is that hee beareth with vs when wee haue done amisse. For wee of our selues are ouerfraile, wee cannot throughly performe the thinges that hee commaundeth vs, & therefore he pardoneth our infirmities & forgetteth them. But howsoeuer the case stand, yet haue wee good cause to serue him freely & with a francke hart, forasmuchas we see that hee on his side desireth no more but to guide vs as the father dooth his children, as hee auoweth by his Prophet Hosheah. Matt. 11. 30. Phil. 2. 13. Psal. 11. 3.

But now let vs marke, that whereas Moses sayth, Let them buy whatsoeuer they haue a minde vnto: his meaning therein is not to giue men leaue

to play the gluttons at their pleasure, as though there were no measure nor modestie to bee obserued. A certeine sect of Heretikes called the Manichees, which skorned Gods Law & the Prophets, alledged this prefet text & such other lyke, to shew that the God of the olde testament as they blasphemously termed him, was a God of disorder, and such a one as kept no good rule. For why, sayd they; hee layd the bridle vpon his peoples necke, and bad them eate whatsoeuer they lyked, and so his meaning was to make them drunkardes and gluttons, by incoraging them to eate and drinke after that fashion. But the true God (sayd they) will haue folke to bee sober, whereby a man may see that the Lawe was not giuen from heauen. But we see how this text was corrupted by their malice, yea euen by their shamefull malice, in blaspheming without any colour of truth, seeing that the lustes of men were restreined afore by the same Lawe. I tolde you yesterday how it was Gods will to bridle his people, by restreining thē from the eating of all sortes of meates without exception, wherein hee meant to haue a tryall of their sobrietie. Sith it is so: it is a fowle shame to alledge this text as a placarde for the setting of all lustes at libertie. The worde Lyking, Longing, or Listing, ought rather to bee restreyned to the thinges that were Lawfull, and which God had giuen them leaue to deale with. As if it had bin sayd, Those that haue a minde to eate of any kinde of meate which is Lawfull for them to eate, let them buy it and make an offering thereof vnto God. And when the Priestes haue taken their rightes thereof, let them eate the residue themselues.

So then let vs marke that here are two things conteined. The one is, that our Lorde sheweth himselfe liberall towardes his people in that hee sayth, Go too, although I coulde withhold my blessing from you; yet notwithstanding I giue you leaue to make your owne choyce of your meate and drinke, howebeit with this exception, that yee take heede that you touch not any meate that is not pure and cleane to you: for it behooueth you to be exercised for a time in the indeuour of dedicating your selues vnto mee, that yee bee not tangled in the defilementes of the infidels. Therefore let that prouiso stand for euer, so as yee alwayes take good heede to vse your libertie in such sorte, as yee may haue no cause to blame mee as though I helde you too streit. For I leaue you to your owne likinges, so they be well ruled. Now then let vs vnderstande, that heere our Lorde beareth with vs, in that hee vouchsafeth to giue vs the vse of his creatures, not onely for our neede without other desire to them, but also euen for our pleasure: and yet notwithstanding, that wee must alwayes take good heede, that our mirth be not excessiue, but rather well moderated. And for that cause is it sayd, Thou shalt eate there in the presence of thy God, which saying hath bin set downe already heretofore. Neuertheless it is not for naught that Moses repeateth it here againe. For wee see how men are wedded to their owne sensualitie, and how they forget themselues in their eating and drinking, so that it is very hard to keepe such measure as God bee not offended, yea euen ere wee thinke of it. I say that euen such as are not giuen to gluttonie and drunkennesse, and which haue a care not onely to the health of their bodies, but also the sober vsing of the things which God giueth them for their repaste; euen they (I say) faile not to commit some fault or other. So then, let vs beare well in minde what is sayd here, where God commaundeth men to eate and drinke in his presence, specially at their solemne feastes when they came to Ierusalem: namely how that thereby he did warne all the faithfull to haue an eye to him in their eating and drinking when they were at home in their owne houses.

Therefore when men sit downe to the table, they must in any wise beware that they take not their repaste without minding of God. For why? First it is a defiling of all our meates and drinkes when wee begin not at the calling vppon his name. Of whom shall we receiue our foode, if we seeke it not at Gods hand? Then must wee beginne at prayer and that is as it were a dedication, to the ende that our meates may become cleane and holy vnto vs, as Saint Paul speaketh of them. But yet besides this, we must come againe to the thing that is sayd here; namely that we must come eate as in the presence of our God. Were it wel printed in our mindes that our God is present at the table w̄ vs: surely wee would vse another maner of modestie than wee doe. And out of doubt, the putting of this lesson in vre, that God is among vs, is a true proofe of our Christianitie. But it is a wonder to see what an insensibleneesse there is in these dayes among Christians. For it was Gods wil that euen among the Infidels there should remaine stil some confused tokens of that which is sayd here. Because the heathen were of opinion that their Gods were alwayes attendant at their meales; they termed their Tables holy. And why so? It is certeine that they vnderstoode not the reason of it: for al things were become vnholy among them, by their misusing of all thinges against their kinde. Yet notwithstanding, God to make them vnexcusable, did leaue this marke still among them, as if he should say, whensoeuer men doe eate and drinke, I am present at it, so as all things done there must needes come to account before me. Now then, if wee knowe lesse hereof than those blind wretches, what a thing is it? So much ȳ more therfore ought we to marke wel this lesson, where God commaundeth the people of olde time to eate and drinke in his presence, to the intent that the same might holde them in awe, and make them to consider that whensoeuer they did eate or drinke, God gouerned them and beheld their doinges. And now although we haue not the ceremonie that was vnder the law; yet let the trueth thereof haue his force among vs: which is that we neuer come to the table, without considering that God is present there, and that as he voutsafeth to haue a care to feed vs, ſo wil he alſo haue vs to take our foode with al reuerence & honeſt behauiour, like as if a childe be at the table with his father, and his father ſitting at the vpper end doe looke vpon him, ſurely he wil not vſe ſuch boldneſſe as if hee were in a corner by himſelfe. For there perchaunce hee would play the wag, and throwe his trẽchor vnder foote, and play other wanton prankes: but if hee bee at his fathers table, either hee muſt behaue himſelfe ſoberly, or elſe be rebuked for his labor. Let euery man bethinke him of this, and let it be a meane to holde vs in ſuch awe, as the meates which God giueth vs may haue their pure and lawfull vſe. That is the thing which we haue in effect to remember vppon this text.

And now he ſpeaketh lykewiſe of mens houſeholdefolke, ſhewing that if we intend to be merry before God, we muſt alſo haue a care to inſtruct thoſe that are committed to our charge. Marke that for one point. It is not enough for a man to liue in the feare of God himſelfe; but the father that hath children, and the maiſter that hath menſeruantes and maideſeruantes muſt leade them with him, and there muſt be one conſent in euery houſhold, ſo as both great and ſmal doe ſerue God. For it is an vntollerable leawdneſſe, when a man letteth his houſhold play the beaſts, ſo as God is not knowen among them. And what a thing is it that men ſhould looke to be ſerued of their folke, & in the meane while forget God? There is none of vs all but hee will looke to bee knowen for maiſter in his owne houſe: & in the meane while what a pride is it ỹ God ſhould bee thruſt out of doores? What a thing is it, that we which are but wretched earthwormes ſhoulde looke to haue our dueties yeelded to vs, and that God ſhould be defrauded of his? That is ỹ cauſe why it is ſayd expreſly, that men ſhoulde make merry with their houſholdes before God.

Neuertheleſſe, hereby God meant alſo to inure his people to humanitie. For we ſee a number of men that can finde in their hartes to cram themſelues til they burſt, & in the meane while paſſe not though others ſtarue: & it ſhold ſeeme ỹ a whole world were little enough to finde one of them. But our Lordes will is that there ſhould be courtiſie among men, that whẽ the maiſters haue ſuffiſed themſelues with meate and drinke, they ſhold not be nigardly in giuing foode & ſuſtenãce to ſuch as take peins in their ſeruice, but haue a care of thẽ. That is a ſecond thing which our lord ment in this text. But now let vs pas on.

After ỹ Moſes hath ſpoken of firſtfruites and offeringes; he returneth againe to Tythes, and treateth more fully of them. Thou ſhalt not forget the Leuite (ſaith he) which is within thy gates. Euery third yeere ſhalt thou lay aſide the tenth of al thy fruits, and the Leuites ſhall come and gather them, and lykewiſe the widowes, the fatherleſſe, and the ſtraungers, that thy God may bleſſe thee in all the workes of thy handes. Yeſterday I began to tell you that in old time ỹ Tythes were appointed to the Leuites, becauſe they ſerued at ỹ altar: & that God would not haue thẽ occupied about any ſuch labor, as might hinder them either from teaching ỹ law, or frõ doing of ſacrifice & ſuch other like things. For inaſmuch as God had reſerued thẽ to ỹ purpoſe, his wil was ỹ they ſhould giue themſelues wholy thereunto. That was ỹ cauſe why he exempted them from tilling of ỹ ground, and from ſuch other labors. Beſides this, there was alſo an other reaſon, which was, ỹ they ſhould haue had a portion in ỹ land which was promiſed to the linage of Abraham, for there was a whole tribe of them: but God had excluded them frõ it, & put in two tribes in ſtead of ỹ one, ſo as Ephraim and Manaſſes the ſonnes of Ioſeph made two heads. And ſo were there twelue portions of ỹ Land. But yet in ſtead of the Leuites ye ſee ỹ Ephraim ſucceeded: for Manaſſes was ỹ firſtborne of Ioſeph, & yet was he put after his brother & ſet in the ſecond place, & made inferior to him. And ſo were ỹ Leuites excluded. But yet behoued it them to haue their right. And therefore God recompenced them, & lyke as if a man ſhould giue his childe a recompence ſome other way when he would not haue him to come to ỹ parting of ỹ inheritance ẅ his brethren, euen ſo ſtoode the caſe ẅ the Leuits. Thoſe were ỹ two chiefe reaſons for ỹ tythes. Neuertheleſſe it was Gods wil ỹ the ouerplus ſhould be deuided among ỹ poore & needie. For ỹ Leuites had not ſo large a portion giuen thẽ to make them gluttons & to inrich thẽ aboue other men: but to ỹ ende they ſhould be as deacons to haue a care of Gods poore folke, and to diſtribute his almes to his people. Now we ſee what was the cauſe of the tithes.

But it is cleane cõtrariwiſe in the Popedome, where it is ſayd that by Gods Lawe the tythes are due to the Prieſtes. Although (ſay I) that their Prieſtes were ſuch as they ought to be, ſo as they were not the prieſts of Moloch and of other idols, but that they ſerued God purely: yet were it a groſſe ignorance to imagin that tithing were an euerlaſting order ſet downe for all nations to obſerue. Againe it was a flat fraud, in that the Prieſtes being ouerruled by couetouſneſſe, did beare men in hand that the tythes belonged to them by Gods lawe. For the contrarie is well knowen. And their chalendging of that, was at ſuch time as the whole world was corrupted, and men were vtterly ignorant of the meaning of the holy ſcripture. For ſince the time that Chriſtianitie hath begunne to floriſh, and that there hath bin greater ſoundneſſe of iudgement than was before, it hath neuer bin ſaid that Tythes are due to the Shepheardes, nor to thoſe which haue the ſpiritual gouernmẽt of ỹ Church: but it hath bin alwayes orderly obſerued, that Princes & Lords haue taken the Tenthes: yea & in ſome places and coũtries which are leſſe fruitful, they haue taken but the Thirtithes or at leaſtwiſe but ỹ Twentithes: whereas in other places where the landes are more fruitfull, & where there is greater abundance thã is ordinarily in other countries, they haue taken the tenthes. Hereupon the prieſtes and Cleargymen of ỹ Popedome, haue taken occaſion to finger all things, & to vſurp vppon all mẽ moſt wickedly. For they haue thũdered out their excõmunicatiõs againſt ſuch as would not graũt thẽ their robberie, ſo as mẽ were driuẽ to let them them haue their owne willes. And then fell they together by the eares among themselues lyke a sort of curredogges about a bone. The Monkes sayd, they bee ours: the Priestes sayd they were theirs: and to bee shorte, there was nothing but vtter disorder among them.

Yet notwithstanding, wee must returne againe to that which was touched yesterday, and which I am about to rehearse againe now presently: which is, that inasmuch as the sacrificing Priestes were found at the common charges of the people, in the time of the olde Lawe, it is good reason that the preachers of the Gospell shoulde bee mainteined lykewise at this day, as Saint Paul speaketh thereof, howbeit not for his owne aduauntage sake, but to the intent there should not bee so great vnthankfulnesse among those which name thēselues Christians, as to defraud those of their bodily liuing, which preach to them the word of lyfe, & bring them the spirituall foode of their soules. The thing it selfe then remaineth still: but that it should be taken vp in this kinde or in that kinde, that is not so: it is not so sayd by Gods Lawe, and therefore what shall become of Tythes? Let the possession continue still, and let the vse of them be amended. That is to say, because mē see euidently that Tythes haue bin wrongfully vsurped, and that the parties which holde them in their handes haue wrested them by superstition: let vs now consider the right vse of them. And to say the trueth, looke how many Priestes there are in the Popedome, so many theeues are there. I say not this according to the holy scripture, but according to their own Canons, wherby they bee all excommunicated for theeues & robbers. For their Canons commaund them to part their Church goods in such sorte, as the poore haue one fourth parte of them, and strangers another fourth part. To be shorte, the one halfe of the Church goods ought to be bestowed in almes vppon the poore and vpon straungers. Who sayes this? Not Gods word, (for the Papists make none account of that) but their owne Canons haue so decreed. Ye see then how al the Byshops, Chanons, Pryors, and Abbots in the Popedome are excommunicated euerychone from the highest to the lowest, euen by their owne Canons: so as there is euery where most horrible confusion among them, I meane euen according to their owne orders. But it is not enough for vs to condemne them: wee must also haue an eye to our selues, and see that the right vse of the thinges which haue bin dedicated to God, bee set vp againe: And that where any abuse hath beene, the same bee redressed. And how may that bee? Wee see it was Gods will that the poore should bee found and mainteined by a part of the tythes, that is to say of the offeringes which were made in those dayes. After the same maner must wee come to the vse of Gods Lawe at this day: and forasmuch as Tenthes or Twentithes were left euen in old time to Princes and chiefe Lordes, and that the same order was set downe for the benefite of the Church; Let vs consider how it may bee imployed to the benefite of the Church at this day. It is not meant that such as beare the name of Prelates and Pastors shoulde glutte themselues with them: nor that when they haue sotted themselues in their pleasures and delights and spent more than needeth in prodigalitie and ydle expenses, they shoulde haue wherewith to maintaine whoredome and other stumblingblockes, as wee see that the Churchgoods are commonly wasted in such thinges. For we knowe that such doings are against the order of nature, and therefore can in no wise be iustified by Gods word. What is to be done then? Let the possession remaine quietly, and in the meane while let men returne them to their right vse. Let thē be mainteined whome God hath commaunded to be maintayned. And let the thinges be continued which are requisite for the well ordering of the Church. Moreouer, Let the poore and needy be pityed; Let men knowe them to be the takers vp of Gods rents; and that it is an acceptable kinde of sacrifice vnto him when such are releeued as ought to be succored. After that maner wee may iustly condemne the Papistes at this day, yea and take them for Churchrobbers and theeues, by reason of their wrongfull chalendging of the thinges to themselues which belong not to thē. And wee on our side shall not bee condemned for the lyke, if wee runne backe to Gods will, and dispose the Church goods in such wise, as the poore bee not defrauded of them, but that such almesdeedes be done with them, as the necessitie of those bee relieued whome God commaundeth vs to succour, and whom he offereth vs as in his owne stead, according to this saying of his, that looke whatsoeuer wee doe to the poore, hee taketh it as done to himselfe. Sith it is so, let vs folow that rule. For we see how this lesson is greatly for our behoof nowadayes, and how we may put the same in vre.

1. Cor. 9. 14.

Matt. 6. 4. & 25. 40.

Let vs marke well then, that it is not onely sayd ẏ the Leuites shal come and gather vp their right; but also it is added, ẏ the widowes, the fatherlesse & the strangers shalbe susteined lykewise. Yea verily: Albeit that the strangers were not some times of the body of ẏ Israelites, nor of their religion: yet was it Gods will ẏ they should be pityed. Not to nourish any filth & vncleanes thereby; (for if folke might haue reforted thither from all nations, and haue dwelled there, it had bin the next way to haue turned the people away vnto wickednesse:) but it serued for trauellers, & for such as had intercourse of marchandise with them, whome Gods will was to haue succored when they fel into any aduersitie. Now seeing that the Israelites were to relieue those that were not so neere neighbors vnto them: what ought wee to doe to our brethren, and to such as are all of one selfesame faith and Religion with vs? If we shake thē off & suffer them to pine away for pouertie, how greatly shall wee bee to blame, seeing that God cōmendeth vnto vs ẏ poore strangers, yea euē which haue no acquaintance ẅ vs in the seruing of the true God?

But howsoeuer ẏ case stand, let vs remember in generall, that of the goods which were consecrated in those dayes vnto God, part was to be imployed not onely vppon the Prieſtes and Leuites, but alſo vpon the relieſe of the poore, ſo as it behoued them to haue a part with the prieſtes ſo farre foorth as the tenthes woulde yeelde. What is to be done then nowadays? Foraſmuch as the Ceremonie of bringing of our Freewill offeringes to a place choſen for that purpoſe is done away, if wee intend to offer ſuch ſacrifices as may bee acceptable to GOD, euery of vs muſt doe almesdeedes according to his abilitie, and thinke thus with himſelfe: Go too, my God hath giuen mee chaunge of meates, I eate one kinde of porredge to day and another kinde to morrowe, and yet might I content my ſelfe all my lyfe long with bread and water. But God of his bounteouſneſſe giueth mee moreouer what meates ſoeuer I lyke of beſt, yea and chaunge of them alſo; ſo as if I bee weary of one meate, I may take another according to my abilitie. Seeing then that he dealeth ſo with me, what an vnthankfulneſſe is it for mee to deſpiſe him that ſheweth himſelfe ſo liberall towardes mee? True it is that our ſo dooing is neither here nor there (as they ſay,) in reſpect of God: the ſeruice that wee doe him doth neither amend him nor appaire him: but he giueth vs the poore among vs, to bee ſuccored at our handes, to the ende that none of vs ſhould ſo glutte himſelfe by cramming his owne bellie, as to deſpiſe others that are in neceſſitie, but that wee ſhoulde bee well aduiſed to make an offering vnto God of the thinges that he hath put into our handes, and that the ſame might become holy by that meanes. Not that wee ſhould pay it as a raunſome to God: but that the acknowledgement which we make vnto him in hauing compaſſion vppon our poore needy brethren, is as though our Lord ſhould allow of our eating and drinking, ſaying thus: Now is all lawfull for you, I lyke well of it, I giue it vnto you; and that is becauſe yee honor mee in dooing almesdeedes to ſuch as are in pouertie. Thus yee ſee what euery man hath to beare in minde as in his owne peculyar and priuate behalfe.

Iob. 35.6. Pſal. 16.2.

Howbeit, for common orders ſake, becauſe there are reuenewes appointed to the Church, as I haue touched afore: let vs beware that they bee not abuſed by beeing deuowred I wote not how, or that they be not miſſpent about worldly matters. For men are alwayes giuen to cantle out the poore folkes morſels as ſhort as can be, and it ſeemeth to them that whatſoeuer is beſtowed in hoſpitalitie, is loſt. O (ſay they) we muſt locke vp, wee muſt ſpare, wee muſt play the good husbandes: but curſed bee that good husbandrie which regardeth not the welbeſtowing of a mans goods. Therefore let vs haue an eye to the diſpoſing of the thinges which GOD offereth vnto vs, and whereas there haue bin abuſe and ſuperſtition, let vs vnderſtand that all ought to bee brought backe again to their right vſe: and that although the ceremonies continue not ſtill; yet notwithſtanding GOD will not bee mocked: but that this principle muſt alwayes ſtand in force, namely, that whatſoeuer hath bin dedicated to GOD, muſt bee diſtributed accordingly. Now there was alſo a tything of the tythes, whereof I cannot but ſay ſome what. For after that the generall tythes were taken vp, the high prieſtes tooke their tenthes thereof, and afterward layd out a tenth part for the poore. Foraſmuch as this third tything was not intended by God, but proceeded of the couetouſneſſe of the Leuites who could haue found in their heartes to haue raked all to themſelues: it was meete that they ſhoulde bee reſtreined. And after the ſame maner, the Popes Canons that I ſpake of, were made of purpoſe becauſe men ſawe the Church goods deuowred by the Prieſtes, by reaſon whereof it behooued them to bee bridled. The tythes therefore were parted in ſuch ſorte, as the poore might haue their portion, and not be defrauded of the right that was aſſigned vnto them. But (as I ſayd) wee neede not as now to ſtand ſifting of theſe thinges by percelmeale: it is enough for vs that wee haue the meaning of the Lawe, and that wee knowe wherein the abuſe reſted, to the ende wee may reteine the right vſe of them ſtill.

Now it is ſayd conſequently, That the Lorde thy God may bleſſe thee in all the workes of thy handes. In this text wee haue two things to marke. The one is that all our Labour would bee to no purpoſe, if God of his meere grace did not proſper it. Let that ſerue for one poynt. Another is, that if wee will haue God to further vs, wee muſt honor him with the goods which hee giueth vs, by vſing them in ſuch wiſe as he commaundeth vs. For if hee be defrawded of his right, hee can ſoone bereaue vs of his bleſſing, ſo as wee ſhall bee diſpurueied and ſtript out of all thinges; and when wee thinke our ſelues to haue abundance of all thinges at will, hee will make it to vaniſh away to leſſe than nothing. Thoſe bee the two thinges which wee haue to beare in minde. As touching the firſt, let vs beare in minde that men are commaunded to trauell for their liuing, and that ſuch as doe take paynes ſhall be maintained by their labor. But yet muſt not men ſay, It is mine owne policie, it is the labor of mine owne handes that hath gotten me this or that, as wee haue ſeene in the eight chapter, where God fed his people fortie yeeres with Manna, to make them to knowe that when they were come into ỹ land of Chanaan, albeit that they tilled the ground, gathered the grapes, and reaped downe the corne; yet they ſhould not imagin that their liuing proceeded from elſewhere than from Gods meere goodneſſe who bleſſed them. And that is the cauſe why it is ſayd in the pſalme, that wee may well riſe early and goe to bed late, and eate our bread with ſorow; & yet notwithſtanding al ſhall goe to decay, and God ſhall holde vs vnder foot, vntill wee be ſure of his bleſſing.

Deut. 8. 3.

Pſa. 127. 1. 2

True it is that God doth oftentimes multiply the goods of the wicked, & of ſuch as liue altogether by extortiõ, deceit & theeuery: we ſee ỹ ſuch kinde of men may well inrich themſelues, and

and God beareth with ſuch thinges to blinde their eyes the more with their riches, that they may bee as a poyſon to them, and as a baite to choke them withall. For inaſmuch as they imagine that they can inrich themſelues whether God will or no: he letteth them doe ſo, yea and he giueth them riches as if hee ſhoulde ſay, Gather till yee burſt: yet ſhall it not turne to your ſuſtenance, but it ſhalbe as a poyſon to kill you, as I ſaid afore. For when men inrich themſelues after that faſhion by wicked practiſes, wee ſee what comes of it in the ende. Gods wrath lighteth vppon them, and they be tormented all their life long: and when they looke to inioy the goods that they haue gathered together, Gods curſe doth ſo vtter it ſelfe vpon them, that they cannot do themſelues any good with them: inſomuch that although they haue their garners & ſtorehouſes full fraught, and their bagges full of mony; yet doth God ſende them diſeaſes or ſuch other afflictions, by which he holdeth them as it were vpon ỹ torture or racke; as if he ſhould ſay: What haſt thou done thou wretched creature? Thou haſt offended mee all the time of thy life, and yet haſt thou borne thy ſelfe in hande that all ſhoulde goe well with thee if thou mighteſt heape vp riches ynowe. But thou muſt now be made to knowe, that all thy raking vp of the riches which thou canſt not inioy, will ſtand thee in no ſteede. Thus yee ſee what reward they haue which will needes inrich themſelues as it were in deſpite of God: inſomuch that all their ſcrapings to themſelues on all hands by vnlawfull meanes, are but as cordes to ſnare their children withall, as experience ſheweth. And therefore let vs be throughly perſwaded in our ſelues, that if we will proſper, the onely bleſſing of God muſt ſuffice vs though wee haue not all things at wil. When we haue taken neuer ſo much paines, yet muſt we not truſt in the ſtrength of our owne hands, nor bee ſo blinded with fonde preſumption as to ſay, I am an able man, I am politike & can take paines. But let euerie man referre himſelfe to God, knowing that it is he which giueth him ſuſtenance. And although I take neuer ſo much paines to get my liuing: yet muſt I haue it at his hand, and when I haue asked my ordinarie breade to day, I muſt doe the like to morrow too, and yeeld my ſelfe to the wil of him that giueth it mee. Thus much concerning the firſt point, where mentiõ is made of Gods bleſſing of the workes of mens hands. And therewithall let vs call to minde what hath beene declared therof more at large heretofore, where our Lorde willeth men to conſider how it is onely hee that beareth the ſway in making our labours to proſper. Let that ſerue for one point.

And nowe let vs come to the ſeconde point: which is, that if wee deſire to bee partakers of Gods bleſſing, we muſt firſt yceld him his right: for if he be defrauded of it, he wil reuenge it vpon vs. And that is the cauſe why hee ſaith by his Prophet, Do ye complaine that ye be afflicted? Conſider the cauſe, ſaith hee. Yee haue defrauded mee. Whereof? Of my Tythes, Firſtfruites, and all other thinges. Yee beare your ſelues in hande that yee increaſe your ſelues greatly by robbing of mee, and that ye gaine much by defrauding mee of my right. The people of Iſrael were ſo witleſſe, that they ſtole the tythes; or if they tythed, they did it but by halues: and likewiſe of their firſtfruits, in ſteede of making good fulſome ſheaues and bundels vnto God, they gelded them and made them verie thinne and lanke: and yet theſe miſerable wretches bare themſelues in hande that they benefited themſelues greatly by laying vp ſome little quantitie more than they ought to haue done. Contrariwiſe our Lorde ſaieth vnto them: Goe to ſirs, ſhoulde yee haue either tithes, or firſtfruites, or any croppe at all, but by my bleſſing? And think ye that your filching away of any of ỹ things that belong to me, ſhall boote you? No no: ỹe muſt needes be waſted and dye for hunger by reaſon of your vnthankfulneſſe. Therefore let vs learne to yeelde God the things which he reſerueth to himſelfe: and then will hee bleſſe vs. As howe? When we bee to be ſuſtained, the firſtfruits that God requireth of vs, are that we ſhould waite vpon him, and ſue to his meere gracious goodneſſe for all thinges requiſite to the maintenance of this ſlightfull life. And afterward when he hath giuen vs whereon to liue, we muſt vſe the ſame ſoberly, that our life being ruled after that faſhion, may be as another ſacrifice to him, and conſequently that we giue our neighbours part with vs. Let ſuch as haue wherewith imparte to the poore that want: and let euerie man beware that he filch away none other mens goods, and let vs bee contented with our competent foode and raiment as God liſteth to beſtowe vpõ vs: and in ſo doing we ſhalbe bleſſed at his hand. But what? Our diſtruſtfulneſſe, our exceſſe, and our vnſatiable luſts cauſe God to withdrawe his bleſſing from vs, and that we are, as it were dried vp. Alſo it is ſeene that in ſteade of going forwarde we goe backeward: and what doe wee thereupon? Such as haue plentie can no skil to vſe it according to Gods ordinance, and to bee thankfull to him for the abundance which hee ſendeth them, but they woulde ſtill haue more & more. O ſay they, this is not ynough for me, & though it be ynough for me, yet it is not inough for my children. And ſo wee fall to gathering of more & more. But to conſider how we come by it, and whether it bee lawfull before God or no, we neuer hearken after it: we goe to it by hooke and by crooke, and wee neuer thinke that wee ſhall come to a reckening for it before God. To this point (I ſay) are we come nowadayes. And therefore it is no wonder though wee feele no bleſſing of God, but that wee bee faine to be ſet beſides it. Againe we may ſee hereby how colde and faint our prayers are: for our asking of our daily breade at Gods hand is but from the teeth outwarde: and therefore it is good reaſon that wee ſhoulde receiue as skant and ſlender frute as appeareth that we do. Wherfore let vs mark, that if wee intende to feele Gods bleſſing, and that hee ſhould continue the ſame towardes vs; wee muſt offer vp our ſelues in ſacrifice, and all that euer hee giueth vs, ſo as all may be wholly dedicated vnto him. And when wee ſee the vſe that he alloweth of, let euery of vs behaue himſelfe thereafter, that God may be glorified by vs as his intent is to be.

Nowe let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to graunt vs the grace to come to him with humilitie, ſorie for prouoking him ſo many wayes as wee doe without ceaſing and to vouchſafe ſo to burie our offences, as wee preace into the preſence of his maieſtie by meanes of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, to bee guided by his holy ſpirit, and to be confirmed more and more in this; that hee holdeth and auoweth vs for his children. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth &c.

On Fryday the xxv. of October. 1555.

The XCiij. Sermon which is the firſt vpon the fifteenth Chapter.

AT the terme of ſeuen yeares thou ſhalt make a yeare of Freedome.

2 And the maner of the freedome ſhal be after this ſort. Euerie creditor ſhall releaſe the debt of his hande which he hath lent vnto his neighbour, and he ſhall not conſtreine his neighbour nor his brother: for it is called the yeare of the Lords releaſe.

3 Thou maiſt compell a ſtraunger, but as for thy brother, forgiue him.

4 In any wiſe let there bee no poore bodie among you: for the Lorde will bleſſe thee in the Lande which the Lorde thy God giueth thee for an heritage to poſſeſſe,

5 Yea if thou obey the voice of the Lord thy God in keeping and performing all his commaundements which I commaunde thee this day.

6 For the Lord thy God will bleſſe thee, as he hath promiſed, ſo as thou ſhalt lende vnto manie folke, and not borrow of any. Thou ſhalt reigne ouer many Nations, and they ſhall not reigne ouer thee.

WE haue here a Lawe for the releaſing of ſuch as were indetted. Now wee knowe that GOD gouerned ẏ Iewes according to their owne rudenes, inſomuch that he graunted them a tolleration in many thinges becauſe they were a people harde to bee ruled. Yet notwithſtanding hee ceaſed not by all manner of meanes to allure them to gentleneſſe, to the ende that no man ſhoulde greeue his neighbour beyonde meaſure, nor vſe too extreme rigour, nor deale cruelly one with another. That is the marke which the Lawe ſhooteth at which I haue read heere preſently; ſo as yee muſt vnderſtande that it was not Lawfull for them to preſſe any man with his debts in the ſeuenth yeare. And it hath beene thought that in this place Moſes commaunded the cleere forgiuing of all debtes the ſeuenth yeare. But in that ſuppoſall is no reaſon at all. For if debtes had beene quite and cleane releaſed: much more reaſon had it beene that ſuch perſons as had yeelded themſelues into bondage for the diſcharge of their debtes, ſhoulde haue beene releaſed: for we knowe that the freedome of mens perſons is much more acceptable, than the releaſing of a debte of money. Muſt a poore man bee helde as a ſlaue and make it good with his bodie becauſe hee hath not wherewith to paye that hee oweth: and ſhall hee bee releaſed which keepeth the money ſtill in his purſe, or elſe vſeth ſome odde byſhift, ſo as hee abydeth freely at home in his owne houſe? That were no vpright dealing. But the caſe ſtoode ſo among the Iewes, that ſuch as yeelded themſelues into bonda ge for the diſcharge of their debtes, were not ſet at libertie againe till the yeare of Iubilie which was the fiftith yeare. Therefore it followeth that here is not meant the cleare releaſe of all debtes. For that had beene the way to haue procured more diſorder, rather than to haue ſet downe a rule of courtiſie and gentleneſſe. For no man woulde euer haue lent any mony the ſixth yeare. Againe, men woulde haue

haue beene the more haſtie in calling for their dettes, ſo as their detters ſhoulde haue beene much leſſe priuiledged than if there had beene no releaſe at all. Alſo there are other reaſons which are verie ſufficient; inſomuch that euery man ſhoulde haue beene driuen to ſell his owne houſe and lande. To bee ſhort, it is not to be doubted but that Gods intent here, was to commaunde no more but that the ſeuenth yeare ſhoulde be priuiledged. And hereby it appeareth that ſuch as haue interpreted the ſeuenth yeares compaſſe to be the ſeuenth yeares ende, haue beene too groſly ouerſeene. For the making of this law was in reſpect that the ſeuenth yeare ſhoulde be a yeare of ſolemne reſt. Like as God had reſerued one day in euerie weeke to bee holy to himſelfe: ſo alſo was it his will that euery ſeuenth yeare ſhoulde be a high ſolemnitie, ſo as the grounde ſhoulde not bee tilled that yeare. The Lande of Iurie was batling ynough to haue borne all yeares, that is to ſay, men might haue tilled and ſowed the grounde euerie yeare ſauing the ſeuenth yeare. And that yeare was ſpared, not for feare leaſt men ſhoulde haue worne away the heart of the ſoyle too neere: but to the ende that the people ſhoulde inure themſelues continually to the day of reſt, becauſe it conteyned the chiefe point of the Law, that is to wit, that men ought to gather their wittes to them, to giue themſelues wholly to the minding of Gods benefites, whereby it is ſhewed them that they ſhoulde renounce themſelues, and referre themſelues wholly to his holy ſpirite, to bee ſo gouerned by him, as that their affections and thoughts may no more ouermaſter them. And indeede, becauſe the Iewes did breake the day of reſt, and the Prophetes coulde not winne them to yeelde to that which was commaunded them: our Lorde ſaith that hee woulde puniſh them in ſuch ſorte, that ſith they woulde not, the Lande ſhould take reſt for them. Foraſmuch as you (ſaieth he) will not keepe the Saboth dayes accordingly as I haue ordeyned in my Lawe: I will ſhortly finde out one that ſhall obſerue my Lawe, and that ſhall be the Lande it ſelfe. For ye ſhalbe driuen out of it, and none ſhall be left in it to manure it; all the Sabothes that haue beene broken muſt be put into a reckening, that they may bee recompenſed againe. Threeſcore and tenne yeares were the people baniſhed out of it. And looke howe many commaundementes there are, ſo many tokens were there continually of the ſolemne reſtingtimes. What reſtingtimes? Not euerie ſeuenth day, or euery ſeuenth yeare onely: but for the ſpace of ſeuentie yeares together was the Lande to take reſt. Yee ſee then that this ſeuenth yeare was a confirmation of the fourth commaundement of the lawe, that is to wit, of keeping holy the ſeuenth day. For in that yeare (as I ſaid) men tilled not the ground. And why? To the ende that folke ſhoulde haue the better leaſure to giue themſelues to the ſeruing of God, and be not ſo much letted by their buſines, as indeed they had the more libertie to minde this leſſon, and to bee well inſtructed in the doctrine of God. And for the ſame cauſe alſo was it commaunded, that the booke of the Lawe ſhoulde bee read openly euerie ſeuenth yeare at the feaſt of Tabernacles, as wee ſhall ſee hereafter in the one and thirtith Chapter.

Nowe that we haue Gods meaning, which is that his ordeining of the ſeuenth yeare was to the end that the people ſhould haue ſome eaſement; let vs aſſure our ſelues that the ſaboth day was not inioyned without cauſe. Not onely to giue men to vnderſtand that our Lorde had forbidden that any man ſhould be ſued for his dets that yeare (for that was likewiſe done euerie weeke): but alſo to auow the thing which we ſee obiected in the eight and fiftith of Eſay, againſt ſuch as through hypocriſie obſerued the feaſte, but yet ceaſed not any whit the more to ſue for their dettes. Verily I am much beholden to you, ſaith the Lorde: for yee ſay yee haue faſted, and obſerued my Ceremonies. But yet is all that euer yee haue done, nothing worth: for the verie ſubſtance of it wanteth; whereas yee ſhould be pitifull to your neighbours, yee do nothing elſe but fleece them and perſecute them to the vttermoſt. And ſurely that is a goodly obſeruing of the Saboth. Therfore doe I renounce you, and I diſauow all your doings, ſaieth the Lord. Eſa. 58. 3.

So then, we haue here the end of the Law that is ſet downe here, and alſo the thing which the ſame commaundeth. For like as God ment not that men ſhoulde pleade the ſeuenth day, to the end they might be the better drawen to obſerue that feaſt, which was to gather men to God, and to cauſe them to reſt in him: ſo ment he alſo cõcerning the ſeuenth yeare: namely that the Iewes ſhoulde giue themſelues to vpright dealing: inſomuch that if it were not lawfull to gather the fruites of the earth, and that the fruites which grewe without tilth were common, ſo as the poore which had no poſſeſſions were partakers of them: it was much more reaſon that if a man were ouerpinched, he ſhold not be purſued with rigour of Lawe. But in the yeare of Iubyle, which was euery fiftith yeare; there was a greater freedome, and ſuch a one as extended much further. For if a man were in bondage, hee was then made free, vnleſſe it were that hee liked ſo well of his maſter, that he bound himſelfe to bee his ſlaue for euer as long as he liued. Afterward, all poſſeſſions returned home againe. True it is that the houſes in Cities could not reuert again, vnleſſe ỹ ſellers of them redeemed them within a yeare. But as for Farmes, and other poſſeſſions in the countrie; the purchacer was to conuey them backe againe at the fiftith yeare, ſo as they returned home againe to their former owners. And according to the neerenes or farneſſe of the yeare of Iubyle, men ſold their poſſeſſions the dearer or the cheaper: inſomuch that the lands ſo purchaſed were releaſed againe within thirtie, twentie, or ten years after the purchaſing of thẽ. And of this dealing there was one ſpecial reaſon; which was ỹ God hauing diuided ỹ Land of Canaan by lot, intẽded to haue it continue in that that order for euer, to the ende that mens poſſeſſions ſhould not be intermingled together.

Leuit. 25. 29. 30.

And hee ſaieth expreſly, Other Nations poſſeſſe their landes in feeſimple: but I holde you as my farmours. I will not haue you to be as owners, ſo as yee might ſay this is mine: neither ſhall yee bee as purchaſers of the Lande at my hande; yee ſhal haue as it were but a ſoiourning place in it for a time, and yee ſhall bee but as a Farmer vnder a maſter. Loe heere the cauſe why our Lordes will was that the poſſeſſions ſhoulde returne to the firſt owners againe. But as for that which is ſpoken heere, concerneth but the ſeuenth yeare, at which time euerie man ought to bee releaſed, and no man ought to ſew his detters, yet euerie man ought to reteyne his owne right neuertheleſſe ſtill. For Gods meaning was not that hee which had lent money ſhould loſe it, ſo as hee ſhoulde haue no meanes to recouer his dette againe: (for ſo ſhoulde one man haue robbed another of his ſubſtance; and the vntruſtie merchant that had waſted his goods in riot and exceſſe at his eaſe without care, ſhoulde haue laughed his creditor to ſcorne as ſoone as the ſeuenth yeare were come, which had beene a greate diſorder, and woulde haue cauſed vnthrifts to haue become the worſe): but Gods intent was onely that there ſhoulde a kinde of reſpit bee giuen, that the poorer ſort might not be pinched out of meaſure.

But nowe let vs returne to that which is ſet downe in the texte. In the ſeuenth yeare there ſhall bee a Forgiuing, that is to ſay, a forbearing or a giuing of further reſpite. Hee meaneth not that there ſhoulde bee a cleare acquitall or releaſing for euer: but onely that hee which had lent money, ſhoulde not chalendge his dette out of hande, nor bee ſo greedie and haſtie as to ſeeke it by ſute of Lawe that yeare. And hee ſpeaketh expreſly of the ende of the yeare, to ſhewe that this forbearing or reſpitting ſhoulde not onely bee at the beginning of the yeare, but euen throughout to the ſeuenth yeares ende. And here God meant to bounde his Lawe according to the circumſtance: that is to ſaye, becauſe the ſeuenth yeare was a kinde of reſting time as well as the ſeuenth day was; therefore our Lordes will was that the ſame ſhoulde bee obſerued. Therefore ſaieth hee, at the terme: howebeit not to ſignifie the ende of the yeare, but to betoken the continuance of the time appointed by the Lawe. You ſhall giue a reſpit ſaieth hee, and the manner thereof ſhall bee thus: If any man owe thee aught, thou ſhalt not conſtraine him, at leaſtwiſe for the dette of thy hande. As if hee had ſaide, thou ſhalt not take the thing by force, but ſhalt rather forbeare the dette. And why ſo? For this forbearing commeth ſpecially of God: that is to ſaye, God reſerueth that yeare ſpecially to himſelfe, and hee will haue it openly proclaimed as it was indeede, and he will haue the order thereof to be kept.

Hee addeth, In any wiſe let there bee no poore bodie among you. This ſpeech is ſomewhat darke, becauſe the firſt worde that Moſes vſeth, ſignifieth Nothing, or it is not at all: and ſometimes when it is ioyned with another worde, (as it is in this place,) it betokeneth except that, or ſauing that. And for that cauſe ſome men vnderſtande that our Lorde ſetteth downe an exception heere, namely ſo there were no poore folkes. For if the detters were riche, they might alwayes bee well contented to pay. But the poorer ſort were to bee borne with, and to haue ſome eaſement; the vexing of whō after ỳ ſort, was a kind of ſucking of their bloud, and a drawing of the marrowe out of their bones. Againe the ſeuenth yeares reſpit was as a meane for them to gather ſomewhat towardes their diſcharge.

Moreouer there was the more cauſe why the poore ſhould bee borne withal the ſeuenth yere, the ground was not tilled that yeare, and therefore Corne might become the dearer by reaſon that there was no gathering of any thing that yere. For it was not with them in thoſe dayes as it is with vs in theſe dayes, that when one peece of grounde lay fallowe, as they ſay, another peece was with corne, ſo as they might haue a croppe euerie yeare one after another wherewith to finde themſelues. In the Lande of Iewrie they gathered not ſo much as one kernell of wheate, Otes, or other kinde of graine in the ſeuenth yeare, neither was it lawfull for them to till the grounde that yeare: by reaſon whereof the poorer ſort had much adoe to get their liuing by their labour and trauell. That was the cauſe why ſome haue taken it to bee as an exception when our Lorde ſaide, if peraduenture you haue no poore among you. Well may yee demaunde your dets of ſuch as are welthie and well able to pay; but beware that ye pinch not your neighbours that are behinde hande. Otherſome take it thus, So as there bee no poore among you; that is to ſay, deale in ſuch wiſe as no man bee brought vnder foote by you, but that the poore and meaner ſort may liue with the rich: and let no man bee ſo greedily minded as to put thinges out of order by his exceſſe, like the great fiſhes that eat vp the ſmaller fiſhes: Take heede that yee vſe no ſuch cruelneſſe towardes your neighbours. Alſo a man might take the ſaid word as betokening Nothing; as though our Lorde had ſpoken after our common manner and ſaide, No, no, there muſt bee no poore among you. But as for the meaning of the Lawe, it is certaine ynough to vs, which thing ought to ſuffice vs, and it is all that wee ſhoulde looke for.

Therefore let vs vnderſtand that our Lordes intent was to ſay here in fewe wordes, that men ought to behaue thēſelues ſo friendly, as no man were oppreſſed, and that although it lie not in men to let that there ſhould not bee both poore and rich among them: yet they ſhould ſo deale as the poorer ſort were not troden vnder foote. For wee ſee that ſuch as are welthie do lay their ſnares, and catch whatſoeuer they can come by, ſo as the poorer ſort edare not come neere thē:

and if they get but the value of a pinne at their hands, they fleece them of it by and by againe. Therefore it was our Lordes intent to prouide a remedie for that miſchiefe among his people. Nowe remaineth that wee apply this matter to our owne behoofe. True it is that this order belonged peculiarly to the Iewes: but yet doth it concerne vs alſo: namely that we ſhoulde not vexe them out of meaſure, which are indetted vnto vs. And it may well bee among thoſe that beare the name of Chriſtians, that they wil not goe to lawe vppon the Sabboth day: and the reaſon is, that vpon that day euery man ought to haue leaſure to withdrawe himſelfe to Godwarde, to minde his workes, that wee may all of vs be prouoked to ſerue and honour him. For, all our life long wee ought to giue our ſelues to praying and ſupplication. Neuertheleſſe cómon meetings are made that men may heare the cómon doctrine of ſaluation, and it is good reaſon that on the Sabboth day all other cares and thoughts ſhould be laide aſide. Notwithſtanding let vs take good heede that wee keepe not the ſingle Ceremony onely, but alſo the intent of God therewithall, which is, that our neighbours be not ſo vexed by vs, as they may haue occaſion to deſpiſe God, and to be caſt into deſpaire For our Lorde will haue vs giue ſuch reſpit as the poore may not bee ouer grieued. Wee ſee howe he ſaith in other places, that wee muſt not take a poore mans mattres from vnder him: As for example, when a man hath broken payment, if hee bring his bedde to lay to gage, our Lorde forbiddeth the taking thereof, and likewiſe the taking of a poore mans rayment which hee hath neede of to weare. For if he be a cold (ſaith he) and thou keepeſt his bed from him, although hee ſpeake neuer a worde, yet ſhall his ſides curſe thee, becauſe thou beeſt ſo hardhearted that thou haſt no pitie of him when thou ſeeſt him afflicted in his bodie. And albeit that the poore man be patient in his aduerſitie, yet doeth God in heauen conſider thy crueltie, and in the ende he will reuenge it. Contrariwiſe he that giueth his poore neighbour his gage againe, and is ſo pitifull towards him that he cannot find in his heart to ſee him indure neceſſitie: although the partie ſo releeued do play the Churle, and regarde not the good that hath bin done vnto him: yet ſhall hee haue his good deede to anſwere for him before me, ſaith the Lord.

Exod. 22. 26 27.

Yee ſee then that we muſt be kindharted both generally and particularly as time requireth. As how? If there come a yeare of dearth, many men will ſeeke to inrich themſelues by it, and they beare themſelues in hande, that it is a time euen for their owne tooth: and it is a thing too much vſed nowadayes, as it hath bin at all times heretofore: and woulde God we coulde forget it. But we ſhal ſee a number that lye in waite like skouts or ſpies, and if there come a deare yeare, O ſay they, this ſerues well to make me rich; when as in verie deede it is the time wherein they ſhould open their bowels to haue compaſſion of ſuch as are in neceſſitie. Wee ſee that poore folke haue much ado to maintaine themſelues though they be ſuccoured: yea and ſuch as heretofore haue beene able to liue in their owne houſes without being pinched ouer neere, are nowe driuen to borrow. And why is that? They haue their ordinarie earnings as before: but corne and wine are at ſuch exceſſiue prices, that they be not able to buy them; euery man ſhrinkes away and holdes himſelf ſhort. And as for the rich man that hath wherewith to liue, his minde is vppon nothing elſe but howe he may inrich himſelfe, O (ſaieth he) this is a fatte yeare for mee, for it is a leane yeare for all others. Alas, heere is a wretched regarde. So then let vs learne that our Lordes meaning by this Lawe is not that we ſhould forbeare to releeue ſuch as are (as yee woulde ſay) windſhaken already: but that if we ſee a man that hath much ado to maintaine himſelf, we ſhould not runne vpon him to ouerthrowe him altogether. As howe? If I ſee a man a little behinde hand, and I haue a mind to ſome cornegrounde or vyneyard of his; loe hee is in fitte caſe for my purpoſe: and if I take him at the vantage, hee is vndone by it, & it is vnpoſſible for him to ſcape vtter ruine. And when a man hauing that regard to ſelfeprofite, indeuoureth to catch away the poore mans poſſeſſions; ſurely although there were no Lawe of God at all: yet doeth euen naturall equitie condemne it. But heere our Lorde ſheweth vs his will, which is, that whenſoeuer wee ſee any man diſtreſſed, wee ſhoulde ſpare him ſo much the more, vntill hee haue ſome meanes to recouer himſelfe againe; and that wee ſhoulde not lye in waite to catch from him at euerie occaſion that is offered to further the matter. but rather that wee ſhoulde vſe ſuch vprightneſſe as to ſaye, If I beare with him hee will pay mee one time or other, I ſee hee is willing ynough, I ſee hee woulde paye mee mine owne and doe aſmuch for mee if hee were not ouerpreſſed otherwiſe; and ſeeing I knowe him to bee ſuch a one, ſhall I nowe ſet vppon him with rigour? That were euen as much as though I woulde curte aſunder his hamſtringes that hee might bee able to goe no further. I ſee he is ſcarſe able to drawe his legges after him, and therefore if I ſhould fall to cutting of his ſinewes aſunder, and ſo fell him downe altogether; if hee bee vtterly ouerthrowen for want of lending him my helping hand at his neede, am not I the cauſe therof? Shal not his pouertie crie out for vengeance againſt mee vnto God?

Nowe wee ſee howe this Lawe ſerued as a policie among the Iewes, and yet neuertheleſſe that it ſheweth vs Gods will at this day, becauſe it teacheth vs to beare with the poore and needie. To be ſhort, let vs marke that our ſparing of the poore after that faſhion, is an acceptable ſacrifice to God, and that after the ſame manner, he will accept all other ſeruices that we do vnto him: where as if wee performe neuer ſo manie Ceremonies, and in the meane while haue no equitie nor vpright meaning in vs, we do but prouoke Gods wrath according to the ſaying of the Prophet Eſay which I haue alledged already. If wee reſort to ſermons, and ſhewe our ſelues to haue neuer ſo great zeale and good will to Gods

worde; and yet for all that, euerie of vs do practiſe wicked deuiſes to ouerthrowe our neighbours, ſo as we ſeeke to deuour one another like dogges and cattes: our Lorde ſhalbe much beholding to vs for giuing eare to his ſayings, when in the meane while wee make none account of the keeping of them. Nay contrariwiſe, let vs conſider that our comming hither is to bee induced to brotherly loue, ſo as the rich may beare with the poore, and that where any pouertie is among vs, they may be ſo prouided for as they may ſtill come forwarde, and bee ſo comforted as they may eate the breade which God giueth them, with thankſgiuing, and not be driuen to deſpaire, nor the name of God bee thereby blaſphemed. And wee muſt not tarie till the time of forbearing be proclaimed by the ſounde of a trumpet: but wee muſt holde our ſelues contented with Gods lowde crying out vnto vs from day to day. And this worde muſt ſounde into our hearts: By which God requireth that wee ſhould ſo partake with our neighbours that they ſhould no manner of way be grieued by vs: Againe we muſt not looke for a ſeuenth yere, becauſe we muſt haue at this preſent a continuall reſt: Seeing that God hath ridde vs from the olde bondage of the lawe; and therefore hee will haue vs to reſt our ſelues all our life long in him: let vs therefore giue reſt to our neighbours, ſo as they may bee releeued and not haue any occaſion of heartburning againſt vs for our deſpiſing and reiecting of them; but that the fatherly loue which God ſheweth towardes vs, may be as a bande to tie vs together in brotherly good will as members of one bodie, ſo as no man doe miſuſe his brother any more than ỹ hand would miſuſe the foote, becauſe it woulde turne to the hurt of it ſelfe. And therefore let vs haue the ſame conſideration of our ſelues one towards another. Now let vs proceede to that which God addeth.

He ſaith that his bleſſing ſhalbe vpon the people, ſo as they ſhall all proſper, and haue wherwith to lend, & not be driuen to borrow: and that they ſhall reigne ouer many Nations, and no Nation ſhall reigne ouer them. The cauſe why our Lord addeth this promiſe, is to confirme the lawe. And at a word (as I haue ſaid heretofore) albeit that our Lord might command after a preciſe manner: yet doth he apply himſelfe to vs, indeuoring to win vs to him, that we ſhould obey him with a free heart, and not go to worke by compulſion and conſtraint. Yee ſee then that ỹ thing which he requireth of vs, is ỹ wee ſhoulde offer him freewilofferings as they terme them. But let vs marke that the vpright dealing which wee haue treated of, ſerued but onely for the Iewes. And therefore this promiſe, I will bleſſe you, anſwereth thereunto. For it was lawfull for the Iewes to purſue ſtraungers, ſuch as were not circumciſed. After that maner ment Moſes. But if any ſtrangers receiued the lawe of Moſes, they were priuiledged, as being of the bodie of the Iewiſh people. But as for them that worſhiped not the God of Iſrael, & were among them but onely in way of traffike or for ſome other affaires: they inioyed not the benefite of this law whereby the ſewing of men for det was forbidden. And the reaſon therof was that they kept not the Sabboth for any deuotions ſake. True it is that they were fain to reſt themſelues whether they woulde or no; it was not lawfull for them in any wiſe to worke; they were driuen to ſubmit themſelues to Gods ordinance: but yet in the meane while they had no deſire to ſerue the God of Iſrael. And therefore they were not to be ſpared as in reſpect of common policy. But nowe that Gods grace is ſhedforth euery where, we muſt not make any more difference between Iewe and Gentile. For (as ſaieth Sainct Paul) our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt hath broken downe the partition wall, to the ende that being adopted of God for his children, wee ſhoulde maintaine brotherly vnitie among our ſelues, and euerie of vs acknowledge his neighbour to bee as his brother. Eph. 2. 14.

And as touching this promiſe, it was reſtreined for that time to ỹ people of Iſrael. But nowadayes, foraſmuch as Gods promiſes are common to all men becauſe hee hath ſhewed himſelfe to be the father indifferently of all men: let vs vnderſtand that our Lorde declareth here in general, that if we feare him and keepe his commandements, hee will bleſſe vs and make vs to proſper: And this promiſe muſt bee referred to the circumſtance of the place. For wee ſee howe couetouſneſſe prouoketh vs to catch what wee can from our neighbours, becauſe we be euer afraid of want. O (ſay we) If I may not haue mine owne, what a thing were it? True it is that our Lorde doeth indeede permit euery man to haue his right: but yet muſt not euery man bee ſo giuen ouer to himſelfe and to his own profite, that he ſhould haue no regarde to ſpare thoſe whom he holdeth as his vnderlings. For whoſoeuer hath no regard of him that ſtandeth at his mercie; ſurely he can finde in his heart, not onely to liue vppon the parties labour, but alſo euen to ſucke his bloud. If I bereaue a man of the meane whereby hee ſhould followe his little trade, ſo as he is brought vtterly vnder foote: it is all one as if I maimed him in his body, ſo as I made him to pine away all his life after. So then let vs marke well, that as touching this promiſe, our Lord had an eye to the eagerneſſe which euery of vs hath to draw to himſelfe. And why do wee ſo? Becauſe we be afraide leaſt we ſhould want. And therefore our Lord ſaith, No, make more account of my bleſſing than of all that euer ye can gather. When ye haue vſed al the craft and force ye can deuiſe to fiſh to your ſelues by hooke & by crook, and when yee haue gathered neuer ſo howge a heape of goods together: al that ſhal not boote you ſo much as my bleſſing, that I multiplie you and giue you ſo much as ſhall ſuffice to maintaine you withall. And although yee haue not ſo greate ſtore of thinges at once, as you coulde finde in your heartes to wiſh: yet will I make the thinges auailable which yee haue in your handes. And if it bee but little, yet ſhall it be ſo inlarged, that yee ſhall liue at your eaſe. Now we ſee what Gods meaning is. Pſal. 54. 8.

And therefore whenſoeuer wee be tempted by

by vnbeliefe to catche other mens goods; Let vs bethinke our ſelues thus: howe-nowe? Shall we become rich in deſpite of God? At whoſe hande haue we our liuing? Haue wee it not of his meere liberalitie? Nowe hee hath not promiſed his bleſſing to any other than to ſuch as walke in integritie, and do ſo beare with their neighbours, that they trample them not vnder their feete through ouergreat rigour. But if I will needes inrich my ſelfe by hooke and by crooke; then doe I ſpite God and prouoke his wrath againſt mee; and what hope is there then that God will bleſſe mee? Nay rather his horrible curſe muſt needes light vppon mee. Therefore let vs thinke aduiſedly vppon theſe thinges. And that wee may ſo doe, Let vs conſider howe it is he that giueth wherewith to finde and feede vs, and that hee muſt bee faine to preſerue the thinges that hee hath giuen vs, and to make them auailable for our vſe; or otherwiſe we may well doe what wee can, and trot vp and downe; but all ſhall bee but loſt labour. God (ſay I) muſt bee faine to open his hande to giue vs wherewith to liue. And when he hath once giuen it, hee muſt alſo maintaine it. For it might ſlippe away from vs euery minute of an houre, if hee ſhoulde not make vs to inioy ſtill the things that he hath giuen vs. Thirdly hee muſt alſo bee faine to giue vs the meane to it, and to turne the thinges to our benefite which hee hath put into our handes. For if wee put them to any other vſe, wee ſhall woonder to ſee howe they ſhall come to naught. And why? Becauſe Gods bleſſing faileth vs. Yee ſee then howe the thing which we haue to conſider when our fleſh is ſo frowarde as to prouoke vs to greeue our neighbours; is that wee muſt thinke thus with our ſelues; yea, but what ſhall I gaine in the end when God is againſt me? Sure I am that I ought to thinke my ſelfe beholden to him for al things: and though I had all the worlde vnder my wing: yet were it nothing worth vnleſſe God bleſſed me. Sith it is ſo, I muſt haue an eye to him, and bethinke mee well howe I may obtaine his bleſſing by inlarging my heart towardes my neighbours after his example, who ſheweth himſelfe ſo liberall towards me.

And Saint Paul giueth the ſelfeſame admonition, not onely to cauſe vs to ſpare thoſe that are in our dette: but alſo to induce vs to doe almeſdeedes, and to ſuccour the needie: for hee ſendeth vs to him that giueth vs ſeede to ſowe.

2. Cor. 9. 10. Come on ſirres (ſaieth he): thinke yee that yee haue loſt your labour when ye haue compaſſion vppon the poore, and beſtow almes vpon them? No no: no more than the husbandman that layeth his ſeede into the grounde; for he looketh to reape his crop againe at Haruеſttime. Therefore when ye doe almeſdeedes, ye ſow: and your

Matt. 6. 4. God auoweth that hee receiueth with his owne hande, whatſoeuer yee giue to the poore, yea and that hee will make it to returne euerie whit of it to your owne benefite, ſo as yee ſhall reape fruite of it, not onely at that great haruеſt time which ſhalbe at the laſt day; but alſo euen in this tranſitorie life; your God will make you to perceiue that your almeſdeedes are acceptable to him, and you ſhalbe ſo much the more increaſed by them. And for proofe thereof (ſaith he) is it not hee that giueth the Corne euery yeare to ſowe? When the husbandman hath ſowed his grounde, howe coulde hee ſowe it againe the next yeare, vnleſſe God gaue it a heade againe? Conſider then that when God giueth you wherwith to doe Almeſdeedes, it is to the intent to make it fruitful to you. It is al one as if he ſhould giue you ſeede in your hande and ſay, that if yee intende to gather fruite of it, yee muſt firſt caſt it into the grounde. Will the husbandman keepe his corne ſtil in his Garner? Wil he leaue his Lande vnſowen for feare of beſtowing ſome quantitie of graine vppon it? Euen ſo when yee ſee an vnſowen grounde, that is to ſay a poore neighbour whom God offereth vnto you, leaue him not vnſowen ſtill, but bee freehearted towardes him, and God will not ſuffer the ſeede to be loſt which ye haue beſtowed vppon him, but will make it to yeelde yée fruite out of hande. And ſo yee ſee whereunto the promiſe that is ſet downe heere tendeth, namely Your God will multiplie you in the Lande which hee hath promiſed you.

Heere Moſes did put the people expreſly in mind that their hauing of the Land of Chanaan was of Gods gifte. As if he ſhould ſay, whence come the goods that yee haue, but out of the earth? And is that Lande yours? No verily, not as in feeſimple. Ye haue it but as baylyfes. Your God will be knowen continually to bee the Lorde and maſter of it. Seeing then that he betaketh the Lande vnto you, may he not at leaſtwiſe require ſome of the fruite thereof at your handes? And that is done when you bee pitifull towards the poore. That is the thing which Moſes had reſpect vnto, when he ſaide, This lande hath beene promiſed you, and your God will giue it you in poſſeſſion. True it is that at this day wee haue not the Land of Chanaan as the Iewes had: but yet whereſoeuer wee liue, we be harboured there as it were by the hand of God, and it is he that findeth vs. Seeing then that we haue our life and all thinges elſe of him, let vs know that it is good reaſon that we ſhould comfort our neighbours, and that wee ſhoulde vſe compaſſion towards thẽ in bearing with them, at leaſtwiſe if wee will haue God to continue his weldoing towards vs. To bee ſhort whenſoeuer we bee not ſufficiently ſtirred vp to referre our ſelues to the bleſſing of God; let vs repaire to ỹ thinges which wee knowe by experience. Men cannot finde in their heartes to truſt vnto God, but rather are caried away and inflamed with their owne wicked luſtes, deceits, and leawd practiſes, ſo as they paſſe not howe they come by thinges ſo they haue them. But when wee behaue our ſelues after that leawde faſhion, and paſſe not for the bleſſing of God as we ought to doe: Let vs come to the exhortation that Moſes maketh in this place to vs; namely, that if I haue nothing of myne owne, I hold all thinges of my God. And ſeeing it is ſo that hee hath fed me and maintained me vnto this day: ſhould

I not put my ſelfe ſtill into his hande? Though I had a thouſand times more thē I haue, yet would it ſoone be ſwallowed vp: but if I haue very little yea and yet leſſe, my God who hath not failed mee vnto this houre, will continue his bleſſing ſtill, and that ought to ſuffice mee. Seeing then that experience (which is the ſchoolemiſtres of fooles as they ſay) ſheweth vs howe ſtrong Gods bleſſing is: are we not too leawd if we folow not ỹ thing that is tolde vs in this text, that is to wit, if we haue not pitie vppon our poore brethren, ſeeing wee haue his promiſe, the performance whereof wee haue had accompliſhed by effect? That is the point wherein God will haue a triall of the loue that we beare to him. Now he ſaith that mercie is more worth than all the ſacrifices in the world: and therefore hee will haue vs to honour him ỹ way, that is to ſay by pitying of our poore brethren, by ſuccouring them, and by bearing with them when it lyeth in our power to trouble them: aſſuring our ſelues that God accepteth the thinges that are ſo done to our neighbours for his ſake. And he will not onely ſhewe himſelfe liberall towards vs by making vs to feele the fruite of our Almeſdeeds; but he will alſo continually increaſe his benefits vpon vs, in ſuch ſort that by meanes thereof wee ſhall haue continuall cauſe to bleſſe him and to glorifie his holy name.

Oſee. 6. 6. Matt. 7. 12. & 12. 7.

And now let vs kneele downe in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgment of our faults, praying him to vouchſafe to wipe thē out, ſo as they may not hinder vs from being receiued at his hand: and that if he make vs to feele his fauour euen in this corruptible life, wee may much more bee inuironed rounde about with all his ſpirituall benefites, that we may ſo grow in them more and more, as wee may not bee helde backe by the brittle thinges of this world, but rather ſo vſe them as wee may keepe on our way ſtill, and communicate together after ſuch a ſort, as it may be to the exerciſing of the faith which wee haue in God, and in his pure doctrine, and for the confirming of vs in the hope which we haue of the heritage of heauen, ſo as wee may tende euer thitherwarde, as wee bee dayly called thither by the preaching of his worde. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs but alſo to all people and Nations of the earth &c.

On Saturday the xxvj. of October. 1555.

The XCiiij. Sermon which is the ſecond vpon the fifteenth Chapter.

7 If a brother of thine become poore within any of the gates in the Lande which the Lord thy God giueth thee, thou ſhalt not harden thy heart nor ſhut thy hand from thy brother that is poore.

8 But thou ſhalt open thy hand bountifully, and lend him ſufficiently for his neede wherewith he is pinched.

9 Beware that there be no point of peeuiſhnes in thy heart, that thou ſay not, the ſeuenth yeare which is the yeare of reſpiting is at hande, and thereuppon thou haue a wicked eye againſt thy poore brother, ſo as thou giue him nothing; and then hee crie againſt thee to the Lorde thy GOD, ſo as it become ſinne vnto thee.

10 Thou ſhalt giue him freely, and let not thy heart repine at thy giuing vnto him: for becauſe of this the Lorde thy God will bleſſe thee in all thy woorkes, and in all that euer thou putteſt thy hande vnto.

HEre Moſes goeth on with ỹ ſame matter that was ripped vp yeſterday, that is to wit, that in the ſeuenth yeare dettes ſhould be reſpited, to the intent that the poore ſhoulde not bee ſued nor moleſted. And I told you that the meaning therof was not that they ſhoulde be quite and cleane forgiuen, but that the poore ſhoulde be ſo much eaſed. Now Moſes addeth a larger declaration, That the ſame ought not to hinder men from lending liberally when any bodie had needs. And this is added becauſe men doe alwayes goe about to defraude the Law. Although equitie be ſhewed vs neuer ſo plainely, and that the Lawes bee ſet neuer ſo well together: yet are men ſo ſubtle in naughtineſſe, that they finde alwayes ſome ſtartinghole, to beare the worlde in hand that they haue not offended the Lawe, and yet the intent of the Lawe maker is defrauded. This is a thing too much accuſtomed; and woulde God there were not too many examples of it in experience. But what? When men thinke themſelues to haue ſet things in as good order as can be, a thouſand meanes are deuiſed to ſcape from them, and thereof commeth ſo much brabling in Law. For the end of good Lawes is to ſtop the way to all pratlers, that there might bee no debate bate nor quarelling among men, but that euery man might haue his owne right. And inasmuch as Lawes doe shewe that whosoeuer offendeth must be punished; is it not a meane to hold euerie man in awe? But as I saide afore, the Law serues vs but to deuise wicked shifts how to do hurt and harme vntill our hearts be reformed. Neuertheless, our Lords meaning in this text, was to prouide that the Law which he had set downe shold be kept, and that men shoulde not take occasion thereat to withholde themselues from succouring such as are in necessitie. And yet notwithstanding, that which is spoken here was not onely wrested to the defrauding of the Law; but also applyed much worse. For such as were too much wedded to their owne profite, tooke occasion at Gods law to do lesse good and to shew lesse mercie to their neighbours than otherwise they woulde haue done. For why? Had it beene lawfull for them to haue sued men at all times, so as they might haue required their right at all times without exception: they woulde haue lent money in the sixth yeare as well as in the first, and they woulde haue made no bones at all at it. But nowe that a Lawe was set foorth, that there shoulde bee a forbearing of it in the seuenth yeare, if a poore man required succour, euerie man thought thus with himselfe: if I lende him money nowe, it is layde a water, I loose a whole yeares occupying of it, and what a thing is that? It were better that this good fellowe shoulde goe prouide himselfe where hee can: for I intende not to hazarde my selfe in this wise: for what can I tell what will befall within a yeare and a halfe? There needeth but a little hinderance, and beside, hee may fall into further pouertie, and then am I cut short of my money. Thus ye see how euery man woulde shrinke away, and vnder colour that God had commaunded men to vse gentlenesse towardes their neighbours in the seuenth yeare; the poore were disappointed of help and reliefe, and their throates were cut, so as there was no way for them to ease themselues of their want.

And hereby wee see yet better, that men not onely be suttle in deuising new shiftes from time to time, to couer their misdoings: but also ỹ whē they haue neuer so good and iust Lawes, they turne them to the cleane contrarie. And this commeth to passe not only in worldly gouernment, but also euen in matter concerning God: wherein we see ỹ horrible corruption of our nature. And this is one point well worthy to be noted. When such as are in authoritie ouer vs, as Princes, Magistrates, and Iudges make Lawes & statutes: if wee breake them, that disobedience of ours (as Saint Paul sheweth) toucheth God, and therefore is not to be excused. But when as God commeth as it were in his owne person, and telleth vs his will as it were with his own mouth: if we then dally with him, and shroud ourselues by shifts and suttleties as though hee were not able to see vs: is not that a diuilish malapeartnes? But there is yet a farre greater and more outragious extremity, as I said afore. God goeth about to rule our life aright, he seeth vs pitifully wandering in our own affections: he setteth vs down an order what to doe: and his will ought to bee as a definitiue sentence for vs to stande vnto, so as wee ought to inquire no further: for we know that whatsoeuer God alloweth, is perfect righteousnesse. Nowe when hee hath beene so gracious to vs as to teach vs, What doe we? We not onely fall to dissemble in his Lawe, but also turne al order vpsidedowne, and transgresse the verie Lawes themselues which hee giueth vs to direct vs by: Sith wee see such frowardnesse, wee haue good cause to mislike of our selues, and to condemne our selues vtterly. And therefore seeing wee be of malicious and froward nature, let vs learne to suspect our selues, and to yeeld to Gods good will, that when he hath giuen vs his Lawe, he may also giue vs the grace to receiue it with all singlenesse of heart, so as it may bee to our benefite, and that we may not turne life into death, nor light into darkenesse. Thus yee see what we haue to remember in the first place.

Secondly it behoueth vs to marke here, that the keeping of the outwarde forme of the Lawe is not all that we haue to doe: but that wee must specially obserue the substance of the Lawe. Wil wee proue our obedience towardes God? The way to do it is not by Ceremonies, but to seeke out the certaintie of his meaning, and to submit our selues thereunto. For men will take good heede to the worldewarde, that they offende not in such wise, as they may bee punished: and if a man can finde some pretie shift to excuse himselfe withall when hee commeth before the iudge; hee thinkes all his doings to bee iustifiable ynough. A man then will make no conscience to offende, so he haue wherewith to hide himselfe when he is reproued, and that hee can say, as for mee, I vnderstoode it not so: the Law saith not so. He findeth out some little worde that carieth a shewe of contrarietie to the true meaning of the Lawe, and setteth a counterfait construction vppon it, and so beares himselfe in hande that hee hath well ridded his handes of the matter, and that by that meanes he is cleare of it. And therfore let vs learn that it is nothing worth to haue obserued the Lawe as in respect of the outwarde forme of it, that is to say, in such wise as men can finde no fault with vs; but that the chiefe point is to liue soundly & roundly, accordingly as wee see here that it was Gods will that in the seuenth yeare there should bee a respit, that is to wit that men shoulde not sue for their dettes, but suffer it to bee a resting-time, as I declared yesterday.

True it is that the Iewes woulde not vtterly transgresse this order: but yet they thought it ynough for them to discharge themselues of the Ceremonie, and they bare themselues in hand that God might well holde himselfe contented with such disguisings, when in the meane while the chiefe thing was left vndone. For the poore were not pitied to their reliefe, but rather men tooke occasion to leaue them vtterly destitute. Insomuch that howe great so euer their neede was, they were neuer the more releeued, and all vnder colour that men could not recouer that which they had lent. Wee ſee then how men woulde alwayes appeaſe God with ceremonies. But let vs beare in minde howe hee ſaieth by his Prophet, that he hath an eye to the ſoundneſſe of the heart. Therefore let vs deale faithfully with our neighbours, if wee will haue God to accept the ſeruice which we yeeld vnto him.

Ier. 5. 3.

And nowe let vs come to that which is ſet downe here. If any of thy brethren (ſaieth hee) bee falne behinde hand, as leaſt wiſe of ſuch as dwell within thy gates: looke that thou harden not thy heart, ne ſhut thy hande againſt him. His ſpeaking peculiarly of the Iſraelites themſelues, was not to giue the Iewes leaue to deuour the goods of the heathen, nor to deale cruelly with them: but his meaning was that there ſhoulde bee the more friendlineſſe vſed among themſelues, becauſe that beſides the kinred that was among them, there was alſo an vnion of faith. For GOD had ſhouled out the lynage of Abraham from the reſt of the worlde, and had knitte them together into one bodie, whereof hee himſelfe vouchſafed to bee the head: and therefore it was good reaſon that they ſhoulde maintaine one another, and be the more inclined one to ſuccor another. But hereof the Iewes tooke occaſion, to holde faſt all that euer they coulde catch; for they conſtrewed all the promiſes of the holy ſcripture to their owne aduantage, as though God had laide the bridle on their necks, and had no more care of the Gentyles than of brute beaſtes. As for example; whereas it is ſaid, Yee ſhall reigne ouer many Nations; therupon they concluded, Then is it lawfull for vs to execute all maner of Tyrannie vppon the Gentiles, and to eate them vp: for they be vncircumcyſed and vncleane, and belong not vnto God at al: & therfore let vs ſucke what wee can poſſiblie out of them, and not ſpare them. Yea and they ſtretched the worde Lende verie farre: for they ſticked not a whit to ouerlode the ſtraungers with vſurie to the vttermoſt that they coulde beare, without any regarde of vprightneſſe. Thus yee ſee howe the Iewes did alwayes reſtreine the right of Gods promiſes, bearing themſelues in hande that it behoued them to be a little friendlyer to their neighbours, that is to ſay to thoſe that were of their owne kinred: And yet euen in ỳ behalfe alſo they were counted as rauening Wolues, as the Prophet Ieremie vpbraideth them, and as ſhalbe declared in due place.

Ier. 5. 26. Mic. 3. 1. 2. 3

But let vs nowe come backe againe to that which is ſaide here, to applie it to our inſtruction. If the Iewes vſed this hypocriſie of couering their couetouſneſſe with a pretence that they might well pill and poll the heathen and Infidels: let vs ſee if wee our ſelues doe not the like at this day. True it is that our Lord commendeth vnto vs the houſholde folke of faith aboue all others: and yet is it not ment that he giueth vs leaue to fleece ſuch as haue not the knowledge of his worde. For hee hath knitte vs generally altogether in that hee hath ſaide by his Prophet Eſay, Thou ſhalt not deſpiſe thine owne fleſh, in which ſaying hee comprehendeth all men without exception. Therefore muſt we behaue our ſelues vprightly and indifferently towardes all men; and likewiſe wee muſt haue pitie and compaſſion vpon al: For in them we behold our owne nature; but yet for al that, the houſholdfolke of faith are linked to vs with a much neerer bonde: in reſpect whereof it is good reaſon that wee ſhoulde loue them more ſpecially as our brethren. Thus yee ſee after what maner this text is to be vnderſtoode, where God ſaith If any of thy brethren, that is to ſay of thine owne countrimen. And hee doeth it for that they were linked together in a holie bande, had the true Religion, and were adopted to be the children of God: in conſideration whereof it behooued them to bethinke themſelues to bee kinde hearted and pitifull one towardes another, and yet ought they not to haue deſpiſed the reſt of the worlde as they did.

Gal. 6. 10.

Eſa. 58. 7.

And whereas it is ſaide within thy Gates: it is to ſhew that the exerciſing of our charity ought to bee according to our knowledge of mens neceſſities. For wee bee not able to iudge of all mens needes. True it is that euen without ſeeing the extremities that are euery where, wee ought to be touched with compaſſion. When we heare of warres, that one Countrie hath beene burned, another ſpoyled, and all thinges haue beene turned vpſidedowne; it is not for vs to go to the place to ſee what hath beene done. For if we be not too too blockiſh, we may well thinke that thoſe thinges cannot bee doone without horrible confuſion. Therefore muſt we pray for thoſe whome wee neuer ſawe: for they touch vs, they bee men as well as wee, they bee reaſonable creatures ſhaped after the Image of GOD. And in that reſpect wee ought to pitie thoſe that are nothing neere vnto vs. But as in reſpect of ſuccouring, euerie man muſt ſtraine himſelfe according to the neede that hee ſeeth, for I cannot iudge of thoſe that are far off from me. But if I ſee a bodie in preſent neceſſitie; then muſt I be moued to pitie, and I muſt conſider that God prouoketh and calleth me to the ſuccoring of him that is in neede.

Gen. 9. 6.

Thus yee ſee why Moſes hath ſet it downe expreſly, that men ſhoulde haue a regarde of thoſe that are within their gates. The heathen coulde well skill to ſaye, that although all mankinde bee alyed together; yet notwithſtanding, the neighbours that are acquainted one with another, ought to vſe a ſpeciall friendlineſſe in ſuccouring one another. And in deede, euen without anie reading of the holie ſcripture, euerie man can well skill to ſaye in his owne behalfe when his neighbour faileth him, Howe nowe? what neybourhood is this? And who teacheth them ỳ leſſon? Nature. Here therefore our Lord telleth vs that if we perceiue any of our neighbors to be in neceſſitie, it ought to ſtirre vs vp, ſo as if wee bee not too vnnatural, wee muſt needes be touched with it wout any further putting of vs in mind therof. For the thing it ſelfe ſpeaketh when we ſee our neighbor ſo diſtreſſed.

Nowe he addeth further, Thou ſhalt not harden thy heart, nor ſhut thy hande. Hee might well haue begunne at this point, Thy hand ſhall not bee ſhut, for that is the matter which hee tendeth to in effect. But it is not for nought that he ſaith, Thou ſhalt not ſhut vp thy heart. For why, his intent is to preuent the thing that hindereth our weldoing & our ſuccoring of our neighbours that are in diſtreſſe: namely, the hardneſſe of our hearts. For where pitie is, that is to ſay if we be pitifull, wee will indeuour to vtter it if we haue wherewith. In deede a man ſhal ſee a number that can well skill to weepe; but al that they can find in their hearts to do, is but to ſhedde a fewe teares: they caſt forth ſuch ſighes that a man woulde thinke their heartes ſhoulde burſt; but to ſpare one penny out of their purſe, that is no part of their thought. Many ſuch hypocrites are to be ſeene. But let vs haue the true kindheartedneſſe in vs, and let vs not be hardhearted, but let our hande euer followe our heart. And that is the cauſe why our Lorde beganne at this point, That men ſhoulde not harden their heartes. As if hee ſhould ſay, will yee be good Almeſmen? Will ye be wel diſpoſed to ſuccour ſuch as haue neede of your helpe? Then let your heartes bee ſoftened, and not locked vp to holde faſt to your ſelues, but to thinke rather with your ſelues thus: Behold God offereth mee here a man, he is my neighbour, and although hee bee neither kith nor kin to mee, yet is hee a creature ſhaped after the image of God, and therefore muſt I open my heart towardes him, and haue ſome pitie vppon him. As oft then as wee bee colde and negligent in ſuccouring our neighbours, let vs learne to enter into this conſideration that is ſet downe heere, and to ſay to our ſelues: How nowe? Wretched man, if thou wart as hee is, wouldeſt thou not be gladde that others ſhould ſuccour thee? Yes: and if they ſhoulde let thee alone, thou couldeſt skill well ynough to ſay for thy ſelfe, Alas, men make no more account of a creature faſhioned after the image of God, than of a dog. Thou couldeſt well skill to ſay ſo; and yet for all that wilt thou thy ſelfe harden thy heart after the ſame faſhion? Thus yee ſee what wee haue in the firſt place to marke vppon this text.

And nowe for the ſeconde part, let vs marke how our Lordes intent here, is to ſhewe vs that almeſdeedes pleaſe him not, vnleſſe they come
2. Cor. 9. 7. from a willing and freediſpoſed heart. And therfore let vs learne to order our ſuccouring of our neighbours needes in ſuch ſort, as we doe it not repyningly and vnwillingly, ſo as when our hand is ſtretched out, there be a wicked affection in vs which may hinder vs from offering vp vnto God that ſuccour which we owe vnto our neighbours when we ſee them in neceſſitie. And would God that this leſſon were well put in vre, and that euerie one of vs did beare it better in minde than we do. For although we doe ſome Almeſdeedes, yet may the world ſee that our harts are ſtraitened, and that wee cannot come to this doctrine of Saint Paules, that God loueth the liberall giuer, and that hee will not haue men go to worke as it were, by conſtraint and inforcement, but of a free goodwill. Howe many be there that put this leſſon in vre? Nay, the giuer hath alwayes ſome hartgrudging in himſelfe, and would faine drawe his heade out of the coller if hee coulde, and his doing of it is as if he were put to his task as they terme it, or as though hee payed ſome tribute. But our Lord calleth Almeſdeeds Sacrifices, to the ende wee ſhould do them cheerefully. And I pray you, if wee will offer any thing Hebr. 13. 16 vnto God, ſhoulde it bee as the paying of a tribute, or of ſome tallage or impoſt, that is extorted? Shoulde it bee as it were a ranſome giuen to theeues or enemies? Shoulde our honouring of our God by doing him homage for the goods that wee haue receiued at his hande, bee by ſuch force and conſtreint? Nowe wee ſee in effect, what is imported in theſe two ſpeeches; namely that wee muſt not haue our hearts locked vp to hinder vs from well doing; but that not onely our handes but alſo our heartes muſt bee open towards ſuch as are diſtreſſed, to haue pitie vppon them, and to vſe kindneſſe to them. Where this is not, there muſt needes bee all manner of crueltie, as wee commonly ſee that ſuch as haue moſt to ſpare, doe fall to repyning if a bodie go about to wring an almes from them and they make a grudging at it like a dog when one woulde take away a bone out of his mouth. And if they happe to giue any thing, bee it for ſhame or for any other cauſe, it is a death to thē to part from it. And ſurely it were better that ſuch rakehelles were rooted out of the worlde, than that they ſhould liue among men. For they bee monſters againſt kinde, they bee foule churles, that coulde finde in their hearts to deuour and ſwallowe downe all the worlde into their mawes. Or rather they bee men full of vnbeliefe, which haue no more truſt in God than diuels, bearing themſelues in hande that the earth is not able to finde them. By reaſon whereof if it come to the point that they muſt giue any thing, it ſtriketh them to the heart, it killeth them, inſomuch that the asking of an Almes at their hande, is as the drawing of a ſworde to cut their throtes. Therefore let vs looke to our ſelues, and when we heare our Lord ſpeake of the not hardening of our hearts, let vs beginne at this point of kindneſſe in hauing pitie and compaſſion vpon ſuch as are in diſtreſſe. And therewithall let our hande bee at libertie afterwarde, in ſuch ſort as wee may proteſt that wee offer GOD a ſacrifice with a free heart.

And nowe Moſes addeth, Beware that this wicked thought come not in thy heart to ſay, Beholde, the Seuenth yeare is at hande, and if I lende, my money muſt lie dead for the time. He calleth it a wicked thought when we be helde backe by it too much to our owne profite, and in the meane while forſake the partie that is in neede. For were our thoughts well ruled, ſurely wee ſhould not bee ſo greatly wedded to our owne profite, but that we would alſo thinke vpon thoſe whom God com-

1.Cor.13.15 mendeth vnto vs. It is ſaide that loue ſeeketh not his owne. True it is that it cannot bee but that euerie man will bee mindfull of himſelfe. But Saint Paules meaning in ſaying ſo, is that men muſt not bee caried away with the loue of their owne profite, as who ſhoulde ſay they woulde haue no fellowſhippe with their neighbours, nor ſtreine themſelues to doe any thing for them. Therefore as for thoſe which ſay, I muſt haue regarde of my ſelfe, and therewithall doe deſpiſe others, and paſſe not what they endure: thoſe ſeeke their owne gaine, and in ſo doing ſhewe themſelues to be vtterly voide of charitie. Contrariwiſe, if wee bee kindhearted, although wee be mindfull of our ſelues, yet are we not ſo caried away with it; but that wee beare an euen hand and proceede to the louing of our neighbours as our ſelues. Whereas our nature wholly draweth vs to our owne priuate profite, let vs bethinke our ſelues thus: What? I cannot ſeparate my ſelfe from thoſe to whom God hath knit me; for that were a wicked diuorce. If I ſhould holde my ſelfe alone, and haue no regard but of mine owne aduantage, It were a cutting of my ſelfe off from mankinde, & I were worthie to be cut from the reſt of the world, for it is againſt kinde. So then, it is not without cauſe that Moſes ſaith, that when a man is ſo mindful of his owne profite, and ſeeketh it in ſuch ſort that he taketh it as an occaſion to refuſe to help his neighbors at all: it is a wicked thought, for thereby wee bee done to vnderſtand, that we muſt not iuſtifie our ſelues becauſe that although men be not able to accuſe vs ſo as we may be condemned by mans Lawe; yet doth it not followe therefore that wee be quit before God. If a man come to borrowe mony of mee, and I thinke thus with my ſelfe, I cannot tell whether this man be able to pay me againe or no, he is a poore man, and when I haue taried a long time, hee may chaunce to growe poorer and poorer, and then is my money loſte. Nowe then if this poore man that was to be ſuccoured abide ſtill in diſtreſſe, and in the end periſh: the other that woulde not lend him, ſhall not be accuſed for it nor brought to anſwere for it before men. And if men caſt him in the teeth with it. O (will hee ſay) It was for mee to ſeeke mine owne profite, I liſted not to hazarde my ſelfe after that faſhion. Well this excuſe may ſerue afore men: but in the meane while what ſaith the heauenly Iudge to it? It is a wicked thought, ſaieth hee: and let men flatter themſelues neuer ſo much, they ſhall winne nothing by it. Therefore let vs marke that wee muſt not wey our woorkes in our owne ſcales, as who ſhoulde ſay wee ſhall goe ſcotfree becauſe wee haue ſome ſtartinghole. For our Lorde telleth vs that the thing which beares a ſhewe to be excuſable of it ſelfe, is curſed in his ſight; that is to wit if wee ſuccour not the partie that hath neede, at leaſtwiſe according to our abilitie. And it is the ſelfeſame thing that our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt putteth vs in minde of, where hee ſaieth that wee muſt doe good to ſuch as are not able to requite vs with the like, and that wee Luke.6.35. muſt lende without looking for any gaine. For neither in lending nor in giuing, commonly is there any liberalitie among men, but euerie man hath an eye to his owne gaine. If a man giue, it is to the ende to receiue giftes againe: and if a man lende, alwayes his reſpect is, that ſuch a one may doe him pleaſure and recompence him with the like good turne againe. It is no Liberalitie when wee doe good in hope to bee recompenſed for it againe. But if wee do good to a poore man, at whoſe hande wee cannot by any meanes reape any profite; that is a point of freegoodneſſe, and God alloweth of it, for it is an acceptable ſacrifice vnto him. And that is the cauſe why hee ſaieth that we ſhould not giue to ſuch as are able to requite vs, but to ſuch as are vtterly vnable, and of whom wee haue no hope to recouer the principall: for it is no Almeſdeede, that is to ſay, no deede of mercie, vnleſſe there bee neede: and where is neede, but among ſuch as are not able to recompence? Yea and euen where our money may ſeeme to bee caſt into the water, inſomuch that wee haue ſuccoured ſuch a man as it may bee ſaide, Verily this is quite loſt for aught that I can ſee? Yea verily, as to the worldwarde. But our Lorde ſaieth, I receiue it: yee thinke Matt.6.4.
yee put your almes into a mortall mans hande, but it is I that become detter for it. Although all thinges bee his, yet bindeth he himſelf in the perſon of the poore; and ſhoulde then any nigardlyneſſe ſtay vs from ſuccoring thoſe whom God offereth vnto vs, ſeeing he ſetteth them as in his owne ſteede, and auoweth all to be done to himſelfe which is done to them?

Moreouer let vs marke that Moſes ſpeaketh here, of ſuch as are in neede. For God ment not to maintaine wicked folke in ydlenes & naughtineſſe. The man that ſeeketh to waſt away other mens goods, and to defraude his Creditors, is not commended vnto vs heere of God: but hee ſpeaketh directly of mercy. And that is the cauſe why he ſaieth, Thou ſhalt not harden thy heart. For if wee haue not that diſcretion: doe what Almeſdeedes we will, and yet ſhall none of them be acceptable. Wherfore let vs marke, that here God ſpeaketh not in fauour of all men, but onely ſetteth before vs ſuch as are in neede & wote not what to doe, and ſhoulde periſh in diſtreſſe if they were not relieued. Thoſe are they which are to be helped according to our abilitie. True it is, that to make a Lawe of it, it is not poſſible. God hath ſet this order among his people, that the poore ſhoulde be ſuccoured. But he hath not tolde with what ſume, nor how oftentimes: hee hath not made a tax of it, to ſay that euery man ſhould beare thus much; Only we muſt reſort to this which S. Paul ſaith, Let euery man doe that 1.Cor.9.7.
which he doth with a free hart, and not lay a tribute vpon mē as though they ſhold pay as much as they were ſeſſed at: but let euery mā ſeſſe him ſelf of his own good wil, & think thus, although I ſtreined my ſelf a hundred times more, yet could I not diſcharge my ſelf to my godward. Howbeit foraſmuch as he ſheweth me this fauor to accept it as an offring of my hand, although I do not ſo much much as I ought to doe nothing neere, yet doth it pleaſe him to receiue ỹ which I giue him, ſo it be done w̃ a free hart. Sith we know this, albeit that we cannot make a grounded Lawe of it, to ſay how farre we ſhall go in ſuccoring our neighbors, yet let euery of vs ſtreine himſelfe, and alwayes be doing, with the foreſayd free heart.

And it is ſayd, Thou ſhalt not thinke with thy ſelf, the yeere of reſpit is at hand, and therefore I will not lend. Hereby it is ſhewed vs, (as I haue touched afore) that if a poore man require help, although he be not able to pay the thing againe out of hand which he borroweth, yet muſt not wee be cold for all that. For we muſt thinke, if I helpe this poore man at this time, he is a faithful man, and my ſuccoring and releeuing of him ſhall ſet him halfe vp againe, but howſoeuer the worlde go, he may be able to mainteine his trade, and at length he may pay mee all that hee borroweth. But if I vtterly faile him at this time, he is quite ſunck, he is brought vnder foote for euer, and hee hath no meanes to get vp againe: and I am too blame if I ſee him periſh ſo. Had we this cõſideratiõ with vs, we ſhould not haue the nigardlines that Moſes mentioneth and condemneth here. And how ſo? Let vs knowe that where need requireth, we muſt not haue ſuch reſpect to our owne profite, as to let the poore periſh in their diſtreſſe without lending them our helping hãd.

Again, Let vs wey wel this ſaying which Moſes ſetteth downe here: namely that wee muſt open our handes. Hee repeteth it twiſe or thrice: and that is to ſhewe vs that there is nothing but hypocriſie in vs, when we pretend to haue compaſſion, & yet our hand is alwayes ſhut, and nothing can be wrong out of vs. I haue told you already ỹ a number of folke wil not paſſe greatly to ſay; Alas, when they ſee poore people: but they beare themſelues in hand ỹ it is enough to haue pretended a countenance. But here God reproueth mens diſſimulation, if they haue not their handes open: for it is a tokẽ that their hart is hardened, ſo as there is nothing but beaſtly churliſhneſſe in them, and when their handes be not opened, it muſt needes bee a record of it. Againe he ſetteth downe that the poore is to be ſuccored according to his neede, and that a gage is to be taken of him, if there be a gage to be had: for it may alſo full well be vnderſtood of the taking of gages. And hereby we ſee yet better, that our Lordes meaning was not to haue dettes vtterly releaſed by the reſpit that was giuen in the ſeuenth yeere: but onely to haue a time of reſt giuen for the reſpectes and conſiderations which I haue treated of before.

Furthermore it is tolde vs here, that we muſt relieue our neighbors wants: for our Lord ſpeaketh heere of the lendinges that are doone of almes. And in deede, it is oftentimes a greater almesdeede to lend ſome cõpetẽt ſũme, than to giue a very little. For it may be ỹ the giuing of a little will doe a man no eaſe at all: but the lending of as much as neede requireth, releeueth him very wel, & he may in time content his creditor again. That then is the thing whereunto our Lord appointeth vs. And therefore let vs marke the thing which I haue touched already; that is to wit, that although a man cannot ſet downe a Lawe certeine in this behalfe; yet muſt euery man be a rule to himſelf, to doe according to his own abilitie and according to ỹ need that he ſeeth in his neighbors.

Now here is added yet further, That God will bleſſe ſuch as doe ſo; according as hee had begun yeſterday to promiſe his bleſſing to all ſuch as were ſo liberally minded towardes the ſuccoring of the poore. And this ſerueth ſtill to correct the curſed vnbeleefe ỹ holdeth our heartes locked vp ſo as no man mindeth aught elſe than himſelf and his own profite. For it ſeemeth to vs ỹ if we forgo neuer ſo little of ỹ which we haue, we be in ỹ way to be vndone by it. That is ỹ cauſe why euery man holdes faſt, & neuer thinkes hee hath enough. O (ſay we) it is true ỹ we may doe ſo and ſo: but thereby I ſhould be impayred, & I cannot tell what may befall to my ſelfe. We caſt ſo many doubtes, ỹ we can neuer finde occaſion to giue any thing. And why ſo? Forſooth becauſe I might want it my ſelfe. But ỹ is a curſed diſtruſt, & ſuch a one as prouoketh Gods wrath. For wee ought rather to hope well at his hand, ỹ as he hath not failed vs heretofore, ſo he will continue to doe vs good ſtil. And yet we go to ſeek theſe doubts afar off, which we be afraid of: inſomuch ỹ it grieueth vs euen to heare thẽ ſpoken of. If a man ſhoulde ſay to vs, ſuch a thing may befal the if thy houſe ſhould be burned, & all thy goods be cõſumed in it, & thou be driuen to ſell thy landes & poſſeſſions, in what caſe wart thou thẽ? None of theſe ſonges would pleaſe vs, but we would chafe and ſtorme at him ỹ ſhould ſpeake ſo. And why? For a rich man would faine ſleepe in his riches, hee hopeth ỹ he ſhal ſtand alwayes at one ſtay, & he ſoadeth himſelfe in his delights. But in ỹ meane while, if he be to doe any good; he by & by forecaſteth, O ſuch a thing might befall me; famine & warre & I wote not what elſe muſt be feared. We heape together all ỹ miſchaunces ỹ can bee deuiſed. And to what ende? Euen to ſhut vp our harts & our hands; ỹ we might do no mã good. Now our Lord minding to correct ſuch diſtruſt, bringeth vs backe to his bleſſing, & ſayth, Know ye ỹ it belõgeth to me to multiply you. And therfore ye may wel hope ỹ when ye ſeeme to be impaired to ỹ worldward, yee ſhall haue a greater treaſure thã if ye had kept all ỹ euer could haue come to your handes, and had neuer done any good to your neighbors to ſuccor thẽ withal. For I am rich enough to fill you againe, euen when you be vtterly deſtitute of al things. Seeing ỹ our Lord ſpeaketh after ỹ maner, muſt we not needs be woorſe than infidels if wee bee not mooued thereat to doe good? Yea and though we go not to woorke with ſo earneſt mindes as we ſhould doe, yet if wee be not mooued at leaſtwiſe to doe ſomewhat; may it not bee ſayd that wee ſtop our eares againſt God and giue him no audience at all, yea and that we giue no credit nor truſt at all to any of his promiſes? Therefore let vs learne to wey better ỹ valew of this leſſon cõcerning Gods bleſſing, & let no man reſt vpon ỹ thinges ỹ he hath in his own poſſeſſion, ne put ſuch truſt in thẽ as to ſay; This is my ſtay, this is truſt in them as to ſay; This is my ſtay, this is the ſtaffe that I muſt leane vpon. Let vs beware of ſuch truſt, for it is diueliſh. Nay rather, let vs think thus; Seeing ỹ God hath giuen me wheron to liue, I am contented with ỹ which I haue, and I hope ỹ he wil alſo prouide for me ſtil hereafter; and in ỹ mean time I wil ſo vſe ỹ which he giueth me, as I may ſuccour thoſe that haue necde. And therwithal I wil put from me al things that may draw me from ỹ obeying of my God, and from ỹ truſt which I ought to repoſe in his goodneſſe. Thus ye ſee how we ought to benefite ourſelues by ỹ promiſes of Gods bleſſing, ſo as they may quicken vs vp, not onely to haue recourſe vnto him, but alſo to vſe liberalitie towards thoſe that haue neede of vs, to the end ỹ our Lord may bee prayſed both of great & ſmall, poore & rich, and al of vs haue our cõtentmẽt in him alone, according to ỹ grace ỹ he ſhal haue beſtowed vpon vs.

Nowe let vs kneele downe in his preſence w̃ acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to make vs perceiue them better, & to touch vs to the quicke, to the ende that knowing his infallible truth, & what his wil is towards vs, wee may be moued thereby to followe ỹ ſame, & to faſhiõ our ſelues to his exãple, by imparting ourſelues in ſuch wiſe to our neighbors, & by diſpoſing the good in ſuch ſorte which hee hath put into your hands, as we may one day yeeld him a good and faithful account of them, ỹ we haue not bin too much addicted to our ſelues: but ỹ when we ſhall haue indeuoured to doe good according to his meaning, our whole ſeeking may be to liue & die in his obedience, drawing others with vs to the ſelfeſame fayth, ſo as we may all call vppon him as our father truely and vnfeinedly, becauſe wee mainteine a right brotherhoode with all ſuch as are knitte vnto vs. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs, but alſo to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Wednesday the xxx. of October. 1555.

The XCv. Sermon, which is the thirde vpon the fifteenth Chapter.

11 For there ſhall euer be ſome needie folke in the Lande. And therefore I commaund thee, ſaying, that thou open thy hand to thy brother, to thy needie and to thy poore in the Lande.

12 When thy brother an Hebrewe, or [thy ſiſter] an Hebreweſſe ſhall haue ſolde himſelfe vnto thee, and ſerued thee ſixe yeres: in the ſeuenth yeere thou ſhalt let him goe free from thee.

13 And when thou letteſt him goe free from thee, thou ſhalt not let him goe emptie.

14 But thou ſhalt lode him vpon his necke with ſomewhat of thy flocke, of thy vyneyarde, and of thy winepreſſe. Thou ſhalt giue him of the things wherewith the Lorde hath bleſſed thee.

15 Remember how thou thy ſelfe waſt a bondſeruant in the Land of Egypt, & that the Lord thy God deliuered thee: and therfore doe I command thee this thing this day.

IT is ſayd in the common prouerb, that Lawes are not made for thinges that are not woont to come to paſſe, but for thinges that are in vre, and which it behoueth vs to practiſe dayly. And that is the cauſe why our Lord in this text ſayth, that his ſpeaking of ỹ ſuccoring of the poore is not without cauſe, for that as long as this mortal lyfe indureth, we ſhall euer finde whereon to execute our duetie, by releeuing the neceſſities of our neighbours, becauſe there ſhall alwayes be poore folke among vs in the world. Thus we ſee in effect, ỹ Gods intent was to make the Iewes to take the better heede to his Lawe, foraſmuch as it was a very requiſite yea and neceſſarie thing, that they ſhould be put in minde of their duetie in ỹ behalfe. And thereupon we haue to gather, that the more auaileable a doctrine is to the well ordering of our lyfe, ỹ better ought we to ſet our mindes vppon it. We ſee a number of folk which are fond and curious in forecaſting for thinges that happen not once in a hundred yeeres: they imagine things ỹ are vtterly vnpoſſible: & if this ſhould come to paſſe (ſay they) what ſhould wee doe then? They beat their braines about things that haue no profit in them, and in the meane while they ſee not the thinges ỹ are before their feete. And for proofe hereof, how many are to be ſeene nowadayes, which groſly ouerſhoote themſelues in things that ought to be throughly knowen, ſhutting their eyes at them ſo as they ſee not one whit? And yet for all that, they toyle themſelues exceedingly in ſearching out I wote not what: and if a man aske them why they doe ſo, they cannot tel, but that they be driuen thereto by a fooliſh curioſitie. Therefore let vs beare in minde that our Lordes intent is to keepe vs occupyed ſo farre foorth as is for our behooſe. And that is the cauſe why that in the holy ſcripture, we ſee that God hath not voutſafed to feed our humors with thinges which hee knoweth to bee be of no edificatiō, but reſtraineth vs to ỹ things which are for our behoofe to put in vre. Let vs conſider then that euery of vs ought to looke diligently to his owne duetie: and that is the warning that is giuen vs in this text, where God telleth vs that he maketh not Lawes of things that concerne vs not, but that hee hath an eye to the thinges which we ought to put in practiſe dayly.

But now let vs come to this ſaying of his, That there ſhalbe poore folke continually. This was ſpoken expreſly, to doe vs to vnderſtand that God will try our charitie. For he is rich enough to ſupply all mens wantes, and it commeth not of any nigardſhip, that he powreth not out his treaſures vppon vs. What is the cauſe then that God ſuffereth men to be poore in this world, but onely to giue vs occaſion to doe good? Therfore when we ſee one man poore & another rich, let vs not attribute it to fortune: but let vs vnderſtand how it is God ỹ diſpoſeth thinges ſo, and that it is not without reaſon. True it is ỹ our eyes ſhal not alwayes ſee why God inricheth one & impouerisheth another, we cannot diſcerne ỹ cauſe therof certeinly. And by that meanes God will haue vs to caſt downe our eyes oftentimes, to the end we ſhould yeelde him the honor of gouerning men at his will, and according to his own deuice which is incōprehenſible. Yet notwithſtanding we haue to remember in generall, the thing that I haue touched already: which is, ỹ Gods diſtributing of theſe worldly goods ſo vnegally, is to bewray what is in mens harts, by making a tryall of thē ỹ way. So ỹ if a man be rich, he may be the better diſcerned what a one he is. For thereby hee is inabled to doe hurt, and can the better indomage his enemies: But if he abſteine frō dooing euil, if he extēd no crueltie towardes his neighbors, if he hold himſelfe wīt his owne boūdes wout coueting morę thā God giueth vnto him: it is a ſigne of honeſty, which had not bin knowē if ſuch occaſiōs had not bin miniſtred vnto him. Again, if a man of wealth be liberall ſo as he indeuour to doe good to ſuch as haue neede of his helpe, and aduaūce not himſelfe through pride & ſtatelyneſſe; but alwayes behaue himſelf mildly: ỹ is a very good proofe. If another mā being poore take patiently whatſoeuer it pleaſeth God to ſend him, & moreouer be not led to any deceit or naughtineſſe how much ſoeuer he ſuffer, or how hard ſoeuer his ſtate be: that alſo is a good & behooueful tryal. Now thē let vs mark ỹ whereas there are both rich and poore in this world, God hath ſo ordeined it, & it cōmeth of his prouidēce: & therfore wee muſt hold it for a ſure groūd, ỹ there ſhal neuer want poore folke.

And now by the way let vs come to that which I ſpake of, namely that Gods commaunding of wealthie folke to haue their handes open to ſuccor the poore and needy that are in the land, is not without cauſe. For it is as it were a ſetting downe before our eyes, wherein and after what maner he will be ſerued at our handes: namely in doing him homage with the goods which hee hath beſtowed abundantly vppon vs: Yea verily, for he ſendeth vs poore folkes to be as his receiuers. And although ỹ almesdeed be done to mortall creatures; yet doth God wel accept and well lyke thereof, & putteth it into his accounts, as though ỹ thinges which we beſtow vpon ỹ poore were deliuered into his owne handes. Trueth it is ỹ as in reſpect of God ỹ deede ỹ wee doe is no almesdeede, but an homage of ỹ goods that hee hath giuen vs, & for the which we bee beholden to him. Yet neuertheles there is this moreouer, ỹ beſides his accepting of the acknowledgement which we yeeld vnto him for ỹ good ỹ he dooth vs, it is all one as if ỹ mercie which we ſhew to our brethren, extended it ſelfe vnto him. And ỹ is the cauſe why it is ſayd; that he which ſhutteth his eares at the crying of the poore, ſhall cry himſelfe vnto GOD and not bee heard. Pro. 21. 13

On the contrary parte, if wee bee pitifull, and be moued to pitie the poore when we heare of their wants; God alſo wil vſe pitie & compaſſion towards vs to ſuccour vs againe at our neede. And in the ſame reſpect Moſes ſayth expreſly in this text, that God cōmaundeth vs to haue our handes open to the poore that dwel in the land among vs. For God offereth them to vs, to the intent wee ſhould haue no excuſe to ſay, I wiſt not to whome I ſhould doe good. Seeing then that our Lord miniſtreth the meanes vnto vs, we muſt not ſeeke for ſtartingholes: for we ſhall bee ſtill guiltie, becauſe we haue not vſed the occaſion that was offered vs. Our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt goeth yet further and ſaith, that he himſelfe will not be alwayes with vs, but that ỹ poore ſhall euer be with vs. For in cōmending ỹ deede that was done to his honour, becauſe ỹ precious oyntment ſeemed ſuperfluous, whē his head was annointed therewith, he ſayd, let it be ſo for this once: but from thenceforth he ſendeth his diſciples to the poore. And why? for it was all one as if he had ſayd, that it was no ordinarie ſeruice that he required, nor for his own perſon, nor for the perſon of God his father, that men ſhoulde preſent him with the precious thinges of this world: for he had no need of thē: but his will was ỹ looke whatſoeuer men were willing to beſtowe vpō him they ſhold beſtow it vpon ỹ poore. And here let vs mark wel, ỹ as I haue touched afore) ỹ almesdeedes which we do to ỹ poore, are accepted of God as ſacrifices done vnto him. Therefore let vs not deceiue ourſelues in our offering vnto him, as though he receiued any thing at our hands: for he doth ſend vs backe agayne, to doe good to ſuch as ſtand in neede of our helpe. Mat. 26. 11. Hebr. 13. 16.

Had this leſſon bin well borne in minde, the wretched world had not ſo miſpent their labor and money in fooliſh pomps, as we ſee they haue done in the Popedome, where they vſe a greate ſorte of lightes, & a number of other petie trifles. And why is that? O they thinke that GOD taketh pleaſure in paintinges, in imagerie, and in ſuch other gewgawes. That is the thing wherein the world is wholy occupyed: and in the meane while the poore are let alone and forgotten. Contrariwiſe, our Lorde Ieſus telleth vs that ỹ is the thing whereby God wil try whether we be willing to honor him or no. For (as I haue declared already) hee coulde well make all men rich: but he ſendeth vs poore folke, to giue vs occaſion to keepe our ſelues occupyed, if we haue any deſire to ſhewe to whom we thinke

our ſelues beholden for our goods, & be minded to apply them to ſuch vſe as he may well lyke of. Therefore if we haue any ſuch deſire, the occaſion to ſhewe it is offered vs & there neuer wanteth any. That is the thing in effect, which we haue to conſider vppon this place.

It ſhould ſeeme at ỹ firſt bluſh, ỹ this agreeth not with ỹ which we haue ſeene already, namely ỹ there ſhould be no poore beggers in ỹ land. But ỹ ſolutiõ is very eaſie, becauſe it may wel fall out ỹ there ſhould be poore folkes, & yet that all begging be taken away. And ſoothely it muſt needes be a great ſhame for a people ỹ profeſſe God, that there ſhould be beggers among thẽ, becauſe it is euen againſt common order & honeſtie. Although we had not the cõmaundemẽt of our God; yet let vs conſider according to nature what may inſew of ſuffering beggers to be. Firſt it is a token ỹ the richer ſort do deuour all, & that they haue no regard of ſuccoring ſuch as be in neede & penury. Againe, when the bridle is layd looſe; we ſee it followeth ỹ the moe doe giue themſelues to roging. For men knowe not to whome they giue; inſomuch that when thoſe kinde of people go crying vp & downe ỹ ſtreetes from gate to gate; it cannot bee diſcerned whether they haue neede or no: and importunateſt creatures doe commonly beare away that wherwith the poore ſhould bee fed and maintained. Moreouer the rewarding of ſuch as goe about begging after that faſhion, is a maintenance of falſe harlots. For there is none ſo great deceit to be found, as is in theſe Roges that go begging about. And he that is once nouſled in roging, becommeth a theefe in the end. Finally although there were none other inconuenience; yet wee ſee that thoſe which are once inured ſo with beging, can neuer fall to any labor afterward, nor learne to doe any good, but are idle bodies and loyterers euer after. Thus ye ſee how begging is euen by ỹ order of nature to be alwayes condẽned. For it bringeth nothing ẅ it but ſinne and corruption, and all thinges muſt at length needs come to confuſion, where begging is ſuffered & borne ẅ. But wee haue Gods commaundement which is a far higher thing, which ſaith ỹ we muſt not haue any beggers among vs, but ỹ the incõuenience thereof ought to be preuented aforehand, by releeuing ſuch as want, accordingly as men can diſcern of thẽ, & be of abilitie to ſuccor thẽ. Ye ſee then that theſe two places are not cõtrary one to another. For wheras he ſaith ỹ there ſhal alwayes be poore folks; it is to the end (as I haue ſayd afore) that ỹ rich ſhould haue occaſiõ to offer ſuch ſacrifice to God as he requireth, by ſuccouring the needy with ſuch things as they haue in their handes, and by doing it with diſcretion, by ſearching out as much as is poſſible who they bee that haue neede. But that men ſhould giue without diſcretion, or that it ſhould be lawfull for men to goe begging vp and downe the ſtreetes, or to ſtand begging at the gates or at mens doores: it is a ſhamefull thing & againſt all good order, and bringeth nothing but confuſion, as a nouriſhmẽt of euil in all thoſe to whom ſuch libertie is giuen, as I haue ſhewed already.

Now remaineth to put this doctrine in practiſe. Firſt of all we muſt vnderſtand, that according to the greatneſſe of mens neceſſities, God ſtirreth vs vp euer to doe them the more good, & it is then chiefe time to ſtreine our ſelues, whẽ there is any famine or dearth. For then men ought rather to cut their owne morſels ſhorte, than to ſuffer others to want, themſelues liuing ſo in exceſſe. And whereas many men take occaſion to pinche when they ſee a deere yeere, bearing themſelues in hand that it ſerueth their turne well to make their hand the better: Let vs vnderſtand that our Lord doth then cite vs, and declare vnto vs that if euer we be minded to doe him homage with the goods that hee hath put into our handes, hee will haue vs to vtter it at that time. Let that ſerue for one point. And whereas we ſee many poore folke in neceſſitie; let vs aſſure our ſelues that our Lord warneth vs that it is as a waking of vs from ſleepe; and that becauſe wee haue not bin ſufficiently mindefull of our duetie, our Lord commeth to put vs in remembrance of that which he had commaunded vs: and that if we be not too lazie, we muſt needes inforce our ſelues, to conſider euery of vs the meaſure that is giuen him & the abilitie of his power, & thereafter imploy himſelf. This is ỹ thing that wee haue to marke in the firſt place.

And as touching the ſecond point, Let vs looke to keepe order and pollicie, ſo as this ſhame and diſhoneſtie of begging be not among vs. For why, it is nothing elſe but a nouriſhment of wicked raſcals, and they will neuer bee brought to any good, which are ſo mainteined, but they become roges and idle perſons as I haue tolde you before. And in the end they take a pleaſure in their begging, and lyke ſo well of their ſcrippe or wallet, that they would not chaunge it for a yeerely rent; Which thing experience ſhewes too much. To be ſhorte, of Roges, they become robbers, & in the end what muſt become of that? Therefore let all this bee takẽ away, vnleſſe we purpoſe to prouoke Gods wrath wilfully, & to cauſe thinges to grow euery day worſe than other. But yet howſoeuer ỹ caſe ſtand, let vs ſee that ỹ poore be mainteined. For if a man forbid begging, & therewithall doe no almes at all: it is as much as if he did cut ỹ throtes of thoſe that are in neceſſitie. Nay, wee muſt ſo prouide for the poore, & redreſſe their want, that ſuch as are ſtout beggers and apparantly ſeeme not to be pitied, may be reformed. For they doe but eate vp ỹ others bread, & rob ỹ needy of that which ſhould be giuen vnto thẽ. That (ſay I) in effect, is the thing that we haue to marke here. But how may ỹ be done? Firſt ỹ Hoſpitals ſhoulde prouide wel for ſuch needs. For what a ſhame is it, that ỹ goods which are dedicated to God and ỹ poore, ſhold neuertheleſſe be applied to other vſes? That is not ſimple robbery, but a robbing of God. Therefore let thẽ be imployed according to his cõmaundement; & let not mẽ play ỹ good husbãds in hording vp ỹ things that ought to be beſtowed vpon God & vpon thoſe whome he offreth vnto vs. Alſo according as euery man knoweth ỹ particular needes of his neighbors,

so let him indeuour to succour thē, and consider where wante or neede is, and helpe to remedie it. If this be done, then shal beggerie be taken away as it ought to be, and they shall not neede to make a simple forbidding of it: saying; let not men beg any more: & in the meane season ỹ poore be left destitute, to die for hūger & thirst.

And truly it is not for nought ỹ our Lord saith here, thy poore & thy needie which are in thy Lād. He could welinough haue said, the poore & needie: but he vseth another maner of phrase saying, thy pore and thy needie. As if he should say, if a man bee poore, euery body disdaynes him and turnes his backe to him: and why is that? Because the rich doe beare themselues in hand, that the poore are not worthie to come ny them, & they could finde in their heartes to haue a world alone by themselues. Were it not that they be contented to haue the poore folkes seruice, they could find in their harts neuer to see thē. But on ỹ contrary part, to pull downe such pride & presumption, our Lord sayth, who art thou that despisest so thy brother? He is thy poore, he is thy needy. He speaketh as to our owne flesh. Therefore let vs wey well the wordes which the holy Ghost hath vsed, that no pride may hinder vs to haue compassion vppon those that are so vnited vnto vs. And let vs marke that they bee our owne poore folkes, ỹ is to say, ỹ the persons which are so in neede, are offered vnto vs of the Lord, as if hee should say, it is my will to make such an intercourse, as the rich may be mingled ẅ the poore, & either of them may meete ẅ other, to the intent they should cōmunicate together, ỹ poore to receiue & the rich to giue, so as I may be honored at the handes of them both, as well for ỹ ỹ rich man hath wherẅ to do good, as for that ỹ poore man acknowledgeth himselfe to be sustened & mainteined for my names sake, & so both of thē blesse me. That is ỹ cause why Moses speaketh of ỹ poore & needy after such a sorte, ỹ he sheweth ỹ rich how it is they themselues whom he speaketh to, & that there ought to be a kinde of intercōmoning between thē & the poore, not to make thē fellowlyke, but to relieue ỹ neede of those whom God offreth vnto thē after ỹ maner.

After this, Moses addeth a law ỹ serued but for ỹ common weale of ỹ Iewes, ỹ substance whereof continueth neuertheless vnto vs at this day. If thy brother an Hebrewe (sayth he) or thy sister an Hebrewesse be solde vnto thee, let him serue thee the space of sixe yeeres: As the end of that terme thou shalt release him. And at thy releasing of him, thou shalt not sende him away emptie, but thou shalt giue him some Corne or some Cattell according to thy abilitie, that hee may feele of the blessing which the Lord thy God hath giuen thee, and that the same may be as a hyre vnto him. Now we must marke, ỹ in those dayes there were no such seruauntes as are nowadayes which take certein wages by ỹ yeere: but they were in bōdage after ỹ maner of those whom wee call bondslaues in Barbarie & in other countries in these dayes. So then they were al slaues at ỹ time, & among the heathen ỹ bondage was endlesse: insomuch ỹ if a man had liued a hundred liues, yet should hee neuer haue bin released, vnlesse his maister had pitied him. Moreouer, the man ỹ had such slaues might mary them, & forasmuch as the wretched soules were not free thēselues, their children also were in bondage lyke ỹ beastes ỹ we haue. If a man haue Horses, Kine, Cattel, or Sheepe, hee reapeth ỹ fruite of thē: & so did they ẅ their bōd seruants at ỹ time. And surely ỹ state of bondage as it was then through ỹ whole world, was very hard. For it was Lawfull euen among Christians. It is not cōmaunded to be abolished: Wee see ỹ whereas S. Paul speaketh of maisters ỹ had such bondseruants & were faithfull, he biddeth them not to set thē quite at libertie, but to deale gētly by all kinde of meanes. Know ye (saith he) ỹ you haue one cōmon Maister in heauē, & that your seruantes be Gods children as well as you: and therefore deale gently ẅ them, & hold them not in such thraldome as ỹ vnbeleeuers doe. S. Paul, ỹ is to say ỹ holy Ghost speaking by his mouth, thinketh ỹ to be enough. Howbeit forasmuch as the Iewes were priuiledged, & God had chosen them for his owne inheritance: it behoued some moderation or mitigation to be among them, so as they should not vse so extreme rigor as was among the Heathen. Neuertheless it is a good thing, ỹ this slauish bondage is abolished in time among ỹ faithful, howbeit ỹ there continue still some remnantes of it in some places, but yet is ỹ same much more tollerable thā so rough a law could haue bin. For wheras there are some persons which are still taxable (as they terme it) at this day, whether it be in their goods or in their persons: it is of ỹ olde slauery, & they be of ỹ race of such as were very slaues in old time, & of such as might haue bin handled as bondslaues by rigor of Law. But as I sayd, this may wel be borne ẅ: and it was a vertue worthie of cōmendation, that the parties which had such bondslaues, released them vppon a certaine qualification.

But now let vs come againe to ỹ Law ỹ is giuē here to ỹ Iewes. It is sayd that such as were solde should serue by the space of sixe yeeres: and the seuenth yeere is priuiledged here in honor of ỹ Saboth day, ỹ is to say of ỹ rest, wherby our Lord ment alwayes to reduce the Iewes to gentlenes, by bringing them backe to himselfe. As if hee should say, assure your selues ỹ your vsing of such mercie towardes your neighbors, is an acceptable seruice vnto me. For ỹ day of rest was ỹ very marke of Gods spiritual seruice, as is declared vnto vs in many places of ỹ scripture, both in Exodus & Ezechiel where our Lorde speaketh precisely of ỹ day of rest, & also in ỹ xvii. Chapter of Ieremie. Yea & he speaketh in such wise of it, as though all his seruice cōsisted therein. And why is that? Because ỹ on the day of rest, hee called ỹ people to himself, as if he should say, know me, let me be worshipped, let euery man giue his minde to consider my goodnesse, my Iustice, my wisedome, & my power. And therewithall rest your selues in me, and let euery of you forbeare his owne will, and his owne lykinges, that yee may be, as it were subiected vnder my yoke, and I gouerne you. We see then ỹ the day of rest was as ỹ principal seruice of God. Now forasmuch as mē cānot acquaint thēselues ẅ the dooing of good to their neighbors, nor wil willingly giue ouer their right whē they haue thē at a vātage, & can hardly be be drawen to doe ſo much as they ought to do. Therefore doth our Lord ſet this before them here, and ſay, ſuch as releaſe their bondſeruantes doe me acceptable ſeruice, whereof I giue them the day of reſt for a ſigne & ſure token. Seeing then that I ſet betweene you and me, this token & warrant, know ye ỹ your giuing of releaſe to your bondſeruantes is by mine authoritie, ſo as I am among you & ouerrule you in that act, and your dooing of it is for my ſake. Though yee haue no regard of men, becauſe yee thinke yee ſhould not owe them ſo much ſeruice, at leaſt-wiſe yet conſider how much you be bound to me. Thus ye ſee now to what end the ſeuenth yeere was aſſigned. Sixe yeeres (ſayth hee) ſhall they ſerue you, & the ſeuenth yeere you ſhal let them goe. And he contenteth not himſelfe with the onely releaſing of the bondſeruantes, but he will alſo haue men to giue them ſomewhat wherew̃ to ſet vp their trade. And not without cauſe: For euen the heathen themſelues at ỹ ſame time in which I tolde you, ỹ that bondage was moſt riſe, could skil to ſay that they were not to be vſed as bondſeruants but as hirelinges, ỹ is to ſay, after ỹ maner of our ſeruants ỹ take wages by ỹ yeere at this day. Is it not a great ſhame ỹ the heathē both Greekes and Latins could ſpeake after this faſhion, we haue bondſlaues, we may vſe thē as Oxen & Aſſes: but that is vilanous, it is out of all order: & therefore albeit that it be lawful for vs by the ciuill Lawes; yet is it againſt all humanitie, & we ought to haue another regard. As how? Surely we muſt vſe thē as though they were free-men whom we hyred for wages. If ỹ blind wretches ſpake ſo; & perceiued that this kinde of vpright dealing was requiſite: what ſhall become of vs? Verily God hath puniſhed ſuch as haue dealt roughly with them. For it was lawfull for a Maiſter in olde time to kill his bondſeruant, & he needed not to aske leaue of ỹ Magiſtrate to put his ſeruāt to torture, but he might teare him in peeces one mēber from another, yea euen at home in his own priuate houſe: & when his Maiſter had ſo murthered him, no man ſought Iuſtice or reformation of it. True it is ỹ in the ende men were forbidden to kill thē w̃out examination of their caſe: but yet had ỹ Maiſters alwayes ỹ authoritie ſtil. And becauſe they abuſed it, God payed thē home with the lyke againe, ſo as they had a common prouerb among thē, That looke how many bondſeruantes a man had at home, ſo many enemies had he. Alſo they could well skill to cōdemne thēſelues, ſaying: they bee not enemies borne, but we make them our enemies by our crueltie. Seeing then ỹ the heathē knew thus much; it was requiſite ỹ there ſhold be ſome greater mieldneſſe & humanitie among gods people ỹ were choſen of a ſingular priuiledge. That is ỹ cauſe why God ſayd expreſly ỹ they ſhould bee helped at their departing from their houſes in ỹ ſeuenth yeere. For if a poore man be ſent away ſtark naked, now & then he had leuer to continue a ſlaue ſtil, thā to goe ſeeke what ſhal betide him he wot not where. A poore man that hath not much to take to, can finde in his hart to take paynes; & ſo he may haue meat & drinke, hee is at a poynt. Thereupon he taketh paines in his Maiſters houſe: Now if his Maiſter driue him out of his doores & ſay get thee hence: He may cry alas, what ſhal become of me? I haue not a bit of bread to eat, I haue no lodging, I wote not where to become. This ſending away of their ſeruants naked, was an indirect meanes to hold thē in bōdage ſtill. For this cauſe our Lord ſayth, whē ye haue bin ſerued by ỹ ſpace of ſix yeeres by thoſe ỹ are your brethrē, giue thē ſomewhat in recōpēce of their ſeruice, according to your abilitie.

Again, to ỹ end ỹ men ſhould be ỹ willinger to ſuch liberalitie, Look into your ſtables (ſaith he,) & into ſtorehouſes, & into your garners. Becauſe men are alwayes repining; here God falleth to making of an Inuentorie. O (ſayes one) I haue not ſo much to giue: & what wote I whether I my ſelfe ſhall want or no? Our Lorde therefore maketh an Inuentorie to diſcuſſe ỹ matter, ſaying, What? Cannot he which hath Corne in his garner giue to him ỹ hath ſerued him, whoſe bloud he hath drawen in making him to labor for him? Ought he not at leaſtwiſe to haue an eye to the corne ỹ is in his garner? He hath husbanded his ground, he hath tilled it, he hath toyled himſelfe about it: & is it not reaſon ỹ he ſhould feele ſome ſweeteneſſe & fruite of it? Beſides this, he goeth to his winepreſſe & to his ſtalles: as if he ſhoulde ſay, let euery man ſee what hee hath; for according to your abilitie you be bound to recōpence them ỹ haue trauelled for you, & haue bin ỹ inſtrumentes of ſuch bleſſinges. For if we thanke God w̃ our mouthes, confeſſing ỹ it is he which hath bleſſed vs, & in ỹ meane while make none account of ſuch as he hath ſent to doe vs ſeruice in ỹ increaſe of our liuing, by taking paynes and toyle for vs: all our thanking of him is but lipla-bor & vtter hypocriſie. Thus ye ſee in effect what we haue to marke vppon this text.

This law is ſet down lykewiſe in ỹ xxi. Chapter of Exodus. Notwithſtanding, although God had ſpoken of it after ỹ faſhiō; yet was ỹ thing ill obſerued which he commaundeth here. And hereby we ſee how malitious, hardhearted, yea and wilfull ſtubborne ỹ Iewes were. For at ſuch times as God puniſhed them, & they were driuē to reſorte vnto him whether they would or no, they pretended a willingneſſe to ſubmit thēſelues to him, & to take ſome good way of amendment, [though they meant it not:] which thing among others he caſteth in their teeth, ſaying: what? I haue commaūded you cōcerning your brethren ỹ are your ſeruants; ỹ ye ſhould let thē goe frank & free in ỹ ſeuenth yere: but ye haue not done it. Now thē ſeeing ỹ my lawe is ſet in ſtate againe, Let it be kept. In deed when men be pinched & conſtrained by neceſſitie; then they can make ſome faire cōtenance & ſhew well enough. Go to then, let ſeruantes be releaſed: but immediatly after they haue ſhiftes to bring thē vnder coram again, as if a man ſhould make a theefe to creepe vnder his arme, as who would ſay he ſhold make reſtitution of his theft, & whereas he pretended to take it from him with the one hand he ſhoulde conuey it to him again with the other. After the ſame maner was God mocked with his own law, yea euen notwithſtanding that thē Iewes were puniſhed extremely at that time, and ſawe wel that God perſecuted them & did ſet himſelfe againſt them becauſe of their diſobedience. As touching the bondſeruants that would not vſe ỹ freedome that was graunted them, wee ſhall ſee more in the next ſermon. But as touching the common law; the Iewes were ſo full of malice, ỹ they refuſed to giue freedome to their bondſeruaunts.

And here the firſt thing that wee haue to gather, is the ſubſtance of the lawe, which concerneth euen vs at this day. There is no more any ſuch bondage among vs as was then among the Iewes and all the heathen. In deede in ſome countries the ſame bondage remaineth ſtill, as in the Eaſt countries, in Greece, and in Barbarie, but yet for all that it is the better that the vſe of it is aboliſhed, as it is among vs: and that is a very commendable thing. Yet notwithſtanding, it behoueth vs to conſider, how our Lord admoniſheth vs by his lawe, to deale gently with ſuch as do vs ſeruice, ſo as wee beare with them and defraud them not of their hire, ne ſtand vpon rigor towards them to take the vttermoſt of them that we may, but that we deale vprightly with them, & rule our ſelues, as thoſe that haue a ſtay of thé ſelues, & looke not to be compelled by lawe, but euery man rightly to rule himſelfe. That is the thing in effect which we haue to note in this text. As how? A maſter that hath a ſeruaunt wringeth al ỹ euer he can out of him without any regarde to him: therin he ſhewes himſelfe to be cruel. If he ſay, I find him meat & drink, & I pay him his wages: that is true, but he muſt alſo haue reſpect what he is able to do, & what ſeruice he may receiue at his hand. Aboue all things we muſt haue an eye to this natural vprightnes; that we do not any thing to another body, which we would not haue done to our ſelues. If a man haue ſeruants, he ought to think with himſelf, how would I deſire to be delt with, if I were in their ſtead? I wold deſire to be borne with. Trueth it is that we muſt not be at that point when a ſeruant woulde liue ydly & do nothing, but wold be kept like a cockney, neuer to put his hande to the doing of any thing. For it is not ment of ſuch as liue diſorderly, but only of ſuch as we know to be reaſonable. As how? I thinke with my ſelfe, if I were in this fellowes place, what ought I to do? I ſpeake not here of wiſhing, but of ỹ reaſonablenes which euery of vs knoweth. For when the caſe concerneth our own profit or diſprofit, we can very well skill to iudge of it: but when the caſe concerneth other men, then are we blynd. But ſuch as haue ſeruants ought to conſider thus with themſelues: If I were in their roome, what would I reaſonably deſire to be done to mee? Then muſt I not take more vppon mee than my conſcience warranteth mee. For although there were no Iudge to condemne mee, nor lawe to accuſe mee, yet doeth mine owne conſcience ſuffice in that it findeth fault with mee. Thus wee ſee, that although this lawe belonged peculiarly to ỹ ſtate of the Iewiſh common weale, where this kind of bondage was vſed: yet notwithſtanding it containeth a leſſon beneficial to vs at this day: that is to wit, that it behoueth vs to vſe our ſeruants in ſuch wiſe; as they bee not oppreſſed beyonde meaſure, nor cruelly handled; and ſecondly that wee be kindhearted towardes euery of them, to do them good, and to ſhewe in very deede that wee be willing to agree to his good will. For it is not ynough for the mouth to ſpeake vnleſſe the hande be aunſwerable to the ſame. That is the thing in effect, which wee haue to marke vppon this text.

Therewithall let vs wey well the words wherin our Lord maketh an inquiſition of euery mans goods, & let vs conſider howe it ſerueth to ſhewe vs that in the ende wee muſt come to account, ſo as wee may not thinke to ſlip the colar and to ſhift our handes by ſaying, Do what I can, I ſhall not bee well reported of for my labour: after which ſort ſome folkes continually repine when they bee ſpoken to concerning almeſdeedes, to whome it ſeemeth to bee as good as haling of them to the galowes, if ye do but ſpeake to them of the opening of their purſes. To the end therfore that wee ſhoulde not imagine that ſuch ſhiftes can goe for paiment before God: let vs marke well howe hee telleth vs here, that he forgetteth not what hee hath giuen vs, but can very well caſt vs in the teeth with it. And ſeeing he caſteth vs in the teeth with it alreadie in this worlde; what will he do when all things ſhalbee brought to light, & when the bookes of account ſhalbe layd open? Wil there be any excuſe then? No: for then euen the ſecreteſt thinges ſhalbee layde open; and what will become then of the things that are apparantly knowen? Shal a man eſcape the iudgement of God, when he is found to bee a niggard and a churle euen before men? So then let vs beware that we behaue our ſelues well in this behalfe: and for the better doing thereof, let euery of vs mark the forme of ſpeech which the holy Ghoſt vſeth in this text; foraſmuch as it ſerueth to ſearch vs to the bottom, to the intent ỹ wheras euery of vs hides himſelf away when he ſhould do any good, no man ſhould ſhrink backe, but euery man put forth himſelfe according to his abilitie & ſtate. Dan 7.10. 1. Cor. 4.5.

Now for a concluſion our Lord addeth here, that the Iewes had beene in bondage in the lande of Egypt, and therefore he commandeth them to be kindharted & pitifull towards thoſe that are in their ſeruice. And hereby it is ſhewed vs, that if our Lord haue giuen vs experience of aduerſity, we muſt be the readier to ſuccour the diſtreſſed, & not play the proud fooles which cannot abide to heare their former ſtate ſpoken of, when they haue beene in pouertie, but are more ſcornefull and diſdainfull than ſuch as haue liued continually at their eaſe. Nay, if our Lorde haue ſuffered vs to bee pinched, and to ſtande in neede of otherfolks ſeruice; let vs print it throughly in our mindes, & let it bee as a ſpurre to quicken vs vp, that whenſoeuer we ſee any folke in neceſſitie, it may alwayes runne in our mindes, Alas, when I was in their caſe, what deſired I? I could haue founde in my heart that all men ſhould haue opened their heartes and their bowels towardes mee: and ſhall I nowe ſhut vp mine? Lo what the declaration that is ſet down here importeth.

And it is not in this place onely that Moſes vſeth to ſay ſo. For there is not any thing more rife in all his bookes: inſomuch that euer after the peoples deliuerance out of the lande of Egypt, Remember (ſayeth hee) from time to time, that thou thy ſelfe haſt beene in bondage. Therefore let vs marke, that looke what experience euery of vs hath had in his life, Gods will is that the ſame ſhoulde ſerue vs for an inſtruction, and that wee ſhoulde beare it continually in minde. As for example, when a man hath beene a traueller of countryes, he ought to conſider into what diſtreſſes a man might fall: and hee ſhalbee the more inclyned to ſuccour others whome he ſeeth in like daunger. Againe, when a man hath beene pinched for a time with pouertie, and afterwarde commeth to wealth, his former pouertie ought to bee a teacher to him for euer after, to bee the forewarder to put foorth himſelfe where neede requireth. True it is that although a man had liued all the dayes of his life in eaſe, and neuer wiſt what neede or want meant: yet ſhal hee not therefore be helde excuſed before God. But yet foraſmuch as wee bee ſo ſlacke and ſlowe to doe good: wee had neede to take to vs the helpes that may ſerue to quicken vs vp withall. And ſo let euery of vs for his owne parte cheere vp himſelfe to do good. As for the riche which neuer haue taſted any want of the goods of this worlde, lif they looke into them ſelues, they ſhall finde that God hath viſited them ſome way or other, ſo as they haue had neede of other folkes helpe. And if they be not ſtarke churles, the ſame muſt needes bee as a ſtroke with a ſpurre, to thruſt them forwarde to weldoing.

To conclude in fewe wordes, the principall purpoſe of this place, is that beſides the vprightneſſe which is of nature, our Lord wil haue euery man to bee inclined to mercie, to do good to ſuch as haue neede. But put the caſe there were none other reſpect why wee ſhoulde ſuccour our neighbours but onely this, that wee be men: is not that reſpect great ynough? Yes, for vnder this worde Man, wee comprehend many miſeries. When I ſee a man in diſtreſſe, I finde in my ſelfe that I ſhoulde bee ſubiect to the like thinges, if God had not a ſpeciall regard of mee. There is neither ſickeneſſe, pouertie, nor any other like thing in any body, but that wee our ſelues are ſubiect to the ſame miſeries. And what is the cauſe that wee bee cleare from them? The goodneſſe of our God. And the cauſe why hee ſpareth vs and beareth with vs, is to the ende that wee ſhoulde bee mindfull of ſuch as haue need. For it is a very great proofe of Gods goodneſſe towardes mee, that hee not onely exempteth mee from the aduerſities which I ſee in my neyghbours, but alſo giueth mee wherewith to remedie theirs. And therefore it ought to be a ſufficient prouocation for mee, that they bee of mine owne fleſh, and of mine owne nature, ſo as there is no difference betwixt vs but that God hath aduaunced the one of vs, and put the other backe. For wee be all of one lumpe, and it is not for any man to glorie, as though hee had his riches of him ſelfe. If a man bee not ſo miſerable as a number of others are, hee ought not to bee proude of it, but rather to conſider that he is ſo much the more bounde vnto God. Accordingly therefore as God beſtoweth his benefites vppon vs, let vs beware that wee acknowledge it towardes him, by doing good to our neighbors whome he offereth vnto vs, ſo as wee neither exempt our ſelues from their want, not ſeclude them from our aboundance, but gently make them partakers with vs, as folke that are linked togither in an vnſeparable bond.

And nowe let vs fall down in the preſence of our good God with acknowledgement of our ſinnes, praying him to make vs ſo to feele them, as we may returne to him with true repentance, and miſliking our former life, craue forgiuenes and mercie at his hande, and bee alwayes ready hereafter to yeeld our ſelues to his obedience, ſo as our whole ſeeking may be to glorifie him in all caſes, after ſuch a ſort as our whole life may ſhewe that wee haue well profited in his holy worde. And ſo let vs all ſay, Almightie God heauenly father, &c.

On Munday the iiij. of Nouember. 1555.

The XCvj Sermon, which is the fourth vpon the fifteenth Chapter.

16 And if hee happen to ſay to thee, I will not depart from thee becauſe I loue thee and thy houſe, by reaſon that he findeth himſelfe well with thee:

17 Then ſhalt thou take an Aule, and bore him through the eare to the doore, and hee ſhalbee thy bondman for euer. And likewiſe ſhalt thou do to thy woman ſeruaunt.

18 Let it not grieue thee to let him go free from thee: for he hath ſerued thee ſixe yeares as a hyreling of double wages. And the Lorde thy God will bleſſe thee in all thy dooings.

19 All the firſt borne males that breede of thy cattell and of thy flockes, thou ſhalt ſanctifie to the Lord thy God. Thou ſhalt not labour with the firſt borne of thy kyne, nor ſhere the firſt borne of thy ſheepe.

20 But thou ſhalt eate them, thou and thy houſhold from yere to yere in the preſence of the Lord thy God, in the place which the Lorde will chooſe.

21 But if there be any blemiſh in it, ſo as it be lame or blinde, or haue any euill fault in it: thou ſhalt not offer it to the Lorde thy God:

22 But ſhalt eate it within thy gates, as well the vncleane as the cleane, both alike, as the fallow deere and the Red deere.

23 Only thou ſhalt not eat the bloud of it, but ſhalt powre it vpon the ground as water.

WEe haue ſeene already the lawe which God placed among the Iewes, whereby bondage was not to continue for euer, but ỹ the perſon which had bin ſolde ſhould ſerue ſixe yeres, and afterward be ſet at libertie. And I told you that although the like law be not among vs nowadays; yet notwithſtanding we may gather a very profitable leſſon of that which is therin contained, ỹ is to wit, that he which hath any ſuperioritie ouer others, ought to forbeare all tyranny, & to be kyndharted towardes thoſe whom God hath put in ſubiection to him, ſo as he reigne not ouer them with crueltie, ne inforce them to all that euer he may, but deale gently with them as with his brethren. And although wee bee not nowadays all of one linage as the Iewes were: yet muſt it ſuffice vs that wee haue all one father & one maſter in heauen, as is declared vnto vs. For by meanes of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, wee be ſo vnited togither, that there is ſuch a brotherhood betwixt vs, as cannot be broken without forſaking the adoption which God hath made of vs. And therfore as many as intend to be taken for Gods children, muſt louingly beare with all thoſe whō they may commaund. Againe, we muſt come to account, ſo as if wee will obtaine mercie at the hand of God, & be borne withall by his gracious fauour; wee muſt looke to doe the like to ſuch as are in ſubiection to vs.

Eph. 6. 9. & Col. 3. 10.

But nowe Moſes addeth an exception to the law, whereby he had commanded to ſet ſeruants at libertie after ſixe yeres ſeruice; and he ſayeth that if any ſeruants be ſo well contented with his ſtate, that when his maſter is readie to ſende him away & to giue him reward, he will ſay vnto his maſter, Nay ſir, I had leuer to tary ſtill in thy houſe becauſe I finde myſelfe well at eaſe: then ſhall his maſter take an Aule, & boare through his ſeruants eare in token that hee is his for euer. Yet was not this done without conſideration of the caſe, as is written in the xxi. of Exodus. For there it is ſayde expreſſely that the maſter ſhall call to the Iudges, that the matter may bee inquired of by them. For otherwiſe, euery maſter might haue made the worlde beeleeue, that his ſeruaunt was deſirous to bee his for euer. Therefore it behoued the thing to bee prooued; and then was his eare boared through at the doore, to the ende that the matter might bee done openly to the ſight of all men. For in ſuch caſes there might haue beene much colluſion, yea, and alſo compulſion, and a man might haue beene ſo vrged by conſtraint of much beating, that hee woulde haue conſented to haue beene in perpetuall bondage. But when the thing was done in open ſight, ſo as the Iudges were called to the matter: then was there no deceite, neither coulde they bee beguyled which did ſo yeelde themſelues into bondage.

And as touching the marking of them, it was a common thing in the Eaſt countryes. And it is ſeene in other Cōtries alſo, that ſuch as were marked, were of worſe ſtate and condition than other bondeſeruauntes were: but in this place there is no meaning of any harder bondage than the reſt. And becauſe God had graunted that priuiledge among his people; he addeth that if any man woulde needes be a bondeſlaue of his own wil, then he ſhould beare ſome marke therof. But yet was this marke made without any wounding, as if the tip of a mans eare ſhould bee boared with a pinne or with an awle that were ſharpe, it coulde put him to no payne, and it was no more but to make the matter knowen. And whereas God ſayth that he ſhould be ſo for euer, we muſt vnderſtand that the yeere of Iubile was excepted, as we may ſee in other places. And in very deede, the compaſſe of fiftie yeeres was called a worlde, and the worde that Moſes vſeth is taken ſometimes for the age of a man, His meaning then is, that he which conſenteth to be a bondeſlaue, ſhall abide in that ſtate for euer, that is to ſay euen vntill the ſtate of the countrie be renewed, as well concerning mens Landes as their perſons: at which time euery man entered againe into his owne heritage, that God might alwayes be knowen to be both ſouereigne Lord and as it were the onely Lorde of the ſoile, & that the inhabiters were not owners and freeholders, but onely as tennauntes at will, or farmers, for thoſe are the verie termes that our Lorde vſeth. Therefore his will was that the parting of the Lande which was made by his commaundement ſhoulde bee kept: the meane whereof was that euery man ſhoulde returne to his owne inheritaunce & poſſeſſion at the fiftith yeere, at which time the whole ſtate of the Realme was chaunged in all other thinges. Thus ſee we now what was the effect of this Lawe.

And heere wee haue an example that maſters ought to behaue themſelues gently, for wee ought alwayes to beare in minde what hath beene treated of, namely that this law was farre other than ỹ law of seruiceship that is among vs. For as now we hyre seruants for wages, whereas in those dayes they were bought and solde, and men vsed them much more hardly than they do nowadayes. If a seruant had beene misintreated at his masters hande, he coulde not depart from him, nor haue any law against him: but hee was faine to obey his master in al that euer he would put him to. If his master would sende him to the feelds, or vse him as a droyle in his house to doe whatsoeuer he had to be done; it was not for the seruant to hang the groyne at it, or to say I cannot do it: for his master would vse him as he listed; in so much as hee woulde marrie him euen spyte of his heart, & take his children from him. And though the seruant were set at libertie at ỹ seuenth yere, yet his children were faine to abyde in bondage still. That is one thing which we haue to note. Now then, seeing that the state of seruants was so grieuous: it may wel be sayde, that there were masters of singular humanitie among the people of Israel, seeing that a seruaunt could find in his heart to say, I am contented to dwell with you still. Freedome (as the Heathen themselues haue saide) is an inestimable benefit: & when lawes speake thereof, it is preferred in fauour before all other things. And sith it is so, what a thing was it that a man should giue ouer his freedome, which ought to be as deere to him as his life? Needs must it be said that he was gently delt with. And this ought to make vs greatly ashamed. For seeing a man might safely at that time by the lawes of man, vse his bondseruaunt as he listed: must not those whom Moses speaks of here, needes condemne the person ỹ vseth crueltie towards his household folk, now when we be brydled by the ciuil lawes? Yes: for they had not Iesus Christ as yet reueiled vnto them, who hath gathered vs togither into the spiritual kinred, as hath bin touched heretofore. It was not declared vnto them ỹ God would haue vs to bee members of his only sonne, yea euen bondslaues & such as are of the worst state that is. Sith it is so, let vs haue an eye to our selues: & let not the example that Moses setteth downe here, bee a witnesse before God to condemne our excessiue crueltie against those whom God hath made our vnderlings. Marke that for one point.

Horat. 1. Epist. 10.

Eph. 3. 15. 1. Cor. 12. 13 Gal. 3. 28.

Moreouer let vs marke, ỹ the boring of ỹ seruants eare ỹ is spoken of here, is to auoide ỹ blearing of mens ees, & that the matter should come to open triall. For although there were courteous masters to be found among the Iewes: yet notwithstanding the most part of them were after ỹ cõmon trade of ỹ world, as alwayes we see, ful of malice, ful of fraud, & ful of outrage. For there were of them ỹ woulde haue drawen their seruants by naughtie meanes to say, thou thinkest thy selfe nowe scaped my handes, but I will make thee come againe after another fashiõ. Or else peraduenture he woulde haue flattered his seruant for a time: & vnder pretence of dealing wel with him for a moneth or sixe weekes, hee would haue drawen him into his nettes & snares to bynd himself to this perpetual bondage. For this cause it was our Lords wil that it shold passe by order of law, & ỹ the magistrates should haue knowledge therof. And hereby we see how men had always need to be brydled, & to haue their naughtines preuented: for it were pitie else. And although this seeme somwhat hard, yet was it or deined in fauor of ỹ seruãts rather than of ỹ masters. If there were any such mark here amõg vs nowadayes: very wel, it were a kind of reproche. And why so? for such a one should shew himselfe to haue had no heart: for he should rather haue liued of his hãdie labor, & to haue scratched his liuing out of the earth, rather than to haue forgone his libertie whẽ he was to be set free. Therfore ỹ world sees ỹ such a one is but an ydlebelly, & a very blockhead. Thus it should seeme at ỹ first blush, that God here doth punish the guiltlesse. For if a man be in good state, and therfore is cõtented to yeeld himself into perpetual bondage; should he be put to shame for his labour? Nay, our Lords meaning was to waken vp those that were to enter into such bondage, as if hee should say: Beware what ye do: For they come to nayle you to the dore, to shewe you that yee shoulde bee tyed to this place, to bee his bondseruauntes for euer to whome yee binde your selues, and so you do after a sort renounce that priuiledge which I had giuen you: and therefore looke well about you what you do. We see then that this lawe was not made for the masters sakes but for the seruauntes sakes, to the intent they should bethinke themselues throughly whẽ they went about to be bound: and ỹ euen when they came to the deed doing, they might bee at choice still to say, I will depart free, I am mine own man, I wil vse the libertie ỹ God giueth me. Thus wee see in fewe wordes, howe Gods intent was not onely to shewe to the maisters that they themselues also were vnder commaundement: but also to warne such as had bin misaduised, to beware howe they dyd cast themselues into perpetuall bondage. And so let vs marke in fewe wordes vpon this text, that the gentlenesse which we owe to our neighbours, is precious in the sight of God. For seeing he hath such a care of it, and hath inioyned it so by his worde: it is a token that it is an acceptable sacrifice to him. Will wee then please God? Let vs vse such gentlenesse towardes our neighbours, that euen they themselues which are in subiection to vs, may haue cause to esteeme of themselues and to reioyce and prayse God, ỹ wee behaue ourselues as brethren towardes them. And let such as are maisters thinke alwayes with themselues, This doth not take away nor abolish the spirituall kinred which God hath planted and stablished betweene the great and the small. But seeing hee vouchsafeth them the honour to be their father: it is good reason ỹ wee also should take them for our brethren, forasmuch as he hath chosen them as well as vs. That is the thing in effect which we haue to gather vpon this text.

And Dauid seemeth to haue had an eie to this Ceremonie in the fortith Psalm where he sayth, Sacrifice and oblation for sinne are not ỹ things Psal. 40. 7.

that thou Lorde requireſt: but thou haſt boared mine eare. As if hee ſhould ſay that God deſireth not ſacrifices at our handes, but would haue vs to be wholy his, and to bee wholly giuen vnto him, accordingly alſo as ỹ ſcripture exhorteth vs
2.Cor.6.20. not only to offer this thing or that thing to god, but alſo to offer him our bodies and ſoules, that he may poſſeſſe & enioy vs. When S. Paul ſheweth vs the ſeruice which he calleth reaſonable, Rom.12.1. he ſayth not, offer of your goods vnto God: but mortifie your ſelues as true ſacrifices. And therupon hauing mortified our humane reaſon, and all our thoughts and luſtes, let vs offer vp our ſelues (ſaith hee) as liuing ſacrifices to God. Neuertheleſſe Gods meaning is not to haue vs offer vp our ſelues as temporall ſacrifices, ſo as wee ſhoulde be willing to honour him to day, & forget him quite and cleane to morrowe: but he will haue vs to be his both in life and death, ac-
Rom.14.9. cordingly as it is ſaide in the xiiij. to the Romanes, that our Lorde Ieſus dyed & roſe again, to the ende that wee ſhould liue and dye to him. It ſeemeth then that Dauids ſpeaking of the boaring of his eare, was to ſhewe that our giuing of our ſelues to our God muſt not bee for a time, & then at the ende thereof to take our leaue of him: but that as wee haue liued in his obedience alreadie, ſo wee be readie to dye in the ſame, following his call vnto the ende, without ceaſſing or altering our purpoſe. We knowe then ỹ God requireth not ſacrifice, for ỹ chiefe thing ought to go before, and that is, to be wholly his.

Againe, when a man dedicateth himſelf vnto God, it is certaine that all that euer he hath doth followe him. But yet the offering vp of our ſelues muſt be all wholly, ſo as hee enioy both our bodies and our ſoules, and be glorified throughout by vs. And as touching this matter which wee treate of nowe preſently, it is to bee noted that god is not contented with our ſeruing of him for a time, as a number doe that make faire ſhewes at fittes, who thinke themſelues well diſcharged when they haue done a thing or twaine in ỹ honour of God, and therefore would exempt them ſelues from euer putting to their hand any more as long as they liue. Let vs beware wee deale not ſo: but rather as I haue tolde you alreadie, let euery of vs make his account, that in as much as God calleth vs to him, we muſt not ſhrink from him in the middes of our way: for this life is as a race wherein God intẽdeth to exerciſe vs. Therfore let vs keepe on our way, and indeuour to go forward to the ende. Let vs ſtraine our ſelues to continue, and let vs liue and dye in the obedience of him that hath purchaſed vs ſo deerely: & let vs holde out in his ſeruice vntill hee haue taken vs out of this worlde. After that ſort is it Gods meaning ỹ we ſhould haue our eares boared, ỹ we might be marked to be his ſeruaunts for euer, & not for a time. True it is alſo that God vſeth not any Aule to marke our eares withall: but he boareth vs inwardly. For ỹ bondage that Moſes ſpeakes of here was earthly, and ſerued for the ſtate of this world. But God will haue vs to ſerue him after another faſhion, namely by reducing all our thoughts & affections to the obeying of him. And how may that be done? For when hee ſpeaketh to vs, he ſpeaketh to deafe folke, ſo that the holy Ghoſt muſt be fain to boare our eares: & vntil we be touched after ỹ maner, & that god haue wrought in vs, we neuer wote what the ſeruing of him doth meane. Then let vs marke wel, ỹ God vſeth not ſuch a maner of marking as was vſed among the Iewes: but he will haue vs to bee in ſubiection to him. He taketh no Aule to boare vs through the eare, that ỹ mark might be ſeene to the worldward: but it behoueth vs to be framed by his holy ſpirite to giue our ſelues wholly vnto him, and we muſt feele his power within vs. That is the thing in effect which we haue to remember vpon this place.

Now let vs come to that which Moſes addeth, That the wages of a Seruaunt is dubble the wages of an hyreling. This ſentence is not vnderſtood of many men as it ſhould be. For they haue taken it, that the reward which was to be giuen to a bond man at his infraunchiſing, ought to be double ỹ wages of an hyreling, as though the ſeruant that tooke wages, had taken but three yeares wages. But that was nothing to the purpoſe. And the Iewes after their manner, haue inuented yet a more fooliſh gloſe, and vtterly corrupted the holy ſcripture, by mingling their own fancies therwith. For they ſaye, that a man ought not to eſteeme of his life aboue three yeares, and that if he attaine to ſixe yeares, it is as it were a double pay. This is much to the purpoſe, as who ſhould ſay I could warrant my ſelfe life til to morrowe, or as though I had my life in mine owne hand, to ſay, thou ſhalt liue til ſuch a time. Thus yee may ſee their beaſtlineſſe, howe there was neither feare of God, nor any right vnderſtanding in thoſe blinde wretches. And good reaſon is it that they which haue ſo forſaken the light of the worlde, ſhoulde become brutiſh after that faſhion, ſo that for all their reading and for all their hauing of the holy Scripture, yet doe they nothing elſe but bewray their own ignorance. And it is Gods iuſt puniſhment for their deſpiſing of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, whereby they haue cut themſelues off from him which is the very ſoule Col.2.17.
and guyde of the lawe. But the meaning of Moſes is large: namely, that it muſt not grieue a mã to giue liberally to his bondſeruaunt, when hee hath dwelt with him the ſpace of ſixe yeares.
For why? It is double the wages of a hyreling: as if hee ſhoulde ſay, hee deſerueth double wages in compariſon of a hyreling. Wee haue ſeene alreadie howe our Lorde hath forbidden men to ſende away their ſeruauntes emptie when they were ſet at libertie. Thou ſhalt rewarde him (ſayeth hee) according as the Lorde ſhall haue bleſſed thee. Looke into thy preſſes, looke into thy garners, looke into thy ſtalles: and according to thine abilitie giue thy ſeruant ſomewhat, that hee may fall to ſome trade, and not bee put quite and cleane out of heart. This wee haue ſeene alreadie. Now hereagainſt a man might reply: I had leauer then to entertaine a hyred ſeruaunt for wages. For if I take one for wages; hee ſhall ſerue mee but from day to day; and if hee ſerue mee well, I can keepe him ſtill:

or if hee ſerue mee amiſſe, I can ſend him away, and that were more for my profite. And therefore it ſeemeth preiudiciall to my right to giue rewarde nowe to a ſlaue. A man might alleage after that faſhion, as men are alwayes ſuttle in ſeeking of ſtarting holes. If the caſe concerne eyther their profite or their loſſe, they can bee brought to no vprightneſſe or reaſon. For this cauſe our Lorde ſaith here, Howe nowe? Thinke yee not that a ſlaue doeth, yea double the ſeruice of an hyred ſeruaunt? Yes: for if a man hyre a ſeruaunt for wages, if hee finde him not meate and drinke, hee muſt giue him ſo much the more money, that hee may finde himſelfe after his owne liking. And againe, if a man find him, hee will looke for a large pittance; and yet he will grudge at it and ſay; this is no fare meete for a man that takes wages. The man then that is hyred for wages, muſt bee maintained after a more courteous and liberal faſhion, than a ſlaue. Moreouer, when the hyred man hath done his dayes worke, hee is diſpatched, and he goes his way to bed till the next morning that hee come againe to his worke. But the ſlaue is in a harder caſe. For the ſimilitude which our Lord Ieſus maketh in Saint Luke, is taken of the cõmon faſhion that reigned in thoſe dayes. True it is that hee treateth of a farre greater matter, to ſhewe howe wee bee bounde vnto God. But yet doeth hee alleage this ſimilitude, ſaying: Behold, if one of you haue a bondſeruaunt, whome you ſende to labour in your vyneyarde or in your feelde, when this ſeruaunt commeth home at night ſtarke wearie of his labouring to doe you ſeruice; I aske you whether his maſter will ſaye to him, Come ſit thou downe thy turne, & take here my place, and I will ſerue thee. Nay, his maſter will ſay further to him, Sirrha, go fetch mee ſuch a thing, and goe doe ſuch a thing. And the ſeruaunt dares not bee ſo bolde as to replye, why ſo? I haue laboured in the feelde all day, and muſt I nowe take paynes ſtil when I am come home at night? Yee ſee then to what purpoſe it is ſayde nowe that the rewarde of a ſlaue is double.

Againe, the ſeruaunt that is hyred by the day hath more eaſe and priuiledge: inſomuch that if hee bee ill delt with, hee may goe his way. But the poore bondſlaue is tyed, ſo as hee muſt bee faine to ſerue his maſter day and night, & there is no regarde had of giuing him any thing for his labour, but ſo hee be founde neuer ſo meanly it is welynough. To bee ſhort it is ſhewed vs heere, that wee ought alwaies to haue conſideration of the profite that redoundeth to vs by ſuch as haue doone vs ſeruice. And although there were no Lawe to compell vs to the diſchardging of our dueties, yet ought it to bee printed in our heartes, and euery man ought to haue a conſcience for the lawes ſake, which telleth vs that wee ought not to deale churliſhly with our ſeruants. For if a man flatter himſelfe, he is neuer the more diſcharged before God, but he muſt be faine to come to account. And thoſe which as now do vaunt themſelues becauſe they haue gotten ſome ſuperioritie aboue others, ſhal in the end finde that Gods will was there ſhould haue bin ſome equalitie betwixt them, as S. Paul ſpeaketh therof. For he vſeth the ſelſſame terme when he cõmandeth maſters to beare with their ſeruants, & to ſpare them. Let there be an equalitie betwixt you ſaith he. As how? Is it meet that the ſeruant ſhould be chekmate with his maſter? No, but S. Paul would there ſhould be an anſwerable vprightnes, ſo that as the maſter can well skill to take the labour & trauell of his ſeruaunt vnder pretence that he may ſay, He is mine vnderling, I may command him what I liſt: ſo muſt he alſo conſider the mutuall bonde that ought to be betweene one & another of vs, that he on his own ſide do anſwere & acknowledge, Go to, I am his maſter, but not to vſe tyrannye; I am his maſter, howbeit in ſuch ſort as I am alſo his brother; I am his maſter, but yet is there one cõmon maſter in heauen, which hath authoritie both ouer mee & ouer them that are vnder mee: & in that behalfe we be all but one houſholde. And ſeeing that God hath called vs all into his houſe, it behoueth both great & ſmall to acknowledge one another for their brethren, for as much as God hath done vs ỹ honor to adopt vs to be his children; let not the great ones which haue ſuperioritie vſe any lordlines in reigning after their own will, but let them gouerne their ſubiectes as their houſhold with all gentlenes & curteſie, in ſuch ſort as God who is the father of all, may haue higheſt preheminence, & be honored as he deſerueth. Thus ye ſee in effect, ỹ the thing which we haue to marke in this ſentence, is that euery of vs ſhould look to himſelf, & yeeld them right which are not able to demaund it, but are after ſuch a ſort in our ſubiection, as they cannot open their mouthes to complaine of vs. Let vs not tarie til their complaint & crye mount vp to heauen; but let vs preuent that, & let vs of our ſelues be inclyned to pitie & gentlenes. That is ỹ thing which our Lord aimed at in this ſentence.

Eph.6.9.& Col.4.1.

Now he addeth a promiſe vnto it, to the ende we ſhoulde bee the better prouoked to doe that which hee biddeth vs. For although wee feele our ſlackeneſſe in doing our duetie to bee ſuch, as our owne conſcience findeth fault with it: yet doeth ſelfe profite ſo blinde vs and beſot vs, that wee cannot bee wunne to open our purſes, and to giue liberally of the things which ſeeme to belong vnto vs. Now then, God perceiuing vs to be ſo wedded to our owne profit, that a man can not wring any thing from vs, but by maine force: addeth here, that if wee vſe liberalitie towardes thoſe ỹ are vnder vs, he on his ſide wil bleſſe vs, & increaſe vs t he more for it. Surely, if there were any faith or rightbeleefe in ỹ world, ſhoulde not this promiſe inflame vs, & moue vs to pitie and compaſſion towardes thoſe that are in diſtreſſe, to ſuccour them and to helpe them? And although that mention bee made here peculiarly of bondſeruauntes; and that God commaund ſome rewarde to bee giuen vnto them: Yet is it a generall lawe of courteous liberalitie. Seeing it is ſo, let vs marke, that if wee ſtraine our ſelues to doe good to ſuch as are in neede, wee ought to hope for Gods bleſſing, and that the more liberall men bee in ſuccouring their neighbours, the more will God ſhewe himſelfe liberall towardes them againe. And ſo farre off are they from diminiſhing theſelues by their giuing to the needy; that it is as the opening of a windowe for Gods grace to raine in at, to the greater increaſe of their wealth. That is the cauſe why I ſayd, that if there were but one drop of fayth among vs, wee would be inflamed after another faſhion to do good. But wee be locked vp, and euery man withholdeth that which hee hath; inſomuch ỹ when we ſhould giue, we think the earth muſt needes faile vs. Wherby we ſhew ourſelues to haue no truſt in God. So then, let vs marke well this text, wherein our Lord to ſoften our hard hearts and to induce vs to compaſſion, ſayth that according to our pitying of the poore and needie, by releeuing their neceſſities: he alſo on his ſide will haue regarde thereof, & multiply vs a hundredfolde more by his bleſſing, than euer we could haue increaſed ourſelues by our owne couetouſnes & nigardſhip. Inſomuch ỹ we ſhall ſet open a windowe (as I ſayd afore) for Gods grace ỹ is offered vs, if we ſuccour thoſe ỹ haue neede of our helpe. That is ỹ thing which wee haue to conſider as in reſpect of the promiſe which God addeth heere.

Nowe afterwarde followeth the Lawe of the firſt borne, wherein it is ſayd, That all the firſtborn Males ſhalbe offered vnto God, and that they ſhalbe offered euerie yeere, in the place which the Lorde ſhall haue choſen, ſo they be not faulty, nor in any wiſe blemiſhed. As for example, if a beaſt were goggle eied, or blinde, or lame, or had any other ilfauorednes or blemiſh in it: it might not be offered; but the beaſts ỹ were ſounde, were to be offered in ỹ temple, as God had cõmanded to bring them to the place ỹ he had choſen, according to that which hath bin tolde you heretofore. We know where- Exod. 13.12 & 13.2. of this Lawe of offering vp the firſtborne thinges ſprang, namely of Gods ſleaing of al ỹ firſtborne of the land of Egypt, as well of men as of beaſtes at ſuch time as he was about to deliuer his people out of the bondage of Egypt, & of his ſparing of the children of Iſrael; for the bloud of the paſcall Lamb was dipped vpõ their dores, & ỹ was done for their preſeruation. Now our Lords will was ỹ the firſtborne ſhould be offered vp to him in acknowledgement of ỹ great benefite. For ſeeing ỹ ſo great a miracle had bin wrought for thẽ, it behoued them to honor God for it, & to be alwaies the more moued to magnifie his grace. But wee ſee how forgetfull we are in ỹ behalfe: inſomuch that if God haue done vs any good turn, in deed we can ſpeake of it & tell it forth with voyce loud ynough for a litle while: but by & by it ſlippeth frõ vs, & we thinke no more of it. But gods powring out of his gratious goodnes towards vs, is to the end ỹ we ſhould mind it continually & beare it in remẽbrãce euer after. Therfore is it requiſite ỹ we ſhould be warned & put in mind of ỹ things which we would elſe forget. Euen ſo ſtoode ỹ caſe as in reſpect of the offering of the firſtborne. For Gods will was ỹ it ſhoulde be a memoriall of the ſayd benefite, ſo as it might neuer bee forgotten. And heereby let vs marke, that although wee haue not the like ceremonies among vs: yet doth God ſtill exhorte vs to bee mindefull of the benefites that we haue receiued at his hande. And the excellenter that his gratious dooinges are, the more ought we to be moued by them to exalt them, yea and to deale in ſuch wiſe that euen when wee be dead and gone, our children may continue in doing the like. Thus ye ſee what we haue to remẽber concerning the order that was ſet downe for the offering vp of the firſt borne thinges.

It had bin ynough to haue ſpoken of it once: and why then doth God repeate it againe, but by reaſon of mens vnthankefulnes? And this concerneth not the Iewes onely, but alſo vs. Wherefore let vs conſider, that whereas God telleth vs that we ought to be mindfull of ỹ benefits which we haue receiued at his hand, yet we ceaſe not to turne our backes, and to ſhut our eyes ỹ we might not ſee; and if we be driuẽ to remẽber them whether we will or no, yet are we too too laſie in doing it. Conſidering then the naughtineſſe ỹ is in vs, inſomuch that God hath no ſooner turned his hande, but that we haue by & by forgotten what he hath done for vs; or at leaſtwiſe whereas hee woulde that the remembraunce of his benefites ſhould be printed in our heartes, we thinke it ynough to haue borne them in minde a day or twayn: Let vs accuſtome our ſelues to the mindfulneſſe of them, and conſider that wee muſt not only blame the Iewes for their vnthankefulneſſe, but alſo remember that we ourſelues are of nature like vnto them.

Moreouer whereas it is ſayde that the firſt borne thinges which are to be offered, muſt bee ſounde and without blemiſh: hereby we ſee how men wold faine beguyle God with their byſhifts. For they would haue picked the faultieſt of their firſtborne thinges to haue offered vnto God, and they would haue thought with themſelues, well, this ſhall be ſet out to doe ſeruice withall in the Temple; for it will doe mee no ſeruice: yonder beaſt doth but pine away, well, he muſt ſerue for ſacrifice. This were a playne mocking of God: and yet was it a common thing among the Iewes. But let vs come to our ſelues: there is none of vs all but he findeth himſelfe ſo ill minded, as to defraude God continually of ſomewhat that belongeth vnto him. For, (to let paſſe the ceremonie of offering the firſtborne thinges) God requireth that euerie of vs ſhould offer vppe our ſelues vnto him; and it is good reaſon that wee ſhoulde doe ſo: for he hath redeemed vs from Hebr. 2, 14. thebondage of death. Wee were by nature the bondeſlaues of Sathan, and beholde, GOD hath made vs his owne children: therefore is it verie meete, that wee ſhoulde doe him homage with our perſons. And as touching our ſoules, wee knowe that the ſonne of GOD ſpared not himſelfe for the redeeming of them. And as for our bodies wee hope that they ſhall bee rayſed againe to his heauenly glorie. Is it not meete then that GOD ſhoulde haue the whole poſſeſſion of vs? But when it commeth to the offering vp of ourſelues to him, the world ſeeth ỹ wee goe to it like cripples and purblinde folke.

Who is he that commeth freely vnto God, and that suffereth himselfe to be vtterly cast down & to be stripped out of his sinful nature? Nay, if we goe towards God with the sight of one eye, with the sight of the other we are tied to the vanities of the worlde. If we lende him our eares a little while, by and by wee be listening to some other thing. If we haue any good thought tending towardes him, we be corrupted a thousande waies. Such are the sacrifices ỹ we offer vnto God, that is to wit sinfull sacrifices & full of corruption. To be short, howsoeuer the world go, God can haue no right at our handes. Cal he neuersomuch vpon vs, & be he neuer so importunate with vs, yet are we so hardharted, ỹ we will neuer yeeld him his due. Thus we see that although the ceremony of offering ỹ first borne as wel of cattell as of men, is taken away: yet this Law is not superfluous among Christians: but vnder the shadowes of Moseses lawe, God sheweth vs after what sort we should come vnto him nowadayes: that is to wit, not limping, nor as purblinde folke ranging here and there: but ỹ we should looke to the purging of the wicked affections that are in vs, so as wee may come to him sounde both in bodie & soule. True it is that doe what we can, it is not possible for vs to be without a great number of vices in vs: but yet must not those vices be nourished, neither must we flatter our selues. If any of vs feele anie imperfections in himselfe, he must mislike of it, and being sorie for it, wee must desire GOD to purge and clense vs from our sinnes, that we may be ridde from all the corruptions that hinder vs to become acceptable sacrifices vnto him. When we go that way to worke, that is to say, when euerie of vs fighteth against his owne sinnes by true repentance; although there be many things amisse in vs, yet will our Lorde receiue vs, and 1.Ioh 2.1.7. not shake vs off. For we knowe that the bloud of our Lorde Iesus Christ serueth to scoure out all our spottes. And that is the cause why it is sayd Hebr. 3.15. that our sacrifices are offered to God the father in his name. Seeing then that Iesus Christe is there aunswering for vs, although there be spots in vs, yet are they not imputed to vs. But yet must we on our side endeuour to amende them, and by that meane acknowledge the thing that is sayde heere, that is to wit; wee must not offer faultie sacrifices vnto God, nor resemble the hypocrites, which come to him for fashions sake, but in deede make none account of him: so as we should make a faire face of it to the worldeward, and in the meane while foster some secret poyson within, but that we come right foorth to our God as he commaundeth vs. Thus ye see in effect what we haue to remember vpon this sentence of Moseses, where hee speaketh of the firstborne.

Besides this, our Lords meaning was that the first borne should be valued at a summe of mony as well of the cattell as of other things: so as the thing that was alwayes aimed at, was the mindefulnesse of Gods benefites. But as concerning these things we will not enter into them as now; for this text requireth it not, neither doth ỹ time serue for it. It sufficeth vs in fewe words to know that our Lordes meaning heere, is that when we haue receiued any gratious good turne, or that he hath bestowed any benefit vpon vs, the remẽbrance ther eof should continue with vs, not for a day or two, but for euer: and that the fathers should tell their children the same, to the ende that he may be honored among vs for euermore. Finally let vs not offer beastes vnto him in sacrifice, as they did vnder the Lawe as appeareth by this figure: but let vs assure our selues that ỹ acceptable sacrifice which God requireth, is the offering of ourselues vnto him both in bodie and Rom.12.1.& soule, so as our whole seeking may be to be guy- 1.Cor.6.20. ded and gouerned altogether by his holy spirite, and that all that euer wee haue be dedicated to his seruice, and applyed to the vse which he hath shewed vs, that he may be glorified in all points.

Nowe let vs fall downe in the presence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs feele them better, and that seeing there is nothing in vs but all manner of frowardnesse & leaudnes, we may seeke to be renued in such sort, that as long as we liue in this mortal life, our whole seking may be to be guided to the happie ende which we looke for in heauẽ; and ỹ in the meane time we may liue after such a sorte in this worlde, as he may be glorified in vs, and that whẽ it shall please him to take vs hence, wee may yeelde our selues obediently into his handes, assuring ourselues ỹ sith he sheweth him selfe so gratious and liberall towardes vs, as to gouerne vs in this transitorie life, & of his goodnes giueth vs al things behouefull & necessary, wee neede not to doubt but that he will make vs to attaine to the perfection of the thinges which are nowe hidden, & which shall not bee opened vnto vs, vntill the comming of our Lorde Iesus Christ. That it may please him to graunt this grace not onely to vs, but also to all people and nations of the earth, &c.

On Tewsday the fifth of Nouember. 1555.

The XCvij. Sermon which is the first vpon the sixteenth Chapter.

THou shalt keepe the moneth of new fruites, that thou maiest keepe Passeouer to the Lorde th y God. For in the moneth of new fruites the Lorde thy God brought thee out of the Lande of Egypt.

2 And thou shalt sacrifice the Passeouer to the Lorde thy GOD, euen sheepe

Sheepe and Oxen, in the place which the Lorde thy GOD will chooſe to put his name therein.

3 Thou ſhalt eate no leauen breade in that feaſt: Seuen dayes ſhalt thou eate vnleauened bread, euen the bread, of ſorowe. For thou cameſt in haſte out of the Lande of Egypt: to the ende thou be mindefull of the day of thy departing out of the Lande of Egypt all the dayes of thy life.

4 And there ſhal no leauen be ſeene in thy houſe, during the ſeuen daies in all thy coaſtes. Alſo ye ſhall not leaue of the fleſhe that is ſacrificed from the euening of the former day till the next morning.

His preſent chapter treateth of the three feaſts which God ordeined among the Iewes: that is to wit, the feaſt of Eaſter or paſſouer, ỹ feaſt of Pentecoſt or Whitſontide, & the feaſt of Tabernacles or Tentes. Firſt hee treateth of the Paſſeouer, & God ordeineth that it ſhould be diligently obſerued: for it was a memorial of great importance, whereby the people were put in mind, how they had beene redeemed, & put in poſſeſſion of the inheritance that had bin promiſed vnto them. It was behoouefull that ỹ ſame ſhould be knowen: for it was the fundation of all the benefits which the Iewes had receiued at Gods hande, & which they looked for afterwarde. Without that, they had bin no people ſeparated & dedicated to god, neither had they had any hope of ſaluation: for the couenãt made with their fathers had bin diſſeated. Therefore is it not without cauſe, that God would haue that day kept holy, & with ſuch ceremonie. In like caſe was it with the feaſt of Tabernacles, as wee ſhall ſee heereafter. For it ſerued to put the Iewes in minde of their going out of Egypt, and that whereas they had dweſt long time in the wilderneſſe, without houſe or home, and yet God had euer preſerued them: it behooued them likewiſe to acknowledge ỹ ſame benefite. But we will treate of euery feaſt in his dewe order.

Preſently we haue to ſpeake of the paſſeouer. But before I go any further, we muſt marke alſo that God reſpected not only what he had done already; but alſo ment therewithall there ſhould be a figure of thinges to come, whereof we haue now the trueth & ſubſtance, ſince the time ỹ our lord Ieſus Chriſt hath bin diſcouered to ỹ world. That is the cauſe why S. Paul telleth ỹ Coloſſians, ỹ theſe thinges were but ſhadowes, ỹ body wherof is in Chriſt Ieſus. True it is ỹ he ſpeaketh not there expreſly of Eaſterday by name: but yet vnder the name of Sabbat, he comprehendeth all the feaſtes, & likewiſe al the Ceremonies that depended vpon thẽ. To be ſhort, God had a double reſpect in ordeining the day of the Paſſeouer. The one was to do the people of Iſrael to vnderſtand, ỹ they came not into poſſeſſion of ỹ Land of Chanaan by their own power: but ỹ they had bin led in thither by the hande of God. And becauſe they had bin deliuered by miracle out of ỹ land of Egypt; Gods wil was ỹ the ſame ſhould be declared. Againe, foraſmuch as the ſame deliuerance was a figure of the deliueraunce ỹ was to be hoped for by our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt: this feaſt of Paſſeouer extẽded yet further, ỹ is to wit, ỹ whẽ the people ate of the paſcal Lamb (as they called it) they ſhould thinke thus with thẽſelues: This is a ſhadow & figure of the Sacrifice which ſhalbe once offered vp, wherby the world ſhalbe reconciled & ſet free. And although the thing were not yet apparant to the eye. Yet behoueth it the faithfull to inure thẽſelues to the hope of the redeemer whõ God had promiſed them. And in that reſpect ſayth S. Paul in the firſt to ỹ Corinthians, ỹ Ieſus Chriſt is our Paſſeouer or Paſcall Lambe, and ỹ he is ſacrificed for vs, and that we muſt now eate of that ſacrifice: howbeit not with the leauen of malice and deceitefulnes, but with righteouſneſſe and ſoundneſſe. That is the one point which we haue to remember. 1. Cor. 5. 7.

And that the Paſcall Lamb was not a bare ceremonie without doctrine, it appeareth by that which is written in ỹ twelfth of Exodus; where it is ſaid, ỹ when the Lamb is ſacrificed as it is a eating, if their childrẽ aske what it meaneth: their fathers ſhall anſwere, The Lorde brought vs out of the land of Egypt where we were in bondage, & therfore he wil haue this thing done yerely in remẽbrance thereof: not ỹ the doing thereof one only day may diſcharge vs: but ỹ the ſame ſhould continue printed in our hearts, ſo as in inioying the land of Chanaan, we may vnderſtand ỹ wee cõquered it not by our own ſtrẽgth, but through his good pleaſure, becauſe it was his will to harbour vs here, according to ỹ promiſe which hee had made to our forefathers. We ſee then howe the feaſt of Paſſeouer, was not a ceremony without inſtruction: but ỹ it conteined doctrine in it. And it is an article of great importance. For the world would alwaies haue a great number of ceremonies to no purpoſe: & in the meane while it ſeemes ynough to haue ſtore of gay ſhowes. But on ỹ cõtrary part, God telleth vs, ỹ ceremonies are but toyes & trifles, vnleſſe they leade vs further, & behight vs things cõcerning our ſaluatiõ, ſo as we be taught & cõfirmed in the faith by meanes of them. If ỹ be not in thẽ, they be ſtarke baggage, & nothing worth. Nay, they be nothing els than a corrupting of ỹ ſeruice of God, and the high way to lead vs to ſuperſtition and ydolatry. Exod. 12. 26 Col. 2. 17.

As

As for example, wee ſee howe they make a great number of diſguiſinges in the Popedome: but in the meane while they wote not what any of thoſe things meane. If ye come to their Maſſe, there they play an enterlude, where there are as many fonde toyes as can be. In deede the wretched worlde is rauiſhed at them: but that is becauſe they knowe nothing, but are vtterly ſotted, and yet they beare themſelues in hande that they haue done a dowtie deede, and ẏ God ought to like very well of it, when they haue ſo beſtirred themſelues. But (as I tolde you afore) they be but vaine & fonde Apiſh toyes. And why ſo? For God neuer ment to ordeine any ceremonie among his people, which conteined not ſome good inſtruction, and ſerued not to ſome good ende. And therefore lette vs marke well, that whereas the Iewes had ẏ feaſt of Paſſeouer, they had Gods worde alſo, whereby they were warranted ẏ it was not inuented at the pleaſure of men. For God not onely gaue a prefixed commandement as ſaying: You ſhall obſerue ſuch a day: but alſo a doctrine with it, & willed ẏ the fathers ſhould teach it their children, & put thē in remēbrance of the deliuerance ẏ had bin made, as in deede it was as excellent a deede as might be. That then was of his appointment.

And ſo let vs beare in minde, that if we nowadayes haue ceremonies without inſtruction, they ſhalbe all condemned of God, who vtterly miſliketh them, and we can not alleadge them to be his ſeruice. For he declareth and auoweth it to be but fooliſh ſuperſtition, when men turne away from that marke, and that it is the next way to put vs quite beſides our ſaluation. And herein we may defie all the houge heape of pompes wherewith the Papiſtes will needes ſerue GOD: for there is nothing in them that God auoweth. Alſo wee be warned to mingle nothing with the pure ſimplicitie of the Sacramentes and Ceremonies which GOD woulde haue to bee obſerued noweadayes. Let vs holde vs contented with that which is ſhewed vs: for if wee adde neuer ſo little to it, ſurely wee ſhall make ſuch a minglemangle as will bee nothing worth, after the mariner of the Papiſtes, who (as wee ſee) haue inuented many thinges of their own head. Wee muſt haue this and that, ſay they, Why ſo? To what purpoſe? O (ſay they) it will ſerue for ſuch a thing: but in the meane whyle there is no inſtruction to Godwarde. Is it their part to cauſe a doctrine to bee brought in? It were meete that God ſhould ſpeake. And when men heare him, then euery one ſhall be edified. But when men thruſt themſelues in, and fall to forging of fonde deuotions without authoritie from GOD: all muſt needes be caſt downe. The worlde ſees how the Papiſts haue corrupted the true Sacramentes. In Baptiſme, the water hath beene eſteemed as nothing in the Popedome: for it is no matter if the infantes piſſe in it. But as for the holy creame that is in it, O, it is not for any man to touch that: for that is too heauenly a thing. And yet notwithſtanding the water is the ſubſtance of that Sacramēt, and the whole perfection thereof. But as for the ceame, who deuiſed it? It is a ſtinking greace that men haue charmed, and blowed vpon, like ſorcerers. And ſhould that be had in ſuch reuerence, that the Sacrament which proceedeth from the ſonne of God, ſhoulde be had in no eſtimation for it? Moreouer, the water (by their reckening) is not good, vnleſſe it haue beene coniured, and that a number of charmes haue beene made ouer it, to amaze the ignorant. And therefore ſo much the better ought we to beare this leſſon in minde, that wee may be fenced againſt all Satans inuentions; which is, that ſith wee ſee our mindes ſo tickeliſh, that wee woulde faine ſtill inuent ſome newe thing, and we beare ourſelues in hande that wee haue ſpunne a faire threede, when ſome newe Ceremonie is come foorth by our meanes: it ſtandeth vs in hande to thinke thus, yea but GOD diſpiſeth all this geere, yea and he ſheweth vs that we do but peruert his ſeruice, when wee adde any thing after that faſhion, of our owne. Then is it an infallible doctrine that no Ceremonies are behoofeful or to be made account of among the faithful, vnleſſe they carry inſtruction with them. And that inſtruction muſt come of GOD: for it is his office to teach vs, hee reſerueth that authoritie to himſelfe. And therfore it is to be concluded, that the ceremonies which are ſet forth by men, are but trifles & geugawes, howe great a ſhow of wiſedome ſoeuer there ſeeme to be in them.

And hereby we ſee alſo that it was ſuperſtitiouſly done of ſuch as beare the name of Chriſtians, to bring in a feaſt of Paſſeouer vnder pretence that the Iewes had it: for the reſpectes are farre diuers. I meane not that we may not haue one day in the yeere, whereon to celebrate the remembraunce of the reſurrection of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt: for we muſt not runne ſo rigorouſly into extremities, as that our infirmitie might not haue ſome helpe, to quicken it vppe withall, that we might the better bethink vs all the time of our life, what benefit the ryſing againe of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt hath brought vnto vs. Well then may we haue a day appointed to that purpoſe for orders ſake: but to make a ſeruice of God thereof, or to thinke that we ought to faſhion ourſelues after the example of the Iewes; that as they had their paſſeouers, ſo ought we too: it were an abuſe that tendeth to the turning of all thinges vpſide downe, and a putting of a veyle before the face of Ieſus Chriſt, ẏ men might not know the light of the Goſpell. Theſe things (as I ſaide) were but ſhadowes, whereof we haue as now the body and ſubſtance: and therefore it is a hiding of Ieſus Chriſt, whē men bring in feaſts after the maner of the Iewes.

But nowe let vs come to that which is cōmanded here concerning the Eaſterday of the Iewes Ye ſhall eate vnleauened breade or cakes (ſayth he) by the ſpace of ſix dayes, and there ſhall no leauened bread be founde in your houſes. This was done becauſe the Iewes departed in haſt out of the Land of Egypt. And it ought to haue made them to think that they went not out with banners diſplayed, as though their enemies had ſtoode ſo in feare of thē ẏ they durſt not quetch againſt thē: for they went a way like a ſort of poore fugitiues. The women caried their children vpon their ſhoulders, the men tooke vp their ſtuffe in their neckes, and fled away priuily, and their enemies would faine haue purſewed them, & they were of ſtrength & power ynough to haue done it. The Iewes on the other ſide were a people ỹ could no skill to handle a ſworde: for they had bin helde in ſuch ſlauerie, ỹ they durſt not once looke vpon a ſworde or any weapon of warre. They had bin vſed like Aſſes and Oxen. Their ſtate had bin as ſlauiſhe as could bee. Well then; when the time came that they ſhould depart, it was ſayde vnto them, Exod.12.39 Get ye hence. And what bread ſhal wee haue to eat? What prouiſion ſhal there be by the way? Grinde your corne, and truſſe it vp quickely in meale vpon your ſhoulders, and as the time will ſerue ye ſhal bake it by the way and eate it. Now when the people had this ſolemnitie yeerely, wherein they ate cakes whithout leauen: it ſerued to put thẽ in minde, that when their fathers departed out of Egypt, they were a poore fugitiue people, that ranne away like a Lambe that is purſued by wolues. Ye ſee in what plight they were. Needes therefore muſt it bee concluded, that God had preſerued them after a wonderfull faſhion. For what were the Egyptians? A nation full of pride and crueltie. A mightie nation, a nation ỹ truſted to their owne force & power; & moreouer a nation ỹ bare deadly hatred to the poore Iewes, an vtter enemy to thẽ, & ſuch a one as deſired nothing ſo much as to roote out ỹ remembrance of them, as the tyranny of Pharao had well ſhewed. Now then the Iewes were put in minde ỹ God had made them to ſcape out of their enemies handes, ſo as they coulde not but knowe ỹ they had bin helped by him, & that the prayſe of their life was to bee yeelded vnto him. As if they ſhould ſay, Thou Lord haſt deliuered vs, not only from ỹ ſtate of bondage but alſo as it were by fetching vs out of our graues. For wee were as it were ſtarke dead, and had bin paſt all hope of recouery, if thou haddeſt not reached vs thy mightie arme. That was the thing wherof the Iewes were put in minde, when God commanded them to eate vnleauened bread. And it was his wil ỹ this ſhould be done, not only ỹ ſame night ỹ they ate the paſcall Lambe: but alſo that the ſame Ceremony ſhould be continued by the ſpace of ſix dayes together. And why? God ſhewed therein, ỹ men be not throughly framed at ỹ firſt brunt to the doctrine ỹ he ſetteth downe vnto them, though ỹ ſame be cleere ynough. Doth God ſpeake? There is no darkneſſe in his ſpeech. But yet howſoeuer the caſe ſtande, wee can not faſten vpon it. For we be ſo ſlowe minded, ỹ wee can neuer attaine to his meaning, vntill he haue repeated our leſſon to vs diuerſe times. That is the cauſe why hee commaunded expreſly that they ſhould eate vnleauened bread by the ſpace of ſixe dayes together. As if hee ſhoulde ſay, truely the very one nightes eating of the paſcall Lambe with vnleauened breade, ought to bee a ſufficient inſtruction to you what is ment by the ſame. But what? I ſee well yee be ſhortwitted, inſomuch that if yee haue hearde any thing at Gods mouth, yee forget it out of hande. And therefore when I intende to teach you, I muſt deale wᵗʰ you as it were by meaſure and compaſſe. And therefore if ye haue a good long time afore hande to bethinke ye of the eating of the paſcall Lambe, yee will be the better prepared vnto it. Therefore ſhall yee haue a whole weeke, wherein ye ſhall eate no leauened breade; by meanes whereof yee ſhalbe quickened vp to thinke vpon the great and ineſtimable benefit which God beſtowed vpon your fathers in deliuering them out of the Lande of Egypt, ſo as you may beare well in minde that his deliuering of them was after a ſtraunge manner; and that hee was faine to worke after a heauenly faſhion, becauſe ye were in ſo wretched plight, that yee might ſeeme to haue beene already ſwallowed vp of death, and to haue beene already buried in your graues. Nowe we ſee why the Iewes were expreſly commanded to abſteine from the eating of leauened bread.

There were other Ceremonies alſo; that is to wit, the girding vp of their garmentes, the put- Exod.12.11
ting on of their ſhooes, and the taking of their walking ſtaues in their handes. For in thoſe Eaſt countryes they ware long garmentes after the ſame manner that the Turkes doe at this day. And when they traueiled by the way, they truſſed vp their garments aboue their loynes, as the gray Fryers & Iacobines or white Fryers do, and ſuch other that are ſo greatly combered with clothes. Nowe God did the Iewes to vnderſtande that they ſhoulde bee as wayfarers when they ate the paſcall Lambe, and that they ſhould eate it in haſte, to put them in remembraunce of the ſayde departure out of Egypt. And our Lord did ſet downe this figure as a lookingglaſſe for the Iewes to beholde howe their forefathers ate the paſcall Lambe, euen when they were haſted to go their wayes, that they might acknowledge ſo great a benefit. And herein we ſee how God had a reſpect to the rudeneſſe of his people as in deede all the Ceremonies which wee haue ſerue but for our infirmitie. What doth Baptiſm or the Lordes Supper bring vs? Doe they make the death & paſſion of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt of more value than it is of it ſelfe? What helpe find we in the bread, or in the wine, or in the water, to that purpoſe? Gods meaning then was not to ad any thing to ỹ which we haue receiued in our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: but to beare with our rudenes becauſe he ſees vs to be vnable to comprehende the thinges that are gotten for vs by our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. For inaſmuch as they bee too high for vs, God helpeth vs vp to thẽ by the outwarde & viſible ſignes which we haue in ỹ Sacraments. But it behoued the Iewes to haue mo ſuch helps than we. For they had not ſo plaine a doctrine as is now conteined in ỹ Goſpel. Again, Ieſus Chriſt was not yet come, in whom we ſee all ỹ euer can be wiſhed for our ſaluation. The heauens were then opened vnto vs, when his ſide was opened Col.1.22 to waſhe vs cleane, and his body offered vp for a ſufficient ſacrifice to reconcile vs vnto God his father, and to doe away all our offences and tranſgreſſions. When theſe thinges were done, then had we a full warrant of our ſaluatiō. Therfore wee in theſe dayes neede not to be helped with ſo houge a heape of Ceremonies as the ancient fathers vnder the Lawe were. It is ynough that we be ledde to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, whervnto fewe ſignes ſuffice, that is to wit Baptiſme and the Lordes Supper. For ſeeing that the ſonne of God is contented with thoſe two: we alſo ought to reſt there. Neuertheleſſe, wee ſee heere howe God vouchſafed to ſtoope to the infirmitie of his people, by giuing them a liuely repreſentation of their departing out of the Land of Egypt, and by ſetting them downe as it were in a lookingglaſſe or painted table, for them to beholde howe he had deliuered them: that is to wit, like a ſort of poore people, that were taking their iourney to flee away priuily, and were ſo diſtreſſed as it was not for them to turne heade againſt ſo mightie enemies, who were able to haue ſwallowed thē vp at the firſt chop without any reſiſtance. Seeing then that the Iewes had ſuch inſtruction; they ſhoulde haue conſidered thus with themſelues: How commeth it to paſſe that we be aliue at this day, but becauſe our God hath preſerued vs? And how ſhold our ſtate ſtand but onely by his meere mercy? For we had periſhed if he had not reached out his arme to bring vs out of the Land of Egypt. Thus much concerning this point.

Nowe it was commaunded further, that the paſcall Lamb ſhould be eaten with bitter herbes. Exod.12.8. And our Lorde himſelfe ſpeaketh here expreſly of the bread of ſorrow: as if he had ſaid, although ye eate the paſcall Lambe in reſt, and when yee be come to the inioying of the inheritance which I haue promiſed you: yet muſt you haue a memoriall of the anguiſh wherein your forefathers were, and you muſt thinke ẏ without my fauour you ſhould haue had neither paſcall Lambe nor bit of bread to eat at this day: for ye ſhould haue beene vtterly rooted out of the worlde. Conſider it therefore, and that yee may be the better moued thereunto, take bitter herbes, that is to ſay, abſteine from all deintineſſe in your eating of the paſcall Lambe. For the Iewes were not reſtreined from taking their repaſt after their eating of the paſcall Lambe, as wee ſee that our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt in eating of the Paſcall Lamb with his diſciples, inſomuch as they did not only ſit downe at a table, but alſo lye downe after the manner of olde time, which was to eate their meales lying halfe a tone ſide. Certaine it is that Gal.4.4.5. he kept the Lawe to the vttermoſt: for hee ſubmitted himſelfe to it to ſet vs free from it. Then muſt we note that our Lord ate the paſcall Lamb after the ſame maner that was ordeined by Moſes, that is to wit, ſtanding vpon his feete, with his ſtaffe in his hande, and his ſhoes on his feete, and hauing his loynes girded vp like a wayfarer. And after this was done hee tooke his accuſtomed repaſt, for this was a ſolemne ſacrifice, and therefore wee muſt not wonder that it was ſeparated from the common meates: for it behoued all the folke of one houſe to eate thereof, ſo as if there were thirtie or fortie perſons in a houſe, euery man hadde his portion of it. And if the houſholde were not great ynough, two or three houſholdes were called together and they mette in one place, that the ſacrifice might be eaten vp haſtily. A Lambe was roaſted in haſt and eaten vp with a morſell of a ſweete cake: yea and they were forbidden to ſeeth it, to ſhewe that they could haue no leaſure to tarrie till it were halfe boyled, but they were faine to deuour it haſtily, life folke that were to go their waies out of hand. But howſoeuer the caſe ſtoode, it behoued them to eat it with bitter herbs. Whereby we be done to vnderſtande, that deinties doe keepe vs from the dewe conſideration of Gods benefites, to be rauiſhed by them. For although it bee ſayde, Thou ſhalt be merrie before thy God: yet are we continually helde backe in this worlde, when we haue ſome allurement to withdrawe vs frō God. For if our fleſhe haue her likinges, then are wee ouertaken in ſuch ſorte, that we ſtye not vp aloft to beholde well the ſpiritual grace of God. Thus yee ſee that the cauſe why the bitter herbes were put to the ſacrifice, was to make men to conſider the better after what manner the people hadde beene deliuered, beeing erſt in ſo extreeme anguiſh as they were not able to endure any more. Deut.12.12.

Beſides this, they were alſo forebidden to admit any heathen man to it, vnleſſe hee were circumciſed. True it is that God commanded that the bondmen being ſtraungers borne ſhould eate thereof. Yea, but that was not before they were firſt incorporated into his Church by receiuing the ſigne of circumciſion. Hereby it is done vs to vnderſtande, that it was a peculiar token giuen of God to his owne people. For Sacraments are peculiar to the Church. They be no things for men to put to vnholy vſes, nor to leaue at aladuenture. For our Lorde will haue vs to bee gathered together vnder his name. When we vſe the Sacramentes, let vs thinke thus with our ſelues, Beholde here is a treaſure that God hath kept and layde vp for vs as for his children. And in deede, if a man ſhould noweadayes admitte as many to the Lordes Supper as woulde offer to come to it: were it not a defiling of the Sacrament? And yet there are a number to be ſeene, which would haue al men indifferently both tag and ragge to be admitted to it: but ſuch folkes neuer wiſt yet howe to vſe the Sacramentes aright. For (as ſhall be declared hereafter) the Supper of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt is to vs at this day the ſame that the Paſcall Lambe was, to the people of the Iewes. Wherefore let vs marke in fewe wordes, howe our Lorde hath ſhewed that this Sacrament was a warrant giuen of him to his people, that he took thē to be his Church, and therefore that it ought not to bee ſet foorth at aduenture to all commers. True it is that Circumciſion likewiſe was a Sacrament: but there was diuerſitie of reſpectes betweene the one and the other. For by circumciſion, folke were receiued into the number of Gods people, ſo as it was an enterāce into the Church as Baptiſme is at this day: by meanes whereof ſuch as by nature are not nōbered in ẏ cōpany of Gods children, are receiued and incorporated into thē by Baptiſme. And ſo ſtoode the caſe with ẏ Iewes for circumciſion: But as for the Paſcall Lambe, that was to be kept to the Iewes themſelues. Exod.12.43 44.48.

Nowe

Now it is also sayde, that it was not to bee eaten throughout the whole Countrey; but that it was to bee doone in the place which the Lorde had chosen to put his name in. And truely this was not shewed them at the first day, insomuch that they had beene a long time in the land of Chanaan, eare the Arke had any certaine resting place, there was no such place assigned to it. But yet it behoued them alwaies to be obedient to the ceremonie of resorting to ỹ place where the Arke was, vntil mount Sion was marked out. And then were al men bound to repaire thither, euen from the vttermost borders of the Countrey: all men were to come to Ierusalem, except they were letted by sickneſſe or old age. And why? It was not to giue a president for the Pilgrimages which ỹ Papists inuented afterward: For in so doing they shewed themselues to differ nothing at all from the Iewes. Againe, it is not for them to excuse themselues by the example of the Iewes: for ỹ Iewes had a commaundement of God, but the Papistes made their vagaries for their own pleasure: wherin they vtterly renounced Iesus Christ & ouerthrew that which is sayd in the fourth of S. Iohn, namely that ỹ time was come ỹ god wold no more be worshipped in any place certain, but would haue his name called vpon euery where throughout ỹ whole world. Besides this, we must marke that there was a speciall reason why God would haue the Iewes to resorte to Ierusalem to sacrifice the pascall Lambe there: namely to the end ỹ no man should attempt to alter any thing in ỹ order which he had set by the Law. And (as I haue said) this ancient ceremonie was a thing of great importance, as wherby the people were informed of their Redeemer, euen that he had brought them out of the land of Egypt, & that he would send thẽ yet another redeemer, by whom the whole world should be redeemed. Loe heere a ceremonie that imported a wonderfull secret, & therfore it was meete ỹ it should be kept purely. For the doing wherof, god called al the Iewes into one body, ỹ hauing ỹ Sãctuary & the temple there before their eyes, they might be the better put in mind ỹ it was not lawfull for them to adde any thing at their owne pleasure, but that it behoued them to follow ỹ commõ doctrine, to vnderstand ỹ God represented himselfe there, and dwelt among thẽ by meanes of the Arke. Seeing then that the people were so gathered together, they could not but be restrained frõ starting out into foolish inuentions: and needes must the doctrine be retained therwithal, as I haue said afore: for ỹ ceremonie was nothing of it selfe, it had bin but as a Maygame or a mockerie. That was ỹ cause why ỹ people were drawẽ to Ierusalẽ, as to ỹ place which God had appointed. And so we see now why it was said ỹ they shoulde not do sacrifice in any of their cities or townes, but assemble al together in the Citie of Ierusalem.

Deut. 12. 11.

It is inioyned further, that they shoulde not breake a bone of the Pascal Lamb. And why so? As if it were said ỹ it was a meate to bee eaten in haſt, (as I haue shewed afore,) so as they were forbiddẽ to boile any part of it. And hereby God ment to shew yet better ỹ haſt which the people made in departing out of ỹ land of Egypt, forsomuch as it was not for them to set the pot vpon ỹ fire to boile it: for they could neuer haue had time to do it. Therfore were they faine to make haſt, & to eate this Lamb halfe rosted as people preassed vpon by their enemies, & as folke ỹ looked to haue bin ouertaken euery minute of an houre: by reason whereof they had no leasure to stand gnawing of ỹ bones, or to breake them to get out ỹ marow, as folk do when they haue time at wil. None of this could they do: but were faine to eate ỹ sacrifice in haſt, & to cast away ỹ rest. We see then as nowe, ỹ as concerning ỹ deliuerance ỹ had bin wrought alreadie, things were as it were pointed out with ỹ finger in the Pascall Lamb: & for this cause ỹ very terme it self is expressed here, for ỹ Hebrew word Passah is the same ỹ we call Passing in Inglish. And by ỹ word our Lord confirmed ỹ thing which we haue spoken of before, namely ỹ this Ceremonie was not a fond deuise to busie mens heades withall as though they were little babes: but ỹ it importeth instruction to edifie folk withall, to the end they should think thus: This day must we do homage to our God for our life, bicause he preserued vs of his owne mere infinite goodnes, by bringing vs out of ỹ land of Egypt. So then God spake not simply of ỹ thing ỹ were to be obserued: but his meaning was to shew the end in such wise which he intended, as ỹ people might cõsider, we haue made a Passage: & what maner of Passage? Euen such a one as we had no legs to go it withall, but God did lift vs vp by his power, and made vs to passe ouer it as a gulf of death, not onely in passing ỹ red sea, but also whẽ we were yet in Egypt. For before we came at the red sea, there was another straite to passe, which wee shoulde neuer haue scaped out at, if God had not opened vs ỹ way with his owne hand. Yea & his will was that that day should be obserued, to the intent that the remembrance therof should be ỹ certainer.

And for the same cause he poynted out the moneth ỹ answereth to March or April. Howbeit not to eyther of them, but bicause wee cannot make a certaine report of ỹ monethes of the Iewes to cõpare them w ours. The reason wherof is, for ỹ they had their moneths intermingled one with another, bicause they tooke them according to ỹ Moone, so as they were interlaced together. This moneth therefore was sometime sooner and sometime later, & was named in hebrew Abib, which signifieth an eare of corne, when it beginneth to shoote foorth at the first. Not when the eares of Corne are full ripe: but when the corne beginneth newly to spindle. In deede the time of it selfe importeth nothing: but yet did it serue greatly to the instructing of the people, bicause the setting of it down made them to behold the matter the more presently. Gods putting of thẽ in remembrance of it was such as they could not but know ỹ meane wherby their fathers were brought out of the land of Egypt. And the very night it selfe was marked, to ỹ end they shold cõsider how god had deliuered them from the thraldom of Pharao. On the other side, had the moneth been marked at the pleasure of men: they wold haue thought it might wel haue beene chaunged for the commoditie of the people. But God commaunded it to be kept, to the end they ſhould know he would haue no part of his ordinance chaunged, nor any man attempt to alter it in any wiſe.

And nowe we haue to marke in effect, that by the ordeining of ỹ Paſſeouer day, God ment to ſet downe a memorial of his doinges among his people, that they might acknowledge his grace, in deliuering them out of the Land of Egypt after that faſhion, and that their children myght know that that was the meanes whereby they were come into the inheritance that had beene promiſed them. Neuertheleſſe, it was not Gods intent to be honoured and ſerued with a trifling Ceremonie: but his mind was that there ſhould be teaching, that men might be edified by it, and that the Iewes might know that Gods calling of them to him, was to bee ſerued by them as their redeemer and father. And therefore he would not haue the Paſcall Lamb eaten by vnholy and vnbeleeuing folke: but that it ſhould bee giuen alonly to ſuch as were circumciſed, and were already of the body of the Church. And ſeeing it is ſo, Let vs remember that in all ſignes which God giueth vs, we muſt haue inſtructiō annexed to lead vs vnto him. And for as much as we haue the true paſſeouer in our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, as ſhall bee declared to morrow: wee muſt nowadayes ſtep further. And although we haue not the old Ceremonie; yet let vs hold faſt the truth therof, which is brought vs by the ſonne of God, as it is declared vnto vs in theſe dayes by his Goſpell.

Now let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgmēt of our ſins, praying him to make vs to perceiue in what ſtate we were, when he vouchſafed to call vs to him, ſo as he hath plucked vs out of the gulfe of death, in ſuch ſort as we haue now cauſe to glorifie him, and to giue our ſelues ouer to his ſeruice all the time of our life. And for as much as he not only ſheweth himſelfe to be our father and ſauiour in this tranſitory life, but alſo calleth vs to the euerlaſting inheritance of heauen; according as hee had choſen vs thereto before the creation of the world: let vs tend alwayes thitherward, and bee the more prouoked to labour to that end, ſeeing we haue the helpes and Remedies which he giueth vs, and that the badge is kept among vs as he hath commaunded vs by his word. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace not only to vs, but alſo to all people & nations of ỹ earth, &c.

On Wedneſday the vj. of Nouember. 1555.

The XCviij. Sermon which is the ſecond vpon the ſixteenth Chapter.

2,3.4 And thou ſhalt ſacrifice &c.

5 Thou maiſt not ſacrifice the Paſſeouer within any of ỹ gates which the Lord thy God giueth thee:

6 But in the place which the Lord thy God wil chooſe to ſet his name in, there ſhalt thou offer the Paſſeouer at euen, about the going downe of the Sunne, iuſt at the time that thou wenteſt out of Egypt.

7 And thou ſhalt roaſt it, and eate it in the place which the Lord thy God ſhall haue choſen for himſelfe. And the next morning thou ſhalt returne from thence and goe home to thy Tentes.

8 Six dayes ſhalt thou eate vnleauened breade: and on the ſeuenth day which is the ſolemne feaſt of the Lord thy God, thou ſhalt doe no manner of worke.

IT was declared yeſterday, how ỹ by keeping ỹ feaſt of the paſſeouer, the Iewes were put in minde of the deliueraunce of their forefathers made by God. And I toulde you howe it was to double ende. For GODS will was to put his people in remembraunce of the fauour which he had ſhewed to them alreadie: and againe, he ment to leade them to the hope of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. It was then but a temporall deliuerance, which God had made of them out of the land of Egypt: but when he ſent his onely ſonne, thē deliuered he his people out of a farre worſe bondage than that which we haue ſpoken of. And therfore let vs mark ỹ the Paſcall Lamb was a figure of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt: which thing S. Paule witneſſeth in expreſſe words, ſaying: Chriſt our Paſſeouer is offered vp. Alſo we knowe the ſentence that is alleaged out of the twelfth of Exodus by S. Iohn, where it is ſaid; Ye ſhal not breake a bone of him. For there he declareth how they came to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt to haue broken his bones after the accuſtomed manner, and found him alreadie dead. And that came to paſſe by the wonderfull prouidence of God, whoſe will it was that the thing which had beene figured in the Paſcall Lambe, ſhould bee layde open to mens eyes in Ieſus Chriſt. And ſo Saint Iohn applyeth this ſentence to the

1.Cor. 5.7.

Iohn 19.36 & Exod. 12. 46.

the perſon of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, in ſaying, it is written, Yee ſhall not breake a bone of him. Yea, but God ſpeaketh but onely of the Paſcall Lambe which was offered in thoſe dayes. Yet notwithſtanding his intent was to ſhew, ỹ there was an agreement betweene Chriſt & the Paſſeouer, and that in that viſible ſacrament he ment to foreſhewe the redemption that was not yet ſeene, and that all this was fully accompliſhed in our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. True it is that the Iewes haue not profited by this admonition: for they were the more inhardened by it. But let vs on our ſide learne to referre the thinges that were done by our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, to the things that were forefigured in the lawe, & wee ſhall profit greatly by that meane. For it is not ynough for vs to knowe the ſtorie of the death and Paſſion of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt; but the chiefe point is to reſort to the vſe and fruite of it. And that is much the better attayned vnto, by conſidering the auncient figures. Now it is ſayd, ỹ the Paſcall Lambe was offered vp, to the end that the houſes which were marked with the bloud thereof, Exod.12.13 ſhould bee ſpared of God. For an Angel paſſed ſwiftly through the land of Egypt, and ſlew al the firſt borne both of man and beaſt. There was but one reſeruation, namely the ſacrificing of the Lamb, & looke what doore of a houſe was dipped with the bloud thereof, that houſe did the Lords Angel paſſe ouer. The onely ſafetie then which we haue, when God vttereth his wrath and vengeance through the whole world, is to beare the mark of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. For inaſmuch as he was ſacrificed for vs, & we bee beſprinkled ẇ his bloud, God acknowledgeth vs for his own, & vpon ſpeciall priuiledge withdraweth his hand from vs, ſo as we bee not compriſed nor incloſed vnder the common curſe of ỹ whole world. For ỹ land of Egypt was at that time as an image of all mankind. And in deede, we be al accurſed by nature: Eph.2.3. & good reaſon it is that God as a iuſt Iudge ſhould execute his vengeance vpon vs. But here the faithfull are diſperſed and mingled with the faithleſſe. And how then are they diſcerned aſunder, ſeeing they dwel together? God can well ynough skill to diſcerne the marke of his ſonne. True it is ỹ the ſtate of our life may well be like ỹ ſtate of the faithleſſe and the deſpiſers of God. But yet howſoeuer we fare, our Lord gathereth vs continually to himſelf. Inſomuch that if we be of his flock, he wilbe merciful to vs euẽ to ỹ end, conditionally alſo ỹ wee beare the bloud of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt for our badge. At ỹ time the doores of their houſes were ſprinkled ẇ a branch Exod.12.22 of Hyſop: but as now our beſprinkling muſt bee 1.Pet.1.2. ſpiritual, as S. Peter telleth vs. Would we then ỹ God ſhould take vs to mercie, when his hand is ſtretched out to puniſh all the world? Let vs vnderſtand ỹ there is no other meane for vs to bee marked by our lord Ieſus chriſt, than only ỹ holy Ghoſt. For his blood is not now a ſhedding, that we might make an outward and viſible ſprinkling of our ſelues with it: but hee hath ſhead it for vs in ſpirite (as the Apoſtle ſpeaketh of it in the Epiſtle to the Hebrewes.) That is to ſay, it was not Hebr.9.14. the only paine that he ſuffred in his body, but alſo the matching of the heauenly power with it, that made the bloud of him to bee our waſhing and clenſing. And when wee haue once beene watred with the holy Ghoſt, then will that bloud be euer freſh and neuer drye. For it is not corruptible, in as much as wee be waſhed and clenſed with it before God. Therefore let vs ſo put the thing in vre which is ſpoken of by Saint Peter, as it may beſprinkle our ſoules. As how? Euen by taking holde by fayth, of the ineſtimable benefite which is brought vs by our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. And although wee bee full of filth and vncleanneſſe: yet doth not God faile to take vs into his fauour, becauſe the bloud that was once ſhedde for our ſaluation, is ſufficient to waſh out all our ſpots at this day. Thus much 1.Iohn 1.7. for one point. Hebr.10.20

And therefore let vs reſt vpon this point, that although we ſeeme in this world to bee wrapped vp in the curſe of God with the vnbeleeuers; yet notwithſtanding we ſhall bee preſerued from aboue: and that if the Angell could skill to diſcerne the Iewes which had marked their houſes with the corruptible bloud of a brute beaſte; it is much more likely that God will at this day know the blood of his own ſonne, ſo as we may be diſcerned by it, and not haue his wrath to fall vpon vs. True it is ỹ we may well ſuffer ſome chaſtiſement; for it is good for our ſoules health. But the end therof will alwaies be good, and God will neuer ceaſſe to be ſtill mercifull to vs. That is the firſt matter which we haue to mark as in reſpect of the former ſaying, that our Lord Ieſus Chriſt is the fulfilling of the things that were figured in the law, by the offering of the Paſcal Lambe.

But let vs nowe come backe againe to Saint Paules exhortation. Hee ſayth that becauſe our Eaſter lambe is offered vp, wee muſt nowe 1.Cor.5.8. keepe the feaſt in eating it, howbeit not with the Leauen of naughtineſſe or deceite, but in ſimplicitie and vprightneſſe. Whereas he ſayth that our paſſouer is offered vp, he doth vs to vnderſtand that if we wilbe reconciled to God, we muſt reſorte to the death and paſſion of his Sonne, and not ſurmiſe any other Sacrifice than that, which is the euerlaſting, becauſe Hebr.7.24. the vertue thereof can neuer fayle. And it is a point well worth the noting: For it ſerueth to condemne the abhomination of the Maſſe which is brought into the Popedome. They be not contented with ỹ offering vp of Ieſus Chriſt vnto GOD his Father, and with the one ſatisfaction which hee hath made to indure for euer: but they beare men in hande that hee is yet ſacrificed dayly; whereas Saint Paule telleth vs that wee muſt holde vs to the Redemption that was purchaſed once for all.

Nowe remayneth that wee eate of this Sacrifice, that is to ſay, that wee become partakers thereof. As if hee had ſayde, there are two thinges in the paſcall Lambe: the one was the ſprinkling of the Lambes bloud, and the other was the eating of his fleſhe roaſted. Now in deede it is the ſonne of God that hath offred this ſacrifice, and that office belongeth to him a- Hebr.7.24. lone. The ſpinkling of his blood is made in our hearts by the holy Ghoſt: for that cannot be attributed to ỹ cunning of men. We muſt now become partakers of this Sacrifice: not by eating Ieſus chriſt after a fleſhly maner; but S. Paul had an eye to this partaking that is giuen vs by the Goſpel. For we be members of his body, and he knitteth vs ſo vnto him, ỹ looke whatſoeuer he hath, he cõmunicateth ỹ ſame vnto vs; ſo as we liue in him & he alſo in vs. And for as much as there is no ſeueraltie between ỹ ſonne of God & ỹ faithfull: therfore is he our meate. For we be no leſſe fed ẇ his power & his very ſubſtãce as in reſpect of our ſoules, than our bodies are fed and nouriſhed with bread. Againe, to the intent we ſhould vnderſtand that wee haue not our ſuſtenance by haulfes in Ieſus Chriſt: he addeth wine alſo, to ſhew that hee is our drinke as well as our meate. That is ỹ thing which S. Paule ment to betoken, in ſaying ỹ we muſt now eat of this Eaſter lamb: that is to wit, that as now we ſhould ſo cõmunicate with the ſonne of God, as we might be knit vnto him by the ſecret and maruelous working of his holy ſpirite, and he become our foode and nouriſhment, & we be ſuſteined by the ſame, bicauſe we muſt elſe needs decay through our own feblenes. And this eating is not for once a yeere; but continually during all the time of our life.

Then let vs learne, that as long as we be in this world, we muſt dayly frame our ſelues to the ſpirituall fellowſhip which we haue with our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, and to the confirming of the vnion more and more: for without that, the crucifying of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt will boote vs nothing at al. He is the redeemer of all the whole world: & yet notwithſtanding, what a nomber is there, which reape nothing elſe by his death but the greater condemnation? And that is bicauſe they refuſe ſo excellent a benefite, wherby they make themſelues vnworthy of it, and exclude themſelues quite and cleane from it. But when wee communicate with him by faith; then doe we ratifie the grace that was purchaced for vs. And therefore let vs marke, that to bee partakers of the fruite and operation of the death and paſſion of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, we muſt bee linked vnto him from day to day by faith, profiting and growing ſtill in that holy vnion, vntill wee haue the thing wholly and perfectly, which wee haue as yet but in part. After that maner ought we to eate ỹ ſacrifice, to keepe the paſſeouer wel. And for as much as our faith increaſeth according to our profiting in the holy ſcripture: if we intend to communicate wel ẇ the ſonne of God; euery one of vs muſt exerciſe our ſelues in the doctrine of the Goſpell, and match the ſame ẇ prayer, beſeeching God ỹ ſeeing he hath vouchſafed to call vs once into his ſonnes company, he will maintaine vs therein, & neuer ſuffer vs to be ſeparated or ẇdrawen from it any more. Therefore muſt we ſeeke all ỹ meanes which our Lord hath ordeined, to ſtabliſh the communion which we ought to haue in our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

Now S. Paule addeth, that we cannot be partakers of ỹ ſonne of God, nor haue any acquaintance with him, if we bee dubble minded ỹ there be any fraude or malice in vs. Then muſt we be changed if we wil haue Ieſus Chriſt for our ſuſtenance, that is to ſay, if we will haue him to feede vs with his ſubſtance. Certaine it is ỹ malice and hypocriſie are ſo rooted in vs, ỹ we muſt be faine to fight much ẇ them, before we can be rid of thẽ. S. Paul then ſheweth ỹ faithful there, ỹ they muſt be reformed, or elſe Ieſus Chriſt will cut thẽ off frõ his body. And ſo although ỹ hypocrits pretend to ſeeke Ieſus Chriſt & to ſticke throughly to him: yet notwithſtanding they haue none acquaintance at al ẇ him. For why? They be things vtterly vnpoſſible, ỹ Ieſus Chriſt ſhould dwell in vs, & yet neuertheles that all maner of deceite & naughtineſſe ſhould raigne in vs. And therefore inſtead of abſteining from leauened bread as the fathers of old time did in eating of ỹ paſcal lamb vnder the law: let vs marke ỹ nowadaies God wil haue vs to diſcharge our ſelues of all naughtines & guile. And how may ỹ be? It will not be doone ẇout great inforcement: for we of our ſelues are not ſteady: but the ſpirit of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt muſt be faine to worke after ſuch a ſorte ẇ vs, as we may be conformable to him in ſimplicitie & vprightnes. Thus ye ſee what we haue to gather of this exhortation which S. Paule maketh in ỹ firſt epiſtle to the Corinthians.

Now afterward heere followeth the thing that was treated of yeſterday, namely the eating of ỹ paſcall lamb ẇ their ſtaues in their hands, their ſhooes on their feete, & their loynes girded vp. For we cannot haue the companie of Ieſus chriſt vnleſſe we be as wayfarers in this world, to go on forward to ſeeke our inheritance elſewhere. And S. Paul in the Epiſtle to ỹ Coloſſians ſaith plainly that our life is hidden ẇ Chriſt, and ỹ we muſt be as dead men, if we wilbe vnited to the ſonne of God. And why? For he is in heauen, & therefore it followeth ỹ our life ought not to be tyed heere to ỹ earth. What is to be doone then? If we will haue Ieſus Chriſt to auow vs to bee members of his body, & to quicken vs by his ſpirite: we muſt get vs out of this world; not ỹ we ſhould not dwel in it, but ỹ we ſhold not be wedded to it. For theſe two things agree very well, ỹ gods children ſhold be cõuerſant in this earthly life, & yet neuertheleſſe be heires & citizens of ỹ kingdom of heauẽ, accordingly as ỹ Apoſtle ſaith to ỹ Hebrewes, ỹ God can well find in his hart to take vs for his children, if we be not tyed to this world, but paſſe on beyond it. Wherefore let vs marke, ỹ to haue felowſhip ẇ our lord Ieſus chriſt, we muſt depart out of this world: ỹ is to ſay, our earthly affectiõs muſt not raigne in vs, we muſt not be mortized here, we muſt not bee ſnarled here: but wee muſt conſider ỹ ſeeing God hath ſet vs here to make a iourney, yea & ſhort iourney, euery of vs ought to hie himſelfe a pace, & to looke well to the ridding of our ſelues of ỹ things ỹ may hinder vs frõ attaining to ỹ heauenly life. And we muſt vnderſtand ỹ if we do ſo, Ieſus Chriſt wil come vnto vs & reach vs his hand to ſtrengthẽ vs, ỹ we may be able to ouercome all impediments. For it were impoſſible ỹ euer we ſhould compaſſe ỹ matter, vnleſſe we were aided frõ aboue. So then, we ſee now ỹ a man cannot be partaker of the Paſcall Lamb, except he haue his loynes girded and his ſtaffe staffe in his hand, ẏ is to say, vnlesse he be like a wayfarer and that he stay not in this world.

And for the same cause also doth our Lord Iesus Christ warne al his Disciples to haue lampes in their hands, & their garments trussed vp, & to be alwaies in a readinesse til he come, & to stand waiting continually for his comming. And as he cõmandeth vs to haue our loynes girded vp, euẽ so willeth he vs to haue lampes in our hands, to shew ẏ there is neither night nor day for ẏ faithfull to make tarience, & therefore ẏ euen in the middes of darknes we must haue light, euen the spirituall light to guide vs; & that we must haue the one foote alwaies lifted vp, to ẏ intent we be not taken vnawares when he commeth, but ẏ we haue minded our way aforehand, to go stil forewarde to meete ẅ him. Ye see then ẏ the way to communicate aright ẅ our Lord Iesus Christ, ẏ we may bee partakers of the sacrifice which he hath offered: is to make none accoũt of ẏ world, nor to haue any loue vnto it, but to seeke ẏ inheritance ẏ is aboue, & to cõmunicate so one with another here beneath, as it may bee a meane to make vs draw the neerer vnto God. And so wee see ẏ although ẏ figures of ẏ law continue not any longer; yet the truth of them abideth with vs, and it behoueth vs to put the same in vre.

Luke, 12.35

And hereby we be yet better informed of the thing ẏ I haue touched already: which is that the profit which redoundeth to vs by ẏ death & passion of our Lorde Iesus Christ, is much better knowen & beautifullier seene of vs, by laying it to the auncient figure, & by considering how ẏ things ẏ were set forth darkly at ẏ time, are nowe fulfilled to ẏ sight of the eye. And like as it behoueth vs to communicate with our Lorde Iesus Christ; so let vs mark also ẏ God giueth vs a help euen at this day in ẏ Sacrament of ẏ Lordes supper, bicause of our rudenes & infirmitie. True it is (as I haue touched alreadie) ẏ our communicating with our Lord Iesus Christ must not bee only a thrise or foure times a yeere, but continually all our life long. Yet notwithstãding we haue neede to be quickened vp, bicause we come not to it with such strength as were requisite. Therefore like as ẏ fathers of old time had the Pascall Lamb: so hath ẏ sonne of God left vs his supper to be a helpe to vs to guide vs vnto him. Will we then be partakers of ẏ supper of our Lorde Iesus Christ? Let vs vnderstand ẏ according as I haue auouched before, wee must rid our selues of all malice & guile, & forsake the world. True it is ẏ the Hypocrits do thrust themselues in among ẏ faithfull, & come to defile the table of ẏ sonne of God: but what carie they thẽce but vtter curstednes? Therefore let vs keepe our selues frõ being guiltie of such a treacherie, & consider that if it behoued a man to be circumcised in olde time ere he might eate of the Pascal Lamb: it behoueth vs also at this day to be separated to the seruice of our God, & to be first made holy. And we know ẏ we ought to be circumcised euen at this day; howbeit not by mans hand, but by inwarde reformation of minde, accordingly as S. Paule saith therof in the second Chapter to ẏ Colossians, ẏ whatsoeuer is of our flesh must bee cut off:

for there is nothing in it but sinne & corruption. Now thẽ, ẏ we may come to ẏ holy supper of our Lord Iesus Christ, & haue there ẏ warrant which he giueth vs ẏ we be members of his body: let vs looke ẏ we circumcise our hearts. For the figure is abolished: but yet haue wee the accomplishment of all things in our Lord Iesus Christ.

Moreouer, let vs come to ẏ chief point: which is ẏ our Lord Iesus Christ is named our Passouer. For by him must we be deliuered, not out of the land of Egypt, but out of the dungeons of death; and we must passe a passage that were vnpossible for vs, if God drew vs not with his owne hand, & by his own wonderfull power. For we be al borne the children of wrath, and we should rot in our miserie, if god pitied vs not, & reached vs not his hand. And that man beguileth himselfe which thinketh himselfe able to leape out of the myre wherin he is plunged. It is the office of our Lord Iesus Christ to draw vs out frõ thence, according to this saying of S. Iohns in his viii. chapter, If ẏ sonne of god make you free, thẽ shal you be free. Wherby he sheweth vs, that euen from our very comming out of our mothers wombes, we be in ẏ cursed thraldom of sin & death, & shold continue therin vnto the end, if we were not set free from it by him which not without cause hath taken vpon him the title of passouer, to shew ẏ it is his office to set vs free, as I said afore. And hereby we must learn to presume nothing of our selues, but to consider that we must think our selues beholden to the sonne of god for all things, that he may bee magnified, & all those diueliish opinions of freewill & of power & ability to prepare our selues to doe good, beaten downe; so as we may know ẏ as long as God suffereth vs to follow our owne swindge, we shall alwayes abide fast tyed in the chaines of the diuel & of death. And therfore let vs yeeld our lord Iesus Christ his dew honour, which is ẏ we acknowledge him to bee the partie which hath let vs free.

Iohn 8.36.

And herewall let vs marke further, ẏ when we bee graffed into his body, it is not for vs to serue sin. For, to be graffed into the body of our Lord Iesus Christ, & yet notwithstanding to serue Sathan, are two things as contrary as fire and water. Nowe then if wee intend not to disfeate the power of the sonne of God, & to bereaue him of his office: we must be in liberty to serue god. And let vs not think ẏ he ment to beguile vs, in telling vs that that office belõgeth vnto him. But it becommeth vs on our part to offer our selues vnto him, & not to maintain willingly the cursed bondage wherin we be. For the very cause why men perish therin, is that they sooth themselues and fall asleepe in it, and come not frankly to Iesus Christ. Now then let vs note ẏ ẏ true mark of our Christendom; is ẏ we be in freedom to do good, & ẏ we haue a pure & free wil to dedicate our selues to god. Not that we can do it perfectly so long as we be in this world, (for we see how S. Paul, who had profited far aboue a nomber of other men, mourneth and confesseth that he is stil held as a captiue in part:) but for ẏ the grace of our Lord Iesus Christ must neuertheless worke so farre in vs, as wee may not bee held quite backe by these worldly things. But let vs marke alſo ỹ our Lord Ieſus Chriſt hath not only drawẽ vs out of ỹ gulfe of death, but alſo will haue vs dayly to paſſe further. And forasmuch as we be not quite & cleane rid of this bondage of ſinne: this paſſing on muſt continue ſtill. What is al our life then? It is a continuall holding on to attaine to ỹ full and perfect freedome which God hath promiſed to his children. And ỹ is ỹ cauſe why I ſayd ỹ it behooued vs to eate the Paſcall Lamb euery day. For Ieſus Chriſt is not our euerlaſting Paſſouer, for ỹ he is ſacrificed euery day: but for ỹ we doe daily take benefit by him, & for that he maketh ỹ vertue of his ſacrifice continually auailable by his holy ſpirit. Notwithſtanding, howſoeuer ỹ caſe go, yet muſt we ſtill keepe on foreward, vntill we bee taken out of this world.

This doctrine ought to be very common, yea and when it is preached, euery man will thinke he knowes it wellynough: but in the meane while where is ỹ practiſe thereof? Where is the ſayd freeheartednes to ſhewe by our deedes that our Lord hath broken the bondes of Satan, ſo as we ſerue not ſinne any more? Where is ỹ earneſtnes of minde to proceede more & more vntil we be gone quite & cleane out of the world? And yet muſt we exerciſe this doctrine, & put it in vre, if we wil be acknowledged for mẽbers of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. But we cannot haue him to bee our Redeemer, except he haue alwayes ỹ ſaide title of Paſſeouer. And that is in reſpect of vs: for he hath made his paſſage, by comming downe into
1. Tim. 3. 16 the world & by reconciling men to God his father, & by being receiued vp againe into his glorie and Maieſtie. Therfore there muſt not be any more chaunge in Ieſus Chriſt. But we on our ſide muſt be made perfect in him: and as ſoone as he calleth vs to be of his body, we muſt begin to depart out of ỹ dungeons of ſin, from whence we muſt withdraw our ſelues euer more & more, and ſtill trauell to attaine to the heauenly righteouſnes. To be ſhort, let vs note that a Chriſtian may well perceiue whether hee haue profited in the Goſpell or no, by examining whether hee be withdrawen from the worlde or no, and whether he be ready and weldiſpoſed to depart from it as oft as it ſhall pleaſe God to pull him away from it, ſo as his heart be not tyed to it as long as Matt. 6. 21. he is heere beneath (For looke where our treaſure is, there is alſo our heart with it) but that ſeeing Ieſus Chriſt is our full life and felicitie, we alwaies tend to him ward, & euer haue our mindes liſted vp on high.

And let vs marke further, that to keepe the paſſeouer aright at this day, it behoueth vs to be vnited together, accordingly as we ſee how God hath giuen a ſtrait commaundement thereof in this place, where he ſaith it is not Lawfull to eate the paſcall Lambe in any other of the Cities or towns of the contrey, but ỹ they ought to aſſemble together to the Temple. Which thing I haue told you heeretofore, was doone to preſerue the religion in his purenes. Will we then nowadaies be partakers of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt? Let vs agree together that there may be a true brotherhood among vs. For if we bee at ods among our ſelues like dogs & cats, Ieſus Chriſt muſt needes diſclaime & diſauow vs. And therefore let vs not imagine our ſelues to be vnited to Ieſus Chriſt, except there be good agreement and brotherly loue among vs. And wherein muſt that be? We may not conſpire together as the wicked doe; for they make confederacies and ioyne hands together to make warre againſt God. Curſed be ſuch vnion: it behoueth vs to bee farre off from ſuch dealing. Nay, we muſt reſorte to the temple of God. And although we haue not now a material temple as the Iewes had then in Ieruſalem; (for our meeting togither is for common orders ſake, and not after the manner of the Iewes, who had a place certaine appointed out to thẽ:) although (ſay I) we haue not the like figure; yet muſt we walke as in the preſence of our God, we muſt be Eph. 4. 13. & ruled by his word, we muſt haue one melody of Iohn 17. 12 faith to praiſe God as it were with one mouth, & we muſt ſhew our ſelues truly to be al one in him Thus ye ſee how wee muſt be gathered together to Gods Church, if we will bee partakers of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt.

And herein we ſee, ỹ theſe ſcorners which turn away from ỹ order of ỹ church, exclude thẽſelues from al hope of the heauenly life. They can ſay wel ynough ỹ their intent is to be Chriſtians: but yet for al ỹ, inaſmuch as they forſake ỹ vnitie of faith, yea & euen fight againſt it by deſpiſing all order: is it not to be concluded, ỹ they cannot be partakers of the Paſcall Lambe, at leaſtwiſe after ỹ true maner thereof which we haue nowadaies? Let vs marke well then, ỹ to be partakers of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, we muſt not be only vnited in ỹ doctrine of ỹ goſpel: but we muſt alſo make confeſſion of our faith, in aſſembling all togither as though God were preſent with vs. And truely we Matt. 18. 20. know how it is promiſed vs, ỹ where two or three are gathered togither in ỹ name of Ieſus Chriſt, he will beare rule there, & be preſent among thẽ. And therfore let vs haue a diligent regard of reſorting vnto Sermons. And therwithal, let vs vſe ỹ Sacrament of the Lords ſupper, ỹ we may aske one another what is ment by it. For in the xii. of Exod. 12. 26 Exodus our Lord ſheweth vs full well, ỹ wee muſt profit in his ſchoole, to be partakers of ỹ Paſcall Lambe. If thy ſonne aske thee what this act of ours betokeneth: Thou ſhalt anſwere, wee were bondſlaues in ỹ land of Egypt, & God pitied vs. Thus ye ſee what we haue to doe at this day, not for ỹ eating of a roſted Lambe: but to be made partakers of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt in ſpirit and truth. Wee muſt inquire diligently to know ỹ benefits which our Lord Ieſus Chriſt hath brought vs. And herein is our negligence bewrayed. For it is ynough for vs to heare Ieſus Chriſt ſpoken of: yea & there are a great ſort which haue not the skil to diſcerne the father from the ſonne: They know not whether Ieſus Chriſt were ſent by God his father or no: inſomuch ỹ now & then a man ſhall finde more beaſtlines in thoſe ỹ haue their eares dayly beaten ẅ the Goſpel, than among ỹ Papiſts. Nay it is to bee openly ſeene. Why then come we to Sermõs, but to be taught? Nay, there are a nõber which fulfil ỹ prouerb ỹ ſaith, a foole doubteth of nothing. And they ỹ haue moſt need

to learne, think themſelues to know moſt, & that they need not to opē their mouths to aſk which is Gods truth. But as for vs, let vs inquire. And for ỹ doing thereof let vs marke, ỹ it behoueth vs to liue ſoberly, for if we go to worke proudly & preſumptuouſly as a nōber do which think thēſelues ſo great clerks (as I haue ſaid) ỹ no man cā teach thē any more than they know alreadie: wee ſhall be ful enough, yea euē till we burſt: but it ſhalbe but with wind, & we ſhalbe voyde of all light of life. But if wee can finde in our heartes to bee taught of God: we muſt bee learners, that is to ſay, lowliminded: and we muſt vnderſtand that we haue neede to proceede further. And truely the verie vſe of the Lordes ſupper ought to put vs in minde, that our cōming thither ought not to be without inſtruction. For (as I declared yeſterday) a ſacrament without teaching & inſtruction, is a deade thing, and a mocking of God, and a defiling of the thing it ſelfe. Therefore as oft as wee come to the ſupper, let it bee a wakening of vs, to make vs inquire of ỹ things that we know not ſufficiently before though we haue had ſome taſt of them. And truely if it be not lawful to admit young children to the Lords ſupper, vntill they knowe what is meant by that Sacrament, and wherefore it was ordeyned: ſhoulde ſuch as haue liued a fortie and three-ſcore yeares come to it like dogges or ſwine? And yet we ſee they doe ſo: and woe be to them for it. So then let the viſible ſigne which our lord hath ordeyned be a meane to ſpurre vs forwarde the more, that wee may ſeeke to profite more and more in the knowing of Ieſus Chriſt, ſpecially ſeeing we be no more troubled nowadayes with reſorting to a place which God hath appointed. For wee haue Ieſus Chriſt who is Gods Hebr. 9. 11. temple, and hee is not ſhut vp within any certaine place, but filleth both heauen and earth, with his power. True it is that in the nature of man wherewith he clothed himſelfe, he is gone vp into heauen: and yet for all that, hee ceaſeth not to dwell here in vs. So then we muſt go to Ieruſalem, we neede not to goe on pilgrimage, but only to make our repaire to the ſon of God,
Coloſſ. 2. 9. Act. 1. 9. Matt. 28. 20 Col. 2. 6. and we ſhall finde in him the whole fulneſſe and perfection of the Godhead. Neuertheleſſe wee muſt marke well alſo, that foraſmuch as the fathers of olde time had not the thinges that are giuen vs at this time, it ſhal be to our ſorer condemnation, if they haue beene diligenter than we in exercyſing ỹ figures & ſhadowes, and that we nowadayes be laſie and colde, ſo as the ſubſtance be put into our handes, and yet we make no reckening of it. The Iewes were faine to reſort to the Temple of Ieruſalem, leauing their houſes and houſeholdes. And their wiues and childrē were faine to come trotting thither, with great trauell and not without charges. And why? You ſhall reſort to the place which the Lorde ſhall haue choſen to ſet his name in. He ſaith not to dwel there throughout, but to ſhewe his preſence in ſuch wiſe, as it may be knowen that we bee vnited to our God, not onely by figures and ſhadowes, but alſo by his dwelling among vs. As nowe there is not any one place which God hath choſen to put his name in, that hee might bee called vpon alonely there: but wee haue God manifeſted in the fleſh. For what is Ieſus Chriſt? Euen ſo is he intitled by Saint Paul. Seeing then that hee 1. Tim. 3. 16. calleth vs to himſelfe, and that we neede not to make any long circuites to finde him, but rather that he preuenteth vs, and that all his deſire is to drawe vs to God his father: ſhoulde we nowe be laſie and colde? What excuſe wil there be for vs, when the Iewes tooke ſuch paine hauing but ỹ firſt principles like yong childrens Apſies, and ỹ we nowadayes being brought to the full perfection, doe fare neuer the better by it, or at leaſtwiſe it ſtandeth vs not in ſo much ſteade, as the auncient figures ſtood the Iewes vnder the law. Thus ye ſee what we haue to remember vppon this text, where it is ſaide that they reſorted to the place which the Lord had choſen.

Now finally for a concluſion, Moſes telleth them that there ſhould bee no Leauened breade in all their borders during thoſe dayes: and ſecondly that on the day of the paſſeouer, they ſhould keep as great ſolemnitie as on the Sabboth day. And hereby he ſheweth that it is not enough for vs to abſteyne from fraude and malice, but that we muſt labor to the vttermoſt we can, to put away al filth frō among vs. For if I alledge, that as for my ſelfe I will bee no hypocrite, and in the meane time doe ſuffer ſtumblingblockes in the Church, yea or mainteyne them: I muſt not thinke my ſelfe therefore diſcharged. It is ſaide, There ſhall no leauen bee ſeene in thy coaſtes. As if he had ſaid, Euerie man muſt haue an eye to himſelfe and to his houſe, ỹ ye be not defiled in any thing that may hinder you to eat of the paſcall Lambe in all pureneſſe. Therefore beginne at your ſelues and at your owne houſeholdes. But yet therewithall bee ſo watchfull alſo, as there may be no corruptiō in al ỹ reſt of the people. Wherfore let vs haue an eie nowadaies to the wel practiſing of this doctrine, and let euerie man looke narrowly to himſelfe. And afterwarde let ſuch as haue houſeholdes to gouerne, looke to the purging away of all filth and vncleanneſſe. And then generally, if there be any ſtumbling blockes among vs, which may put thinges out of order: let vs all looke to the reprooving of them out of hande. And aboue all thinges let vs aſſure our ſelues, that to bee partakers of Ieſus Chriſt in true pureneſſe, wee muſt begin at the cleanſing of our ſelues, ỹ God may gouerne vs, and that our paſſeouer may be kept in ſpirit and trueth, by caſting ourſelues vterly downe, and by yeelding to forbeare all our owne thoughtes and affections, ſo as wee may keepe a ſpirituall Sabboth, not for one day onely (as I ſaid afore,) but ỹ we may continue therein during all the time of our life.

Now let vs kneele downe before the Maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to make vs to feele thē better than we haue done, that they may ſo miſlike vs from day to day, as euery of vs may inforce himſelfe to repaire vnto him, and to frame ourſelues in ſuch ſort to his righteouſnes, as all our whole life may bee ordered, &c. And ſo let vs all ſay, Almightie God heauenly father, &c.

On Thurſday the vij. of Nouember. 1555.

The XCix. Sermon, which is the third vpon the ſixteenth Chapter.

9 Thou ſhalt recken ſeuen weekes from the time that thou beginneſt to put the ſickle into thy harueſt: thou ſhalt begin to recken ſeuen weekes:

10 Afterward thou ſhalt keepe the feaſt of weekes to the Lord thy God, with a freewill offering of thy handes, which thou ſhalt giue as the Lord thy God ſhall haue bleſſed thee.

11 And thou ſhalt reioyce before the face of the Lorde thy God, both thou and thy ſonne, and thy daughter, thy Manſeruaunt and thy Maidſeruaunt, and the Leuite which is within thy gates, and the ſtraunger, the fatherleſſe, and the widowe which are among you, in the place which the Lord thy God will chooſe to ſet his name in.

12 And thou ſhalt remember that thou waſt a bondſeruant in Egypt: and thou ſhalt keepe and do theſe ordinances.

MOſes teacheth heere of the ſeconde great ſolemnitie which was kepte yearely among the Iewes: and that was to giue God thankes after the gathering of their harueſt. And this day was named Pentecoſt, [that is to ſay fiftie dayes,] becauſe there were ſeuen weekes betweene Eaſter and that, ſo as there were nine and fortie dayes betweene thoſe feaſtes, whereunto one being added for the feaſtday it ſelfe, made fiftie. And the Greeke worde ſignifieth the ſame thing: but the Hebrewes called it the feaſt of weekes, and all commeth to one thing. Thus then we ſee now what this feaſt was whereof Moſes ſpeaketh here, that is to wit a meane to put them in minde to honor God for ſending his benefites to the ſuſtenance of man. And this concerned all manner of fruites of the earth: Howebeit vnder one kinde, all the reſt were cõprehended, as if God had exhorted his people to confeſſe that all good thinges come of him. The ſumme then is, that we muſt acknowledge not onely that God hath ſet vs in this worlde, but alſo that he ſheweth himſelfe continually to be a foſterfather, and that he mainteyneth vs, and that he maketh the earth to yeelde fruite to finde vs withall, and at a worde, that we liue by his meere liberalitie. True it is that this ought to be done at all times of our life; howbeit by reaſon of mens groſſeneſſe, it was requiſite that there ſhoulde bee yearely a feaſt kepte vppon ſome one certaine day of the yeare. Moreouer (as I haue tolde you alreadie) the feaſtes of the Iewes ſerued not only for the benefites that God had beſtowed vppon them alreadie, but alſo for a ſeruice. And ſo, to be ſhort, Gods will was that the Iewes ſhould giue him thankes one day in the yeare, ỳ therby they might be prouoked to acknowledge all their life after, that they were ſuſteyned at his hande, ſo as they ſhould neuer take anie repaſt, but that they ſhoulde thinke thus with themſelues, wee haue offered ſacrifice to God after harueſt: whereby wee were put in minde that it is hee which hath ſent vs our ſuſtenance. Therefore are we hypocrites, if we thinke not vppon his goodneſſe dayly, or if wee turne not to him as often as we eate or drinke, to acknowledge him to bee the author of al welfare. So then, this ſolemne proteſtation made once a yere was not a diſcharge for men to forget God all the reſt of the time: but rather a meane to make them thinke, Goe too, we haue kept here a ſolemne feaſt for one day, that it might be a ſchooling to vs all the yeare after, that if wee haue any thing wherewith to ſuſteyne our ſelues, it is Gods doeing who hath had pitie on vs.

But nowe the ceremonie of this feaſt is no longer in vſe, and yet the trueth thereof abideth with vs ſtill. And ſo wee receiue good and profitable inſtructiõ by ỳ doctrine therof, by reaſon wherof it cannot be thought to be needleſſe and ỳ it was written alonly for the Iewes. For it was Gods will that men ſhoulde bee taught by it euen to the worldes end, and that they ſhould be put in minde not to ſwallowe vp Gods benefites into our paunches without thinking vppon him, but rather that wee ſhoulde bee ledde to giue him thankes, as oft as we either eate or drinke; ſo that whenſoeuer we take any repaſt, we may conſider howe it is hee that giueth it vs, firſt opening the heauen to giue moyſture and foyzon to the earth, and afterward giuing power to the earth to beare fruite, and finallie bleſſeth the Corne when it is ſprung vp, that it may proſper to yeeld foode vnto vs. Seeing then that we perceiue al theſe things, let vs haue regard to benefite our ſelues by them. True it is (as I haue touched afore) that we muſt not haue anie one day certaine in the yeare, as the Iewes had, neither ought wee alſo to bee as young children. If a man alleadge for his excuſe, that if hee doe not his duetie, let him not vſe his reward giuen him as a little childe hath: it will not ſerue to excuſe excuse him. Folke doe not vse to giue a young childe his breakefast till hee haue prayed vnto God, because hee hath not the wit and discretion to doe it, vnlesse he bee compelled to it by some certaine order. Nowe then if an olde fellowe of the age of thirtie or fortie yeares eate his meate without praying to God, he deserueth not to bee beaten with a rodde, but to bee driuen away and to bee abhorred as a swine. And if hee alleadge, I haue no rule as is giuen to young children: what is that to the matter? Hast thou not discretion enough to do so much of thy selfe? Hast thou liued so long in the world and doest thou not yet know that thou oughtest to yeelde God thankes for the good which hee doeth vnto thee? Therefore it is saide that the Iewes were young children in comparison of the Christians: for God had giuen them rules according to their infirmities. As now although those thinges bee past away in respect of vs; yet are wee the more bounde to acknowledge Gods grace in his feeding & maintaining of vs. And why? The perfecter ỳ the doctrine is which is imparted to vs in the Gospel, the more plainly ought wee to acknowledge the benefites of our God towardes vs. That is the thing which wee haue first to remember out of this text.

Nowe it is saide, That the people shall resorte to Ierusalem to offer freewillofferings. God pointeth out these thinges more particularly in the three and twentith of Leuiticus, where he sheweth what offeringes were to bee made on the behalfe of the people. Howbeit, hee speaketh there but of euerie particular person, and hee saith, Yee shall bring offeringes according to your deuotion. For although there was a lawe certaine; yet behooued it their offeringes to bee made with a free will, and not as by compulsion, accordingly as it is saide, that God loueth such as offer vnto him willingly and not as of necessitie. Yee shall see manie that will be liberall to Godwarde; howebeit, it is but a thing of constraint, which kinde of dealing God vtterlie misliketh. A man may spoyle himselfe of all his goods, and yet doe God no such seruice as hee shall like well of, if it bee not matched with his free will, as I saide afore. Besides this, GOD left it to euerie mans owne choyce to offer what hee thought best, but yet he addeth according as the Lord thy God shall haue blessed thee. To the intent that men should not withhold through nigardshippe, as they be commonly wont to doe: God putteth them here in minde of his blessing: as if hee had saide, be well aduised, true it is that in this case I lay the bridle on your neckes, offer what you your selues thinke good, I meane not to inforce you to any thing, I would haue the offeringes which you bring vnto mee, to be of a free will. But yet for all that, ye must come to account for it. Who is hee that blesseth you? If yee haue had a good and plentiful haruest, to whome are you beholden for it? Ought yee not to consider howe it is I ỳ haue opened my hand wide, to the end that your hearts also shoulde open themselues wide on their parte? Know ye therefore that I haue allured you, by multiplying you; wherefore when yee haue a good croppe, looke that yee employe your selues so much the freelier in doing my seruice.

2. Cor. 9.7.

And hereby wee bee warned to looke neerely to our selues, that euerie of vs may put forth the good thinges which God hath committed vnto him. Here is mention made but onely of Corne, Wine, and such other thinges. Then if God haue inriched a man, hee must see that hee suppresse not Gods blessing, by keeping it close. For wee see there are Cormorantes which haue no care of otherfolkes pouertie: they thinke they may scrape all that they can come by, and that no man ought to haue any parte of their goods. On the contrarie part it is declared here, that accordingly as euerie man hath receiued aboundance at Gods hande, so must hee impart vnto his neighbours: for that is the ende which God ameth at. And if wee thinke not of it, we must come to account for it: and wee shall finde at length, that God will impute it to vs for theft, when wee shall haue deuoured his goods after ỳ fashion, without hauing anie pitie vppon the needie to succour them. In like case is it with spirituall giftes. For according as euerie man is of abilitie and skill to succour his neighbours, so is hee bounde to discharge himselfe and to put himselfe forwarde. Otherwise GOD will shewe vs to what purpose hee had bestowed his benefites vppon vs, and that wee haue fayled in our duetie. That is the thing which wee haue to beare away in that Moses alleadgeth Gods blessing to stirre vp the Iewes to offer sacrifice ỳ more largely, after as God shall haue increased them, knowing that hee bindeth them thereby vnto him.

And whereas he saith, That they shall reioyce with their children, their menseruauntes, & their womenseruants, the fatherlesse, the widower, and the strangers: thereby hee sheweth that his lawe was not ceremoniall onely, but that it tended also to the doing of almesdeedes: as indeede our Lord hath at all times shewed, that those are the very sacrifices which he requireth. True it is that part of the thinges which were to be offered, were to be brought to the Altar, & there to be burned in sacrifice: but yet for all that, it was alwayes prouided that of the rest, the poore should be fedde and maintayned as well as the priestes & Leuites: and nowe doeth Moses speake thereof againe. Wherefore let vs marke, that euen in the time of the Ceremonies and shadowes of the lawe, God neuer required sacrifice, but that he willed men therewithall to haue pitie vppon the needie to succour them, according to this saying of his by his Prophet Osee, I require mercy & not sacrifice. True it is ỳ he had commanded both of them: but he sheweth ỳ such as think to discharge themselues by cõming to ỳ church, and by offering their giftes there, doe beguile themselues, and that all their doinges are but hypocrisie, if they bee not kindehearted in succouring the needie, & in doing of Almesdeeds. For I pray you, can wee aduaunce GOD anie whyt by offering of our goods vnto him? Can wee inrich

Hebr. 13.16.

Osee. 6.7.

Iob.35.6. Psal.16.2. inrich him? Wanteth he any thing? True it is that hee requireth oblations: howebeit, that was to the end that men shoulde acknowledge euen by eyfight, that they were bounde vnto him. It was a kinde of puting of them in minde of it. Yet notwithstanding it stood them alwayes in hand to consider, that they could not otherwise discharge themselues, than by giuing part of their goods to such of their neighbours as had want. Thus ye see howe the meaning of Moses was, that when the Iewes offered their sacrifices after harueſt, it was not enough for them to acknowledge with mouth and outward gestures, that they were bound vnto God for his sending of them wherewith to liue, but that it behooued them also to shewe towardes men that they intended to be faithfull stewardes of the thinges which he had put into their hands, and desired nothing but to be well discharged of them.

And to moue thē more thereunto, he telleth them That they themselues had beene bondeslaues in the Land of Egypt, which warning peale hath bin set downe in other places heretofore. For wee know that when men liue at their owne ease and in pleasure, they bee not greatly touched with compassion though other men die for hunger: & euen so was it with the Iewes when they were come into the land of Chanaan after they began once to waxe ful. For the land it selfe was fat and specially because God had blessed it. Therefore doth he bring thē backe to the minding of their former state, and of the cruel bondage wherein they had beene. Consider (saith he) how ye haue beene bondslaues in the land of Egypt, and that as then ye would faine haue been gently intreated. When ye were too greeuously vexed, ye cried out vnto mee. Now therefore know ye that ỹ poore & needy which are among you, do craue likewise to be regarded at your handes, and that I for my part do make account of them. This is the effect of the matter conteined in that place.

Now to the end we may make our profit by it, let vs cal to mind the saying of the prophet Osee accordingly also as it is alledged by our Lord Iesus Christ, that is to wit, that God requireth the Matt.9.13. & 12.7. sacrifice of Almesdeeds. As if he should say, that he is not contented that men shoulde vse some Ceremonies towards him, but will haue vs to be kindharted in releeuing such as haue need of our helpe, if we haue abilitie wherewith to do it. And if men play the thankelesse churles with vs in forgetting the good which we haue done them: it is enough for vs that God alloweth our dealing, and putteth it into his booke of accountes. Also let vs bethinke our selues howe glad wee woulde haue beene of releefe, if euer wee were in necessitie, that the same may moue vs to pitie, and that we be not blinded with our wealth. I say to such as haue abundance, let them not lie weltring in their pleasures, and withdrawe their hand from succoring the poore: but let them cōsider that if euer they themselues felt the want of these worldly goods, they woulde bee glad that euerie man shoulde reach out his hande to releeue them: and therefore let they themselues doe the like. Yea and although wee had neuer felt any want, yet let vs consider that want may fall vpon vs hereafter. For what are we? No man can exempt himself from the stroke of God that he should not be driuen to begge his breade, yea though he had all the goods of the world. Hereof we see great store of examples. Seeing it is so, let no man be proude of his goods, but let vs al consider that we be men, and let vs not despise our owne flesshe, as is saide in the Prophete Esa 58.7. Esay. And let vs not say, what be the widowes? what be the fatherles children? what be ỹ strangers to vs? But seeing that God offereth & commendeth them to vs, let vs assure ourselues that wee cannot haue any folkes more nighe vnto vs to whome to doe good. For when wee weene to bind men vnto vs, to haue recompence at their hande; wee shall be disappointed at all assayes, and good right it is that it shoulde be so. But as for the thing that is put into Gods hand, that cannot perishe nor bee lost. Let vs marke then that Gods offering of the Straungers, the widowes, and the fatherles vnto vs, is as if hee shoulde say, he made them his baylifes to take vp his Rentes and Reuenewes. And when wee Matt.6.4. bee to doe him homage for the benefites which wee haue receiued at his hande; let vs assure our selues, that hee accepteth and auoweth al that euer is done to those whome hee speaketh off here by Moses.

Nowe we knowe what was done in the feast of Pentecost, namely that the holy Ghost was Act.2.1.4. sent down vpon Christs disciples, and that there was a kinde of renewing of the worlde, to exalte the kingdome of our Lord Iesus Christ: for there he vttered his power, yea more than hee did in his resurrection. For what had we bin the better for Christs rising againe in his own person, if he had not powred out the grace of his holy spirite vppon his Church, to shewe that hee was set at the right hande of God his father, to fill all thinges and to dwell in vs, and that he hath such soueraigne dominion ouer all thinges, that wee be in safetie when we be in his protection? And if wee looke well vppon the matter, we shall find that the lawe was giuen the same time as after the Passeouer. For it is saide that the people Exod.19.1.2 came to Sinay the thirde moneth after their departure out of Egypte, the same day that they departed from Raphidin. Nowe that was the first day of the moneth, and the foureteenth day was the day of the Passeouer. And according as the moonethes were as then, which went by the course of the Moones, there was one whole mooneth added. And so in effect there were fiftie dayes from the Passeouer to Gods setting foorth of his lawe vppon Mount Sinay, so as the feast of Pentecoste or Witsontide was referred to that time. Now we know that the lawe coulde do men no good, if it were but onely giuen them: for it is a deade letter. 2.Cor.3.6.7. And againe, it killeth vs, because it sheweth vs Rom.7.10. our duetie, and wee be all transgressors of it, so as it condemneth and accurseth vs. What are men the better then for the publishing of the Lawe? Nothing at all, but that it sheweth them howe they bee bereft of all hope of saluation, and and that they be all damned before God. And Rom.8.15. that is the cause why Saint Paul saith, that the Iewes at that time receiued the spirite of bon-Exod.19.16 & 20.19. dage, in terrour and feare saith he. It is sufficiently shewed in the nineteenth of Exodus how the Lawe affrighteth those that receiued it. For they went backewarde and entreated that God would speake to them by the mouth of Moses, because they could not heare his voyce but they must needes die for it. Ye see then that the Lawe taught men the will of GOD. But what? For-asmuch as wee be cleane contrarie to his goodnesse and righteousnesse: the lawe of it selfe can yeeld nothing but death, accordingly also as Saint Paul speaking thereof in the seconde to 2.Cor.3.6. the Corinthians, saith, that it is a letter which killeth. Therefore it behooued the lawe to be renewed, and that God shoulde publishe it after an other fashion, not writing it in tables of stone, but in our heartes by chaunging them. For by 2.Cor.3.3. Ezec.11.19. & 37.26. nature our harts are as hard as stone, as it is said by the Prophet Ezechiel. Therefore must God be faine to soften them, & to make the plyable, ỹ they may be obedient to his lawe. Ye see then howe the lawe was published after an other fashion vppon Whitsonday, than it was in olde time by Moses. For it was not deliuered vs in tables of stone, but God wrought so in vs by his holy spirite, that wee were then renewed, and the same continueth still at this day.

And therefore let vs marke, that besides the admonishment which the Iewes had to doe homage to God for their haruest and for their bodily sustenaunce which he gaue them: they had also a resemblaunce of the thinges which were fulfilled at the cõming of our Lord Iesus Christ, at which time GOD made another manner of Whitsontide than had beene in the time of the figures. For at that time he vttered the grace of the holy Ghost. Yet for all this, it is not meant ỹ we should keepe a feast of Pentecost: it is cleane contrarie. Seeing that the thinges which were figured vnder the law, were fulfilled in our Lord Iesus Christ, and that the figures themselues are ceased: if we bring them backe againe, wee doe wrong to him which hath brought the full accomplishment of all thinges. If the shadowes
Col.2.17. Gal.5.4. which were vnder the lawe, do come vp againe; Iesus Christ is to no purpose. So then let vs mark that the holy Ghost was not sent vnto vs, to the ende that these figures should continue still: but to shewe that we differ from the people of olde time. True it is (as I saide afore) that there is no ill in it for the Christians to haue a certaine daie wherein this historie shoulde bee declared vnto them: For we must not tie our selues to so streit a preciseneſſe, that it should not be lawfull for vs to vse that helpe for our infirmitie. But to make a seruice of God thereof, and to take example at the Iewes, as though it behoued vs to fashion our selues like vnto them, or as though the feast of Whitsontide ought to be obserued at this day, by reason of the sending of the holy Ghost: that were too grosse a fondnesse. Let vs vnderstand then, first that the Iewes had but a figure & shadowe of the trueth: and on our owne part wee may knowe in Iesus Christ, that God hath not figured anie thing in vaine, but that all the cere- Col.2.17.
monies of the Law tended to veric good purpose because the effect of them is shewed vs in him.
Therefore let vs holde vs contented therewith, and now let vs learne to reioyce in the presence of our God, and to make otherfolks partakers of our mirth.

The Iewes were commanded to resort to Ieru-salem as soone as harueſt was done, & not only to reioyce there, but also to impart of their goods to their neighbors, so as there might be a common gladnes among them, and God might be glorified with one accord. And now that these things are at this day accomplished: what haue we to doe? We must not run trotting to Ieruſalẽ to worship God there and to doe him homage there. For we must lift vp our hands eueriwhere, 1.Tim.2.8. howbeit so as they be cleane. And moreouer for asmuch as GOD hath not only sent vs a harueſt of corruptible fruits to nouriſh our bodies withal but also powred out ỹ infinite riches of his holy spirit and sent vs the liuing waters as is saide in Ezechiel: let vs vnderstand that it is to ỹ end Ezech.47.8
we should haue the mirth whereof S. Paul speaketh in the fourteenth to the Romanes. Let vs now reioyce then seeing our Lord hath shewed himselfe so bountifull towards vs, that hee hath not withholde any of the cheefe good thinges which he had, but hath powred vppon vs all the benefites that concerne the endles life and hea-uenly glorie. Seeing then that we haue receiued the holy Ghost, let vs also be ioyful in our harts.
As how? By withdrawing ourselues from ỹ vanities of this world, & by holding our selues conteted with the fauor of our God, praising him euen in the middes of our afflictions. Albeit that wee haue not all things at wil in this world: yet let vs not cease to hold on still, assuring our selues that it ought to suffice vs that our God is fauourable to vs, & that he sheweth vs his loue. When wee be at that point once, then shall wee haue such peace and contentment in vs, as passeth all the Phil.4.7.
ioyes of this world, yea and putteth away all the sorrowes that may trouble vs. And when wee haue such gladnesse our selues, wee must to the vttermost of our power make them partakers of it, which haue need. For if the Iewes were commanded to cal the widowes, the fatherles, and the strangers to make merie with them, in spending of the goods which God had giuen them:
much more reason is it, that seeing the spirituall giftes which God hath bestowed vppon vs, belong to the common building vp of the Church as saith Saint Paul in the twelfth to the Rom.12.6
Romanes, and also in the twelfth of the first to ỹ & 1.Cor.12 Corinthians, we should take heed ỹ we defraude 7. not our neighbours of the thing which GOD hath appointed for them.

Let vs marke also that as nowe there is no more any stranger as in respect of vs. For wheras God had separated the Iewes from the gentiles:
nowe it is his will to bee knowen through the whole worlde; there is no more diuision of bodies; the wall is broken downe as saith Saint Eph.2.14.
Paul in an other place. Seeing then that God hath hath knit vs together after this fashion, and that Ierusalem extendeth through the whole world as Zach. 3.4. the Prophet Zacharie speaketh thereof: wee ought to bee the more mooued and prouoked to make al our brothers partakers of the ioy which wee haue receyued by the spirite of God. Thus ye see in effect what wee haue to marke vppon that text.

But herewithall wee must marke that Moses in this place leaueth out two feastes which Leuit. 23.24 27. are spoken of in the three & twentith of Leuiticus, the cause whereof is for that the people were not streitly bounde to repaire at that time to Ierusalem to worshippe there. There was
* Otherwise called ỳ feast of fasting, or of humbling themselues. the feastes of Trumpets and the feast of * Affliction; and although Moses speake here of no more than of three solemne feastes: yet doeth it behoue vs to interlace these other two with them. And as touching the feast of Affliction, let vs marke that our Lorde ordeyned it not without cause; but it wil serue vs verie wel to the expounding of the text which is dek with alreadie. For wee be taught that the Iewes had certayne dayes in the yeare, to the ende that the trueth shoulde abide vnto vs, and that it shoulde beare his full force among vs all the dayes of our life. It behooued the Iewes to humble themselues both by fasting and otherwise in acknowledging their sinnes: and thereupon to make a solemne confession of their misdeedes, in humbling thẽselues to God, and in crauing forgiuenesse for the same. I saide afore that this was not ordeined without cause. For wee see howe men do couer their faults as much as they can, and that they bethinke not themselues of them but by constraint. They alwayes drawe backe if they bee not thrust forwarde: for to their seeming it is a matter of melancholie. True it is that we cannot thinke vppon our sinnes without greefe of minde: but yet is ỳ for our welfare. And therefore in the second to the Corinthians Saint Paul
2. Cor. 7. 8. saith, that this kinde of sorrowing is not to bee shunned, neither ought men to be sorie for their sorrowing when they be put in minde of their sinnes. For why? It is a sorrowing as pleaseth
Luke 15.17. God greatly, and gladdeth the Angels of Paradise, and bringeth vs infinite ioye in the ende. And forasmuch as men make merrie & reioyce when they haue offended God: their condemnation must needes be dubble, and needes must this sentence bee accomplished vppon them
Luke 6.25. which saith; Woe bee to you which laugh, for yee shall weepe and bee sorie. And so let vs marke that because men will not willingly know and perceiue their faultes, it was Gods will that there shoulde bee a yereminde of them, that the Iewes might bethinke them of the great number of the sinnes which they hadde committed and humble themselues. Not that their so doing acquitted them: but to the intent it shoulde bee a warning to them all the yeare after.

Nowe then, their fasting and their protesting of themselues to be guiltie before God: was to the ende that when they were gone home into their owne houses, they shoulde consider thus with themselues: Alas it is not for one day onely that it behoueth vs to craue forgiuenes: for wee cease not to offende our God, euerie minute of an houre we be entring into a newe bonde with death. For although God haue pardoned vs; yet returne we to our sinne againe, and there is no ende of sinning; insomuch that as long as wee bee in this worlde, there are euer some vices lurking in vs, and our corruption is so great, that it is vnpossible for vs altogether to absteyne from doing of euill. Then behoooued it the Iewes to thinke vppon their sinnes, and meete was it that the sayde feaste shoulde be an instruction to them for all the yeare after. Thus howsoeuer it was, they hadde the figure. But we in these dayes must haue the truth without any such Ceremonie. And thereby wee see what superstition was among the Papistes: for they turned this feast of Affliction or humbling into their Lenton fast, saying that in that time they punished themselues with fasting, that they might acknowledge their sinnes: and they alledged the example of the Iewes. Yea, but we must alwayes come backe to the diuersitie which S. Paul in the Galathians putteth betweene vs Gal. 5.4. and the fathers of olde time, for else what are wee the better for the comming of our Lord Iesus Christ? If wee at this day must still haue the shadowes that were vnder the lawe: where is the freedome that he speaketh of? I meane not such a freedome as shall lay the reynes loose in our neck, to liue as we list: No, but ỳ wee should not bee trayned vp any more like litle children: Gal. 4.2. for that was continued vntill the comming of our Lorde Iesus Christ, and vntill hee had shewed himselfe to the worlde. But as nowe we must let the figures goe, and all that belonged to that rawnesse; and wee must goe to the verie pithe and substance of them. And therefore whereas the papistes haue ordeyned their Lentonfast in steade of the feast of Affliction, which God had ordeined among the Iewes: It is but an Apes toye. I forbeare to speake as nowe of the other abuses and illusions conteyned therein: for they vpholde that their fasting of fortie dayes is after the example of our Lorde Iesus Christ. Yea but let them then absteyne from all meate and drinke, and bee as Angels of Paradise. Nay, they cramme themselues so full at their dinners, that at night they bee still cumbered with that which they had receyued before: and yet notwithstandinding they will needes beare Iesus Christ in hande, that they fashion themselues like to him. Hee was exalted farre beyonde all state and nature of man when he fasted fortie dayes and fortie nightes: and hee did it to shewe his diuine power, and to magnifie the Maiestie of his Gospell: and these skorners take vppon them to counterfaite his doinges. And after what sort? In cramming themselues, as I saide afore. Surely it was euen a deuice of Satan, to deface the heauenly power which was vttered in our Lorde Iesus Christ. Agayne if they will needes resemble the sonne of God in fasting fortie dayes, they should do it but once in all their life. For Iesus Christ fasted but once in all his life. And why then will they goe beyonde him? Beholde the ſonne of God diſcharged himſelfe with once faſting; and theſe ſkorners will needes beare the worlde in hande that they followe the example of Ieſus Chriſt. Beſides this, they will needes frame themſelues to the faſhion of the Iewes alſo: & becauſe there was a feaſt among the Iewes, wherein it behoo-ued them to afflict themſelues: theſe men will alſo needes doe the like. Yea, but that was not Gods intent. For it was a commaundement peculiar to the Iewes, that they ſhoulde obſerue the ſaide feaſt, as whereof the ceremonie was giuen vnto them, Neuertheleſſe the truth thereof remaineth to vs, to ſhewe vs that as the Iewes puniſhed themſelues once a yeare, to take inſtruction thereby according to their ſmall skill: ſo nowadayes wee muſt be ſorie for our faultes as long as we liue.

And herein we ſee further, that the Papiſtes haue not onely played the hypocrites, but alſo moſt ſhamefully and diueliſhly exalted themſelues againſt God. For firſt of all their faſting of the Lent, and their going to ſhrift, is but to haue the freer ſcope to diſpiſe God, and to let him alone, and to turne their backes vpon him all the yeare after. They make a ſorie countenaunce and wring their mouthes, and play the Popeholy hypocrites when they come to the paſſion weeke as they tearme it, and yet afterwarde they ende the matter with belking out this diueliſh byworde, that they ſende it away into Galilee, and ſo like villains they skoffe at God and all religion. The tongues ought to bee plucked out of their heades which dare blaſpheme after ỹ faſhion. And it is not the baſer ſort of the common people, but the wiſer ſort and as will needes bee counted I wote not what, which vſe that kinde of ſpeech. And ſo ye may ſee what confuſion is among them, ſith they deſpiſe God after that faſhion, and fall to kicking againſt him, like wilde oxen, and yet in the meane while wil needes ſhroude themſelues vnder the example of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. But a man may ſee not onely that the thinges wherewith they woulde pleaſe God are baggagely trifles, but alſo ỹ they bee ſo ſhamefull abhominations as doe well bewray that they rebell againſt the holy Ghoſt, and againſt ỹ Maieſtie of God. And yet are they not contented with that, but they proceede alſo to the murdering and martyring of Gods children, ſhedding their giltles blood euen without any remorſe or ſcruple of conſcience. For when they come to ſhrift, they neuer bethinke them of that, but they confeſſe how they haue not obſerued ſuch an Apes toye, and howe they were not at maſſe ſuch a day, and how they haue omitted ỹ doing of ſuch a flimflam. To be ſhort, they mocke God openly. And if a man ſhewe them their wicked life by Gods worde: they be ſo vtterly paſt hope of amendement, that they ſpitte at all warninges and harden their hearts more and more, becauſe they be forepoſſeſſed with ſuch intollerable pride, that they fall to ſet vp their hornes euen againſt GOD. Thus yee ſee what wee haue in effect to remember concerning the feaſt of Affliction.

Alſo there was the feaſt of Trumpets, which ſerued to put the Iewes in mind, that they ought to ſtirre vp themſelues to be vnited in God. For as for them ỹ haue gloſed that it was in reſpect of the offering vp of Iſaac in Sacrifices, (as the Iewiſh Rabbins haue fantaſtically ſurmiſed) they ſay nothing to the purpoſe. But it is not to bee doubted that God ordeined the feaſt of Trumpets or Cornets, of purpoſe to ſtirre vp his people to returne vnto him. And why? For they ought to conſider thus: Although wee haue not ỹ Trumpets ſoũded dayly to cal vs to the Temple: yet ought we to remember that God calleth vs dayly, to the intent we ſhould yeeld ouer our ſelues wholly vnto him, to worſhip him, & ſerue him, as he requireth; and moreouer bee knit & vnited together, that we may drawe ſtill neeret and neerer vnto him. Thus yee ſee what manner of inſtruction the Iewes had by the feaſt of Trumpets. But what a thing is it that Chriſtians wil needes haue the like guiſe, and reſemblaunce of it once a yeare by ringing of Bels? In deede ỹ Papiſts do their indeuour to follow this commandement. For at euerie of their ſolemne feaſtes, they thinke that God is well paide, when they haue roong their belles luſtily, and wakened the Ghoſtes of ſuch of their friendes as are deade. Lo what witcheries they haue among them, yet ſtil at this day. But is it not apparant that the making of ſuch a feaſt is againſt the intent of God, becauſe it ſerued but for the people of olde time that were vnder the lawe? When the ſaide feaſt was obſerued yearely, ſuch as heard the Trumpets were warned by it all the yeare after to thinke thus: wel, although we be farre from Ieruſalem, and cannot repaire thither dayly to doe ſacrifice in the Temple: yet are ſacrifices offered there in our behalfe, and God is worſhipped there in the name of vs all. Neuerthelater, wee muſt not forget the good that GOD hath doone vnto vs: but euerie of vs muſt ſerue for a Trumpet to ſtirre vp himſelfe, that our liues may be aunſwerable and conformable to the thinges that are done daily in the Temple. Lo what the Iewes had. And what haue we nowe?

The figure (as I haue ſaide afore) is paſſed away and aboliſhed by the comming of our lord Ieſus Chriſt. Then remaineth it that wee our ſelues ſhoulde be Trumpets, that is to ſay, that wee ſhould waken vp our ſelues, becauſe we be beſotted, yea and euen ſo wedded to the worlde and to the vanities that are here beneath, that it neuer commeth in our mindes to thinke vpon God. Therefore muſt wee not onely feele the ſounde of a Trumpet or of a bell, but rather an inward remorſe of good conſcience, ſo as wee repent and bethinke vs thus: How now wretched wight? Beholde, the liuing GOD ſtoopeth ſo lowe, as to ſpeake vnto thee dayly, calling and alluring thee by meanes of his Goſpell, and crying vppon thee without ceaſing, to come vnto him: and yet for all this wilt thou continue deafe ſtill? Then muſt thou returne vnto him, when hee draweth thee ſo carefully: and thou muſt not tarie till there bee a ſolemne holyday to call thee to the Church, there to keepe the feaſt of Trumpets: but it muſt ſerue thee al thy life long for a ſpurre to make thee to return vnto God. That is the thing (ſay I) which we haue to beare in mind. And as much alſo is to be noted concerning ſorrowing: For it is not for one day onely that wee muſt be ſorie in our heartes and bethinke vs of our ſinnes. But foraſmuch as we fal to them inceſſantly, & there paſſeth not any day wherein we offend not GOD: let vs match it with ſorineſſe, and let vs mourne for it, and not play the vnthriftes which make a skorne of all that euer a man can alleadge to them out of the worde of God: but let vs bee afraide of his iudgementes and threats, and yet therewithall let vs not doubt but he will giue vs whereof to reioyce, and that although wee bee faine to paſſe through many ſorrowes and hartbitinges in this worlde, yet in the ende he will deliuer vs from them, to make vs partakers of the heauenly reſt. After this maner (ſay I) muſt wee put this doctrine in vre, concerning the feaſtes which the Iewes had of old time in figure and whereof wee haue nowe the trueth & ſubſtaunce, as it is brought vnto vs by the ſonne of God.

Now let vs kneele downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our ſinnes, praying him to make vs feele them better than we haue done, ſo as wee may returne vnto him, with true and vnfained repentaunce, and bee ſtirred more and more to amende our faultes, knowing that our good God is ready to receiue them all to mercie which come to him with lowlineſſe. And that for aſmuch as he hath graunted vs the grace to haue nowe ſo full light of his Goſpell, as may wel inlighten vs throughly: it may pleaſe him not to ſuffer our eyes to be blindfolded, that wee ſhould walke any more in darkeneſſe, but to graunt that wee keepe ỹ right way, and indeuer to bring others into the ſame, ſo as God may be glorified with one common accorde of all men. And that for the performance hereof it may pleaſe him to raiſe vp true and faithfull miniſters of his word, &c.

On Fryday the viij. of Nouember. 1555.

The C. Sermon which is the fourth vpon the ſixteenth Chapter.

13 Thou ſhalt keepe the feaſt of Tabernacles ſeuen dayes, after thou haſt gathered in thy corne feeldes and thy vineyardes.

14 And thou ſhalt reioyce in the feaſt, thou, thy ſonne, thy daughter, thy manſeruant, and thy womanſeruant, the Leuite, the ſtraunger, the fatherles, & the widowe which are within thy gates.

15 Seuen dayes ſhalt thou keepe the feaſt to the Lorde thy God, in the place which the Lord ſhall haue choſen: for the Lord thy God, will bleſſe thee in al thy fruites, and in all the workes of thy handes: and therefore ſhalt thou reioyce.

16 Three times a yeare ſhall all thy males appeare before the Lord thy God in the place which the Lord wil chooſe: that is to wit, in the feaſt of vnleauened bread, in the feaſt of Weekes, and in the feaſt of Tabernacles: and none ſhall appeare emptie before the face of the Lord.

17 But euerie man ſhal giue according to his abilitie, euen according to the bleſſing of the Lord thy God, which he ſhall haue giuen thee.

WE haue here to treate of the feaſt of Tabernacles, which was a memoriall of Gods preſeruing of the Iewes in the wilderneſſe, where was no houſe. For he had kept them by the ſpace of fortie yeares vnder Tentes, and ſmall boothes: the cauſe wherof was that he had ſo remoued them from place to place, that they had no leaſure to builde, nor ſtuffe wherewith to builde. Therefore it was meete that they ſhould be put in remembrance of it, that being come into the lande of Chanaan, they ſhould not giue themſelues to iollitie, and forget it when God had ſet them at reſt. For we ſee howe men are giuen to fall aſleepe and to neſtle themſelues when our Lorde remoueth them not. To auoide this danger, it was Gods wil that ỹ Iewes ſhoulde yeare by yeare depart out of their houſes and dwell in Tentes, that is to ſay vnder the open skie in arbers made of boughes, and for ſeauen dayes together minde that benefite. For it was an incredible thing that God ſhoulde haue preſerued ſo great a multitude of people with their yong children, in boothes & tentes wout houſes. We knowe ỹ houſes ſerue to keepe off both cold & heat and al other diſcõmodities. Needs therfore muſt it be ỹ god wrought after a wonwonderfull faſhion, and it was meete that his goodnes ſhould be acknowledged in that behalf. We ſee then nowe wherefore this feaſt was ordeyned vnder the lawe. For the ſeruing of God cõſiſted not in ỹ peoples ſhifting of their places, for it had beene but a ſtage play, to haue come to Ieruſalem, and there to pinch themſelues, & to dwel a while in Cabanes, vnleſſe it had beene to ſome ende, and that they had beene taught ſome thing whereby to magnifie Gods name, & to put their truſt in him: accordingly as I haue declared heretofore that all ceremonies muſt implie ſome learning and inſtruction, or elſe they be but pelting baggage: yea it is but a mocking of God, if the faithfull be not edified, that they may alwayes liue in the feare of God to reſt vppon him and to call vppon him with the better courage. If it bee not ſo, it is but ſuperſtition: and the thinges are not onely vnprofitable, but alſo abhominable before God. Nowe then the feaſt of Tabernacles was a traynment to the people of Iſraell, to ſhew them that if they were at reſt and at their eaſe in the land of Chanaan, they had not alwayes beene ſo, but that God had led them after a ſtraunge faſhion through the wilderneſſe: and that if they were contented with Cabanes and arbers; it behoued them alſo to applie themſelues to the prayſing of God for his deliuering of them out of the Land of Egypt by ſo manie miracles. The Iewes as fooles that woulde faine diſcharge themſelues to Godwarde by hypocriſie, did indeede keepe the feaſt it ſelfe, but they leſte the meaning of him that had commaunded it. For euen at this day ſtill they keepe the feaſt according to the letter, and they haue a number of pretie apes toyes which they obſerue diligently. As, that their Cabanes be not too cloſe, but made full of holes, nor that the boughes bee not too thicke platted, but ſo as a man may ſee the ſtars through them, and that there bee Loopeholes to looke vpon the skie, ſo as the skie may glimſe vppon their eyes. All of them (I ſay) doe vſe ſuch trifling toyes, but in the meane while they conſider not whereunto God meant to direct them. By which example of theirs wee bee the better warned not to regarde the letter of the lawe: but to ſeeke the ende which God pointeth vs too. And ſeeing that the Iewes had ſuch inſtruction: let vs conſider what fruit we ought to reape nowadayes of the feaſt of Tabernacles. It is not nowe any more in vſe that wee ſhoulde be bounde to the keeping thereof: but yet the doctrine thereof continueth ſtill, and concerneth vs as much or more than the Iewes. And our keeping of the feaſt of Tabernacles muſt not be for a weeke or twayne, but for all our life long. And why? For if wee be not ſtraungers in this worlde, we ſhall haue no part in the kingdome of heauen. Will we haue God to auowe vs for his children? Let vs keepe on our way here beneath, aſſuring our ſelues that this life of ours is but as a iourney, or rather but as a race. And it is not enough for vs to goe, but wee muſt alſo runne a pace, holding on our way ſtill to that ende, and alwayes ſtraining our ſelues to attayne vnto it. For except we ſtreine and inforce our ſelues we ſhal neuer get one ſteppe forward, but wee ſhall retyre fower backe for it. Agayne we ſee howe ſlow we be, and how manie meanes Satan hath to hinder vs: and therefore we muſt euen fight againſt ſuch impedimentes. And ſo let vs marke, that the thinges which wee reade here in Moſes, declare vnto vs that for aſmuch as it was Gods will that the Iewes in the time of the lawe ſhoulde haue a weeke to put them in minde howe they had beene as pilgrims in the wilderneſſe, and that he had maintayned them there after a ſtraunge faſhion: we in theſe daies (becauſe the figure is aboliſhed) muſt repaire to the trueth, that is to ſay, wee muſt remember that God harboreth vs in ſuch ſort in this world, as that he wil not haue vs to neſtle here, nor to be ſo intangled in it as to make it our euerlaſting reſting place, but to ſtie vpward ſtill, and to bee here as birdes ſitting vppon a bough. True it is that God is ſo fauourable to a great number, that they neuer remooue from home of all the time of their life, and yet they be neuer the leſſe Chriſtians for all that: but yet muſt not any man make him a neſt vppon earth vppon imagination that he will reſt here. Where as Saint Paul ſaith that he had no reſt; he meant it ſpecially of himſelfe and of certaine others of the faithfull, whome God toſſed from poſt to piller. But as for the meaning of the mind, that muſt needes bee common to all the faithfull, namely that they haue no reſtingplace in this worlde. Although then that GOD do beare with ſome mens weakeneſſe, ſo as they neuer remoue out of the place where they were borne, but continue at home ſtill in their owne houſes: yet muſt they conſider that they ought to bee alwayes readie and to haue one foote ſet forwarde, againſt the time that it ſhall pleaſe God to remoue them into ſome ſtraunge countrie ſo as they make not their reckening to be ſo ſetled in any place, that they ſhoulde not departe from it, but rather bee readie to goe, whenſoeuer GOD calleth to fleete anie whither elſe.

2. Cor. 7. 5.

Againe, let thoſe whome God remoueth vnderſtande, that he giueth them the prerogatiue aforehande, to put the thing in vre which the holy ſcripture ſheweth vs: namely, that we bee made pilgrims here beneath, to the intent wee ſhoulde haue our reſting place in heauen: and let it confirme them ſo much the more in ỹ hope of ỹ life to come, ſo as they may pluck vp a good hearte when they bee ſo driuen from place to place, and not be too much greeued at it, becauſe it is a warrant to them that God hath reſerued a better reſtingplace for them. After that manner ought all of vs together to obſerue the feaſt of Tabernacles. Let ſuch as remooue not, thinke neuertheleſſe, that they haue not any perpetuall ſtate of abiding in anie place certaine, but muſt offer themſelues to GOD to goe whitherſoeuer it pleaſeth him. And as for them ỹ are fain to remoue out of their countrie, and are drawen a farre off; let them vnderſtande that Gods walking of them after that fa-ſhion in this worlde, is to the ende to drawe them out of it, and that they ſhould not ſet their mindes vppon it. Yee ſee then howe with one common accorde, we ſhall make a good obſeruation of this feaſt, I meane as ſpiritually. For nowadayes we haue not anie more the figures of the lawe: but yet muſt the trueth of the Goſpell needes bee conformable to the figures that were among the fathers of olde time. And herewithall wee muſt alſo be readie to remooue a good pace, ſo as wee muſt not be tyed nor helde backe to this corruptible life, but goe to GOD with a free heart whenſoeuer it pleaſeth him to take vs hence. And indeede, what houſe ſoeuer we dwel in in this world, our bodie is always going away. If a man be asked which is his cheef houſe, he will not goe ſeeke his chamber, nor his kitchen, nor any other of his houſes of eaſe: but hee will ſay it is his bodie. Nowe let vs conſider what our bodies are. Wee may wel build vs houſes of ſquare ſtone. Riche men make them pallaces, and laye all their lande about them thereto. Their building is ſubſtantiall, it is able to indure much, it is not to bee feared that it will rotte ouer haſtily, nor that it will bee marde with winde or wether; neither is there anie thing in it to be altered: And though ſome hanginges of it bee to be remooued, that is all one; the walles are ſo good, that at a hundred yeares ende they bee as ſounde as they were at the firſt day. Well may a man make ſuch a building: but can wee builde our bodies ſo, as they may be of any long continuance? No. Our Lord therefore doeth laughe thoſe foolke to ſkorne, which are ſo blinde that they imagine they ſhal liue euer the longer for their building of their goodly houſes, bearing themſelues in hand that it is a meane to make them tarie ỹ longer time in this worlde. But (as I ſaide afore) all houſes are nothing in compariſon of our cheefe houſe, which is our bodie. If a man paſſe not for hys chamber, nor for his kitchen, nor for his parlour, but woulde go ſeeke ſome corner in his ſtable, and betake himſelfe to that, ſaying, this is the ſureſt and ſubſtancialleſt place, I had leuer tarie here thā in anie other part of al my houſe: folke woulde laugh him to ſkorne as a foole. Likewiſe if a man be proude of his houſe, and haue no regarde of his owne perſon whereof he ought to make much greater account: it is euident, that he is out of his wits, and vtterly voide of reaſon. What is to be doone then? Wee muſt

2.Cor.5.1. come backe to this leſſon of Saint Paules, that if our outwarde man decay, wee haue a building prepared for vs in heauen. For this lodging of ours muſt decay, and fall quite downe, but yet ſhall wee be fully reſtored againe, and then ſhal wee dwell in an vncorruptible houſe. There Saint Paule ſheweth vs the thing that I ſpake of before, namely that our bodies (when we haue neuer ſo great account of them) are but as arbours made of Leaues, which are of no continuaunce: one blaſt of winde will blowe them quite and cleane downe. Seeing it is ſo, let vs walke in lowlineſſe, and lift our mindes aloft: for wee haue promiſe that there we ſhall be immortall & vncorruptible. And we muſt not thinke it ſtrange that our bodies ſhoulde bee compared to Arbors of leaues which are of no continuance: for take mee the ſtrongeſt bodie in the worlde, and yet cannot the force therof continue long time in one ſtate; but that if the ſaying of the Prophet Eſay be founde true as in reſpect of our ſoules, it muſt needes bee verified much more of our bodies: namely that a man is but a flower, and that allbeit he flouriſh for a time, yet is one blaſt of winde enough to make him to wither, and to bring him to nought. Such is our ſtrength euen when it is at the beſt. But beſides this, there is none of vs which feeleth not a great ſort of inconueniences in himſelf, to the intent we ſhould forſake this preſent life, and not bee too much addicted to it. Take me the ſtrongeſt man that is, and hath hee not ſome diſeaſe or other that will not ſuffer him to indure long? Againe if a man be once paſt a certaine age, he falleth by & by to declyning; inſomuch that a man may ſee and perceyue with his eyes, that euen without ſickneſſe he ſlydeth away like water. Indeede moſt men doe neuer thinke of it: but what booteth it thē to blinde themſelues? Nay it is a monſtruous thing that euerie bodie ſhoulde ſee how a man goeth to naught, and yet bee ſo blinde as not to perceiue it in himſelfe. On the contrarie part, if our Lorde be ſo gratious to the faithfull as to remooue them to and fro, and to put them vnder many diſeaſes: it is to quicken them vp to goe forwarde with earneſter willes to their heauenly inheritaunce, becauſe they doe but hang their winges in this worlde, continually drooping nowe after one ſort and nowe after an other, and liuing as it were halfe deade. Sith it is ſo, let them vnderſtande that God worketh for their benefite and ſaluation. And it is a very profitable leſſon, when wee haue learned to keepe the feaſt of Tabernacles ſpiritually: that is to ſay, when we haue learned to paſſe in ſuch wiſe through this worlde, as wee goe on further.

And if we be demaunded howe ſuch perſons can be Chriſtians, as are ſeiled in wealth and at their eaſe: the aunſwere thereunto is that euery man muſt beware firſt of all that hee ſeeke not his owne eaſe too much. For we heare howe S. Paul ſaith, that wee muſt not cocker our fleſh in ỹ luſts thereof. And why? Becauſe there is no ho when wee once beginne to followe our owne likinges: they be ſo far out of order, that there is alwayes ſomewhat amiſſe in them. They therefore which will be lodged after their heartes deſire, ſo as there may be nothing amiſſe in their ſtate: doe put themſelues in great hazarde of falling into a ſounde ſleepe, and of intangling themſelues in ſuch wiſe in the worlde, as they may neuer thinke more vppon the heauenly reſt. And therefore a man cannot keepe too good ameaſure nor too ſtayed a hand in that behalfe. Not that wee can bee tyed to any certayne rule, for we muſt vſe Gods creatures freely. If wee ſhoulde be ſcrupulous at euerie thing, what woulde come of it? Either wee ſhoulde neuer be thankefull to God for the benefites that he beſtoweth vppon vs, becauſe we bee not ſure that he hath giuen vs leaue to vſe them freely: or elſe wee ſhall become hardhearted and ſtubborne to vſe them as it were in deſpite of GOD, by meanes whereof all thinges ſhoulde bee corrupted. So then, we muſt vſe our houſes as wee doe all other commodities of this preſent life, without making any ſcruple of conſcience in thē But yet therewithall, we muſt beware (as I ſaid afore) that we giue not the bridle to our fleſhe, by ſatisfying the deſires thereof: for it is a bottomleſſe pit, and we can neuer come to the bottome of it.

Againe beſides this, let ſuch as are planted commodiouſly, beware that they ſal not aſleep. But rather whereas the children of this worlde doe welter in their delightes, and ſo feede themſelues with them, that they vtterly forgette the kingdome of heauen: Let the other ſorte learne to conſider thus: Goe to, albeit I bee planted here to my commoditie, yet muſt I not be tyed too much to this world. Wheras my luſts would holde me backe, I muſt ſo fight againſt them, as all the impediments in the worlde may not reſtraine me frō looking continually towards heauen. After that manner muſt the faithfull deale. And ſuch as are not planted at their heartes deſire, muſt conſider how our Lorde putteth them in mind, to goe continually forwarde to the reſt of heauen, warning thē of it both earely & late, as a thing which is for their benefite, & behoofe to be put in mind of. Inſomuch that if the Iewes had ſuch inſtruction as was meet for them: ỹ exerciſe that God giueth to his faithful ones nowadayes in planting them not ouer much to their liking, is a far better learning than was the auncient ceremonie of the law. Whoſoeuer then do find any diſcōmoditie, and are not at their eaſe; let them vnderſtande that God by that meanes pricketh & ſpurreth thē to ſeeke the reſt of heauen; & ſtrengtheneth them therewithal in ỹ hope which they haue of their ſaluation.

And this concerneth not onely a mans houſing, but alſo all other things as I ſaid afore: ſo as ỹ body with al thing belonging therunto, is the cheefe houſe which we haue. Therefore if we be now & then diſeaſed, ſo as we cānot take ſo quiet reſt as we faine would, nor haue things ready alwaies at hand: let vs conſider ỹ our lord handleth vs like wayfarers. When a man ſhalbe in his own houſe which is well ruled, they faile not to ſerue him at his own houre, & to haue ſuch meat prepared for him as he beſt liketh: but if he be abrod in the country, he ſhall not haue al ỹ he would: for folk are not acquainted with his complexiō: & whereas he is wont to dine at ſuch an houre, he muſt be faine to tary an houre or twaine longer. And again, when he hath ſuppedperaduenture he ſhal not be ſo well lodged as in his owne houſe. Now muſt wee apply all this to our ſelues: namely ỹ in this world we be as waifarers. Therfore if our Lord do now & then diſappoint vs of things ỹ we deſire, it is to the end wee ſhould run a pace through this world & alwaies keepe on forth ſtil, til we come to ỹ kingdome of heauen, & not be tyed & faſtened to ỹ earth. Thus ye ſee how this leſſon extendeth generally to al things that concerne this tranſitory life.

And yet neuertheles it is ſaid expreſly, That the Iewes in keeping this feaſt ſhould be merry, & alſo make other men merry with them. Whereby we ſee ỹ we ought not to be ſad, though our Lord make vs to waſte away by litle & litle. Or rather hee ſheweth vs ỹ he will not haue vs to make anie ouerſūptuous building here below, but ỹ we ſhold be contēted with our lodgings of boughs which wil ſoon rot. Sith it is ſo, we muſt not be ſory, but rather reioyce in our God. And it is a very profitable point and well worthy to bee noted. For it may be ỹ ſome man wil be ſufficiently warned to depart out of this world, in ỹ he ſees himſelf ſick, or in ỹ ſom ſtrange miſhaps befal him: by reaſon whereof he thinkes vpon death ouerofte, and doth nothing but mourne, deſiring to be diſpatched at the firſt puſh. Such are to bee ſeene: but yet for al that, their departing is not without ſorowing. For what ioy can they haue, except they know that God draggeth them through ỹ world of purpoſe to lift them vp to heauen to the companie of the Angels? If they know not that, ſurely they ſhal haue their harts alwayes diſtreſſed with anguiſh and greefe, accordingly as we ſee how the vnbeleeuers repine, and neuer commit themſelues to GOD, but mūrmur and grudge againſt God. And although their mouth ſpeake not, yet haue they no gladnes nor reſt in their harts. Then let vs learne to keepe ỹ feaſt of Tabernacles after ſuch a ſort, as we may be merrie in the Lord: that is to wit, as it may not greeue vs that our bodies ſhould conſume away by litle and litle, vntil they be turned again into rottenneſſe; or that our Lord ſhould cut vs quite off frō our bodies, & vtterly diſpoſſeſſe & bereaue vs of all ỹ euer we haue in this world. For why? Hee doth it to draw vs vp to heauen. Therefore let vs goe ioyfully, and let our hart be inlarged to giue our ſelues wholy to our God. That (ſay I) is the thing which we haue to doe.

And it is the ſame thing ỹ S. Paul ſpeaketh of, howbeit hee ſheweth vs ỹ meane alſo how to put this leſſon in vre. True it is ỹ by nature we ſeeke not to be diſſolued or caſt downe. If yee ſay to a man, my friende, are you willing to die? It were againſt nature for him to ſay yea, vnles it were to ſome better ende: for his deſire is to haue being ſtill. Indede the vnbeleeuers do beſot themſelues in their deſiring to be: for this beeing of theirs is but to cram themſelues, to eat & drinke, to fil their bellies like ſwine, to ſleepe like beaſts, and to looke vppon pleaſaunt thinges, as folkes that are caried altogither with ſenſualitie. Thoſe are the things wherein the vnbeleeuers repoſe themſelues. And in the meane while they be ſo dull, that they conſider not that that beeing of theirs is no being at all, and that the ſtate of this preſēt life is but a ſhadow which is euer fleeting & neuer at any ſtay. But contrarywiſe when the godly ſay, it is good to liue, thereupon they conclude, that it is not for them to couet death vnleſſe it be to exchaunge for the better. Neuertheleſſe, when they take holde by faith vppon the heritage which God hath promiſed them:

then are they desirous (and not without iust cause) to depart out of this mortal body, ỳ it may be renewed againe. We see then as nowe, howe we may dwell with ioy in tentes: that is to say, by being assured that after wee be passed out of this worlde, we shalbe taken vp into the resting place which God hath prepared for vs, & which was purchased for vs so dearely. Therfore let vs go on with a free courage, & let vs not cease to keepe on our pace, vntill we be come to our end. And let vs always conclude with ourselues, ỳ it is enough for vs to hope continually that the heauenly rest shall not faile vs, after that God hath exercised vs in this world, and tossed vs to and fro. Thus ye see in effect how we ought to keepe this feast with gladnesse.

Now for a conclusion Moses addeth, that they must resort thrise a yeare to Ierusalem, and there shew themselues before God, as many as were males, & none to come emptie, but euery man to make some offering to God, according to the blessing that God had giuen him. This maner of speaking that the Iewes shoulde come before the face of God, serued for the better expressing that the sanctuary was not a vaine and vnprofitable figure, but that God vttered his power there, to shew in very deed ỳ he dwelled among his people. If Moses had saide singly, yee shall resort to the Sanctuarie: euery of you shall make his offering before the Arke of couenant: the Iewes had not bin so wel certified, that their comming to call vpon God in the sanctuary, was not in vaine. For they might haue said, very wel, indeed wee haue the figures & ceremonies, but yet are we not sure ỳ God wil heare vs. But when it was said, ye shal come shew your selues to god, it was a greater edifying of them, because they were wel assured that the ceremonies of ỳ lawe were not deceiuable. Yet notwithstanding, it was not to make thẽ to set their minds vpon the visible signes, & so to hold themselues still downe: but they were to consider, ỳ although God stoop to apply himselfe to our infirmitie, yet is it not his meaning therfore to hold vs downe to these earthly thinges: but contrarywise his comming downe to vs, is to make vs to stie vp & to seeke him aboue; so ỳ when we haue visible signes, we should consider ỳ his glorie surmounteth ỳ heauens, & is infinite, & therefore that we must worship him with our minds lifted vp aboue ỳ world, and aboue al things that are corruptible. And so yee see that this maner of speech where it is said, ye shalbe in the presence of your God when yee be come into his sanctuarie: was profitable, and imported a very good lesson to the Iewes. For why? God shewed in very deed, that he had not instituted those signes without cause, but that thereby he made his grace and power to be felt of the faithfull, when they came thither to call vpon him. But yet for all that, it behooued the faithfull therewithal to worship God spiritually.

Esa. 66.1.2. For we see howe the Iewes are reproued for this: in ỳ they corrupted his seruice, by reason ỳ they supposed to shut him vp within their Temple. Shall I dwell in a house made with mans hande saith the Lord? If the Iewes had replyed & said, Why not? for it is said, when ye come to the sanctuarie, ye shall bee there before the face of your God. Yea, but that is no excuse. For Gods ordeining of his sanctuarie to dwell there, was not in such wise that hee woulde forsake his heauenly glorie: but to come seeke men here beneath, and to lift them vp aboue. We nowadayes must remember the like.

For when God sendeth vs his word, and addeth ỳ sacraments for a confirmatiõ of the same: it is asmuch as if he shewed vs his face, at leastwise so farre as we are able to abide it. For wee be rude and earthly, and cannot beholde God as he is, and therefore he is faine to applie himselfe vnto vs. Yet notwithstanding wee must so seeke him after the maner that he vttereth and declareth himselfe vnto vs; as we be not tyed to the visible signes, nor intangled with them as we see the wretched Idolaters are, which alwayes take occasion to turne away from GOD, by meanes of the helpes which hee giueth them to bring them to him. Therefore let men beware of such abuse. Indeede when we speake of the Lords supper, wee can well enough say that Iesus Christ is there present, and that wee possesse him. When we come to the receyuing of the bread and ỳ wine, we can say they be no emptie signes, but that we haue there the very substance, insomuch that Iesus Christ imparteth himselfe to vs, so as wee bee fedde and nourished with his body and bloode. So then Iesus Christ offereth himselfe to vs in his supper. But is it to bee saide therefore, that he commeth downe from heauen, and that he is to bee sought after a superstitious manner, as the Papistes and such other like doe in these dayes? No: but it serueth to lift vs vp to heauen, and to make vs vnderstand that although Christ dwelleth there, yet wee ought not to doubt but that his power reacheth vnto vs, and that we be made partakers thereof, and that when we receiue the breade & the wine, they be true warrantes of that which I haue saide. Yee see then that we be in the presence of our God, by beeing partakers of Christs last supper. As much is to be saide of Baptisme; namely that in the water of baptisme we behold the bloude of our Lord Iesus Christ, and the redemption which he hath purchased for vs: So as it is to vs as a liuely picture; & not only that, but also wee haue the trueth so ioyned with the image and portrayture, as the effect must needs bee felt and perceiued. Neuertheless it standeth vs alwayes in hande, to beware that wee abuse not the Sacraments: namely that wee be not so fleshly, as to sticke to the world: but that seeing God is come downe vnto vs, we also on our side doe mount vp vnto him: and therewithall assure our selues, that our Lorde in giuing vs his sacramentes, giueth vs not rittleratles and childishe trifles to busie our heades withall: but that hee giueth vs the verie trueth, to the end we should be knit vnto him, and that we might feele that his power is euer at hande with vs. Thus much concerning the saying where Moses speaketh againe of Gods presence, & cõmaundeth ỳ Iewes to resort to Ierusalẽ, whẽ God should haue chosẽ ỳ place: & in the meane while to resort to ỳ place where where ỹ arke of ỹ couenãt & ỹ ſanctuary were ſet vp. And finally he ſayth, That they ſhould not come empty before the lord, but that euery man ſhould bring ſomewhat according as God had bleſſed him. Some haue taken this text to bee a kinde of promiſe, as though God had ſayd that ſuch as reſorted vnto him, ſhould not go their way againe empty. True it is that if wee ſeeke God, wee ſhall finde plenty of all good things in him, according as it is ſayd, Pſal. 34. 6. Come vnto him and ye ſhall be inlightened, and your faces ſhall not be aſhamed. Therfore let vs not thinke that wee ſhall want any thing if wee ſeeke God, for he will fill vs; as hee is riche, ſo is he liberal, we ſhal be ſatisfied, and haue our fil of al thinges ỹ wee haue neede of for our ſaluation. Then is it very true in it ſelfe, that all ſuch as offer themſelues before God, ſhal not return emptie according as it is written;

Pſal. 81. 11. Open thy mouth and I will fill it. But as in reſpect of this preſent place, it is certaine that Moſes ſpeaketh of Offeringes: and wee muſt not bring in any other gloſes. For hee declareth that euery man ought to offer according to the giſte of his hande, that is to ſay, according to his abilitie. For that kind of ſpeeche were ſtraunge to vs, if wee were not made to vnderſtand it; namely, that euery man ought to conſider what GOD hath giuen him, that hee may doe him homage for it. Therefore looke what wee haue in our hande, that let vs take to offer vnto God, and to make ſacrifice to him withall. In the tyme of the Lawe, the offeringes were applyed to ſuch vſe as wee haue ſeene heeretofore, and wee neede not to rehearſe the Ceremonie any more. As nowe it remaineth that wee doe homage to GOD at all tymes, with the goods that hee hath beſtowed vppon vs. And howe may that bee doone? By
Iob. 35. 6. Pſal. 16. 2. Hebr. 13. 16. Almesdeedes. For wee cannot increaſe him by beſtowing any thing vppon him: but yet hee accepteth whatſoeuer wee giue to the poore. Thoſe are the ſacrifices which hee requireth and alloweth nowadayes. Therefore muſt we beſtowe them there. And ſeeing that our Lord offereth himſelfe vnto vs, not thriſe a yeere onely, but manifeſtly in the perſon of his ſonne Ieſus Chriſt, ſo as hee dwelleth with vs continually: let it bee a meane to drawe vs to him euen with an earneſt minde, that wee may haue our hande alwayes open to offer vnto him. If wee had the Sanctuarie, and that it behoued vs to preſent our ſelues thriſe a yeere at Ieruſalem: wee ſhould doe the thing that is commaunded vs heere, and yet ſhould not that ſerue to exempt vs from doing of Almesdeeds al the yeere after. For if there were no more than the Ceremonie, it were a ſmal matter as I haue ſaid afore. But where is Gods Temple now? Beholde Ieſus Chriſt, who filleth ỹ whole world; he is with vs, & dwelleth euen in our ſoules. Sith it is ſo then, let vs ſee ỹ we imploy our ſelues to make our offerings: & ſeeing that our God doeth vs ỹ honour
1. Cor. 6. 19. 2. Cor. 6. 16. 1. Pet. 2. 9. to appoint vs to be his Sanctuaries & Temples; inſomuch ỹ euery Chriſtian man is ỹ Temple of the holy Ghoſt, & euery Chriſtian hath ỹ honorable title of Prieſt: and ỹ otherwiſe we ſhoulde neuer be counted ỹ temple & houſe of God: it is good reaſon ỹ euery man ſhould occupy himſelf inceſſantly wout end, in offring him ỹ ſacrifice of praiſe, ſo as he may bee acknowledged in all his beneſits & bleſſings which he beſtoweth vpõ vs.

And it is not only the doing of Almes deedes, ỹ he accepteth for ſacrifices: but wee muſt alſo ſerue him & worſhip him, w̃ al our thoughts, with all our deſires, with all our affections, and with al our members. So then, that wee may not appeare emptie in the preſence of our God, let vs looke ỹ we bring him good fruites & ſuch as he requireth: & let vs beware ỹ we bee not vpbraided, as Ieremie vpbraided ỹ Iewes when he ſaid, What haue I done for thee my vine? I haue planted thee, I haue dreſſed thee; & thou bringeſt me forth bitter fruite. Therefore let vs bring good fruit to our God, ſeeing it hath pleaſed him to till vs, to the end we ſhould doe good, and not be vnprofitable. And how may that be? True it is that we cãnot bring any thing to him, neither can he be inriched: but when we indeuer to glorifie him in our whole life; that is the fruite which he requireth and maketh account of. Seeing then that he graunteth vs the grace: let vs profit continually vnder him, & let not vs on our ſide be emptie. Notwithſtanding, it is certaine that we haue not one drop of goodneſſe, vnleſſe he giue it vs: for we be barrein. In deede we be too fruitful in bringing forth euill: there are too many bryers & brambles to be found in vs: but as for of good corne, there is not one graine to be found in vs, vntill God haue put it in vs. What is to be doone then? We muſt pray our God to bleſſe vs, that is to ſay, to powre out his holy ſpirite ſo vppon vs, as wee may haue good fruite to bring vnto him: that wheras we be nothing, he may giue vs a being; and whereas we be nought woorth, he may make vs ſome what worth by his manuring of vs, ſo as hee may be glorified in vs. For it is not ynough for vs to haue Gods gratious giftes in vs; but he muſt alſo make vs to put them to the vſe whereto he hath ordeined them. And heere let vs call to mind what hath beene declared heeretofore: namely that God will not haue vs all to reioyce our ſelues, but alſo to make our neighbours partakers of our gladneſſe: and alſo to call vnto vs, not onely the husband and his wife, and the father and his children; but alſo euen thoſe that are furtheſt off from vs, and to indeuour to bring them after ſuch a ſorte before the face of our GOD, as the veryeſt ſtraungers and thoſe that are furtheſt off from vs, may bee partakers of our mirth and feele the benefite of it, bicauſe it is made common, according to the ſame ſaying of Moſes in this preſent Text, that the ſtrangers, the widowes, and the fatherles muſt be merrie with thoſe that preſent themſelues after that maner to God, to offer ſacrifice vnto him.

Now let vs fall downe before the Maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs feele them better, that being vtterly in miſliking with them, we may ſeeke to be reformed by his worde, and profite therein more and more: And that for as much as he doth chiefely commaund vs to paſſe through the world, and to aſpire to ỹ kingdome of heauen; we by this making of vs to feele our owne wretchednesse, may bee stirred vp by the same meane to seeke the saluation which he hath promised vs, and whereinto our Lord Iesus Christ is entered to guide vs thither by his example: And that in the meane while we may be confirmed by the power of his holy spirite in the doctrine ỹ he giueth vs, so as we may neuer be turned from it for any impedimentes that can befal vs, but that we may alwaies keepe on our course, till he haue rid vs of this mortall body, and clothed vs againe with his owne immortall glory. That it may please him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs, but also to all people and Nations of the earth, &c.

On Saturday the ix. of Nouember. 1555.

The Cj. Sermon, which is the fifth vpon the sixeteenth Chapter.

18 Iudges and Officers shalt thou make thee in all thy Cities which the Lorde thy God giueth thee throughout all thy Tribes, to iudge the people with iust Iudgemement.

19 Thou shalt not wrest the Lawe, nor haue regarde of persons. Thou shalt not take any reward. For gifts blinde the eyes of the wise, and peruert the woordes of the righteous.

HAd wee continued in the same soundnesse of nature wherein God created vs: ỹ order of Law (as men terme it) should not be so needefull, bicause euery man should cary the law in his heart, so as no man needed to be compelled to obedience, but euery man should know his rule, & wee should all with one accord followe that which is good & rightful. And therefore law is as a remedie against the corruption ỹ is in men. As oft as there is any talk concerning earthly gouernmẽt, we must vnderstand ỹ therein we haue a mirror of our frowardnes, in ỹ we are faine to bee compelled to ỹ following of vprightnes & reason. For they that are in authoritie, haue the sworde in their hand: and to what end? To represse such as burst out into excesse and outrage. And wherof commeth that, but that whereas mẽ ought of themselues to seeke the thing that is good and iust, they turne it vpside downe, and goe about to bring all to confusion, if they bee not letted? Surely it is a great shame, (considering that God hath created vs after his own image, & giuen vs dominion & soueraignte ouer al his creatures,) ỹ we should be faine to be inforced to it by reasõ of our naughtines. Picke me out the most despised of all men, & yet doeth he carie in himselfe the image of God, and the saide token of soueraignte. Yet for al that, wee bee faine to become vnderlings, and that is bicause of our sinne, as I saide afore. Let vs know therefore that God hath not stablished the order of earthly gouernment without cause: but that he had an eye to ỹ corruption ỹ is in vs. Hereby we be well warned (as I saide afore,) to humble our selues, seeing our sinnes require such remedie. But yet ought wee to magnifie Gods goodnes, for ỹ he hath prouided aforehand, ỹ all should not go to vnrecouerable confusion among vs, which thing woulde come to passe if we might do what we listed. For if the stronge:t might goe away with the goale, what would come of it? It were much better for vs to be in ỹ forestes among wolues and wilde beasts, thã to be among mẽ, if all things were at libertie. For no beastes are so woode, as are our own lustes. Therfore let vs acknowledge ỹ wonderful goodnes of our God, in ỹ he hath had such care to preserue vs, ỹ forasmuch as he sawe wee coulde not maintaine our selues vnlesse there were lawes to hold vs in, & Iudges to execute ỹ things ỹ are set down in writing: he hath prouided for al. Also hereby we are put in mind to loue the state of Iustice, forasmuch as we know it is a singular gift of God, & a meane to preserue mãkind. If we loue the light of the Sunne bicause we cannot liue without it; and if we loue bread and whatsoeuer else belongeth to our sustenance: let vs also loue ỹ order of Iustice. For it is to no purpose to haue meate & drink & all other commodities, seeing ỹ without lawes & Magistrates wee should bee depriued of all Gods blessings; and it were better for vs to be dispatched out of hand, than to eate vp one another as it would come to passe. And therefore we must esteeme ỹ order of Iustice, to be a president of Gods grace, and wee must make account of it as it is worthy, euery of vs indeuouring al ỹ he can to maintaine it: For wee shewe our selues to bee deadly enemies to peace & to the cõmon weale, if we loue not the state of Iustice. And all such as trouble it, & go about to peruert it, are as theeues, and are to bee esteemed as enemies of mans welfare. In so much that all men ought to fight against them, when wee see them goe about to bring in such horrible confusion among vs.

Rom. 13.4. 1. Pet. 2. 14.

Gen. 1.26.

Now it is not for nought said here againe, that when the people were come into the lande which had bin promised vnto them, they should make them Iudges and Magistrates euerywhere. This matter hath beene expounded alreadie in the first Chapter: but yet is it not without cause that GOD repearepeateth it heere againe. For he intendeth to shewe that it is to no purpose to haue good and iust Lawes, vnlesse there be men to set them in force and to put them in execution. This hath beene told you afore; neuertheleſſe it is requisite that you be put in mind therof again. For we see how God spekeath of one thing oftentimes, to the intent we should set ỹ more store by it, and thinke vpon it, and not forget it. Euen so doth he now confirme the former speeche which he had concerning Magistrates. And indeede, it is not without cause ỹ the common prouerb termeth them the soule or life of the Lawe. For what are all the lawes and statutes of the world? They be but dead things. They be lapt vp in paper, and are nothing worth, vnlesse there be men chosen to giue them their force & to make them to bee obeyed. And so ye see what God meant here in saying that the people should choose. Surely such freedome was a singular gift: & we see it is not grafted to al men. Where Princes haue soueraigntie, they appoint Iudges at their owne pleasure and liking, and ambition beares all the sway there. In so much that a Courtier which is in credite, shall not onely obtaine offices for himselfe, but also cause them to bee giuen to others at his appointment. Nay there is yet greater and more shameful corruption. For offices are set to sale nowadays aswel as al other kind of marchãdize. Seeing then that we behold such examples, wee must needes thinke it an inestimable gift, when God graunteth a people or Nation libertie to choose their owne Iudges and Magistrates. And verily when God gaue that priuiledge to the Iewes, it was a ratifying of his adoption, and of his choosing of them to bee his heritage, and that he meant to haue them to bee in better and more excellent state, than any of their neighbours, who had kings and Princes, and no such freedome at all.

Deut. 1. 13. 14

Now as this thing deserueth to be had in great estimation: so ought they that haue obtained such benefite, to vse it with a good and pure conscience. For what is the cause that our Lord bereaueth vs of his benefites, but that we marre them by our abusing of them? We know wel that whatsoeuer God bestoweth vpon vs is desirable, for we see ỹ commoditie therof: but yet in stead of vsing of it holily with thanksgiuing, wee will needes make it to serue our lustes. Nowe when God seeth his benefites turned so to our bane, & that we draw them cleane contrarie to his meaning: he bereaueth vs of them. Are we destitute of them? Wee see whereof it commeth: And we thinke it straunge: but wee consider not howe God hath borne with vs a long time, and that in the end he wil not haue his gifts to be scorned & reproched. Therfore whesoeuer God hath done vs any good, let vs learne to maintaine ỹ same by our good & pure vsing therof. For ỹ next way to make the possession thereof to abide with vs, is to beware that we defile not the things which God hath sanctifyed to our profite. And therefore if we haue libertie to choose Iudges & Magistrates: forasmuch as it is an excellent prerogatiue (as I said afore:) let it be maintayned and vsed with good conscience. When a people hath this prerogatiue, let them looke well to the setting vp of their Iudges, that thay may bee as the Lieuetenantes of God. Wherefore let no such men be put in place, as will either be brybed, or haue bin leaudly giuen aforetimes, or as are vnable to beare such a charge: But let such bee sought and founde out as are meete for it, as though they were marked out by God. And because we haue not sufficient discretiõ to choose aright: let God bee called vpon. For it is not ỹnough to seeke out such as are meete and sufficient to execute an Office; but for as much as wee may bee beguiled in that case, by reason of our owne weakenesse, and by reason of the deepe dissimulation that is in men, in so much that when neuer so narrowe search hath beene made, yet the euill will euer set it selfe foreward: let men desire GOD to ouerlooke them, and to giue them wisdome and discretion. Thus ye see what we haue to marke vppon this saying, where commandement is giuẽ to choose and ordaine Iudges and Magistrates.

And it is sayde expressely, In euery Citie. For what a thing were it, if men shoulde bee driuen to goe farre to seeke Iustice, when disorders are committed euerywhere? Seeing that misdemeanors are rife and touch vs neere: if the redresse should bee delayed too long, it would not boote at all: a hundred faultes would bee committed, before one could bee prouided for. Therefore doth our Lord say, ỹ they should bee appointed in euery Citie: as if he should say, that men haue alwayes neede of some bridle. And that is the thing which I touched afore, when I saide that we which are created after the image of God, and ought to raigne ouer al creatures, haue neede to bee held in subiection. For as wee haue peruerted the order of nature, so is it meete that God should cut vs short, & shew vs that wee bee so farre vnable to rule, that wee bee not meete to haue freedome, but had neede to bee helde in awe. So then let vs learne, that whereſoeuer vice and corruption is, there ought the remedie to bee applyed out of hande. True it is that there was in deede a soueraigne Court of Iustice in Iewrie; yea and wee haue seene in the first Chapter, that the hardest matters and the cases of greatest importaunce, were referred to Moses. Yet notwithstanding, it was Gods will that there shoulde bee some order euerywhere, that if any disorder were cõmitted, it might bee prouided for out of hand, & men should not neede to run farre to require Iustice. For in very deede it behoueth Iudges & Magistrates to watch, & not to tarie till they be called vpon & importunately required, but punish ỹ euil as soone as they see it. I say as soone as they see it: for they ought to spie & keepe good watch. It is not ynough for a Magistrate to punish ỹ he knoweth to be wicked: but he must also make diligent inquisition, as wee haue seene in other places. And if men went ỹ way to worke, matters should be in better order. That is ỹ thing which we haue to marke, in ỹ our Lord will haue Iudges and Magistrates in euery Citie. For otherwise many many euils might be committed, before any redresse could bee had, so as the remedie woulde come too late as I haue touched before.

Furthermore, whereas Moses addeth that they must giue iust iudgement, and gouerne the people after that maner: it serueth to confirme that which wee heard euen nowe, namely (first of all) that men can not gouerne themselues, except they haue superiours to guide them, which thing is plainely expressed concerning the Iewes, whom God had preferred before all other nations. Let vs vnderstand then that of good right wee bee dispossessed of the freedome which God had set in mankind. For why? We turne the good into euill: and therefore is it meete that we should bee bereft of it. A man in health shall haue libertie to eate what he listeth, and he shall not bee dealt with so precisely: he needeth no Phisition to forbid him such a meate, or to restraine him from drinking, otherwise than in such measure or at such an houre. But if a man bee sicke, he must bee at obedience, he must keepe a dyet, he must bee helde short like a childe, and he is restrayned of all thinges that he lyketh, in so much that if he commaund his owne seruant to bring him this or that, his seruaunt must not be so bolde as to doe it. Yea and when maisters bee diseased, they are subiect to their seruantes, so as they cannot inioy their owne goods. And why? Because they be not meete to haue them; by reason of their disease which ouermaistreth them: and therefore are they fayne to bee as vnderlinges. Euen after the same manner standeth the case with vs: insomuch that if wee were in deede whole and sounde, God woulde guide vs after another fashion. But forasmuch as he knoweth vs to be so corrupted, he is fayne to compell vs, yea and to restraine vs in such sort, as wee haue heard of. Thus much concerning the first point.

Againe for the second, Moses declareth and setteth forth that which I said cõcerning choise making: namely that in the seate which GOD hath dedicated to himself, no such persons must be put, as turne all thinges vpside downe. For if such be chosen for publike Magistrates, as leade a wicked trade, as in whom there is no feare of God, no honestie, no vprightnes, but wildnesse, wantonnesse, and disorder; or in whom there is no more wisedome than in Asses, but to be short are madbrayned or frantike: if such (I say) be set in place of publike office; it is not a dishonouring of men, but a working of high treason against God, bicause it is a defiling of his seate. So then it behoueth vs to wey well how Moses saith heere, that when it commeth to the chosing of Officers, men must not set vp Idols, nor iudge of them without tryall. And why? Bicause it is a dishonouring of God, to set such persons in his roome, as are not worthy to haue the ruling of a house. Yee shall see a man that is not able to gouerne his owne household, such a one as is not to bee trusted to for any thing, folke shall say of him, yonder fellowe is a foole, hee is a dizard, hee hath no reason, hee hath no stay of himselfe, hee hath neither wit nor discretion to guide himselfe or his household: and yet for all this, shall men goe and set him in the seate of Iustice? He is a man that cannot liue quietly with his wife: & shal he be able to keepe a whole Citie in quiet? Men preferre him to bee a counseler. And to what end? To see the peace maintained. And how can that be? Hee hath no moe but his wife and household to gouerne, and yet he is not able to weelde them. When he is at home, he is not able to guide his wife and his children. Now when thinges go arsiuersie after that sorte, God is openly despised. So much the more therefore doth it stand vs in hand to marke well what Moses saith heere: namely that the chooſing of Iudges & Officers is not a matter of formalitie, or a Ceremonie: but a holy thing wherein men ought to proceed with all reuerence: and that God laieth not ỹ bridle vpon any peoples neck, as if he should say, Take whome yee list at aduenture without consideration: but he portrayeth out the persons, and pointeth them out with his finger. Looke to it (saith he) that ye vse discretion in chooſing the persons that shall haue ỹ ruling of the people. For the word: To Iudge, importeth to gouerne. And secondly, let them iudge vprightly sayth he. Whereas he speaketh of gouerning, it is not without cause. For it is to no purpose to chooſe such as haue needc of Tutors. To prefer those to the guiding of others, which ought to be put vnder the direction of others, is too great a skorning of God. Again, the case here concerneth Iustice and vprightnesse. Therefore ỹ chooſing of officers before they be wel knowen and throughly tryed, is surely a marring of all good order. And therof come so many changes & turmoyles. We wonder to see our Lord ouerthrow Common weales, and to behold how the Nations that were free, are greatly distressed & ouerwhelmed with tyranny: but wee looke not from whence all those thinges proceede. The ground thereof was the abuses which were committed, bycause there was no regarde had of the mainteining of the state which God had stablyshed, nor care to follow faithfully the order that God had inioyned. So much the more therfore doth it stand vs in hand to beare well away the things that are tould vs heere.

Moses hauing sayde so, addeth nowe, That men must not wrest the lawe, nor haue respect of persons, nor take rewardes or giftes. And he addeth the reason. For giftes (saith hee) doe blind the eyes of the wise, and peruert the wordes of the righteous. First he setteth downe heere a generall rule, that men should not wrest the Lawe. For in deede wee may liken equitie to a right lyne: and if it wrythe to the one side or to the other, by and by it is iniquitie. And therefore Moses sayeth, thou shalt not wrest the Lawe, that is to say, thou shalt haue thyne eye vppon the lyne of Iustice, and followe it without swaruing one way or other. And heerewithall hee sheweth howe the same may bee performed, namely by respecting no mans person, and by eschewing to take rewardes. For when we consider a deede simply in it selfe; euen nature teacheth vs what to doe. True it is that wee had neede to call vppon GOD continually: for wee ſee howe weake of vnderſtanding and courage wee bee euen in the thinges that are moſt euident: oftentymes wee bee ſtarke blinde in them. Then muſt not men preſume vppon their owne wit, and thinke themſelues wiſe ynough to iudge of all thinges that are ſet before vs: but wee muſt vnderſtand that it is a heauenly gifte, as Salomon declareth. And if wee bee combered in the ſmalleſt matters; howe ſhall wee doe when we come to giue ſentence of matters of great weight? Iudges therefore muſt firſt humble themſelues, and conſider that if they bee not gouerned by Gods holy ſpirite, they ſhall not bee able to holde them to true Iuſtice; and therefore they muſt referre themſelues to GOD and aske counſell at his mouth, that they may bee taught by his word; and they muſt giue themſelues ouer to his ſpirit, and ſubmit themſelues thereunto.

Eccle. 2. 26.

But beſides this, Moſes ment to ſhewe heere the cheefe cauſes of all the impeachmentes of Iuſtice. For (as I ſayd afore) if wee haue an eye alonely to the deede, without reſpecting the perſon, ſo as wee bee not poſſeſſed aforehande eyther with fauour or with hatred: it is certaine that wee can skill to giue ſentence aright. And if it coulde bee brought to paſſe that the parties ſhould not come in ſight, that it might not be knowen who were the playntife and who the defendant; ſo as the Iudges might not bee allured and carryed away either with bryberie, or with flatterie, or with lyes and gloſes, or with ſuch other thinges; but that the caſe might bee layde before them ſimply and nakedly as it is: wee ſhould not ſee the thing which all the world now reweth, that is to wit, that men commonly can obteine no right and Iuſtice. For by nature (as I ſayd) we can wellynough skill to ſay, this is good, this is iuſt, this is vpright. But as ſoone as the parties come in our ſight, that we ſee they be our neighbors or friendes; or the one a great man or a rich man, and the other a poore man; and there is bringing of allegations on both ſides, ſo as one ſeekes to win the goale by threatninges and bragges, another by ſweete woordes and preſentes, and bryberie trotteth a pace to make way: all then will be turned vpſidedowne, and they which ſawe cleerely before, become nowe ſtarke blinde. And therefore let vs marke, that it had beene ynough to haue ſayd in one word, that men muſt not peruert the law; but that men are vnable to keepe themſelues from euill, if they be not told how and after what maner they may maintaine themſelues in ſoundneſſe and vprightneſſe: namely by hauing no regard of the perſons, and by ſhunning all couetouſnes, for taking of rewardes.

As for the worde Perſon, I haue expounded it elſewhere: namely that wee muſt not reſpect whether a man bee riche or poore, great or ſmall, a ſtraunger or a neighbour, and ſuch other like thinges. For the woord perſon ſignifieth another thing heere, than is ment by it in our common ſpeech, when we ſay, There is a perſon, that is to ſay, there is a man or one of mankind.

Deut. 1. 17.

For in this place the worde which Moſes vſeth in Hebrew, ſignifieth a face, viſage, or countenaunce. Wee muſt not then regarde the countenance. And what is ment by that? The thinges that are ſeene, the ſtates of men, and their outwarde ſhowe. And the worde Shewe expreſſeth the meaning of Moſes well ynough. Then muſt thou not reſt vppon the outwarde ſhowe: For if I ſee a man poore, I deſpiſe him; if I ſee him riche, I honour him; if I ſee a man of authoritie, I ſtand in feare of him; if I ſee a wretched abiect, I make no accoût of him, but rather holde skorne of him. See howe the outwarde ſhowe here marreth all. I ſee a man that is able to pleaſure mee; O, I will incline to him, that he may pleaſure mee againe. I ſee another that can doe mee neither good nor harme; O, it skils not howe he ſpeede. Againe, I ſee one by whoſe hurt I may aduauntage my ſelfe: I will doe it. And why? Bicauſe my minde lookes no further but to the outward ſhowe. Nowe wee ſee the meaning of Moſes, and I haue ſpoken of it alreadie in the firſt Chapter of this booke: howbeit it is not for nought that the holy Ghoſt maketh rehearſall of it againe here.

Wherefore let vs learne in fewe wordes, that ſuch as haue an eye to mens perſons, that is to ſay, regarde the outwarde ſhowe, cannot holde their owne to deale vprightly and indifferently; but that they muſt needes bee mooued either with feare or with fauour, to giue the vpper hand alwaies to the wicked perſon that ſtandeth in the wrong. And why? For feare leaſt he ſhould be reuenged: and elſe for hope to be benefited againe at his hand for the fauour that he ſhall haue receiued. And therefore let vs remember, firſt that God requireth a ſtoutneſſe in them that are Iudges. If they ſee a riche man or a man of honour: well, let them take him as he is, and yet neuertheleſſe iudge the caſe as it requireth. But this ſtoutneſſe of minde is ſeldome to be found any where. For although the Iudges doe purpoſe with themſelues to follow ỹ law, yet are they commonly ſeaſed with a kind of fearefulnes, by meanes wherof they be daunted whē it cōmeth to ỹ point ỹ they ſhould ſtand to their tackling. And therefore is there good cauſe why ſuch as ſit in the ſeate of Iuſtice, ſhould reſort to God, & carefully pray him to ſtrengthen thē in ſuch wiſe, as they may not be like to reedes ỹ are ſhaken ẅ euery winde, but freely follow ỹ courſe that God hath appointed them, without ſwaruing or bowing any maner of way. Let vs marke then firſt of all, that we muſt haue this ſtoutnes of not being afraide at the ſight of any mans greatneſſe or countenaunce, that his authoritie or riches doe not any thing auaile him, but that the caſe may ſtand in firme ſtate, without hauing our eyes dazeled to ſay, This is a great man, and therefore I muſt fauour him.

Againe on the other ſide, I ſaide alſo that wee muſt not deſpiſe ſuch as are had in contempt to the worldwarde. Bicauſe I ſee a man is poore, I beare my ſelfe in hande that it makes no matter though I doe him wrong. For wee bee oftentymes at that poynt. If there bee a man of no reputation, we thinke our ſelues diſcharged if we can ſay; well, I haue doone wrong to a poore creature, which is not taken to bee of the common ſorte: but that is nothing, for no man complaines of it. But God will haue right and equitie to be miniſtred to all perſons. Therefore let ſuch as are aduaunced to degree of honour thinke, that if they deſpiſe the meaner ſorte and ſuch as ſeeme to be the outcaſts of all the world: they ſhall giue account for it. For if God vouchſafe to regard thoſe kind of folke, and to haue a Pſal.116. 6. care of them; yea and (which more is) do name himſelfe their defender: wil he ſuffer them to be ſo troden vnder foote, and to bee borne downe withoppreſſion and tyranny, without reuenging them? So then, Iudges muſt match their ſtoutneſſe with gentleneſſe, and incline themſelues euen to the meaneſt, receiuing them into their protection, and looking to the maintenaunce of their cales when they be good and rightful. Thus ye ſee what we haue to remẽber in this text.

Were this rule well held, we ſhould not heare ſo many complaintes, neither ſhould thinges be ſo farre out of order. But what? yee ſhall ſee a good iudgement giuen, and a fault or offence puniſhed as it ought to be: and byandby in ỹ turning of an hand, ye ſhall ſee the like caſe goe vnpuniſhed. And why is that? Becauſe the perſons of men doe beare al the ſway. There is a caſe wherin a man is conuicted by the thinges which he himſelf was to ſpeake: it falleth out apparant, and thereupon he is to haue ſome puniſhment, and he hath it in deede. And why then is not the like done in al other like caſes? O becauſe the partie is fauored. In deede men ſeeke many colours and diſguiſings: & it is ſo much the worſe: but yet cãot God be deceiued, whatſoeuer ſhifts be made to ſhroude our matters with all. Neuertheleſſe the worlde ſees howe this reſpecting of perſons peruerteth all right, and that it is almoſt an ordinarie thing. Inſomuch that for ſome one nice point, a mã is oftẽtimes graueled in a caſe, which of it ſelfe were plaine & manifeſt ynough, if the parties themſelues came not into the play, that ỹ Iudge might giue ſentence vprightly, without reſpecting the outward ſhowes which I ſpake of afore. But the Iudges being preuented with the regard of the perſons, doe caſt great doubtes where none at all is, to ſay this & that. And what is the cauſe thereof? Alwayes the reſpecting of perſons. And in deede, in ſome caſes a Iudge will goe through with them, and diſpatch them quickly: and in ſome other in all pointes like, he will haue ſo many deuiſes, that he can neuer determine it. Wee ſee then howe great the leawdneſſe of men is in this behalfe. Yet for all that, our Lord wil not haue the inſtruction which he deliuereth here to his people, to be loſt or vnprofitable. Therefore let vs looke that we make our profit of it.

And let vs marke that as Iudges and Magiſtrates are forbidden to haue any reſpect of perſons: ſo is the ſame warning made to vs all. For what is the cauſe that wee fayle ſo ofte in dooing our dueties, but that wee bee ſo preuented with this reſpecting of parties? Therefore let vs haue ſuch ſtoutnes of corage, as no greatnes, no pompe, no authoritie, no honour of this world may get the vpper hand of vs to peruert vs. And on the other ſide, let vs haue ſuch myldneſſe as wee deſpiſe not the meaner ſorte, but rather bee gentle to receiue them. Thus much in effect concerning the woorde Perſon.

Now there is a ſecond point concerning briberie and rewardes. Thou ſhalt not take them, ſayth the Lord. He ſaith not, thou ſhalt not ſell Iuſtice: but he ſaith, thou ſhalt not take. And why ſo? he addeth the reaſon: For gifies (ſaith he) doe blinde the eyes of the wiſe, and peruert the wordes of the righteous. Heere is a reaſon well worthy to be weied. For it ſeemeth at the firſt ſight, that to take ſome preſentes is not euil nor to bee condemned, I meane in a Iudge. For he ſpeaketh here of the preſentes and gifts that are giuen in reſpect of ſome caſe that is to bee heard. As for example, a malefactor laboureth to ſcape vnpuniſhed, and hee goeth about to win the Iudge by ſending him ſome preſent. Likewiſe another man puts himſelfe foreward, and to haue fauour againſt his aduerſarie prartie, hee goes and giues the Iudge ſomewhat likewiſe. Now our Lord ſaith not, Beware of it: If thou receiue a preſent to fauour the partie that giueth it thee, it is ill done, and it is a ſetting of Iuſtice to ſale. God ſpeaketh not thoſe preciſe wordes: but he ſaith, Beware of taking: for it is vnpoſſible that he which hath taken, ſhould behaue himſelfe vprightly and not ſwarue aſide. Neuertheleſſe there are a great ſorte to be found which will ſay, As for mee, although I take, yet doth it not therefore follow, that I will ſwarue from myne office: For when I haue taken on both handes, I will giue him the glike which thought he had won me by his giuing. And is that ſo euill a thing? Why then was he ſo fooliſh to bring it me? If he bring, I take: but yet for all that, I ſtep not aſide from my duetie. Such kinde of folkes would make GOD a lyer. For we heare how it is ſayd heere, that gifts doe blinde the eyes of the wiſe. If they thinke themſelues ſo ſharpe ſighted, that the receauing of rewardes cannot dim their eyes: God ſayth the contrary. And if they thinke themſelues ſo conſtant, that they cannot bee bowed; God telleth them that as ſoone as they haue taken any gift, they bee vtterly mard, and there is no more ſoundneſſe in them. Now then it is too groſſe a fondneſſe to ſay, I will take rewardes, & yet for all that, I will keepe my ſelfe wellynough from turning away, or from ſwaruing from the right. But that is vnpoſſible; for then ſhould God haue lyed in this text. Thus ye ſee what we haue to remember in the firſt place, concerning the ſecond point.

Now therfore, they that ſit in ỹ ſeat of Iuſtice ought to thinke thus: doth he that bringes mee preſentes, bring them of good will as one neighbour to another, or as one friend to another? or bringeth hee them rather for ſome matters ſake which he hath before me? Then if a man haue a cauſe before a Iudge, & the Iudge take a preſẽt of him; he offẽdeth god. Who ſo? Becauſe God hath for-forbidden him, and he knoweth wherefore. It is not for man to say, It makes no matter, I wil take heede well enough for being bridled by it. But it is a tempting of God when we deale so, and God will hold skorne of our ouerweening, and will shewe vs that we bee not of such abilitie as wee tooke our selues to be, and that he did not without cause tell vs, that when wee be lymefingred to drawe presents vnto vs, and to hold them fast when we haue them: then are our eyes blinded, and then are our hartes wrested, so as wee haue no more wisedome nor vprightnesse in vs. Seeing that God sayth so, it is not for vs to reply against it. And in deede, whosoeuer they be that boast themselues to be vnable to be corrupted, or to bee made to steppe aside by taking of presentes: they neede not to bee brought before God to bee conuicted, but euen young children may iudge of them, It is too common a thing, and I could alledge examples thereof that are knowen welinough. For there are some which are growē to so great vnshamefastnesse; that they sticke not to say, As for me, I will take on all handes. This hath bin heard, and there are witnesses enow that can beare me record of the matter. And in the meane season what protested they? Tush, I wil not be corrupted for all that. No: but when little children haue seene that Iustice hath bin set to sale, and that a leawd man hath gotten the vpper hand in all cases, what is to bee sayd of it? As for him, so he might play his pranckes, and obtcine his sutes: he had cast his cardes aforehand. And on the otherside, those to whome the presentes were brought, went lyke swine casting vp their groynes, so as there was lesse honestie and shame among them, than is euen among the heathen men and infidels. This hath bin seene: and yet notwithstanding they pretended in their talke to be holy men. O there were as godly and sweete wordes as could be: yea, but when the matter commeth to be spoken of, little boyes and idiots will giue their verdit of it: for the thing is too much knowen. Seeing then that our Lord telleth vs here, that if mē receiue bribes, their eyes must needes be dazeled, and their hearts corrupted: let vs beare wel in mind, that except we will poyson our selues wilfully, we must first of all keepe this rule, namely that Iudges must not take any thing, at leastwise of any body that hath aught to doe in Lawe before thē, but vtterly absteine from so dooing, vnlesse they intend to turne away from all good order, right, and equitie.

And herein we see how our Lord who knoweth our diseases, or deineth immediatly meete & conuenient remedies for the same. What remaineth then but that we on our side enter into examination of our selues, and euery of vs searche himselfe narrowly? For the thing that maketh vs so bolde to tempt God, is that none of vs entereth into himselfe, to looke neerely to his own vices and infirmities. But if we had the discretion to bethinke our selues, wee would consider thus, Alas, I neede not any thing to peruert me, I am as frayle alreadie as may bee: though there were no occasion at all to surprise mee, I would seeke occasion of my selfe. And what will I doe then when I meete with any euil occasion, or any cause of misdealing? I shall stumble and fall flat downe. So then, if wee aduise our selues wel of our vices it is certeine that we would seeke al the helpes that could be to preserue our selues. But seeing that God preuenteth vs, and on the one side sheweth vs how feeble and weake we be; and that on the other side, wheras we might fall into such mischiefe and inconuenience, he prouideth for it and saith, My friendes, true it is that ye be subiect to euill, but the way for you to bee preserued from it, is to absteine from such a thing, and to take such a remedy, seeing (I say) that God speaketh so familiarly vnto vs, if wee refuse him, I pray you dooth not our vnthankfulnesse deserue, that wee should be caryed away vnto all euill, and that Satan shoulde driue vs and beare vs quite away, and that God should forsake vs and suffer vs to fall into grosse offences as all the world might abhorre vs?

Now then, it standeth vs so much the more in hand to marke well this sentence, where it is sayd that if men withstand not the temptations that may beguile them; of wise and discreete, they shall become blinde; and of iust they shall become vniust. God speaketh not here of such as haue alwayes bin naughtipackes, in whome neither reason nor vprightnes hath borne sway at any time: but of the wise and righteous. And that is such a monstrous thing as ought to make our hayre to stand vp vppon our heades. As how? That giftes and presentes shoulde haue such force to corrupt, as that they should blinde the eyes of those which were of good discretiō. Now it is certeine that discretion is a singular gift of God. When wee speake of wisedome, we must not thinke that it groweth out of mens braynes, but that it is the gift of God. Ye shall see that God hath indued some mā with a good wit, by meanes whereof he behaueth himselfe in such wise, that he dooth good and commendable thinges. And yet if God let him alone, so as he giue himselfe to this corruption of taking rewardes: by and by the light which God had giuen him, not onely becommeth dim, but also goeth quite out. Therefore let vs learne to looke to our selues, and, (as saith S. Paul) let such as suppose they stand beware least they fall. For our Lord vseth here a horrible threate, whē he saith that they which saw cleerely enough, shall bee blinded if they giue thēselues to taking of giftes: and that they which were well and holily disposed, shall be peruerted and turned away vnto euill. When we heare this, ought we not to stand vppon our gard and to keepe good watch; least we be surprised by Satans wilines? So then, let vs preuent such temptations a good way aforehand. And sith we see that our Lorde forewarneth vs: let vs stand in feare, and not run rushing against him wilfully, nor fall to stubbornesse: but rather consider with our selues how that euen they which haue bin as halfe Angels, may be ouerthrowen and thrust out of the way, when they haue giuen themselues to it, & would needes vse too large dispensation. Wherefore let vs al learn to reine our ſelues ſhort, and to ſubmit our ſelues to the gouernment of our Lorde; and then we need not doubt but that if he haue giuen vs wiſedome and diſcretion, he will ſtrengthen vs more and more therein, and make vs to continue in them vnto the end; ſo wee goe to worke with praying vnto him continually to preſerue vs, as I haue ſayd afore.

Now let vs kneele downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to voutſafe to touch vs in ſuch ſorte, that we returne vnto him with true repentance: & that ſuch as haue publike charge, may behaue thẽſelues ſo dutifully, as they may be able to yeeld a faithful reckoning of ẏ charge that is committed to them: and that all priuate perſons may in ſuch wiſe ſuffer themſelues to be gouerned by them, as God may reigne among vs, and haue all ſouereignetie, ſo as both great & ſmall may be obedient vnto him. And for the bringing hereof to paſſe, it may pleaſe him to ſtir vp true & faithful Miniſters of his word, &c.

On Wednesday the xiii. of Nouember. 1555.

The Cii. Sermon, which is the ſixt vpon the ſixteenth Chapter, and the firſt vpon the ſeuenteenth.

20 In all caſes thou ſhalt follow the thing that is right, that thou maiſt liue and inioy the land which the Lord thy God giueth thee.

The Seuenteenth Chapter.

THou ſhalt not offer to the Lorde thy God, either Ox or Sheepe that hath any blemiſh therin: I ſay thou ſhalt not offer any euilfauoured thing: for that is abhomination to the Lorde thy God.

HItherto Moſes hath commended equitie & vprightneſſe vnto vs, ſaying that thoſe which are appointed to bee Iudges, ought to maintein euery mans right without ſwaruing. And thereupon he ſayd, that as many as intend to continue in ſuch ſoundneſſe, muſt beware in any wiſe of taking rewardes: for if they take any, by and by they be corrupted, by & by they be blinded. And it is not to be replyed here, that a man may well receiue a preſent, & yet haue no meaning to fauor any wicked caſe. For ẏ holy ghoſt hath giuen ſentence, that the man which is ſo giuen to taking of preſentes, ſhall bee blinded though he were the ſharpeſt ſighted man in the world. Nay, he hath a towell before his eyes already, and beſides that, whereas he was well & holily diſpoſed before, now hee is quite peruerted. We ſee then how it is a deadly poyſon, for a Iudge to receiue any preſentes in any wiſe.

And now to hold men the better in awe, Moſes addeth Gods promiſe, as if he ſhould ſay, that we muſt not be wedded to our owne profit, whẽ God on the otherſide offereth vs his bleſſing, & telleth vs that he will proſper vs, ſo we ſtick vnto him. And whether were it better for vs, to inrich our ſelues by vnlawfull meanes which God condemneth, and which ſhall come to an euill end: or to haue Gods fauor preſent with vs, and that the ſame ſhould neuer faile vs? Thus we ſee now to what purpoſe Moſes addeth this ſentẽce, That men ſhould follow vprightneſſe. Verily euen to the intent they may inioy Gods fauor, & that thou maiſt poſſeſſe the land (ſayth he) which the Lorde thy GOD giueth thee, and that thou maiſt liue long therein. This is a continuing of the ſame matter ſtill, which I haue declared before: namely that whereas God might commaund vs in one word; yet notwithſtanding to win vs to him, hee is ſo gentle that hee bindeth himſelfe to vs, and maketh a couenant with vs as it were betweene two parties. He hath authoritie enough to commaund vs, and it is not for vs to aske wherefore. Againe, he is not bound to promiſe vs any thing: for we owe him all that we haue, and he is indetted to none of vs. Neuertheleſſe he voutſafeth to yeelde to our infirmitie, according ly as we haue ſeene heretofore, that after his requeſting of ẏ which is our duetie, he addeth that we ſhall not be diſappointed in ſeruing of him. Yet muſt wee not conclude thereupon, that wee can deſerue aught at his hand: but rather we ſee his infinite goodneſſe, in that hee promiſeth vs his fauor freely after that faſhiõ. And therefore we ought to be the forewarder in dooing whatſoeuer hee commaundeth, notwithſtãding any impedimẽt that might hinder vs to plucke vs back. Vnexcuſable are we in theſe dayes, if we feele not ſome force of his promiſes, in quickening & ſtirring of vs vp to obey him. Hath God commanded it? That ought to ſuffice vs. Notwithſtãding, becauſe we be ſlowe and negligent, he addeth this help, that he commeth to win vs by gentlenes, as if a father ſhould flatter his child. See we this? Muſt it not needes be ẏ our hearts are too too much hardehardened,if they relent not at ſuch goodneſſe? Therefore when we feele that Gods commaundementes touche vs not ſufficiently to the quicke: let vs take theſe promiſes here, to ſtirre vp our ſelues the more,and to ſpurre vs the more forewarde.

Againe, let vs marke well the ſpeach howe he ſaith, Thou ſhalt followe vprightneſſe in all caſes. The wordes are; Vprightnes, vprightnes ſhalt thou follow. So doth Moſes ſpeake, how beit that ſome men tranſlate it, Thou ſhalt follow iuſtice vprightly. But when all is throughly lookt vnto, he meaneth nothing elſe but that men ſhould beare an euen hand in executing of iuſtice, following the right by ſtreight line, and perſeuering ſtedfaſtly in it without ſwaruing*. I ſay it behoueth vs to marke well this ſaying, bycauſe men will needs alwayes diſcharge themſelues to Godwarde by peeces: but as for to go through ſtedfaſtly with all things that he commaundeth; that is a very rare matter, (as the world ſeeth) ſpecially in thoſe which haue the handling of the lawe. True it is ỹ though they be wicked, yet wil they be aſhamed not to haue ſome goodly ſhew: & ſo now and then a man ſhal find ſome vprightneſſe and reaſon in them. But haue they done right to one man? To morowe they will deale contrariewiſe with another. Haue they puniſhed one miſdeede? Three ſhall go vnpuniſhed for it, after as the perſons are fauored and borne out. This partialitie is to be ſeene in maner continually: and it is a token that there is no vprightneſſe. And this is not to ſerue God: inſomuch that when indifferencie is not vſed in the miniſtration of Iuſtice, thoſe that are puniſhed cry out vnto God for vengeance, as though they were wronged. And therefore Moſes thinks it not enough that men ſhould ſimply doe Iuſtice; but hee will alſo haue them to proceede with it, and to continue it, ſo as there may be Iuſtice vpon Iuſtice: that is to ſay, a continuall holding on, ſo as no vndifferencie may be perceiued, nor any diuerſitie of weightes and ballances, nor any reſpect of perſons: accordingly as hath bin ſayd heretofore, that men muſt not leane to the one ſide for any fauor, nor forſake a good cauſe for any hatred, but be of ſuch ſtoute courage that they bow not one way or other for any thing. That is the way to mainteine Iuſtice.

This leſſon is apparant enough of it ſelf: there remaineth no more for vs but to fall to the practiſing therof. But as I ſayd, it is a very hard thing for men to frame themſelues to keepe an euen hand. So farre off is it, that this was written in vaine: that it is ſayd ỹ if we will proſper through Gods fauor, wee muſt keepe order continually among vs, ſo as euery man may haue his right: and that on the contrary part, without we doe ſo, God threatneth to bereaue vs of his bleſſing though he had giuen vs it before. And thereof it is that we ſee ſo many chaunges and alterations to happen in the worlde: namely for that when God hath bleſſed a people, & ſet them in as good ſtate as were to be wiſhed, by & by they fall to ryoting, ſo as the gouerners abuſe their authoritie, & the people take libertie to doe euill, when they ſee ỹ their Iudges are corrupted, by reaſon wherof God is fain to lift vp his hand, & to take away quite and cleane all that euer he had beſtowed vpon that nation. Wee ſee examples thereof too commonly. Wherefore let vs ſtand in awe, and let vs learne to liue the warelyer in the obedience of God, when he hath ſet vs in any proſperitie. Let euery man according to his abilitie, further the maintenãce of Iuſtice: and let ſuch as haue the ſword in hand, vſe it in ſuch ſorte as God may be honored, & not be driuen to bring vs to our arreignment for breaking of the order which he had ſet among vs: That is the effect of the thinges which we haue to remember in this text.

Now Moſes addeth, That men ſhould not plant any tree neere vnto the Altar of the Lord, nor ſet vp any maner of image. Wherby he prouideth ỹ there ſhould be no reſemblance betweene thẽ & the Idolaters & Gentiles: and alſo that there ſhould not be any memoriall of long continuance, for feare leaſt they ſhould learne or accuſtome thẽſelues to doe ſacrifice in diuers places. So are there two reaſons which Moſes hath an eye vnto in this text. The one is, ỹ he would haue ỹ ſeruice of God ſeparated from all ỹ ſuperſtitions of the heathen. The other is, ỹ he would haue folke to accuſtome thẽſelues to the worſhipping of God, and to offer their ſolemne ſacrifices in the place where ỹ Arke of ỹ couenant was, and that there might not be any peculiar religion throughout all ỹ countrie. As touching ỹ firſt, it is a point wel woorth the weying, ỹ God will haue his ſeruice to be ſuch as he himſelf requireth & appointeth, & that he will not in any wiſe haue vs to meddle with thoſe ỹ inuẽt & deuiſe ſuperſtitions on their owne head. In ỹ firſt place; Let vs marke thẽ how it is not wout cauſe, ỹ God is ſo charie of ỹ ſeruice ỹ we be to doe vnto him. For in deed, is it reaſon that men ſhould ſtand in defence & maintenance of their own right, and that God ſhould be diſappointed of his? And is there any thing more precious & holy, than ỹ honor which we yeelde vnto him, in proteſting him to be our God & father, of whome we hold all ỹ euer we haue, & at whoſe hand we looke for ſaluation? Is there any thing more holy than ỹ? Thẽ let vs learne to be attentiue when ỹ holy ſcripture ſpeaketh to vs of the ſeruice of God. For it is a thing ỹ paſſeth all other in dignitie. Marke that for one point.

And it ſtandeth vs ſo much the more in hand to giue our indeuour thereunto, becauſe wee ſee ỹ world holdeth ſkorne to yeelde God his due obedience. If a man ſpeake to a blaſphemer, or to a deſpiſer of ỹ orders of ỹ church, or (to be ſhort) to one that is no better than a dog: if a man tell ſuch a one of his leawdneſſe: To whom do I any wrong, ſaith he? If he had giuen a man a fillip, or had chaunced to haue ſpoken a croſſe worde, as ſmall as ỹ wrong is, he would haue confeſſed his fault and ſayde, I haue done amiſſe: and yet is this but againſt a mortall man. But when hee ſhal haue ſpit God in the face, tuſh, it is nothing, it is no wrong to any mã. Dayly ſhal a man heare ſuch ſpeeches. Inſomuch ỹ if God bee blaſphemed, and his maieſtie ſo ſhamefully diſhonored as would make a mans hart ake to ſee it: it is all one, there is no account made of it. But let vs mark (as I ſayd afore) that our Lorde will haue his ſeruice to be placed formoſt & in higheſt degree: and when the caſe concerneth the ruling of our lyfe, we muſt begin at that end; To wit; To honor him as he deſerueth.

Moreouer, let vs marke wel that it is not without cauſe, that he will haue his ſeruice ſo farre vnlyke all ỹ ſuperſtitions of ỹ heathen. For euen of our owne nature we be too much giuen to the corrupting & diſguiſing of thinges, by meanes whereof the pureneſſe of the true religion is peruerted. Euery man hath in himſelfe a ſtorehouſe of idolatrie, though hee be not prouoked thereto by others: & in what caſe then are we, when we light vppon ſtumblingblockes and occaſions, yea & euen go to ſeeke them? I ſee idolaters ỹ haue diſguiſed & falſified ỹ whole ſeruice of God, & I ſhall goe borrow of them I wote not what; becauſe this thing or that thing lykes me, I ſhall goe put it to that which our Lorde hath commaunded me. Am not I by and by snarled in the ſame folly that they were, which played ỹ naughtipackes before me? Yes ſurely. For although I regard neither ỹ one nor the other; yet haue I many vain fancies in my hart. And if I fal to ſeeking of ſuch thinges of ſet purpoſe: it is all one as if I did caſt my ſelfe into Satans ſnares. And therefore let vs mark, that our Lord meant to preſerue his ſeruantes from a deadly plague, when he ſayd that they ſhould holde them to ỹ pure ſimplicitie of his word, and not reſemble ỹ paynims and infidels in any caſe. In thoſe dayes the heathen for deuotion ſake, made ſhadowes about their Altars, lyke as at this day in ỹ Popedome, if a place be darkeſome, it ſeemeth to thẽ to cary ſome maieſtie in it, and the ſimple ſorte are as it were amazed when they come into a Caue, and where the windowes be dimmed with red or blewe glaſſe, mens eyes dazle at it, and fillie ſimple ſoules feele a kind of motion in thẽſelues which maketh them afraid & aſtoniſhed: and to their ſeeming, it is good to ſtirre them vp to deuotion, bearing folke in hand that it is a reuerencing of God, whereas in deede it is ſtark fooliſhneſſe. After the ſame maner did the heathen in plaſhing of trees to make places darke, that when men entered into them, they ſeemed to be agaſt, as though a woolfe had bin at their tayle as they ſay, by reaſon whereof they were moued to ſome fearefulneſſe. Now foraſmuch as this cuſtome was among the heathen, our Lord will not haue the faithfull to reſemble thẽ. Thus in fewe wordes, we ſee heere how all maner of reſembling the vnbeleeuers is forbidden vs, if we intend to ſerue God in ſuch wiſe as hee may lyke of it and take it in good woorth.

And this warning is as needefull for vs nowadaies, as it was for ỹ Iewes in the time of Moſes. For what a nũber of deuices are there in ỹ Popedome, which haue bin taken from the ſuperſtitions of the heathẽ? All that euer is termed Gods ſeruice in the Popedome, is but a cõfuſed heape, gathered out of the thinges that are commaunded in the Lawe of Moſes, & the thinges that are ſeene to haue bin obſerued of the Heathen. And to colour the matter wal, they alledge that their ſo dooing, is leaſt the Iewes ſhould vpbraide the Chriſtians ỹ they haue not ſo goodly ceremonies in their Churches, as they haue. And therefore they muſt needes haue this and that, after their example. True it is ỹ they haue not bin ſo bold as to kil brute beaſtes in ſacrifice; for ỹ had bin too deteſtable. But yet they tooke vp their Lampes, their perfumes, their attyrementes, their altars, and a certaine maner of ſacrifycing, though it be not of Calues, Oxen, & Sheepe. Beſides this, the Iewes had their waſhings; & therfore the Papiſtes would needes haue holy water, To be ſhort, the Iewes were ſo throughly counterfeited; that to all ſeeming, they could not boſt that they had mo goodly ceremonies in their tẽples, than ỹ Chriſtians had in theirs. But ỹ was high treaſon againſt God. And if there had bin no more but meere folly in it, it might haue bin ỹ better born w. But it tended to the darkening of the grace of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, by drawing a new veile ouer him. The veile ỹ God had commaunded to be in ỹ temple, is rent aſunder: and they fal to hanging vp of another ỹ is wrought by ỹ hand of man: by means wherof Ieſus Chriſt is as good as hidden, ſo as men can not behold ỹ maieſtie ỹ ſhould ſhine forth in him. For he is ỹ liuely image of God his father; & in him and in his perſon or face we ſee whatſoeuer belongeth to our ſaluation. Now they fall to making of impedimẽts by ſuch ceremonies, ỹ the world might not looke full vpõ Ieſus Chriſt. And they bee not contented w the intermingling of the thinges ỹ God had ordeined for a time amõg ỹ Iewes: but they haue alſo borrowed of ỹ obſeruances of the heathen. True it is ỹ euen in this caſe alſo they pretended ſome color, as who ſhould ſay that the world could not be drawen frõ thoſe fooliſh ceremonies, & therefore it was better to vſe them ſtil vnder the title of God & his ſaincts, than vnder ỹ title of idols as they haue done before: but by that meanes the ſeruice of God was falſifyed.

2. Cor. 3. 13 & 18.

2. Cor. 4. 4. 6

Let vs mark then ỹ all that euer is termed by the name of Gods ſeruice at this day in ỹ Popedome, is but a confuſed hotchpotch of all maner of ſuperſtitions; for they cannot ſhewe that the holy ſcripture hath appointed men to do ſo. And whence haue they fetched their ground, but frõ a deſire to counterfeit the things ỹ were vſed among the Iewes & Infidels? Sith it is ſo, what a thing is it if we ſhall now faſhion our ſelues lyke vnto them, and ſuffer a ſort of pelting bables or ceremonies to bee layd vppon vs, and binde our ſelues to ỹ keeping of thẽ, to ỹ intent wee would not be too far vnlyke thoſe ỹ name themſelues Chriſtians? It is ỹ ſame corruptiõ which God cõdemneth in this ſentence. For it is not Gods will ỹ we ſhould haue any reſemblãce to thoſe which haue wdrawen thẽſelues frõ the pure obeying of his word. Therefore let vs be contẽted to haue Gods ſeruice reformed & ſtabliſhed according to his cõmandement. That is the thing which we haue to obſerue in the firſt place.

As touching the ſecond poynt, it is ſayd that God would haue but onely one Altar whereon to offer their ſacrifices. At this day, this is no more in vſe; we haue no more any materiall altar. For whereas the Papiſtes vſe altars, in ſo dooing they deface the death and paſſion of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt as much as they can. Neuertheleſſe, Gods intent at that time, was to keepe his people in the vnion of faith, by allowing them but one Altar.

And now it is ſayd, that they ſhould not ſet vp any memoriall of long continuance, in any certeine place. For by that meanes they might haue accuſtomed themſelues to worſhip God there, or they might haue made ſome chappell for deuotion, and ſo had all bin mard. And therefore not without cauſe were they forbidden to plant any trees in the places where they ſacrificed: for Gods Sanctuarie was to be plãted at length vpõ mount Sion. And as many as intended to ſerue God purely, it behooued them to reſort thither, to ſhewe one common accord, and one true vnitie of beliefe. Lykewiſe nowadayes our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt hath left vs his holy ſupper, for a warrant that he dwelleth among vs, and is alwayes preſent with vs by his power: inſomuch
1. Tim. 3. 16. that although he be exalted aboue the glory of
Eph. 5. 30. heauen; yet doe not we faile to be knit vnto him
Ioh. 8. 56. to bee members of his body, to haue one com-
57. mon lyfe with him, and (at one word) to be fed and nouriſhed by his ſubſtance. And becauſe it is a ſecret that paſſeth all vnderſtanding of man; he hath warranted it vnto vs, by ỹ viſible ſigne of his ſupper. Come we then to the table of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt? The bit of bread and the draught of wine which we receiue there, doe repreſent vnto vs, ỹ Ieſus Chriſt is truely our food, & that we be ſo incorporated into him, ỹ we be partakers of his owne proper life. By meanes whereof Ieſus Chriſt is ſo preſent with vs ỹ we muſt all needes be gathered together vnto him.

But we ſee at this day what hath bin done in the Popedome. Was there a table for the receiuing of the Communion? No, it was turned into an Altar. And that was one corruptiõ aforehand For as I haue ſayd already, it is not for any man to ſacrifice Ieſus Chriſt any more. That office
Heb. 9. 11. 25. belonged peculiarly to himſelfe, and he diſcharged it throughly, & now muſt we receiue ỹ ſacrifice that was offered vp vnto God, & let ỹ worde altar alone. Neuertheleſſe it is not enough with thẽ that there be but one table; they will needes haue three or foure: euery man buildes me his chappel, & there ſets me vp an altar. Although it were a good thing of it ſelfe to haue one altar among ỹ Chriſtiãs: yet doe they breake ỹ vnitie of faith, whẽ they build ſeuerall chappels after ỹ faſhion. For why? It is ỹ will of Ieſus Chriſt that there ſhould be one common ſupper, & ỹ all his Church ſhould meet together, & that the receiuing thereof ſhould be as a true band to hold the faithful in one with him. But they go to ſay their deuotions in ſuch a place, & to ſing Maſſe in an other place: And ỹ is an open defying of God, & a ſetting vp of idols in his ſtead. It is a turning of Gods tẽple, not onely into a Swines ſtye, but alſo into a ſtinking dungeon of all abhomination & idolatrie. And therfore let vs marke, how it is not without cauſe ỹ God teacheth vs in this text ỹ although we haue not ỹ auncient ceremonie of Sacrifycing Oxen & Sheepe: yet notwithſtãding we ought to be vnited in faith, and not ad any Deut. 12. 32. thing at al to ỹ which is cõmãded vs, but ſimply keep this rule inuiolable, ỹ we vnderſtand how & after what faſhiõ God wil be worſhiped, & agree thereto, wout preſuming to put any thing to it.

Now alſo Moſes ſayth; That they muſt not offer vnto God any beaſt that hath any maim or blemiſh in it. He hath told vs hitherto that men muſt not meddle ẅ idolaters, nor haue any reſemblance to their ſuperſtitions. For the true religion muſt be held in his pure ſingleneſſe. But that is not all. For they that offer vnto God, & turne not away after the fond deuotions of men, muſt moreouer ſerue God ſoundly, that is to ſay, their diſcharging of themſelues towardes him, muſt not bee lightly, as men doe commonly nowadayes. For we ſee howe men defraude God of his right. In deede when we be indetted vnto men, we diſcharge our ſelues one way or other: but whereas we be indetted vnto God, all our ſeeking is how to ſcape from him. True it is ỹ we wil indeuer to defraud men alſo: but yet wil we be aſhamed to vſe libertie towardes them as wee doe towardes God euen in dalying with him. If we owe a man either cuſtome or rent, we will not ſtick to conceale it if wee can, if wee be of euill conſcience: But yet for all that, wee will not be plucked too much by the eare: for wee thinke wee ſhall gaine nothing by ſo dooing. So then, as touching ỹ dettes ỹ men doe owe one to another, they diſcharge thẽ: but it skils not for God. Although he call vpon vs & threatẽ vs; yet euen after he hath ſhewed vs our duetie, we ceaſe not to defraud him ſtil, yea & we be quite paſt ſhame in it. Verily we wil not ſticke to ſay, it is good reaſon ỹ he ſhould be honored & ſerued: but yet we wil haue this ſeruing to be after our owne faſhiõ. But he requireth a right obedience. And what doe wee to him? Very well ſay we, we muſt diſcharge our ſelues to Godwarde. And after what maner? In mocking of him. Inſomuch ỹ although ỹ doing of ſome ceremonies be nothing worth; yet notwithſtãding men beare thẽſelues in hand ỹ God ought to hold himſelf contented therew, and that he dealeth too rigorouſly ẅ vs if he require any more of vs. For this cauſe it is ſayd ỹ men ſhall not offer any thing in ſacrifice which hath either blemiſh or ſpot. For vnder one kinde Moſes cõprehendeth ỹ whole; as if he had ſayd, let vs not thinke our ſelues eſcaped when wee haue ſerued God by halues and peeces; but wee muſt go to it ſoundly & roundly, ſo as we doe our duetie towardes him throughly in all pointes. True it is that there was a ſpecial reaſon for the Iewes: for ỹ Iewes were admoniſhed ỹ their ſins coulde not bee wiped out before God, but by meanes of ỹ ſacrifice ỹ was to be offered. For it behoued them to lift vp their mindes aboue the world, vnto ỹ trueth, to ſay, there will bee a payment to diſcharge all our dets: whẽ Ieſus Chriſt commeth, he wil reconcile vs to God his father, and diſcharge vs of ỹ bond of death, wherein we be bound. Therefore it behoued ỹ Iewes to haue their ſacrifices pure & cleane, ỹ they might bee led by them to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, and their faith be lifted vp aboue the world, to know that there is not any ſatisfaction nor offering that we can bring on our ſide to pleaſe God withall, but that he muſt be faine to giue vs the thing that we want to offer vnto him.

Notwithſtanding, we muſt generally beare in minde ỹ which I haue declared already; namely how Moſes ſheweth vs ỹ we muſt ſo roundely yeeld vnto god that which he requireth, as he be not diſappointed, as we heare him cõplain thereof by his prophet, that although the Iewes did not vtterly refuſe to pay ỹ tenthes & firſtfruites: yet they did it but by halues. But God cannot away with ſuch partinges, nor to be played with lyke a little childe. And hereby wee may learne ỹ our ſeruing of God muſt not be by pangs and fittes onely, & afterward fall to lazineſſe: but ỹ it muſt be done ſoundly & ſubſtantialy throughout, with obedience to his word. And again, ỹ in our doinges there muſt be no hypocriſie nor cõſtreint: but ỹ we muſt goe to work ẅ a free will, & not ſet a faire countenãce on it to ỹ worldward, & in the meane while haue a back ſhop that diſpleaſeth God: nay we muſt go to work freely, as I ſayd afore. That is the thing in effect, which we haue to remember vpon this text. Wee nowadayes doe not offer any moe Oxen or Sheepe: but ỹ offerings which we make vnto God, are of our owne ſelues & of all ỹ euer he hath giuẽ vnto vs, ſo as all be dedicated vnto him, & applyed to ſuch vſe as he alloweth; or elſe it is but vncleaneſſe. For if God haue giuẽ me a thing, & I abuſe it: I am a traitor to God, bẽcauſe I vnhallowe ỹ thing which he had dedicated to the cleane cõtrarie vſe. And therefore let vs mark, ỹ to pleaſe God in offering our ſelues vnto him, we muſt do it ſoundly, ẅout blemiſh or ſpot. True it is ỹ there can be no ſuch perfection in vs, but ỹ very great fault may be found in our ſeruice of him: but yet muſt we alwayes holde vs to this principle, ỹ we come to God vnfeinedly, and whereas there are infirmities in vs, we muſt reſort to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. For al our ſpots & blemiſhes are done quite & clean away by his bloud. And ỹ is ỹ cauſe why it is ſaid, ỹ wee offer our prayſes vnto God by him. If there were any ſacrifice clean on mẽs behalfe, it were ỹ ſacrifice of prayſe: for when we fall to ỹ magnifying of Gods name, & confeſſe ỹ we be beholden to him for al good things; our ſo dooing ſeemeth to bee cleane. Howbeit forasmuch as we haue our lips ſo vncleane, ỹ we cannot yet diſcharge our ſelues in ỹ behalfe: therefore it ſtandeth vs in hand to reſort continually to our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Our ſacrifices then are ſteyned with ſome ſpot & vice or other; ỹ is true: but yet muſt wee haue this roundneſſe & ſoundneſſe, of tending vnto God ẅout inforcement, neceſſitie, or hypocriſie. When we be at ỹ point, our Lorde will accept our ſacrifices, as though they were offred vp vnto him throughly pure & perfect, & vtterly faultles. In deed it is by means of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt; for there muſt wee be grounded as I ſaid afore. But if we haue ỹ vertue, then doth God accept ỹ ſacrifices which we offer vnto him, ſo we be not ſnarled ẅ hypocriſie, & come not to him as inforced or conſtreined, but with a free will. Therefore if men will ſerue God, they muſt beware ỹ they ſeek not to pleaſe men by it, as it often falleth out ỹ they thinke it enough to make ſome faire ſhew, & therẽwal do content & ſooth thẽſelues. We beare our ſelues in hand ỹ we haue done al ỹ can be done; yea but we neuer entred into our ſelues, to giue ouer our ſelues wholy vnto God. Wee neuer ſounded our ſelues to finde whether there were any euill intermingled, that we might be purged of it. And yet is that the ende which wee ſhould haue begunne at, that our comming vnto God might not be as by conſtreint. For if it were poſſible, we would exempt our ſelues from all obedience, and neuer come to reckoning with him for it. But contrariwiſe wee ought to ſerue him with a freediſpoſed minde. Then let vs conſider, that if wee intend to make our lyfe allowable before God, then in all our thoughtes and all our affections we muſt haue this ſubſtantiall ſoundneſſe of dedicating our whole lyfe vnto him, ſo as our ſenſes and deſires be made captiues vnto him, and hee ſo reigne ouer vs, as our cheefe deſire may bee to bee ruled by him and by his holy ſpirit, and to frame our ſelues in ſuch wiſe to his will, that we take nothing in hand but that which lyketh him. When wee goe that way to worke: then ſhall our ſacrifices bee pure and cleane.

Beſides this, let vs marke alſo ỹ we muſt lykewiſe offer vnto God all ỹ euer he hath beſtowed vpon vs. As for exãple, when we do almesdeeds, let euery man apply ỹ giftes which he hath receiued, to ỹ common benefit of ỹ Church. Thoſe are ỹ ſacrifices of good ſent, at leaſtwiſe if they be without blemiſh or ſpot. For a man ſhall well edify ỹ Church when he himſelf is led with ambition & vainglory. And as for ſuch a one, let him not thinke ỹ he hath offred any thing vnto God. For it is but vtter abhominatiõ, whẽ things haue not their right end, by giuing thẽ ouer again into Gods hande which had committed them to vs, & by putting thẽ to ſuch vſe as he hath eõmaunded. Again whẽ a man ỹ doth almesdeeds is led thereto by vaine ambition, to boaſt himſelf before men, & to be eſteemed & honored for it; his dealing after ỹ faſhion is but vncleanes before God. Now then, let vs learn to haue an eye vnto God, that our ſacrifices may bee without blemiſh or ſpot.

Moreouer, as concerning ỹ order of ỹ Church, & of all other gouernment, we muſt vnderſtand lykewiſe ỹ all our ſacrifices muſt be ſo purifyed as God may accept them. As for example, ỹ ordeyning of Miniſters to preach Gods word, and the doctrine of ſaluatiõ, the creating of Magiſtrates & the chooſing of Officers, are ſacrifices which we offer vnto God. Now we muſt offer them ẅout ſpot. For if a man bring in any corruption in thoſe caſes, it is high treaſon to God, as I haue ſayd afore. Therefore let vs bethinke our ſelues throughly, & conſider ỹ although theſe thinges according to ỹ letter, were inioyned to the Iewes in ỹ time of ceremonies: yet muſt we apply them to ỹ ſacrifices ỹ are in vſe and force at this day. And for performance thereof, let vs come back to that which S. Iames ſayth, namely ỹ he which commaunded the one, hath alſo commaunded the other; & that he which forbad the one, hath alſo forbidden the other. Will wee then pleaſe God in all the ſeruices which we doe vnto him? Let there be no parting of ſtakes, as if we woulde ſay, I wil do this for the honor of God, & for the reſt he ſhal beare with me & giue me leaue to do as I liſt. For in ſo doing we would be hailfellow w̃ God. And therfore let vs vnderſtand ỹ the righteouſnes of the law is a thing that cannot be deuided, neither is it for vs to rende it in peeces. Wherfore let vs ſubmit our ſelues to the rule ỹ is giuen vs, after ſuch ſort as is conteined in ỹ Law of God. And therwithal let vs mark further, that we muſt not haue dubble or diſſembling hearts, but that wee muſt ſubmit our ſelues wholly vnto God. And if we cannot attaine therto at ỹ firſt as were to be wiſhed: yet notwithſtanding that muſt be the mark that we ſhoote at. Now we ſee what our Lord meant to require in this text.

But to the end wee may bee the more prouoked, to deale ſoundly and ſubſtantially: let vs alſo marke this ſpeech that Moſes addeth here for a cõcluſion, namely that it is abhomination before God. For men do alwayes make themſelues beleeue, that they ceaſe not to ſerue God though there bee nothing but diſſimulation and hypocriſie in all their doings. And we knowe howe hypocrites are puffed vp continually with this fonde preſumption, that although there bee nothing but counterfeiting in all that they do, yet (to their ſeeming) God is neuertheleſſe beholden to them; and all is wellynough ſo there bee ſome gaie painting and ſome faire ſhewe. In deede they dare not vtterly deny that there is any fault at all in them: but yet would they ſtill beare men in hande, that there is much good in them which God accepteth. As for example, when ỹ Popiſh Prieſts ſay their prime & hours, beſides that they doe but bibbebable, their minds are elſewhere; one thinks vpon his kitchin, and another vppon his harlot. Well, they will graunt that this is ill done, and that they ought to bee more heedefull in their praying. But yet will they vpholde, that ſo they haue a finall intent to pray vnto God, it is a good and commendable deede; and their comming to Church deſerueth verie much, ſo they haue this final intent to ſerue god there, though their mindes be diſtracted about other things. When they haue once worſhipped a puppet, and taken a little holy water, though they looke vpon a woman after an vnchaſt ſort, although they be caried away with couetouſnes, or although their mindes bee occupied about ſome other wicked, ſhamefull, and helliſh luſt: yet it skilles not, ſo they haue the ſaide finall intent of ſeruing God; all is wellynough, ſo they make a ſhewe of ſeruing God, notwithſtanding that they ſpite him by all the meanes they can. Likewiſe in their faſting, though a man caſt him ſelfe into all manner of leawdnes and ruffianry, yet if he faſt vppon a deuotion, O thats a holy man, there is no more fault to be founde in him. Thus is it not poſſible to ridde the hypocrites of the falſe and diueliſh opinion wherwith they be beſotted, of paying God with this pelting traſh, which is nothing elſe than abhomination before him; and in the meane while, to ſpite him in all the reſidue of their life: ſo as a man can neuer winne them to beleeue, that God vtterly miſlyketh all that euer proceedeth not from a ſounde heart. So much ỹ more therfore doth it ſtand vs in hande, to marke well this ſaying which Moſes ſetteth downe for a finall concluſion: namely that ſuch dealings are abhominable before god. Indeede the blinde & ignorant wretches deeme it not ſo to be, nay, their doings are commended of men; behold (ſay they), here is a goodly vertue, here is a good deſert. But we muſt come before the great Iudge, who hath giuen ſentence already, that ſuch things are but traſh, filthines, and vanitie. And he is not contented with ſaying ſo; but he ſaieth alſo that they be vtter abhomination or lothſomnes. For indeede, beſides their dalying w̃ him to make him as an ydoll, they fal to opẽ defying of him. If mẽ thought not god to be ſtarke blind, durſt they come before him with a dubble heart, & fraughted ful of hypocriſie? No ſurely: it woulde make them euen agaſt at it. For whẽ they play ỹ hypocrites after ỹ fathion, it is al one as if they came to ſtop gods eyes, ỹ he might not diſcerne their diſſimulation and curſed hypocriſie. So then let vs marke well, that we muſt not ſtay our ſelues vpon mens bearing of themſelues in hande, that to their ſeeming they faile not to do well, and to deſerue wel at Gods hand, though they go not to worke with a free corage, nor with hartie and ſubſtantiall ſoundneſſe: Let not ſuch follies runne in our heads. For God not onely reiecteth ſuch thinges as pelring baggage of no value: but alſo auoweth them to be all abhominable before him, and that he will not ſuffer his ſeruice to be ſo ſhamefully diſguiſed, without taking horrible vengeance for it. And therefore let vs know that he will haue euery of vs to examine our ſelues; & ſith we ſee al our thoughts and affections to be corrupted, ſo as there is nothing in them but dung and vncleanneſſe: let vs pray him to reforme vs in ſuch ſort by his holie ſpirite, as he may be ſerued and honored by vs, and wee apply to good and holy vſe the thinges that he giueth vs: and that therewithall he make vs to profite more and more in his obedience, vntill we bee come with a free will, to ſerue him with ſo good a corage, as wee may be wholly dedicated to his honour. And that we may ſo doe, let vs repaire vnto our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, that our ſpotes and ſteines may be ſcowred away by his pureneſſe and perfection, as he hath promiſed vs. If wee ſhall doe ſo, then will our God approue of our life.

Now let vs kneele downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgment of our faultes, praying him to make vs ſo to feele them, that wee may from henceforth fall to amendement and reſort to his mercie, and that in the meane ſeaſon he reforme vs in ſuch ſort to the obedience of his Law, as it may ſhine forth in all our whole life, and hee alſo beare with vs in our frailties, vntill he haue ridde vs quite and cleane of them. And ſo let vs all ſay, Almightie God heauenly father, &c.

2 If within any of the Gates which the Lorde thy God giueth thee, there bee found either man or woman that hath wrought wickednes in the ſight of the Lord thy God, by tranſgreſsing his Couenant,

4 And it is told thee, and thou haſt heard of it: then ſhalt thou inquire diligently. And if it be true and certaine that ſuch abhomination hath beene committed in Iſrael:

5 Thou ſhalt cauſe, that man or that woman which hath committed that wicked deede, to bee brought out of the gates, and thou ſhalt ſtone them with ſtones, till they die.

6 At the mouth of two or three witneſſes, let him that is worthie of death, dye: but at the mouth of one witneſſe, let no man dye.

7 The hands of the witneſſes ſhalbe the firſt vpon him to kill him, and afterward the hands of all the people. And ſo thou ſhalt ridde away that euil from thee.

Deut.13.1.6

WE haue ſeene heretofore, that if there were either man or woman which went about to counſell others to peruert the ſeruice of God: they ſhoulde die for it. Nowe here is a Lawe, yet more ſharpe: that is to wit, that if there be any ydolater founde among the people, whether the ſame bee man or woman, it muſt coſt the party his head and his life, yea though hee haue not gone about to corrupt others or to intice them to leawdneſſe. Truely this ſeemeth rough dealing at the firſt bluſh, as we ſee howe they blame God for vſing ſuch ſeueritie againſt ſuch as vppon deuotion did any act contrarie to his trueth. Becauſe wee wey not Gods honour as it is worthy, wee make greater account of a mortall creature than of the liuing God. For if a man haue practiſed againſt his Prince, or gene about to alter the publike ſtate: hee ſhall be condemned to death without any ſticking. Againe, if a man bee vnderſtoode to haue had ſecrete conference with his Princes enemie, to haue ſhewed him fauour, or to haue conſpired with him; no bodie will excuſe ſuch diſloyaltie: and yet for all that, all this dealing is but againſt men. But if a man turne away from the ſeruing of God to gad after ydols: men thinke hee ought to bee borne withall, as though it were a thing of nothing. Whereby wee bewray, that wee paſſe not for the diminiſhing of Gods honour, or for the defacing of his maieſtie. But wee bee no competent Iudges in that caſe. Therefore let vs remember what is ſaide heere, and not thinke that God paſſed meaſure, when hee did ſet ſuch price vppon his honour.

Nowe it is ſaide, If there be founde either man or woman, to the intent that no frailtie ſhould bee a ſhrowding ſheete to any euill doing. For elſe it woulde bee ſaide, it is a womans deede. If a man of wit, courage, and vnderſtanding had done it; it had beene to haue beene regarded: but ſeeing it is done by fillie ſoules that are eaſie to be deceiued, is it meete that they ſhoulde bee haled to death for it at the firſt daſh? See I pray you howe we bee wont to qualifie thinges. But God on the contrarie parte intended to preuent ſuch ſhiftes, by telling vs that wee muſt not paſſe whether it bee man or woman, but that the deede of it ſelfe is ſo deteſtable; as that it ought not abide vnpuniſhed. Yet notwithſtanding, before wee proceede to puniſhing, he will haue vs to vnderſtande perfectly howe the matter goeth, and hee will haue the truth of the thing tryed out. And therefore hee ſaith, When it is reported vnto thee, inquire diligently thereof: and if thou find it true, then ſhalt thou take the partie which hath committed ſuch crime, and ſtone him to death. Hereby our Lorde ſheweth vs (as he hath done afore) that wee muſt not bee haſtie to proceede raſhly vnder pretence of any good will or zeale: but vſe aduiſednes that thinges may bee well knowen. And that is well worth the noting. For wee ſee howe vnaduiſed zeale doth often carie men away, and make them to offende GOD. And when it is done, then they ſay, I did it of a good intent. Yea, but GOD telleth vs heere, that in this behalfe wee muſt behaue our ſelues diſcreetely. And in deede, God meaneth not that men ſhoulde ſo falſely abuſe his name: For what a vile thing is this; that I ſhall ſuppoſe that I ſerue GOD and yet in the the meane ſeaſon haue no equitie nor vprightneſſe in me? Is it not a foule iniurie, ſo to intermingle Gods holy name with mine owne follie and lewde imagination? Wherefore let vs well weigh ẏ God, by this place hath condẽned that ſame too too violent heate which men haue, when they ſuffer themſelues to bee ſo caried away by their zeale (as they ſay) without any moderation or ſtay at all. Let that ſerue for one point.

And it is ſome what more when he ſaith, If the thing be reported vnto thee. For therein wee haue to note, that faultes cannot bee puniſhed among men, vnleſſe they come to knowledge. Inſomuch that a number of offenders eſcape the handes of worldly Iudges, though they haue offended more foully than others, and be worthy of great blame: and that is becauſe God hydeth their vnhoneſt dealings. For there are
1. Tim. 5. 24 ſinnes which make haſt to come to their condemnation, which God thruſteth forward: and there are otherſome which linger, and God keepeth them as cloſe as if they were buried. And hereby earthly Iudges are warned to be watchfull in ſerching out of thinges. For inaſmuch as they perceiue, that after neuer ſo much paine taken in boulting out of matters, which belong to their office to haue knowledge of, yet a great ſort of thinges doe ſcape vnſeene: they ought to bee ſo much the more diligent. They cannot knowe all thinges: and why? for they be but men. Yet notwithſtanding, for aſmuch as God hath commaunded men to puniſh euill deedes as ſoone as they come to knowledge: we muſt conſider howe his meaning is, that becauſe nothing can be hidden from him; therefore although men require nothing of vs, nor make any inquiſition or ſuite in Lawe againſt vs heere beneath: yet muſt wee euer bee faine to come to account before him. It is ſaide that an ydolater ſhall bee puniſhed, for God hath commaunded him to bee ſtoned to death, vppon knowledge that hee is ſuch a one. Nowe put the caſe that a man turne away from the pureneſſe of Religion, and worſhippe ydolles in ſecret. In deede hee cannot be touched by order of Lawe, neither ſhall hee abide iudgement for it. But yet muſt hee thinke in the meane while, that God will not ſuffer his eyes to be dazeled. And therefore wee may gather vppon this text, that our Lord reſerueth al thoſe faults, to his owne iudgement, which are not puniſhed by ordinarie Iuſtice in this worlde. Not that hee pardoneth not thoſe which returne vnto him by true repentance: but my meaning is of ſuch as harden themſelues in their hypocriſie, and take occaſion to growe worſe and worſe, becauſe they bee not reproued of their wicked deedes. But yet let them not thinke they haue made the better market for all that. For whereas God telleth the iudges of the earth that they ought to make diligent inquirie: becauſe hee himſelfe hath no neede to do ſo: he telleth vs that all faultes ſhall come before his iudgement ſeate, and that the hypocrites may well ſhrowde themſelues for a time, but in the end they ſhalbe rooted out: and not without cauſe. For (as I haue touched afore) thinke wee that God wil leaue his honour in the ſuddes? Seeing it is his wil that euen men ſhould be maintained in good reputation, and that all outrages ſhoulde be puniſhed: what will he doe when the caſe concerneth his owne maieſtie, & that his glorie is diminiſhed by the malice of men? Ought ſuch dealing to ſcape vnpuniſhed? Wil God ſuffer himſelfe to be mocked after that faſhion? It will bee alledged that all of vs haue beene ydolaters, & ſo we are al worthie of death. And their ſaying ſo, is as it were to ſtirre vp all men againſt God. For the folke that make ſuch replies, ſeeke but to poyſon mens heartes, that Gods honour might bee lightly eſteemed, and that we might quarrell with him when wee feele our ſelues touched.

But firſt of al (as I ſaid afore) we muſt mark ẏ our Lord ſpeaketh here of ẏ puniſhing of ydolaters, where order is ſtabliſhed according to his word. If God had not begunne at that ende, his order had beene amiſſe. But ſeeing hee hath ſhewed howe men ought to ſerue him, and giue a ſure rule thereof, telling vs that we muſt ſimplie doe whatſoeuer hee commaundeth; and ſeeing that both great and ſmall are taught what God they ought to worſhippe, and which is the true Religion: if a man or a woman doe afterward turne away, and become forſworn and diſloyal to God by ſtepping aſide into the ſuperſtitions of ẏ heathen: is there any excuſe to be admitted in that caſe? Then let vs marke wel, that this Lawe was made at ſuch time, as God had alreadie ſtabliſhed a Lawfull gouernement, directed according to his owne word. But wee haue all beene ydolaters. As howe? Euen by meanes of the horrible deſolation, ẏ happened through ẏ whole world, as is to be ſeene yet ſtill in the Popedome. Had this lawe bin well obſerued at the firſt, Chriſtendome had not bin ſo ſore decayed. For had they beene puniſhed which were the firſt ydolaters & had falſified the Goſpel, and corrupted the pureneſſe which was at that time: ſurely Gods order had bin maintained and preſerued much better. But what? When hypocrites were once crept in, which would needes ſeeme holier than all other men; then inuented they many corruptions: and the more they were born with, the more did the miſchiefe ſpread it ſelfe abroad, ſo ẏ it became a poyſon that vndoeth al. The cauſe then why the Church of God came to ſuch deſolation: is that men haue not bin held in awe, that the pure ſimplicitie of the Goſpel might be maintained, and God worſhipped according to his word, ſo as mẽ might not aſſay to deuiſe any thing of their own braine, but that al men both great & ſmal, might be made to obey the doctrine which they knew already to be of God. Had this bin done: there had bin no ſuch deſolatiõ as we ſee ſtil at this day And therfore let vs beare in mind, ẏ Gods ſpeaking here, is but of ſuch countries or Cities, as haue had ẏ grace to haue ẏ true religion ſtabliſhed amõg thẽ, ſo as he is worſhiped there, & they haue al conſẽted to admit ẏ order which is ſet by God; & therfore if any of thẽ do afterward turn away, he deſerueth to loſe his life. As for exãple,

wee haue now the light of the Goſpel, whereby our Lord holdeth vs bound vnto him, to ſerue him & to be his peculiar people. Seeing thé ẏ his Religion is knowen vnto vs, and that diſcipline is ſet vp among vs: if any of vs hereafter turne away from it, and giue himſelfe to ydolatrie, ſpiting God wilfully: doeth hee not deſerue puniſhment? Yes. For had a man committed any thing againſt the ſtate, and after his giuing of his othe to the Magiſtrate, had broken it againe by doing ſome deede to the contrarie: ſurely he ſhoulde be puniſhed for his vnfaithfulneſſe. And what ſhalbe doone then, if men daly with God, falſifying the faith which they haue giuen vnto him, ſo as they confederate themſelues with his deadly enemie Satan, and with ydols which ſerue but to deface his glorie, his maieſtie, and all his ſeruice? So then, if the ſkorners of our dayes replie, that if ydolaters ſhoulde bee puniſhed, all of vs ſhoulde die: the aunſwere is eaſie, namely that if the Lawe of God had bin executed, as had bin for our benefite and behoofe, Chriſtianitie had not beene ſo corrupted as it is, neither had Religion beene ſo imbaced as wee ſee it is. For the remedie thereof was good and behouefull: but men haue not vſed it. And that hath cauſed all thinges to come to vtter confuſion. Therefore it ſtandeth vs the more in hand to take warning, that if this Lawe helde vs not in awe, wee ſhoulde alwayes bee in daunger of withdrawing our ſelues from the ſeruing of God: and he ſhold no ſooner haue giuen vs his word, but it ſhoulde by and by vaniſh away againe, through the malyce and vnthankfulneſſe of a great number, which woulde ſoone ouerthrowe the ſtate that is ſtabliſhed at this day among vs. Marke that for one ſpeciall point.

Secondly let vs marke, howe it is not ſaid that all ydolaters in generall ſhould be puniſhed: but onely ſuch ydolaters as liue in ſome Church of God where order is ſet alreadie, and where Religion is certainly ſtabliſhed, and thinges are ſufficiently knowen. For then, if any man do wilfully playe the naughtipacke, and forſake the pure ſeruing of God, and defile himſelfe with ydolatrie and ſuperſtition: that perſon deſerueth death. Beſides this, let vs marke well, that (as I ſaide heretofore) if wee bee not puniſhed before men, we muſt early or late come to account before God: and there we ſhall finde that we haue deſerued, not onely to be ſtoned, but alſo to bee vtterly baniſhed from the euerlaſting ſaluation. And why? Becauſe we were baptiſed in the name of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, euen before we knew any thing at all. True it is that wee haue beene miſtaught: but that excuſeth not our diſobedience, but that wee our ſelues to the vttermoſt of our power, haue falſified our baptiſme: for wee haue beene corrupted with ydolatrie. So then, our Lorde might with good right thruſt vs quite out of his kingdome, and hee could doe it well ynough: neuertheleſſe wee ſee howe he hath gathered vs home to him. Nowe therefore let vs bethinke vs of the ſtate wherein we haue beene: & being aſhamed of our ſelues, let vs craue pardon at Gods hand. And as I haue ſaide afore, let vs not be aſhamed to confeſſe our ſelues to bee wretched offenders, that God may vſe no violence againſt vs, nor enter into the rigour of his iudgement towards vs. And that is the cauſe why it is ſayde in Ezechiel, Thou ſhalt remember thine owne wayes, and be aſhamed of them. For there God ſpeaketh of the repentance of ſuch as had beene deceiued for a time by ydolatrie: declaring that when they were brought againe into the right way of ſaluation, they ought to be verie mindfull of the euill which they had committed, yea they ought to thinke vppon it with ſhame and confuſion. That is the thing which wee haue to beare in minde. So that although God drawe not his ſword, to puniſh our bodies: yet faile we not to bee guiltie and damnable before God. Neuertheleſſe, we muſt vnderſtand that hee will alwayes haue pitie vppon vs, if wee preuent his iudgement, & condemne our ſelues aforehand, acknowledging our ſelues to be worthy to ſinke for the ydolatrie and ſuperſtition which we haue followed, but that God haue pitie vpon vs. But (as I ſaide) we haue wherewith to comfort vs, becauſe we knowe ẏ he is readie to receiue vs to mercie, when wee acknowledge our ſinnes, and repaire to him after the foreſaid manner. That is a thing which we haue to mark further, where it is ſaid that if ẏ thing be reported, men muſt inquire of it.

Ezec. 16. 61.

1. Cor. 11. 31.

Now he addeth, that the partie which hath done the miſdeede, ſhalbe conueyed out at the gates: and why ſo? For (ſaith Moſes) hee hath committed abhomination before the Lorde, whether it be man or woman as hee had ſaide afore. For it is ſuch a ſinne as is wicked and grieuous in the eyes of the Lord. Wherin he doth vs to vnderſtand, that we muſt not iudge after our own imagination, whether that deede be worthy of death or no. For it is a thing which beguileth many men, & maketh them to ſtriue againſt God and to blaſpheme his Law: that they will needs giue ſentence of them ſelues according to their owne opinion. But contrariwiſe our Lord bringeth vs backe here to his will. It is euill in my ſight (ſaith he) it diſpleaſeth me; I abhorre it. And hee telleth vs moreouer, that we muſt reſt vpon his worde, ſaying: I haue commanded it. Hereby therfore let vs take warning that wee iudge not at all aduenture & with diueliſh boldneſſe as theſe galants do nowadays, which would not haue religiõ to come in iudgement for the puniſhing of blaſphemie and ſuch other like things which are committed againſt ẏ honor of God. To be ſhort, they would not haue the Magiſtrates to ſit in iudgement vppon any fault committed againſt ẏ firſt table. If any fault be committed againſt men, as robbery, ryot, murther, or aduowtry; they be contented that ẏ ſhalbe puniſhed, but if Gods name be blaſphemed; if any abhomination be committed to the putting away of al feare of god; if hereſies ſpring vp toẏ trouble of the Church, and to the peruerting of all order: they would haue that to be ſuffered & excuſed. And what leadeth them thereto, but the ſaide helliſh pride, that when a thing miſliketh not them, they thinke ẏ God ſhoulde yeeld to their lyking? But therin appeareth their

ouerweening matched w vngodlines of making none account of God, forasmuch as they can finde in their hearts that his maiestie should be so lightly esteemed at all assayes. Howbeit, let vs for our part marke what is set down here, namely that if any euill displease the eyes of the Lord, it is not to be borne withall: neither must wee in that case leane to our owne wisedome, as if wee woulde say; O, I will shewe my verdit of it. No, no, we must thinke it ynough that God holdeth it for abhomination, and that hee cannot away with any such thing.

Furthermore he expresly sendeth vs backe to his word, to the intent wee should see it proued to our faces, that they which are such ydolaters ought not to bee excused: for they make warre against God. And is the crime of rebellion a venial sinne? Is it a fault that may bee pardoned, without making any countenance of doing any thing to it? If a man doe of wilfull malice rebell against his father or his mother, his master or his superior: it shalbe throughly weyed, and continually aggrauated to double & treble the fault. And shall a man be so rebellious against God as to defie him, and to doe quite contrarie to his will and intent: and shoulde we still cocker and flatter them that haue so grieuously offended? We see that our Lord speaketh but onely to such as haue bin dulie taught his wil aforehād. For he sayde not to the heathen, or the vnbeleeuers, I haue commanded you this, or I haue forbidden you that. No. And therefore this lawe must concerne a people that hath receiued Religion afore, and among whome some certaine rule is set downe and stablished. Nowe then, when God hath once commaunded one thing and forbidden another, and hath tolde vs that his will is so: what remaineth more for vs, but to frame our selues thereafter? And as for those that refuse his yoke, can they say it is through ignorance, and through some fonde deuotion? Indeede it may well bee so: but yet there lyeth another crime shrowded vnderneath, namely the contempt of Gods worde; yea there lurketh secrete malice, hypocrisie, and pride: and all these (saye I) are mingled together. Therefore must all excuses cease, and we must acknowledge that all such as haue beene duely trained in the worde of God, are lesse excusable than the ignorant.

And this is not to be applyed alonely to temporall Iustice: but forasmuch as it is God that speaketh, let vs marke that accordingly as wee haue proceeded in his doctrine, and he shewed his will vnto vs; our sinne is the greater if we followe not whatsoeuer he commaundeth vs. To this point must we come: it is God that hath spoken vnto mee, he hath graunted mee the grace to knowe howe hee will haue me to walke, and therefore seeing that hee inlighteneth mee, I must not stumble, I must not play the blinkarde nor the blinde bussarde: but I must take heede to the obeying of his doctrine. If we doe not so; we see that this foresaide punishment belongeth vnto vs: and if wee be not chastised by the hand of man; it is readie for vs from aboue. For God can well skill to vpbraide vs with the fauour that he hath shewed vs, in that hee hath vouchsafed to teach vs his will. Insomuch that although the poore ignorant soules were halfe to be excused, yet so it is that on our behalfe the crime is out of all square, when wee set our selues after that fashion against Gods will which is knowen vnto vs. Thus yee see what we haue to remember vpon this place, where it is expresly saide; that God hath not commaunded those things. Also let vs learne generally to iudge of Gods will according to his teaching of vs. For oftentimes we will needs lessen mens faults, or aggrauate them; and yet in the meane while we looke not at the thing that is tolde vs. Therefore let vs beare in minde, that Gods will is conteined in ỹ holy scripture, and ỹ that is the place where we must seeke it: & when we see that God speaketh so or so, let vs hold vs to it without any gainsaying.

Nowe Moses addeth, that the hande of the first witnesse shalbe first against the partie that is to bee stoned, and then the hands of al the people. Wherein he ment to shewe, that witnesse must not be borne, but with feare. But nowadayes, many men make no great conseience to giue euidence at allauenture against their neighbours, because they bee not put to the executing of the sentence. Hereppon one goes and with his false tongue doeth wounde some man that is but halfe guiltie, or peraduenture guiltlesse altogether. And he bears himselfe in hand, that a iob with his beake is not so great a matter; by reason whereof he passeth not at all to speake against all trueth. Yee see then the verie cause why there is so much libertie of forswearing nowadayes; is, that such as giue euidence against their neighbours, are not put to the executing of the Iudges sentence. But it was Gods will that their shoulde bee another order among the people of Israel; namely that hee which gaue the euidence, shoulde cast the first stone at the partie, as who shoulde say; it is thou that putteſt this man to death. By meanes whereof folke were restreined from bearing witnesse against any man, vnlesse the matter were true and certaine. For he that had giuen the euidence, sawe himselfe dubble guiltie both of tongue and hand, in murdering an innocent if hee had not deposed the trueth. Wee see then howe it was not without cause, that God commaunded this Ceremonie; namely that the witnesses should bee the first in stoning the parties that were condemned to death by ỹ Iudges. And hereby they were all done to vnderstande, that no offeder was put to death, but by the witnesse of such as had proued his offence by their owne knowledge.

Neuertheless God willed also that the hands of al the people should ioyne with them, to shew that all of vs must bee furtherers of the maintenance of his seruice, and of the pure Religion. If any trespasse haue beene committed between man and man, it shalbe pursued by such as haue taken the hurt or losse, or by such as haue to do therewith, or else some common sollicitor shal haue the prosecuting of it for them all. But when Gods honour is defaced, then ought euery man man to bestirre himselfe: and it is a singular fauour that God sheweth vnto vs, when hee imployeth vs in so honorable a thing, as the maintenance of his maiestie, to be as his Attourneys in that behalfe. For what are we? Now if God doe vs the honour to declare vnto vs, that he wil haue his honour maintained by vs and by our hands: shoulde we be negligent in that case? So then wee see nowe what was Gods meaning, in commaunding all the people to helpe to stone the ydolaters. For thereby it is done vs to vnderstande, that wee ought to haue a care to maintaine Gods seruice purely among vs; and that euery man must bee earnest and zealous in this behalfe, that (as much as in vs lyeth) wee suffer not religion to bee had in skorne or to bee peruerted: But that if wee beare good will to the common weale, when all thinges are well ordered, and that wee loue to haue equitie and vprightnesse among vs: there is much more reason that we shoulde bee verie chare of the worshipping of God purely, that men turne not away from his woorde, ne wander away wilfully from the Religion that hee hath stablished. For although that wee nowadayes, bee not bounde of any necessitie to the keeping of this Lawe, as in respect of the Ceremonie: yet doeth the substance thereof abide with vs. Euerie of vs is not to stone ydolaters: but yet our Lorde doeth vs to vnderstande, that wee must at leastwise haue so great regarde of his honour, that (so farre as lyeth in vs) wee suffer not his name to bee scorned, and his religion troden downe: but that euerie of vs doe set our selues there against, and make himselfe an aduersarie partie in that behalfe. That is the thing which wee haue to note. And so, although the Ceremonie of the Lawe be not such amongst vs: yet doeth the substance thereof stande in force still, and wee ought to obserue it.

And for the same cause also it is added expresly, that they must roote out the euill from among them. Whereby he doth vs to wit, that the suffering of ydolatrie and superstition, is a canker-worme and corruption that infecteth al things. And as I saide afore, if men had beene well bridled at the beginning, surely they had neuer come to such Apostasie; that is to say, they had neuer withdrawen themselues after that fashion from the obedience of God. For what else is Poperie, but a corruption which hath drawen all men from the obeying of God, so as all became backesliders, all haue gone astray, and all haue broken the promise of their baptisme? And whereof came this, but of mens nourishing of the euil by their winking at it and their concealing of it, vntil the infection was so spred abrode, that both great and small were poysoned therewith? Nowe then, if wee will holde ourselues in the pure obedience of God, let vs doe our indeuour that the mischiefe may bee rooted out from among vs, specially being a mischiefe that bringeth so greate an infection with it: For it is not possible for vs to scape infection, if it abide among vs. And for the same cause the Apostle (in the Epistle to the Hebrewes) exhorteth vs to plucke vp the wicked weeds, before they bee full growē: for it wil amase vs when they shal pick out our eyes; and yet there is no remedie but it must be so, if we suffer them to growe any long time. Therfore as soone as we see any euil sprout out, we must take it away as much as we can, that we may bee quite and cleane rid of it. Yea and although one man coulde not be intyced to wickednesse by the example of another; yet is Gods wrath kindled and increased still among vs, whē the euill abideth so vnpunished. And therfore S. Paul speaking of the incest that was suffered among the Corinthians, saieth vnto them; Put away the euil from among you. As if he had said, yee wretched men, the crime that is among you prouoketh Gods vengeance against your whole Nation, if it bee so suffered: and therefore if yee intende to be exempted from Gods wrath, let not that euill bee suffered or nourished any longer. And this is a sufficient proofe of that which I haue touched; namely that God in commanding al ỹ people to put to their hande to the stoning of ydolaters, sheweth vs that the thing cōcerneth vs all: and that for as much as he maketh vs his attourneys, it is good reason that euery of vs should indeuour to discharge himselfe of his duety. And thereunto doth God himselfe exhort vs, in that hee sheweth vs that the suffering of such euil, is an infection & deadly plague, and that our bearing with the thinges that are cleane contrarie to his maiestie, is a prouoking of his wrath against vs.

1. Cor. 5. 13.

Now remaineth, that wee come to this Lawe that a man shall die at the mouth of two or three witnesses, but not vpon the euidence of any one witnesse alone. This Law serueth for order of gouernment. And indeede the very Heathen were taught by nature to follow this order, so as they could wel say it was requisite that a matter should be proued by a cupple of witnesses. And this was printed in their mindes, because our Lordes will was to holde mankind continually in some kinde of vprightnesse, and that discretion should be vsed. But we haue this doctrine the better confirmed, in that God speaketh it with his owne mouth & saieth, that a man shall die at the mouth of two or three witnesses, and not vpon the report of any one. Then let vs beare in minde, that thinges ought not to be iudged at aladuenture without lawfull proofe. Neuertheless, it may bee that euen the Iudge himself may sometimes be a witnesse in a matter: and yet notwithstanding hee must iudge contrarie to that he knoweth. If a mā say, he doth amisse: Nay, he could doe no otherwise, and hee doeth well. For if I bee a Iudge, and no bodie but my selfe doth knowe a man to be faulty, so as I cā haue no witnes of his doings: I must let him alone, because I cānot remedy it, & he must be quit by my sentence. And this dealing of mine is no preiudice to my cōsciēce: for I cōdemn him before god as he deserueth: but yet I let his crime alone stil cōcealed, vntil God discouer it and bring it to light. Nowe then let vs marke that for ciuill orders sake, wee must alwayes obserue this rule, that we iudge not but vppon good proofe, so as the matter be knowen

Hereupon it is saide that there must bee two or three witnesses. But sometimes men to couer their faultes and misdeedes, wil needes require an infinite number of proofes, which thing was to be seene in those lustie blouds, which woulde needes be wiser than God, and had inuented a very strange lawe here in this citie of Geneua; which was that they would not be contented w two witnesses, vnlesse there were a Proctor besides. Thus went they about to controll Gods law, and all vprightnes of nature, and the thing which hath hitherto bin maintained of ỹ whole world. And what was the cause thereof, but that they would faine haue committed al manner of lewdnes, & bleared out their tōgues against god, and yet there might neuer haue been any sufficient witnesse to haue conuicted them thereof? For had there come two witnesses, yea, three or foure; yet had mens eyes beene bleared, and all that had beene nothing. Therefore let vs note, ỹ this law was set downe, to make vs hold ỹ meane betweene the two extremities.

The first extremitie is, to iudge of a mater before it be throughly proued, for so to do is euil, & in so doing men are too hastie. Therfore is it requisite, that there should be a two or three witnesses of it. And whē there be a two or three witnesses, it is not for men to reply, as who shold say it were meete that fower or fiue witnesses should be sought for, & that the matter were neuer wel prooued, except there bee a spokesman with the witnesses. And that is a flat mocking of God. Let vs then beare in minde, that seeing our Lord hath told vs, that the offender shall dye at the mouth of two or three witnesses; it is to bee supposed that ỹ knowledge of the matter ought to suffice vs, so as there ought to bee no wrangling against it, but that iustice ought to proceede to execution. And we see how needefull this admonition is for vs. For men would euer shrinke back if it were possible: & if there bee any apparant colour to hyde their misdeedes; they beare themselues in hand that their hands are cleane washt of them. But here our Lorde summoneth vs, saying that if there bee two witnesses, ỹ Iudge must not shrinke backe: for if he do, he is confederate & companion with the wicked, vnlesse he put to his hand to the redresse of their wickednesse. Thus we see nowe, that in saying that two or three witnesses are sufficient, for the conuicting of a man to haue deserued death: our Lord ment to cut off occasion of all shifts that men deuise to cloake their misdeedes withall.

Now furthermore, let vs apply this doctrine to our selues also: & let vs vnderstand that seeing God hath set such order in temporal iustice; hee will keepe it towards vs. But are we not sufficiently conuicted, that wee haue beene estranged from the worde of God? First euery of vs hath his own conscience to reproue him: and what a number of witnesses doeth that counteruaile? The Heathen haue saide, that it is as good as a thousand. Then if a man be condemned in himselfe, what shall it boote him to iustifie himselfe, seeing that his sinne gnaweth him and preferreth inditementes continually against him? For there is no man (howe blockish so euer he bee) whose owne conscience doeth not continually sting him. Therfore let vs learne to plead guiltie before God, seeing he stirreth vs therto inwardly & sheweth vs our faults. Besides this, the prophets and Apostles & the verie sonne of God himselfe, are faithfull witnesses of it, as the prophet Esay nameth him. Seeing we haue them to conuict vs; what should we henceforth seeke for startingholes? What wil that boote vs? And wee haue not the holy scripture onely; but wee haue also the thicke clowde (as the Apostle tearmeth them in the Epistle to the Hebrewes) of all the faithful & of al the holy martyrs which euer suffered for the name of God: & shall not al those be sufficient witnesses to condemne vs before ỹ iudgement seat of our Lord Iesus Christ? Nowe if we make no account to benefite our selues, by the example which they haue giuen vs: but do wilfully forsake the doctrine after we haue knowen it: what condemnation do we deserue? And that is the verie cause why S. Paul alleageth this text to the Corinthians, that iudgement standeth vppon the mouth of two or three witnesses. And whereof speaketh he there? Of his own Epistle & of his owne comming: for hee sayth ỹ he will come to the Corinthians. Not that I haue not written vnto you sufficiently already, sayeth he; or that I haue not warned you often ynough heretofore; and yet you continue stubborne and hardharted still. But thinke you that ye shal winne any thing thereby at Gods hand? Know ye (saith he) that iudgement shalbe taken at the mouth of two or three witnesses. Sith it is so, let vs bethinke our selues; and forasmuch as we see that God hath beene so gracious to vs, to giue vs so many prophets after him, & that Iesus Christ himselfe & his Apostles haue witnessed vnto vs the trueth of the Gospel: let them not be witnesses against vs to our condemnation, but rather let them be witnesses of our faith; and let vs bee so confirmed in the grace of ỹ holy ghost by our Lord Iesus Christ, as we may continually keepe on our course, and followe the vocation wherevnto our Lord hath put vs & called vs.

2. Cor. 13. 1.

And now let vs fall downe before the maiestie of our good God with acknowledgement of our sinnes, praying him to make vs feele them better; that thereby wee may bee the more inflamed to serue him and woorshippe him; not onely as in respect of the ceremonie, but also by applying all our whole life to his obedience, and by giuing of our selues wholly to the soundnes which he sheweth vs by his holy word: And that we may endeuour to bring other men to the same, & not suffer those to stray which are alreadie in the right way; but with one common accord hold them together in the sheepefold which are come into it alreadie, and drawe others thither by our good life & conuersation, preuenting all causes of offence & disorder, whereby the true religion might bee peruerted. That it may please him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs, but also to all people, and Nations of the earth, &c.

On Tewſday the xix. of Nouember. 1555.

The Ciiij Sermon, which is the third vpon the ſeuenteenth Chapter.

8 If a thing be too hard for thee to iudge betweene bloud and bloud, betweene cauſe & cauſe, betweene wound & wound, & there be wordes of ſtrife within thy gates: then ſhalt thou riſe and get thee vp to the place which the Lorde thy God ſhall haue choſen:

9 And go to the Prieſts & Leuites, & to the Iudge which ſhalbe in thoſe days, & aske; and they ſhall ſhewe thee the ſentence of iudgement.

10 And according to the content of the ſentence which ſhalbe declared vnto thee by thoſe of the place which the Lord ſhal haue choſen, ſo ſhalt thou doe: and thou ſhalt take heede to do according to all that they informe thee.

11 According to the ſentence of the law which they teach thee, & according to the right which they tell thee, ſhalt thou do. Thou ſhalt not turne aſide from the thing which they ſhewe thee, neither to the right hand nor to the left.

12 As for the man which through preſumptuouſnes will not obey the high prieſt which is there to miniſter before the Lorde thy God, or the Iudge: that man ſhall dye, and thou ſhalt put away euil from Iſrael,

HEre is the order ſhewed vs how to end matters in lawe. Foraſmuchas when men are at controuerſie, we ſee they be ſo wilful & hardharted, ỹ by their good willes they woulde neuer come to any end: God declareth ỹ it was his wil there ſhould bee ſome ſoueraigne court of iuſtice among his people, againſt the ſentence wherof there ſhold lye no appeale. True it is ỹ all people are taught of nature to do ſo. For if it were lawfull to make continual appeales: mens frowardnes is ſuch (as I ſaid afore,) ỹ their controuerſies would neuer come to any end. Therfore is it requiſite ỹ there ſhould be ſome certaine ſtay: & that is it which our Lord hath declared in this text. Againe, as touching worldly gouernement, this order is greatly auailable, foraſmuch as the thing which nature followeth through ỹ whole world, is ratified by the mouth of God: & that is a thing which ought to be well marked. For ſith we ſee ỹ God hath humbled himſelf ſo much as to ſhewe vs the order of ciuil gouernment; we muſt conclude ỹ he alloweth of it. For otherwiſe he would not medle with it: & it were a diſhonoring of his maieſtie. Do we then ſee ỹ our Lorde in his lawe hath treated of ỹ order which wee ought to obſerue among our ſelues? Let vs aſſure our ſelues thereby, that it is a thing which hee well liketh. Marke that for one point.

Againe, ſith we ſee after what faſhion he will haue vs to behaue our ſelues, & hath ſet ỹ ſame down particularly: it is yet a greater confirmation. And as for Iudges which are ſet in authoritie & preheminence: let them vnderſtand that their doings are an acceptable ſacrifice to God, becauſe he beareth record therof in his law, and ỹ the people alſo do conform theſelues ſo much the more willingly thereunto. Wherefore wee muſt vnderſtand, ỹ the peruerting therof were a rebelling againſt God, & a deſpiſing of him. Thus we ſee now how needful a doctrine it is for vs, & how greatly to our edifying, ỹ our lord hath declared, ỹ there ſhould be one chiefe court of Iuſtice for men to reſt vpon, that they might not be in continual dout.

Neuertheleſſe we muſt note ỹ our Lord would not admit appeales in all caſes indifferently among his people. For he ſaith, If there happen any hard caſe, whereof the iudgement is doutfull, & not eaſie to be determined, becauſe the Iudges (namely ỹ inferior Iudges of euery citie) be graueled in it. Wherfore ſets he down this? Becauſe it had bin too great a toyle for the people to haue bin driuen to repayre to Ieruſalem for euery matter of ſixpence, or I wote not what ſuch like. Wee ſee (as I haue ſayde afore) howe there are ſome vnſatiable men, and ſuch as could alwayes be contented to ſindge themſelues ſo they may ſcald others. Nay ye ſhal ſee ſome ſo ſpitefull, ỹ though they ſhould eate their owne fingers, yet they would go forewarde with their ſutes in Law, and whē they had waſted away their own ſubſtance, they would euen hazard their liues alſo, to procure trouble to their aduerſaries. Seeing then that it is manifeſt that ſuch folk are caried away with rage, or at leaſtwiſe with deſire of reuenge: it is good to bridle them. And that is the cauſe why God woulde not haue all caſes to come to Ieruſalem. For he had ſet a good order, namely that there ſhoulde be iuſtice in euerie Citie, yea and men of vnderſtanding, to giue iudgement of ſuch matters as were to come to triall before them. Prouided alwayes that the cauſe were not harde and doutfull.

So

So then let vs marke, how it was Gods wil that the controuersies should bee ended with speede, without troubling of the parties too much. And seeing that his intent was such, wee ought to frame our selues thereto as much as is possible for vs. And therefore if men intend to stablish a good order of gouernement, and such as God alloweth: let them followe this rule, that quarels be not mainteyned betweene man and man; but that if there be any controuersie they may soone be set at one againe, so as the sute in Law be not prolonged, nor men posted ouer from one to another; but that things may bee so ordered, as the parties may not be suffered to followe still their owne inordinate wils. True it is that this vice cannot be so corrected, but that some remnant of it will abide still. Yet notwithstanding wee must goe as neere the marke as we possibly can, seeing that our Lord directeth vs therunto.

Againe, if a man intend to prouide for the pacifying of quarels among men, so as might may not ouercome right: yee see that ordinary Iustice cannot be forborne. For inasmuchas God had chosen the people of Israel; it is certain that he prouided the best meane that could be deuised for the mainteyning of them in peace and concord. And in verie deede they were all of one linage, descended of the race of Abraham: and therefore inasmuch as there was such a brotherhoode among them; it ought to haue beene the easier to haue continued them in quietnes. On the other side they seeing themselues separated from the rest of the world, and being there gathered together into one bodie in the name of God: ought to haue born one ẅ another in reuerence of that holy bond. Yet notwithstanding for their further preseruation, God ordeyned this meane that there should be Iudges in euery Citie. Then let vs conclude, that as long as men liue here beneath; they cannot forbeare Magistrates, by reason of their infirmities. Truth it is that euery man ought to carie the Lawe in his heart, and euery man ought to doe al men right of their owne accord: but we be blind and our affections cary vs away; and besides that, wee subdue not our vnderstanding, neither do we holde our lusts captiues as we ought to doe. Therefore we haue neede of a bridle for them. And that is my meaning, in saying ỹ wee ought to loue the state of ciuil gouernement, and to reuerence it; namely because it is a necessarie mean to maintain mankind in this world, and ẅout it al things would go to horrible confusion, insomuch ỹ wee should not only become as Dogs & Cats; but also be worse than wilde beasts. Greatly therefore ought we to bewaile our state, seeing ỹ (as I haue shewed afore) wee which beare the Image of God cannot vse our freedome to behaue our selues according to reason and equitie. Yet notwithstanding, seeing we be so sore corrupted, we must vnderstand ỹ Gods remedying of our diseases after that fashion, is a point of his singular goodnes towards vs. But howsoeuer ỹ case stand, if we wil eschewe ỹ men scratch not out one anothers eies, ne eat not vp one another: let vs follow ỹ rule which our lord sheweth vs here, namely ỹ there be Iustice in euery Citie & in euery other place, and ỹ such as beare ỹ sword do watch so as no man oppresse another, no man work any outrage or iniurie, nor no man presume further than is lawfull. Marke that for one point.

Now let vs come to that which is set downe here concerning Appeals. If there rise any difficult & doubtful case, betweene cause and cause, wound and wounde, or blood and blood. As if he should say, if there bee any cause either criminall or ciuile whereof there riseth doubt, and men cannot decide it by giuing definitiue sentence on it: let thẽ resort to the high courte. We see then that Appeales are ordeined as wel for matters of life & death, as for matters of trespasse. And now let vs see whither God woulde haue men to appeale. To Ierusalem. True it is that he doth not as yet name the place, because it was not appointed out at ỹ time. But he sayth, Thou shalt go vp. And Moseses speaking after that manner, was after a sort in way of prophesie, because the situation of Ierusalem was higher than all the rest of Iurie. But vntill the Ark was set there, it behooued them to resort to the place where that was. Againe, here is no speaking of the king. For the time was not yet come that God would set vp a kingdome among that people: ỹ was to be stablished in the person of Dauid. Yet notwithstanding there were alwaies Iudges, accordingly as wee see how Iosua succeeded Moses, and consequently the rest of the Iudges vnto Samuel, at which time ỹ people would needes change their state. Therefore vnto Samuels time, there was this order among them, that God raised vp certaine Iudges in Israel, which represented ỹ state of a king vntil the kingdom was stablished. That is ỹ thing which Moses meant in this sentence, when he saide, ỹ men should resort to the Iudge which should be at that time in Israel.

Also it was his will that the high Priest with his fellow Priests the Leuites, should haue authoritie to giue sentence of Iudgement. And why? He addeth; Because they could giue sentence according to the Lawe of God. And finally, vpon that sentence of theirs hee will haue men to rest: and that if any man disobeyed it, he should be punished with death, that by that meane pride might be corrected in Israel. Now wee see what God intended to commaund concerning Appeales. There were Iudges in euery Citie: but yet there was one aboue them all as in the degree of a Prince. Not that it went by inheritaunce: but looke whomsoeuer God raysed vp by his holy spirite, him it behooued to gouerne the people. And wee see it came so to passe afterwarde. As oft as the people fel away from God, it was to their owne confusion: and as soone as he had pitie vppon them againe, hee raysed them vp Iudges newe againe, as the holy hystories doe shewe vs. There were in deede some interruptions at such time as the people were worthy to be punished, insomuch ỹ all went to hauocke, they were giuen ouer vnto bondage and to the tyranny of the Infidels which were their enemies: but as soone as God vouchsafed to gather them home againe, there was a newe Iudge set vp againe. Iudges 2. 17 18.

And herein we ſee yet better, that it is a token of Gods preſence, when we haue order of iuſtice among vs, ſo as there are men to gouerne vs which walke in the feare of God, and execute their charge faithfully: it is as much as if God came downe to vs & ſhewed vs his face. Contrariwiſe, when the order of gouernment is peruerted, it is as though God turned his backe to vs. If the magiſtrates be corrupted, & peruert al right & equitie, or if tyrants get dominion ouer vs: let vs vnderſtand that God forſaketh vs, and withdraweth himſelfe from vs, & is mynded to make vs feele his abſence by ſuch ſigne of his wrath: and that then wee haue good cauſe to mourne. But if wee ſee the lawes floriſh, & there be men that feare God, to make them to be executed, it is all one as if God made his face to ſhine vpon vs, and declared his loue towardes vs, and that hee is minded to maintaine vs vnder his protection. And it ſerueth to make vs to loue the ſtate of worldly gouernement the better, ſeeing it is ſuch a token of the goodneſſe of our God, and of his fatherly loue towardes vs.

But as I ſayde afore, the high prieſt and the trybe of Leuy were appointed to bee Iudges in all harde caſes. It may ſeeme ſtrange at the firſt ſight, howe it commeth to paſſe that GOD woulde haue the prieſthood to entermeddle in ciuil gouernement: for they be two things farre differing. Wee knowe that when Aaron was ordeyned to bee the high prieſt, Moſes had the gouernement of the people. Nowe the Prieſthood went by inheritance, and ſo did not ỹ temporall gouernement. In ſo much that Moſes left his own children as priuate perſons in their owne houſes without any publike authoritie, & Ioſhua who was not of any kinne or aliance vnto him, was his ſucceſſour. The ſame order continued afterwarde, in ſo much that God raiſed vp whome hee thought good, nowe one of one trybe, and nowe another of another. Notwithſtanding, it behooued the Prieſtes to hold them ſelues contented with the ſpirituall gouernement of the Church, and they ought not to take vppon them the ciuil gouernement. Why then doth God here ſet them in higheſt degree to iudge? Vndoutedly, it was to ordeyne a Councell for him that was to bee the chiefe Iudge, and to holde the people in the better awe, as it it had beene ſayde that all Appeales ſhould come before God. For (as I haue declared afore) men can very hardly bee brought to giue their conſentes, to obey a ſentence that is againſt them. Therefore, to the ende that no man ſhoulde take leaue to ſtande in contention, God ſayeth there ſhalbee a ſoueraigne Iudge, at leaſtwiſe to beare ſway in Counſell of hard caſes, and ſuch as are giuen in fourme of iudgement. And to the intent that thinges may bee iudged according to my lawe, the high prieſt and the order of the Leuites ſhalbee preſent there. Nowe wee knowe that they were expounders of Gods lawe. For with that condition was the prieſthood giuen vnto them, namely that they ſhoulde bee Gods Angels and meſſengers as the Prophet Malachie ſpeaketh of them. And therefore when men asked counſell at their mouthes, it was not to haue ſom doting dreame of mans deuice, but to haue the certeine vnderſtanding of Gods lawe. That then was the cauſe why the chiefe authoritie of iudgement was committed to the order of the prieſtes with the Iudge whome God had ſet vp.

But before wee goe any further, let vs note that vnder pretence of this text, the Pope lifted vp his hornes, and vſurped ſuch tyranny as wee haue ſeene him vſe in the Church of God. For thus doeth hee reaſon. Seeing that the chiefe authoritie of iudgement was giuen to the Prieſtes, it is to bee concluded that there ought to bee one head ouer all the Church. Againe, for as much as the ſentence of the high prieſt was to bee helde without any gainſaying, the thinges that are determined by the Apoſtolike ſea (as they terme it) ought likewiſe to be held without gainſaying, and it is a deadly and vnpardonable ſinne, to incounter any thing that the Pope ſhall haue pronounced. But here wee haue two thinges to conſider, which are of ſufficiencie to reſolue all ſuch and ſo childiſh argumentes. For firſt, the gouerning of the whole worlde by one man, and the gouerning of ſome one countrey or prouince by one man, are not both one. God hath made here a ciuil lawe for the countrey of Iewrie. And wee knowe that at that time there was but one Temple, & that it was not lawfull for them to worſhip God or to offer ſacrifice vnto him, in euery citie. If a man had buylded any altar, it had beene abhominable, and that citie muſt haue beene razed. And Gods doing hereof, was but to hold ỹ people in one right vnitie of faith. The like as there was but one temple in the land of Iewry: ſo was there but one high prieſt. But muſt this be extéded to the whole world? No, not ſo. There needeth many mo: for what one mortal man nowadayes is able to weeld ſo great a charge? Againe, it were meete that there ſhould one temple bee builded in the mids of the worlde, ỹ men might come rũning to it a foure or fiue thouſãd leagues off to worſhip God. And do ye not ſee what an abſurditie that were? Therfore it were too groſſe a fondneſſe to cõclude thus; There was but one temple & one high prieſt in al Iewrie, ergo there ought to be ỹ like throughout the whole worlde. For then ought there alſo ſome litle nooke to be made, where men might ſo aſſemble togither, as they ſhould not neede to go paſt foure or fiue dayes iourneyes from home: but we ſee that that were vnpoſſible, and moreouer it were contrarie to nature. Marke that for one poynt.

And ſecondly let vs marke, that the Leuitical Prieſthood is come to an end & quite put down, by the comming of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt into ỹ world. Moreouer the high prieſt was a figure & ſhadow of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, and therefore it were an abolíſhing or putting away of the trueth, if men ſhoulde haue a high prieſt to bee the vniuerſall head of the Church, as the Pope woulde make men beleeue. It is ſaide that there was one high prieſt, one chiefe Iudge, yea,& one king in Israel. Now if a man wil conclude hereupō,that there ought to be one high-priest through the whole world; there must also be but one chiefe king: & so should all common weales be cast downe,& the order which as now is distinctly set among kingdoms, dukedomes,& free cities,should be but a confusion accursed of God. And in what taking were wee then? Nay, wee must go to the chiefe point of all, which is that thereby our Lorde Iesus Christ shoulde be robbed of his right. For now that he is come, the kingdome is stablished euerlastingly in his person,& he is set ouer all the Empires and kingdomes of the worlde. Also he hath taken vpon him the euerlasting priesthood, ouer all order & gouernement of the Church. Not that there shoulde not as now be any mo Bishops & sheepheards,as the scripture speaketh of them: but ỹ Iesus Christ be the only head, & the residue but as inferior members, and that the body be gouerned in such wise, as all things may be subiect to him of whome it is saide; This is my welbeloued sonne, Heare ye him. And so wee see that ỹ Pope is a traytour that robbeth Iesus Christ of his soueraigntie,by making of himself highpriest ouer the Church of God.

Matt.28.18 Phil.2.9. Hebr.1.8.13

And by the way, if it be alledged that it is requisite there should be some meane to end quarels and controuersies that might rise for religion: the answere is, that so there be an order set, there needeth not any one man to be set ouer al the rest; but they may assemble together w̄ one cōmon accord, as we see hath bin done in times past. True it is that the men of olde time had a certeine order in the Church for the great Prouinces, namely that there were certaine Patriarkes: but as for to haue any one head ouer the whole Church,that was neuer agreed vppon, so long as there was any purenes of the Gospel or any tolerable gouernement. But as soone as all things were confounded after a barbarous or rather brutish maner; then did the Pope lift vp his hornes. In deed he stroue long time against the bishop of Constantinople. But howsoeuer ỹ case stood, it fell out anon after that all thinges were corrupted & confounded, & men wist not any more what the gouernment of the church ment. So then let vs marke, ỹ if it be said, that like as it is requisite there should be some stay for the pacifying of ciuil quarels, and for the determining of criminal cases; so it is good reason that there should be some chiefe court of prerogatiue, for the appeasing of strife & contention in doctrine: yet it followeth not that one man only ought to haue supremacie ouer the whole world: for(as I haue shewed afore)that is quite contrarie to nature. What remaineth then? That men assemble togither,& that Iesus Christ beare the chiefe sway among them.

But we must wey well the things that are contained heere. It is said that ỹ Priest must iudge according to the law of God. Wherein it is shewed that our Lorde layeth not the brydle loose on the necke, eyther of all the priestes together, or of the iudge which was in those dayes in state of a king: but that al of them ought to be subiect to the law; and that(as I said afore) God meant to reserue the soueraigne authoritie to himselfe, so as men should receiue definitiue sentence as at his mouth, & that the persons which were to giue the sentence,should be but as instrumentes of his holy spirite, & expounders of his lawe. Therefore let vs marke wel, that God ment not here that men should do any thing on their own heads, but that his lawe should beare the sway, specially in Ierusalem rather than in any other place. But now let vs see what the Pope doeth, & what all the bastardly Councels haue done whereunto he would tye vs. There is nothing amongest them but to say: that the holy Ghost gouerned them; for as for the holy scripture they did let that alone. In deede they gaue it the honorable title of Gods word: but when they ment to determine what they thought good,was it according to that which God hath declared? No: but they tooke another rule; which is, that the Church cannot erre because it is gouerned by ỹ holy Ghost: & that as touching the holy scripture; it leadeth vs into perfection,but we must mount vp yet higher: for if we haue not the reuelations of the holy Ghost, it is nothing: If a man holde himselfe to that which is conteined in the holy scripture, it is but an vnperfect thing with them; but as for that which is determined by ỹ Church, that must be held inuiolable, and no man must in any wise gainsay it. Againe, the holy scripture (say they) is a nose of wax, which a man may wryth euery way,& there is no certeintie in it: but whē the church hath once pronounced a thing, there is no more dout in it. After ỹ maner went all the rable of them to worke,so as they haue troden ỹ holy scripture vnder foote. Although they grant in words that it proceeded from God: yet haue they taken it to be but as an apsie,and as a cōmō doctrine: affirming that the Reuelations which haue beene giuen vnto them, are much higher doctrine. These blasphemies they haue not been ashamed to vtter,& their bookes are ful of them. Insomuch that they say that the holy scripture is a pliable thing (as I haue declared afore); so as if wee should sticke to that which is conteyned there,our fayth shold neuer be certein. And therupon euery man folowes his owne fancye, Seeing they were come to such extremitie,a mā may wel perceiue ỹ the holy scripture bare no sway amōg thē. But on ỹ cōtrarie part it is said, ỹ the highpriest must be a Iudge,not only in matters concerning the spiritual gouernment of the church,but also in ciuil cases;& that he must follow ỹ law though the case concern but the temporal iurisdiction. If it be so; what is to be done whē they haue to deale with ỹ law of God? Whē the case concerneth the saluation of mens souls, religion,& faith, which are things ỹ passe all the whole world: Shal men therein forsake the holy Scriptures? Shall men in those cases ouerrule matters at their own pleasure, as if they woulde say, This seemes good to mee, this hath ỹ holy Ghost reuealed vnto mee? See yee not how God is shamefully mocked in this behalf? So then, let vs mark wel, first that our lord ment not to giue infinit power either to the Priests or to ỹ Iudges, but ỹ he hath ſent & referred them backe to his law, ỹ they might iudge according to ỹ ſame. In deede here a man might reply; that euery man might ſay; It is not according to Gods lawe, vnleſſe the expoſition ỹ is giuen thereof be to their own liking. And truely the heretikes are ſo wilful, ỹ they wil neuer be conuicted. Although the holy ſcripture be alledged vnto them, & that the texts be ſet downe neuer ſo cleare & infallible; yet wil they not ceaſſe to contend ſtil, euen whē their own conſciences condemn them, as ſaith S. Paul. Al this is true: yet muſt not they which are in autoritie abuſe it, as though it were lawful for them to ſay; This is ỹ law, let it be followed. Neuertheleſſe, the Pope & al his clergie haue left ỹ holy ſcripture: & what ſhould we do then but repaire to this rule; ỹ ſeeing God woulde haue the temporal iuriſdictiō to be gouerned by his word, there is much more reaſon ỹ the Church ſhould not be otherwiſe gouerned than by ỹ holy ſcripture. Whereſoeuer temporal Iudges are, they be lawmakers; neither haue they libertie to make new lawes for the ſpirituall gouernement of the Church. To be ſhort, men muſt hold their peace, all mouthes muſt be ſtopped, men muſt content themſelues with that which is ſet down by Moſes, by the Prophets, & by the Apoſtles, & thereupon muſt men reſt altogether. Seeing it is ſo ỹ God hath not authoriſed men to bee lawmakers as in reſpect of the ſpirituall gouernement of the church: let vs conclude ỹ it is not lawfull for vs to turne away from the law & from ỹ holy ſcripture: but ỹ we muſt hold vs to it. And ſo yee ſee what we haue to marke vpon this text, where it is ſaid, ỹ the Prieſts & the Iudge for ỹ time being ſhall iudge according to the law of God.

Tit. 3. 11.

And in very deede I haue declared a litle alreadie, that we ought to receiue Ieſus Chriſt, as wel for our Iudge as for our highprieſt. For Ieſus Chriſt hath a double office: in ſomuch ỹ beſides that he is our chiefe prophet of whom we ought to hold al our doctrine & to fetch all trueth: he is alſo our ſoueraigne king, & highprieſt. Howbeit foraſmuch as they repreſented his perſon, being as it were his ſhadowes & figures: it behoued thē to follow this law. As now there are no mo ſuch ſhadowes & figures (as I ſaide heretofore) becauſe the ſonne of God is cōme into the worlde, ỹ old prieſthood is paſſed away, & the old kingdome is aboliſhed. Therfore let vs be contented to haue an inferior order, ỹ is to wit, that ciuil gouernement be ſo maintained as Gods law do alwayes beare chiefe ſtroke, & as all men in the mean while haue a regard what is lawful for thē. When kings, & princes, & magiſtrates are to make lawes, let them vnderſtand that if they make them of their own head, it is a marring & confounding of all things. For God ſaith, it is by me that magiſtrates diſcerne what is good and expedient. Therfore let them call vpon the ſpirit of God, that he may giue them wiſdom & diſcretion to make good & conuenient lawes. And let them that ſit in the ſeat of Iuſtice, referre thē ſelues to God, and ſeeke to bee ruled by his holy ſpirite. Let them that haue the ſpirituall iuriſdiction knowe, that it is not lawfull for them to meddle any further than with the preaching of Gods worde, and to ſpeake as out of his mouth, and to deliuer the doctrine faithfully which is contained in the law and ỹ Goſpel, let them holde themſelues within thoſe boundes, and take no further vppon them. Thus yee ſee in effect howe wee ought to put this doctrine in vre.

Eſa. 7. 14. Hebr. 1. 2. 8. & 2. 17.

Prou. 8. 15. 16.

And it is ſaid expreſſly, That men ſhall ſtand to the ſentence which is giuen by the Iudges and Prieſts: and that the party which diſobeyeth it, ſhal dy the death becauſe of his pryde. Hereupon the Pope would needs grounde, that it is not lawefull in any wiſe to ſtand againſt the things that haue bin determined by the Councels. What? Behoide, the Pope hath ſit as cheefe of the Councel, and the Byſhops and prelates haue conſented thereunto, and ſhall a man come and ſet himſelfe againſt it, and ſay ỹ it was il decreed. O that were an intolerable crime in deed, God wilnot haue ſuch pride to be borne withall in his people. This (as I haue ſayd afore) may eaſily be ouerthrowen, as thus: that foraſmuch as this text treateth of matters of lawe, it treateth not of doctrine. For God hath deliuered his lawe, and hath ſaid that men muſt not turne aſide neither to the right hand nor to ỹ left. In ſo much that whē Moſes gaue inſtructions vnto Ioſua, he ſaid to him, thou ſhalt follow whatſoeuer is conteined in ỹ law, & not ſwarue aſide one way nor other. Behold, Ioſua is ordeined to be the cheefe Iudge, to hold the people in good order, he is their head, and repreſēteth our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: yet for al ỹ, he ſaith not to him, Thou ſhalt doe whatſoeuer thy mind giueth thee to do, & whatſoeuer is good & right to thine own ſeeming: but thou ſhalt do as ỹ meaneſt of all the people, ſubmitting thy ſelfe to the doctrine which is giuen thee for the guiding of the Church. So then, as touching Gods ſeruice, and religion, wee ſee howe the lawe hath euer borne the ſwaye, and it behoued all men to haue their eares open and redie to receiue whatſoeuer is ſet forth there, and that no man might preſume to ſtand againſt it, or to ouerrule it, for making of the people to murmure. Now therfore foraſmuch as here is no ſpeech concerning any other things than of matter in lawe, how they ought to be ended, and of the pacifying of quarels which elſe would be endleſſe betweene man and man; the ſolution is very eaſie: namely that if a man ſtande againſt a definitiue ſentence, his meaning is to peruert all order, and he is an enemie to mankinde, and woorſe than a theefe. He that robbeth or murthereth, ſhalbee puniſhed, and yet his breaking of the lawe, is but in ſome one point: but as for him that breaketh ỹ ciuil order, he openeth the gap to theft, to murther, and to all confuſion: his meaning is that there ſhould bee no more modeſtie nor humanitie among men. Therefore ought hee to bee taken as an enemie to all goodnes; and (according to Saint Paules ſaying) they that would ſet ſuch diſorder among men, ſet not themſelues againſt creatures, but do make warre againſt the liuing GOD, becauſe all ſoueraignetie is of him. Nowe then, it is not to bee marueiled

Deut. 31. 18 Ioſue. 1. 7.

that it ſhould be ſayde, that the partie which diſobeyed the ſentence of the prerogatiue court, ſhould be cut off from among the Iſraelites.

And by this ſentence wee be put in minde of that which hath beene ſpoken before: namely ỹ our Lord maketh ſo great account of the earthly policie, that he will haue it mainteined yea euen with mens liues. Precious is mans bloude vnto him; for men are ſhaped after his image: but yet doeth he not ſo much beare with a man, but that he will haue him ſtoned, & put to death, if he be diſobedient to ciuill order. Therefore we can not by any compariſon iudge how precious and holy a thing in Gods ſight the authority is which he hath giuen to Iudges & Magiſtrates. For if any man ſtep vp againſt it, he ſhall die for it. And why? Is a mans life no more worth than ſo? (for ſo will ſome men alleadge.) Yes: and make ye nothing of the image of God which ſhineth foorth much more in Magiſtrates, becauſe God hath printed his marke in them? Againe, what is the life of one man in compariſon of the liues of a hundred thouſand? For the whole nation periſheth without remedy, where this order is not helde, that there be Magiſtrates, and that men yeelde obedience vnto them. For the men that can not finde in their heartes to bee gouerned, woulde become deuils, if there were no order of gouernement, that they might be helde in awe by their ſuperiours: all would go to hauocke. So then it is not without cauſe ỹ God hath ordeined ỹ the party ſhould dy which is diſobedient to the order of Law. And therefore ſo much ỹ more ought we to yeelde to ỹ which is tolde vs here, & to humble ourſelues in that behalfe, and to bowdowne our neckes willingly & obediently to ſuch as hold the ſword of Iuſtice. For in ſo doing, we offer vnto God ſuch ſacrifice as is acceptable to him, & he receiueth it as we ſee in this text. And if we diſobey the men whō he hath ſet in ỹ degree; we be his enemies and make warre againſt him, (as I ſayd afore) and wee ſhall haue too mightie an aduerſarie for vs to ouercome.

And he ſpeaketh purpoſely of pride. For it is vnpoſſible that a man ſhoulde be ſo ſtubborne as to withſtande the publike magiſtrate, & to ouerthrowe the order of the common weale, if he be not caried away with pride & diueliſh ouerweening. So then, will we amend this rebelliouſnes againſt the Iudges and Magiſtrates? Let euery of vs frame himſelfe to a good lowelineſſe. For if we be not puffed vp with pride, it is certaine that all men will keepe on his courſe, and thinges will be quiet among vs. What is the cauſe then that order is ſo peruerted? It is for that men can not finde in their hearts to yeelde ſo farre vnto reaſō as to ſay, let ỹ Lawes ouerrule vs. And cōſequently let ſuch as are appointed for Magiſtrates looke that they mainteine their ſtate, & do their indeuour to beate downe ſuch pride; and let all men ſubmit themſelues meekely to the order which God hath appointed. And Moſes hath noted this thing, of purpoſe to ſhew that Gods vſing of ſuch ſeueritie & rigor againſt ỹ diſobediēt, is not without cauſe. For in ỹ caſe, we muſt not ſimply looke vpon their diſobedience; but proceed yet higher, namely ỹ they be led with anouerweening of thēſelues, ỹ they be ful of pride & ſpitefulnes, and ỹ if there were any meekenes in thē, it would be diſcerned by their ſubmitting of theſelues to ỹ hand of God. But foraſmuch as they be ful of pride & intollerable ſtatelineſſe, ſo as they wil not ſtoope either to God or man, but reiect al ỹ euer is: it is not to be wondred at, though God cōmand ſuch perſons to be put to death.

And he ſayth expreſly; thou ſhalt rid away euill frō Iſrael. For (as was touched yeſterday) when wickednes is ſuffred, it is a marring of al thinges & a generall infection ſolloweth vpon it. At the firſt, the greatneſſe of the miſchiefe is not perceiued that commeth of the pardoning of a ſinne. Well, it paſſeth for once. Yea, it ſeemeth but for once. But it turneth to the infecting of all afterwarde, becauſe that by ỹ meanes the euill was ſoftered ſtill, and men ſtept not to the redreſſing of it in time: & ſo God is faine to puniſh our negligence. Now then let vs marke well, ỹ for this cauſe Moſes warneth vs heere, ỹ if we ſuffer naughtines to ſettle, it will marre & infect all ỹ is, before it can be redreſſed: and that it is too late to go about it, when men haue tarried till the infectiō hath gotten the vpper hande.

Alſo he ſpeaketh of the example ſaying, that others hearing thereof ſhalbe afraide, and by that meane, pride ſhalbe corrected. Firſt of all we ſee hereby, ỹ pride is an odious vice before God, ſeeing he vſeth ſo violent remedy ỹ he will haue the party to anſwer it with his life. And ſecondly let vs mark alſo, ỹ the puniſhmentes which we ought to execute belong to example. And ỹ is the cauſe why it is ſayd, ỹ they which ſpare an offender in leauing his fault vnpuniſhed, ſhalbe gilty of ỹ vndoing of the whole nation: for by ỹ meanes, the reſidue do fall to leaudnes as well as he. And when folke ſee a wicked deede cōmitted, & the party is not puniſhed for it; euery man taketh libertie to do ỹ like. Therfore let vs take warning by theſe examples, ỹ we may be able to apply thē to our inſtruction: & when we ſee thē puniſhed which aduance theſelues; let vt learne thereby to walke in meeknes. And although it were better for euerie man to learn by himſelf, thā by beholding ỹ puniſhmēts of other folks: Yet notwſtanding it is a great grace of God, whē he teacheth vs by other mens harmes. Let vs mark moreouer, ỹ if we cōtinue without amendment when we ſee ỹ puniſhments ỹ are executed by the authority of God; I ſay if we continue without amendment: our ſinne increaſeth ſo much the more. God warneth vs by a great many of inſtructions, yea & of chaſtiſements alſo which he executeth; and wee make none account of them: nowe is it any wonder if in the ende wee ſee our Lorde ſende ſo great and exceſſiue diſorders, that wee wote not where to become? Then let vs learne to profite in this ſchoole, as oft of GOD lifteth vp his hande to puniſh the wicked: and let vs vnderſtande that he teacheth vs by their example: wherfore let vs ſtoope, & let euery of vs yeelde to obey him with true meekeneſſe.

Now let vs fall downe before the maieſtie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs feele them more and more, ſo as we may all of vs ſeeke to frame our life according to the rightneſſe which hee ſheweth vs, and not looke to be drawen thereto by compuſſion of the earthly ſworde, but rather that the ſworde of Gods worde may haue ſuch power in our heartes, as it may make vs to ſacrifice ourſelues vnto GOD, killing all our fleſhly luſtes, and renewing vs to ſuch a kinde of life, as our whole deſire may bee to haue God reigne ouer vs, and that we may be wholly reformed, according to his holy will: and that therewithall we may followe the orderly policie and ſpirituall gouernement of his Church; and that all the things which he hath ordeined for our benefite, may be ſo mainteined & obſerued, as both great and ſmall may ſubmit theſelues therunto. That it may pleaſe him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs, but alſo to al people & nations of the earth: Reducing all poore ignoraunt people out of the bondage of errours and darkeneſſe wherein they are holden: That ſo he he may bring thē to the knoweledge of his trueth: And that for this purpoſe it would pleaſe him to raiſe vp true & faithfull miniſters of his worde, &c.

The Cv. Sermon which is the fourth vpon the ſeuenteenth Chapter.

14 When thou art come into the Lande which the Lord thy God giueth thee, and enioyeſt it and dwelleſt therein, and ſayeſt I will ſet a king ouer mee like as all the nations that are rounde about mee:

15 Then ſhalt thou make him king ouer thee whome the Lorde ſhall chooſe from among thy brethren: him ſhalt thou ſet ouer thee to be king, and thou maieſt not ſet a ſtraunger ouer thee which is not thy brother.

16 But he ſhall not multiply horſes to himſelfe, nor ſende the people againe into Egypt to increaſe the number of horſes, foraſmuch as the Lorde hath ſayd vnto you, yee ſhall neuer hence foorth goe any more againe that way.

Deut. 16. 18. HEretofore Moſes hath ſpoken of the Iudges that were ordeined in euery citie to gouern the people, and ſpecially of the cheefe Iudge to whom all thinges were referred. Nowe he addeth that if ỹ people be diſpoſed to chooſe a king, he ſheweth what manner a one he ought to be. And firſt he ordeineth that he muſt be taken of the linage of Abraham: and ſecondly he declareth his duetie to him, to the intent he ſhould not go beyond it, nor play the Tyraunt in ſteede of playing the king. That is the meaning of Moſes generally. But here we muſt conſider what is the cauſe, why God ſetteth not vp a king by his owne authoritie, but rather leaueth it to the likeing of the people. For if he allowed the ſtate of a king, or if it were a thing that he liked wel of; ought he not to haue ſhewed the way, that the people might haue obeyed whatſoeuer he had cōmaunded them? But he ſayeth, When thou art come into the Lande which thy God giueth thee, and inioyeſt it, if thou wilt chooſe a king as other Natiōs haue. Hereby it ſhould ſeeme that God was not willing there ſhoulde bee any kingdome in Iewrie: but that if the people were ſo deſirous of a king that they could not be helde from it, then he granted it them by way of ſufferance. Notwithſtanding this, wee heare howe it is ſayde in Geneſis, that the ſcepter ſhould not be taken from the tribe of Iuda, nor the gouerneur from betweene his legges, vntill the perſon that was to be ſent were come & had appeared. This propheſie was not a curſe that ſhould come vpon the people, nor a vengeance of God: but rather a ſingular and ſpecial fauour aboue all other. For in ſaying ſo, Iacob declareth that God would ſet vp an euerlaſting king, by whom ſaluation ſhould be ſent throughout all the world. And vntill the time of the manifeſting of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt it behoued the people to be mainteined ſtill in hope of him: and God gaue vnto him the kingdome of Iuda and that whole tribe. We ſee then in fewe wordes, that this kingdome was a figure of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, and as a warrant which God gaue to that people, that he himſelfe reigned ouer them, and the kinges of Iuda ſerued alwaies to holde the people vnder Gods protection, as it were in the perſon of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. For albeit that all the Princes of the worlde be called Gods children and his lieftenauntes: yet notwithſtanding, the kingdome of Iuda had that title after a more ſpeciall and holy manner. And therefore wee ſee it was Gods will there ſhoulde be a king among his people, euen becauſe it was the full perfection of all felicity, that Ieſus Chriſt ſhould be the head of them. Gen. 49. 10. Pſal. 82. 6.

True

True it is ỹ if diſputatiõ ſhold ariſe cõcerning ỹ gouernmẽt of mẽ; it might be ſaid ỹ a free ſtate is much better thã to be vnder a Prince: but here is no cõtrouerſie of any ſuch mater. And in deed ſuch diſputatiõs are not very profitable. For they ỹ are vnder ỹ gouernment of a Prince, muſt not be fickleminded to make any alteration. And thoſe to whõ God hath giuen liberty & freedom, ought to vſe it w̃ thankſgiuing, as a ſingular benefit & treaſure ỹ cannot be priſed ſufficiently. And as for ỹ kingdom of Iuda, there was a ſpeciall reſpect in ỹ, as I haue ſaid afore: namely ỹ it was the image of the truth which was in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, in gathering vs to himſelfe to make vs Gods Church & his owne flocke. For ỹ is better than al ỹ gouernment in the whole world. If a mã ſhoulde cõpare a principality, or a free ſtate of a Senate, or whatſoeuer els can be imagined for a cõmonweale, with ỹ grace which God giueth vs in ſhewing himſelf to vs in his own perſon, of purpoſe to reigne ouer vs himſelf, & to take ỹ charge of our welfare, & in eſtabliſhing his only ſon in ỹ office & dignity: I pray you is it not much better to be vnder ỹ obediẽce of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, & to haue him to reigne ouer vs as our ſouereine Lord & King; than to be Kings & Emperors euery one of vs? Yes verily. So then wee muſt conclude, ỹ ſeeing God ordeined Iudges frõ ỹ beginning, hee ſheweth therby ỹ it is a deſirable thing for folk to be gouerned in cõmon & to haue laws to reigne among thẽ, ỹ there be no ſucceſſion by inheritance, but ỹ euen thoſe which are choſẽ [to beare office] be bound to yeelde account of their doings, & haue not abſolute libertie to doe what they liſt or to ſay: I will haue this thing: It ſhalbe thus done. This did God ſhew, whẽ he gouerned his owne people by ỹ hand of Iudges. And for the ſame cauſe did he vpbrayd & blame ỹ Iewes for requiring a king to be their head & to reign ouer them. It is not thou (ſayth he to Samuell) to whõ they haue done this wrong. True it is ỹ thou haſt executed my authority in ỹ thou art of my ſetting vp: but their vnthankefulnes & diſobedience toucheth me, in ỹ they can not abide ỹ I ſhoulde haue the gouerning of thẽ. And afterward he addeth, wel then let them haue a king. But it ſhalbe to their trouble: for he ſhall ſpoyle their houſes, take away their ſons & daughters, conſume their ſubſtance, lay taxes & tallages vpon them, & (to be ſhort) vſe them like wretched bondſlaues. See what they haue wonne by requiring a king.

1. Sam. 8. 7.

And in this text our Lorde ſheweth, ỹ as in reſpect of worldly gouernmẽt, he had choſen ỹ beſt ſtate ỹ could be; namely ỹ the Law ſhould reigne ouer the people, & therewithal ỹ there ſhould be Iudges in euery citie, & a chiefe gouernour ouer all, to the intent ỹ matters might be determined and concluded, as was declared yeſterday: howbeit with this moſt noble condition, which God reſerued to himſelfe, namely that our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt ſhould reigne ouer them. For it behoued thẽ to be vnder one head, howbeit not ſimply of a mortall man, but of ỹ ſonne of God. But foraſmuch as ỹ time was not yet come, that ſuch grace ſhould be ſhewed: it behoued the hope therof to be fedde with ſome figure. And ỹ was the cauſe why it was promiſed by the mouth of Iacob, that the ſcepter ſhould not depart from the tribe of Iuda. God did purpoſely chooſe out one tribe, & when he ment to ſet vp the king, he ſayd that the reigne of him ſhoulde be durable vntill the comming of his owne ſonne, who was the true heire, and the very partie to whome the crowne belonged, namely our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. Thus haue wee nowe a briefe declaration after what ſorte God ment to ſtabliſhe a kingdome among his people, howebeit, that was in reſpect of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt. But as in reſpect of worldly gouernement, the beſt and moſt deſirable ſtate, was to haue Iudges, that is to ſay, to be in libertie, and yet notwithſtanding to bee ouerruled by Lawes. Nowe thereby we be doone to vnderſtande, that although all worldely gouernment deſerue to be eſteemed as a holy thing, & behoofefull for the maintenaunce of mans ſtate, yet notwithſtanding, when it pleaſeth GOD to giue vs a meane kinde of gouernement, voyde of tyranny, wherein the Magiſtrates doe rule after ſuch a ſort, that the Lawes haue their due courſe: the ſame is a ſpeciall priuiledge, and wee ought then to perceiue thereby that God is neere at hand to vs, & that he pitieth vs as his houſholdfolke, and as thoſe that are of his flocke, & his owne heritage. Marke that then for one point. But therewithall we muſt marke alſo, that when we ſhall haue knowen Gods grace in his gouerning of vs in this earthly and tranſitorie life; it is nothing in compariſon of the ſpirituall kingdom of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, & therefore ỹ we muſt highly exalt or praiſe this benefite ỹ God vouchſafeth to gouerne vs by the hande of his onely ſon, yea and we muſt eſteeme it, not onely more than all the libertie of the worlde, but alſo more than al the kingdomes and Empires of ỹ world. But anon this point ſhalbe touched new againe.

Furthermore let vs marke, that God intending to ſet vp a king, did tarry neuerth eleſſe till the people required one. And ỹ was to put them in a deſire, that they might not afterward rebell againſt the king that was to bee ſet vp. For the vnthankefulneſſe and malice of the people bewrayed it ſelfe, in that they coulde not finde in their heartes to holde them to the ſtate which God had ſtabliſhed already. And what a thing had it been, if he had ſet vp a Monarchie among them at the firſt day? For it is a farre more tollerable thing for vs to haue gouernours that goe by choyſe and election, who in executing their office ſhall knowe themſelues to bee ſubiect to the Lawe: than to haue a Prince whoſe worde muſt ſtande for reaſon, and whoſe childe muſt inherite, though he be neuer ſo very a babe, and conſequently obeyed; though hee be the willfulleſt foole or the cruelleſt perſon in the worlde. Therefore it is a farre more tollerable ſtate to haue Iudges and Gouernours. Nowe if the people of Iſrael could not away with this ſtate, but wold needs through a wicked deſire ſeek to haue a king: what would they haue done if God had at ỹ firſt day ſaide vnto thẽ, I ſet this or ỹ houſe to reigne ouer you, & it behoueth you to obey the king? What murmuring would there haue beene?

Gen. 49. 10.

What

What practising would there haue bin? Therfore it was Gods wil to make ỹ people willing, to ỹ end there might be no occasion of rebelling, whē Dauid was to be made king. Verily we see what fell out. For soothly, their requiring of King Saul, was 1.Sa.12.5, 20. through a foolish ambitiō & spyte, which they bare to their neighbours. When they sawe how there were kings in Egypt, in Edō, in Ammon, in Syria, & in the other Coūtryes: they thought there was no such dignitie & stat elines amōg thēselues because there was no royall seate among thē. And therfore they would haue one. But see their folly. When they had chosen Saul, although he vexed thē & put them to as much hardnes as could be: yet notwithstanding they were so wedded to him, ỹ they would needs keepe ỹ croun to his childrē, & not suffer Dauid to reigne. Albeit ỹ God had declared ỹ Dauid was the mā whō he had chosē, and ỹ they had not the authoritie to choose any other to be their king: yet ỹ people chose Saules son, as who would say, we will haue this house to continue for euer, yea euē as it were in dispite of God. And (as we see) was Dauid mainteyned in his kingdome, any otherwise than by Gods stretching out of his hand to preserue him? The people fel within a while after to rebelling against Dauid, & the example of Absolon sheweth ỹ the 2.Sam.15.14. insurrection was so great, ỹ Dauid was forsaken of the most part of his subiectes. So then it appeareth ỹ if ỹ people had not bin as good as daunted aforehand, ỹ kingdom which God had determined on in his own purpose, had neuer take place, neither would they haue submitted thēselues vn to it but by cōpulsion. But yet behoued it thē to obey it. And so by ỹ meane ỹ people were prepared therto by requiring a king of thēselues; & yet they found thēselues disappointed of their expectation. For it was not Gods wil to stablish the blessed kingdom at ỹ first, wherby ỹ whole world was to haue saluation: but hee chose a king of the tribe of Beniamin, & yet it was said ỹ the scepter should not depart frō the tribe of Iuda. Wherfore doth God turne away frō ỹ which he had spoken by ỹ mouth of Iacob? This was done not ỹ he is variable, not ỹ he repenteth him; not ỹ he intended not to fulfil ỹ prophesie: but for ỹ he was not minded to let his blessing appeare so soone, because of ỹ peoples seditiousnesse, in respect wherof, he hid it, or at leastwise delayed it til they had acknowledged their fault, & repented thē therof. And this doth shew vs sufficiētly wherfore god in this place reserueth not to himself ỹ chosing of ỹ king which should gouerne his people: but sayth thou shalt require one. It was to the end that his reigning should be of the more authoritie, & he bee ỹ better beloued of his people; so as euery mā should submit himself to him, & therby know in very deed, ỹ there was no greater happines, than to be vnder ỹ house of Dauid, forasmuch as the same was a shadow & figure of the sonne of god, who was to bring saluation & full perfection of al good things. In effect we see here two things. The one is that our lord blameth the people for their importunitie, in ỹ they would needs be aforehand w̄ him in desiring a king: as if he should say, You wil not suffer me to make him: (true it is ỹ I wil neuer forget you, but I wil set such order among you, ỹ ye shal haue cause to thanke me & to reioyce of my goodnes.) But yet will you be so malitious & frowarde, ỹ when I shall haue giuen you a Iudge, you shall desire a king. And this frowardnes of yours shal cause me not to set vp the kingdom which I haue ordeined, & which I haue reserued to my selfe, that is to wit, of the tribe of Iuda. Yet notwithstanding our lord sheweth ỹ he wil set vp ỹ kingdom, but that shalbe after the people are made fit to obey, & haue acknowledged their sin, because they had coueted a change against Gods wil, & before ỹ fit time was come. Thus are all these places easily made to agree. And hereupon we may gather a good lesson; which is that when God hath promised vs any benefite or token of his mercy: we must hold our lustes in awe, and not runne a heade to chalendge him to do that which he hath sayd, when we list, but vse patience, and be quiet vntill God shewe vs by effect that he ment not to disappoint vs, in promising any thing ỹ belongeth to our saluation. Here then is a generall rule; which is, ỹ in all Gods promises we must be patiēt, & not be so hastie as to say, how goes this geere? why doeth God make delay? why performeth he not ỹ thing which we hoped for at his hand? Let vs beware of such impatiencie, seeing the example of ỹ people is such as we see it is in this place. But let vs be stil when God hath promised vs any thing, vntil ỹ cōuenient time therof be come of it self. And yet shal not this hinder vs but ỹ we may pray vnto him for it. For wherfore doth he cal vs to him & cōmand vs to pray, but to ỹ intent we shold discharge all our care & sorow vpon him, & receiue cōfort of it? Therfore we may wel pray vnto god whē we are stirred vp to impatiencie: but yet must we euer refer all things vnto him: & good reason it is ỹ he shold dispose of thinges according as he himselfe hath determined in his owne purpose, & not after our fancie. Also let vs beare in minde what I haue touched afore; to wit, ỹ seeing God hath giuen vs a cōuenient state, & ỹ we be so gouerned by Iudges & magistrates, as ỹ the Lawes do reigne ouer vs: we ought to giue God thanks for ỹ benefite, & to take good heed ỹ we prouoke not his wrath by our fonde ficklenes, in desiring this or ỹ, and in saying why is it not thus or thus? For whē we wil nedes alter things after ỹ fashion at our own pleasure, we make not war against mē, but we defie God, & thrust him far frō vs to ỹ entent he should not reigne ouer vs. Therfore to be short, seeing there is some forme of gouernment among vs, let vs learn to thank God, & to hold vs vnder ỹ shadow of his wings, & not to craue this or ỹ through fooliish ambition. For we see what happened to ỹ people of Israell. True it is ỹ God chose them a king: howbeit, ỹ was but to punish their wicked desire: & euen so will it fall out w̄ others. And in deede, we see how he giueth large scope to ỹ king which was set vp, namely to Saul, 1.Phil.4.6. saying, Thou shalt not reigne as a Prince, but he
2.Sam.8.11. shal execute al maner of tyranny ouer you, and yee must bee faine to abide it, spyte of your teeth.

But howsoeuer wee fare, let vs learne to referre all the benefites that GOD giueth vs in this this world, to the ſpiritual kingdome of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt: aſſuring ourſelues that though we had all thinges elſe at will, and liued here in neuer ſo great pleaſure and welth, and had ſuch gouerners as demeaned themſelues as gently towardes vs as were poſſible: all this were nothing vnleſſe our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt reigned ouer vs, and bare all the ſwaye. On the contrary parte, though we be tormented according to the fleſh, (as we ſee a number of people extreemely vexed with tyranny) and that we haue not ſo much as bread to eate: Yet notwithſtanding the bleſſedneſſe which God ſendeth vs in that our Lord Ieſus Chriſt reigneth ouer vs, ought to be preferred before all other thinges, and wee ought to take all afflictions patiently, ſo we may haue the comfort of his reigne ouer vs. Nowe the ſcepter of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt is not a materiall ſcepter, after the manner of the royall ſcepters and crounes which Kinges and Princes haue had at all times: but it is the Goſpell, which is the true token of his preſence. And wee ſee howe he taketh vs for his people, wherof we haue a ſure warrant, in ỹ he will haue vs to be gathered together into the vnitie of faith by the doctrine of his goſpell, and by that meane be made the heritage of God.

Pſal. 110. 2. & Eſa. 2, 3.

Let vs come now to that which Moſes addeth concerning the office of the King. Hee ſayeth firſt, That the king muſt be choſen from among the people. Thou ſhalt take one of thine owne brethren (ſaith he,) and thou ſhalt not goe ſeeke a ſtranger. And ſurely by the propheſie of Iacob, the king was to be choſen of the tribe of Iuda. Why then doeth God ſpeake generally of the whole linage of Abraham, and not marke out the kingly houſe by name? For it ſhould ſeeme that hee ment not to darken that propheſie. Let vs marke what hath beene ſayd alreãdy: to wit; that the time was not yet come, and that the fauour which God had behighted by the mouth of the Patriarke Iacob, was to be kept cloſe as yet for a time, by reaſon of the peoples vnthankefulneſſe. Behold, whereas God had ſpoken it ſo long time before: nowe at the ende of three hundered yeeres or thereaboutes, he ſayth there ſhalbe a king among you. As how? Shall the propheſie vaniſh away and be of none effect, which had bin vttered three hundered yeeres before, and ſpoken by the mouth of Iacob? Ought it not to haue beene ſetforth much more cleerely at the publiſhing of the Law? Yes, but our Lorde doeth vs to vnderſtande, that the people had drawen as it were a veyle before it, by reaſon wherof, in ſteede of comming to light, it behoued his fauour to be as it were hidden away in the darke. That is the thing which God ment to ſhewe in this text in ſaying, Thou ſhalt chooſe a king from among thy brethren, without appointing out the houſe, as had beene doone afore. But howeſoeuer the caſe ſtande, Gods holdingbacke of his fauour for a time, was no vtter aboliſhing thereof. Then did hee delay his promiſe of ſetting vppe a king of the tribe of Iuda: but yet hee did not vtterly bereaue his people of that hope. And ſo yee ſee, howe the people of themſelues made an interruption: and yet that God for all his chaſtiſing of them, vſeth gratious goodneſſe and moderateth his rigor: inſomuch that the thing which he had ordeined abideth ſtill, ſauing that the time thereof is prolonged.

Let vs marke therefore, that God to correct the faultes of his people, doeth hide away his fauour for a time, ſo as it is not manifeſtly ſeene: but yet in the ende he wil cauſe it to come again. Thus ouercommeth hee our naughtineſſe with his infinite goodnes, and we ſee it by experience. But yet ſometimes wee feele it not though our Lorde ſhewe vs it. Howeſoeuer the caſe ſtande, let vs learne by the example of the Iewes, that if our Lorde at any time withdrawe himſelfe from vs, and ſeeme not to performe his promiſe to vs; our owne faults are the cauſe thereof, for that we be frowarde and haue pulled backe Gods hande when hee would haue reached it out to haue diſcharged his promiſe towardes vs. For how many times aday prouoke we his wrath? And is not that a kinde of ſhutting of the doore againſt him, that hee might not come at vs to make vs partakers of his goodneſſe? Therefore when we haue thruſt backe his grace after that faſhion, if it appeare not againe vnto vs out of hande, we haue to humble ourſelues, acknowledging that we our ſelues are to blame. But yet for all that, we muſt not be diſcoraged, but we muſt pray God that although he haue deferred the performance of his promiſes for a time, yet wee may not be vtterly bereft of them, howſoeuer the world go, but that after we haue languiſhed for a time and bin chaſtiſed for our offences, we returne again without faile, and inioy ỹ thing which he hath promiſed. Thus ye ſee in effect what wee haue to gather vpon that text.

And whereas God forbiddeth his people to haue any ſtraunger to be their king: there are two reaſons which we ought to marke well. The one is ỹ that kingdome was a Sacrament of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt, and therefore it was not meete that it ſhould haue come to the hande of an vnbeleeuer or ydolater: for that had bin a defiling of holy thinges. If heathen kings reigned ouer their like, it was not to be wondred at. For although ſome vnbeleeuing kinges reigned ouer the people of Iſraell by Tyranny, as was done by the Babylonians and afterward by the kinges of Aſſyria: yet doth it not followe but that there was alwayes this exemption, that God had ſtill a peculiar kinde of reigning, whereby he ſhewed as in a lookingglaſſe, that ỹ people was gathered together as into his owne houſe. Therefore if a ſtraunger had bin ſet vp in the ſeate of Dauid, it had beene treacherie againſt God, & the reproch had bin offered to God and to his onely ſonne. For when the kingdome was ſtabliſhed in the line of Dauid, this promiſe was added; I will be his father, and hee ſhallbe my ſonne. And the Apoſtle declareth that it was ſo honorable a title that it belonged not euen to the Angelles. True it is that the Angelles are ſometimes called the ſonnes of God: howebeit, that is not without an addition; whereas Chriſt hath it, becauſe he is preferred before all creatures. Now then,

2. Kin. 17. 6. & 25. 21.

Pſal. 2. 7. & Hebr. 1. 5.

hadde they chooſen an ydolater, and ſet him vp in the ſeate which God had reſerued for his own onely ſonne, who was eſtabliſhed in his infinite grace, who was the marke of his diuine maieſtie, and who was aboue all the principalities of the world, yea and aboue heauen it ſelfe as in reſpect
Col.1.16.17 of the creatures; as ỹ Apoſtle ſpeaketh of him, in the firſt chapter of his Epiſtle to the Coloſſians: what a thing had that beene? Had it not beene an vnnaturall confuſion, and too ſhameſull a defiling of the grace of GOD? Then lette vs marke that for the firſt reaſon why GOD woulde not haue a ſtraunger to ſit in the ſeate of Dauid.

And in ſo dooing, God ment alſo to ſhewe a dreadfull diſpleaſure, and to make the people to knowe howe they were vtterly accurſed, in that they were diſappointed of that kingdom, & that Gods Lampe was after a ſort put out. For, that ſimilitude is often ſet downe vnto vs in the holy
1.Kin.11.36. ſcripture, to ſhewe that God maketh his light to ſhine vpon his people, and that although there be not at all times great light, yet there ſhal euer be a Lampe howſoeuer the world goeth. And the ſeconde reaſon was, that if a ſtraunger ſhoulde haue reigned, he would ſoone haue changed the religion, as wee knowe that the heathen will alwayes needes ſette vp their owne ſuperſtitions. And why? For commonly they haue not the feare of God to keepe them in awe: but rather they thinke God to be bounde vnto them if they giue men leaue to worſhippe him and ſerue him after ſome ſort, & yet for all that they wil needes turne all the ſeruice of God to their owne luſtes and liking. If the Turke get the ſouereignetie in any countrey, although he be contented to abide the Chriſtians (as they call themſelues): Yet doeth he worke them all the ſpite and reproch that can be to diſcourage them. Where the Papiſtes beare ſwaye, they defile al the puritie of Chriſtian doctrine, and they can not abide that the Goſpell ſhoulde be preached, or that the Sacramentes ſhoulde be purely vſed: but they will needes put all to hauocke, and in any wiſe ſet vp their owne ydolatries. Thus yee ſee what would haue come of it, inſomuch ỹ if a ſtranger ſhould haue reigned ouer the people of Iſraell, it hadde bin the next way to haue ouerthrowen the whole Lawe. Not without cauſe therefore did God expreſſely prouide that they ſhoulde not chooſe any other king than of the lynage of Abraham, ſuch a one as were compriſed in the co-
Col.2.11.12 uenaunt, and bare the marke of the Church, that is to wit Circumciſion, which was the like Sacrament to the Iewes, that we haue noweadayes of Baptiſme.

But nowe muſt we apply this to our owne vſe, and vnderſtande firſt of all that the kingdome of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, muſt bee mainteined in ſuch ſoundeneſſe, as that wee muſt beware of bringing any defilemẽt into it. And what is ỹ king dom of Chriſt? I haue told you already ỹ it conſiſteth not in any viſible things, or in any things belonging to this preſent life: but it is the gathering of vs together by his holy ſpirite, into the hope of the heauenly life: and the preaching of the Goſpell vnto vs, that it may bee as a rule to holde vs vnder the obedience of God. And although the Sacramentes bee viſible of themſelues: yet are they neuertheleſſe ſpirituall, as in reſpect of their ende, as all other Ceremonies are. We come hither togither; well, it is a viſible thing: we kneele downe to pray vnto God; & that is viſible alſo: but yet it aimeth at a higher ende, and hath a reſpect which is altogether ſpirituall. So then, let vs learne that the kingdom of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt ought to be mainteined in his full ſoundeneſſe; that is to wit; wee muſt beware that wee mingle not any corruption with the things that he hath commaunded in his Churche, ne thruſt in ſuch perſons as may ſerue to ouerthrowe the common weale: For if we ſhould chooſe falſe Sheepheards and men of wicked doctrine, or of leaude conuerſation: were it not a diſhonoring of Ieſus Chriſtes kingdome and a putting of all thinges to hauocke as much as in vs lieth? Seeing then that the children of Iſraell were forbidden to ſet vp a ſtraunge King in the ſeate that was a figure of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt: nowe that we haue the ſonne of God to gouerne vs, not in ſhadowe as in the time of the Lawe, but in full trueth; nowe that wee haue our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt who is called the dayſunne of righteouſneſſe as the prophete Malachie ter- Mal.3.4.
meth him, who telleth vs that he is neere at hand to vs, and ruleth in the middes of vs: what a trecherie were it if we ſhould deface his roial throne and not maintaine it in ſuch pureneſſe, as that he might alwayes reigne by his worde, and euerie man doe him homage, and both greate and Pſal.2.12.&

heminence among vs? Thus yee ſee howe the firſt point is that God commaundeth vs heere to haue a ſpeciall care of his Churche, ſo as there may be no defilement to hinder Chriſtes reigning ouer vs as he ought to doe.

Nowe as touching the ſecond reaſon, let vs marke alſo that if God haue giuen a people the grace to chooſe Kinges, Princes, Magiſtrates or Iudges, they ought to haue great regarde that the ſeate which God hath ordeined for the welfare of mankinde, be not giuen to a man that is an vnbeleeuer. For the people that chooſeth either king or Iudge, without diſcerning whether he be a man that feareth God or no: doe put the haulter about their owne neckes wilfully. And when they ſhall chooſe, and take Magiſtrates that are either deadly enemies of the Goſpell, or Hypocrites, that ſeeke nothing elſe but to turne all thinges vpſidedowne, or worldelinges that coulde finde in their heartes to treade all religion vnder foote: is not the admitting of ſuch men as an opening of the gate vnto Sathan, that hee might haue place among vs? Is it not a reiecting of Gods grace, to the ende that all abhominations might haue their full ſcope? So then, when ſoeuer wee chooſe Iudges, Magiſtrates, Gouernours and Officers of Iuſtice, let vs take warning by this text, to looke for this marke in them, that they bee men which feare God, and are at leaſtwiſe deſirous that Religion ſhoulde be mainteined in his pureneſſe: For otherwiſe it is all one as if wee woulde driue God from vs, and seeke to banish him from among vs; which is too cursed a trayterousnesse. And thus much concerning earthly gouernement. After wee haue indeuoured that the spirituall religion of ỹ church may bee maintayned: let vs likewise be so minded towardes the state of the temporall sworde and ordinarie iustice, that such as sit in iudgement may bee all one with vs in brotherly religion, and that the holy bande of faith may knit vs togither in obedience to one selfesame God. And hereof there is a faire confirmation in the thinges that Moses addeth: for it deserueth to bee treated of immediatly, and we shall see it in place conuenient.

But he sayeth expressely, That the king which shall haue beene chosen, must cause the booke of the lawe to be copied out in the presence of the high priest and of the Leuites. Nowe let vs see why God hath made this so strait ordinance, that there should bee a booke of authoritie for the kings vse. Is it meant that a man shoulde bee ignorant and vterly vnacquainted with the doctrine of God, vntil hee came to the crowne? No. For Gods will is that his lawe should bee knowen both of greate and small, as wee shall see by his protestation hereafter. The secrete thinges belong
Deut. 32. 46 to your God himselfe: but yet it hath pleased him to set his worde here before you; & ye must not say any more that it is a hidden doctrine, either for your selues or for your children. Wee see then howe it was Gods will that his lawe shoulde bee common both to greate and small. And shoulde he then that was brought vp in the house of the crowne, bee a beast? No. Ought he not to bee instructed in the Lawe? And if hee ought, was it not requisite that hee shoulde haue a booke of it? Yes for sooth. And what is ỹ cause why God woulde he shoulde haue a copie of the booke, at such time as hee were put in possession of the kingdome? It was to the ende hee shoulde perceiue himselfe to bee double bounde, & vnderstande that if priuate persones bee bounde to profite in Gods schoole, & to giue good heede to the doctrine that is preached or written; it is much more reason that the person which hath the charge of the whole bodie, which is set vp in the name of God, and hath God come neere vnto him, shoulde bee diligent to profite in the same schoole. Therefore let vs marke how it behooued a booke to bee appointed out specially for the king, and the same to bee written after a solemne fashion, and the Priestes and Leuites to bee witnesses thereof, and the same to bee deliuered vnto him as by the hande of God. For it was all one as if God had sayd vnto him; Go to, I haue giuen my lawe to all my people, & I will haue the remembrance thereof to bee renewed Hebr. 9. 19. 20. yerely. For the booke was brought foorth, & the bloud of the sacrifice was sprinkled first vppon the booke and then vppon all the people, to the ende they shoulde consider thus; wee be linked in vnseparable bonde with the lawe of God. But when this was done, there was a seconde booke brought and deliuered into the kings own hãds, as if it had beene saide vnto him; God byndeth thee much more than any priuate persons, to knowe thy duetie: namely that thou shouldest be better learned than all the rest, and shewe them examples, and behaue thy selfe in such wise as all the people may take thee for their guyde. That was the thing which our Lorde meant in this text.

And in deed, let vs consider a little how hard the charge of princes is. Although a Iudge had not past one citie or one towne to gouerne; yet shoulde he finde himselfe much cumbered: and what shal he do then, hauing a whole realme? It standeth al Magistrates and Officers of iustice in hãd, to apply this to thẽselues, & to know ỹ their charge passeth all their abilitie, so as they shall neuer be able to go through with it, except God giue them his holy spirite. But yet for all that, he wil not haue them to be negligent in ỹ mean while. What is to be done then? All Magistrats and al such as haue publike charge, must vnderstande that if it behooue other men to bee diligent to read the holy scripture, to haunt Sermons, to bee confirmed more and more in the doctrine, and to be well edified thereby: they themselues haue twyce as much neede to be so. And forasmuch as God hath aduaunced them to preheminence; it behoueth them to haue recourse to him dayly, and to call vppon him, and not to be so vainglorious as to thinke; O, I am able ynough to guyde my selfe, and to gouerne others. No no: Let them rather consider them selues to bee vnable, vnlesse God giue them power and strength, with wisedome and discretion to guyde themselues: Therefore let them desire to be taught, that others may frame themselues after their example, and let all resort vnto God, indeuouring to profit in such sort in his schoole, as the great men may haue wherewith to gouerne well, and the meaner sort may by that meanes bee allured to obey quietly; so as al mẽ may bee guyded vntó God with one common accorde.

Nowe let vs kneele downe in the presence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs feele them in such sort, as wee may seeke his mercie with true repentance, and hee graunt vnto vs, not onely to burie our faultes past, but also to refourme vs, that our whole seeking may be to please him, & to frame our selues in all points to his will: and also that in the meane whyle hee beare with vs in all our infirmities, vntill he haue rid vs quite and cleane of them. And so let vs all say; Almightie God heauenly father, &c.

19 The which hee ſhall haue with him, and reade it all the dayes of his life, that hee may learne to feare the Lorde his God, and keepe all the wordes of the Lawe, and the Ordinaunces to doe them:

20 That he lift not vp his heart aboue his brethren, nor turne not from the cõmaundement to the right hand or to the left, that he may indure long in his kingdome, both he and his ſonnes in the middes of Iſrael.

WE ſawe yeſterday why GOD commaunded kings to haue a booke of the law. For although they had beene taught afore, yet when they were come to that ſtate, it ſtoode them in hand to thinke that they had more neede than euer they had to rule themſelues by Gods word, conſidering how hard a thing it is to gouerne a people, and that God muſt be faine to worke in that behalfe, and men muſt acknowledge themſelues far too weake, that they may ſeeke ỹ help that is needeful for them; namely to be guyded by God, and for attainment thereof apply their ſtudie to his worde. For it is in vaine for vs to hope that God will giue vs counſel, vnleſſe wee ſeeke it in his lawe. If a man ſay that God will wel ynough giue him his ſpirite, & yet in ỹ mean while deſpiſe all the helpes, as the reading of ỹ holy ſcripture, & the hearing of Sermons: is it not a mocking of him? And ſo ye ſee wherefore it behoueth the kings to haue a booke of ỹ lawe. There is a ſaying of a heathen man which is taken for a common prouerb, namely that ỹ common weale is happie where wiſe men holde the helme, or where ſuch as hold the helme do giue themſelues to wiſedome. And that is a very rare thing. But yet men ſee that al this is very true: For when men are choſen to gouerne a people, it is meete ỹ they ſhould haue wit and reaſon in them. And it is not ynough for a man to bee of ſome courage & diſcretion aforehande ere hee take the gouernment vpon him; but he muſt alſo indeuer to profit continually when he is come to it, and thereunto doth euen experience it ſelf prouoke him: for our true wiſedome is to harken to God when he ſpeaketh to vs, and to obey his doctrine. So then wee ſee how needful it was for kinges to bee exhorted to read Gods worde moſt ſpecially, and to giue themſelues thereto, as wel for ſhewing example vnto others, as alſo for neceſſities ſake, euen becauſe their charge is ouerhard & high, ſurmounting all capacitie of man.

Now it is ſaid expreſſely, that they may learne to feare the Lord, without turning either to the right hand or to the left. For it is not ynough for a king to haue a booke in his palace for faſhions ſake. It were to no purpoſe to make a faire ſhewe, as who ſhould ſay, Looke yonder, there is the lawe of God, Gods booke is in the kings palace, as we ſee how the worlde contenteth it ſelfe continually with ceremonies. And in deede, the Iewes being peruerters of all things, and ſo farre poſſeſſed with the diuel that they haue gone about to deface the ſubſtance & whole power of Gods worde, whenſoeuer this booke came in queſtion among them, O ſay they, it muſt be written in ſuch manner of parchement, & it muſt haue this & that done vnto it. But theſe things are more than childiſh, and yet in the meane while they haue let the chiefe thing alone. Let vs marke then that Gods intent was not to make a booke that ſhould be as a relike, to be ſhewed for a brauerie that the king might haue a marke of his dignitie aboue all others: but the reaſon that is ſet downe here, is that he ſhould learne to feare God. Now although this bee ſpoken expreſſely concerning the kings of Iſrael, (as was declared yeſterday:) yet is it verie good reaſon, that they which are magiſtrates at this day, (conſidering that their gouerning is in the name of our Lord Ieſus,) ſhoulde ſet their mindes vppon the doctrine of ſaluation, & indeuer to profit therin, aiming alwayes at the marke which God hath ſet before thẽ, namely to learn to feare him, knowing wel that vnleſſe they haue the feare of God it is vnpoſſible for them to glorifie him, and al thinges within a while muſt needs goe to haucke.

And by the way, let vs marke alſo, that here the holy Ghoſt meant to ſhewe vs the vſe of the holy ſcripture. For (as ſaith Saint Paul) it is behoofefull to make the man of God perfect in all good workes. Therefore whenſoeuer we read the holy Scripture or heare it preached; let vs haue this regarde of profiting in the feare of God; and let vs not think our ſelues to be ſo far forwarde, that wee ſhoulde not neede to go on ſtill all our life long. A man might thinke it ſtrange that it ſhoulde bee ſayde, that he ſhould learne to feare God. For why? Shoulde a king bee a nouice when hee is once choſen? Ought hee not to bee well knowen aforehande to bee a man of excellent vertue? Yes verily. But yet doeth it ſtande vs in hande to bee learners ſtill: the the feare of God is a thing that is not learned perfectly at the firſt day. And therfore let vs cõtinue in it all the time of our life, and yet wee ſhall finde that when wee haue liued neuer ſo long, wee be but in the middes of our iourney. The thing then which wee haue to marke in Moſeſes words, is that when kings haue ỹ booke of the lawe, they muſt not keepe it ſhut, or ſet it out to ſhewe like a relike; but the king muſt exerciſe himſelfe in it, & his reading of it muſt not bee as it were but for a paſtime, as who ſhoulde ſay, I haue read it, and that is a ſufficient diſcharge for mee: but it muſt bee to the ende that hee which was in good forwardneſſe alreadie, and had ſerued God in his youth, ſhoulde bee the more quickened vp to doo ſo ſtill: knowing well that in as much as God commeth ſo neere vnto him, hee is the more ſtraitly bounde to liue vertuouſly. That is the very thing in effect which wee haue to beare away, and moreouer wee muſt euery one of vs apply the ſame to his owne vſe, as I haue ſaide afore.

Nowe it is ſayde likewiſe, that they bowe not to the right hande nor to the left. Wherein it is ſhewed vs that the feare of God is the true rule, which beeing throughly rooted in vs becommeth a good and ſure loadſtarre to vs throughout all our life. For what is the cauſe that wee gadde after our owne likinges, and wander here and there; but that wee haue not our eye vpon God? Therefore wee may conclude that all they which turne aſide eyther one way or other, doe ſhewe ſufficiently by their life, that they bee deſpiſers of GOD. But will we haue a good remedie to inſtruct vs, and to direct our life in ſuch wiſe as it ſhall abyde continually in the right way? Let vs feare God: and this fearing of God preſuppoſeth a willingneſſe and deſire that wee haue to obey him. If a man alleage that hee feareth GOD; and yet in the meane whyle regardeth not to bee taught by him: I pray you doeth hee not ſhewe that all is but hypocriſie, yea, and vtter ſhameleſneſſe in him? As for example yee ſhall ſee many in theſe dayes which pretend to bee verie deuout: but they cannot abyde to heare one worde of admoniſhment for their better inſtruction: it is ynough with them to make ſome faire countenance. But when Moſes ſpeaketh heere of not ſwaruing to the right hand or to the left; he preſuppoſeth that which is true, namely, that if we feared God, we woulde be deſirous to bee taught his will, and to know what things hee liketh of, that wee might frame our liues thereafter. That is one thing more which wee haue to remember vppon this text.

Now let vs come to that which is ſpoken here ſpecially concerning the kings of Iſrael. They be forbidden to gather great numbers of horſes to returne againe into Egypt. In deede it wilbee ſaide likewiſe hereafter, that they muſt not multiply the number of their horſes for couetouſneſſe ſake. But here is ſet downe a ſpeciall reaſon, which is, that this couetouſnes of theirs might prouoke them to go downe into Egypt, either vnder pretence to reuenge the wrongs and iniuries that had beene done vnto them, or vnder any other colour. But our Lordes will was, that although the children of Iſrael had beene miſintreated, & tyrãnouſly dealt with; yet notwithſtanding they ſhoulde acknowledge that they had beene harbored in Egypt for a time. True it is that they were forbidden to haue any familiaritie with the Egyptians: his will was to haue them vtterly diuided from them, becauſe hee knewe well that it woulde be their decay: and yet for all that hee woulde not haue them to make warre vppon them, but to abyde ſtill at home. And nowe hee ſayeth that the king muſt not multiply ỹ number of his horſes: For when a prince hath the helme in his hande, hee will take greater enterpriſes vppon him, than a commonaltie will doe. In deede ſome times there may hap to be ſome braynleſſe perſons, which would ſet all thinges in a broyle: but yet a Prince is alwayes boldeſt: and that boldneſſe is a cauſe of much confuſion in the worlde. That then is the cauſe why it is ſaide, that the king ſhall not gather him ouer many horſes to goe into Egypt when hee had made himſelfe ſtrong. And why ſo? For God forbiddeth his people to go that way any more for euer.

Nowe wee haue to note here, that when wee haue receiued any diſpleaſure, if the workers thereof haue done vs any good in times paſt, wee muſt lay them both into the balance, and the good muſt counteruaile the euill. Truely although this commaundement were not, yet were it not lawfull for vs to deſire reuenge: inſomuch that euen this one reaſon ought to ſtaye vs and withholde vs, namely, that if wee bee beholden to a man, and he chaunce afterwarde to doe vs ſome wrong, wee ſhoulde call to mynde the good that wee haue receiued at his hande, and the ſame muſt bee as a brydle to vs. And it is the very ſame thing which God conſidered when hee woulde not haue his people to practiſe any thing againſt the Egyptians. But what ſoeuer came of it, he would not that there ſhold bee any familiaritie betwixt them, & not without cauſe. For it was ſo frowarde a nation, that his people could haue learned nothing but euill among them. Againe, their idolatrie was as exceſſiue and out of all meaſure as could be. Therfore was it good that the children of Iſrael ſhold bee vtterly ſeparated from Egypt, leaſt they might bee wrapped in their ſuperſtitions. And we ſee howe greatly the Prophets ſtoode vpon that poynt: and yet it booted not at all. For it was the place which the children of Iſrael fled vnto for refuge, as oft as they were troubled by other nations. In ſo much that when the two kingdomes of Iſraell and Iuda were at diuiſion, if the one had the helpe of the Aſſyrians, the other reſorted into Egypt, and ſo were the cauſe of their owne deſtruction. And all this miſchief fell out, becauſe they did it againſt this forewarning, for God had forbidden them ſufficiently afore hande. Therefore let vs beare in minde, that when wee ſee corruptions before vs, wee muſt not enter into them wilfully, except we intende to tempt God: but when wee ſee occaſi-

ons of euill, wee ſhunne them not, but rather runne into them, and wee wil needes bee ouerhardie. And therefore let vs learne to abſtaine from all things that may ſeduce vs or make vs ouerſhoote our ſelues.

Nowe it is ſaide afterwarde, That the kings ſhal not hoord vp much gold and ſiluer. True it is that 1.Tim.6.10. couetouſneſſe is forbidden to all men as the roote of all miſchiefe, where with when a mans heart is once poſſeſſed, he muſt needs be ſnarled in al the ſnares of Satan: Inſomuch that if a man be giuen to couetouſnes, hee becõmeth cruel, vſing all manner of outrage, violence, & crueltie. Agayne he falleth to pilling and polling, & maketh no conſcience to deuour other mens ſubſtances. Afterwarde he falleth to periurye, couſinage, vntruſtineſſe, trecherie, poyſoning, and whatſoeuer euill he can beſides. And when malice is once ſet on fire, he proceedeth euen to open murder. To be ſhort, if a man ſuffer himſelf to be wunne to couetouſnes, he muſt needes become a verie bondſlaue to Satan. Why then doeth hee forbidde here onely kinges to gather much gold or ſiluer? Surely our Lord giueth not priuate perſons leaue to inriche themſelues, when he forbiddeth kinges to do it: But rather the cleane contrary. For if ſuch as haue a better meane then wee, ought to be clenſed from that vice: what ought we to be? For if any men ſhould haue libertie to gather golde and ſiluer, kinges ought to haue it moſt. But God hath forbidden it them: and therefore let all other men looke to themſelues. But Moſes ſpeaketh expreſſely here of kings, as of thoſe that haue moſt neede of remedy, becauſe they haue greater occaſions of gathering than any other men. For when a king reygneth in a Countrie that is riche and plentifull, it is a temptation vnto him: inſomuch that when he ſees his ſubiects liue at their eaſe, he thinketh thus with himſelfe, it will neuer grieue them to giue me ſuch an impoſt, & when he hath rayſed one tax or tallage, there is neuer any ende or meaſure of his gathering afterward. And ſo ye ſee how kinges haue need of the ſayd reſtreint, by reaſon of the ſaid temptation which is of more force towardes them than towardes other men.

True it is that all men are tempted to gather goods & to inriche themſelues: but foraſmuch as they haue not the like opportunities to bring it to paſſe, it is as it were an abatement & a cooling of their courages. A king hath means to drawe to himſelfe continually, and to inriche himſelfe more and more: for he hath authoritie to leuye taxes & tributes, and by that meane to lay vp much for himſelfe. Therfore it is requiſite that this euil ſhold be corrected in him. And Pſal.119.36. 37. in that reſpect did Dauid ſay, Lord reforme my heart, that it bee not giuen to couetouſnes: and turne away myne eyes, that they be not intangled, beguyled, and carryed away at the ſight of golde & ſiluer. Why doeth Dauid ſpeake after ỹ manner? For he had much more neede, than if he had liued ſtill in the houſe of his father Ieſſe: hee had beene there but as a poore countrey cloyne or ſheepeheard: and thereuppon he had followed his common trade of liuing. But being once become king, and hauing the riches of the whole lande before his eyes, ſo as no man could let him to gather as much as he would: ſuch opportunitie was a prouocation to his fleſh, & hee might ſoone haue ouerſhot himſelfe as men cõmonly doe. And therefore hee brydleth himſelfe, ſaying, Lorde, keepe mee. And in deede, if he had not beene preſerued miraculouſly by ỹ goodnes of God; hee had ſoone beene corrupted at the ſight of ſuch opportunities. Thus haue wee nowe the reaſon why Moſes forbade the kinges of Iſrael expreſſely to gather much gold and ſiluer.

For (as I haue ſaid afore) accordingly as occaſions are offered vnto vs; ſo muſt wee alſo bee brydled and held in, when our fleſh tempteth vs to any thing: and there is none other remedie than that which I haue tolde you of. Although then that this be ſpoken to kings: yet may wee gather a leſſon thereof that ſhalbe common to all men. And therefore whenſoeuer wee meete with any opportunitie that may drawe vs vnto euill, let vs ſee that wee learne to repreſſe our luſtes, & make a ſhielde and bulwarke of this admonition, leſt wee ſtep aſide to ſome vanitie, becauſe we be ouerfrayle. That is the thing wherof all of vs in generall ought to take warning, when wee ſee that the king was forbidden to gather much gold & ſiluer, becauſe he reigned in a plentifull countrey.

Alſo here is mention made conſequently of wiues: namely, that the king muſt not take many wiues. It is certaine that this rule is common to all men. For although ſome of the Patriarkes had many wiues: yet was it not therefore lawful, for we muſt haue recourſe to Gods inſtitution. True it is that mans cuſtome may well peruert the doctrine: but yet can it not change euill into good for all that. It is God that ordeyned marryage: and as he is the author therof, ſo will hee haue men to holde them to his pure inſtitution. Nowe did hee create two wiues for Adam? No: and yet (as ſayeth the Prophet Malachie) hee had abundance of ſpirit in him. It had Mal.2.15. beene no harder a matter to him to haue created two or three women than to haue created one. Was God letted by any vnabilitie? Nay, and yet he created two in one fleſh. Sith the caſe ſtãdeth ſo then, it is a changing of the order of nature & a deſpiſing of God, when a man taketh two wiues. O (ſay they) the Patriarkes did ſo. Yea: but thereby it appeareth that the cuſtome of men cannot alter Gods ordinance, how great vertue or holines ſo euer be in them. And it ſerueth alſo to ſhewe ỹ ſuch as ſhielde themſelues vnder the example of other men, offend double. For is it meete ỹ Gods authoritie ſhould bee diminiſhed vnder pretence ỹ men haue done this or ỹ? And therfore let vs vnderſtand, ỹ it was neuer lawfull for any man liuing to take two wiues in marriage at once: for it is a breaking of Gods order. Why then is it forbidden here but onely to kinges? Becauſe there was more libertie. And the thing that I haue touched already is the better confirmed vnto vs in this text.

If

If a priuate perſon had taken two wiues, hee ſhould haue beene neerely looked vnto. What? Shall I go giue my daughter to him that is maryed alreadie? Shee ſhalbe ſure to haue ſorrowe to her ſoppes: ſhee ſhall liue in continuall ſtryfe and vnquietneſſe. Yet were ſhee better to bee dead out of hande. But men were ſo deſirous of honour, that if a king required a daughter of theirs to his wife, they eaſily condeſcended vnto it. What? I ſhall haue my daughter maryed to a king. And it was a blynding of a womā when ſhee was ſued vnto by ſuch a one. Nowe then, for as much as kinges had larger ſcope in this caſe, and conſequently might more offend God: our Lorde hath ſpecially forbidden them to haue many wiues, and moreouer becauſe the example of ſuch as are in authoritie, is woorſe than the example of priuate perſons. If a common perſon doe any euill, it goeth no further than his owne houſe and his next neighbours: but hee that is in authoritie ſtandeth vppon a skaffolde, and is ſeene afarre off: and if he ouerſhoote himſelfe; the corruption of him ſpreadeth throughout the realme. Therefore it was requiſite that God ſhould forbid kinges to haue many wiues, euen becauſe the corruption therof woulde haue ſpread ouer the whole lande. And although it could not be letted altogither: yet came it firſt from the heathen. And if it bee asked from whence the hauing of many wyues came, it wilbee founde in the houſe of Cain, & Gen. 4. 19. not among the people of God. This leawdneſſe then of hauing many wyues, was brought vp by Satan. And the Patriarkes were intangled in it, as in deede it is harde for a man to keepe himſelfe from a thing, when it is once growen into a cuſtome; for then it ſeemeth to be permitted. Yet notwithſtanding to the intent it ſhould no more be ſo, becauſe there was occaſion therof, our Lorde forbad kinges to haue many wiues.

But heere it might be demanded, what is to be ſayd of Dauid, and much more of Salomō, in reſpect of wiues as well as of riches. It cannot be denyed but that Dauid had many wyues, and as for Salomon, he had many moe, and he ſeemeth not to haue bin blamed in that behalfe; for the ſcripture ſpeaketh but of the turning away of his hart 1. King. 11. 4. after ſtraunge women which infected him with their ſuperſtitions and ydolatryes. And as touching gould and ſiluer, wee knowe how it is ſayd that Dauid gathered ſo great a maſſe of them that Salomons Temple and his palace were builded therwith. Therefore there was a maruelous 1. Kin. 10. 27 riches. Yea and it is ſaid expreſly, ỹ in the raigne of Salomon, men made no more accompt of gold and ſiluer, than of grauel, ỹ quantity therof was ſo exceeding great. And there ſeemeth to be ſome contrarietie in the ſcripture, in as much as among other thinges our Lord ſayeth that hee Pſal. 72. 15. will cauſe the gould of Arabye and all the riches of the worlde to bee brought to Ieruſalem. And why ſhould he promiſe that, if he ment not that kinges ſhould be riche and wealthie? Nay, it is a figure of the kingdome of our Lord Ieſus Chriſt. If this bleſſing of God bee ſet downe as ſo worthie a thing; howe are kings forbidden to gather golde and ſiluer? As touching wiues, no doute but both Dauid and Salomon offended in that behalfe, and Salomon moſt. As for Dauid, hee had many wiues: and all the excuſes that can bee alledged, wil not be able to iuſtifie him before God. But howſoeuer the caſe ſtande, he did it not through inordinate luſt. For he had maryed Michol Saules daughter, and hee coulde haue contented himſelfe with that one wife, if ſhee had not beene taken away from him by force. And when ſhe was giuen to another man, it was lawfull for him to take Berſabee.

Againe, there happened other things afterwarde, ſo that if a man conſider wherefore Dauid tooke many wiues: ſurely there wil euer be ſome occaſion to excuſe him to the worldward; but yet for all that, he was blameworthie ſtil before God. And as touching Salomon, he rebelled openly, as a man too much giuen to ỹ fleſh, in that he proceeded euen againſt the prohibition that was giuen both to himſelfe and to all other kinges. And it appeareth what inſued to him for it. For, that hee was ſo abuſed and deceiued by ſtrange women, it was a iuſt puniſhment: and becauſe he had taken ſuch libertie to himſelfe, God ſhewed him that he had caſt himſelfe into Satans ſnares. When a fiſh thinkes to ſwallowe vp other fiſhes, he himſelfe is caught or choked by that meane. Euen ſo was Salomō faine to receiue his payment, becauſe hee gaue himſelfe too much to his delightes and pleaſures. And it is a dreadful thing, & a thing that ought to make the hayre to ſtande vp vpon our heades, that ſo excellent a man, indued with ſo great giftes of Gods ſpirit, ſhoulde become an ydolater, and fall away from the pure ſeruing of God, ſpecially being himſelfe a prophet to teach the whole worlde, and a lampe to direct not only the children of Iſraell, but alſo the verie Infidels, and to draw them to the knowledge of the trueth. O that ſuch a man ſhoulde ouerſhoote himſelfe after that faſhion! And whereof came this? Euen of giuing heade to his owne luſtes: & therefore God payed him his iuſt hyre. Seeing we know this, ought we not to quake at ſuch vēgeance ſet before our eyes? Yes, and therefore let vs marke wel, that whereas Dauid and Salomon had many wiues, it was not without fault and tranſgreſſion: and thereby wee ſee ſo much the more howe needefull this lawe is. For if God had neuer forbidden kings to haue many wiues, had not their libertie beene yet the more exceſſiue? Yes verily. For they cannot bee withholde from rebelling againſt God. Their fleſh carryeth them ſo away, that they forget the thing which ought to bee beſt knowen vnto them. This text ought to bee noted aboue all others, ſpecially for kinges: and yet they thinke not of it at all. And therefore wee ſee it was not for nought, that GOD preuented that miſchiefe.

But we muſt vnderſtand by the way, how it is not ynough that the law be ſet downe, vnleſſe God write it in our hearts by his holy ſpirite: For elſe it is but a dead letter, and ſo will kill vs, becauſe wee ſhal bee iuſtly condemned by 2. Cor. 3. 6 the doctrine therof, which serueth to bereaue vs of all excuse. Therefore whensoeuer our Lorde commaundeth vs any thing, let vs learne that wee must runne vnto him, that he may write the things in our heartes, which we read written in paper or parchment. As touching riches, wee must not conclude that there was the like fault.

2.Sam 8.11. & 1.Chron. 22.14.& 1.Kin.12.4. For why? When Dauid gathered such a masse of golde and siluer, it was to build the temple of God, and not to make any other enterprises, as wee knowe. Againe, wee see not that he grieued his people, though there were great complaints after the death of Salomon: but of that wee will treate hereafter both for Dauid and for Salomon. The intent of Dauid then was good and holy, forasmuch as in gathering all thinges together which were requisite for the building of the Temple, hee attempted not any thing which was not commaunded him of God. Also the meanes were lawfull. For hee layde no tyrannicall charge vppon his people. As for Salomon, hee had the greate riches gathered aforehande by his father. And againe wee must marke, that a greate parte of those thinges were such as hee had conquered of the Infidels, and their spoyles were as yee woulde say, presentes, which God had giuen him, as is spoken thereof in the Psalme. And therefore Salomon for his parte might lawfully vse all those goods, specially forsomuch as it was sayde, that the kinges of Tharsis and of all the yles and farre countryes shoulde come and bring golde and siluer, and all manner of precious things, and againe, that there shoulde bee giuen vnto him of y gold of Arabia, because it was Gods will that the kingdome of Israell shoulde flourish after that manner. It was lawfull for Dauid and Salomon to gather treasure, so it were not vppon ambition and pryde, nor to vndertake foolish enterprises and to ouershoote themselues into loosenesse of life, and also, so the people were not grieued by it with any impositions, but that Dauid did but onely receiue the golde and siluer that was brought vnto them. But whether Salomon exceeded measure or no, I am not able to affirme. Wee see what his disobedient sonne Roboam sayde, namely that whereas his father had beaten the people with roddes, hee woulde beate them with whippes, and he would lay vppon them as much as they coulde beare, vntill hee made all the backes of them to bowe. In which saying, Roboam vaunteth of his fathers tyrannie. And wee may well gather therby, that there was some excesse in Salomon. So much the more therefore ought wee to marke, that God hath not for nought forbidden kinges to gather great masses of golde and siluer. And for the same cause also did Dauid vse the prayer which I haue rehearsed before: for there was good cause for him to doe it. He sawe the temptations that myght assayle him on all sides, and hee coulde neuer haue withstoode them, if God had not strengthened him with his power. And in the same respect hee protesteth that Gods lawe is deerer to him than golde and siluer, and that all the riches of the worlde were nothing to him in comparison of Gods lawe, because hee sawe there his true felicitie and glorie.

Psa.68.12, 13. Psal.72.10. h Kin.12.24 Psal.19.11.

So then let vs remember in fewe wordes, that whereas our Lorde forbad kings to hoorde vp great treasures, it was not for that it is not lawfull for them to be riche, so their heartes inclyne not to pride, vayneglorie, and couetousnes, and that they vse not any tyrannie ouer their subiectes, but onely take that which is offered them as it were by the hande of God, & content themselues therewith, applying the same vnto good. For wee see in what taking king Ezechias was. Albeit that hee had not the thirde parte of Dauids reuenewe, by reason of the cutting away of the kingdome of Israell: yet had hee his chambers so well furnished and stored, that hee made a shewe and a boasting of it when Ambassadours were sent vnto him from Babylon, commending and setting out himselfe, to the ende that the king of the Chaldyes shoulde bee desirous of his friendship. But wee see what befell vnto him. The Prophet Esay brought him this message: Go too (sayeth hee) thou hast made a showe this day of thy gold and siluer, and of the precious thinges which thou hast; but assure thy selfe thou hast kindled a fire which shall neuer bee quenched, vntill the Babylonians haue fetched away all that thou hast, so as there shall not remaine one peece of money in Ierusalem, but all shalbee sacked and pilled away: and wee see howe the same punishment was executed afterwarde. And this example sheweth vs sufficiently wherefore God forbad kinges to gather much golde and siluer. For when Princes haue such treasures, they can hardly keepe themselues from beeing prouoked to vaunt and exalt themselues continually after some manner or other. For asmuch as it is so, let vs learne that in this place God meant to holde the kinges of Israell within some measure and meane degree, that they might not looke too high.

And afterwarde hee sayeth, That his heart turne not away: that is to say, least his greatnesse make him to forget himselfe, and hee addeth yet further, That hee exalt not himselfe aboue his brethren. Whereas it is sayde that the king must not turne away; that is because that when men bee aduaunced to honour, they commonly forgette themselues, and thinke not themselues to bee the same they were before. Aboue all thinges the dignitie of a king is a state that will bleare a mannes eyes, yea, and put them quyte and cleane out: in so much that Princes thinke not themselues to bee as mortall creatures, but rather as halfe Gods by reason of their high aduauncement, and wee see they looke as high as though nothing were vnpossible to them, so as they will not bee subiect any more to right or reason. And if men doe not flatter them and honour them as Gods, they thinke they haue the greatest wrong that can bee. And whereof commeth that? Euen of this, that when a man is great, hee can haue neither mieldnesse nor lowlinesse in him, except Gods spirite reigne in him. For this cause are kinges warned heere, to beware that they forget not themselues: yea and that is yet better expressed in that Moses addeth, that they must not exalt themselues aboue their brethren. Whereof commeth it that kinges & Princes will needes set their feete vpon al mens throtes after that fashion? Euen of this pride which poysoneth their heartes, that they consider not themselues to be men, ne knowe any more what their state is. And when they be so blinde to Godward, it is no maruell though the fulnesse of their pride & presumption, make them to tread men vnder foote, and to looke that all men should stande in feare of them and stoope to their yoke. That is the cause why Moses matcheth those two thinges together.

Nowe then, if we intend to refreine from doing wrong or outrage to any man; lette vs looke that we knowe our selues. For (as is sayde in the common prouerb) he that knowes himselfe best, settes least by himselfe. And it is the way also for vs to behaue ourselues lowlily and meekely towardes our neighbours. But if a man forget himselfe, he must needes by and by mount vp into al pride and outrage, without making spare of any thing. And seeing this was forbidden to kinges, what is done to such as are farre their inferiours? Therfore let euery man in his degree apply this matter to his owne instruction. Let such as are in authoritie be well ware that they exalt not thē selues through pride, if they wil not be cast down to their shame. For the higher that the seate is whereon a man sitteth, the sorer is his fall, euen to the breaking of his necke perchaunce. Therefore let those whō God hath exalted, haue a care to holde themselues continually in rest, and not starte aside, but serue God and his people continually.

And it is sayde heere expresly Against thy brethren, or aboue thy brethren. For Kinges and Princes thinke themselues to be as it were cut off frō the company of men, and that they ought not any more to be counted of the cōmon aray of thē. But our Lorde skorning such disdainfulnesse, sayeth: Yet are they your brethren. In deede this is spoken of the children of Abraham which were descended all of one race. But choose mee out a king where yee will, is he not a man? And are not they his brethren, ouer whom hee reigneth? And if the case stande so with the greatest kinges of the earth: what is to be thought of those that are farre their inferiours? Now therefore, when a man is in authoritie or hath wherwith to maintaine himselfe in credit, if he be tempted to forget himselfe, let him consider thus: yet am I not separated from the rest of the body, I am a member thereof still, and they that are my inferiours cease not to be my brethren. What a thing were it then, if I should vaunt my selfe? Were it not a despysing of God? Let such as are aduaunced to any state of great preheminence remember this warning as oft as they be tempted to despise other men and to shake them off. Lette them thinke thus: what, shoulde wee be as Lyons towardes Lambes where there is brotherhoode? There is no brotherhoode betweene a Lyon and a Lambe. If I haue a Lyons heart, full of pride, Lordlinesse, and ouerweening: what a thing is it? Can I liue with them that are committed vnto me? Yea: for we see what is sayde of king Ezechias, when ỹ Prophet Esay telleth him of the restoring of the people to their former state. And no doubt but he had an eye to this text, to shewe howe it was the duetie of Ezechias and of all kinges, to be a shadowe for the refreshing and easing of their people, & a fosterfather to the poore and fatherlesse, and a comforte of them that are in distresse and sorrowe. And for a conclusion he sayeth, that the feare of God shall bee a treasure in his time, according to that which I haue shewed already. So that if kinges will behaue themselues as they ought, they must sette their mindes vpon this lesson, as it is shewed them by the Lawe of God. It was applyed to the person of Ezechias: but yet must all other men looke to themselues. And if our Lorde tell this lesson to ỹ great ones, without sparing them, what temptations soeuer they haue: what will come of it, when the meaner sort wil needes play the loose coltes, and not be bridled but kicke and spurne against God? Doe they not shewe themselues to be very much blinded with pride? And therfore let vs learne to profite so by the thinges that our Lorde teacheth vs, as all men both great & small may submit themselues euery one according to his degree, state & calling; that God may be honored of al men, and ỹ there may be one general obedience from the formost to the hindermost.

Nowe let vs kneele downe in the presence of our good God with acknowledgement of our faultes, praying him to make vs feele them better than we haue done, ỹ by meanes thereof wee may be drawen to true repentance to mislike of all our vices & transgressions, & to rid ourselues of thē, till God haue so wrought in vs, that we be throughly clothed with his righteousnes: & that in the meane while hee so beare with vs in our weakenesse, as wee may not faile to obtaine fauour at his hande, although wee liue not in such perfection as were to be wished. That it may please him to graunt this grace, not onely to vs but also to all people and Nations of the earth, bringing backe all poore ignorant people, out of the captiuitie of errours and darkenesse wherein they are holde; that so he may leade them to the knowledge of his trueth: And that for this purpose it would please him to raise vp true & faithfull ministers of his worde. &c.

On Fryday the xxij. of Nouember. 1555.

The Cvij. Sermon which is the firſt vpon the eighteenth Chapter.

THe Prieſtes Leuites, and all the tribe of Leuy ſhall haue no part not inheritaunce with Iſraell: but ſhall eate the ſacrifices of the Lorde made by fire, and his inheritaunce.

2 Therefore they haue no inheritaunce among their brethren, for the Lorde is their inheritaunce as he hath ſayde vnto them.

3 And this ſhalbe the Prieſts duetie at the peoples handes, euen at the handes of as many as offer any ſacrifice, whether it bee Oxe or Sheepe. They ſhall giue the Prieſt the ſhoulder, the Cheekes, and the inwardes,

4 The firſtfruites of thy Corne, of thy Wine, and of thine Oyle, & alſo the firſt fleeces of thy ſheepe ſhalt thou giue him.

5 For the Lord thy God hath chooſen him from among all thy Tribes, to ſtand and miniſter to the Lorde thy God, euen him and his ſonnes for euer.

6 If a Leuite come out of any of the Cities of all Iſraell where he is a ſoiourner, and come with all the deſire of his ſoule to the place which the Lorde thy GOD ſhall haue choſen:

7 Let him miniſter in the name of the Lorde his God, as all the reſt of thy brethren the Leuites do, which ſtand there before the face of the Lorde.

8 They ſhall haue like portions to eate, beſides that which they haue of the ſale of their fathers goods.

Deut 12.19. & 14.27.

MEntion hath beene made heeretofore of the right that God reſerued to the Prieſtes, and to al ỹ tribe of Leuy: and it is not for nought that mention is made thereof againe heere. For on the one ſide, it was more than needefull that the Prieſtes ſhould be put in minde of their dueties, ỹ knowing the honour which God had done them, they ſhould giue thẽ ſelues the more faithfully and cheerefully to the ſeruing of him: and alſo ỹ the reſt of the tribes might knowe, ỹ ſith it had pleaſed God to chooſe the ſons of Leuie, it behoued ỹ dignity to remain vnto thẽ, & no man was to beare them any ſpite for it. For in verie deede we ſee howe there were that did riſe vp againſt them, and God was faine by miracle to warrant that prieſthood which he had eſtabliſhed, and namely; in making Aarons rod to bud and bloſſome, the which he willed to be kept for an euerlaſting memoriall. It ſeemed to others ỹ Moſes would haue aduanced them in reſpect that they were of his owne kinred, for he himſelfe was of the tribe of Leuy. And becauſe he ordeined ỹ prieſthoode in the ſame tribe, they murmured at it, thinking ỹ Moſes had delt altogether vpon fleſhly affection: but God ſhewed himſelfe to be the Author thereof. And ſurely there was no cauſe of ſuſpition, if they that made the inſurrection had not bin carried away with great malice. For although Moſes had children of his owne, yet did he not ſet any of thẽ in the honorable degree of the prieſtes: but he beſtowed it away frõ them, and ſet them in the laſt place, as though they had bin of no eſtimation in ỹ tribe. If Moſes had regarded himſelfe & his owne aduantage, ſurely he would haue preferred his owne houſe. But he did not ſo, but contrariwiſe did let his children alone as they were, and held them backe. Wherein he ſhewed ỹ he obeyed God, and did nothing vpon his owne heade. On the other ſide we ſee how in giuing ỹ prieſthood to the tribe of Leuy, he depriueth them of the inheritance ỹ was aſſigned to thẽ among the reſt of their brethren: For the land was not promiſed alonely to thoſe twelue tribes among whõ it was afterward deuided. For at the time ỹ God made Abraham Lord and Maiſter of the Lande of Chanaan, Leuy was compriſed among them that ſhould be the inheriters therof. Why then is he put beſide it? So we ſee ỹ Moſes folowed Gods ordinance, & inuented not any thing of his owne head. We muſt go yet further: for he telleth the Leuites ỹ this ſcattering of them among the reſt of the tribes was a puniſhment of God, though it was afterwarde turned into grace, and ỹ God of his goodnes did wipe away the curſe ỹ he had layde vpon Leuie. But if we haue an eye to the originall grounde, it is ſayde thereof that Iacob denounceth Leuie and Simeon to haue bin wicked, inſomuch as he ſayth ỹ he will in no wiſe be matched

Numb. 16.1. & 17.5.8.

Gen. 49.6.7.

matched with them, neither in thought nor in worde, becauſe it was not long of them ỹ Iſraell had not bin put to hauocke. Whereupon he addeth, Thou ſhalt be ſcattered abroade. Wheras all the reſt haue their inheritances aſſigned vnto them: thou muſt be as a vagabonde among thy brethren. Seeing ỹ Moſes vttereth ſo harde and reprochfull a ſentence againſt all his owne tribe, who can ſay ỹ he ment to be partiall towardes it? Nay the cleane contrary appeareth. As a man led by Gods ſpirite, he reſpecteth not himſelfe or his, but putteth them to ſhame for euer, and will that if they haue any honour or dignitie, ỹ ſame ſhould be acknowledged to come of Gods meere fauour, and ỹ the ſayde note of reproch ſhoulde make it the more euidẽt that Leuy had deſerued to be vtterly bereft of his inheritaunce, if God had not remedied it of his owne goodnes. Therfore there was no cauſe of bearing any enuie to Moſes or any of his. But ſuch is the malitiouſnes of the world, that men take occaſion to grudge & repine at euery thing: and it is the thing ỹ Satan doth chiefly practiſe. When God is to be ſerued no man is willing to goe vnto God in trueth, but all inferiour degrees are waywarde, and woulde faine haue ſuperioritie without the charge. How many ſhall ye finde that are willing to giue them ſelues to the ſeruice of God by the preaching of his worde, or which ſeeke it with a right meaning affection, as who would ſay, I offer vp my ſelfe in ſacrifice vnto God? Yet notwithſtanding all are led with a kinde of ſelfeliking, vnleſſe God holde them in awe by his holy ſpirite: in which reſpect this leſſon is giuen vnto them, to the intent that Pſal.65.4. euery man ſhould be contented to be only in the forecourt of the Lord his Temple. We ſee then that men indeuour not to come neere God, and yet could euery man finde in his heart to be aduaunced, ſo it were without charge. Euen ſo was it among the Iewes. For the reſt of the tribes hauing their portions, & being in quiet at home in their houſes, ceaſed not to grudge againſt the Prieſtes and Leuits. And therfore God was faine to authoriſe their prieſthood after ſuch a ſort, as it might be exẽpted frõ al ſlander, & no man might take vpõ him to alter any thing therin. And ſo we ſee the cauſe why God repeated this doctrine againe.

Nowe it might ſeeme to be a diſordered kinde of dealing, to make an inheritance of the prieſthood: for the fitteſt ought to haue beene choſen out: and why then ſhould God go choſe one kinred after that faſhion, & make the children what ſoeuer they were to ſucceede their fathers? This ſeemeth to be no good order for the edifying of the Church. God therefore was faine to ſet his owne authoritie as a ſhielde againſt all theſe obiections. If a man be inquiſitiue, what reaſon or Pſal.33.4. what reſpect moued God, to chooſe the trybe of Leuie for his ſeruice: it ought to content vs that God hath done it, and wee ought to thinke well therof though the reaſon therof appeare not vnto vs. He knoweth wherfore, and ỹ ought to ſuffice vs. And yet let vs not dout but ỹ when God ordeined ỹ tribe [to ſerue him in his Sanctuarie] he was able to indewe them with ſuch giftes of grace, as were requiſite for the executing of their office. Seeing that God hath ynough wherewith to inable men; ſhould we fal to ſcanning why or wherefore he chooſeth one man rather than an other? It pleaſeth him. For by the ſame reaſon a man might demaund why God giueth his ſpirite to one man more than to an other. Ye ſhall ſee one man dulwitted, without learning or any other excellent giftes in him; and yee ſhall ſee an other indewed with great excellencie: and what is the cauſe herof? The goodwil of God, & thereupon muſt we reſt; & whoſoeuer grudgeth thereat, he ſhall finde in the end that he hath to deale with too great a maiſter. So then, it ought to be ynough for vs that GOD choſe out that tribe. Howſoeuer the caſe ſtande, he ment here to ſtoppe the mouthes of all the Iewes, and to ſhewe that it behoued them to keepe the order which he had ſet downe, as holy and inuiolable. Marke that for one point.

Heerewithall (as I haue touched afore) hee ment to put the prieſtes in minde of their duety, that they might be the diligenter in doing their ſeruice in the Temple. For had they lued as ydlebellies, it had beene contrarie to Gods meaning, and it had bin a defiling of the order which God had ſet downe and ſtabliſhed among them. So then, God had an eye to both theſe reaſons, and it behooueth vs alſo to marke them on our part. And therefore let vs learne, that ſuch as are called to any charge or office, ought to beare continually in minde and to bethinke them early and late, who it is that hath ſet them in that place, and for what purpoſe; that it may bee as a whetting or ſharpning of them, to indeuour that they become not vnprofitable in their charge, but rather apply themſelues faythfully vnto it; that they may bee able to make their reckening thereof vnto GOD. Let that ſerue for one point.

Againe, let vs learne to be contented with the degree wherein God hath ſet vs, and let none of vs be grecued when wee ſee an other goe before vs. For all the members of a body can not bee 1.Cor.12.19. eyes and eares; all can not be aboue; there muſt be legges and feete as well as eyes and handes. Therefore let vs vnderſtande that, and let euery of vs ſubmit himſelfe, and let it ſuffice vs that it pleaſeth God to accept vs into the companie of his people, to giue vs ſome litle corner in his temple, ſo as wee may bee incorporated into his Church. That is too great an honour for vs, and ſeeing it pleaſed God to place vs there, we ought to couet no further. Thoſe are the things which we haue to remember vpon this text, in applying the doctrine to ourſelues.

It is ſayde further, The Prieſtes and Leuites and all they of the tribe of Leuie, ſhall haue no portion in the inheritaunce of Iſraell, but ſhall eate the Sacrifices for their inheritaunce. And the Lorde will be their inheritaunce as he hath promiſed them. Heere Moſes on the one ſide depriueth his brethren and kinſfolk of all inheritance. Wherein wee ſee the execution of Gods ſentence, which was ỹ Leuie ſhould be diſperſed, & ỹ he ſhould not haue any habitatiõ or abode in any certaine place. The children of

Leuie then are as a bod/ torne in peeces. And yet doeth God turne their punishment into an honour. And therein appeareth his goodnesse, forasmuch as he maketh the thinges to redound to our benefite and saluation, which should haue beene to our condemnation. Loe howe God worketh towardes those that are his. Insomuch that although hee punish them for their sinnes, yet doth he make them feele his goodnesse therwith, by turning the thinges to a contrary ende, which should haue beene to their shame. After the same manner befell it to all the posteritie of Leuy. For it is no small thing, that God shoulde be their inheritaunce: it was a title of honour aboue all others. Whereas all the rest of the children of Israell, had their portions in the Land of Chanaan: God reserued himselfe for Leuy, saying, Holde yourselues to me, I am your inheritance. Ye see then how their portion was better than all the rest, sauing the tribe of Iuda, which was priuiledged, as whereunto God had already assigned the kingdome. And whereof came that? If yee haue an eye to the originall, yee shall see that the sinne of Leuie made him worthie of banishment, that he might haue beene as a vagabonde without any certaine dwellingplace: but yet for all that, God prouided so for the matter, that hee turned the euill into good, and the reproch into honour. Therefore let vs learne not to be discouraged when GOD punisheth vs for our sins, & yet to be so ashamed of our misdeeds and offences, as we may not dout but that our Lorde pitying vs, wil make his chastisements beneficiall to vs, so as we shalbe the more honorable before him and his Angelles. If we be faine to abide some shame and reproch for a time before the world: the thing that ought to be a good cõfort to the faithfull, when they be smitten by ỹ hand of God, is not to greeue thẽselues with the only beholding of their present affliction: but to thinke vpon the end and issue of it, which is, that God turneth bitternesse into sweetenesse.

Furthermore, wheras it is said to ỹ Leuites that God is their heritage; it is to the end they should be the willinger to giue themselues wholly to his seruice. For had they bin busied in husbandry, traffike of marchandice, & such other like things: they had bin turned away frõ their office, & not had leasure to doe the thing ỹ God had cõmanded them: ỹ is to wit, that those which were in Ierusalem should serue in ỹ Temple; & those which were dispersed abroad in ỹ countrey, should maintaine the religion pure, & not suffer the people to growe out of order, but teach thẽ euery man in his place, ỹ they might be preserued in all purenes. For vpon ỹ conditiõ were they chosen. Not without cause therefore doth God say ỹ hee was the heritage & portion of the Leuites, to the end that such as are called to his seruice, shold not be pulled away, nor haue excuse to withdrawe them frõ the full executing of their durie. Now in deed S. Paul applyeth this to ỹ ministers of gods word, saying ỹ if by the law of Moses they which serued at ỹ Altar were found of the Altar; they which at this day haue ỹ charge of preaching Gods word, and of the offring vp of spiritual sacrifices, ought of reason to be found and maintained, & to haue that which is necessarie for them. Yet notwithstanding wee must learne generally, ỹ God hath done vs the honor to make vs all Leuites, according to this saying, ỹ when God shall haue restored his people, those which were Leuites before shal then become Priestes, & all the cõmon people shall become Leuites. And this belongeth to the kingdome of our Lord Iesus Christ. Seeing then ỹ Iesus Christ hath shewed himselfe to the worlde: we which before were straungers & had no acquaintance at al with God, are nowe come into the Church to be of the body of Abrahams children, and are in as good case as they ỹ were heires of the promise. But we are become Leuites for we preace vnto our God, & haue familiar accesse to him in the name of his only sonne, so as we may boldly call vpon him as our father. And euen in the same respect doth S. Peter call vs a kingly priesthod, because ỹ wheras we were gone backe before, and wist not how to come at God, ne had any meane to bring vs to him: now he calleth vs to him, yea euen as though wee were priestes, not to enter into a materiall Sanctuarie with ỹ bloud of Goats, sheepe, or Calues: but with the bloud that was shedde to dedicate vs to God & to wash vs from all vncleanes. And so now we go into the sanctuary of heauen to present ourselues before the face of God.

Nowe then let vs apply this doctrine to ourselues where it is sayde that God is our herirage. True it is that such as haue goods & possessions in this worlde may vse them, howebeit with the condition which S. Paul setteth downe in the seuenth Chapter of the first Epistle to the Corinthians: namely that he which hath possessions be as he that hath none, that he haue the one foote euer lifted vp, and that he sticke not fast in the mire as tyed to the things that are here beneath; but that we remember ourselues to be but straungers in this world, and therefore looke euer vpwarde to the restingplace of heauen. After that maner we may well possesse whatsoeuer thinges are in this worlde: but yet must we euen goe further, and not be stayed or tyed heere. For why? Seeing our Lorde hath aduaunced vs to such dignitie, as to haue vs to be priestes: let vs goe to his Altar. For wee bee linked to our Lorde Iesus Christ, that hee might dedicate vs to GOD his father. Sith it is so, let vs doe as is sayde in the sixteenth Psalme. For although it was sayd alonely of the Leuites, that GOD was their portion: yet doth Dauid boast that hee hadde a faire portion, because God was his. Behold (sayeth he) I haue a fayre lotte, and henceforth I haue no cause to complaine, as though I wanted any thing: for my God hath giuẽ himself to me, he is my portion, & I possesse him. Dauid came not of the tribe of Leuie; and howe falleth it out then, that he boasteth himselfe to haue as much as the priestes? He knewe well that Gods reseruing of ỹ tribe for a time was after such a sort, ỹ yet neuertheles he would haue ỹ whole people partakers of ỹ same blessing, accordingly also as it is saide in Exodus, you be a priestly kingdome. And S. Peter hath turned this into another maner of ſpeech, ſaying, Ye be a kingly prieſthood, that is to ſay, ye be all as it were a ſort of litle kinges, becauſe God gouerneth you, and that is for your benefite: for he hath promiſed to giue you a redeemer, which ſhall leade you into al perfection. Neuertheleſſe yee muſt vnderſtande, that this kingdome is not like other kingdoms of ỹ world, but is matched with a prieſthoode, that is to ſay, it is conſecrated and dedicated to God. Dauid therefore acknowledging this, ſayeth that God is his portion. Nowe if this was ſayd in the time of the figures: much more ought wee to doe the ſame now, foraſmuch as the forealleadged propheſie is nowe come to paſſe in our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt and in all his members, ſo as wee bee not kept back any longer as we were before, but may preace vnto God with aſſured hope that hee will receiue vs, and that we ſhall be neere vnto him. Thus yee ſee howe wee ought to benefite our ſelues by this ſpeeche where it is ſayde that the Lorde was their portion, yea euen according as he had promiſed them.

And it was not for Leuy to boaſt of his owne worthineſſe or deſertes. All that euer he could alleadge was no more but this: I ought to haue beene diſherited, and yet notwithſtanding God hath turned it to mine honour. And therefore if we wilbe ſure that God is our heritage, we muſt not looke what we can attaine by our owne trauell, for there is nothing but vtter confuſion in vs: but we muſt reſorte to ỹ promiſe which God hath made vnto vs, in that hee hath vouchſafed to make ſo great account of vs, as to take vs for his children, euen vs which deſerued to be damned. And that is the thing wherupon it behoueth vs to be groũded, to inioy the priuiledge and ineſtimable benefite wherof Moſes ſpeaketh here. Let vs marke well then that he ſendeth vs backe to the promiſe without any reſpect had to vs, to the intent to doe vs to wit that wee haue not anie thing on our owne parte, but that we be beholden to the only freegoodneſſe of our God for that benefite.

Nowe it is ſayde conſequently, that the people alſo muſt diſcharge their duetie towardes the Prieſtes. Ye muſt haue a ſpeciall care (ſayeth he) that the Prieſtes may haue their right which God alloweth vnto them: that is to wit, The right ſhoulder of euery ſacrifice, the two cheekes, and the Paunch: theſe thinges muſt be reſerued for them, together with the firſt fruites of Corne, Wine, and Oyle, and alſo of the fleeces of your ſheepe. Here God commandeth the children of Iſrael expreſly to maintaine the Prieſtes, for they were bounde thereto, and therein they ſhewed theſelues to make great account of the ſeruice of God. It behoued them to haue men to miniſter in the Temple: and if thoſe were not maintained, Religion ſhould be, as it were aboliſhed; and therfore it was not without cauſe that God commaunded the people to employ themſelues about that matter. True it is that they ought to haue doone well euen without exhortation: but we ſee the vnthankefulneſſe of the worlde, when any duetie is to bee done towardes God, they muſt bee ſpurred forwarde, and they neuer goe willingly to it; vnleſſe they be vrged. And if it were ſo among ỹ Iewes, much more is it ſo among vs. For we be ſo ſlothfull that we neuer ſeeke to diſcharge ourſelues to Godwarde, and therefore we are faine to be called vpon and to be prepared. Sith we know this vice to be in vs, let euery of vs quicken vp & ſpur foreward ourſelues: & ſith we ſee ỹ our Lord calleth vpon vs, let vs folow him, & make the things effectuall which he telleth vs in his word. That is the thing which we be to marke in this text.

But yet moreouer wee haue to marke ỹ which is ſayde heere: namely that if any of the Leuites bee diſpoſed to come to the place which the Lorde ſhall haue choſen to be worſhipped there, hee ſhall haue his part and portion of all the offeringes of the Temple as one of their brethren, beſides that which hee hath of his owne houſe. For if they had houſes from their fathers in the Countrey, (as in deede there were Cities aſſigned them euerywhere:) they were to keepe them to themſelues; and yet they were to haue their part of the offeringes that were made in the Temple; ſo long as they ſerued there. But yet God ſayth expreſly, with the whole deſire of his heart, to ſhewe that God ment not heere to giue occaſion of ydleneſſe, to ſuch as ſought but their owne eaſe and commoditie: but to ſpeake of ſuch as came with a right meaning mind to ſerue him. I tolde you afore, that the children of Leuie were diſperſed and had no certain portion to inherit; but had certaine Cities heere and there, one in one place and an other in an other, diſperſedly throughout the Lande of Chanaan. And therefore it is ſayde, that if any of them being farre of Ieruſalem, had a deuotion to giue himſelfe wholly to the ſeruice of God: hee might doe ſo, hee might leaue the place where he dwelt, to goe to Ieruſalem, there to giue himſelfe wholely to the ſeruice of God. And this was no breach of the order that God hadde ſet, that is to wit, that the Leuites ſhould be ſcattered abroade as ſeede, to holde the people continually in the pureneſſe of religion: but it was ſpoken in reſpect of ſome of them. For all of them had not a deſire to reſorte to Ieruſalem: that is ſure. For the moſt part of the Leuites dwelt in places more fruiteſull than Ieruſalem: for that part of the countrey was not one of the beſt of all the Lande of Chanaan. But they that dwelt in the coũtries of paſturage, were the welthieſt. And we ſee alſo how the prophets vpbrayde them, ſaying: Ye Bulles of Baſon, becauſe the kingdome of Iſraell was become verie proude by reaſon of their abundance. The Leuites then wold haue had no liking to haue abidden in a place ỹ was not very fruitfull, & to haue left all their owne cõmodities & houſes. Againe if any had bin led by deſire of vaineglorie, God ment not to fauour them. Therefore it is ſayde that if any of them woulde come of good will to Ieruſalem to ſerue in ỹ Temple; he ſhould not be refuſed, ſo it might appeare that his intent was to giue himſelfe to ỹ ſeruice of God, and ỹ he did it with a good corage. Now we ſee in effect ỹ gods intent here was to giue a preheminence to ſuch as beſides their common duetie of teaching the people, were alſo deſirous to bee continually at the Sacrifices. That is one point.

But

But yet for the better vnderſtanding of the whole; we muſt conſider that the ſeruice of the Temple conſiſted not onely in the offering of ſacrifices: but alſo in ſinging of praiſes vnto a God both euening and morning, in ſaying of publike praiers, yea and alſo in watching anightes: and ſo there was ſome hardenes in performing that charge. In reſpect whereof it is ſayde in the Pſalme, Bleſſe the Lorde ye that ſerue him, yea and which doe keepe the watch anightes in his houſe or Temple. It was not enough for the Leuites in their order and according to their turns, to be occupied from morning to night in calling vpon the name of God, and in making of praiers and ſupplications in the name of the people: but it behoued them to holde out all the night alſo: and it was a ſet order among them, that when one ſort of them had beene occupied all the day in ſinging the prayſes of God, it behoued them to be preſent there the next morning when the people came together, to ſhewe ỹ way to others. Likewiſe, when ſolemne ſacrifices were to be offered according to the commaundement of the Law, the Leuites were euer preſent. To be ſhort, the Temple was neuer empty, but it behoued thẽ to watch as well for the keeping of the fire vpon the Altar, as for ỹ mainteyning of the lights and ſuch other like things. Thus ſee we now ỹ cauſe why God vouchſafed to giue a certain priuiledge to thoſe that came after that ſort to Ieruſalem.

And heereby we be done to vnderſtande, firſt that the office of the Leuites was dubble: to wit, that on the one ſide they were to teach the people, & to be as keepers and mainteiners of ỹ law, to the intent that men ſhould not turne away to any ſuperſtitiõ, nor become heatheniſh for want of good looking to, and ſo bring the ſeruice of God in contempt; but that they might alwayes beare in minde to what end he kept them in the worlde, and referre their whole life to the glorifying of him. That was one part of the charge of ỹ Leuites. Alſo they were to teach men the meaning of the Ceremonies, as namely that the ſacrifices ſerued to ſhew euen to eyeſight, ỹ all mẽ are accurſed, & condemned to death, and that they ought not in any wiſe to come in Gods preſence without ſacrifice. And there was not any ſacrifice ſufficient to make attonement betweene God and the worlde, but onely our Lorde Ieſus Chriſtes offering vp of himſelf. Ye ſee then how the duetie of the Leuites was to teach the people, that the Ceremonies guided them to the promiſe which had beene made vnto them concerning the Redeemer. And therewithall it behoued the Leuites moreouer to pray vnto God: and the Hygh prieſt was to goe into the tabernacle in the name of all the people, to ſhewe that they were not worthy to haue acceſſe vnto God, but by meane of a mediatour to goe before them and to enter as it were into Gods preſence in their behalfe. Al theſe thinges were to be done. And therefore the Leuites that ſerued in the Temple, hadde a harder charge than they that were diſperſed abroade in the Countrey. In reſpect whereof it was Gods will that they ſhould haue the ſayde aduauntage of taking their portions of all the ſacrifices and offerings that were made in the Temple.

Hebr.10.4. & 11,12.

Whereupon wee haue to note, that Gods eſteeming of the Ceremonies was not without cauſe. In graunting this priuiledge to the Leuites, he doeth vs to vnderſtande that he liketh well of Ceremonies, and will haue them kept, & withal, that he wil haue the meanes mainteined for the ſtrengthening of them: but that is not in reſpect of God himſelfe: for wee muſt alwayes thinke thus: What? Did God require men to offer him the bloud of brute beaſtes? Why? that is nothing but ſtinch. Againe, required hee to haue the fatte burnt, which can ingender nothing but filth and ſtinch likewiſe? Yea: howbeit, that was not for any pleaſure that he tooke in thoſe outwarde things: but for the ſaluation and benefite of the people, to keepe them in continuall hope of the redeemer that was promiſed. Againe, their praying, their ſinging, and all the reſt of their doinges ſerued to inure the faithfull, that they might pray to God with the better corage. True it is that we be cõmaunded to pray euerie man by himſelfe at home in his houſe, in his Chamber, in his bedde, and at his table: but yet our Lorde perceiuing the weakeneſſe and coldeneſſe that is in vs, hath willed vs to aſſemble together and to call vpon him with one common accorde. And ſo was done in the Temple. There was ſinging of Pſalmes, there was giuing of thankes in the name of all the people, there was praying and ſuch other like thinges, and finally there was ſenſing with perfumes, to ſhewe that our callings vpon God after ỹ maner, are ſacrifices of good ſent, & ſtie vp to heauen like the ſmoke of the perfumes. All theſe thinges were done for the better inuring of the people to the ſeruice of God, and that they ſhould faſhion thẽſelues after the Leuites that ſerued in the Temple.

To be ſhort, we ſee howe God did not this in fauour of ỹ one tribe onely: but rather that hee tooke ỹ order for ỹ benefit of the whole Church. For had the Prieſthoode ceaſſed, and the order of the temple beene aboliſhed: at what point had the people beene? All had gone to hauocke. And wee ſee alſo ỹ when they were carried away captiue, and the temple beaten downe: they became as folk forlorne, & could not open their mouthes to ſing vnto God as they had beene wont to doe. Sith it is ſo then, let vs marke ỹ our Lordes intent was not to fauour that one tribe alone; but generally to procure the benefite and ſaluation of his whole Church. And likewiſe when mention is made of the order of the Chriſtian Church, it is not in reſpect of ſome ſmall number of men: but Gods intent is to draw both great and ſmall vnto him. And let vs marke that his ordeining of cõmon prayer and of the adminiſtration of the ſacraments, is becauſe he ſeeth that without them our ſaluation could not ſtande, but all would goe to wrecke, & his grace would after a ſort vaniſhe away. And this ought to giue vs the better courage to giue our minds to the doing of the things which our Lord commandeth vs concerning the Ceremonies, concerning the reſorting to his word, word, concerning our meeting together in some place certaine to call vpon him in the company of ỹ faithfull. Let vs consider, ỹ seeing God hath ordained these things for our welfare, we must not withdraw our selues frō them, but euery of vs must resort to them as much as we possibly can.

Pſal.137.6.

And it is said expressly, that they shall be there to minister in the name of the Lord, with their brethren which are there before the face of the Lorde. This Name of the Lord, betokeneth nothing else but ỹ Maiestie of God, euen as he manifesteth ỹ same vnto vs. For it was not for the people to conceiue so grosse and brutish an imagination, as ỹ God should be inclosed in the Temple: but it behooued thē to beare alwaies in mind, ỹ God had verily placed his name there, ỹ is to say, that he meant to haue his Maiestie knowen there as he had giuen assured tokens thereof: For the Sanctuary, the Altars, (as well ỹ wheron the whole burnt offeringes were sacrificed, as the others wheron the shewbread was set, and whereon the perfumes were burned,) & all ỹ rest of the things there, serued for a warrant to shew that God accepted the petitiōs of his people. That then was the cause why it is expressly said, that those which abode in the Temple serued the name and Maiestie of God. And heerewithal mention is made also of Gods presence (as we haue seene before,) which is a ratifying of the thinges that hee had taught afore, that the people should not bee disappointed in resorting to the temple to call vpon him there, bicause the Leuites should alwayes be there ready to succour such as fled to him for succour.

Now this was in the time of the figures. But wee must marke that if wee resorte to our God in the name of our Lorde Iesus Christ, in whome dwelleth the whole fulnes of the Godhead; God will shew his face vnto vs: that is to say, we shall finde by the effect that he regardeth vs, and that the dore is not shut against vs, but that we may preace into his presence. And besides that, to the end we may be guided by our Lord Iesus Christ, we must put the thing in vre which he hath told vs: that is to wit, wee must come together in his name, to the intent that hee may bee among vs. Then if wee wil bee heard of God, and that our seruice should be wel accepted of him: wee must meete together without hypocrisie, with a true & pure heart: and then will our Lord Iesus so beare sway amongst vs, that God also wil therwal reach out his hande to helpe & succour vs. And when we haue so offered vp our prayers vnto him, and euery of vs hath put himself into his hand: let vs not doubt but ỹ he regardeth our doings. As for example, for as much as we knowe ỹ these our present doings in meeting together to heare his word and to seeke him, are cōmaunded by him: Let vs not doubt but we be before his eyes, and he loketh vpon vs with pitie, and will consider all our necessities to prouide for them, and to succor vs in them. And let vs on our part also so mount vp vnto him by faith, as wee may bee out of all doubt that he sheweth vs his face, that is to say, that he maketh vs to feele his presence, specially when we come to him by the way which he sheweth vs; for thē wil he make vs to come in such sorte, that he wil keepe vs still vnder his protection, vntill he take vs vp into his kingdome.

Now let vs kneele down before the Maiestie of our good God with acknowledgement of our faults, praying him to make vs feele them better, yea & that we may be so striken down in our selues, as we may seeke him with true repentāce, & rest vpon his promises, not doubting but ỹ he accepteth vs, howe wretched so euer we bee, bycause we come not to him vpon trust of our own deserts, but vppon his meere goodnesse wherethrough he hath elected and chosen vs: and that moreouer he suffer vs not to be defiled with any of the corruptions of our flesh, but that seeing he hath called vs to his Priesthood, hee will also graunt vs the grace to dedicate our selues to him by offering vp all our thoughts, affections, & desires, yea & euen our whole bodies & soules vnto him, that he may bee honored more & more by them, & that such as are yet farre off from him may be brought vnto him, to the end wee may all together worship him in his only sonne. And for the bringing thereof to passe, it may please him to raise vp true and faithfull Ministers of his word, &c.

Col. 2. 9.

On Wednesday the xxvij. of Nouember. 1555.

The Cviij Sermon, which is the second vpon the eighteenth Chapter.

9 When thou art come into the Land which the Lorde thy God giueth thee: thou shalt not learne to doe after the abhominations of those Nations.

10 There shall not any bee found among you, which maketh his sonne or his daughter to go through fire, nor any witch that vseth Witchcraft, nor any man that is a regarder of times, or that regardeth the flying of foules.

11 Or that is a Sorcerer, or a charmer, or that asketh Counsell at spirites that are called familiars, or that is a soothsaier, or which asketh Counsell at the dead.

12 For all they that doe such things are an abhomination to the Lord: and for such abhominations sakes, the Lord thy God driueth them out before thy face.

13 Be perfect therefore before the Lord thy God.

14 For the Nations which thou ſhalt poſſeſſe, giue eare to regarders of tymes: and to witches: but the Lord thy God hath not taught thee to doe ſo.

15 The Lord thy God will rayſe vp a prophet like vnto me, from among thy brethren: him ſhall you obey.

IT is in vaine for God to giue vs many lawes & leſſons, if we determine not with our ſelues to obey him in all pointes. For the firſt point wherat we muſt begin is to know Gods authority, & to learne to ſubmit our ſelues to his word without any gainſaying. If the Law in generall haue not this force; to what purpoſe is it for God to ſpeake of this thing or of that thing? Therefore let vs beare well in mind, that we muſt bee diſpoſed to receiue whatſoeuer God inioyneth vs, before we can benefite our ſelues by any one ſentence of the holy Scripture. As for example, when a man commeth to a ſermon, though he heare the matter, yet ſhal it not touch him to the quick, vnleſſe he know aforehand that Gods truth muſt be receiued, and that it is not to be incountered with diſputing. And ſurely wee ſee many which are ſufficiently conuicted, that the things which are told them are true, and that they be not able to reply againſt them: and yet paſſe not to make a mocke of them. And why is that? Bicauſe they be not touched with ỹ maieſty of God; and therfore they cannot thinke that wee ought to ſubmit our ſelues to him that made vs, & faſhioned vs to be obedient to him & to his commaundement. But on ỹ contrary part, when we be vrged to receiue the things which we knowe to come of God, his truth wil beare sway with vs. As ſoon as we heare that it is God which ſpeaketh, we tremble at his ſpeech, as is ſaid by the prophet Eſay. And ſo ye ſee now why God giueth this generall rule to his people, that they muſt houlde themſelues to his pure and ſimple wil. But for as much as men are naturally giuen to ſuperſtition, & ſeeme to ſeeke euen wilfully to be beguiled: God here doth firſt withdraw vs from all errours and abuſes, & afterward giueth vs a foundation wheron to ſtay & to be builded, that is to wit by herkning vnto him, & by ſticking to ỹ which he ſaith. Thus are there here two principall reaſons. The one is ỹ God correcteth the vanity that is in men, in that they rather giue ouer themſelues to couſinages & lyings, than to the rightfull truth. And thereupon he ſheweth after what maner they may be directed, giuing them a remedie againſt all the wiles of Satan. For if a husbandman wil haue his ſeede to thriue, he muſt firſt till his ground: & if there come vp any ſhrewd weedes, he muſt pull them vp or cut them off. After the ſame maner doth God deale with vs: to the intent his worde may haue enterance into vs, and be receiued without any let; he riddeth vs from all ỹ euil & vice that is in vs. For all our owne ſeeking is to giue our ſelues to follie: & the diuell is ſo wylie & ſuttle, ỹ hee findeth meanes to attaine to his purpoſe, bicauſe he knoweth that our minds are ſo fickle, that our whole ſeeking is to be beguiled. Therefore let vs marke wel that Gods meaning in this place, was to hold his people in obedience to his word, ỹ was the mark he ſhot at. And moreouer bicauſe we be forepoſſeſſed ẅ the ſaid frowardnes, ſo as none of vs can forbeare to hearken to leaſings, but our wits are ſo ſhettle that we be ſtil hearkening after this & that, delighting in fond curioſities & ſpeculations ỹ are nothing worth; & ſerue to no purpoſe but to trouble our mindes about vaine and vnprofitable things: therefore here our Lorde turneth thoſe ỹ are his from all things that may corrupt them and withdraw thẽ from his truth. In reſpect whereof he ſaieth here in effect, That if wee will bee his people, wee muſt not bee intangled neither in Sorcerie, nor in Soothſaying, nor in Witchcrafte, nor in coniourings of the dead, nor in calling vp of familiar Spirites: but all theſe things muſt be rid away from vs, or elſe he will diſclaime vs and vtterly forſake vs. Marke that for one point.

Eſa. 66. 5.

As touching theſe ſeueral ſorts, we wil treate of them another time: for the time will not ſuffer to ſpeake of thẽ al as now. And therfore in ỹ meane ſeaſon, let it ſuffice vs to ſee whereunto God had an eye, & wherat he aimed. Let this then be one point: ỹ if we wil be the true diſciples of our God, and receiue benefit by his word, to be taught as becommeth vs: we muſt put away all wicked ſuperſtitions, & all abuſes whereunto ỹ world is giuen, & wherewith we alſo ſhould be bewitched, if ỹ remedie thereof withdrew vs not therefro. And bicauſe wee be too much giuen to cuſtome, in ſo much ỹ if a thing be once in vſe, we think it to be lawfull: God telleth vs expreſſly ỹ wee muſt not ſet our mindes vpon ſuch clokings, for they will ſtand vs in no ſtead. Therfore whereas we ſee the whole world imbrewed ẅ errors, ſo as Satan hath his full ſcope to deceiue both great & ſmal: let vs not run after them. For it wil not ſerue vs for excuſe, to ſhield our ſelues vnder ỹ greatnes of the multitude, or to ſay, Euery man beleeueth ſo: I ſee the wiſeſt folke doe ſo. Well may we alleage ſuch things; but our Lord telleth vs that we muſt not yeeld our ſelues after ſuch maner vnto men, that he ſhoulde not alwayes be preferred before them, and beare chiefe ſway, and be regarded of vs though we were intiſed away by all the examples of the world.

This thing is touched expreſſely by Moſes in that he ſayeth, True is is that when ye bee come into the Lande which yee ſhall poſſeſſe, yee ſhall finde it to be as a common Law, and that men haue ſo done: but yet muſt ye not think that God alloweth is euer the more, or that he is contented with it. For the world ſhall be condemned: and though all men were ſteyned with ſome one kinde of cryme; yet will not God forgo his office of Iudge, nor be ouercom by any multitude be it neuer ſo great. And therfore let vs remember firſt of all, that if we wil offer our

ſelues to God to be his ſcholers; we muſt not intangle our ſelues in the vanities that raigne in this world, but wee muſt yeeld our ſelues wholly vnto him with a ſimple and right meaning mind, ſo as nothing may ſtop ẏ entring of his word into vs & our receauing therof, but ẏ it may haue full authoritie to the vttermoſt. That is ẏ firſt point.

The ſecond point is, that wee muſt not paſſe what the world doth, or how other men behaue themſelues. For God will haue vs for all that, to frame our ſelues according to his woorde. And although wee ſee nothing but rebellion heere beneath: yet muſt wee doe him the honour to ſubmit our ſelues to him. For it is not ynough for vs to worſhip him Ceremonially: the chiefe point is that his word do ſo raigne, as it be a brydle to hould vs backe, and that our life bee framed altogether thereafter. And although this was ſo ſtraitly commaunded: yet we ſee how the cleane contrary came to paſſe. Wherein we ſee a fayre mirrour of mans wickedneſſe and vnthankfulneſſe. For albeit that God doe ſhewe him the right way; yet doth he go aſtray ſtill. Ye ſee how the Iewes had warning ynough that they ſhould not corrupt themſelues with the abhominations of the heathen; God ſhewed them wherwith they ought to haue contented themſelues and wheron to haue ſtaied; namely ẏ they ought to haue learned at his own mouth: he gaue them his law; and hee raiſed them vp prophetes: and yet for all that they ceaſſed not to go fowly aſtray, & to haue itching eares, and to be inquiſitiue of this & that. And that was the cauſe why ſorceries and inchauntments, Coniurations of the dead, and ſuch other like things reigned among them: inſomuch that in the time of ẏ prophet Eſay, we ſee there were very fewe folke that followed the law of God. Lo heere am I, (ſaith the prophet,) and thoſe whome God hath giuen vnto me. What? had he any great company ẅ him? No. But contrariwiſe he ſaith, that they were hated, and that they were pointed at ẅ mens fingers, as if they had bin monſters againſt nature. And thoſe ẏ did ſo, would needes be counted wiſer than all other men, like as ẏ Papiſts vpbraid vs nowadaies, that we will needs make a new world, & require a reformatiõ alone by our ſelues, by reaſon whereof we be ſciſmatikes: & euen ſo was it in ẏ time of ẏ prophet Eſay, as he declareth in his eight chapter. Yet notẅſtanding he forbeareth not to vtter this ſentence, & to confirme ẏ ſame, ſaying: If any man go about to turne you away to familiars, and to coniuring of ẏ dead, hold you your ſelues to the things that your God hath deliuered you. Ought not he to reigne both ouer the quick and dead, and to be obeied of all? Yes: and therefore hold you to his law and to his teſtimonies. And if the people ſpeake againſt them; it is bycauſe they haue no light. But let ẏ blind go on into decay & deſtruction, ſeeing they cannot be helde back: & in the meane while hold you your ſelues to ẏ ſimplicitie of the doctrine. And for this cauſe it is ſaid to ẏ Prophet Eſay; Seale vp ẏ Teſtimonie of God, & let it be vnto you as a letter that is cloſed vp, ſeeing there is nothing but vnbeliefe euerywhere. And yet for all ẏ, ceaſſe not to holde you ſtill toit quietly and obediently.

Eſa. 8. 18.

Now if this fel out in old time among ẏ Iewes: needs muſt we find ẏ like nowadais, as is ſhewed by ẏ Apoſtle in ẏ Epiſtle to the Hebrewes, who applieth this text to ẏ raigne of our Lorde Ieſus Chriſt, & to ẏ ſtate of ẏ Chriſtian Church. Then if they which were deſirous to haue ſerued God purely were abhorred; & that not of ẏ heathen but of ſuch as named themſelues the Church of God: it becõmeth vs nowadayes to beare it patiently, if ẏ world not only looke awry vpon vs, but alſo hold vs for accurſed. Yet notwſtanding, we may wel defie ẏ Papiſts ẅ all their pride and diueliſh ouerweening, ſith we ſee them to be backſliders & to haue forſaken God; & (as much as in thẽ lieth) to haue renoũced their baptiſme. Let vs learn to hold our ſelues to ẏ law. And although Gods trueth be not receiued; yet let vs keepe it ſtil as a letter cloſed vp, & as a treaſure laid vp in ſtore. And when we ſee all other men wander away, ſome after ſuperſtitiõs, & ſome after errors: let vs aſſure our ſelues ẏ the way is infallible, ſo we hearken to our God, and indeuour to behaue our ſelues according to his wil, & we cãnot miſſe the way, it is ſo certain, as Moſes ſaith hereafter: This is ẏ way, walk therin. But for the better vnderſtanding hereof, let vs marke the words ẏ are ſet down here. The people (ſaith he) whoſe land you muſt poſſeſſe, are imbrued ẅ many lyes & abuſes: but you ſhall not do ſo; eſpecially if wee wil be taken for Gods flock, & accounted for his houſhold folke; we muſt be ſeparated from al the reſt of ẏ world. Let vs learn then ẏ our faith muſt not wauer, nor wãder after our eyes: but we muſt ſettle our ſight & al our ſenſes vpon that which God telleth vs. Though we ſaw a thouſãd ſtumblingblocks to dazle our eies wall, yea & to put vs to trouble: yet muſt we yeeld ſuch authoritie to Gods word, ẏ it may hold vs ſtill in awe. They then ẏ run gadding at ẏ ſight of this example or that example, do well ſhew that they were neuer throughly grounded vpon ẏ word of God. And therefore this ſaying is of great importance, whẽ God ſetteth the things which he vttereth ẅ his mouth, as a counterpeiſe againſt all things ẏ are to be ſeene in ẏ world. As if he ſhould ſay, Muſt I be laid in ẏ balance againſt men, ẏ when I haue cõmanded them to demeane thẽſelues thus or thus, my authoritie ſhould bee diminiſhed and doubted of, & it might come in queſtion whether my word ought to take place or no? Were it not a turning of all vpſide downe? Can there be any greater or ouglier confuſion, than to compare the creature ẅ me? What are men? There is nothing in them but blindnes & beaſtlines. Yea & when they thinke thẽſelues wiſeſt, then are they ẏ moſt fooles: & their aduancing of thẽſelues againſt me is ſtarke madnes: & yet muſt my word be defaced for their pleaſure? Then let vs marke well, ẏ it is not for vs to followe mens cuſtomes; nor to eſteeme ẏ more of things for ẏ they haue had their free ſcope, when God turneth vs from them & ſaith, Yee ſhal not doe ſo. For why? It is good reaſon ẏ we ſhould ſeparate our ſelues frõ thoſe whom God hath not inlightened. It is no maruel though men trip & ſtumble & go aſtray ouer all the fields like filie beastes. For it is said ỹ

1.Cor.3.14. it is said also, ỹ there is nothing but starke ignorance in vs, and that wee comprehend not the things ỹ concerne God. Therfore when we want Gods word, we be as in an irksome dungeõ. And so forasmuch as God graunteth not ỹ grace and priuiledge to al mẽ, to haue ỹ lampe of his word & truth lighted vp vnto them to guide thẽ withal: we ought not to wonder though we see them goe astray, but rather to make our benefite of ỹ good ỹ God offreth vnto vs, and to hold vs altogether to his word when it is giuen vnto vs.

And now he telleth them the cause why they should not do so. For your God (saieth Moses) will raise you vp a Prophet, and him you shall obey. If wee were but simply forbidden to giue our selues to superstition, sorcerie, and al other abuses ỹ were not ynough. For we should be stil in vnquietnes, and euery man might iustly demaund, yea, but what will God haue vs then to doe? For he forbiddeth vs to haue any superstition among vs, and yet in the meane while he leaueth vs in vncertaintie, so as the state of the heathen & vnbeleeuers is better than ours. After ỹ maner might a man haue replied: But our Lord hath prouided well for it. For he saith, whereas I call you backe from al abuses & errors, it is not to leaue you in perplexitie & trouble, so as ye should not knowe on which side to turne you: but I giue you my worde, & that is the thing which you must take heede vnto. And if Gods trueth content vs not: what an vnthankfulnes is it? We see then now ỹ the thing whereby God will put a difference betweene vs and the Infidels, is that we must haue his word for our guide, to rule our selues therby: & therewall we must let the world run at rouers, forasmuch as they haue no other doctrine to ground vpõ, but their owne opinion, or ỹ folly of other men. And so when one blind mã leads an other, he himself stumbleth first, & [illegible] low him. As for vs, seeing we haue Go[illegible] Maister and teacher, let vs hold [illegible]
Matt.15.14. tented therewith.

And let vs marke hereby, [illegible] men to be withdrawen from error, vnlesse they haue Gods word. In deede great sort can [illegible] ynough mocke at the great number of sorts which they see: as for example, ye shall see many worldlings nowadayes which will condemne the abuses and bad toyes ỹ are in the Popedome, & lustily reiect them: but yet for all ỹ, they stand vpon neuer ỹ better ground themselues, neither haue they any setledne[illegible] or roote. And if they be not stained w the errors which they condemne: they haue others as bad or worse. For many of them bee starke Atheistes, that is to say without Religion and without feare of God, whose shame must needes bee discouered at length, and God must needes giue them vp to a leaud minde, that euen yong children may laugh at their beastlines. And whence commeth ỹ? Euen of this (as I said afore) ỹ we shall neuer haue any certain rule, vntil God haue taught vs. And ỹ is a point wel worthy to be noted. For first, we neede not to be troubled at ỹ impediments which hinder many men to come to the Gospell in these dayes, when they see the whole worlde in a maner wilfully bent to superstition: for seeing that Gods word beareth no sway among them, what shal a man say, but ỹ blind folke may wel ynough wander in darkenes? Againe, we see the singular yea & inestimable benefite which God vouchsafeth vpon vs, when he giueth vs his word, and applieth it to vs for our soule health. For it is the only meane to draw vs out of ỹ bottomlesse pit. So long as we bee in this world, we bee hemmed in with so many temptations of the diuel, as can not be nõbred: & the world it selfe may well bee likened to a maze, so as we cannot step one pace wout daũger of falling down headlong to breake our neckes: from the which there is none other meane to preserue vs but Gods word. Seeing thẽ ỹ he vouchsafeth to looke mercifully vpon vs, & to open his holy mouth to shewe vs ỹ way of saluation: howe may wee excuse our selues, if wee vouchsafe not to conre vnto him? So then, let vs learne to imbrace this treasure which is offered vs, & to yeeld due reuerence to Gods doctrine, after wee haue once knowen what it bringeth vs, and howe much it is for our behoofe. And finally let vs beare in minde that by this texte where our Lord telleth vs that he will raise vs vp a Prophet, he doeth vs to wit that we shalbe deliuered from all errors, if we receiue his worde to frame our selues thereafter.

And hereby we be done to vnderstand, that all such as in these daies do make none account of the Gospel, are wel worthy to erre: of which sort a man shall see many nowadayes, which shutte their eyes and stop their eares when God is so gratious as to draw them to him. They haue the meanes whereby to yeelde themselues into ỹ way of saluation, & they play the deafe & blind folks wilfully & wringly: & therfore is it meete that such folke should perish. For inasmuch as they reiect Gods grace whereby they might haue been saued, & which could not bee sufficiently esteemed, [illegible] not needs be reuenged of their spitefulnes, ỹ they bee so froward as to trample the word so vnder their feete, which serued to haue deliuered them from the gulfes of hell? Marke that for one point.

And therwithall let vs marke on our side, that seeing God teacheth vs, it ought to be a sufficient arming of vs against all errours and all vaine fansies; in so much that although the diuell lay his snares for vs, yet shall he not be able to catch vs as long as we hearken to our God, and yeeld him the ductifull obedience which he deserueth at our hands, & which we owe vnto him. And for ỹ same cause doeth S. Paul say expresly, that if we haue ỹ doctrine of ỹ Gospel throughly printed in Eph.4.14.
our hearts, we shall no more be led to daunce after other mens pipes, nor play the yong childrẽ which are easily deceiued. Ye see then that Gods trueth is inuincible. And when wee receiue it by true faith, then are we armed with the spirituall Eph.6.17.
sword. For it is not for nought that ỹ title is giue to Gods word. We cannot be exempted frõ being assailed by the diuel, for euen our Lord Iesus Matt.4.3.
Christ himselfe passed through ỹ battel. But yet howsoeuer the world go, we shal haue wherewith to resist Satan, & al his wiles, so we receiue Gods word and sticke to it.

to

And by the way let vs marke, that whereas Moses saith that God will raise vp a Prophet: he speaketh of ỹ continual order which God intended to stablish in his Church, which shall indure to the worldes ende. For had there beene no more but the once publishing of the Law, truely it had beene ynough to make folke vnexcusable whensoeuer they had turned from it: but yet had it not beene a sufficient meane to hold them to it, specially considering the frailtie of men, how they slip away like water and vanish away out of hand, chiefely when the case concerneth the accepting of any goodnesse. Therfore if God had done no more but published his Law, truly men ought to haue submitted themselues to it, and to hold themselues as in captiuitie thereunto: but yet wee see such was mens feebleneſse and vnconstancie, that they would haue turned away from it by and by. God therefore vouchsafed to adde a second helpe, as if he should put to a double bond, saying ỹ he will raise vp Prophets from tyme to time, among the people. As if he should say, True it is ỹ I haue declared my will vnto you fully in my law: but yet wil I send you expoũders of the doctrine and mainteiners thereof, which shall be as keepers thereof, that it perish not, ne be buried, nor bee corrupted with false interpretations. So shal there alwayes be Prophets. This doth vs to vnderstand, that God hath not onely once vttered his will vnto vs, but also ỹ he hath sent vs teachers from time to time to keepe his Church in obedience, and by their meanes to make his word to be vnderstood. And so we haue to gather ỹ the Church cannot stand without teaching, and ỹ it is not ynough for mẽ to reade the holy Scripture: for if God had knowen it to haue bin sufficient for vs, he would haue gone no further. But it is his will that there should be teachers to speak dayly in his name, as instruments of his spirit, and (to be short) as his owne mouth. If this be not superfluous; we may conclude therupon, ỹ where no doctrine is preached in Gods name, there is no Church. And therby we see the desolation that is in the Popedome. True it is ỹ their hypocrites preach now and then: but for as much as they disguise themselues, yea and euen falsifie & corrupt all good doctrine: all that they doe is but abhomination. Againe, we know that those which beare the name of Bishops & Prelates in the Popedome, are but Idols and dumb pictures. For to what ende hath God set this order and policie among his people, but that his woorde should bee heard, and that it should bee founded out with a loude and cleare voyce, so as both great and small may bee taught by it, and by that meanes submit themselues thereto, according to this saying, that his word is his Kingly Sceptre or Mace wherwith he intendeth to gouern vs? So then let vs know that if we will be knowen and reckened to be of Gods church, and haue him to dwell among vs: his word must be preached to vs, and wee must not thinke it ynough to haue the holy Scripture, vnles we haue teachers also to bring vs back to the things ỹ are written, & to giue vs the vnderstanding of thẽ, & to apply them to our vse. That is ỹ thing which is shewed vs in this text. Now I tould you that this serued not for the people of olde time onely; but that it belongeth to vs also; and we see it in as much as the same text is applyed by the Apostles to our Lord Iesus Christ. The Apostles intending to shewe that Iesus Christ was sent of God his father with full commission to gouerne vs, and that it is he to whom wee must giue eare: say it is written that God wil raise vp a Prophet. Howbeit I haue told you already, that this place speaketh not of one Prophet alone, but of many, and of their continuall succession. Howe will that agree? Very wel. For in as much as God had promised his people, not to leaue them destitute, nor vnprouided: it is to be considered now, whether the same hath bin performed or no. True it is that there were Prophets sometime moe and sometime fewer. It is sayde of the time of Samuell that is to wit of his childhood; that Gods word was very precious that is to say: very rare. And why? It was a punishment of God, according as he threatneth by his Prophet Amos, that hee would send a dearth, not of bread and other vittels, but of hearing the truth, and of the doctrine of saluation. The Israelits then were sometimes as good as bereft of the thing that had bin promised them: but yet not so vtterly that God had no Prophetes at all. And after that maner did he incounter the malice and stubbornnesse of that people; in so much that although the Prophets were reiected, yea & cruelly murdered: Yet notwithstanding hee ceassed not to maintaine his promise still, euen to ỹ comming of Iesus Christ. In deede there was a certaine intermission, to ỹ end that the people should bee moued with the greater desire to receiue this great and cheefe Prophet ỹ was promised them. For we see there were no moe Prophets in Israell after the time of Zacharie and Aggeus. And had God for all that disappointed them? What was become of this Prophesie of Moseses? It is sayd expresly by Malachy, Call to mind the Law that was giuen you on Horeb. As if he should say, Sirs, looke to your selues, for ye haue the perfect wisedome, which is conteined in Gods Lawe, and therewal ye haue had prophets also, which haue expounded the same vnto you faithfully. Hitherto God hath euer performed his promise towardes you: & now hencefoorth he sendeth you back againe to his law. To what end? He addeth the reason. Behold (saith he) I will send mine Angell before my face, (that is to wit, Iohn Baptist:) and when he hath made ready the way, then will I come, & therfore loke that ye obey me. For else I must be faine to smite mẽ, & all ỹ wstand me must needs be beaten downe. This text sheweth how God promised Prophets, & yet notwstanding had an eye to our Lord Iesus Christ, at whom the finall conclusion & the perfect working of all the prophesies amed. Yea & this was so cõmon a thing among ỹ Iewes, that euen the wretched harlot of Samaria could say, that whẽ Messias came, he should teach vs al things. Not onely ỹ Iewes, but also ỹ Samaritans who had but a kind of shadow of the law, & were but as Apes, knew it was ỹ office of ỹ Redeemer to giue full knowledge of the things ỹ were requisite for ỹ saluation of ỹ world. Not wout cause therfore is this text applyed to ỹ person of Gods son, forsomuch as ỹ Prophetes tooke their ende in him, & he hath made a perfect conclusion of all. And our Lord Iesus Christ spake not three yeeres & a halfe, to ỹ intent to hold his peace after: but he will haue his Gospel to be preached with a loud & cleare voyce, and ỹ those whom he hath ordeined Ministers in his Church, should be as trũpets. According whereto we heare how it is said, ỹ his Gospell must bee preached ouer all the world. And he limites no short time to it, but wil haue it done to ỹ worldes end. Sith it is so, wee see (as I haue touched before) ỹ Gods setting of this continuall order in his Church, was not for ỹ Iewes onely, but also for vs, so ỹ although we heare his worde, & haue it preached vnto vs dayly, & yet we be not disposed to learn as at his mouth: he shaketh vs off, & banisheth vs out of his kingdome, & we be not worthy to be reckoned in the nomber of his seruants. Thus ye see what we haue to marke.

But now forasmuch as this text is referred to our Lord Iesus Christ, & the Prophets that were raised vp afore, were inferiors to him & but his members: we must know also ỹ those that beare ỹ office of shepheards in his Church nowadayes, are in the same degree ỹ the Prophets were, to wit, compared to Iesus Christ, inferior vnto him. True it is ỹ they be preferred far before ỹ Prophets, as in respect that the Gospell is a higher and excellenter matter than any was vnder the shadowes of the law. But yet forasmuch as Iesus Christ is ỹ head of all; he alone is to be acknowledged for Maister of the household, as the Apostle speaketh of him when he compareth him with Moses. Seeing it is so then, let vs marke that euery doctrine is as it were excommunicated, if it respect not Iesus Christ. In deede there are many Prophets and teachers: but yet must Iesus Christ ouerrule al; al ỹ is expounded must come from him; he must haue all preheminence; that the thing which the heauenly father hath spokẽ may be performed, namely, This is my welbeloued sonne, heare ye him. This is not spoken of any man, but only of the onely Son of God himselfe. And therefore let vs learne, that wheresoeuer there are Pastors or shepheardes, the brydle is not laid loose in their necks to set foorth what they thinke good: but they bee tyed to this condition, that our Lord Iesus must alwaies be their Maister, and alonly be heard, so as nothing bee set foorth but in his name, and that truly. Rightly saith Moses, ye shal obey the Prophet. As how? not ỹ they haue the authority to bind ỹ Church & to bring it into bondage: for (as S. Peter sheweth in his first Canonicall Epistle,) it behoued ỹ Prophets to speake by the spirite of our Lord Iesus Christ. And in the same respect also doth S. Paule say, that it was he which led & gouerned the people [in the wildernes.] Although Moses bare the coũtenance, yet was it Iesus Christ that bare ỹ sway. Now I pray you, if a man take more authority vpon him than Moses had, & aduaunce himselfe aboue him: what should a man say to it? Moses and all the Prophets are but vnderlings, to the end that Iesus Christ might speake: And seeing that the Sonne of God is come, is it reasõ that men should put foorth their owne dreames and dotages, & that Iesus Christ should hold his peace? But the Popish Religion tendeth to none other end, than to put Iesus Christ to silence. The Pope boasteth himselfe to be his vicar. But howsoeuer the case stand, he will needes make lawes at his owne pleasure: he will needes make newe articles of faith: to be short, the Gospell is but an Apsie, if we beleeue the Pope: and the dotages ỹ he hath deuised, are the ful perfection of all. For behold, they haue not bin ashamed to say, that the thinges which the Popes and their Councels haue decreed, and all their gewgawes, filth, and pelting trash, (which yet notwstanding are but diuelish abhominations to peruert the seruice of God:) are the thinges which the Apostles could not beare away, when Iesus Christ said vnto thẽ, I haue many things to say vnto you, but ye cannot cary them away as now. And what things be they? O they be the high Mysteries which the Pope deuised aboue the Gospell. Lyke as Mahomet saith ỹ his Alcoran is ỹ soueraine wisdome: so saith the Pope of his owne decrees: For they be the two hornes of Antichrist. Sith it is so, doe we not see that we cannot in any wise cleaue to the Pope but by renouncing Iesus Christ? Then let vs beare well in minde, that seeing it is Gods will to exalt his onely sonne after that fashion: surely he wil haue vs to looke vnto him, and that all doctrine be referred vnto him, and doe concerne him, so as wee must conclude that all such as will not speake in the Church, must vtter nothing but ỹ which they haue learned in ỹ schoole of this great schoolemaister. According whereunto he hath giuen this commission to his Apostles, Preache the things which ye haue learned of me. Againe, when he promiseth them the holy Ghost, he saith, he shall teach ye all the things which ye haue hard of me. He sendeth them not there to a new doctrine; but saith that they shall haue vnderstanding of the thinges which they knew not by reason of their rudenesse. That is ỹ thing which we haue to remember in that God attributeth the soueraine authoritie to his sonne by name, and will haue all Prophets to be vnder that heade, as well whome he had raysed vp afore, as those whom he hath set vp in these daies in his Church, so as this order must be kept, that he onely doe speake, and that all others which open their mouthes, serue but to deale foorth the thinges purely which they shall haue receiued at his hand.
